DECISION AND ORDER

August 14, 2009

Before the Authority: Carol Waller Pope, Chairman
and Thomas M. Beck, Member

I. Statement of the Case

This unfair labor practice (ULP) case is before the Authority on exceptions to the attached decision of the Administrative Law Judge (the Judge) filed by the General Counsel. The Respondent filed an opposition to the General Counsel's exceptions. The complaint alleges that the Respondent violated § 7116 (a)(1), (5) and (8) of Federal Service Labor-Management Relations Statute (the Statute) by failing to provide the Charging Party with certain information requested under § 7114(b)(4) of the Statute. The Judge found that the information requested by the Charging Party was not normally maintained by the Respondent and recommended that the complaint be dismissed.

For the reasons discussed below, we deny the General Counsel's exceptions and dismiss the complaint.

II. Background and Judge's Decision

The Respondent notified a bargaining unit employee of its proposed decision to terminate her. The Respondent based its proposed decision on an investigation conducted by the Treasury Inspector General for Tax Administration (TIGTA), a Treasury Department bureau. See Judge's Decision (Decision) at 2-3. Thereafter, the Charging Party made multiple requests for specified information from the Respondent regarding the employee's proposed removal, including all TIGTA investigatory and disciplinary policy documents, TIGTA Conduct Investigation Manual 400, and all non-bargaining unit employee "ALERTS" cases.* See GC Exhibits 3 through 6. The Respondent provided the Charging Party with some of the requested information. Decision at 3. However, Respondent did not provide the Charging Party with the requested TIGTA policy documents or investigation manual, stating that the Agency "does not have control over the release of information for the [TIGTA]." Id. When the Charging Party did not receive the requested information, it filed a ULP charge. See id. at 1-4.

The General Counsel issued a complaint alleging that the Respondent violated § 7116(a)(1), (5) and (8) of (the Statute) by failing to provide the Charging Party with the information that it requested pursuant to § 7114(b)(4) of the Statute. See Decision at 1-2. The Judge noted that, under § 7114(b)(4), an agency has the duty to provide a union upon request and, to the extent not prohibited by law, data:

(A) which is normally maintained by the agency in the regular course of business;

(B) which is reasonably available and necessary for full and proper discussion, understanding, and negotiation of subjects within the scope of collective bargaining; and

(C) which does not constitute guidance, advice, counsel, or training provided for management officials or supervisors, relating to collective bargaining[.]

Decision at 7 (citing § 7114(b)(4)). The Judge also noted that a union "must establish a particularized need for the information by articulating, with specificity, the basis of its need, including the uses to which it will put the information and the connection between those uses and its representational responsibilities under the Statute.” Id.

The Judge found undisputed evidence that although the Respondent and TIGTA are both bureaus within the Department of the Treasury, they are “completely separate entities and are independent of each others’ control.” Decision at 8. For that reason, the Judge found that the General Counsel’s reliance on Authority precedent concerning inspectors general was misplaced. The Judge found that the weight of the evidence showed that TIGTA was a “third party” analogous to an “outside contractor.” Id. In addition, the Judge found that the General Counsel’s reliance on United States Department of Justice, Washington, D.C., 46 FLRA 1526, 1537 (1993) (DOJ), vacated and remanded, sub nom., United States Department of Justice v. FLRA, 39 F.3d 361 (D.C. Cir. 1994), decision on remand, 51 FLRA 1467 (1996), aff’d, sub nom., United States Department of Justice v. FLRA, 144 F.3d 90 (D.C. Cir. 1998) was misplaced because the disputed information in that case, which was controlled by an agency’s inspector general, was reasonably available to the agency and was therefore subject to disclosure. Decision at 8. The Judge further found that the General Counsel “characterized TIGTA as the agent of the [Respondent]” but “produced no evidence” to substantiate such a relationship. Id. at 9. The Judge concluded that “the Respondent lacked the authority to require TIGTA to disclose the information requested by the [Charging Party].” Id. The Judge noted that the information sought by the Charging Party was not used by the Respondent in reaching its final decision regarding the employee. Id.

Based on the foregoing, the Judge concluded that the information requested by the Charging Party was not normally maintained by the Respondent in the regular course of business. Id. at 10. Accordingly, the Judge determined that the Respondent did not commit a ULP by failing to provide the Charging Party with the requested documents. Id. Thus, the Judge recommended that the Authority dismiss the complaint. See id.

III. Positions of the Parties

A. General Counsel’s Exceptions

The General Counsel contends that TIGTA is “an agent of the [IRS] for the purposes of § 7114(b)(4) of the Statute.” Exceptions at 8. According to the General Counsel, the Authority has consistently recognized that an inspector general’s office is a component of the agency for which it works. In this connection, the General Counsel relies on United States Department of Justice, Washington, D.C., et. al., 56 FLRA 556 (2000) (Justice), aff’d sub nom., United States Department of Justice v. FLRA, 266 F.3d 1228 (D.C. Cir. 2001); Headquarters NASA, Washington, D.C., 50 FLRA 601, 621 (1995) (NASA), enf’d sub nom., FLRA v. Headquarters NASA, Washington, D.C., 120 F.3d 1208 (11th Cir. 1997), aff’d, 527 U.S. 229 (1999); and DOJ, 46 FLRA 1526. The General Counsel notes that TIGTA undertook the investigation at the request of, and on behalf of, the Respondent, thus making TIGTA an agent of the Respondent. Exceptions at 9-10. In the alternative, the General Counsel asserts that, if the Authority finds that TIGTA’s role is analogous to that of an outside contractor, then Authority precedent holds that such contractor must follow the requirements of the Statute. Id. at 10 (citing Soc. Sec. Admin., Office of Hearings & Appeals, Boston Regional Office, Boston, Mass., 59 FLRA 875, 880 (2004) (“the fact that a contractor, rather than an agency employee, was designated by the agency to conduct these investigations does not diminish the relationship with the [r]espondent”), motion for reconsideration as to remedy granted, 60 FLRA 105 (2004).

The General Counsel also contends that the Judge erred as a matter of law by failing to make a determination as to whether the Charging Party established a particularized need for the requested information. Id. at 11. According to the General Counsel, the Charging Party established a particularized need for each piece of data identified in its information request. Id. at 12. In particular, the General Counsel asserts that the Charging Party indicated that it needed the policy manuals to demonstrate that TIGTA’s investigation was not conducted properly and that the investigation manual was needed to show how investigations should be conducted. Id. at 12-13. The General Counsel points out that the Charging Party sought the information to prepare its oral reply to the employee’s proposed adverse action. Id. at 13.

In the alternative, the General Counsel contends that the Authority should remand the case to the Judge for fact-finding on the issue of particularized need. See id. at 16. The General Counsel asserts that without such findings, the Authority cannot make a reasoned assessment on whether the Charging Party established a particularized need and, therefore, cannot determine whether the Respondent unlawfully failed to disclose the requested information. Id.

B. Respondent's Opposition

The Respondent asserts that the Judge properly found that it did not violate the Statute. In particular, the Respondent contends that TIGTA is not under the Respondent's authority and, thus, Respondent cannot compel TIGTA to provide the documents and manual. See Opposition at 11. The Respondent maintains that because it did not have or control the documents it sought, it could not furnish them to the Union. Opposition at 14-15.

Finally, the Respondent asserts that it provided the Charging Party all of the documents on which it relied in deciding whether to remove the employee. See id. at 14. Thus, the Respondent asserts that the Charging Party cannot establish a particularized need for the policy documents and investigation manual. See id. at 17-20.

IV. Analysis and Conclusions

The General Counsel challenges the Judge's determination that TIGTA is not an agent of the Respondent, relying on Authority precedent involving inspectors general: Justice, NASA and DOJ. However, in the cases relied on, the inspectors general were components of the respondents and thus, under the control of the respondents.

In this case, by contrast, the record supports the Judge's determination that TIGTA is not an agent of the Respondent. In this regard, although TIGTA undertook the investigation at the request of, and on behalf of, the Respondent, there is no dispute that TIGTA is not a component of the Respondent. Unlike other cases involving a respondent and its own inspector general, TIGTA is not the Respondent's inspector general, but a separate, independent inspector general in the Department of the Treasury, the executive department in which both the Respondent and TIGTA are bureaus.

In United States Department of Justice, Office of the Inspector General, Washington, D.C., 45 FLRA 1355, 1356 n.2, 1358-59 (1992) (Justice, OIG) the Authority dismissed a complaint alleging that the respondent failed to comply with § 7114(b)(4) of the Statute. In so doing, the Authority held that the requested information was not normally maintained by, or reasonably available to, Respondent INS because it was in the possession of OIG, a separate component of the Department of Justice. Applying Justice, OIG here, we conclude that, as the requested information is not normally maintained by or reasonably available to the Respondent, the Respondent did not violate the Statute by failing to furnish the Union with the requested information. See Justice, OIG, 45 FLRA at 1359.

In sum, the Judge properly determined that the information sought was not in Respondent's possession, was not normally maintained by Respondent, and was not reasonably available. In these circumstances, the Judge also properly determined that he did not need to rule on whether the Charging Party had established a particularized need. See Decision at 10; Justice, OIG, 45 FLRA at 1358-59. Accordingly, we find that Respondent did not violate the Statute as alleged when it failed to supply the Charging Party with the requested policy documents and investigation manual.

Consistent with the Authority's decision in Justice, OIG, we deny the exceptions.

V. Order

We adopt the findings and recommendations of the Judge, deny the exceptions and dismiss the complaint.

DECISION

Statement of the Case

On April 27, 2005, the National Treasury Employees Union (Union or NTEU) filed an unfair labor practice charge against the U.S. Department of the Treasury, Internal Revenue Service (Respondent or IRS) (GC Ex. 1(a)). On April 19, 2006, the Regional Director of the Washington Regional Office of the Federal Labor Relations Authority (Authority) issued a Complaint and Notice of Hearing (GC Ex. 1(b)) in which it was alleged that the Respondent committed an unfair labor practice in violation of §7116(1)(1), (5) and (8) of the Federal Service Labor-Management Relations Statute (Statute)<sup>1/</sup> by failing to provide the Union with certain information that it had requested pursuant to §7114(b)(4) of the Statute. The Respondent filed a timely Answer (GC Ex. 1(e)) in which it denied that it had committed the alleged unfair labor practice and further alleged that the information which the Union had requested was not subject to the control of the Respondent.

<sup>1/</sup> This is an obvious typographical error since there are no such sections in the Statute. The nature of the alleged violations and the General Counsel's post-hearing brief indicate that the citations should have been to §7116(a)(1), (5) and (8) of the Statute.

A hearing was held in Washington, DC on July 11, 2006. The parties were present with counsel and were afforded the opportunity to present evidence and to cross-examine witnesses. This Decision is based upon the evidence, including the demeanor of witnesses, as well as the post-hearing briefs submitted by the parties.

Findings of Fact

The Respondent is an agency as defined in §7103(a)(3) of the Statute. The Union is a labor organization within the meaning of §7103(a)(4) of the Statute and is the exclusive representative of a unit of the Respondent's employees which is appropriate for collective bargaining (GC Exs 1(a) and 1(e)).

The Union's Information Requests and the Respondent's Replies

By letter of September 3, 2004,<sup>2/</sup> (GC Ex. 2) Jeffrey Basalla, Director, Field Compliance Area 6, informed Rebecca McCoy, a Revenue Officer and member of the bargaining unit, that the Respondent proposed to terminate her employment for the reasons set forth in the letter. By letter of September 14 (Resp. Ex. 1)<sup>3/</sup> from Daniel O. Harbaugh, NTEU Chapter 64 President,<sup>4/</sup> to Julie Tolle, Labor Relations Specialist, the Union requested that the Respondent provide it with certain specified information regarding McCoy's proposed removal. On November 15 Harbaugh, on behalf of the Union, submitted a third information request (GC Ex. 3) to the Respondent through Tolle. Among the material requested was:

All Treasury Inspector General for Tax Administration [TIGTA] investigatory and disciplinary policy documents to show how investigations should be conducted and how cases are referred to an agency's investigatory arm. [Citation omitted.] This is

<sup>3/</sup> The parties agree that this exhibit contains, among other things, all of the Union's requests for information regarding the proposed termination of McCoy as well as all of the Respondent's replies (Tr. 52).

<sup>4/</sup> Although NTEU Chapter 64 was not identified in the Complaint, Harbaugh testified without challenge that it represents the Respondent's employees in West Virginia (Tr. 18). Therefore, all further references to the Union will include NTEU Chapter 64.

to include but is not limited to the Treasury Inspector General for Tax Administration Conduct Investigation Manual 400. This is to include but [not] limited to any manual sections, policy documents, or training materials dealing with UNAX [unauthorized access to tax information] investigations by TIGTA.

On December 8 Tolle responded to Harbaugh in a memorandum (GC Ex. 4) to which she attached some of the requested information. Which regard to the TIGTA material, Tolle stated:

Our Agency does not have control over the release of information for the Treasury Inspector General for Tax Administration. As a result, no information will be provided for this particular item.

By memorandum of December 22 to Tolle (GC Ex. 5) Harbaugh reviewed the Respondent's replies to its first, second and third information requests. Harbaugh noted that the Union had not received a response to its request for the TIGTA policy and training documents. By letter of January 10, 2005, to Tolle (GC Ex. 6) Harbaugh submitted a fifth request for information.<sup>15/</sup> In it he referred to the prior request for TIGTA documents and stated that the Respondent's refusal to comply would constitute an unfair labor practice. Tolle responded to Harbaugh by memorandum of January 11, 2005, (GC Ex. 7) in which she stated:

As you were previously advised on December 8, 2004, our Agency does not have control over the release of information for the Treasury Inspector General for Tax Information (TIGTA). Therefore, the information requested cannot be provided. Please note, you may be able to secure a copy of the requested information through another avenue; however, in order to do so, you will need to submit a FOIA [Freedom of Information Act] request through the TIGTA Office of Special Counsel.

Tolle testified without contradiction that, upon receipt of the Union's request for the TIGTA information, she contacted Donna Rabbitt-Murphy who was the TIGTA special agent who had interviewed McCoy as part of an investigation leading to her proposed separation. Rabbitt-Murphy informed Tolle that the requested information could not be released, even to Labor Relations or IRS management. Rabbitt-Murphy further stated to Tolle that, if the Union wanted the information, it could initiate a FOIA request to the TIGTA Office of Special Counsel. Tolle further testified that she passed that information along to Harbaugh (Tr. 48-49).<sup>16/</sup>

The Relationship Between the IRS and TIGTA

Jeanne E. Morrison is a Senior Technical Advisor for the Respondent. Her responsibilities include the handling of national grievances and negotiations as well as disclosures in response to information requests. Morrison testified that IRS and TIGTA are separate bureaus within the Department of the Treasury. The Commissioner of the IRS has no authority over TIGTA, nor does TIGTA exercise any control over the IRS (Tr. 59, 60). TIGTA performs two primary functions for IRS: the first is to conduct investigations of employees; the second is to review IRS programs and to make recommendations for improvements. TIGTA will hand over reports of investigations and recommendations for program improvements, but it is very difficult to get information from TIGTA (Tr. 60, 61). According to Morrison's understanding, the IRS does not have the ability to obtain information from TIGTA regarding UNAX investigations. However, such material would be available if the investigation were conducted by the IRS itself (Tr. 62).

On cross-examination Morrison testified that TIGTA's relationship to the IRS is as an independent inspector general that functions as a third party. TIGTA may initiate an investigation in response to a referral from IRS management, because of information from an IRS employee or on its own initiative based upon information which TIGTA has received through its own efforts. The investigation in the McCoy matter was initiated by a management referral. In response to my question, Morrison stated that IRS management may choose to conduct an investigation on its own or there may be instances in which TIGTA does not accept a referral (Tr. 65, 66).

<sup>16/</sup> It is unclear whether Tolle mentioned her conversation with Rabbitt-Murphy since she also testified that, to the best of her recollection, all of her communications with Harbaugh were in writing (Tr. 48); none of them made reference to efforts to obtain the documents. Harbaugh, on the other hand, testified as to a telephone conversation that he had with Tolle (Tr. 30) but did not indicate prior knowledge of Tolle's conversation with Rabbitt-Murphy.

Morrison also testified that, while TIGTA makes recommendations after program investigations, its role is very different in investigations of employee misconduct. In such cases, TIGTA merely makes a report of the facts which it has collected through interviews. It is up to IRS management to determine what action to take as a result of TIGTA's report (Tr. 66, 67). The quality of the TIGTA investigation is not a factor in management's determination of whether there has been disparate treatment because the IRS has no knowledge as to how TIGTA conducts its investigations (Tr. 63, 64). Morrison further testified that the IRS has no control over how TIGTA conducts its investigations or over the nature of the training that is given to TIGTA personnel (Tr. 68, 69).

Positions of the Parties

The General Counsel maintains that the Union adequately articulated a particularized need for the TIGTA material which it requested. The General Counsel further maintains that the requested information was relevant to the Union's inquiry as to whether TIGTA had followed its own standards in conducting the investigation in the McCoy matter and whether there was evidence of disparate treatment in the conduct of the investigation. In the Respondent's replies to the Union's information requests it never stated that the Union had not established a particularized need. Accordingly, the Respondent was not entitled to raise the issue for the first time at the hearing.

The General Counsel further maintains that, since the disclosure of the requested information was not prohibited under §7114(b)(4) of the Statute, its disclosure was not barred by FOIA. FOIA does not prohibit the disclosure of information but rather establishes exemptions from otherwise mandatory disclosure under FOIA.

The General Counsel also argues that the requested information was normally maintained and reasonably available at TIGTA. Since TIGTA acted as the agent for the Respondent in conducting the McCoy investigation, and since the information obtained in the investigation was used by the IRS in making its decision as to the imposition of discipline, the IRS is obligated to provide the information to the Union. Because the Respondent may conduct its own investigation rather than referring it to TIGTA, it should not be allowed to avoid its obligations under the Statute by means of an internal management decision.

The Respondent maintains that the General Counsel has failed to meet her burden of proof inasmuch as she has failed to present any evidence to show that the TIGTA material requested by the Union was maintained by the Respondent in the regular course of business and was reasonably available to the Respondent. The requested information was not under the Respondent's control. The Respondent was informed by a representative of TIGTA that it would not provide the information and the Respondent was not able to force TIGTA to do so.

The Respondent further maintains that the Union failed to demonstrate a particularized need for the information. The undisputed evidence shows that the Union's purpose in requesting the information was to determine whether TIGTA, rather than the Respondent, had conducted the McCoy investigation properly.

The Respondent emphasizes that it provided a great deal of information to the Union in the McCoy matter and that it attempted to obtain the requested material from TIGTA. Furthermore, it provided the Union with all of the material which it received from TIGTA.

Discussion and Analysis

The Legal Framework

The legal standards governing a union's right to obtain information are well established and are undisputed by the parties. Pursuant to §7114(b)(4) of the Statute, the duty of an agency to negotiate in good faith includes the duty to provide the union:

... upon request and, to the extent not prohibited by law, data -

(A) which is normally maintained by the agency in the regular course of business;

(B) which is reasonably available and necessary for full and proper discussion, understanding, and negotiation of subjects within the scope of collective bargaining; and

(C) which does not constitute guidance, advice, counsel, or training provided for management officials or supervisors, relating to collective bargaining . . . .

In order for a union to invoke its right to information it must establish a particularized need for the information by articulating, with specificity, the basis of its need, including the uses to which it will put the information and the connection between those uses and its representational responsibilities under the Statute. The union's responsibility for articulation requires more than a conclusory statement; it must be specific enough to permit the agency to make a reasoned judgment as to its obligation to provide the information. The agency is, in turn, responsible for establishing its countervailing anti-disclosure interests, if any, and must do so in a nonconclusory manner, Internal Revenue Service, Washington, D.C. and Internal Revenue Service, Kansas City Service Center, Kansas City, Missouri, 50 FLRA 661, 669 (1995). Furthermore, the agency must articulate its nondisclosure interests in response to the information request and not for the first time at an unfair labor practice hearing, Federal Aviation Administration, 55 FLRA 254, 260 (1999).

In deciding whether information is reasonably available to an agency, the Authority will determine whether the information is accessible or obtainable by means that are neither extreme nor excessive. The physical location of the information is not a critical factor so long as it is subject to the agency's control or can be retrieved and provided to the agency at its request, U.S. Department of Justice, Washington, DC, et al., 46 FLRA 1526, 1537 (1993). Even if the requested information is under the control of another agency, the agency to which the request was made might still not be absolved of the duty to make a reasonable effort to obtain the information. For example, in U.S. Department of Transportation, Federal Aviation Administration, National Aviation Support Facility, Atlantic City Airport, New Jersey, 43 FLRA 191, 197 (1991) the Authority held that information maintained by the Civil Rights Division of the Department of Transportation could be retrieved at the respondent agency's request and was therefore reasonably available.

The Requested Information Was Not Normally Maintained by the Respondent in the Regular Course of Business and Was Not Reasonably Available

The undisputed evidence shows that, other than for the fact that the IRS and TIGTA are both bureaus within the Department of the Treasury, they are completely separate entities and are independent of each others' control. In view of those facts, the General Counsel's reliance on such cases as U.S. Department of Justice, Washington, D.C., et al., 46 FLRA 1526, 1537 (1993) (DOJ) is misplaced. In

DOJ the Authority held that information which was controlled by an agency's inspector general was reasonably available to the agency and was therefore subject to disclosure. Although Morrison characterized TIGTA as an inspector general, she also described it as a third party. The overall weight of the evidence is that, while TIGTA conducted the McCoy investigation at the behest of the Respondent, its status was not that of an "in house" inspector general, but was analogous to that of an outside contractor. The limited character of the relationship between the Respondent and TIGTA is demonstrated by the fact that the Respondent is not required to refer investigations to TIGTA and that TIGTA is not required to accept every referral. Furthermore, the Respondent has no information as to the standards governing TIGTA investigations or the training given to TIGTA investigators.

The General Counsel has characterized TIGTA as the agent of the Respondent, but has produced no evidence to prove the existence of such a relationship other than the fact that TIGTA conducted the McCoy investigation on the Respondent's behalf. Assuming that the General Counsel is correct, there is nothing in the record to show the extent of TIGTA's authority or its obligation to the Respondent other than to conduct the investigation after the receipt of the referral. While the Respondent may be bound by the factual findings made by TIGTA as a result of its investigation, there is nothing inherent in its relationship with TIGTA which counteracts the thrust of the undisputed evidence that the Respondent lacked the authority to require TIGTA to disclose the information requested by the Union.

It is significant to note that the Respondent did not rely upon a conclusory assertion that it could not obtain the requested information. On the contrary, Tolle made an inquiry to the TIGTA representative who conducted the McCoy investigation and was told that TIGTA would not produce the material. Tolle also passed along to Harbaugh the suggestion that the Union initiate a FOIA request. There is nothing in the record to indicate whether the Union did so.<sup>17/</sup>

I am not persuaded by the General Counsel's argument that excusing the Respondent from disclosing the requested information would allow it to evade its obligation to provide information by referring investigations to TIGTA. The record shows that the Respondent produced information in response to numerous requests by the Union (Resp. Ex. 1),<sup>18/</sup> including the Report of Investigation prepared by TIGTA. Furthermore, the undisputed evidence indicates that the material sought by the Union was not used by the Respondent in reaching a final decision regarding McCoy.

<sup>17/</sup> The General Counsel has not alleged that the Respondent should have attempted to persuade the Secretary of the Treasury to order TIGTA to produce the requested material.

The General Counsel does not allege, and there is no evidence to suggest, the existence of a collusive relationship between the Respondent and TIGTA. Apparently the Union did not see fit to explore this issue by requesting copies of communications, if any, between the Respondent and TIGTA regarding the method by which the McCoy investigation was to be conducted or of any standing agreements or policies governing investigations conducted by TIGTA for the Respondent.

Having found that the material requested by the Union was not normally maintained by Respondent in the regular course of business, it is not necessary to address the issue of whether the Union expressed a particularized need for the information or whether the Respondent was entitled to raise the issue at the hearing.

This Decision should not be construed as a determination of the relevance of the TIGTA material to the merits of the Respondent's termination of McCoy's employment. The thrust of the Decision is limited to the Respondent's liability under the Statute for failing to provide the material to the Union.

For the foregoing reasons, I have concluded that the Respondent did not commit an unfair labor practice by failing to provide the Union with the TIGTA procedural and training documents which it requested on November 15, 2004. Accordingly, I recommend that the Authority adopt the following Order:

ORDER

It is hereby ordered that the Complaint be, and hereby is, dismissed.

<sup>18/</sup> Although the Union cited the Respondent's alleged failure to produce a number of the items requested in the unfair labor practice charge (GC Ex. 1(a)), the General Counsel elected to proceed only with regard to the documents describing TIGTA procedure and training.

Issued, Washington, DC, September 28, 2006.
