It is noted that the parties herein maintained that Mr. Stanley, in another proceeding, appealed the termination action on the basis of discrimination due to the fact that he is a white male. A hearing on the discrimination issue was held approximately two weeks prior to the hearing in the instant proceeding. It is recognized that the alternative actions taken by Mr. Stanley are fully within his rights. However, it is noted that the ground set forth in the discrimination case does present a different set of reasons for the termination of training than are represented in the instant proceeding. While the alternative actions do present different issues, the matter considered herein will be treated fully on the merits.

The dispositive question therefore is whether Mr. Stanley's termination was motivated by discriminatory considerations based upon Mr. Stanley's exercise of rights guaranteed under the Order; and is there evidence indicating anti-union animus on the part of Respondent's representatives.

Discussion and Conclusions

Section 203.14 of the Regulation imposes upon the Complainant the burden of proving the allegations of the complaint by a preponderance of the evidence. It is well established that the filing of a grievance or a charge falls within the rights generally enumerated in § 1(a) of the Order and the abridgement of these rights constitutes an Unfair Labor Practice within the meaning of § 19(a)(1). Department of Defense, Arkansas National Guard, A/SLMR No. 53; National Labor Relations Board, Region 17, Footnote 3 A/SLMR No. 295. Accordingly, should it be determined that the termination of Mr. Stanley was in any way related to his action of filing Unfair Labor Practice charges, or grievances, a violation of section 19(a)(1)(2) of the Order would be established. To demonstrate a violation of section 19(a)(4) of the Order, Complainant must have demonstrated that the termination of Mr. Stanley was due to the fact that he filed a complaint or gave testimony under the Order. Clearly there was no showing of a discrimination under section 19(a)(4) of the Order inasmuch as the evidence of record does not show that any complaint other than the complaint under instant consideration was filed under the Order or that testimony was given under the Order in any other proceeding. This failure precludes the finding that the termination or any other discrimination was based on a filing of such a claim or giving such testimony. Additionally, the findings and conclusions discussed below preclude a determination of a violation of section 19(a)(4) of the Order.

With regard to section 19(a)(1) and (2) allegations, I do not find that Complainant has met its burden of proving by a preponderance of the evidence that Respondent violated the Order by terminating Mr. Stanley.

Under the applicable provisions of the Federal Personnel Manual, Subchapter 8, the entire purpose of the probationary period is to ascertain if an individual's actual performance on the job demonstrates the requisite fitness and capacity to acquire such fitness for permanent government service in that position. Subsection 8(3) requires that the supervisor terminate the employee as soon as it becomes apparent, after full and fair trial, that the employee's traits or capacities fail to fit him or her for satisfactory service. Mr. Stanley testified that the time he resigned "... there were no indications at any time of any apparent problems in training at Colorado Springs ..." Tr. page 22.

Inasmuch as credibility is an extremely important factor in the instant Decision, Mr. Stanley's letter of resignation is quoted in its entirety:

As you are well aware, and as my training file indicates, my progress toward qualification as a checked-out controller in this facility has been spasmodic and unpredictable, varying from periods of good (possibly excellent) performance, to periods of barely satisfactory (or unsatisfactory).

At the suggestion of Mr. P. B. Burnet, and in the light of comments and criticism he has made in his letter of confirmation of December 16, 1968, I have given lengthy thought to my status with the FAA, and even more basically, to my purpose in life, and I think I have determined our problem.

Firstly, the way in which the training program is organized, wherein the trainee is forced to operate under the varying backgrounds of no less than twenty or more controllers, and to learn, use, and accept their own individual preferences with regard to technique in controlling traffic, in my opinion leaves much to be desired. In my own case I have been criticized on numerous occasions by one controller for using a specific technique that I had learned from another controller. In some cases, the conflicting criticism was between a controller and a supervisor. Both techniques, of course, were adequate. In the light of this fact--that both techniques are, in fact, adequate--it is difficult, sometimes very difficult, for me to reconcile the two opinions, and to ultimately accept this type of instruction. If left to my own designs, the technique I would have used myself would, in most cases, be equally as 'safe, orderly, and expeditious'. I grant that this may well be my own nature that makes this so difficult for me to accept, so much more for me, it seems, than it is for other trainees to accept. Outright errors neither I have been devoid of, but these have not occurred in my later stages of training, so much so that they should be considered completely unnatural. Keeping a trainee with one and only one instructor, all the time, may be impossible, as a practical matter. In my case, however, I considered it a necessity, in view of the fact that I did not come to this facility as a controller from another control tower in the FAA, nor do I have the experience of the other trainees. In any event, what I have stated I do not offer as an excuse, but only my opinion of part of the problem.

Of the varied interests I have, not the least of which is flying, I consider air traffic control a very interesting occupation. However, I have decided that it is not my most basic interest and concern in life, and I have decided to begin preparing myself for entrance into medical school on a full-time basis, beginning in the coming spring semester, January, 1969.

Accordingly, it is my intention to resign my appointment with the FAA, as of December 28, 1969. (Emphasis supplied)

Complainant's contention is that a full and fair trial was not given Mr. Stanley. Mr. Stanley had almost an entire year's probationary period to demonstrate his fitness for employment as a journeyman air traffic controller. As early as 1968, when he terminated his initial employment with the FAA, Mr. Stanley referred to "comments and criticisms during his training period"; Mr. Stanley admitted, his progress toward qualification as a journeyman controller at the Colorado Springs airport control tower had been "spasmodic and unpredictable." He further addressed himself to difficulties with the training method employed by the FAA. He indicated a desire to be trained by only one instructor. The assignment of one controller to the training of a probationary employee, or any other trainee, is contrary to the PATCO agreement with the FAA. Article 53 of the agreement, section 2 requires that all on-the-job training instructor's assignments be rotated on an equitable basis among the qualified controllers selected to perform the work. Section 4 of the same Article requires all personnel to continue to perform on-the-job training as assigned. Section 5 of the same Article requires the employer to consider the journeyman controller's performance in providing on-the-job training when assessing his performance to determine whether it is deserving special recognition of an award.

The PATCO agreement itself recognizes the importance of on-the-job training and the need for the different journeyman controllers to provide such training to develop able controllers. Mr. Stanley in his December 17, 1968, letter indicated he had difficulty in accepting that method of instruction--in fact more difficulty, it appeared to him, than the other trainees. Complainant has failed to prove that the difficulties experienced in 1968, a period of time when no allegation of discrimination or anti-union animus is alleged or indicated, was any different than the difficulties experienced by Mr. Stanley at Hobby TRACAB.

That Mr. Stanley's problems were continuing as in 1968, was clearly demonstrated in the memorandum dated March 15, 1976, FAA Exhibit No. 6, see also Appendix I attached hereto, where he informed Mr. Hale that Mr. Buddy Carr while conducting a training program at Houston Intercontinental Tower "pampered me." This phrase clearly demonstrates his stated need for individual training by one person.

Another indication that Mr. Stanley's difficulties preceded the November 6, 1975, incident was the previously detailed October 16, 1975, performance report which informed him of deficiencies which were repeatedly mentioned in subsequent training reports such as slow anticipation and slow initiation of control actions.

Mr. Stanley was terminated, not after the filing of the first charge nor the difficulty described with the report of the mid-air collision, but immediately prior to termination of his probationary period. Mr. Stanley had repeated unfavorable performance reports. It is recognized that two journeyman controllers were of the opinion that Mr. Stanley did possess the potential to be a good controller. However, there was no showing that Mr. Stanley did not get a full and fair trial. He was assigned to a variety of journeymen controllers, many of whom found Mr. Stanley had very serious deficiencies. The Complainant did introduce some favorable performance reports but they were during light traffic periods. One witness testified that some evaluations were more favorable than Mr. Stanley's performance warranted, to build confidence. The precis of training reports contained in Appendix II demonstrates that Mr. Stanley had extreme difficulty in handling heavy traffic situations. When the traffic was heavy he constantly got behind and had to be caught up by his instructors, continuously had difficulty in sequencing the aircraft, dividing his attention, had difficulty in establishing priorities and keeping constant track of all the traffic. Mr. Stanley also continued to have difficulty accepting constructive criticism, to the point of letting the traffic go to argue the point. He was considered a danger by at least one supervisor.

The only witness specifically testifying on the point stated that some of the specific talents needed to become a controller are: the ability to remember many numbers; common sense; the ability to do a half a dozen things simultaneously with ease or efficiency; and, the ability to react and make quick decisions. The evidence of record fails to persuasively demonstrate that Mr. Stanley possessed these attributes or had the ability to develop these talents.

Complainant failed to demonstrate that, at that stage of his training, Mr. Stanley was progressing satisfactorily and had demonstrated the potential of becoming facility rated. Complainant did indicate that many individuals were given more time to qualify, but there was no showing that those individuals were similarly in a probationary status or that their demonstrated potential at the same point in their training was similar. Consequently, the record will not support a finding that the Activity's conclusion of Mr. Stanley's lack of potential was just a mere pretext. The difference in treatment which would be accorded a temporary and probationary employee as distinguished from a career-conditional employee does not constitute discrimination within the meaning of section 10(e) of the Act. See FLRC No. 73A-6 (June 21, 1974).

That Mr. Stanley is currently working as an air traffic controller under contract at a government facility operated by the Department of Defense is not probative of his ability to qualify at Hobby TRACAB. It was clearly shown that Hobby TRACAB has a much heavier traffic flow, a situation in which Mr. Stanley demonstrated difficulty. Understandably, a heavy traffic situation is much more difficult for a controller than a light traffic situation. It is undisputed that the Chief Controller at Ellington Air Force Base also failed to qualify at Hobby, albeit, after many more hours in training than Mr. Stanley. Ellington has about one-fourth the traffic of Hobby.

I did find that Mr. Hale did make a statement regarding Mr. Stanley's union activities as a potential interference with his progress at work. However, I cannot find that Mr. Hale's statement regarding the union activities of Mr. Stanley is coercive, threatening or intended to interfere with Mr. Stanley's protected rights. Complainant has failed to show an unlawful interference since there was no threat of reprisal. It appears that Mr. Hale's statement was more in the form of suggestion that more attention is needed to training if Mr. Stanley was to qualify as a journeyman controller. Mr. Hale, from the evidence of record, appears to have a sarcastic sense of humor which was well recognized at the facility.

Mr. Stanley did not testify that he felt constrained in the exercise of his right guaranteed under the Order nor did his subsequent actions indicate that Mr. Hale's statement had such an impact. The statement was more in the nature of a prophecy that if Mr. Stanley did not devote more attention to his training to improve his performance, he would not qualify. Nor was there any evidence that indicated that Mr. Hale's statement had any impact upon other employees. Accordingly, Mr. Hale's statement is not considered a threat of reprisal or force or promise of benefit or indication of anti-union animus.

Mr. Hale failed to include in his recommendation of termination during Mr. Stanley's probationary period the often repeated inability to accept constructive criticism. This failure does not cast suspicion upon the stated grounds for the termination of employment since the matters listed were the principal subjects of the constructive criticism contained in the training reports, and the lack of the necessary improvement demonstrated the inability to accept the criticism. Furthermore, there was no requirement adduced that each and every possible basis for the recommendation be included. The ultimate decision rested in Mr. Mapes, who also consulted supervisors in addition to Mr. Hale, as well as several of Mr. Stanley's other instructors. Based upon these discussions, a review of the training reports and the actual monitoring of his performance, Mr. Mapes concluded that Mr. Stanley did not have the potential to check out at Hobby as a qualified controller. Therefore, even assuming arguendo, that Mr. Hale was less than fair, an assumption the record will not support, Mr. Hale's recommendation was not shown to be the controlling factor in the decision.

The Complainant has not clearly shown that the motivation for the termination of Mr. Stanley's employment was for reasons in violation of the Executive Order and not for the reason that he failed to demonstrate the potential of obtaining the position of a journeyman controller. Mr. Stanley received repeated evaluations indicating slow progress and difficulty in heavy traffic situations as well as the above-listed deficiencies. At most, the Complainant has demonstrated a mere suspicion that the employer discriminatorily discharged Mr. Stanley, which cannot be considered a violation. If Complainant could have demonstrated that there was a differential in treatment of similar employees, then perhaps discrimination could be inferred. However, Complainant's failure to demonstrate that the employees mentioned in the testimony as receiving dissimilar treatment were probationary employees or were proceeding in their training programs at a similar pace to Mr. Stanley prevents any inference from being made herein. The evidence will not support the finding that the discharge was a mere pretext for animosity toward the union. Nor have any of the Activity's action been shown as intended to discourage either membership in PATCO or the exercise of rights guaranteed the members of PATCO.

In conclusion, the Activity has the guaranteed right and obligation to terminate probationary employees for good cause. The Complainant has failed to carry its burden of proving that the employer's motivation was other than for good cause for: the termination occurred just prior to the expiration of the probationary period; there was no showing that the action was contrary to established procedures; that Mr. Stanley did receive numerous warnings that his progress was slow and he was fully informed as to the reasons for his termination; and finally, he was terminated well after filing his first charge.

I find that there was no violation of section 19(a)(1). The evidence as a whole clearly establishes a long standing pattern of slow progression in training and dissatisfaction since 1968 with the FAA's training methods. The record is replete with poor training reports and there was no persuasive showing that such reports were normal considering the employee's stage in training. Further, there was no showing that Mr. Stanley received disparate treatment. The Regulations require that, prior to the termination of the probationary employee's probationary period, his potential be evaluated, and if found lacking, the activity is to deny career tenure. Based on these facts, it cannot be found that Mr. Stanley's separation was discriminatory or in any other manner violative of the Executive Order.

I further find that there was no violation of section 19(a)(2) of the Order inasmuch as no anti-union animus was shown nor will the record support a finding that Mr. Stanley would have been retained but for his filing of Unfair Labor Practice charges and grievances. The training reports, performance evaluation memoranda, Mr. Stanley's 1968 resignation letter and other evidence of record adequately explain the Activity's decision to terminate immediately prior to the termination of the probationary period. Mr. Boyce Tate, the supervisor for three months prior to Mr. Stanley's termination, stated that he knew of no controller with a similar number of training hours that constantly made the same mistakes, like Stanley, that subsequently checked out as a qualified controller. No evidence to the contrary was presented. Hence, the Activity's determination of lack of potential warranting termination was not persuasively refuted.

Accordingly, in all the circumstances, I reject the Complainant's contention with regard to the alleged Unfair Labor Practices.

Recommendation

Upon the basis of the foregoing findings and conclusion, I hereby recommend that the complaint against Respondent be dismissed in its entirety.

Subject: Confirmation of Performance Discussion

To: ATCS T. Laurence Stanley

This is to confirm the discussion with you on February 23, 1976, concerning your performance for the period ending January 23, 1976. I reminded you that this performance discussion was planned for January 23, 1976, at which time you became sick and it was rescheduled for the following day, January 24, 1976. You were sick this day, also. You had been previously assigned to Intercontinental Tower for 3 weeks Nonradar and Radar training beginning January 26, 1976. I informed you this performance discussion was therefore delayed until February 23, 1976, and that it was for the period ending January 23, 1976.

I informed you that your rate of progress on Local Control position was unsatisfactory. To improve your progress toward checkout on Local Control, I recommended you concentrate on the following areas:

1. Attitude toward constructive criticism.
2. Inattention to duties.
3. Division of attention.
4. Phraseology.
5. Priorities.

I informed you that if your rate of progress remained unsatisfactory the next 30-day period, your training could be terminated.

You informed me that you felt some of the people training you were not interested in your progress, but were only waiting for you to make a mistake. You made reference to an occurrence of this with ATCS Charles Fleming and another time that ATCS Douglass Turner recommended you be withdrawn from training. I informed you that I had confidence in their control and training ability, and felt they were doing a good job.

You informed me that Mr. Buddy Carr, EPDS, Intercontinental Tower, when conducting Nonradar and Radar training, had shown an interest by, "pampering me." You stated that you now have an attitude change and will try to improve your rate of progress.

GARY C. HALE
SATCS, Assistant Chief

Receipt Acknowledged: I do not necessarily agree with all of the above statements.

APPENDIX 2

A few examples from the training reports, in all probability chosen as "worst cases," by Mr. Hale.

TRAINING REPORT OF 2-20-76 Instructor Chestnut:

Establish visual contact with your traffic as soon as possible. You are not looking around the area near enough. You have ten window - Look out all of them. N24Q on short final Runway 17 - a previous Cherokee missed Taxiway F and was taxiing very slow down the runway when N24Q was on 1/8 mile final. Chestnut had to send him around.

TRAINING REPORT OF 2-21-76 Instructor McCubbin:

Look out the windows more. You had a Cherokee landing on Runway 3 that was supposed to land on Runway 30. You didn't see him until he was on a half-mile final, then you didn't know who he was.

TRAINING REPORT OF 2-22-76 Instructor McCubbin:

You have a UHF frequency. Also, both times the guard helicopter on approach to Runway 3 called, McCubbin had to tell you about it. Dusty 88 on approach to Runway 3 had traffic crossing in front of him. You did not issue it. A Bonanza south of the field had traffic on radar. You were really worried about it. If you would have looked out the window you could have seen it was no factor. The Cessna was well above the Bonanza.

TRAINING REPORT OF 2-19-76 Instructor Nunnery:

The local coordinator pointed out S0934 to you several times on visual approach to Runway 12. There was no way he would fit with N006 and N1HT. I had to prompt you to take any action at all and to call traffic. It was a very dangerous situation. You will get in a lot of trouble giving VFR's the instrument runway. When you approve Runway 21 for an aircraft that can't hold short of Runway 12, you must sequence just like with Runway 17 and 12.

If you can teach yourself to listen to what is going on around you it will solve a lot of problems. Don't get so involved with one aircraft and let everything else get out of hand. This happened with S0934, N1HT, and N006.

TRAINING REPORT OF 2-22-76 Instructor Nunnery:

You cleared N77R to land without knowing where he was. You cleared N62X for takeoff at Runway 30 at Taxiway L and N096 at Runway 35 at Taxiway S at the same time. You told N16S to standby and never went back to him. You did not write down your departures and therefore forgot most of them. Did not look at IFR departure strips therefore rolled N55H as a VRF departure.

TRAINING REPORT OF 2-27-76 Instructor Chestnut:

You cleared N049 for takeoff thinking he was at Runway 17 and Taxiway F; he was on Runway 21 at Taxiway F and was rolling before you caught it. N090 was rolling on Runway 12 at that time. N1LS, left t/c Runway 12, N362 left t/c Runway 17, SWA17 straight in Runway 12. You failed to issue any sequence until N362 was on base and SWA17 was on 3 1/2 mile final. During this immediate period you had 6 aircraft including the above and no sequence. You had N06R call you approximately 8 north and gave him straight in Runway 17. Ahead of him was a Citation on Runway 12, a Twin Cessna on Runway 17, and a Grumman American on Runway 17. You failed to issue a sequence to N06R or to take any action until it was necessary to 360 N06R. Then you approved a right base for Runway 17 on N2611 a mile NW in front of N06R. Chestnut took the position at that.

TRAINING REPORT OF 3-10-76

The instructor commented that Mr. Stanley was terrible at setting priorities, and that he failed to act immediately upon receipt of instructions, asking questions, after the instructions were given rather than waiting until there was a lull in the traffic or other more propitious time. FAA Exhibit No. 19

TRAINING REPORT OF 3-11-76 Instructor McCubbin:

Three times McCubbin had to bring to your attention that someone was calling you on frequency 118.7. This is one of your frequencies.

You need to look out the window more. N46R departed on Runway 17 requested a right turn. You approved it. You had N901 on low approach to Runway 3, 1 mile SW. McCubbin had to take the frequency and tell N46Q to continue south-bound until he saw his traffic.

You had 4 airplanes on VOR 12 approach and N80A on approach to Runway 3 circle to land. N80A requested Runway 12, you approved it. By approving Runway 12 for N80A you created a problem. McCubbin had to take over and straighten the traffic flow out.

TRAINING REPORT OF 3-12-76 Instructor McCubbin:

You were having too many departure delays. Aircraft delayed: N3E, N36T, SWA 18, N500MR, N4WE, N29S, XAAPD, N59B, N61M, N90B. There were more but I can't remember them. You assigned N90B Runway 21. An I-3 approach was in use. You changed N90B to Runway 30 after I asked you about it. N90B was still 5 east when two departures were ready to go on Runway 12. McCubbin took the frequency and changed N90B to Runway 35.

N38T was making touch and go's on Runway 3. Not once did you sequence him with other traffic. Everytime McCubbin had to sequence him. N17Y departed Runway 35 with a right turn heading 180. N76MD called ready on Runway 3. You cleared N76MD for takeoff with a left turn heading 020. McCubbin had to take the frequency and cancel N76MD's takeoff clearance. You had N90B on short final Runway 35 and N61M holding in position on Runway 35. You forgot about him. McCubbin had to clear N61M for takeoff.

The instructor also informed Mr. Stanley that he "loses his cool when it starts getting busy." (FAA Ex. No. 25) The instructor told Mr. Stanley he did not have a picture of the traffic for most of the training period.

TRAINING REPORT OF 3-13-76 Instructor Nunnery:

N37N and N09L were unduly delayed. Several departures were forgotten because you couldn't call them when they called. You put N61X on a short approach, when it wasn't necessary, behind a Southwest Airlines B737 on Runway 3 and caused him to go around.

Mr. McCubbin wrote on the training report "You are very slow in making (sic) decisions (sic) I fell (sic) out it is because you are not sure of what you are doing. You have got to be able to make decisions (sic) and make them right. If you can't, your (sic) in the wrong field (sic) know what needs to be done and do it. I (McCubbin) am doing too much of the work for you in your stage of training.

On April 1, 1976, Mr. McCubbin again criticized Mr. Stanley about being slow in making decision for not looking out the windows enough, slow in responding to aircraft, delaying departures unnecessarily and inept sequencing of incoming traffic (FAA Ex. No. 23).

TRAINING REPORT OF 3-25-76 Instructor Chestnut:

You were issuing traffic on N65X as over the tower on downwind. N65X was actually on a mile final to Runway 17. At this time you also had traffic on a 1 mile final to Runway 12 and should have known N5X's position.

On a number of occasions you issued a sequence unnecessarily to aircraft that were separated by 5 miles or more yet failed to sequence traffic that were obviously conflicting. Reference N65X and N421BD; N65X and a King Air on final to Runway 12. N65X had to make a 360, N709 given a 360. These resulted not from pilot error but from no sequence being issued soon enough to be useful or not issued at all.

You had 3 aircraft report over the Dome within 1 minute of each other and you failed to issue traffic.

You delayed many departures because you failed to utilize anticipated separation or due to incorrect priorities. I28W held at Runway 17 and after N28W and were at the same location as N28W.

N709 could have been cleared for takeoff on Runway 17 twice but was held. When finally put into position, N38Q was cleared ahead of him. N709 was held in position for N473 on a 1 1/2 mile final to Runway 12. N100JB, a westbound IFR departure, was held for departure on Runway 12. N100JB, a westbound IFR departure, was held for departure on Runway 12 yet he could have rolled on two occasions on Runway 17. N311 called ready at Runway at Taxiway F. You told him to hold short. No one had departed ahead of him and there was no one on final to Runway 12 at that time. N2BA was delayed at Runway 17 at Taxiway F. I believe you forgot him. See also FAA Ex. No. 2.

TRAINING REPORT OF 3-22-76

The instructor noted failure to watch the traffic once it is cleared for takeoff, late sequencing hesitance in making sequencing decisions and once the decision is made, failure to change sequence once it is ascertained that the established sequence will not work (FAA Ex. No. 8).

TRAINING REPORT OF 3-31-76 Instructor Nunnery:

The local coordinator had to make every pointout several times because you weren't listening. You told N25R to make a straight out reference SWA36 departing Runway 30. N25R to make a straight out reference SWA36 departing Runway 30. N25R turned into SWA36's departure path and asked for a frequency change and you approved it. N8BL, N92C, and a Cessna off Runway 35 were all 2 miles NW without traffic being called.

TRAINING REPORT OF 3-31-76 Instructor Tate:

Do what your instructor tells you to do when they tell you something. Don't say "Wait a minute" and go on to something else. Numerous aircraft were delayed because you would answer an aircraft calling you inbound for a landing instead of getting the departures out. N400CC, N535, N81E, and many more were delayed because you either forgot them or did not use the right priorities.

TRAINING REPORT OF 4-8-76 Instructor McCubbin:

SWA140 was ready for departure on Runway 21, northbound. You had a Cessna on approach to Runway 3 that was 5 miles out and a Cessna on a mile final to Runway 17. You had time to get SWA140 out. You could have used visual separation on SWA140 and the Cessna on approach to Runway 13. The Cessna on Final to Runway 17 was no factor. N79MA was on a visual approach to Runway 12. He was too high and had to re-enter the traffic pattern. You should have told approach control about it. You cleared ATW102 for takeoff on Runway 12 and N36Q low approach to Runway 3. McCubbin told you to correct the situation. You didn't do anything. McCubbin had to take the frequency and straighten it out.

TRAINING REPORT OF 4-10-76 Instructor Turner:

SWA 113 and N60SL were unnecessarily delayed because of inadequate planning of departures and arrivals.

TRAINING REPORT OF 4-11-76 Instructor Thompson:

N1330G 3 mi. north on right base Runway 17, N87G missed approach from Runway 12 Heading 360 degrees was 2 mi. N. No traffic issued. The passed within 1 mi. N86PB 3 NW right base Rnwy 17 traffic 1 o'clock less than a mile westbound. Traffic never issued.

TRAINING REPORT OF 4-14-76

The instructor noted a failure to keep track of all the traffic, a failure to look out the window, and the report ended the request to "THINK." (FAA Exhibit No. 9)

TRAINING REPORT OF 4-15-76 Instructor McCubbin:

N93K on final for Runway 12 and N816 on left base to Runway 12. N816 was turning in too close to N93K. McCubbin had to turn N816 back out. N47H on short final to Runway 17 and N30 out in position Runway 17. McCubbin had to tell N47H to enter base for Runway 12.

The instructor also criticized Mr. Stanley's manner of communicating with aircraft which was, from the evidence of record, a frequent criticism (FAA Exhibit No. 24, see also FAA Exhibit Nos. 9, 10, 19, 20, 21, 23, 25 and 26).

TRAINING REPORT OF 4-21-76

The instructor criticized Mr. Stanley for not looking out the window "near [often] enough," difficulty in scheduling departures, difficulty in sequencing traffic and establishing reasonable traffic priorities (FAA Exhibit No. 22).

TRAINING REPORT OF 4-23-76

The instructor indicated that Mr. Stanley got so far behind that the instructor had to take the frequency, Mr. Stanley had difficulty sequencing and was slow. The report did note that Mr. Stanley was doing a good job at the beginning of the training period but once he fell behind he was unable to catch up. (FAA Exhibit No. 10)

UNITED STATES DEPARTMENT OF LABOR
ASSISTANT SECRETARY FOR LABOR-MANAGEMENT RELATIONS
SUMMARY OF DECISION AND ORDER OF THE ASSISTANT SECRETARY
PURSUANT TO SECTION 6 OF EXECUTIVE ORDER 11491, AS AMENDED

SOCIAL SECURITY ADMINISTRATION, BUREAU OF HEARINGS AND APPEALS
A/SLMR No. 1040

This case involved an unfair labor practice complaint filed by the American Federation of Government Employees, Local 3615, AFL-CIO (AFGE) alleging that the Respondent violated Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order by failing to negotiate in good faith during contract negotiations by reopening issues on which agreement had been reached and by unilaterally making changes on the typewritten form of the contract.

The Administrative Law Judge found that the Respondent had not violated Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order. Under all the circumstances, he concluded that the reopening of points that had been previously agreed upon did not reflect an intent to subvert or sabotage negotiations and that the alleged changes in the final typewritten draft of the contract, as compared to the signed-off draft, did not clearly demonstrate bad faith.

The Assistant Secretary adopted the findings, conclusions and recommendations of the Administrative Law Judge and ordered that the complaint be dismissed.

DECISION AND ORDER

On February 3, 1978, Administrative Law Judge Robert J. Feldman issued his Recommended Decision and Order in the above-entitled proceeding, finding that the Respondent had not engaged in the unfair labor practices alleged in the complaint and recommending that the complaint be dismissed in its entirety. Thereafter, the Complainant filed exceptions and a supporting brief with respect to the Administrative Law Judge's Recommended Decision and Order and the Respondent filed an answer to the Complainant's exceptions.

The Assistant Secretary has reviewed the rulings of the Administrative Law Judge made at the hearing and finds that no prejudicial error was committed. 1/ The rulings are hereby affirmed. 2/ Upon consideration of the Administrative Law Judge's Recommended Decision and Order and the 1/ Among other things, the Complainant excepted to the Administrative Law Judge's failure, in his Recommended Decision and Order, to refer to the absence of Robert Trachtenberg whose appearance as a witness had been approved by the Regional Administrator pursuant to Section 206.7 of the Assistant Secretary's Regulations. However, it is noted that at the hearing in this matter the Administrative Law Judge took cognizance of Mr. Trachtenberg's failure to appear and stated that he would weigh the evidence consistent with his obligation under Section 206.7(e) of the Regulations where a party fails to comply with a Request for Appearance of Witnesses.

2/ In my view, the Administrative Law Judge improperly received evidence on, and considered, allegations in the complaint which had been previously dismissed by the Regional Administrator, which dismissal had not been appealed. However, in view of my decision herein to dismiss the instant complaint in its entirety, I find that the Administrative Law Judge's action did not constitute prejudicial error. Cf. RECOMMENDED DECISION AND ORDER

This is an unfair labor practice proceeding in which a formal hearing of record was held pursuant to Executive Order 11491, as amended (hereinafter referred to as "the Order") and 29 CFR Part 203.

Statement of the Case

The complaint as filed charged Respondent with violations of Sections 19(a)(1), (2) and (6) of the Order. It is alleged that Respondent, its Director, Executive Director, and Chief Negotiator delayed and stalled during contract negotiations, 3/ In agreeing with the Administrative Law Judge's recommendation, I find that the Complainant presented insufficient evidence to prove that such changes as were alleged to have been made by the Respondent in the final typewritten draft of the negotiated agreement were of a substantive nature.

thereby causing Complainant's negotiating team not only to exhaust the allotted 240 hours of official time, but to take extensive annual leave and/or leave without pay in their attempt to reach an agreement on the contract. It is further alleged that Respondent and the above specified officials thereof "have negotiated in bad faith and have continuously negotiated in a manner contrary to the spirit and intent of Executive Order 11491, as amended." The above allegations are followed by a lengthy statement of purported instances and circumstances evidencing the general accusation of bad faith.

Upon motion of the Respondent and after investigation, portions of the complaint were dismissed by the Acting Regional Administrator, whose letter dated January 26, 1977 is incorporated herein by reference. Referring to a number of the specific instances of alleged violations included in the basis of the complaint and finding them unwarranted, the Acting Regional Administrator dismissed the complaint "with respect to the allegation of dilatory and evasive tactics, and failure to attempt a satisfactory resolution of the charge". He further dismissed the 19(a)(2) allegation, since a reasonable basis therefor had not been established. It does not appear that any appeal from the partial dismissal was taken to the Assistant Secretary pursuant to Section 203.8(c) of the Regulations.

In his letter accompanying the Notice of Hearing herein, the Acting Regional Administrator defined the issues raised by the complaint as follows:

Did the Activity engage in bad faith bargaining, thereby violating Sections 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order, by re-opening points on which agreement had been reached and by unilaterally making changes on the type-written form of the contract?

The proof at the hearing, however, was not focused upon the narrow issues framed above. In accordance with the standard LMSA invitation to all parties to go beyond the stated question and "develop any other evidence which they feel may be relevant to the allegations contained in the complaint", the proof adduced by both sides was directed to the fundamental issue of whether in any aspect of the contract negotiations, Respondent had failed to bargain in good faith. In fact, much of the evidence introduced by Complainant without objection from counsel for the Respondent pertained to the allegation of dilatory and evasive tactics that had been the subject of the prehearing partial dismissal, and a stipulation was entered into by both parties as to the aggregate amount of annual leave or leave without pay necessarily taken by Complaint's negotiating team by reason of the protracted negotiations. In their post-hearing briefs, counsel do not limit their arguments to the narrow issue of re-opening agreed points and unilateral changes as indications of bad faith. Nor does the Respondent contend that there is any prejudicial variance between the pleading and the proof. Consequently, with due regard to the action taken by the Acting Regional Administrator, the question presented for determination is whether, within the scope of the undismissed allegations of the complaint, the Respondent failed to bargain in good faith.

Findings of Fact

I deem it neither necessary nor appropriate to make factual findings with respect to the dismissed allegations of dilatory and evasive tactics, to wit, allegations of undue delay in beginning negotiations, of insistence on needless clarification of union proposals, of failure to provide counterproposals before the sessions at which they were to be discussed, and of refusal to negotiate "off-the-clock". Suffice it to say that the evidence adduced at the hearing does not show that the Acting Regional Administrator's partial dismissal of the complaint was unwarranted.

Since July, 1975, Complainant has been the exclusive representative of the professional and non-professional employees in the units. The proof discloses the following chronology of events in the course of contract negotiations:

- October 7, 1975: Parties agree to ground rules for collective bargaining.
- Late November, 1975: Union submits contract proposals to Respondent.
- February 19, 1976: Negotiations commence for collective bargaining agreement.
- May 19, 1976: Respondent discontinues check-off of union dues as of June 5th expiration.
- June 1, 1976: Parties commence mediation before Federal Mediation and Conciliation Service.
- July 2, 1976: Union issues unfair labor practice charge against Respondent.

July 20, 1976: Five proposed articles are sub-submitted to the Federal Service
Impasses Panel.

October 4, 1976: Union files the unfair labor practice complaint herein.

December 2, 1976: Disputed articles are resolved by the Impasses Panel.

December 10, 1976: Collective bargaining agreement is signed.

January 25, 1977: Collective bargaining agreement.

From time to time during the course of negotiations, each of the parties re-opened discussions on points that had been previously agreed upon. Although some minor changes resulted, neither party unilaterally reneged on its agreement with respect to a material issue.

In two instances, Respondent's final type-written version of the agreement contained minor changes in language not previously agreed to (A third change in the word-order of a sentence was purely grammatical and of no significance). In the Article on Position Description, an agreed substitution of "grievance" for "appeal" was omitted. In the Article on Equal Employment Opportunity, an agreed substitution of "recommended" for "suggested" was omitted.

Respondent's Chief Negotiator was authorized to perform his duties in that capacity. He was empowered to voice the views of Respondent, to take positions in its behalf, and to commit it to binding obligations. Though he conferred frequently with certain officials, he was not replaced or superseded during the course of negotiations nor relieved of any of his authority.

By reason of the extended negotiations, members of the union negotiating team had exhausted the aggregate leave time allotted to them (240 hours) long before negotiations were completed. They were thus obliged to use a total of 150 hours of annual leave or leave without pay in order to finish the performance of their assigned duties. Respondent has declined to restore such leave or to make any adjustment for their lost time. Members of the Respondent's negotiating team were on official time throughout the negotiations and none of them has been obliged to take any annual leave or leave without pay in order to discharge his duties.

In the course of mediation, Respondent's chief negotiator agreed to three articles as a "package" and declined to accept Union's agreement to one of those articles without the other two.

Conclusions of Law

Reference to the chronology of events might provide a reasonable basis for viewing the issuance of the unfair labor practice charge and the filing of the complaint herein as premature. It might even be argued that the charge of failing to negotiate in good faith was rendered moot by the subsequent negotiation and ultimate execution of the collective bargaining agreement. Certainly, it cannot be gainsaid that when negotiations ripened into mutual agreement, there is strong evidence that despite any earlier hostility or distrust, both parties eventually bargained in good faith. Determination of the issues herein, however, need not rest solely upon the inference drawn from final agreement.

Good faith is a subjective concept. It is an attitude, a state of mind, the existence of which is not perceived by the senses nor established by the laws of physics or mathematics. Barring a voluntary confession or an inadvertent admission, its absence can only be demonstrated by circumstantial evidence. The burden of proving failure to negotiate in good faith is a heavy one, and conduct that may be fairly characterized as "hard bargaining" does not per se sustain that burden. Department of the Air Force, 4392d Aerospace Support Group, Vandenberg Air Force Base, California, A/SLMR No. 623. It is not enough to show, for instance, that an opposing negotiator is argumentative and captious, or that an adverse witness is uncooperative and largely amnesic except for a convenient area of total recall pertaining to defamatory comments on the character of a local union officer purportedly made by a Federal mediator. To demonstrate lack of good faith, it is necessary to show a pattern of dealing characterized to some extent by an element of duplicity or pretense, from which it might be reasonably inferred that the accused party intended to avoid or abort or preclude genuine bargaining.

The facts found above do not, in my view, support any such conclusion. The re-opening of points that had been previously agreed upon is not an extraordinary happening in the give-and-take of contract negotiations. While it impedes progress, and if carried to extremes, can be obstructive, the character and extent of the re-opening shown here does not reflect any intent to subvert or sabotage negotiations. Similarly, the minor discrepancies in two articles of the final version of the contract as compared with the signed-off draft do not even clearly establish any intentional unilateral change. For all that appears in the record, the addition, deletion or substitution of words may well have been inadvertent, and in any event, do not demonstrate bad faith.

The notice of termination of the dues check-off agreement in accordance with its terms and the refusal to further extend it were not in violation of any provisions of the Order and did not constitute an attempt to avoid bargaining. See U.S. Department of Commerce, U.S. Merchant Marine Academy, Kings Point, New York, A/SLMR No. 620. That a chief negotiator confers regularly with a higher echelon executive or with a policy committee is not proof of lack of authority. The tactic of proposing agreement to a "package" of several items may not be desirable under all circumstances, but might be effective at times in concluding an agreement and does not of itself give rise to a necessary inference of lack of good faith. In short, Complainant has not sustained its burden of proof as to the alleged failure on the part of Respondent to negotiate in good faith.

It must be observed that this proceeding was not brought for the purpose of enforcing provisions of the Order in vacuo. Complainant frankly sought to use the unfair labor practice procedure as a vehicle for obtaining some compensation for the "lost time" in excess of the hours allotted for negotiation under the provisions of Section 20. Although the proof falls short of demonstrating a purposeful design on the part of Respondent to compel the Union negotiating team to take annual leave or leave without pay, Respondent should avoid taking advantage of the inequity inherent in disparate amounts of official time for negotiation available under the circumstances to the respective parties. In the context of maintaining constructive and cooperative relationships between labor organizations and management officials, a basic concept of fair dealing ought to induce both parties to resolve the controversy without the necessity of prolonged, costly and heated adjudication proceedings under the unfair labor practice provisions of the Order. It is not inappropriate in that regard to recall a pertinent statement of the Federal Labor Relations Council:

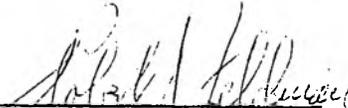

Moreover, in addition to our conclusion that the conduct of the activity in the circumstances herein did not constitute a violation of the Order, it is also the opinion of the Council that litigation of this case is itself inconsistent with the purposes of the Order. ... In the opinion of the Council, litigation of this sort does not effectuate the long-term establishment of collective bargaining in the Federal program. ... Thus, it does not serve the purposes of the Order when the parties use the sanctions provided therein as the first, and not the last, resort for the settlement of their disputes.

Vandenberg Air Force Base, 4392d Aerospace Group, Vandenberg Air Force Base, California, FLRC No. 74A-77.

Upon the entire record, I find no violation of Section 19(a) (1) or (6) of the Order.

RECOMMENDATION

In view of the foregoing, I recommend that the complaint be dismissed in its entirety.

Case No. 22-07952(RO)

This case involved a representation petition filed by the American Federation of Government Employees, Local 2, AFL-CIO, (AFGE) seeking to represent a unit of all General Schedule employees of the United States Court of Military Appeals, Washington, D. C. The sole issue presented at the hearing was whether the Activity is an "agency" within the meaning of Section 2(a), and therefore subject to the jurisdiction of the Order. The Activity contended that it is an independent tribunal established by the Congress to oversee the military justice system and that it is independent of the Department of Defense, the executive department to which it conceded it is administratively attached. Because of the nature of the statute under which it was created, the Activity asserted that it is part of the legislative branch of the Federal Government.

DECISION AND DIRECTION OF ELECTION

Upon a petition duly filed under Section 6 of Executive Order 11491, as amended, a hearing was held before Hearing Officer Ralph R. Smith. The Hearing Officer's rulings made at the hearing are free from prejudicial error and are hereby affirmed.

The Assistant Secretary indicated that, for the purposes of this decision, it was not considered necessary to decide whether the Activity is part of the Department of Defense. Rather, the determination of jurisdiction was based solely on the question whether the Activity is an agency within the executive branch and thus subject to the jurisdiction of the Order. The Assistant Secretary noted that the Activity has been viewed as part of the executive branch by the courts, as it is part of the specialized military justice system, and it is well established that the entire military establishment is subject to the control of the civilian Commander-in-Chief and the civilian department heads under him.

Upon the entire record in this case, including briefs filed by both parties, the Assistant Secretary finds:

1. The labor organization involved claims to represent certain employees of the Activity.
2. The Petitioner, American Federation of Government Employees, Local 2, AFL-CIO, herein called AFGE, seeks an election in a unit of all General Schedule employees of the United States Court of Military Appeals, Washington, D. C., excluding professional employees, management officials, employees engaged in Federal personnel work in other than a purely clerical capacity, temporary employees with no reasonable expectation of continuing employment, and supervisors as defined in the Order.

At the hearing, the parties stipulated that the unit sought by the AFGE is appropriate. 1/ Therefore, the hearing dealt solely with the issue of Under all the circumstances, the Assistant Secretary concluded that the Activity is an "agency" within the meaning of Section 2(a) of the Executive Order and that the Order applies to its employees. In his judgment, the finding that the Activity is an "agency" within the meaning of Section 2(a) of the Order for purposes of collective bargaining in no way conflicts with the Congressional concern that the Activity be independent in its adjudicatory role.

Accordingly, the Assistant Secretary directed that an election be conducted in the unit found appropriate.

1/ The Hearing Officer stated on the record that he had been authorized by the Regional Administrator to enter the latter's approval of the unit, as stipulated, on the record.

whether the Activity is an "agency" within the meaning of Section 2(a), 2/ and therefore subject to the jurisdiction of the Order. 3/ In this regard, the Activity contends that it is an independent tribunal established by the Congress to oversee the military justice system, and that it is independent of the Department of Defense, the executive department to which it concedes it is administratively attached. Because of the nature of the statute under which it was created, the Activity asserts that it is part of the legislative branch of the Federal Government. On the other hand, the AFGE contends that the Activity is subject to the jurisdiction of the Order as it is part of neither the judicial nor the legislative branch of the Federal Government, and that there is substantive evidence that the Activity is in the executive branch. Moreover, it contends that the Activity's role in the court-martial system demonstrates that it is part of the executive branch because the court-martial function has always been recognized as a role of the executive branch.

The Activity was established under the Uniform Code of Military Justice 4/ pursuant to Congress' Article I constitutional authority 5/ "to make rules for the Government and Regulation of the Land and Naval Forces," and serves as the final appellate tribunal within the court-martial system. As an Article I court, the Activity's judges are not covered by Article III constitutional protections which apply to regular Federal judges, who hold their offices during good behavior, and whose compensation may not be diminished during their term. Thus, the Activity's three civilian judges are appointed for 15 year terms by the President with the advice and consent of the Senate, and they may be removed by the President, upon notice and hearing, for neglect of duty and malfeasance in office or for mental or physical disability. Further, certain sentences of the Activity can be imposed only with the approval of the President or the civilian department heads under him, a limitation to which judges of Article III courts are not subject.

The statute which established the Activity specifies that it is to be located in the Department of Defense "for administrative purposes only." In this connection, its appropriation is an item in the Defense Department's

2/ Section 2(a) defines an "agency" as "an executive department, a Government corporation, and an independent establishment as defined in section 104 of title 5, United States Code, except the General Accounting Office."

3/ It is noted that Section 3(a) of the Order states that the "Order applies to all employees and agencies in the executive branch," with certain exceptions not relevant here.

4/ Uniform Code of Military Justice, 10 U.S.C. 867 (1968), § 67(a)(1).

5/ Generally, Federal courts are established pursuant to Article III of the Constitution, which provides for the establishment of the judicial branch of the Federal Government. The United States Tax Court is another example of an "Article I" court.

budget, and it receives personnel, training and payroll services from the Department. Further, the Activity applies the regulations of the Federal Personnel System to its employees, who participate in the Civil Service Retirement System. The legislative history of the amended statute creating the Activity indicates Congressional concern that the Activity not be viewed as "an instrumentality of the executive branch or...an administrative agency within the Department of Defense." S. Rep. No. 806, 90th Congress, 1st Sess. (1967), 113 Cong. Rec. 33910-11.

For the purposes of this decision, it was not considered necessary to decide whether the Activity is part of the Department of Defense. Rather, the determination of jurisdiction herein is based solely on the question whether the Activity is an agency within the executive branch and, thus, subject to the jurisdiction of the Order. In this regard, it should be noted that the United States Supreme Court (which reviews decisions of the Activity only regarding constitutional issues) has tended to treat the Activity as part of the executive branch, even subsequent to the amendment of the statute whose legislative history is quoted above. Thus, in 1972, the Supreme Court noted that, "While we have stated in the past that special deference is due the military decision making process..., this is so neither because of comity nor the sanctity of the Executive Branch..." Paris v. Davidson, 405 U.S. 34, 51 (1972) (Douglas, J., concurring). The Supreme Court has noted also that "a court-martial is not yet an independent system of justice but remains to a significant degree a specialized part of the overall mechanism by which military discipline is preserved." 6/

As an element of this specialized military justice system, the Activity is subject to the control of the executive branch, it being well established that the entire military establishment is subject to the control of the civilian Commander-in-Chief and the civilian department heads under him. 7/ In my opinion, the Congressional concern, indicated in the legislative history of the amended statute by which the Activity was created, that the Activity not be viewed "as an instrumentality of the executive branch or...an administrative agency within the Department of Defense," must be considered within this context. Thus, it is clear that Congress sought to reinforce its statutory intent that the Activity is a court, albeit an Article I court, so as to protect its judicial independence within the scope of the Court's authority pursuant to the Uniform Code of Military Justice. 8/

Under the foregoing circumstances, I conclude that the Activity is an "agency" within Section 2(a) of the Executive Order and that the Order applies to its employees. As noted above, the record indicates that the Activity is an integral part of the military's court-martial system which is subject to the authority of the executive branch. In my judgment, a finding that the Activity is an "agency" within the meaning of Section 2(a) of the Order for purposes of collective bargaining in no way conflicts with the Congressional concern that the Activity be independent in its adjudicatory role.

Having found that the U.S. Court of Military Appeals comes within the definition of "agency" set forth in Section 2(a) of the Order, I shall order an election among the following employees, who I find constitute a unit appropriate for the purpose of exclusive recognition under Executive Order 11491, as amended:

All General Schedule employees of the United States Court of Military Appeals, Washington, D. C., excluding professional employees, management officials, employees engaged in Federal personnel work in other than a purely clerical capacity, temporary employees with no reasonable expectation of continuing employment, and supervisors as defined in the Order.

DIRECTION OF ELECTION

An election by secret ballot shall be conducted among employees in the unit found appropriate, as early as possible, but not later than 60 days from the date below. The appropriate Area Administrator shall supervise the election, subject to the Assistant Secretary's Regulations. Eligible to vote are those who were employed during the payroll period immediately preceding the date below, including employees who did not work during that period because they were out ill or on vacation or on furlough, including those in military service who appear in person at the polls. Ineligible to vote are employees who have quit or were discharged for cause since the designated payroll period and who have not been rehired or reinstated before the election date. Those eligible shall vote whether or not they desire to be represented for the purpose of exclusive recognition by the American Federation of Government Employees, Local 2, AFL-CIO.

PURSUANT TO SECTION 6 OF EXECUTIVE ORDER 11491, AS AMENDED

DEPARTMENT OF THE TREASURY,

A/SLMR No. 1042

This case involved an unfair labor practice complaint filed by the National Treasury Employees Union and NTEU Chapter 10 (Complainants) alleging that the Respondents violated Section 19(a)(1) and (2) of the Order when they required the Complainants' representative, Gerald Jambrosek, who was employed as an attorney by the Respondent Activity, to fill out a request for outside employment form concerning his designation as "counsel." The Complainants contended that such requirement represented an implied threat and, therefore, interference with the Complainants' internal affairs, because the form of the request for permission implied that the Respondents could have refused permission. The Complainants further contended that, under the circumstances, as Jambrosek had received prior approval for his designation, the requirement constituted improper intimidation.

The Administrative Law Judge concluded that the Section 19(a)(2) allegation should be dismissed noting that there was no evidence of disparate treatment. He further concluded that the Section 19(a)(1) allegation should be dismissed as the Complainants had not sustained their burden of proof in showing improper interference with Jambrosek's rights under the Order. The Administrative Law Judge noted, in this regard, that Section 1(b) of the Order limits the right to participation in the management of a labor organization when such activity would result in a conflict or apparent conflict of interest. He noted further that the Respondents' regulations restricted outside employment, and that such regulations are particularly stringent with respect to attorneys. Therefore, he found that the Respondents had a right to inquire into Jambrosek's outside employment. Moreover, he noted that the Respondents subsequently approved Jambrosek's request.

The Assistant Secretary adopted the Administrative Law Judge's findings, conclusions and recommendation and ordered that the complaint be dismissed.

RECOMMENDED DECISION AND ORDER

Preliminary Statement

This case arises under Executive Order 11491 as amended. It was initiated by a complaint dated April 20, 1977 and filed April 22, 1977 alleging a violation of Sections 19(a)(1) and (2) of the Executive Order. The violation was alleged to consist of requiring an employee of the Chicago District, employed as an attorney, who was also a paid employee of Chapter 10, serving as an officer, steward, and "local counsel" to Chapter 10, to file a Form 7995 "Outside Employment or Business Request", with the Respondents. This was alleged to constitute an interference with the internal affairs of Chapter 10, to impose a threat that such request could be denied and the employee directed to discontinue such outside employment, and to have a "chilling effect" on the employee assisting the union. An amended complaint, without substantial change, was filed May 23, 1977. The Respondents filed a response to the complaint contending that it had merely sought to ascertain whether the employee's function as union counsel was incompatible with his duties as an attorney for the Respondents and thus did not constitute a violation of the Executive Order.

On July 7, 1977 the Regional Administrator issued a Notice of Hearing to be held September 15, 1977 in Chicago, Illinois. A hearing was held on that day in that City. Both parties were represented by counsel. They presented witnesses who were examined and cross-examined, and offered exhibits which were received in evidence. Both parties made closing arguments and filed briefs.

Facts

Chapter 10 of the National Treasury Employees Union at all relevant times was the certified exclusive representative of a unit of employees in the Chicago District of the Internal Revenue Service and has been such representative for many years. Mr. Gerald Jambrosek also at all relevant times has been an Estate and Gift Tax Attorney (GS-13) in the Chicago District. He is a member of the unit represented by Chapter 10.

Mr. Jambrosek helped organize Chapter 10. Later he was given the title "counsel" to Chapter 10. Then he became a union steward while retaining his title as counsel, and then became also a vice president of the Chapter, having all three titles at the same time. For a time his work for the union was not compensated monetarily.

The Union had one or two paid staff members. It decided to increase the number of its paid staff members, and Jambrosek applied for one of the paid positions. He was hired shortly before or after January 1, 1975. He was not hired for any particular position, but simply was compensated instead of being uncompensated for his union work. No portion of his salary was allocated to his duties as counsel, steward, or vice-president. His duties and work for the union remained the same as they were before he was compensated but increased somewhat in volume. There were about a half dozen paid staff employees of Chapter 10 who were also IRS employees. Jambrosek was the only one who had the title "counsel".

The Internal Revenue Service has a Handbook of Employee Responsibilities and Conduct prescribing rules of conduct for its employees, known as the Rules of Conduct. Section 222.5 provides that except as provided in later sections, no employee may engage in outside employment, with or without compensation, without first obtaining written permission from the appropriate approving officials. The IRS had a prescribed form, "Outside Employment or Business Request", Form 7995, for requesting such permission. Section 222.5 provided also:

"... approval will not be granted where the outside employment or business activity ... might reasonably result in a conflict of interest, or an apparent conflict of interest, with official duties and responsibilities."

Section 235 of the Rules of Conduct sets forth a number of general principles. Among them is the principle that an outside activity that is permissible for the occupant of one position may not be permissible for the occupant of another position of a different kind or level. It continues that therefore it must be determined that (Section 235(2)(a)):

"The outside activity would not place the employee in a situation where there may be a possible conflict, or the appearance of a conflict, between his private interest and his official duties and responsibilities."

Section 236.2(2) set forth as an example of Activities Which Do Not Require Approval, the following:

"Membership and services (including holding of office) in Federal employee organizations and recognized Federal employee unions. However, occupants of certain positions are prohibited from holding office in recognized employee organizations. If there is any doubt as to the propriety of accepting an office, the matter should be promptly referred to the servicing Personnel Office for decision."

Section 237.2 of the Handbook contains numerous Specific Prohibitions and Restrictions. The very first specific prohibition, in Section 237.2(1)(a), provides:

"No outside legal employment or practice is generally permitted. However, upon written application, exceptions to this proscription may be approved for qualified employees to represent or advise the indigent, subject to the following conditions: ...

2. The employee must not receive any compensation of his services. ..."

Jambrosek's Group Manager was Jordan Berger who was also a close personal friend of Jambrosek. Shortly after Jambrosek became a paid staff member of Chapter 10, Berger came to Jambrosek, in February 1975, with a grievance that had been presented by the Union on which the Union had designated Jambrosek as Union representative to receive a copy of the reply, referring to him as "counsel". Berger suggested that Jambrosek might have some problems with his designation as counsel because of the IRS Rules of Conduct, and Jambrosek might be required to obtain permission to be designated as counsel.

Jambrosek considered Berger a good friend, and wanted to relieve his friend of any anxiety he might feel over the matter. Jambrosek suggested that he would submit a Form 7995, Outside Employment or Business Request, to the District Director and inquire whether there was any problem about his being designated counsel of the union. On February 12, 1975 Jambrosek wrote such a memorandum to the District Director, Charles Miriani. 1/ On February 20, 1975 District Director Miriani replied that there was no problem with the designation of Jambrosek as Counsel for NTEU Chapter 10. 2/

The District Director's response was reviewed and approved by John Swan, the Personnel Officer of the Respondents. At the time Swan knew Jambrosek's duties as counsel only very generally.

About a year later (about the beginning of 1976), Swan decided to review semi-annually requests that had been granted for outside employment. In April 1976 he reviewed the prior approval of Jambrosek's employment by the Complainant as Counsel, and was troubled by the possibility of a potential conflict or apparent conflict of interest and the possibility of a violation of the Rules of Conduct prohibiting outside legal employment except uncompensated representation of indigents (with certain limitations). He referred the question to the IRS Regional Office which referred it to the Chief Counsel of IRS. The Assistant Director of the General Legal Services Division in the Chief Counsel's office responded to the Director of the Personnel Division in the national office that more information was necessary to determine whether there was a violation of the Rules of Conduct or the conflict of interest statutes; specifically, was Jambrosek being compensated for acting as Union Counsel, did he perform services other than those of a steward, and if he did what were those other services? 3/ This response was forwarded to the Regional Office which forwarded it to Swan.

Swan sought the requested information from the President of Chapter 10 and from Jambrosek and received incomplete responses. He sent the incomplete information to the Regional and national offices. The Regional Office then directed Swan to obtain a Form 7995, an Outside Employment or Business Request. Swan asked Jambrosek for a Form 7995. Jambrosek was indignant and pointed out that such a request should come from his supervisor. His supervisor, Sharon Clark who had succeeded to Berger's position, asked Jambrosek to submit a Form 7995 and Jambrosek replied that he was not required to do so. Clark then formally instructed Jambrosek to do so, and he complied on February 11, 1977. 4/ The Form, which set forth Jambrosek's duties as counsel, was forwarded to the Regional and national offices and approved. Jambrosek's Group Manager so notified him on July 7, 1977. 5/ In the meantime, in April 1977, the complaint in this case had been filed.

None of the other compensated staff members of Chapter 10 who were employees of the Respondent were required to submit a Form 7995. None of them were designated as counsel.

Positions of the Parties

The Complainant expressly does not contend that the Respondents are without right to make inquiries of a union representative concerning potential conflicts of interest. 6/ Its position basically is that the Respondents' insistence on the submission of a Form 7995, an Outside Employment or Business Request, with respect to Jambrosek's employment by the Complainant, implies a right to deny the Request at any time and thus has or may have a chilling effect on his activities on behalf of the Complainant in violation of his right assured by Section 1(a) of the Executive Order "freely and without fear of penalty or reprisal" to assist a labor organization and therefore violates Section 19(a)(1) of the Executive Order. It contends also that since Jambrosek was the only paid staff member required to file a Form 7995 it was discriminatory in violation of Section 19(a)(2).

The Respondents contend that they simply were exercising their right to obtain information necessary to determine whether Jambrosek's activities as Counsel for Chapter 10 placed him in a conflict or apparent conflict of interest situation or was otherwise illegal or in violation of the IRS Rules of Conduct for its employees.

Discussion and Conclusions

The Respondents' inquiries and insistence on the furnishing of information all pertained to Jambrosek's designation and activities as Union Counsel. None of the other paid staff members were so designated. Assuming the other elements of a 19(a)(2) violation were present, there was no discrimination; no one else similarly situated was treated differently because there was no one else similarly situated. There was thus no violation of Section 19(a)(2).

Nor was there a violation of Section 19(a)(1).

Section 1(b) of the Executive Order limits the right to participate in the management of a labor organization or to act as the representative of a labor organization when to do so would result in a conflict or apparent conflict of interest or otherwise be incompatible with the official duties of the employee. In addition the IRS has long had regulations restricting permissible outside employment; such restrictions were more stringent with respect to attorneys than with other employees. The Respondents thus had the right to inquire into Jambrosek's activities as Union Counsel.

The Complainant does not challenge the Respondents' right to inquire. It challenges only their right to insist on the inquiry being in the form of a submission of a Form 7995. It bases such challenge on such form being a Request which, it says, implies that the Request could be denied or disapproved at any time for any reason, thus constituting a Damoclean sword inhibiting or tending to inhibit Jambrosek's activities as Union Counsel.

But the Respondents at no time took the position or implied that it could rescind its approval or refuse to give its approval at any time for any reason. It took the position that it could do so if the outside employment contravened its Rules of Conduct. In this case it gave its approval. If it had denied approval for any reason not consonant with Executive Order 11491 as amended, perhaps an unfair labor practice proceeding would lie. But that is not this case.

The Complainant argues that to the extent the IRS Rules of Conduct prohibit conduct authorized by the Executive Order, they are superseded by the Executive Order. Perhaps so, and perhaps IRS would agree with such contention. ^{7/} But it is conduct, not thoughts, that may constitute a violation of Section 19(a) of the Executive Order. Our present function is to decide concrete cases, not hypothetical questions.

The Complainant's contention that it is improper to require an employee to request permission to engage in conduct authorized by the Executive Order is without substance. Under certain conditions acting as counsel for the Complainant could be improper, and the Complainant concedes that the Respondents could properly inquire for information about it. It objects that the form of the inquiry is by Form 7995, denominated as a "request", a form in use to obtain the information since long before Executive Order 11491. Such contention would glorify form over substance, a practice not to be encouraged.

RECOMMENDATION

The complaint should be dismissed.

^{7/} It is observed that if Jambrosek's activities as Union Counsel constituted "legal employment or practice" it would appear to contravene Section 237.2 of the Rules of Conduct, yet it was approved.

SUMMARY OF DECISION AND ORDER OF THE ASSISTANT SECRETARY
PURSUANT TO SECTION 6 OF EXECUTIVE ORDER 11491, AS AMENDED

DEPARTMENT OF THE AIR FORCE,
HQ 2750th AIR BASE WING,
WRIGHT-PATTERSON AIR FORCE BASE, OHIO
A/SLMR No. 1043

This case involved an unfair labor practice complaint filed by Local 1138, American Federation of Government Employees, AFL-CIO (Complainant) alleging, in essence, that the Respondent violated Section 19(a)(1) and (2) of the Order when a supervisor told a union official that he had not been promoted because he "hassled" management as a union official.

At the hearing on the Section 19(a)(1) allegation, the Complainant declined to present evidence in support of its allegation, asserting that it was not possible to get a fair and impartial hearing because of the constraints imposed by the Regulations of the Assistant Secretary. The Complainant's request for postponement of the hearing on the basis that it was not possible to get a fair hearing was denied.

In view of the Complainant's refusal to proceed, the Administrative Law Judge closed the hearing. Noting that the Complainant was given the opportunity to call witnesses but refused to do so, and that the one exhibit received failed to establish the allegation of the complaint, the Administrative Law Judge recommended that the complaint be dismissed for failure of prosecution and/or for failure to prove the allegation of the complaint by a preponderance of the evidence.

Noting particularly the absence of exceptions, the Assistant Secretary adopted the findings, conclusions, and recommendation of the Administrative Law Judge and ordered that the complaint be dismissed.

RECOMMENDED DECISION

Statement of the Case

This is a proceeding under Executive Order 11491, as amended (hereinafter also referred to as the "Order") which was instituted by a charge filed on, or about, June 8, 1976, a complaint, undated, which was filed on January 3, 1977 (Asst. Sec. Exh. 1) and a First Amended Complaint, also undated, filed on January 13, 1977 (Asst. Sec. Exh. 1-A). Both the Complaint and First Amended Complaint alleged a violation of Sections 19(a)(1) and (2) of the Order with respect to John W. Swartz. On March 30, 1977, the Regional Administrator granted Respondent's Motion to Dismiss the 19(a)(2) allegation set forth in the Complaint and stated his intention to issue a Notice of Hearing on the 19(a)(1) allegation of the Complaint (Asst. Sec. Exh. 2). Complainant appealed the Regional Administrator's dismissal of the 19(a)(2) allegation and on October 20, 1977, the Assistant Secretary denied Complainant's request for review and returned the case to the Regional Administrator who was directed, absent settlement, to issue Notice of Hearing on the 19(a)(1) allegation of the Complaint (Asst. Sec. Exh. 3).

The Regional Administrator issued a Notice of Hearing on the 19(a)(1) allegation on October 31, 1977, for a hearing to be held on December 15, 1977, which was subsequently rescheduled for February 2, 1978, pursuant to which a hearing was duly held before the undersigned on February 2, 1978, at Wright-Patterson Air Force Base, Ohio. All parties were represented and were afforded full opportunity to be heard; however, as more fully stated herein after, Complainant refused to present any evidence or testimony beyond calling the complaining party, Mr. John W. Swartz, who, after being sworn, stated that he did not want to continue with the hearing because, "The Labor Department rules I feel very strongly do not provide or are so constraining in scope of this hearing that they do not allow me to get a fair and impartial hearing." (Tr. 46); whereas, in fact, the undersigned had made clear that in addition to the three witnesses the Regional Administrator had directed Respondent to make available at the hearing, and who were present in the Courtroom or immediately available on call to testify, the appearance of Messrs. Heath, Cox and Abraham would also be ordered if the testimony of the other witnesses indicated any materiality of their testimony, that if it appeared from the testimony and evidence that the testimony of Messrs. Thompson and Parker, neither of whom is now stationed at Wright-Patterson Air Force Base, were material, a request for post-hearing depositions or interrogatories would be considered, and that if the testimony demonstrated that the testimony of other witnesses whom it had been determined, on the basis of Mr. Dell' Aria's representations at the hearing, their testimony was not material or relevant, were, contrary to this preliminary determination, shown to be material and relevant a request for their appearance would also be entertained. Nevertheless, although given every opportunity to present evidence and testimony and although repeatedly encouraged to do so, Complainant refused to proceed. Respondent renew its Motion to Dismiss, inter alia, on untimeliness of the Complaint, deficiency of the Complaint, etc.; however, under the circumstances, it is unnecessary to consider any of Respondent's contentions set forth in its Motion to Dismiss and, accordingly, Respondent's Motion to Dismiss has not been and will not be further considered.

Findings and Discussion

In his opening statement, Mr. Dell' Aria stated:

"We are entereng a formal protest into the record that the regulation prescribed by the Labor Department is unconstitutional on grounds that it does not afford the appellat a fair and equitable hearing. One basis is that we are not permitted to call witnesses whose testimony is germane to the issue."
(Tr. 23)

At this point the undersigned interrupted Mr. Dell' Aria and informed him, in part, that he (Mr. Dell' Aria) was "... making an allegation that I considered scurrilous to say the least. ... No one has prohibited you from calling anybody. If there is any question about it, I want to make it clear you have a right to call anybody as a witness that you please and if somebody isn't here and it is necessary and their testimony is material, and you can convince me that their testimony is material, I will certainly give you leave to take post-hearing depositions. ..." (Tr. 23).

Mr. Dell' Aria was advised that subpoenas would be supplied upon request; but Complainant was not interested either in subpoenas or in witnesses appearing voluntarily. Rather, Complainant asserted that it was entitled to have all 13 of the witnesses for whom it submitted a request for appearance of witnesses to the Assistant Regional Administrator but the Assistant Regional Administrator had granted the request for only three, as he had found that the relevance and materiality of the testimony of the other 10 witnesses requested to the issues to be litigated had not been demonstrated. Complainant asserted that the requirement that it make any disclosure to the Department of Labor of the testimony of its witnesses was improper. The undersigned again informed Complainant that requests for the appearance of witnesses pursuant to § 206.7 of the Regulations applied only to employee witnesses on official time, that any person could be called as a witness who appeared voluntarily, and/or that subpoenas would be provided upon request; but that an agency would be required to permit an employee witness to participate on official time only if it appeared that the testimony appeared to be necessary and material.

The undersigned further advised Complainant that, pursuant to Section 203.16 of the Regulations, the Administrative Law Judge has authority to grant requests for appearance of witnesses if it appears, on the basis of testimony and evidence at the hearing, that the testimony of additional witnesses is necessary, material and relevant. Complainant's request for witnesses, on official time, was further reviewed. On the basis of Complainant's representations, the undersigned informed the parties that:

"... there is a probability that Mr. Heath, Mr. Cox, perhaps Mr. Abraham [all of whom were still stationed at Wright-Patterson] would have testimony that is material and if this seems to be borne out as we take the testimony of the other witnesses, it certainly is my intention and I will advise both parties ... that I will order the production of Heath, Cox and Abraham." (Tr. 37)

Mr. Raymond C. Thompson is now stationed in Saudi Arabia. Complainant offered as its Exhibit 3 a statement by Mr. Thompson which was received without objection (Tr. 19); ^{1/} nevertheless, Complainant insisted that, notwithstanding that it had offered Mr. Thompson's statement, which was received in evidence without objection, Mr. Thompson's statement was not "satisfactory". Mr. E. Maslar is now stationed at Warner Robbins Air Force Base, Lincoln, Georgia, and Mr. Johnny Parker is now in Battle Creek, Michigan. It was represented by Mr. Dell' Aria that Mr. Parker had been present at a meeting which appeared to be the focal point of the allegations involved in this proceeding and as to Mr. Parker, I stated;

"... if Mr. Parker was present at that meeting and if it appears that his testimony is necessary we will certainly make arrangements to take his testimony in some manner by post-hearing deposition, if need be." (Tr. 38)

^{1/} Complainant's Exhibits 1, 2, 4 and 5 were rejected for the reason that these proffered Exhibits concerned purported statements by witnesses who were present to testify, or purported summaries of investigations, and Respondent had objected, inter alia, because the statements had not been made under oath or subject to cross-examination and the very purpose of the hearing was to determine, on the basis of record herein the allegations of the Complaint. Complainant was fully advised that any witness could be cross-examined on the basis of any prior inconsistent statement.

Although I stated that it appeared doubtful from the representations made that Mr. Maslar's testimony would be material and without knowing what Complainant's justification for Mr. Thompson's testimony would be, I did not rule out the taking of the testimony of either, or both, if it should appear from the testimony of witnesses present that their testimony was material and relevant. On the basis of the representations made by Mr. Dell' Aria, I stated that it was obvious to me that the testimony of Wenger, Miller, Mathai and Krause would not be material; however, it was made clear that, if the testimony showed that other witnesses were necessary, Complainant could renew its request for the appearance of additional witnesses.

Complainant called Mr. Swartz who, after being sworn, stated, as set forth above, that he did not want to continue with the hearing. I again informed Mr. Dell' Aria and Mr. Swartz, inter alia, that:

"You are free to call witnesses for Mr. Swartz who will testify to facts to show that unfair labor practice has or has not occurred. You have already been given leave by the Regional Administrator to have three witnesses that you requested to be present. I have told you that if the testimony of the witnesses indicate the materiality of their testimony that I will order the appearance of Messrs. Heath, Cox and Abraham. That I will, further, keep an open mind on the testimony of Thompson and Parker, and even as to the witnesses that I have indicated I do not feel to be material, if it is shown on the basis of the record that that preliminary ruling is incorrect, it is certainly subject to reversal, so I want you to understand that, Mr. Dell' Aria, and you Mr. Swartz, that any allegation you are being denied [by] any procedure of the Department of Labor a fair and complete opportunity to develop your case is totally without basis.

"Now if you want to proceed on that basis, I want the record to clearly show that there have been no limitations on your presenting the evidence and testimony in support of the unfair labor practice.

"If the Complainant, Mr. Swartz doesn't wish to proceed, and if the Union doesn't wish to proceed, it will have to be their decision.

You have every opportunity to present whatever you wish to be presented and it will be carefully considered. I don't know what the evidence or testimony will show. I make no representation that -- have any idea what the evidence will show in this case, but you certainly have the right and the opportunity to present whatever you wish." (Tr. 47-48)

Mr. Dell' Aria's request for postponement of the hearing, because Complainant contended "... the law itself, and the rules and regulations of the government in this hearing" prevent a fair hearing, was denied. Mr. Dell' Aria stated:

"... with the permission not only of Mr. Swartz but as a Union representative of the American Federation of Government Employees, we will not continue this hearing ..." (Tr. 48)

Despite further opportunity and invitation to proceed (Tr. 49-51, 51-52, 53), Complainant refused to proceed and, accordingly, the hearing was closed (Tr. 54).

Section 203.15 of the Regulations provides that:

"A complainant in asserting a violation of the order shall have the burden of proving the allegations of the complaint by a preponderance of the evidence."

Complainant, although given every opportunity to call witnesses and to present evidence and testimony at the hearing, refused to present any evidence or testimony, beyond the offer of five exhibits, four of which were rejected and one, Complainant's Exhibit 3 was received without objection. The one Exhibit received does not establish any allegation of the complaint. Complainant's contention that the Rules and Regulations of the Assistant Secretary deprive it of a fair hearing is wholly without basis and is rejected. Indeed, as set forth above, Complainant was afforded every right to present the testimony of any necessary witness whose testimony would be material and relevant to the issues involved. Nevertheless, Complainant, and the Complaining party, Mr. Swartz, refused to go forward. Accordingly, as Complainant has wholly failed to prove the allegation of the complaint, I recommend that the complaint be dismissed: a) for failure of prosecution; and/or b) for failure to prove the allegation of the complaint by a preponderance of the evidence.

RECOMMENDATION

That the complaint be dismissed.

DEPARTMENT OF THE AIR FORCE,

A/SLMR No. 1044

This case involved an Application for Decision on Grievability or Arbitrability filed by the American Federation of Government Employees, AFL-CIO, Local 2221, challenging a determination by the Activity that three requests for arbitration submitted simultaneously by the Applicant were untimely filed pursuant to the parties' negotiated agreement.

The Administrative Law Judge found that the dispute as to whether the requests for arbitration herein were timely filed centered around a disagreement as to the meaning of a section of the parties' negotiated agreement which required such requests to be "submitted" within 30 calendar days after the "issuance" of the Activity's final decision in these matters. He concluded that an arbitrator may properly decide, as a threshold question, whether the requests for arbitration were timely filed within the meaning of the parties' negotiated agreement.

Noting particularly the absence of exceptions, the Assistant Secretary adopted the findings, conclusions and recommendations of the Administrative Law Judge and ordered the Activity to take the appropriate action to implement his finding.

RECOMMENDED DECISION ON ARBITRABILITY
Statement of the Case

These cases, consolidated for the purpose of hearing, arise under Executive Order 11491, as amended. They were initiated by the Applicant's filing of Applications for Decision of Grievability or Arbitrability dated May 9, 1977, May 13, 1977, and May 13, 1977, respectively. The applications state in Section 4C thereof that the unresolved question is an issue of procedural arbitrability: whether the Union's written request to invoke arbitration of these grievances was timely under Article 19, Section A of the parties' collective bargaining agreement. The Activity subsequently filed extensive responses to these Applications, contending that the grievances were not arbitrable due to the Union's failure to comply with the negotiated time limitations.

Pursuant to an Order Rescheduling Hearing issued by the Labor-Management Services Administration on October 7, 1977, a hearing on these applications was held on November 29, 1977, in Newark, Ohio. All parties were represented and afforded full opportunity to adduce evidence and make oral argument. Post-trial briefs were filed on January 23, 1978, pursuant to an extension of time granted at the hearing.

Facts

The Applicant is the exclusive recognized representative for a unit of employees employed by the Activity. Included in the Unit were the grievants in question in this proceeding. In Case No. 53-09734(GA), a grievance was filed on December 5, 1975 by employee Raymond Lockwood. The Activity's final written rejection of this grievance was dated March 11, 1977 and an Application for Decision on Grievability and Arbitrability was filed with the Assistant Secretary on May 9, 1977. In Cases Nos. 53-09748(GA) and 53-09749(GA), grievances were filed by employees David Lacey and Arnold Smith on August 4, 1976 and May 21, 1976, respectively. Final written rejections of these grievances were dated March 11, 1977 and Applications for Decision on Grievability or Arbitrability were filed on May 13, 1977. ^{1/}

The Activity and Applicant are parties to a local agreement covering approximately 2,100 unit employees at the Newark Air Force Station. ^{2/} This agreement became effective June 5, 1975 and was in effect at all times material hereto.

Article 18 of the agreement covers "Grievance Procedure" for grievances arising from the interpretation or application of the agreement. This Article sets out four steps of grievance review, with the grievance ultimately being submitted to a joint Union-Management Grievance Committee for settlement. Article 19 provides for "Arbitration" of unsettled grievances processed under the negotiated procedure in Article 18.

^{1/} Exhs. AS 1, 10 and 20.
^{2/} Joint Exhibit No. 1.

By letter dated February 28, 1977 and hand delivered March 7, 1977, the Applicant wrote to the Station's Commander alleging that all previous levels of grievance review had been exhausted and invoking arbitration of the grievances pursuant to Article 19 of the local agreement. By letters of March 11, 1977 the Activity's Labor Relations Officer denied these invocations as not timely filed under Article 19, Section A. The Applicant subsequently filed the Applications for arbitrability determination giving rise to this proceeding.

There is considerable additional evidence in the record. However, in view of my analysis of the facts and the law governing the basic issue in this case, I deem such evidence irrelevant to the proper determination of these applications.

Discussion and Conclusion

The Activity contends that the Applicant's requests for arbitration of the grievances herein were untimely under Article 19, Section A of the local agreement and that the Assistant Secretary has jurisdiction to make this determination under Section 13(d) of Executive Order 11491. The Applicant contends that the requests were timely filed but, in any event, this determination is more properly before an arbitrator since it involves an interpretation and application of the language in the agreement, specifically Article 19, Section A, to determine whether the requests were timely. For the reasons set forth hereafter, I conclude that the subject grievances are arbitrable under Article 19 of the negotiated agreement and that the question of the timeliness of the Applicant's arbitration requests involves an interpretation and application of the agreement, and therefore must be resolved by an arbitrator as a threshold matter before he can address the merits of the grievances herein.

The Assistant Secretary's authority to decide arbitrability disputes stems from Sections 6(a)(5) and 13(d) of the Executive Order, as amended. Section 6(a)(5) confers the authority to "decide questions as to whether a grievance is subject to ... arbitration under an agreement as provided in Section 13(d) of this Order." Section 13(d) provides that "questions as to whether or not a grievance is on a matter subject to the grievance procedure in an existing agreement, or is subject to arbitration under that agreement, may by agreement of the parties be submitted to arbitration or may be referred to the Assistant Secretary for decision."

The Activity's interpretations of the Assistant Secretary's authority under these two Sections is supported by the Federal Labor Relations Council's decision in Department of the Navy, Naval Ammunition Depot, Crane, Indiana. 3/ That case involved a dispute as to whether probationary employees had a right to process grievances through the negotiated grievance procedure, or whether they were excluded from doing so under the terms of the negotiated agreement. In referring this matter to the negotiated procedure, the Assistant Secretary concluded that "where the matters in dispute involve the interpretation and application of certain provisions of the parties' negotiated agreement, and the agreement provides means by which such dispute may be resolved, it will effectuate the purposes of the Order to direct the parties to resolve their dispute through their negotiated grievance procedure." Thus, the Assistant Secretary held that the issue as to whether the employee's termination is covered by the terms of the negotiated agreement, as well as the issue as to whether the Activity violated this agreement, in that particular instance, should be resolved through the negotiated grievance procedure.

The Council disagreed. In setting aside the Assistant Secretary's decision, the Council stated:

In any dispute referred to the Assistant Secretary concerning whether a grievance is on a matter subject to the negotiated grievance procedure, the Assistant Secretary must decide whether the dispute is or is not subject to the negotiated grievance procedure, just as an arbitrator would if the question were referred to him. In making such a determination, the Assistant Secretary must consider relevant provisions of the Order, including section 13, and relevant provisions of the negotiated agreement, including those provisions which describe the scope and coverage of the negotiated grievance procedure, as well as any substantive provisions of the agreement which are being grieved. [Council decision at 4.]

The Council stated further:

[W]here such a "grievability" or "arbitrability" dispute is referred to the Assistant Secretary, either by operation of the Order or by voluntary agreement of the parties, he must resolve that dispute; he may not pass it on to an arbitrator for resolution. [Council decision at 5.]

That decision instructs the Assistant Secretary to interpret substantive provisions of the negotiated agreement "just as an arbitrator would" in deciding grievability or arbitrability questions.

The scope of the Assistant Secretary's authority under Sections 6(a)(5) and 13(d) of the Order was subsequently re-examined in the Council's recent decision in Community Services Administration. 4/ In that case, the Assistant Secretary was presented with the question of whether the position of Employee Development Specialist was a "policy" position and thereby specifically excluded from the parties' negotiated grievance procedure under Amendment 11 of the agreement. The Assistant Secretary concluded that the position did involve the formulation of Agency-wide training policy, and therefore was specifically excluded from Amendment 11 of the negotiated agreement.

In setting aside the Assistant Secretary's decision, the Council noted that Section 13(d) of the Order does not require the Assistant Secretary to interpret and apply provisions of the negotiated agreement. Indeed, such action is inconsistent with the purposes and policies of the Order. In clarifying its apparently contrary holding in Crane, the Council stated:

In deciding whether a dispute is or is not subject to a particular negotiated grievance procedure, it is the responsibility of the Assistant Secretary to consider those "provisions which describe the scope and coverage of the negotiated grievance procedure," i.e., the general scope of such procedure as well as any specific exclusions therein. That is, he must decide, just as an arbitrator would decide at the outset in the Federal sector ... whether the grievance involves a dispute which the parties intended to be resolved through their negotiated grievance procedure. The Assistant Secretary's consideration of "substantive provisions of the agreement being grieved" would be for the limited purpose of determining whether the grievance involves a claim which on its face is covered by the contract, i.e., involves a matter which arguably concerns the meaning of application of the substantive provision(s) being grieved and which the parties intended to be resolved under the negotiated grievance procedure. The Council's statement in Crane that the Assistant Secretary must decide whether or not a dispute is subject to the negotiated grievance procedure "just as an arbitrator would if the question were referred to him," while perhaps ambiguous, was not intended and should not be construed to mean that the Assistant Secretary may interpret the substantive provisions of an agreement in resolving a grievability or arbitrability question as an arbitrator would in deciding the merits of a grievance. Instead, the Council's statement was intended to indicate that the Assistant Secretary must decide a question of grievability or arbitrability under a negotiated grievance procedure where such question is referred to him, just as an arbitrator would be required to decide the question of grievability or arbitrability where the parties bilaterally agree to refer such threshold issue to the arbitrator pursuant to section 13(d) of the Order. [Council decision at 5-6 (footnotes omitted; emphasis in original).]

Having determined that the dispute in question was one involving the interpretation and application of the agreement (i.e., whether the position of Employment Development Specialist was a "policy" position within the meaning of Amendment 11), the Council concluded that the grievance was on a matter within the scope of the negotiated grievance procedure and therefore should have been referred to an arbitrator.

Likewise, the issue in the three cases in question here involves a dispute over the interpretation and application of the terms of the negotiated agreement. Article 19, Section A of this agreement states:

If the Employer and the Union fail to settle any grievance processed under the negotiated grievance procedure, such grievance, upon written request by either party within 30 calendar days after the issuance of the Employer's or Union's final decision, may be submitted to arbitration.

Section G of this Article gives the arbitrator power to consider matters dealing with the interpretation or application of the agreement.

The Activity contends that the Union's request to invoke arbitration was untimely under Section A of Article 19; the Union disagrees. The dispute centers on when the 30 day time limit in this section begins to run, which in turn involves an interpretation of the word "issuance" as applied to the facts and circumstances of this case. Consistent with the Council's holding in Community Services Administration, I conclude that the instant dispute is one involving an interpretation and application of a provision of the parties' negotiated agreement, and consequently should be referred to an arbitrator for resolution.

It remains only to be determined whether the subject grievances are matters which the parties determined should be resolved by resort to arbitration. Article 19 states that the parties may submit to arbitration any unsettled grievance which has been processed under the negotiated grievance procedure. It is uncontested that the grievances in question have been processed through the negotiated grievance procedure: all previous levels of grievance review have been exhausted. Under the scheme of the parties' negotiated agreement, there remains only to submit the grievances to arbitration under Article 19. Accordingly, I conclude that all the grievances in question are arbitrable under Article 19 of the local agreement, and pursuant to this Article the arbitrator must decide, as a threshold question, whether these grievances were timely filed within the meaning of Article 19, Section A.

RECOMMENDATION

Accordingly, it is recommended that the grievances in Cases Nos. 53-09734(GA), 53-09748(GA), and 53-09749(GA) be found to be subject to binding arbitration under Article 19 of the parties' negotiated agreement.

UNITED STATES DEPARTMENT OF LABOR
ASSISTANT SECRETARY FOR LABOR-MANAGEMENT RELATIONS
SUMMARY OF DECISION AND ORDER OF THE ASSISTANT SECRETARY
PURSUANT TO SECTION 6 OF EXECUTIVE ORDER 11491, AS AMENDED

DEPARTMENT OF THE TREASURY,
BUREAU OF ALCOHOL, TOBACCO AND FIREARMS

This case involved an unfair labor practice complaint filed by the National Treasury Employees Union and NTEU Chapter 88 (Complainant) alleging that the Respondent had violated Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order by failing to bargain on the impact and implementation of various employees' reassignments, and by denying the Complainant's request for various staffing information. The Respondent contended that it was under no obligation to bargain because the parties' negotiated agreement provided procedures for solving staffing imbalances. Moreover, it contended that through its meeting with the Complainant and the exchange of correspondence on the September 1976, reassignments it had, in fact, bargained with the Complainant to the extent it was required to under the Order. It further contended that it had no obligation to furnish the requested information and that since such information had been the subject of a grievance, Section 19(d) of the Order precluded the matter from being raised under the unfair labor practice procedures of the Order.

The Administrative Law Judge found that the parties' negotiated agreement did not constitute a waiver of the Respondent's obligation to bargain on the procedures used in the implementation of the employees' reassignments and on the impact of the reassignments on adversely affected employees and, further, that the Respondent had failed to fulfill its bargaining obligation in violation of Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order. He found also that, under the particular circumstances, Section 19(d) did not preclude consideration of whether the Respondent's refusal to furnish certain information was violative of the Order; that the information requested by the Complainant was necessary and relevant in order for it to perform its duty as the exclusive representative of the affected employees; and that, accordingly, the Respondent's failure to furnish the requested information violated Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order.

The Assistant Secretary adopted the findings, conclusions and recommendations of the Administrative Law Judge and ordered that the Respondent cease and desist from the conduct found violative of the Order and that it take certain affirmative actions.

DECISION AND ORDER

On December 28, 1977, Administrative Law Judge Salvatore J. Arrigo issued his Recommended Decision and Order in the above-entitled proceeding, finding that the Respondent had engaged in certain unfair labor practices and recommending that it cease and desist therefrom and take certain affirmative actions as set forth in the attached Administrative Law Judge's Recommended Decision and Order. Thereafter, the Respondent filed exceptions and a supporting brief with respect to the Administrative Law Judge's Recommended Decision and Order, and the Complainant filed an answering brief with respect to the Respondent's exceptions.

The Assistant Secretary has reviewed the rulings of the Administrative Law Judge made at the hearing and finds that no prejudicial error was committed. The rulings are hereby affirmed. Upon consideration of the Administrative Law Judge's Recommended Decision and Order and the entire record in this case, including the exceptions and supporting brief filed by the Respondent and the answering brief filed by the Complainant, I hereby adopt the Administrative Law Judge's findings, 1/ conclusions 2/ and recommendations.

1/ The Respondent did not except to the Administrative Law Judge's finding that Section 19(d) of the Order did not preclude consideration in this proceeding of the allegation that the Respondent violated Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order by refusing to supply the Complainant with certain requested information.

2/ Although I agree with the Administrative Law Judge's conclusion that the information sought by the Complainant was necessary and relevant, I find it unnecessary to pass upon his conclusion on page 18 of his Recommended Decision and Order that the information sought by the Complainant "by its very nature carries with it the presumption that it was relevant and necessary to the Union to carry out its warrant to represent unit employees, regardless of whether negotiations were pending at that particular time."

Pursuant to Section 6(b) of Executive Order 11491, as amended, and Section 203.26(b) of the Regulations, the Assistant Secretary of Labor for Labor-Management Relations hereby orders that the Department of Treasury, Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms, Cincinnati, Ohio, shall:

1. Cease and desist from:

(a) Instituting a reassignment of employees represented exclusively by the National Treasury Employees Union and NTEU Chapter 88, or any other exclusive representative of its employees, without affording such representative the opportunity to meet and confer, to the extent consistent with law and regulations, on the procedures which management will observe in implementing such reassignment and on the impact the reassignment will have on adversely affected unit employees.

(b) Refusing or failing to furnish, upon request by the National Treasury Employees Union and NTEU Chapter 88, or any other exclusive representative of its employees, any information bearing upon reassignment which is relevant and necessary to enable the National Treasury Employees Union and NTEU Chapter 88, or any other exclusive representative of its employees, to discharge its obligation as the exclusive representative to represent effectively all employees in the exclusively recognized unit.

(c) In any like or related manner interfering with, restraining, or coercing its employees in the exercise of their rights assured by Executive Order 11491, as amended.

2. Take the following affirmative actions in order to effectuate the purposes and policies of Executive Order 11491, as amended:

(a) Upon request, make available to the National Treasury Employees Union and NTEU Chapter 88 any information bearing on the reassignment of employees announced in September 1976, which information is relevant and necessary to enable the National Treasury Employees Union and NTEU Chapter 88 to discharge its obligation as the exclusive representative to represent effectively all employees in the exclusively recognized unit.

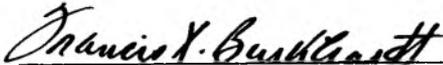

(b) Upon request, meet and confer with the National Treasury Employees Union and NTEU Chapter 88, to the extent consistent with law and regulations, concerning the procedures which management observed in reaching the decision as to who was subject to the reassignments announced in September 1976, and the impact the reassignments had on adversely affected employees in the exclusively recognized unit. Any agreement reached by the parties shall be promptly effectuated, including, if consistent with such agreement, the return of any reassigned employees to the Bardstown facility.

(c) Post at all Central Regional facilities of the Department of Treasury, Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms, copies of the attached notice marked "Appendix" on forms to be furnished by the Assistant Secretary of Labor for Labor-Management Relations. Upon receipt of such forms, they shall be signed by the Regional Director and shall be posted and maintained by him for 60 consecutive days thereafter, in conspicuous places, including all places where notices to employees are customarily posted. The Regional Director shall take reasonable steps to insure that such notices are not altered, defaced, or covered by any other material.

(d) Pursuant to Section 203.27 of the Regulations, notify the Assistant Secretary, in writing, within 30 days from the date of this order as to the steps taken to comply herewith.

RECOMMENDED DECISION AND ORDER

Preliminary Statement

This proceeding heard in Cincinnati, Ohio, on June 14, 1977 arises under Executive Order 11491, as amended (hereinafter called the Order). Pursuant to the Regulations of the Assistant Secretary of Labor for Labor-Management Relations (hereinafter called the Assistant Secretary), a Notice of Hearing on Complaint issued on May 5, 1977 with reference to alleged violations of Sections 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order.

The complaint, filed by National Treasury Employees Union and NTEU Chapter 88 (hereinafter called the Union or Complainant), alleged that the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms, Department of the Treasury, Cincinnati, Ohio (hereinafter called the Activity or Respondent) violated the Order by failing to negotiate with the Union on the impact and implementation of various employee reassignments and denying the Union's request for various staffing information.

At the hearing the parties were represented by Counsel and were afforded full opportunity to adduce evidence, call, examine and cross-examine witnesses and argue orally. Briefs were filed by both parties.

Upon the entire record in this matter, from my reading of the briefs and from my observation of the witnesses and their demeanor, I make the following:

Findings of Fact and Conclusions of Law

At all times material hereto the Union has been the exclusive collective bargaining representative for various of the Activity's employees including Inspectors (GS-1854 series) and Technicians or Plant Officers (GS-1855 series). In March 1974 the Activity and the Union signed a collective bargaining agreement the terms of which were in effect at all times material.

In late September 1976 Chapter 88 President Martin Connell received a telephone call from John Hauschildt, the Activity's Assistant Chief of Field Operations, and was informed that some involuntary transfers were to occur. Hauschildt suggested that various representatives of the parties meet to discuss the matter. Hauschildt also informed Connell that the Bardstown, Kentucky office would be affected by the transfers, but he did not wish to talk about the matter in detail until the meeting. Connell replied that without more information he would not be able to discuss the subject in depth.

The parties met on September 27, 1976 in Bardstown. Hauschildt was accompanied by Robert Lumpkin and Connell was accompanied by Francis Dickerson, area steward at Bardstown. The Activity indicated that the Bardstown facility was overstaffed with Inspectors while other sites were understaffed and accordingly, it was anticipated that three Inspectors would be transferred from Bardstown to other locations within the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms (ATF) Central Region.

Transfers were to begin in a couple of months. An individual selected for transfer would have the option of refusing the transfer and being considered for reassignment at Bardstown as a Technician. However, the Inspectors who formed the pool of employees affected by the transfers were at the GS-7 pay grade and due for promotion to GS-9 journeyman grade within approximately three months time. The Technician journeyman grade was GS-7, the pay grade that the affected employee would remain if he chose to stay in the Bardstown area. Hauschildt gave Connell a typewritten copy of the specific criteria used for determining who would be selected for transfer, infra. The Union stated that it had the right to negotiate on the matter and would definitely want to make suggestions and proposals on the transfer situation. The Activity informed the Union that it felt no obligation consult on the transfers or matters concerning the implementation or impact thereof, but nevertheless invited the Union to make suggestions on the subject. The Union replied that it obviously could not do so at that time since it needed some background information. The Union asked various questions concerning the matter and told the Activity it would meet with the affected group of Inspectors and see if any employees wished to volunteer for transfer.

After the meeting had concluded Connell rode with Hauschildt and Lumpkin from Bardstown to Louisville, Kentucky. During the drive the pending transfers were discussed and Connell expressed his appreciation for receiving notice of the transfers before they occurred. Connell also indicated that the criteria set forth by the Activity seemed reasonable and objective.

Subsequently, a Union membership meeting was held to discuss the subject. The criteria established for reassignments by the Activity was circulated and the Union's officers received numerous questions, many of which they were unable to answer due to their own lack of information on the subject. The employees were told that management was interested in obtaining volunteers for transfer but no attempt to poll the employees was made in this regard.

On September 29, 1976 Hauschildt sent a memorandum to Connell which was captioned "Informative Meeting". 1/ The memorandum stated as follows:

1/ All further communications between the parties on this matter was through exchange of correspondence.

"This will confirm the 9/27/76, meeting with F. Dickerson, R. Lumpkin, you and me in attendance. The meeting was arranged by me for the specific purpose of informing the union that management is reassigning three ATF inspectors from the Bardstown area to the Detroit and Cleveland areas.

Management takes the position that they have the authority to make these assignments under E.O. 11491 and the NTEU contract without consultation or negotiation; however, in the best interest of management and employees alike, management developed a criteria for identifying the employees to be reassigned. The criteria to be used was presented to you and Mr. Dickerson so that any suggestions by the union concerning the criteria could be considered prior to informing the employees of their selection for reassignment.

A copy of the criteria for these reassignment selections is attached. This criteria is not to be considered precedent setting. Management hereby declares its right to change or amend this criteria, if necessary or desirable, to accomplish these or any future reassignments."

Attached to the memorandum was the following list of "Criteria For Determining Transfer of GS-1854 Employees":

"1. Geographic locations

Transfers will be made from locations having predominant plant assignments duties with only limited opportunity for field inspection assignments

2. Grade levels of affected employees.

Employees in the GS-1854 series at the GS-7 level or above with not more than 3 years of ATF experience will be included on rosters for reassignment consideration.

3. Identification of employees selected for transfer.

Employees appearing on a roster under Item #2 above will be selected for transfer on the basis ATF service time by selecting the employee with the least service for transfer and continuing this process in sequence, as necessary.

In the event that a tie exists between candidates, the first consideration for a tie breaker will be selection of the employee with the least total Federal service (SCD). If a tie still exists, the second tie breaker consideration will be based on performance evaluations and supervisory recommendations."

Connell was particularly disturbed at the Activity's statement in the September 29 memorandum relative to the criteria being subject to change. Accordingly, Connell sent the following letter to the Activity's Regional Director, Fred Murrell, on October 3, 1976:

"This is to invoke the right of NTEU Chapter 88 to negotiate on the impact and implementation of two impending changes: namely, the re-assignment of four GS-1854 inspectors from Bradstown to Cleveland, Detroit, and Hammond; and an increase in the number of lower graded GS-1855 Alcohol Tax Technician positions and a corresponding decrease in the number of GS-1854 Inspector positions at the distilled spirits plants.

Prior to commencing negotiations and in time to make adequate preparation the Union requires the following items of information:

1. The authorized staffing pattern, and the actual staffing, for each Regulatory Enforcement post of duty in the Central Region, with breakdowns by positions and grades.
2. Identification of each distilled spirits plant where a GS-1855 Alcohol Tax Technician position is authorized.
3. The extent of any overstaffing or understaffing, by post of duty with breakdowns by positions and grades.
4. With respect to each post of duty, identification of any changes that have so affected the workload as to result in a general overstaffing, or a staffing imbalance among GS-1854 and GS-1855 employees.

5. The Bureau's immediate recruiting intentions for each Regulatory Enforcement post of duty in the Central Region, with indication as to the position series in which any new hires will be placed.
6. Target dates for effecting the planned changes.

Over a period of more than two years, the Union has made repeated requests for the authorized staffing pattern in the ATF Central Region. In view of the impending changes, the staffing pattern and the other items of information requested are now absolutely essential for the Union to fulfill its obligation to effectively represent affected Bargaining Unit employees."

The Activity replied to Connell on October 7, 1976 with the following letter:

"This will acknowledge the NTEU Chapter 88 request to negotiate the impact of the reassignment of four GS-1854 Inspectors from Bradstown to Cleveland, Detroit, and Hammond.

We do not agree with your request to negotiate with management on the mission of the Bureau; its budget; its organization; the number of employees; and the members, types, and grades of positions or employees assigned to an organizational unit. Section 11(B) of E.O. 11491 clearly defines management's authority in these matters. Additionally, Section 12(B) of the E.O. identifies management's obligation to direct the employees of the Bureau, to hire, promote, transfer, assign and retain employees in positions within the Bureau; to relieve employees from duties because of lack of work; to maintain the efficiency of the Government operations entrusted to them; and to determine the methods, means, and personnel by which such operations are to be conducted.

The Union request for items of information as itemized in 1 thru 5 relate specifically to issues that are not negotiable; therefore, we find no compelling reasons for inclusion of the information. Item 6 related to target dates for effecting the reassignments of the four employees and we agree that this information has an impact on the employees who will be reassigned.

Management will request each selected employee to complete the required forms for the cost of the household move at least 30 days in advance of the reporting date and we will expect to have all four employees relocated by no later than January 16, 1977. We have always negotiated with employees on short term adjustments of a reporting date to alleviate individual circumstances and we intend to continue this practice on reasonable requests.

The meeting between Union and management officials on 09-27-76 was scheduled by management for the express purpose of advising the union of the criteria to be applied for selecting the employees for reassignment. We have previously furnished you with a copy of the criteria and we are agreeable with any request by the union to negotiate the merits of the criteria or to negotiate acceptance of any voluntary substitution of employees not identified by the criteria for reassignment to the posts of duty at Hammond, Cleveland, and Detroit. Management will also accept for consideration any request from the four selected employees on a preference for the three locations being filled.

In order to accomplish the reassignments within the stated time frame, management will expect the union to submit for negotiation, any changes in the criteria or substitutions of employees by no later than October 22, 1976."

On October 21, 1976 Connell responded to the Activity, stating:

"This is in reply to your letter of October 7, 1976, concerning the Union's invocation of its right to negotiate the impact and implementation of the reassignment of four GS-1854 Inspectors from Bardstown to Cleveland, Detroit, and Hammond, and a decrease in the number of GS-1854 Inspector position to accommodate a corresponding increase in the number of lower graded GS-1855 Alcohol Tax Technician (Plant Officer) positions.

The second and third paragraphs of your letter lead me to believe that there is some misunderstanding. The Union did not request to negotiate with management on issues that are not negotiable, but only on the impact and implementation of the changes referred to above.

We agree that the information requested in my letter of October 3, 1976, has a relationship to issues that are not negotiable, but we do not agree that this is valid reason for withholding the information from the Union. The Union has a right to the requested information under Sections 19(a)(1) and 19(a)(6) of E.O. 11491.

The withholding of the requested information has kept the Union from being fully informed as to the nature and extent of the changes which will affect Bargaining Unit employees. It has significantly hindered the Union in its efforts to properly advise and assist affected Bargaining Unit employees and in its efforts to establish a negotiating posture consistent with the best interests of such employees.

We will appreciate reconsideration of the decision to withhold the information requested by the Union. However, if the requested information is not furnished to NTEU Chapter 88 prior to the commencement of negotiations, and in time to make adequate preparation, it is the intention of the Union to negotiate under protest and to immediately file Unfair Labor Practice Charges.

Our proposals for negotiations (under protest) are as follows:

1. The Employer will first poll employees at the Bardstown post of duty in an effort to obtain a sufficient number of volunteers for reassignment to Cleveland, Detroit, and Hammond.
2. If the number of volunteers available at Bardstown is insufficient the Employer will:
 - a. Establish a roster of GS-1854-7 & 9 employees who are assigned at the Bardstown post of duty and have less than 3 years ATF service.
 - b. On the basis of ATF service time, select employees from the established roster for involuntary reassignment, by selecting the employee with the least amount of ATF service and continuing this process in sequence, as necessary. In the event that a tie exists, first consideration will be given to total Federal service (SCD) to break the tie. If a tie still exists, the second tie breaker consideration will be based on performance evaluations and supervisory recommendations.

3. Any GS-1854 employee selected for involuntary reassignment from Bardstown to another post of duty may, within 5 calendar days of the date that he or she is notified of such selection, make a written request for reassignment to a GS-1855 position at Bardstown and in this way avoid reassignment to another post of duty.
4. Employees who request reassignment from an 1854 series position to an 1855 series position and have such personnel action affected will receive priority consideration for reassignment to any GS-1854-9 vacancy that subsequently occurs, provided they meet basic eligibility requirements and have applied for the vacant position in writing.
5. Management will inform all employees identified by the criteria in paragraph 2-a regarding promotional opportunities, working conditions (e.g. amount of travel and types of inspections), and living conditions (e.g. cost of living, available housing, transportation, schools, etc.) in the Detroit, Cleveland, and Hammond areas.
6. Management will negotiate with employees on reasonable adjustments of a reporting date to alleviate individual circumstances.
7. Unresolved disagreements on any of the above proposals are subject to arbitration under the collective bargaining agreement.

A representative of the NTEU National Office (if available), Frank Dickerson, and I will be the negotiators for the Union."

By letter dated October 28, 1976 the Activity responded to Connell as follows:

"This will acknowledge receipt of your letter dated October 21, 1976 concerning the transfer of four inspectors from Bardstown, Kentucky to other posts of duty in the Central Region.

Your continuing request for information from management on matters which, you agree, are not negotiable will not be granted for the same reasons stated in previous correspondence. Management has the authority to reassign or transfer employees; therefore, the employees selected for transfer or reassignment through a fair and proper criteria have not been victimized by unfair labor practices. Furthermore, management has not refused to negotiate the negotiable aspects of the subject transfers, on the contrary, it was management's desire to consult with NTEU, on the negotiable aspects of the transfers, that precipitated the initial meeting scheduled by management on September 27, 1976. Your premise that you have a right to the requested information under sections 19(a)(1) and 19(a)(6) of E.O. 11491 is negated by the facts that the transferees are not victims of unfair labor practices and management has not refused to consult, confer or negotiate the impact on the affected employees.

Your proposals for negotiation as itemized are addressed as follows:

1. This request is inconsistent with Article 28 of the negotiated contract since we are dealing with employees who have less than 10 years of ATF service. Additionally, you agreed with management on September 27, 1976 that a meeting would be scheduled by the union with the Bardstown employees and that you would discuss the possibility of volunteers, we agreed to consider any voluntary applications from Bardstown, Kentucky to the posts of duty at Cleveland, Detroit and Hammond. In view of the above, we see no justification for your proposal. It is obvious that the Bardstown employees are aware of the proposed reassignments and any voluntary application for the reassignments will be duly considered by management if they are received prior to notification of the affected employees.
2. Since this item is a restatement of management's original criteria for selection of the employees for reassignment, it must be recognized as a concurrence by NTEU in management's selection criteria; therefore, this item reflects total agreement leaving no purpose to further negotiation.

3. This item is improper and not negotiable. Subchapter 4-1 of FPM Chapter 715 states, in part, that 'A voluntary reduction in rank or pay is a reduction requested by the employee for personal reasons and in his own interest. The employee's request for reduction should not be demanded as an alternative to some other action to be taken or withheld.' Subchapter 4-2 states: 'When a suitable vacancy exists, when the employee is eligible for the position change, and when the change will contribute to the efficiency of the service, the agency should favorably consider the request for a voluntary reduction.'
4. This item is also improper and not negotiable since employees are being reassigned and not demoted by the agency. An employee who requests a reduction in rank or pay for personal reasons and in his own interest and is subsequently demoted as a result, is only entitled to competitive promotion procedures as prescribed for all qualified candidates. Reference FPM Chapter 335, Subchapter 4(1)(B).
5. Promotion opportunities and working conditions in these reassignments are not relevant issues since all Inspectors are assigned to standard position descriptions regardless of the post of duty and work assignments are the responsibility of the supervisor at each post of duty. Promotion opportunities are the same for all employees as outlined by the merit promotion plan and NTEU contract. Living conditions are a matter of personal preferences and employees assigned to new posts of duty are always provided guidance and assistance by other employees and supervisors at the new post to the extent that requests for assistance are solicited and reasonable. We do not believe that management or the union can properly negotiate a standard of living for individual employees.
6. This item compares with item two as a repeat of an already stated management policy. Thus, no variation of proposal exists between the union and the agency; thus, reflecting no purpose for further negotiation.

7. This item is unacceptable because proposals 1, 3, 4 & 5 are clearly not negotiable. Items 2 and 6 are negotiable and your proposals are identical to management's position at the initial consultation on September 27, 1976. The union has been granted reasonable time to offer alternatives on the negotiable issues in these reassignments and they have failed to offer negotiable alternatives to management's proposal; therefore, management will notify the affected employees of their selection for transfer reassignment and request estimates on their relocation costs without further delay."

Thereafter, by letters dated November 5 and 22, 1976 the Union filed with the Activity the unfair labor practice charge which gave rise to the Complaint considered herein.

The Union contends that through the submission of its proposals for negotiations it sought, but was refused, the right to bargain with the Activity relative to matters concerning implementation and impact of the reassignments. The Union also urges that the Activity violated the Order by refusing to provide the information it sought, which data was necessary to properly negotiate and to advise and best represent the interests of its members.

The Activity essentially contends that it bargained with the Union to the extent it was required under the Order relative to matters of implementation and adverse impact occasioned by the reassignments. The Activity takes the position that through Article 28 of the parties agreement all matters concerning reassignment procedures, implementation and impact were negotiated and agreed to, thereby leaving the Activity the right to act unilaterally in reassignment matters except for the proscriptions of Article 28. The Activity also contends that in any event, through its meeting with the Union and the exchange of correspondence on the reassignments, above, it did in fact negotiate with the Union on all required matters.

With regard to the refusal to supply the requested information, the Activity contrary to the Union, contends that there has been no showing that the information was necessary and relevant for the Union to negotiate on implementation and impact of the reassignments. Further, the Activity takes the position that a grievance was filed on the Activity's prior refusal to supply staffing pattern data and accordingly, under Section 19(b) of the Order the matter may not be raised in this unfair labor practice complaint.

While there was no obligation on the part of the Activity to meet and confer on its decision to adjust the staffing of Inspectors in the Central Region, the Assistant Secretary has repeatedly held that the exclusive representative must be afforded the opportunity to meet and confer, to the extent consonant with law and regulations, as to the procedures management intends to observe in effectuating such a decision, and as to the impact of the decision on those employees adversely affected. ^{2/} Indeed, in the Federal Railroad Administration case, the Assistant Secretary clearly spelled out the nature of the obligation to negotiate on the "implementation" aspect of a decision to reassign employees. In the "Order" of that case, the activity, therein was required to meet and confer in good faith "on the procedures which management will observe in reaching the decision as to who will be subject to the reassignment...." Stated another way, the obligation to meet and confer in such a matter extends to "...determining either the criteria to be followed or the standards to be observed in selecting men for transfer..." ^{3/} or the formulation of and procedures to be utilized in effectuating the decision as well as the impact on adversely affected employees. ^{4/}

In my view the Activity's conduct, considered in its totality, demonstrates a refusal to bargain in good faith on the implementation of the reassignments and the impact on employees adversely affected. The Activity initially took the position that it had no obligation to negotiate on the matter. Robert Lumpkin, who was present at the September 27, 1976 meeting with the Union, supra, testified that the Activity had no intention whatever to negotiate with the Union on the reassignment at that time. In its correspondence to the Union of October 7, 1976 the Activity seemed to open itself to bargaining on the subject. However, in its response to five of the seven Union proposals which differed from the Activity's already decided criteria for reassignment, the Activity declared all to be "not negotiable" and effectively terminated further negotiation by stating that affected employees would be notified of their selection for transfer reassignment "without further delay". In the Activity's eyes there was nothing left to discuss having concluded that two of the remaining five Union proposals were not negotiable since they were contrary to the Federal Personnel Manual (FPM) and three other proposals, which I find were clearly negotiable, were also "not negotiable".

With regard to the first Union proposal, I find that the Union never agreed to poll the employees on behalf of the Activity. During the September 27, 1976 meeting the Union merely indicated it would meet with the membership on the intended reassignments and see if there were any volunteers for reassignment. This action was for its own benefit. There was no understanding that it would act as an agent of the Activity to take a formal poll for volunteers nor was the Union's comment part of a negotiated plan to effectuate the transfers.

Further, I find that negotiations were not precluded by the terms of Article 28 of the agreement. Article 28, entitled "Reassignments", provides as follows:

Reassignments will not be used in lieu of discipline.

Section 2

A. When an employee with ten (10) or more years of ATF service is selected for an involuntary reassignment which involves an authorized household move, the Employer will review the selection in the following manner:

1. The Employer will first confirm that all fully qualified employees at the post of duty were polled to determine if any would voluntarily accept reassignment.

2. If an insufficient number of fully qualified volunteers were available at the post of duty, the Employer will then determine that there were no fully qualified employees at the post of duty with less than ten (10) years of ATF service that could have been involuntarily reassigned.

3. If no fully qualified employees at the post of duty with less than ten (10) years of ATF service were available for involuntarily reassignment, the Employer will confirm the fact that reasonable and jobrelated criteria for the vacant position(s) were established and compared against the qualifications of basically qualified employees at the post of duty listed on a register in groups of those with less than ten (10) years of ATF service and those with ten (10) or more years of ATF service.

B. When an employee with ten (10) or more years of ATF service is selected for an involuntary reassignment which involves an authorized household move, the employee and the Union will be provided with a copy of the criteria used and a copy of the register showing those basically qualified employees at the post of duty with less than ten (10) years of ATF service and those with ten (10) or more years of ATF service.

C. (This subsection provides for a grievance-arbitration procedure available for grieving the provisions of 'this Section' and further states that employees with less than ten years of service may not grieve the provisions of this section.)

The Employer agrees that when an employee has been reassigned due to the abolishment of his position, he will be given consideration if that position is reestablished within one (1) year and he applies for the position within fifteen (15) days after written notification to him of its reestablishment.

Section 4

When an involuntary reassignment involves an authorized household move, the Employer agrees to give the affected employee at least fifteen (15) days written notice and when possible, thirty (30) days written notification.

The Article will not apply to involuntary reassignment resulting from reduction-in-force or transfer-of-function."

Section 2 of Article 28 does not, on its face, apply to the situation herein - the reassignment of employees with less than ten years service. The other terms of Article 28 while they may apply to all employees involved in reassignments are of limited application.

At the hearing a witness for the Activity testified that it was understood during negotiations of that article that the execution of Article 28 was intended to extinguish all reassignment rights of employees of less than ten years service not specifically set forth. However, a witness for the Union who attended the negotiations, including a closed session with a mediator relative to negotiations on this Article which the Activity witness did not attend, testified that it was not understood by the Union that the execution of Article 28 served as a waiver of any right of negotiation on future reassignments of employees with less than ten years service.

I find and concluded that neither the express terms of Article 28 nor the testimony relative to negotiations on that provision establish that the Union clearly and unmistakably waived any further right to negotiate on the reassignment of employees with less than ten years service. The right to negotiate on the implementation and adverse impact of a reassignment is granted by the Order. The Assistant Secretary has held that to waive such a right, the action constituting the waiver must be "clear and unmistakable." 5/ On the facts of this case I find no such clear and unmistakable waiver of a right guaranteed by the Order and accordingly, the contention is rejected.

With regard to the Union's proposal number "5" as set forth in its October 21, 1976 letter, supra, I find that matter is a proper subject for negotiation. While the Activity was not obligated to agree that it would provide employees with information about working conditions, living conditions and promotional opportunities in the areas involved in the transfer, nevertheless the duty to negotiate in good faith was breached when the Activity summarily decided that such matters are "not relevant", improper or simply, "not negotiable". The matters in question are basic topics which employees considering a transfer would have a deep interest and the Union, as the employees representative should be expected to raise such matters. The Activity should also be expected to consider requests for discussion in good faith, rather than rejecting even the concept of negotiating on the subjects.

Similarly, the Activity was under no compulsion to accept the Union's proposal number "7" seeking arbitration of unresolved disagreements on the proposals. However, refusing to further discuss the proposal on the basis of an incorrect conclusion of non-negotiability demonstrates a closed mind on the subject and undermines the very concept of good faith bargaining with the employees' collective bargaining representative. Accordingly, I conclude the Activity's conduct in this regard also violated the requirements of the Order.

Turning now to the Union's October 3, 1976 request for information, supra, which was denied by the Activity in toto, I conclude that the refusal to provide such information violated the Order. 6/ The Activity's effort to redistribute Inspectors from the Bardstown location, the implementation and impact of which were legitimate matters of Union concern, resulted in four involuntary transfers, one voluntary transfer and two employees being reassigned to the lower graded technician position by the time reassignments were completed in April 1977. One Inspector transferred to Hammond, Indiana was transferred a short time later to South Bend, Indiana when the Hammond post of duty was closed. Six locations were involved in the action including Bardstown, Hammond, Indiana; South Bend, Indiana; Cleveland, Ohio; Louisville, Kentucky and Detroit, Michigan. In these circumstances I find the information the Union sought from the Activity would, on its face, have been extremely valuable in "...establish(ing) a negotiating posture consistent with the best interest of...(the)...employees" and properly advising and assisting unit employees, as set forth in the Union's October 21, 1976 letter to the Activity. Therefore, as the information sought was "relevant and necessary" to the Union's duty to properly represent unit employees regarding the implementation and impact of the reassignments, the Activity's failure to furnish the information violated Sections 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order. 7/

6/ Respondent cites Department of the Air Force, etc., A/SLMR No. 733 as standing for the proposition that "staffing criteria" has been found by the Assistant Secretary to be a non-negotiable subject. However, In that case "staffing criteria" consisted of the projected number of specialist and teacher to student ratios in schools for the next school year. Accordingly, I find that case to be inapposite.

7/ See Agency For International Development, Department of State, A/SLMR No. 676.

In addition, in my view the information sought by its very nature carries with it the presumption that it was relevant and necessary to the Union to carry out its warrant to represent unit employees, regardless of whether negotiations were pending at that particular time. Representation, interim bargaining and contract negotiations - all closely allied when considering a union's legitimate functions - merge in meaning and are continuing activities. Information relative to an employer's operation, job positions, grades, the extent of overstaffing or understaffing, workload factors and specific and immediate recruiting intentions are all matters within management's particular knowledge and which a union must have in its arsenal of information in order to be constantly prepared to make thoughtful proposals and act on an ongoing basis. Further, such information is vital in order to provide a union with the capability to react to managerial decisions in a timely and intelligent fashion. Accordingly, I find that the withholding of such relevant and necessary information which the Union herein sought violated Sections 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order. 8/

Finally, the Activity contends that the Union's request for the Central Region's authorized staffing pattern was the subject of a prior grievance and accordingly, the Activity, by virtue of the provisions of Section 19(d) of the Act, was privileged to withhold the information without violating

8/ See generally Department of Justice, Immigration and Naturalization Service, A/SLMR No. 902, where the Assistant Secretary stated, "In my view, to enable a labor organization to intelligently perform its bargaining duties, it is not required that the documents sought be the sole basis for proposals, or that they form the basis for fixed, final proposals, before they become necessary and relevant to the exclusive representative for negotiaticn purposes". See also Internal Revenue Service, Austin Service Center, A/SLMR No. 675, where the Assistant Secretary, in dismissing a complaint, held that the respondent fulfilled its obligation to provide the complainant, "...with the relevant and necessary information it was entitled to receive in order to properly administer and police the parties' negotiated agreement." (Emphasis added.)

the Order. 9/ Section 19(d) provides, in relevant part, that:

"Issues which can be raised under a grievance procedure may, in the discretion of the aggrieved party, be raised under that procedure or the complaint procedure under this section, but not under both procedures."

In March 27, 1976 the Union filed a grievance with the Activity's Regional Director on the Activity's failure to furnish the authorized staffing pattern with a breakdown by position and grade for the ATF Central Region. 10/ The Union contended that withholding this information violated Article 37, Section 1 of the agreement which provided, inter alia, that the Employer "...accord consultation rights to the Union to the fullest extent provided by Executive Order 11491...." The Activity's response of April 2 essentially recited some of the provisions of Section 11(b) of the Order and concluded that the staffing pattern was "...specifically a tool of management, to be utilized in the administration of matters with respect to the mission of the agency and, therefore, it is not subject to distribution to NTEU or its members."

The grievance was not processed any further.

I find that Section 19(d) of the Order is inapplicable to the situation presented herein. In a recent decision, Administrative Law Judge Milton Kramer had the occasion to interpret the meaning of the term "issues" as used in Section 19(d), above. 11/ Judge Kramer concluded "...the 9/ This argument is made by the Activity with respect to the first three items of information requested by the Union in its October 3, 1976 correspondence to the Activity, supra. The other items of information requested were not involved in the prior grievance to be discussed herein.

10/ The Union requested the first three steps of the grievance procedure be waived and such request was apparently granted.

11/ Department of Defense, U.S. Navy, Norfolk Naval Shipyard, A/SLMR No. 908, Recommended Decision of the Administrative Law Judge, pp. 7-8. While the Assistant Secretary in his Decision and Order did not specifically discuss this contention he nevertheless adopted Judge Kramer's findings and conclusions which were not inconsistent [Cont'd on next page].

second sentence of Section 19(d) refers not to issues in the abstract but issues in the same incident." In the case herein the filing of the grievance for staffing pattern information was a distinctly different incident from the request for information regarding the reassignments. The two incidents were separated by approximately six months time and there is no indication that any reassignment was connected with the prior request. Accordingly, I find and conclude that since the Union's October 3, 1976 request for information was a completely separate incident from the March 27, 1976 grievance, Section 19(d) does not preclude considering for unfair labor practice determination under the Order the Activity's October 7 refusal to supply such information. 12/

Accordingly, in all the circumstance I find and conclude that Respondent's conduct described herein constituted a failure to meet and confer on the implementation of its decision to reassign employees and the impact on employees adversely affected by that decision thereby violating Sections 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order. I further conclude that Respondent's refusal to furnish the Union the information which it sought, as set forth in the Union's October 3, 1976 letter to the Activity, also violated Sections 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order. 13/

Complainant requests as a remedy for the violations found herein that Respondent immediately enter into negotiations with it regarding the implementation and impact of the reassignments thus far effected and any "projected" reassignments. Complainant also requests: "Should the outcome of these negotiations indicate that people other than those already chosen for reassignment should have gone, 11/ [Cont'd] with his own findings and conclusions. The Assistant Secretary went on to treat the unfair labor practice allegations as if Section 19(d) did not preclude such consideration. Accordingly, the Assistant Secretary adopted Judge Kramer's findings and conclusions on this matter.

12/ Respondent's motion to sever the request for staffing pattern information from the complaint and dismiss it pursuant to Section 19(d) of the Order is therefore denied.

13/ I reject Respondent's contention that the conduct of Regional management officials did not bind the Activity when dealing with the Union.

we further request that such employees be allowed to return to their Inspector jobs in Bardstown". In addition, Complainant seeks the information requested in the Union's letter of October 3, 1976, supra, be provided prior to the commencement of negotiations.

Complainant's request does not seek a return to the status quo ante before commencing bargaining. 14/ Rather, the remedy Complainant seeks generally follows remedies the Assistant Secretary has provided in other cases in which similar violations have occurred relative to improper failure to bargain on implementation and impact 15/ and improper failure to supply information. 16/ Accordingly, I shall recommend an order consistent in substance with Complainant's prayer for relief.

Recommendation

Having found that Respondent has engaged in conduct violative of Sections 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order, I recommend that the Assistant Secretary adopt the order as hereinafter set forth which is designed to effectuate the policies of the Order.

Order

Pursuant to Section 6(b) of Executive Order 11491, as amended, and Section 203.26(b) of the Regulations, the Assistant Secretary of Labor for Labor-Management Relations hereby orders that the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms, Department of the Treasury, Cincinnati, Ohio, shall:

UNITED STATES DEPARTMENT OF LABOR
ASSISTANT SECRETARY FOR LABOR-MANAGEMENT RELATIONS
SUMMARY OF DECISION AND ORDER OF THE ASSISTANT SECRETARY
PURSUANT TO SECTION 6 OF EXECUTIVE ORDER 11491, AS AMENDED

UNITED STATES DEPARTMENT OF LABOR
BEFORE THE ASSISTANT SECRETARY FOR LABOR-MANAGEMENT RELATIONS

FEDERAL AVIATION ADMINISTRATION,
ALASKA REGION
A/SLMR No. 1046

This case involved an unfair labor practice complaint filed by the Professional Air Traffic Controllers Organization, MEBA, AFL-CIO (PATCO) alleging the Respondent violated Section 19(a)(1) of the Order during the course of an accident investigation by, among other things, the conduct of its Chief, Air Traffic Division, in making statements to a PATCO vice-president that he had delayed and impeded the investigation and that the controllers involved should be allowed to make up their own minds in regard to any statements they wished to make.

The Administrative Law Judge found that the Respondent did not violate Section 19(a)(1) of the Order. In this regard, he concluded that, under the circumstances, the Respondent's conduct in writing letters threatening dismissal of the controllers involved, unless they provided additional information regarding the accident as required by agency regulations, was not improper. He also concluded that the statements of the Respondent's Air Traffic Division Chief, in the context in which they were made, did not violate the Order in that they were directed over the telephone to the PATCO vice-president and were not made directly to unit employees.

Noting particularly the absence of exceptions, the Assistant Secretary adopted the findings, conclusions and recommendation of the Administrative Law Judge and ordered that the case be dismissed.

The Assistant Secretary has reviewed the rulings of the Administrative Law Judge made at the hearing and finds that no prejudicial error was committed. The rulings are hereby affirmed. RECOMMENDED DECISION AND ORDER

This proceeding under Executive Order 11491, as amended (hereafter Executive Order) arises out of a crash of a military aircraft in the vicinity of Anchorage, Alaska, on February 10, 1977. An Army plane with seven persons on board was erroneously cleared by an Anchorage air traffic controller to fly at an altitude of 10,000 feet. The proper altitude for that airway is 13,000 feet because in its middle stands a mountain of more than 10,000 feet. Although the wreckage was never found, it is assumed that the plane struck the mountain.

The case was commenced by a complaint of May 9, 1977, filed by the Professional Air Traffic Controllers Organization (hereafter PATCO or Union) against the Federal Aviation Administration (hereafter FAA). The complaint alleges that in the course of an FAA investigation of the accident, FAA officials, in violation of the Executive Order, threatened to fire some controllers who were PATCO members, and that an FAA official made disparaging remarks to a PATCO Vice President, which actions "discouraged membership in [PATCO] by arbitrarily and capriciously disciplining those employees for following the advise [sic] and seeking representation by their recognized union representative and legal counsel ... [and which] actions had a chilling effect on the members of [PATCO] and held their union up to ridicule." FAA denied these allegations on April 22, 1977. A Notice of Hearing was regularly issued on October 19, 1977, and pursuant to it, the matter was heard before me on November 29, 1977, in Anchorage, Alaska. Neither party was represented by counsel at the hearing, but PATCO's general counsel filed a brief. The Union attaches special significance to this case because it represents its first challenge of the FAA in connection with an accident investigation.

To be understood, this controversy must be viewed in terms of the problems inherent in the work of air traffic controllers. Air traffic controllers appear to have one of the most demanding and stressful occupations known to man. Because of its very nature, a small human inadvertence which in most other callings would be insignificant, can, in their work, result in unspeakable tragedies. They work under extreme tension and pressure throughout their careers, which tend to be brief because of the toll the job takes on their mental and physical wellbeing. In the event of an accident or a near-miss a controller is subject to investigation and perhaps to discipline. They must endure constant apprehension of a disaster, feelings of guilt, and sometimes public disgrace. In addition, there is now concern among controllers that under some circumstances they may be exposed to personal liability in tort actions which they might have to defend without government help. Although FAA has taken some measures to alleviate their lot with provisions for traumatic leave, second career retraining, good compensation benefits, and such, it remains a very hard lot.

The FAA, on the other hand, being charged with the awesome responsibility for the safety of public airways, must demand from the controllers extraordinary standards of care, and has the duty to investigate their conduct and impose discipline for errors or inadvertence. This is resented by the controllers and makes for a uniquely adversary relationship between employer and employee.

The Anchorage controllers have an extraordinarily distrustful and hostile attitude toward the FAA. Their testimony shows bitter unhappiness with the FAA management. From their vantage the Anchorage Center is a uniquely unhappy center, it is woefully understaffed, and beset with more than usual labor-management strife.

The informal FAA investigation in this case was commenced shortly after the presumed crash, and it quickly focused on the Anchorage Control Center and five controllers who guided the ill-fated plane. Four of these controllers were PATCO members, and at their request, the Union sent Mr. Charles R. Campbell, PATCO Regional Vice President, to assist them. Mr. Campbell and a local Union official conferred with the controllers early on February 14, 1977, and then accompanied them to a meeting with Mr. Robert Altizer, the Facility Chief, an FAA attorney and two FAA investigators. They were briefed about the FAA investigation and the concurrent investigation by the Army Fact Finding Board, and each controller was asked to make a written narrative of the facts known to him or her. On Mr. Campbell's advice they limited their statements to information which was recorded on tapes. When other information was requested, Mr. Campbell, acting with the advice of PATCO's general counsel, instructed each controller not to provide it in writing, but to indicate a willingness to give it orally. Although most of the information sought by the FAA investigation was factual, Mr. Campbell and the controllers took the position that the questions called for conjectures and opinions or were not relevant, and that they would therefore not answer. Mr. Campbell maintained, for instance, that information passed on by a controller to his relief should not be divulged because that called for conjecture, and he would only permit the controller to say generally that he "briefed" his relief.

That evening, Mr. Willard Reazin, the FAA Air Traffic Division Chief, telephoned Mr. Campbell at the latter's hotel in an effort to explain the reasons why more information was necessary and to persuade Campbell to change his mind. In the course of the hour long conversation, Reazin said that while discipline for controller error was seldom if ever imposed, and was unlikely here, if the controllers continue to refuse to make a more detailed written summary they may be subject to discipline; and that if only Campbell had not interjected himself into the investigation, it would have been handled more expeditiously and brought to a quick satisfactory conclusion. Unbeknownst to Reazin, the controllers were in Campbell's hotel room during this conversation.

At their supervisor's request, the controllers reported to the Center conference room the next morning. They came with Mr. Campbell. Although the controllers expected a meeting, no one came to talk to them. At about 10:30 a.m., at Campbell's insistence, a meeting was scheduled for the afternoon, and the controllers were excused. When no FAA representative came to this meeting either, Campbell telephoned Reazin to complain. Reazin replied that no formal meeting was intended, but that the controllers were on administrative duty all day and should wait until someone came to question them. The conversation became heated. Campbell told Reazin that the waiting was deliberate harassment, and that the controllers should be given leave. Reazin complained that Campbell was discourteous in not having told him in advance that he was coming to Anchorage, 1/ blamed Campbell for delaying the investigation, and again urged him to change his mind. Campbell responded that the PATCO controllers would give additional statements only if FAA agreed in writing to grant them immunity from any discipline. Such an agreement was later typed up by Campbell, but Reazin and his superior refused to sign it.

When the investigation resumed later that afternoon, on Campbell's instructions the first controller to be interviewed refused to answer whether he noted the planes' altitudes on devices called scrimp boats, and the meeting ended on an impasse. Shortly thereafter each controller was handed a letter, which, read in context, said that should they continue to refuse to make a written statement as required by the FAA Handbook, they may be fired. One of the controllers exploded in a manner which, most charitably described, was vulgar and insubordinate to the Facility Chief and they all declined to give a further statement. Mr. Campbell advised them to stand fast, that FAA was bluffing, that the letters were blackmail and coercion, and the FAA was testing the Union. But after reflection and extensive consultation with other Union officials and counsel over the next three days, Mr. Campbell and the controllers relented and agreed to write additional statements which satisfied the FAA investigators. The letters warning that the controllers may be fired were withdrawn and torn up. The controllers were interviewed by the Army the following week, and both investigations were concluded. In the aftermath one of the controllers attempted suicide, the Facility Chief was transferred, and four controllers, one non-PATCO member among them, were disciplined by suspensions from work of varying lengths. The four disciplined controllers thereafter received medical retirements and are now in second career training.

Although PATCO's complaint alleges that the FAA attempted to punish its employees for seeking Union representation and following its advice, PATCO's brief puts primary stress on the statements of Mr. Reazin about Mr. Campbell's dilatory influence. PATCO's principal complaint is that Mr. Reazin was critical of the advice given to the controllers by PATCO officials, and made remarks to the effect that Campbell delayed the investigation and that the controllers should be permitted to make up their own minds whether to follow the Union's advice. PATCO does not claim that FAA attempted to cut the controllers off from contacts with Mr. Campbell or other Union officials; nor does it claim that the controllers were hampered in getting advice from the Union. And it is clear that the controllers had every opportunity to obtain whatever assistance the Union chose to give them. Indeed, although neither the Executive Order nor the PATCO-FAA Agreement seems to give the controllers a clear right to be represented or assisted by their Union in an investigation like the one in question, the FAA officials never raised the point. 2/

2/ The controllers' right to have PATCO or its counsel represent them in this investigation seems at best arguable. The Federal Labor Relations Council in its Statement on Major Policy Issue, FLRC No. 75 P-2, held that an employee does not have "a protected right under the Order to assistance or representation at a nonformal investigative meeting

Mr. Campbell, moreover, took full advantage of the opportunity and treated the investigation as a direct union-management confrontation. Not only did he counsel the controllers, but took charge of them, decided what they should and should not do or say, and otherwise became their spokesman and leader. In his report to his Superior, Mr. Robert Poli, of March 23, 1977, Mr. Campbell indicated that after the controllers could not unanimously agree on whether to make a further statement, he, Campbell, decided "that because we [presumably PATCO] had made some big gains and the membership was satisfied that they were being fairly represented ..." they would all give further statements. And they did.

Under the circumstances, and especially since the Anchorage press and radio were already blaming them for the crash, the controllers' reluctance to give information which may have further tended to point to controller error as the cause of the crash, and even their somewhat clumsy legalistic posturing to justify it, are understandable. Nevertheless, I conclude that they had an inescapable duty, imposed on them by the regulations in the FAA Handbook, to make a complete written narrative, and that they were aware of that duty. They could properly refuse to give the statements only by validly invoking the privilege against self-incrimination since the regulations permitted it. But they did not invoke this privilege. Because they refused on other than valid grounds, regardless whether their reason was a fear of civil liability, or fear of FAA discipline or public obloquy, their employer had a right to attempt to coerce them to do their duty, and failing that, to discharge them for insubordination. The fact that they acted with the advice and encouragement of their Union or its attorney, did not make them immune from these consequences. Nor did the Union's presence make the FAA's proper efforts to persuade or coerce its employees to do their duty an anti-union act.

2/ (cont.) or interview to which he is summoned by management, unless such a right is created by the labor contract." PATCO's agreement with FAA does not appear to contain it. Sections 2, 6, 5, 7 and 71 thereof cited in PATCO's brief do not seem to create this right. But this is a peripheral issue which need not be decided herein. It is significant only in that the FAA did not object to PATCO's vigorous role although it had some legal grounds for doing so. This tends to bolster FAA's contention that it was not attempting to limit or undercut the Union's role in this investigation, as PATCO alleges.

PATCO points out that it can give bad advice and counsel its members to act even wrongfully, and that that is none of the employer's business. The Union's right to give advice, bad or good, is not in question here, since in fact it did give the controllers advice and did represent them without any FAA objection. But I know of no authority, nor does PATCO cite any, which supports PATCO's contention that the employing agency cannot take exception or criticize the Union's improper advice or actions, or to punish illegal employee conduct counseled by a Union.

The evidence before me does not permit the conclusion that the dismissal letters, and the other acts of the FAA complained of were attempts to punish the controllers for seeking Union help or representation. Nor does it show that either Reazin or the FAA officials harbored anti-union animus or acted with enmity or malice toward PATCO. The Union's allegations that the FAA supervisors were plotting to embarrass PATCO is unsupported. Rather, on balance, the FAA officials seem to have acted with forbearance and restraint given the adamant efforts to either barter a written statement for a grant of immunity from discipline or else to thwart a necessary investigation of clearly relevant facts on rather contrived grounds. The controllers could not properly refuse to give information because, in their opinion, or in the opinion of their Union or counsel, the information was not sufficiently relevant or factual.

Accordingly, I conclude that the Alaska FAA officials acted properly in writing the letters threatening dismissals of the controllers unless they provided the written summaries asked of them. I therefore find the charge of an unfair labor practice in violation of the Executive Order on this ground to be without merit.

I also agree with FAA's procedural point that the dismissal letters were the subject of a negotiated grievance under the FAA-PATCO Agreement, and thus their effect cannot now be raised again in this proceeding, for section 19(d) of the Executive Order says that an issue can be raised one way or the other but not in both ways. PATCO elected its remedy when it chose to pursue the grievance procedure.

I also find that the remarks of Mr. Reazin to Mr. Campbell do not constitute an unfair labor practice. Firstly, the statements to the effect that if Campbell had stayed out of it the investigation would have been conducted more expeditiously seem harmless under these circumstances. They do not appear to have been calculated to disparage the Union nor to hold it up to ridicule as PATCO charges. Secondly, the FAA is not prohibited by the Executive Order from saying to a Union official that he was instrumental in unreasonably delaying an investigation, and that the members ought to be allowed to make up their own minds whether to follow his counsel. That is especially so here where the Union counseled conduct which I find to have been improper.

Moreover, Reazin's comments were not made publicly but to Campbell, under what Reazin had a right to assume were private circumstances. The fact that the controllers were in Campbell's hotel room during the conversation, unbeknownst to Reazin, and may have surmised what Reazin said, does not alter it. If Campbell wished to avoid a "chilling effect" on the members, he could have warned Reazin that the employees were with him and might infer what Reazin said. Also, Campbell could have asked Reazin to return the call when he had more privacy, or chosen his responses in such a way as to not echo Reazin's harsher words. Campbell apparently did none of these things. I conclude that Reazin was not responsible for any effects his comments may have had on the controllers since he did not address them to the controllers and had no reason to believe they would be relayed to them.

It appears clear to me that it is the general, perhaps inherent and irreconcilable, conflict between the controllers and the FAA, as well as the pre-existing discord between the Anchorage controllers and their superiors, which are at the bottom of much of this controversy. At the very least, these factors have fueled the Union's and the controllers' suspicions that the FAA attempted to embarrass PATCO and to punish the controllers for seeking its help. I find no factual basis for these suspicions. On the other hand, given the unenviable plight of the controllers, it is difficult to be critical of PATCO's or the controllers' conduct in this case. In the end, I am inescapably led to the conclusion that the FAA's responsibility for the safety of air travel overshadows all other considerations herein, and that safety investigations cannot be thwarted or impeded because they work an added hardship on the already overburdened controllers. The controllers and their Union may have just cause for seeking more protection for controllers involved in accidents, but the remedy should not be at the expense of the FAA's ability to uncover and prevent safety violations. In any event, the remedy does not lie in this forum.

RECOMMENDATION

For the reasons set forth, and on the basis of my findings of fact summarized above, I recommend that this complaint be dismissed in its entirety.

UNITED STATES DEPARTMENT OF LABOR
ASSISTANT SECRETARY FOR LABOR-MANAGEMENT RELATIONS
SUMMARY OF DECISION AND ORDER OF THE ASSISTANT SECRETARY
PURSUANT TO SECTION 6 OF EXECUTIVE ORDER 11491, AS AMENDED

FEDERAL AVIATION ADMINISTRATION, FAA AERONAUTICAL CENTER,
OKLAHOMA CITY, OKLAHOMA
A/SLMR No. 1047

This case involved an unfair labor practice complaint filed by the American Federation of Government Employees, AFL-CIO, Local Union 2282 (Complainant) alleging that the Respondent violated Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of Executive Order 11491, as amended, by publishing and implementing an order changing parking and traffic policies without first notifying the Complainant. The Respondent maintained that the change was not a "matter affecting working conditions" and was, therefore, not an appropriate subject of bargaining under Section 11(a) of the Order. Further, the Respondent contended that its Director had no obligation to consult, confer, or negotiate with the Complainant regarding the order because the Office of the Director was a level of agency management above the level of exclusive recognition.

The Administrative Law Judge concluded that the Respondent violated Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order when it issued and implemented the parking and traffic order without prior notice to the Complainant and without affording the Complainant the opportunity to consult, confer, or negotiate on the change. In this regard, the Administrative Law Judge found that because the Respondent's order changed various policies regarding parking and traffic, it was a "matter affecting working conditions" under Section 11(a), and thus gave rise to an obligation on the part of the Respondent to consult, confer, or negotiate with the Complainant over its issuance. He further found that the Respondent's Director was "agency management" within the meaning of Section 2(f) of the Order, and noted that the acts and conduct of any individual found to be agency management under Section 2(f) may provide the basis for a Section 19(a) violation.

The Assistant Secretary adopted the Administrative Law Judge's findings, conclusions and recommendations, and ordered that the Respondent cease and desist from conduct found violative of the Order and that it take certain affirmative actions.

DECISION AND ORDER

On January 12, 1978, Administrative Law Judge John D. Henson issued his Recommended Decision and Order in the above-entitled proceeding, finding that the Respondent had engaged in the unfair labor practices alleged in the complaint and recommending that it cease and desist therefrom and take certain affirmative actions as recommended in the attached Administrative Law Judge's Recommended Decision and Order. Thereafter, the Respondent filed exceptions and a supporting brief with respect to the Administrative Law Judge's Recommended Decision and Order and the Complainant filed a reply brief thereto.

The Assistant Secretary has reviewed the rulings of the Administrative Law Judge made at the hearing and finds that no prejudicial error was committed. The rulings are hereby affirmed. Upon consideration of the Administrative Law Judge's Recommended Decision and Order and the entire record in the subject case, including the Respondent's exceptions and supporting brief and the Complainant's reply brief thereto, I hereby adopt the Administrative Law Judge's findings, conclusions and recommendations.

RECOMMENDED DECISION AND ORDER

Pursuant to a complaint filed on March 14, 1977, under Executive Order 11491, as amended, by American Federation of Government Employees, AFL-CIO, Local Union 2282 (hereinafter called the Complainant), against FAA Aeronautical Center, Oklahoma City, Oklahoma (hereinafter called the Respondent), a Notice of Hearing on Complaint was issued on August 23, 1977. The Complaint alleged that Respondent violated §§ 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Executive Order.

A hearing was held in this matter on September 27, 1977, in Oklahoma City, Oklahoma. All parties were represented and afforded full opportunity to be heard and to introduce relevant evidence on the issues involved herein.

Upon the entire record herein, including my observation of the witnesses and their demeanor, and upon the relevant evidence adduced at the hearing, I make the following findings, conclusions, and recommendations.

Findings of Fact

1. The Respondent, Aeronautical Center, is an organizational element of the Federal Aviation Administration, equivalent to an FAA Region (Agency Exhibit 1). The Center is comprised of sixteen operating and support divisions, all of which are under the management and jurisdiction of the Director (Agency Exhibit 2). Nine of the divisions have units of exclusive recognition, seven of which are represented by Complainant, AFGE Local 2282 (Joint Exhibits 3 through 9). Approximately 1200 of the 3500 employees of the Center are represented by Complainant, AFGE Local 2282.

2. On November 1, 1976, FAA Aeronautical Center Order AC 1600.18E (Joint Exhibit 2) was issued by Thomas J. Creswell, Director, Aeronautical Center, superseding FAA Aeronautical Center Order AC 1600.18D (Joint Exhibit 1) issued by Director Creswell on February 24, 1975.

3. It was stipulated and the record reflects that Order AC 1600.18E, superseding Order AC 1600.18D, was issued and implemented without prior notice to Complainant, AFGE Local 2282.

4. The subject of Order AC 1600.18D was "Parking and Traffic at the Aeronautical Center."

Contentions of the Parties

The Complainant argues that the Respondent violated the Order and committed an unfair labor practice by issuing and implementing FAA Aeronautical Center Order AC 1600.18E effective November 1, 1976, revising Parking and Traffic at the Center without prior notice to Complainant and without an opportunity to consult, meet and confer and/or negotiate on the issuance of said Order and its impact on the employees represented by Complainant.

Respondent takes the position that it did not violate Executive Order 11491 for failing to give notice to Complainant and by refusing to consult, confer or negotiate concerning the implementation of FAA Aeronautical Center Order

AC 1600.18E. It argues that the Director of the Center has no obligation to consult, confer or negotiate with Complainant concerning personnel policies, practices, or other matters affecting working conditions because the Office of the Director is a level of agency management above that which coincides with the units of exclusive recognition.

Discussion and Conclusions

A. Obligation to consult, confer, or negotiate concerning issuance of FAA Aeronautical Center Order AC 1600.18E

The obligation to negotiate is set forth in § 11(a) of the Order and encompasses

"personnel policies and practices and matters affecting working conditions"

FAA Aeronautical Center order AC 1600.18E effective November 1, 1976, cancelling Order AC 1600.18D then in effect, changed various agency policies concerning employee parking and traffic at the Aeronautical Center including registration of employee vehicles, movement of traffic, and penalties for parking and traffic violations. Accordingly, I conclude that the issuance and implementation of Order AC 1600.18E was a matter affecting working conditions and was an appropriate subject of bargaining under § 11(a) of the Order. General Services Administration, Region 3, Public Buildings Service, Central Support Field office, A/SLMR No. 583, 5 A/SLMR 706 (1975); U. S. Army Electronics Command, Fort Monmouth, New Jersey, A/SLMR No. 653, 6 A/SLMR 228 (1976); and Social Security Administration, Bureau of Hearings and Appeals, A/SLMR No. 828 (1977).

B. Scope of obligation to consult, confer, or negotiate

Section 19(a) of the Order provides a list of specified unfair labor practices in which "agency management" may not engage, including § 19(a)(6) which prohibits "agency management" from refusing to consult, confer, or negotiate with a labor organization as required by the Order. The phrase "agency management" is specifically defined in § 2(f) of the Order:

"'Agency management' means the agency head and all management officials, supervisors, and other representatives of management having authority to act for the agency on any matters relating to the implementation of the agency labor-management relations program established under the Order."

Calvin H. Davenport, Deputy Director of the Center, testified that the Director is the highest management official at the Center. Agency Exhibits 1 through 5 support the finding that the Director is "agency management" within the meaning of § 2(f) of the Order and I so conclude.

It is clear that the acts and conduct of any individual found to be agency management, as defined in § 2(f), may provide the basis for a § 19(a) violation. There is no basis in the Order to draw artificial distinctions between organizational levels of such agency management so as to relieve the responsibility for such acts. Naval Air Rework Facility, Pensacola, Florida, FLRC No. 76A-37 (1977).

Having found that the issuance and implementation of Order AC 1600.18E was a change in working conditions and was an appropriate subject of bargaining under § 11(a) of the Order and that the Director, Aeronautical Center is agency management as defined by § 2(f) of the Order and it being stipulated that said Order AC 1600.18E was issued and implemented without prior notice to Complainant and without an opportunity afforded Complainant to consult, meet and confer and/or negotiate on the matter, I conclude that Respondent engaged in conduct which was in violation of §§ 19(a)(1) and (6) of Executive Order 11491. I recommend that the Assistant Secretary adopt the following Order designed to effectuate the policies of Executive Order 11491, as amended.

Recommended Order

Pursuant to § 6(b) of Executive Order 11491, as amended, and § 203.26(b) of the Regulations, the Assistant Secretary of Labor for Labor-Management Relations hereby orders that the FAA Aeronautical Center, Oklahoma City, Oklahoma, shall:

1. Cease and desist from:

a. Refusing to consult, confer, or negotiate concerning any change in policies and responsibilities governing parking and traffic at the Aeronautical Center, or refusing to negotiate prior to changing any other condition of employment which is a proper subject for collective bargaining negotiations under § 11(a) of Executive Order 11491, as amended.

b. Interfering with, restraining or coercing members of American Federation of Government Employees, AFL-CIO, Local Union 2282, in the exercise of rights assured by Executive Order 11491, as amended.

2. Take the following affirmative action in order to effectuate the purposes and policies of Executive Order 11491, as amended:

a. Rescind, in writing, FAA Aeronautical Center Order AC 1600.18E unilaterally issued on November 1, 1976, unless such changes are mutually agreed to by the parties, or upon request, meet and confer in good faith, to the extent consonant with law and regulations.

b. Bargain, after notice and upon request, with American Federation of Government Employees AFL-CIO, Local Union 2282 prior to changing any established condition of employment.

c. Post at FAA Aeronautical Center, Oklahoma City, Oklahoma, copies of the attached notice marked "appendix" on forms to be furnished by the Assistant Secretary of Labor for Labor-Management Relations. Upon receipt of such forms, they shall be signed by the Director, FFA Aeronautical Center, Oklahoma City, Oklahoma, and shall be posted and maintained by him for 60 consecutive days thereafter, in conspicuous places where notices to employees are customarily posted. The Director shall take reasonable steps to insure that such notices are not altered, defaced or covered by any other material.

UNITED STATES DEPARTMENT OF LABOR
ASSISTANT SECRETARY FOR LABOR-MANAGEMENT RELATIONS
SUMMARY OF DECISION AND ORDER OF THE ASSISTANT SECRETARY
PURSUANT TO SECTION 6 OF EXECUTIVE ORDER 11491, AS AMENDED

U.S. DEPARTMENT OF THE TREASURY,
U.S. CUSTOMS SERVICE, REGION VI,
HOUSTON, TEXAS
A/SLMR No. 1048

This case involved an unfair labor practice complaint filed by the National Treasury Employees Union (NTEU) and NTEU Chapters 145, 160, and 163 (Complainant) alleging that the Respondent violated Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order by failing to notify the Complainant and negotiate concerning the impact and implementation of certain proposed changes in a work schedule and the issuance of new regulations dealing with terms and conditions of employment.

In recommending that the allegation relating to a change in patrol officer schedules be dismissed, the Administrative Law Judge concluded that the Complainant had not sustained its burden of proving by a preponderance of the evidence that the Respondent had refused to negotiate regarding the work schedule in question. The Administrative Law Judge also found that the issuance by the Respondent of a circular dealing with the acceptance of gratuities by Customs employees did not constitute a violation of the Order noting that the regulation constituted a mere reiteration of existing Agency policy. With regard to the allegation that the unilateral implementation of a circular covering district communications constituted a violation of the Order, the Administrative Law Judge found a violation of Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order. In this regard, he found that the new circular constituted a change in existing working conditions and that the Respondent had failed to notify the exclusive representative and afford it an opportunity for negotiation over the impact and implementation of the new policy.

The Assistant Secretary agreed with the recommendations of the Administrative Law Judge that certain of the Complainant's allegations be dismissed. However, contrary to the Administrative Law Judge, the Assistant Secretary found no violation of the Order with regard to the issuance of the circular concerning district communications. In this regard, he concluded that, while the effect of a literal reading of the circular involved would constitute a change in employee terms and conditions of employment, subsequent discussions between the parties following the issuance of the circular served to clarify its intent and limit its scope. Under these circumstances, and noting the fact that the Complainant offered insufficient evidence that the circular in question was ever applied in such a fashion as to alter established employee terms and conditions of employment, the Assistant Secretary found that the Respondent's conduct was not violative of the Order. Accordingly, the Assistant Secretary dismissed the complaint in its entirety.

DECISION AND ORDER

On January 25, 1978, Administrative Law Judge Rhea M. Burrow issued his Recommended Decision and Order in the above-entitled proceeding, finding that the Respondent had engaged in certain unfair labor practices and recommending that it cease and desist therefrom and take certain affirmative actions as set forth in the attached Administrative Law Judge's Recommended Decision and Order. The Administrative Law Judge also found that the Respondent had not engaged in certain other alleged unfair labor practices and recommended that those portions of the complaint be dismissed. Thereafter, both the Respondent and the Complainant filed exceptions and supporting briefs with respect to the Administrative Law Judge's Recommended Decision and Order. 1/

1/ The Complainant excepted to the Administrative Law Judge's recommended dismissal of the allegation in the complaint concerning the Respondent's alleged unilateral implementation of a new regional boat reporting and control procedure. At the hearing, the Complainant requested permission to withdraw this allegation. Since the case had proceeded to a hearing, the Administrative Law Judge, in effect, denied the Complainant's request to withdraw but, instead, recommended dismissal of the allegation. In my view, where, as here, a complainant at a hearing seeks to withdraw an allegation from its complaint, the Administrative Law Judge should refer such request either to the appropriate Regional Administrator or to the Assistant Secretary for appropriate action. Under the circumstances outlined above, I shall treat the Complainant's withdrawal request as having been referred to me by the Administrative Law Judge for appropriate action and hereby approve such request.

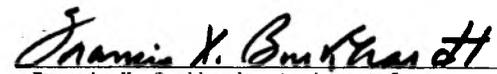

The Assistant Secretary has reviewed the rulings of the Administrative Law Judge made at the hearing and finds that no prejudicial error was committed. The rulings are hereby affirmed. Upon consideration of the Administrative Law Judge's Recommended Decision and Order, and the entire record in the subject case, including the exceptions and briefs filed by the parties, I hereby adopt the Administrative Law Judge's findings, conclusions and recommendations, only to the extent consistent herewith.

The Administrative Law Judge found that the Respondent violated Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order when its District Director in Laredo, Texas, issued a circular concerning "District Communications" without prior notice to, or negotiations with, the exclusive representative. While I agree with the determination of the Administrative Law Judge that the effect of a literal reading of the circular involved would constitute a change in employee terms and conditions of employment, the record reveals that shortly after the issuance of the circular in question there were discussions between a representative of the Complainant and the District Director in which the latter clarified the intent of the circular and limited its scope so that it no longer could constitute a change in employee terms and conditions of employment. Under these circumstances, and noting particularly that the Complainant offered insufficient evidence that the circular in question was ever applied in such a fashion as to alter established employee terms and conditions of employment, I find that the Respondent's conduct herein was not violative of the Order. 2/

IT IS HEREBY ORDERED that the complaint in Case No. 63-6892(CA) be, and it hereby is, dismissed in its entirety.

Before: RHEA M. BURROW
 Administrative Law Judge

David Van Os prepared the brief for Complainant in this proceeding.

This is an Unfair Labor Practice proceeding in which a formal hearing of record was held on August 17, 1977 pursuant to Executive Order 11491, as amended, (hereinafter referred to as the Order). In a complaint dated July 14, 1976, the Complainant alleged violations of Section 19(a) (1) and (6) of the Order. It was further alleged in substance that: (1) Ken Epperson, a member of management in Houston, Texas, unilaterally effected a new work schedule for Custom Patrol Offices in Houston that resulted in a change in working conditions; the change was not negotiated as to impact and implementation despite request by the exclusive bargaining representative; (2) Management in Customs Region VI unilaterally implemented a new boat reporting and control procedure (Circular VES-4-0:I x BOR-2, dated February 13, 1976). The new procedure involved personnel policies, practices and working conditions affecting the customs inspection force at Brownsville, Texas, in that it created an additional work load without commensurate increases in manpower and affected the overtime earnings of individual inspectors. At no time was NTEU notified or given the opportunity to bargain on impact and implementation of the change in policy; (3) A Circular PER 2-L:DD:C, entitled "Acceptance of Gratuities by Customs Employees," dated February 4, 1976 was signed by the District Director, Donald Working and issued to Customs Personnel in the Laredo District. The Circular created and unilaterally implemented a new policy by expanding upon definitions as outlined in Chapter 735 of the Customs Personnel Manual. This new policy was instituted prior to any notification to NTEU or any negotiation concerning the substance, impact and implementation of the Circular; and, (4) A Circular, MAN-1-L:DD:C, entitled District Communications dated February 4, 1976 was signed by District Director, Donovan F. Working and issued to all Customs personnel in the Laredo District. The Circular created and unilaterally implemented a new policy that deviated from past practice and caused substantial impact on personnel in the Laredo District. The new policy was instituted without notification to or negotiation with the exclusive representative of the employees as to impact or implementation of said Circular provisions.

During the course of the hearing the Complainant requested that Charge No. 2 in the complaint be withdrawn since it had ascertained facts relating to previous bargaining as to the charge not previously known, and, in view thereof, would not offer proof as to this matter. Since the case had proceeded to hearing, I will recommend dismissal of the second charge or issue in the complaint in lieu of withdrawal of that issue.

Upon the basis of the entire record, including the evidence adduced, the timely submitted briefs, and my observation of the witnesses and judgment of their credibility, I make the following findings, conclusions and recommendations.

1. The National Treasury Employees Union (hereinafter referred to as NTEU), is, and was at all times material herein, the exclusive bargaining representative for employees of Region VI, also known as the Houston Region, of the United States Customs Service. NTEU's initial certification occurred in the Fall of 1975, when the previous exclusive representative of Region VI employees, the National Customs Service Association (NCSA), affiliated with NTEU. NTEU was approved by the Department of Labor as the successor to NCSA and was certified as the exclusive representative. 1/

2. Issue No. 1 - Work Schedule Houston - By memorandum dated March 4, 1976 from Kenneth H. Epperson, Director, District Patrol Division, addressed to Roger W. Rogers, Customs Inspector and President of NTEU Chapter 163, Houston District notice and a copy of a work schedule to be implemented or effective on April 4, 1976 was forwarded.

3. Rogers, the President of NTEU Chapter 163 denied receiving a copy of the memorandum but acknowledged having been furnished a copy of the work schedule by the Assistant Director of Patrol on March 12, 1976.

1/ Prior to NTEU's accession to NCSA's exclusive status, a rival union had, on June 4, 1975, filed an RO petition challenging NCSA's certification. NTEU then filed an unfair labor practice charge against Customs for assisting the rival organization in its challenge. In settlement of the RO petition and unfair labor practice charge, the parties agreed to a Labor Department directed election to resolve the certification question. The election was completed on April 8, 1976 and NTEU was certified as the victor on April 30, 1976.

4. After contacting the chapter employees Rogers and Henry L. Loveless, NTEU employee representative and a Customs Patrol Officer met with Ken Epperson, Director of Patrol, on March 22, 1976 to express the employees dissatisfaction with the schedule. I find that regardless of whether Rogers received the memorandum dated March 4, 1976, the evidence establishes that he had timely notice of the proposed change and discussed the matter with a management agent or representative on March 22, 1976.

5. After the meeting on March 22, 1976 a revised schedule was prepared based in part on the union's input and suggestions made at the March 22, 1976 discussion and it was transmitted to Rogers, President of NTEU Chapter 163 on March 30, 1976.

6. The effect of the changed work schedule was to increase the number of weekends off duty and in some cases to reduce the workweek to five consecutive days as desired by Local 163 union representatives and to include a mid-night schedule to provide essential full dock coverage mandated by the District Director for the Houston district. Thus, some parts of the benefits requested by the Union at the March 22 meeting were granted when the revised schedule was issued.

7. There was no request for a meeting by the union to discuss impact or implementation after the revised schedule was posted and transmitted to the Complainant on March 30, 1976.

8. Issue No. 2, Brownsville, Texas. See Discussion and Conclusion "B: infra.

9. Issue or Charge No. 3, Laredo, Texas: On February 4, 1976 Respondent's District Director of Customs, Laredo District, issued a Circular 2/ with entitled subject "Acceptance of Gratuities by Customs Employees." The Circular referred to the purpose and background for the publication and stated the previous guidelines issued by the Region and Headquarters regarding gratuities may leave some doubt as to the acceptance of small gratuities. It further stated:

"Government employees may not accept gifts, etc., no matter of how little value that may be. This includes but is not limited to, free lunches, drinks, and for that matter items of small value such as advertising ball point pens. Any acceptance of these items may suggest to others an endorsement of services.

"We should all strive to maintain a pleasant professional relationship with brokers, importers, and the public in general. Any attempt to offer gratuities should be dealt with in a manner befitting the Service you serve. Be pleasant, courteous, and firm in rejecting or returning any such items offered or given you." The respondent issued the Circular without advance notification to the Complainant.

10. Previous publications such as Customs Patrol Manual, CPM 735-2 page 18 3/ and Agency Regulation 0.735-33 (b) (4) 4/ relating to Acceptance and Gifts or other things of Monetary Value from Outside Sources provided that the specified restrictions do not apply to certain situations including "(g) the acceptance of unsolicited specialty advertising or promotional material such as pens, note pads, calendars and other items of trivial intrinsic value..."

11. The evidence before me establishes that both prior to and after Respondent's issuance of the February 4, 1976 Circular an employee was precluded from accepting a gift or gratuity from one who

"(1) has, or is seeking to obtain, contractual or other business or financial relations with the Treasury Department;

(2) conducts operations or activities that are regulated by the Treasury Department; or

(3) has interests that may be substantially affected by the performance or non-performance of his official duty.

The Circular provisions did not by intent or application in practice change or modify the prior regulations or manual provisions relating to acceptance of gratuities by Custom employees but merely reiterated prior agency or management policy.

4/ Complainant Exhibit No. 8

12. The method of application as to enforcement of the provisions against accepting gifts and gratuities was unchanged and did not effect a change in the working conditions of employees.

13. Since a change in policy or working conditions was not intended or effected by reason of the Circular published February 4, 1976, the Respondent was not obligated to provide the Complainant advanced notification as to a policy being reiterated.

Issue or Change No. 4, Laredo District

14. Respondent's District Director, Donavon F. Working, issued Circular No. MAN 1-L:DD:C on February 4, 1976, Subject: District Communications, for the expressed purpose of establishing "...effective communications in the District with regard to established organizational lines." (Underscoring supplied).

15. The action required by the Circular specified that: "Consistent with good management practices, all future communications must follow the established organizational chain of command; i.e., Port to District to Region to Headquarters." 5/ The Circular indicated that distribution was to be made to all employees but was not directed to any individual or group.

16. The Respondent admits and I so find that the Circular relating to District Communications was implemented without advance notification to the Union.

17. While the requirements and specifications of the Circular relating to District Communications primarily involved port directors and supervisory personnel they also applied to bargaining unit personnel.

5/ Complainant Exhibit No. 6. The Circular stated under "Background" that: "In the past the communications between personnel in this District and those outside the District followed no organizational lines. Telephone calls were made freely by employees to other Districts, Region, and Headquarters without clearance by Port or District authorities. Memorandums and Correspondence were issued directly, with copies sent to the District office for their information. Orders were issued by individuals in both Region and Headquarters, sometimes directly to individuals at the Port.

A

The Complainant charges that the Respondent violated Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order by its action in unilaterally effecting a new work schedule for Customs patrol officers in the Houston, Texas area without negotiation with Complainant as to impact and implementation resulting in a change of working conditions of bargaining unit employees.

Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of Executive Order 11491 provides that "Agency management shall not (1) interfere with, restrain or coerce an employee in the exercise of rights assured by this Order; and (6) refuse to consult, confer or negotiate with a labor organization as required by this Order."

Section 11(a) of the Order, as amended, imposes upon any agency the obligation to meet at reasonable times and confer in good faith with respect to personnel policies and practices and matters affecting working conditions of unit employees.

Section 11(b) of the Order, however, makes it clear that the obligation to meet and confer (imposed by Section 11(a)) does not include matters with respect to the mission of the Agency; its budget; its organization; the numbers of employees assigned an organizational unit, work project or tour of duty; the technology of performing its work; or its internal security practices.

The above exception contained in Section 11(b) with respect to those normally categorized as "management perogatives" is applicable only to the initial decision or action of the Agency. Thus, as noted in the last sentence of Section 11(b) and as interpreted by the Assistant Secretary and the Federal Labor Relations Council, the Agency or activity is obligated to consult and confer with respect to the impact of any such "initial decision" or action on unit personnel. 6/

6/ Immigration and Naturalization Service, FLRC No. 70-A-10 (April 15, 1971; Plum Island Animal Disease Laboratory, FLRC No. 71-A-11, (July 9, 1971); Griffis [continued on next page].

The Respondent had the right under Section 11(b) of the Order unilaterally to arrange and provide full dock coverage of the Port in furtherance of performing its work project and the technology it utilized in performing such work. An agency or activity is obligated however to afford the exclusive representative a reasonable opportunity to meet and confer concerning the impact and implementation of decisions taken with respect to subjects within the ambit of Section 11(b) of the Executive Order. (United States Air Force Electronics Systems Division (AFCS) Hanson Air Force Base, and Local 975, National Federation of Federal Employees, A/SLMR No. 571 (1975).)

While the President of NTEU Chapter 163 denies he received the March 4, 1976 Memorandum addressed to him enclosing a copy of the work schedule to be effective April 4, 1976, he admitted having been furnished a copy on March 12, 1976. He and another Union representative thereafter met with the Director of Patrol on March 22, 1976. As a result of input received from the Union, the proposed schedule to be effective on April 4, 1976 was revised to grant in part some of the changes requested by the Union and the union NTEU President of Chapter 163 was notified on March 30, 1976. The Respondent was not thereafter contacted by the Complainant before the revised schedule was implemented and made effective on April 4, 1976.

Thus, as to the issue that Respondent unilaterally effected and implemented a new work schedule for Customs Patrol Officers in the Houston area without negotiation with NTEU Chapter 163, I conclude:

- (1) The Respondent did not refuse to consult, confer, or negotiate with a labor organization as required by this Order.
- (2) The Respondent did not interfere with, restrain or coerce an employee in the exercise of rights assured by this Order.

(3) The Complainant has not sustained its burden of proving by a preponderance of the evidence that the Respondent violated the provisions of Section 19(a) (1) and (6) of the Order.

The Complainant charges that Respondent unilaterally implemented a new boat reporting and control procedure without notifying the NTEU representatives is not supported.

In fact the Union requested that the charge be withdrawn. Since the case had proceeded to hearing I will recommend to the Assistant Secretary dismissal of this issue in lieu of withdrawal.

The Complainant urges that the February 4, 1976 Circular relating to Acceptance of Gratuities by Customs Employees issued by the District Director of Customs constituted a change in past practice that impacted on working conditions of Respondent's employees. A cursory observation without more careful study of the situation would indicate some grounds for concern as to what small gratuities the February 4, 1976 Circular precluded.

The obligation to meet and confer arises only when agency management takes action that effects a change in existing terms and conditions of employment. 7/

7/ Department of Treasury, Internal Revenue Service, Brookhaven Service Center, A/SLMR No. 814; Northeastern Program Center, Bureau of Retirement and Survivors Insurance, A/SLMR No. 753, and Department of the Navy, Mare Island Shipyard, A/SLMR No. 736.

The evidence depicting the circumstances existing before, at the time of, and, after the February 4, 1976 Circular was to preclude solicitation of any gift or gratuity from any person, corporation or groups which (1) has, or is seeking to obtain, contractual business or other financial relationship with his agency; (2) conducts operations or activities which are regulated by his agency; or (3) has interests which may be substantially affected by the performance or non-performance of his official duty.

While some fear and concern was expressed by Complainant as to application of the February 4, 1976 Circular provisions relating to gifts and gratuities, it did not preclude gifts from those having no relationship to Customs. Thus, I conclude that the Circular was in effect a reaffirmation of prior policy and practice and no change in employment conditions was effected. It is my opinion that more than an illusory fear or concern of a change in practice must be demonstrated to constitute a change in working conditions and an unfair labor practice charge is not supported by the evidence in this case. Therefore, I conclude as to this issue;

(1) that the Respondent did not refuse to consult, confer, or negotiate with a labor organization as required by this Order;

(2) the Respondent did not interfere with, restrain, or coerce, an employee in the exercise of rights assured by this Order; and

Respondent's February 4, 1976 Circular relating to "District Communications" was issued for the expressed purpose of establishing "...effective communications in the District with regard to established organizational lines." The Circular distribution was to all employees and unlike the Circular relating to Acceptance of Gratuities by Customs Employees it is evident that no prior policy established by official regulations or publications effectively governed the matter and the Circular issuance was not a reaffirmation, but a change in practice.

In its brief, counsel for the Respondent urged in effect, that the February 4, 1976 Circular provisions as to District Communications applied only to Port Directors and other supervisory personnel and not to rank and file or bargaining unit employees. I disagree. Neither the contents of the Circular or the overall evidence adduced establish an intent or purpose for the provisions to apply only to Port Directors and supervisory personnel. The changes, or, established new policies, constituted more than illusory fear and concern on the part of bargaining unit employees. In fact, there was impact as to the method, manner, content, and routing of communications before material aspects of the established policy could be ascertained and clarified. This is the type of situation that lends itself to advanced negotiation on impact and implementation of procedures rather than belated explanation and clarification after a new policy has been established or a change in policy and practice effected.

Ordinarily I would conclude that the Respondent committed an unfair labor practice by attempting to limit bargaining unit employee communication thus establishing a change in District Communications policy affecting employee working conditions without affording the union an opportunity to negotiate the impact and implementation prior to the date it became effective.

However, before doing so, I must examine what effect the pending petition of a rival labor organization had on Respondent's refusal to negotiate. At the beginning of the hearing, Counsel for the Respondent agency stated in effect that during the time all of the above issues were pending, there was a question concerning representation since a rival labor organization had petitioned for representation of Region VI employees; therefore, for the Agency to negotiate with the Complainant in the face of the representation question would have constituted violation of Section 19(a) (3) of the Order, as amended.

The Assistant Secretary of Labor for Labor-Management Relations has held on a number of occasions that when a question of representation exists, management is precluded from entering into negotiations with the incumbent union. The incumbent may continue to administer its existing contract to represent employees in grievances, collect dues, etc., but it may not enter into new negotiations with management.

In Department of the Navy, Naval Air Rework Facility, Jacksonville, Florida, et al, A/SLMR No. 155, the Assistant Secretary elaborated upon the difficulties in striking a balance between maintaining a neutral posture and the status quo.

A part of the elaboration and discussion mentioned that management's role is to maintain the status quo by administering the existing contract while keeping a neutral position as to the outcome of the representation proceedings. If management does negotiate with the incumbent union, the employees in the unit could receive rights and benefits they had not enjoyed before. This would give the incumbent union an unfair advantage in election proceeding. By giving the incumbent such an opportunity to bargain, management has therefore, inadvertently or not, assisted the incumbent labor organization and therefore tainted its neutral stance. Such a neutral stance is prescribed under Section 1(a) as well as 19(a)(1) and (3) of Executive Order 11491.

In Department of the Interior, Bureau of Reclamation, Yuma Projects Office, Yuma Arizona, A/SLMR No. 808, it was held that during the pendency of an RA petition in the reorganization circumstances here involved an agency is obligated to continue recognition and adhere to the terms of existing agreements to the maximum extent possible until the representation matter is resolved. 8/

In Warner Robins Air Logistics Center, Robins Air Force Base, Georgia A/SLMR No. 912 one of the complaints alleged was that the Respondent violated Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order 9/ by its unilateral implementation of its last negotiation offer regarding the amount of official time available to stewards for representational purposes when the issue was pending before the Federal Service Impasses Panel.

The Assistant Secretary adopted the Administrative Law Judges' findings, conclusions and recommendations that no overriding exigency existed to permit the implementation of an impasse issue while pending before the Federal Service Impasses Panel, (citing U.S. Army Corps of Engineers,

8/ Also see, FLRC No. 74A-52.

9/ A violation of Section 19(a)(2) was also alleged and the recommendation for dismissal of the Section 2 violation [continued on next page]

A/SLMR No. 673), and he concluded that the Respondent violated Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order.

The communication practices that Complainant sought to correct in this case were not of recent vintage and there was no overriding exigency to permit the Respondent to blithely engage in unilateral conduct before determination of the petition as to the proper labor organization representative. Rather than stabilize labor relations such conduct enhances or increases the disharmony between parties. This was not in my opinion the intent or purpose of the framers of the Order.

My findings, conclusions and recommended disposition as to the first three allegations of the complaint are predicated on a different basis than the pending petition of a rival labor organization. As to the allegation relating to District Communications, I find that the Respondent failed in its obligation to meet and confer in good faith with the Complainant in violation of Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order.

RECOMMENDATION

Based upon the foregoing findings and conclusions, I recommend that the complaint against the Respondent alleging violations of Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order be dismissed as to the following issues: (1) that the Respondent unilaterally effected a new work schedule for Customs Patrol Officers in the Houston, Texas area that affected a change in working conditions of bargaining unit employees without conferring or consulting with the Complainant as to impact and implementation of the change; (2) the Respondent unilaterally implemented a new boat reporting and contact procedure which changed personnel policy or practices and affected working conditions of the Customs inspection force in the Brownsville, Texas area without conferring or consulting with the Complainant as to the impact and implementation of the change; and, (3) the Respondent issued a circular in February 1976 limiting acceptance of any and all gratuities and this constituted a policy change affecting working conditions of Customs personnel in the Laredo, Texas area and the Complainant was not notified or given the opportunity to bargain on impact or implementation of the change before it became effective.

by the Administrative Law Judge was adopted by the Assistant Secretary.

I, having found that the Respondent has engaged in conduct which violated Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order with respect to it having issued a circular creating and implementing a change in District Communications policy and procedures without affording the Complainant an opportunity to bargain on impact or implementation before the change became effective, I shall recommend that the Assistant Secretary adopt the following Recommended Order designed to effectuate the policies of Executive Order 11491, as amended.

RECOMMENDED ORDER

Pursuant to Section 6(b) of Executive Order 11491, as amended, and Section 203.26(b) of the Regulations promulgated thereunder, the Assistant Secretary of Labor for Labor-Management Relations hereby Orders that the Respondent, Treasury, U.S. Customs Service, Region VI, Houston, Texas, shall:

(1) Cease and desist from:

- (a) Failing and refusing to notify National Treasury Employees Union pursuant to Section 9(b) of Executive Order 11491, as amended, of proposed substantive changes in District Communications personnel policies that affect employees it represents and affording such representative the opportunity to meet and confer, to the extent consonant with law and regulations, concerning the procedure involved and the impact of the decision to change and limit District Communications activities.

UNITED STATES DEPARTMENT OF LABOR
ASSISTANT SECRETARY FOR LABOR-MANAGEMENT RELATIONS
SUMMARY OF DECISION AND ORDER OF THE ASSISTANT SECRETARY
PURSUANT TO SECTION 6 OF EXECUTIVE ORDER 11491, AS AMENDED

DEPARTMENT OF THE TREASURY, BUREAU OF ALCOHOL, TOBACCO AND FIREARMS
A/SLMR No. 1049

These cases involved two unfair labor practice complaints filed by the the National Treasury Employees Union (Complainant), and were before the Assistant Secretary on stipulated facts. One complaint alleged that the Respondent violated Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order by unilaterally declaring terminated certain provisions of the parties' nationwide, negotiated agreement which, upon its terms, had expired at an impasse in negotiations for a new agreement. The second complaint alleged that the Respondent's Puerto Rico Office violated Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order by its refusal to process an employee's grievance filed under the negotiated procedure of the parties' expired nationwide agreement.

Regarding the first complaint, the Assistant Secretary found that the Respondent violated Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order by its unilateral conduct in changing existing personnel policies and practices and matters affecting working conditions within the meaning of Section 11(a) of the Order after the expiration of the parties' negotiated agreement. The Assistant Secretary dismissed the second complaint. He found that since the conduct of the Puerto Rico Office was clearly based on instructions from higher level management, a separate finding of violation of Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order against the Puerto Rico Office was not warranted.

Accordingly, with respect to the first complaint, the Assistant Secretary ordered that the Respondent cease and desist from the conduct found violative of Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order and that it take certain affirmative remedial actions. He ordered that the second complaint be dismissed in its entirety.

DECISION AND ORDER

This matter is before the Assistant Secretary pursuant to Regional Administrator Hilary M. Sheply's Order Transferring Cases to the Assistant Secretary of Labor, in accordance with Section 203.5(b), 203.7(a)(4), and 206.5(a) of the Assistant Secretary's Regulations.

Upon consideration of the entire record in the subject cases, including the parties' stipulation of facts and accompanying exhibits, the Assistant Secretary finds:

The complaint in Case No. 22-07962(CA) alleges that the Respondent violated Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of Executive Order 11491, as amended, when it unilaterally declared terminated certain provisions of the parties' expired nationwide negotiated agreement. In Case No 37-01854(CA), it is alleged that Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order was violated when the Puerto Rico Office of the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms refused to process an employee's grievance under the negotiated procedure of the expired agreement.

The undisputed facts, as stipulated by the parties, are as follows:

Since April 1973, the Complainant, National Treasury Employees Union, has been the exclusive representative of all nonprofessional General Schedule and Wage Grade employees employed by the regional offices of the Department of the Treasury, Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms, except management officials, supervisors, confidential employees, professional employees, employees of the Criminal Enforcement Divisions, employees engaged in Federal personnel work in other than a purely clerical capacity, and guards. There are approximately 1,000 employees in the nationwide unit.

The parties executed their first negotiated agreement on March 5, 1974. Thereafter, on March 1, 1976, they began negotiations on a new agreement. On March 8, 1977, the Complainant notified the Federal Service Impasses Panel (FSIP) that an impasse had been reached. By its terms, the 1974 agreement expired when the parties reached impasse in their negotiations for the new agreement. The Respondent thereupon declared terminated certain provisions of the expired agreement by a memorandum to its supervisors of unit employees on March 14, 1977. The memorandum stated, in part, that "the Bureau will not be bound to provide those privileges which were contractually accorded to the union and union members." ^{1/} It listed 22 of 38 articles of the expired agreement that "should continue to be observed even though the contract is terminated, since they constitute the existing personnel policies, practices, and working conditions." Subsequently, in accordance with the Respondent's memorandum of March 14, 1977, the Respondent's Chief of Puerto Rico Operations refused to process under the negotiated procedure of the expired agreement an employee's grievance filed on March 15, 1977.

The Federal Labor Relations Council (Council) has recently stated its view that, upon the expiration of a negotiated agreement, existing personnel policies and practices and matters affecting working conditions within the meaning of Section 11(a) of the Order, whether or not included in a negotiated agreement, continue as established absent an express agreement by the parties that such personnel policies and practices and matters affecting working conditions terminate upon the expiration of that agreement or unless otherwise modified in a manner consistent with the Order. The Council noted, in this connection, that agency management retains the right, upon the expiration of a negotiated agreement, to unilaterally change those matters contained therein which are excepted from the obligation to negotiate by Section 11(b) of the Order. ^{2/}

Applying the above principles enunciated by the Council to the circumstances in these cases, I find in Case No. 22-07962(CA) that the Respondent's conduct in unilaterally terminating various agreement provisions at the expiration of the agreement violated Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order, as, clearly, many of the provisions terminated involved personnel policies and practices and matters affecting working conditions within the meaning of Section 11(a) of the Order. For example, among the clauses declared terminated by the Respondent were the parties' negotiated grievance procedure, those dealing with facilities and services supplied by the Respondent to the Union, and those granting the right of the Union representative and an affected employee to be on official time for a reasonable period to present grievances and appeals, clearly mandatory subjects of bargaining within the ambit of Section 11(a) of the Order. 3/

^{1/} The memorandum specifically stated that time should not be provided to union representatives to pursue contract matters and that grievance procedures, disciplinary actions and adverse actions should not be processed according to the negotiated procedure since the agreement no longer existed, but rather should be processed in accordance with agency procedures.

Under these circumstances, I find that the Respondent's unilateral conduct in terminating Section 11(a) terms and conditions set forth in certain provisions of the parties' expired agreement 4/ was in derogation of its bargaining responsibilities under the Order. 5/

The evidence establishes that the refusal by the Respondent's Puerto Rico Office to process a grievance under the negotiated procedure was based on instructions contained in the Respondent's March 14, 1977, memorandum. Under these circumstances, since the conduct of the Respondent's Puerto Rico Office clearly was based on instructions from higher level management, a separate finding of violation in Case No. 37-01854(CA) against the Puerto Rico Office was not considered warranted. 6/ Accordingly, I shall dismiss the complaint in that case.

3/ See Elmendorf Air Force Base (Wildwood Air Force Station), Alaska, 1 FLRC 361, FLRC No. 72A-10 (1973), General Services Administration, Region 5, FLRC No. 76A-121 (1977), and San Antonio Air Logistics Center, Kelly Air Force Base, Texas, 5 A/SLMR 502, A/SLMR No. 540 (1975), FLRC No. 75A-100 (1976).

4/ As noted above, the parties' 1974 negotiated agreement, by its terms, expired when the parties reached impasse in their negotiations for a new agreement. There is no evidence that the agreement provisions which the Respondent terminated included any of the issues at impasse. In any event, the processes of the FSIP having been invoked, the Respondent was required to adhere to established personnel policies and practices and matters affecting working conditions, including those contained in the expired agreement, to the maximum extent possible. Internal Revenue Service, Ogden Service Center, and Internal Revenue Service, et al., cited above.

5/ Article 33 and portions of Article 32 of the expired agreement dealt with advisory arbitration of adverse actions. The right of agencies to establish their own appeals procedures for adverse actions was revoked in 1974 by Executive Order 11787. Therefore, these provisions did not survive the expiration of the 1974 negotiated agreement.

6/ See Naval Air Rework Facility, Pensacola, Florida, and Secretary of the Navy, Washington, D. C., FLRC No. 76A-37 (1977), A/SLMR No. 873 (1977). It should be noted that the remedy which I shall order for the violations found in Case No. 22-07962(CA) will serve to remedy the conduct complained of in Case No. 37-01854(CA).

ORDER

Pursuant to Section 6(b) of Executive Order 11491, as amended, and Section 203.26(b) of the Regulations, the Assistant Secretary of Labor for Labor-Management Relations hereby orders that the Department of the Treasury, Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco, and Firearms, shall:

1. Cease and desist from:

(a) Unilaterally changing, after the expiration of a negotiated agreement, existing personnel policies and practices and matters affecting working conditions within the ambit of Section 11(a) of the Order, without providing notice to, and, upon request, meeting and conferring with the National Treasury Employees Union, the exclusive representative of its employees, or any other exclusive representative;

(a) Direct its Puerto Rico Office, and any of its other facilities where unit employees are employed, to process, upon appropriate request, any grievance under the parties' negotiated procedure in which past refusal to do so was predicated upon the expiration of the parties' negotiated agreement;

(c) Post at the agency's Puerto Rico Office, and at any of its other facilities where unit employees are employed, copies of the attached notice marked "Appendix" on forms to be furnished by the Assistant Secretary of Labor for Labor-Management Relations. OF THE ASSISTANT SECRETARY

U.S. ARMY MORTUARY,

A/SLMR No. 1050

On June 28, 1977, in A/SLMR No. 857, the Assistant Secretary issued an Order Referring Major Policy Issue To The Federal Labor Relations Council (Council). The following issue was presented to the Council for its consideration:

Whether the Assistant Secretary can find that in a successorship situation the agreement bar which existed pursuant to the predecessor's negotiated agreement with the exclusive representative may continue in effect after the reorganization so as to afford the successor employer and the exclusive representative a period of stability free from rival claims or other questions concerning majority status?

On March 21, 1978, the Council issued its Decision On Referral Of Major Policy Issue From Assistant Secretary, finding, in essence, that the Assistant Secretary may interpret and apply his existing agreement bar rules or prescribe analogous rules to find that in a successorship situation the agreement bar which existed pursuant to the predecessor's negotiated agreement with the exclusive representative may continue in effect after the reorganization so as to afford the gaining employer and the exclusive representative a period of stability free from rival claims or other questions concerning representation.

In view of the principles enunciated in the Council's decision and A/SLMR No. 857, the Assistant Secretary interpreted his regulations to provide that in a successorship situation the agreement bar which existed pursuant to the predecessor's negotiated agreement with the incumbent exclusive representative continues in effect after a reorganization. Consequently, he found that the instant petition was untimely filed during the agreement bar period. Accordingly, he dismissed the petition.

SUPPLEMENTAL DECISION AND ORDER

On June 28, 1977, in A/SLMR No. 857, I issued an Order Referring Major Policy Issue To The Federal Labor Relations Council (Council) in the subject case, submitting the following issue to the Council for its consideration:

Whether the Assistant Secretary can find that in a successorship situation the agreement bar which existed pursuant to the predecessor's negotiated agreement with the exclusive representative may continue in effect after the reorganization so as to afford the successor employer and the exclusive representative a period of stability free from rival claims or other questions concerning majority status?

In connection with the submission of this issue to the Council, I found that the exclusively recognized unit in the subject case was transferred substantially intact, pursuant to a reorganization, from the Military Traffic Management Command, Western Area (MTMCWA) to the Casualty and Memorial Affairs Directorate of the Adjutant General Center (TAGCEN), that the appropriateness of the unit remained unimpaired in the gaining employer, and that, under the principles enunciated by the Council in Defense Supply Agency, Defense Property Disposal Office, Aberdeen Proving Ground, Aberdeen, Maryland, 3 FLRC 787, FLRC No. 74A-22 (1975), the TAGCEN was a "successor" employer of the employees in the existing exclusively recognized unit. 1/ I further found that, prior to the reorganization, in 1975, the MTMCWA and the Intervenor, the exclusive representative of the employees in the petitioned for unit, had entered into a multi-unit negotiated agreement covering, among other units, the subject bargaining unit. 2/ In this latter connection, I found that the evidence herein established that, subsequent to the reorganization, while the TAGCEN's conduct was in accordance with its duty as a "successor" activity to continue to accord recognition to the Intervenor, there was insufficient evidence to establish that it promised to assume, or did, in fact, assume the MTMCWA negotiated agreement.

Under these circumstances, I noted a possible conflict in policy in the principles enunciated by the Council in its Defense Supply Agency decision, cited above. Thus, in that decision the Council enunciated the policy of allowing questions concerning representation to be raised by employees, rival labor organizations or the gaining employer immediately subsequent to the establishment of a successorship, which would appear to be inconsistent with another consideration noted by the Council, i.e., the maintenance of stable labor relations during the transition period by requiring the "successor" employer to bargain with the incumbent union. As I stated in A/SLMR No. 857:

But for a possible conflict in policy, I would, for the purpose of maintaining labor relations stability following a reorganization where a successor employer emerges, allow the agreement bar which existed pursuant to the predecessor's negotiated agreement with the exclusive representative to continue in effect after the successor employer assumes control so as to afford the successor employer and exclusive representative a stable period free from the raising of questions concerning representation.

1/ After the transfer, the Intervenor filed a petition seeking to amend its certification by changing the name of the Activity to reflect the change in operational control. The petition was approved by the Regional Administrator, and an amendment of certification was issued on June 8, 1976. The unit description, as amended, reads:

"Included: All General Schedule and Wage Grade employees of the mortuary function located at Oakland Army Base under the operational control of the Casualty and Memorial Affairs Directorate, the Adjutant General Center, Department of the Army, and,

Excluded: All management officials, employees engaged in Federal personnel work in other than a purely clerical capacity, guards, and supervisors as defined in the Order."

2/ This agreement was effective on April 29, 1975, for a term of two years.

On March 21, 1978, in FLRC No. 77A-69, the Council issued its Decision On Referral Of Major Policy Issue From Assistant Secretary, finding, in pertinent part:

. . . the Assistant Secretary may, under his section 6 authority, and consistent with the purposes of the Order, interpret and apply his existing agreement bar rules or prescribe analogous rules with respect to the raising of questions concerning representation following a determination that the recognized unit was transferred substantially intact to the gaining employer and remained appropriate. While the gaining employer, as here, may not have assumed the predecessor agreement /footnote omitted/ and therefore no "agreement bar" as such exists, we see no inconsistency with the purposes of the Order in the Assistant Secretary concluding that similar "bar" principles preclude the raising of a rival claim or other question concerning majority status. /footnote omitted/ In this regard, we note, as did the Assistant Secretary, that under such a rule "questions concerning representation could be raised only during the 'open period' in the term of the predecessor's agreement." /footnote omitted/ 3/

In the Council's opinion, the adoption of such a rule, as indicated by the Assistant Secretary, would maintain the stability of labor-management relations by providing the gaining employer and the exclusive representative a stable period free from the raising of questions concerning representation. /Footnote omitted/ 4/

Therefore, in response to the Assistant Secretary's question, the Council ruled that:

3/ The Council noted that the Assistant Secretary indicated that following a reorganization in which a recognized unit has been transferred substantially intact to a gaining employer and the appropriateness of the unit remains unimpaired in the gaining employer, a representation petition may be timely filed during the "open period" of the agreement between the predecessor employer and the incumbent labor organization. The Council construed this statement, and concurred, that even if a new agreement is executed between the gaining employer and the exclusive representative prior to the "open period," such new agreement could not be raised as a bar.

4/ The Council understood the Assistant Secretary's position, with which the Council agreed, to mean that the agreement bar, which existed pursuant to the predecessor's negotiated agreement with the exclusive representative and continued to exist after the gaining employer assumed control, is not intended to preclude the raising of questions as to the continued appropriateness of the unit, or prevent accretion or other unit clarification issues from being raised following a reorganization, since such issues do not present "questions concerning representation."

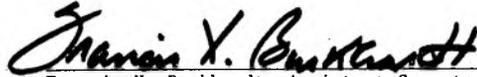

The Assistant Secretary may interpret and apply his existing agreement bar rules or prescribe analogous rules to find that in a successorship situation the agreement bar which existed pursuant to the predecessor's negotiated agreement with the exclusive representative may continue in effect after the reorganization so as to afford the gaining employer and the exclusive representative a period of stability free from rival claims or other questions concerning representation.

Based on the rationale contained in the Council's decision, and A/SLMR No. 857, and my interpretation of the agreement bar provisions contained in Section 202.3(c) of the Assistant Secretary's Regulations, which I view as applicable in a successorship situation such as that involved in the instant case, I find that the agreement bar which existed herein pursuant to the MTMCWA's negotiated agreement with the Intervenor continued in effect after the reorganization in February 1976, which resulted in the TAGGEN becoming a successor employer. Consequently, in view of the existence of an agreement bar on the date the instant petition was filed, I shall order that it be dismissed. 5/

IT IS HEREBY ORDERED that the petition in Case No. 70-5223(DR) be, and it hereby is, dismissed.

5/ The instant petition was filed on May 15, 1976. The agreement bar was effective on April 29, 1975, for a period of two years, which is coextensive with the two-year negotiated agreement between the MTMCWA and the Intervenor.

DECISION ON REFERRAL OF MAJOR POLICY ISSUE FROM ASSISTANT SECRETARY

Background of Case

This case came before the Assistant Secretary on a petition filed by Walter D. Smith, an employee of the U.S. Army Mortuary, Oakland Army Base, Oakland, California (the activity) seeking the decertification of the American Federation of Government Employees, Local 1157, AFL-CIO (the union) as the exclusive representative of certain activity employees. During his consideration of the case, the Assistant Secretary determined that it raised a major policy issue which he has referred to the Council for decision pursuant to section 2411.4 of the Council's rules of procedure.^{1/}

In his order referring the major policy issue to the Council, the Assistant Secretary found that the activity had been a component of ^{1/} Section 2411.4 of the Council's rules of procedure provides:

Notwithstanding the procedures set forth in this part, the Assistant Secretary or the Panel may refer for review and decision or general ruling by the Council any case involving a major policy issue that arises in a proceeding before either of them. Any such referral shall be in writing and a copy of such referral shall be served on all parties to the proceeding. Before decision or general ruling, the Council shall obtain the views of the parties and other interested persons, orally or in writing, as it deems necessary and appropriate.

the Military Traffic Management Command, Western Area (MTMCWA), at which time the union was the exclusive representative of a certified unit of the activity's mortuary employees. He further found that in April 1975, the union and MTMCWA entered into a 2-year negotiated agreement covering the mortuary unit and other units at the Oakland Army Base. In February 1976, the Department of the Army implemented the results of a study it had conducted and transferred the unit of mortuary employees from MTMCWA to the U.S. Army Adjutant General Center (TAGCEN). The duty station of these employees remained at the Oakland Army Base, however. The record further indicates that in May 1976, after the reorganization, an employee of the activity filed a petition (DR) seeking to decertify the union as the exclusive representative for the mortuary unit.

In view of the facts present in the case before him, the Assistant Secretary, referring to the Council's decision in Defense Supply Agency, Defense Property Disposal Office, Aberdeen Proving Ground, Aberdeen, Maryland, A/SLMR No. 360, 3 FLRC 787 [FLRC No. 74A-22 (Dec. 9, 1975), Report No. 88], noted that the Council has determined, in part, that an agency or employing entity is a "successor" when: "(1) the recognized unit is transferred substantially intact to the gaining employer; (2) the appropriateness of the unit remains unimpaired in the gaining employer; and (3) a question concerning representation is not timely raised as to the representative status of the incumbent labor organization." Based on the record before him, the Assistant Secretary found that TAGCEN was a "successor" activity in that the recognized mortuary unit had been transferred substantially intact from MTMCWA to TAGCEN and the appropriateness of the unit had remained unimpaired in the gaining employer following the reorganization. He then questioned the meaning intended by the Council of various aspects of its DSA decision, stating in this regard:

But for a possible conflict in policy, I would, for the purpose of maintaining labor relations stability following a reorganization where a successor employer emerges, allow the agreement bar which existed pursuant to the predecessor's negotiated agreement with the exclusive representative to continue in effect after the successor employer assumes control so as to afford the successor employer and exclusive representative a stable period free from the raising of questions concerning representation.

In view of the foregoing, the Assistant Secretary referred the following major policy issue to the Council for consideration:

Whether the Assistant Secretary can find that in a successorship situation the agreement bar which existed pursuant to the predecessor's negotiated agreement with the exclusive representative may continue in effect after the reorganization so as to afford the successor employer and the exclusive representative a period of stability free from rival claims or other questions concerning majority status?

The Assistant Secretary concluded:

In my judgment, the purposes of the Order will best be served by not permitting, within the period of the previous negotiated agreement, a questioning of the majority status of the incumbent union. All bar periods represent an accommodation in balancing the interest of employee freedom to choose representatives and the interest of stability in labor relations. The application of the agreement bar period to successorship situations will restore the predictability of periods when representation petitions may be filed. It will reduce administrative confusion in reorganizations; it will enable the gaining employer and incumbent representative to engage in long range planning free from unnecessary disruption; and it will promote effective dealings and efficiency of agency operations.

The major policy issue referred to the Council by the Assistant Secretary concerns his application of the agreement bar limitation on the processing of representation petitions in situations where a recognized unit has been transferred substantially intact to a gaining employer and the appropriateness of the unit remains unimpaired in the gaining employer. That is, in such situations, may the agreement bar which existed pursuant to the predecessor's agreement with the exclusive representative or an analogous bar preclude the raising of a question concerning representation as to the representative status of the incumbent labor organization?

The Council has often reaffirmed the Assistant Secretary's authority under section 6(d) of the Order^{2/} to prescribe, interpret and apply regulations in carrying out his functions and responsibilities enumerated in section 6(a) of the Order, including his responsibility to decide questions as to the appropriate unit for the purpose of exclusive recognition and related issues, and to supervise elections in appropriate units and certify

^{2/} Section 6(d) of the Order provides:

Sec. 6. Assistant Secretary of Labor for Labor-Management Relations.

(d) The Assistant Secretary shall prescribe regulations needed to administer his functions under this Order.

the results. See, e.g., U.S. Department of Health, Education, and Welfare, Social Security Administration, Grand Rapids, Michigan, Assistant Secretary Case No. 52-5578 (RO), 3 FLRC 841 [FLRC No. 75A-19 (Dec. 31, 1975), Report No. 94], and Department of the Air Force, Ellsworth Air Force Base, South Dakota, Assistant Secretary Case No. 60-3412 (RO), 2 FLRC 246 [FLRC No. 73A-60 (Oct. 30, 1974), Report No. 59]. Moreover, in its 1975 Report and Recommendations, the Council noted with approval certain "bars to elections," either provided for in the Order or fashioned by the Assistant Secretary in his regulations (Section 202.3) or case decisions, relating to the timeliness of representation petitions filed with the Assistant Secretary for processing.^{3/}

The Council stated in this regard:^{4/}

In our view, such bars foster desired stability in labor-management relations in that parties to an existing bargaining relationship have a reasonable opportunity to deal with matters of mutual concern without the disruption which accompanies the resolution of a question of representation. . . .

Clearly, the Assistant Secretary's authority to prescribe, interpret and apply such bars in carrying out the foregoing responsibilities extends equally to successorship situations such as involved in the instant case before the Assistant Secretary. That is, the Assistant Secretary may, under his section 6 authority, and consistent with the purposes of the Order, interpret and apply his existing agreement bar rules or prescribe analogous rules with respect to the raising of questions concerning representation following a determination that the recognized unit was transferred substantially intact to the gaining employer and remained appropriate. While the gaining employer, as here, may not have assumed the predecessor agreement^{5/} and therefore no "agreement bar" as such exists, we see no inconsistency with the purposes of the Order in the Assistant Secretary concluding that similar "bar" principles preclude the raising of a rival claim or other question concerning majority status.^{6/} In this regard, we note, as did the Assistant Secretary, that under such a rule "questions concerning representation could be raised only during the 'open period' in the term of the predecessor's agreement."^{7/}

^{3/} More particularly, the Council noted that "a petition is untimely if filed within 12 months of a valid election or within 12 months after the certification of a labor organization as the exclusive representative of employees in an appropriate unit, commonly referred to as an 'election bar' and a 'certification bar' respectively," and that "when there is a signed agreement having a term not to exceed 3 years, a petition for an election among covered employees is untimely unless filed between the 90th and 60th day preceding the expiration of the agreement, commonly called an 'agreement bar.'" Labor-Management Relations in the Federal Service (1975), at 36.

In the Council's opinion, the adoption of such a rule, as indicated by the Assistant Secretary, would maintain the stability of labor-management relations by providing the gaining employer and the exclusive representative a stable period free from the raising of questions concerning representation.^{8/} Specifically, as stated by the Assistant Secretary, a

5/ As the Council stated in DSA (3 FLRC at 803), a "successor" is not "required to adopt and be bound by any agreement which may have been entered into between the losing employer and the incumbent union." (Rather the successor is enjoined to maintain recognition and to adhere to the terms of the prior agreement to the maximum extent possible.)

6/ The Council declared in DSA (3 FLRC at 802) that a "successor" relationship exists only where, among other things, "a question concerning representation is not timely raised as to the representative status of the incumbent labor organization." [Emphasis added.] The Council further stated in that case (at n. 17) that a new secret ballot election would be required if, after a reorganization, the employees or a rival labor organization "duly" raised a question concerning representation. In our view, such a question may be "duly" raised only where it is "timely" raised under rules established by the Assistant Secretary pursuant to his authority under section 6(d) of the Order.

7/ As the Assistant Secretary indicated, following a reorganization in which a recognized unit has been transferred substantially intact to a gaining employer and the appropriateness of the unit remains unimpaired in the gaining employer, a representation petition may be timely filed during the "open period" of the agreement between the predecessor employer and the incumbent labor organization. We construe the Assistant Secretary's statement, and so agree, that even if a new agreement is executed between the gaining employer and the exclusive representative prior to the "open period," such new agreement could not be raised as a bar.

8/ We understand the Assistant Secretary's recommended position (namely, that the agreement bar which existed pursuant to the predecessor's negotiated agreement with the exclusive representative should continue in effect after the gaining employer assumes control) with which we agree is not intended to preclude the raising of questions as to the continued appropriateness of the unit. Rather, the recommended application of the rule so adopted would "restore the predictability of periods when representation petitions may be filed"; "reduce administrative confusion in reorganizations"; "enable the gaining employer and incumbent representative to engage in long range planning free from unnecessary disruption"; and "promote effective dealings and efficiency of agency operations." In our view, such a bar would be consistent with the purposes and policies of the Order previously noted by the Council (supra at 4), namely: To "foster desired stability in labor-management relations [by providing] parties to an existing bargaining relationship . . . a reasonable opportunity to deal with matters of mutual concern without the disruption which accompanies the resolution of a question of representation."

Conclusion

Therefore, in response to the Assistant Secretary's question:

The Assistant Secretary may interpret and apply his existing agreement bar rules or prescribe analogous rules to find that in a successorship situation the agreement bar which existed pursuant to the predecessor's negotiated agreement with the exclusive representative may continue in effect after the reorganization so as to afford the gaining employer and the exclusive representative a period of stability free from rival claims or other questions concerning representation.

By the Council.

agreement bar would only affect the raising of "rival claims or other questions concerning majority status," not questions as to the appropriateness of the unit. We further construe and agree that the recommended bar would not prevent accretion or other unit clarification issues from being raised following a reorganization, since such issues do not present "questions concerning representation."

Case No. 41-5415(CA)

This case involved an unfair labor practice complaint filed by the National Association of Government Employees, Local R05-185 (Complainant) alleging that the Respondent violated Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order by failing to bargain with the exclusive representative over the decision to change the designation of which shift would be responsible for the relief of officers on planned leave.

NATIONAL ASSOCIATION OF GOVERNMENT EMPLOYEES, LOCAL R05-185

Complainant

The Administrative Law Judge concluded that the Respondent had not violated Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order. In this regard, he found that the instant matter concerned differing and arguable interpretations of the parties' newly negotiated agreement as distinguished from actions which would constitute a clear, unilateral breach of the agreement and, therefore, the Respondent's conduct was not violative of the Order. Further, the Administrative Law Judge noted that a decision to change the responsibility for providing relief of officers on planned leave was a reserved right of management, pursuant to Sections 11(b) and 12(b) of the Order.

DECISION AND ORDER

On November 30, 1977, Administrative Law Judge William B. Devaney issued his Recommended Decision and Order in the above-entitled proceeding, finding that the Respondent had not engaged in the unfair labor practices alleged in the complaint and recommending that the complaint be dismissed in its entirety. Thereafter, the Complainant filed exceptions with respect to the Administrative Law Judge's Recommended Decision and Order.

The Assistant Secretary concluded that dismissal of the instant complaint was warranted. However, contrary to the Administrative Law Judge, he found that the parties' agreement, by its terms, was not yet in effect at the time of the Respondent's alleged unilateral action and, thus, the change could not concern differing and arguable interpretations of such agreement. Rather, he found that the determination concerning which shift would be responsible for relief was integrally related to and consequently determinative of the number of employees assigned to a particular tour of duty and, therefore, was a permissive subject of bargaining within the ambit of Section 11(b) of the Order. Under these circumstances, and in the absence of the existence of a negotiated agreement covering the subject, the Assistant Secretary found that the Respondent's conduct herein was not in derogation of its bargaining obligations under the Order.

The Assistant Secretary has reviewed the rulings of the Administrative Law Judge made at the hearing and finds that no prejudicial error was committed. The rulings are hereby affirmed. Upon consideration of the Administrative Law Judge's Recommended Decision and Order, and the entire record in this case, including the Complainant's exceptions, I hereby adopt the Administrative Law Judge's findings, conclusions and recommendations, to the extent consistent herewith. 1/

Accordingly, he ordered that the complaint be dismissed in its entirety.

1/ The Administrative Law Judge recommended that the Respondent's Motion to Dismiss, based on the Complainant's alleged noncompliance with the Assistant Secretary's Regulations, be denied. I agree. It appears that such contention was made for the first time at the hearing. It has been held previously that it would not effectuate the purposes of the Order to permit issues to be raised for the first time at a hearing or in a post-hearing brief where a party has had adequate opportunity to raise such matters prior to the issuance of the notice of hearing. Cf. Department of the Treasury, Internal Revenue Service, Chicago, Illinois, A/SLMR No. 962 (1978).

This case arose as a result of a complaint alleging, in essence, that the Respondent violated Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order by unilaterally changing the agreed-upon shift schedule, a matter affecting working conditions of unit employees, without negotiating with the Complainant, the exclusive representative of the employees involved, over the decision to make the change.

The essential facts of the case, set forth in detail in the Administrative Law Judge's Recommended Decision and Order, are as follows:

The Complainant and the Respondent executed a negotiated agreement on January 3, 1977, which was approved by the Chief Medical Director on February 11, 1977. Article XXIX, Section 1 of the agreement provided that it,

...shall be in full force and effect for a period of three (3) years from the date of approval by the Chief Medical Director....

Article VIII, Section 3, entitled Tours of Duty and Basic Workweek, provided,

3. At shift changeover, rotation will be to the next consecutive shift on the schedule now in effect and from the last shift on the schedule to the first shift on the schedule for the other Division. (Emphasis added.)

After notifying the Complainant on January 21, 1977, of its intent to do so, the Respondent on January 25, 1977, issued a memorandum designating the midnight shift, rather than the day shift, as responsible for relief of officers on planned leave.

The Administrative Law Judge found that the gravamen of the complaint was that the Respondent violated the parties' negotiated agreement by changing "the schedule now in effect," when it made the midnight shift rather than the day shift responsible for relief. He determined that, at most, the dispute herein concerned differing and arguable interpretations of the agreement, as distinguished from actions which would constitute a clear, unilateral breach and, therefore, the Respondent's conduct was not violative of the Order. The Administrative Law Judge noted further that a decision to change the responsibility for providing relief of officers on planned leave was a reserved right of management, pursuant to Sections 11(b) and 12(b) of the Order, about which the Respondent was not obligated to bargain.

While I agree with the Administrative Law Judge's recommendation that the instant complaint should be dismissed, I do not adopt his rationale that dismissal is warranted on the basis that the dispute herein concerns differing and arguable interpretations of a negotiated agreement. Thus, as indicated above, the agreement provides that it "...shall be in full force and effect... from the date of approval by the Chief Medical Director...." The evidence establishes that such approval took place on February 11, 1977. By its terms, therefore, the parties' negotiated agreement was not in effect at the time of the alleged January 25, 1977, unilateral change by the Respondent. Under these circumstances, as the negotiated agreement was not yet in effect, I find that dismissal of the instant complaint on the basis that the matter involved a question of contract interpretation is not warranted.

As indicated above, the Administrative Law Judge further concluded that the Respondent was not obligated to bargain on its decision as to which shift would be responsible for providing relief of officers on planned leave. I agree. In my view, the determination herein by the Respondent concerning which shift would be responsible for relief is integrally related to and consequently determinative of the number of employees assigned to a particular tour of duty. Consequently, I find that the matter comes within the ambit of Section 11(b) of the Order as a permissive subject of bargaining. ^{2/} Thus, clearly, whichever shift was selected to provide relief, the number of employees on that shift would be reduced, thereby constituting a change in, and being determinative of, the staffing pattern involved.

Under these circumstances, and in the absence of the existence of a negotiated agreement covering the subject of providing personnel for relief of officers on planned leave, I find that the Respondent's conduct herein was not in derogation of its bargaining obligations under the Order. ^{3/}

Accordingly, I shall order that the complaint herein be dismissed in its entirety.

^{2/} Cf. Office of the Administrator, Animal and Plant Health Inspection Service, U.S. Department of Agriculture, 3 FLRC 324, FLRC No. 73A-36 (1975), and Pium Island Animal Disease Laboratory, Department of Agriculture, Greenport, New York, 1 FLRC 100, FLRC No. 71A-11 (1971). Contrary to the Administrative Law Judge, I find that the matter in question is not a reserved management right under Section 12(b) of the Order. Thus, in my view, the Respondent herein was not prohibited from bargaining on the decision to change the shift designated for providing relief. In view of the above finding, however, that the subject matter involved herein is within the ambit of Section 11(b) of the Order, I find it unnecessary to reopen the record as requested by the Complainant for the presentation of newly discovered evidence pertaining to the Administrative Law Judge's Section 12(b) determination.

RECOMMENDED DECISION AND ORDER

Statement of the Case

This is a proceeding under Executive Order 11491, as amended. A charge was filed on, or about, February 9, 1977, and a complaint was filed March 28, 1977, and assigned No. 41-5378 (Res. Exh. 1). By letter dated April 12, 1977, the Regional Administrator dismissed the complaint in No. 41-5378 for the reason that Complainant

"... failed to furnish any evidence in support of the complaint ..." (Res. Exh. 1).

On April 25, 1977, the complaint herein was filed, which is based on the matters raised in the February 9, 1977, charge. The present complaint differs in substance from the March 28, 1977, complaint only to the extent that there is no longer a 19(a)(5) allegation. Notice of Hearing issued on July 15, 1977 (Asst. Sec. Exh. 3) pursuant to which a formal hearing was duly held before the undersigned on September 15, 1977, in Lexington, Kentucky. At the hearing, Respondent's Motion to Dismiss was denied but without prejudice to renewal in post-hearing briefs. Respondent has renewed its Motion to Dismiss which is, again, denied. 1/

1/ Respondent based its Motion to Dismiss on § 203.8 of the Regulations. Respondent's reliance on this Section of the Regulations is misplaced.

Dismissal of the Complaint for failure to furnish any evidence support of the complaint (Complainant's Chief Negotiator, who has all relevant documents, was then, and remains, seriously ill), left unaffected the charge of February 9, 1977, and, in my opinion the timeliness of the present complaint is governed by Section 203.2(b) of the Regulations and not by Section 203.8. Section 203.2(b)(2) of the Regulations provides:

"(2) If a written decision expressly designated as a final decision on the charge is served by the respondent on the charging party, that party may file a complaint immediately but in no event later than sixty (60) days from the date of such service." (Emphasis supplied.)

In essence, Complainant alleges a unilateral change in the terms of the parties negotiated agreement 2/ on January 25, 1977, when the shift that would be responsible for relief of officers on annual, or scheduled leave, was changed. Previously, the officer on day shift was scheduled as relief officer and by memorandum dated January 25, 1977, the midnight shift was designated to cover scheduled leave (Jt. Exh. 3). Respondent's motion to dismiss, made at the conclusion of Complainant's case, was not ruled on at the hearing but was carried with the case and will be decided herein.

All parties were represented by counsel, were afforded full opportunity to be heard, to examine and cross-examine witnesses and to introduce evidence bearing on the issue involved and briefs have been timely filed by the parties which have been carefully considered. Upon the basis of the entire record, I make the following findings of fact, conclusions and recommendation:

Section 203.2(b)(3) of the Regulations provides:

"(3) A complaint must be filed within nine (9) months of the occurrence of the alleged unfair labor practice or within sixty (60) days of the service of a respondent's written final decision on the charging party, whichever is the shorter period of time." (Emphasis supplied.)

The Complaint (Asst. Sec. Exh. 1) shows that Respondent's written final decision on the charge was served on Complainant on March 4, 1977. As the complaint, filed April 25, 1977, was well within 60 days from the date of such service, the present complaint was timely. The fact that Complainant did not appeal the earlier dismissal of its complaint does not affect the timeliness of a subsequent complaint which is within 60 days of the service of Respondent's final decision on the charge. Moreover, Respondent's motion would not, in any event, be granted unless Respondent had raised the matter in timely fashion with the Area or Regional Administrator prior to issuance of the Notice of Hearing. New York Army and Air National Guard, Albany, N.Y., A/SLMR No. 441, 4 A/SLMR 681 (1974).

2/ The agreement was not approved until February 11, 1977, and by its terms (Article XXIX, Section 1) the agreement was to be in force "... from the date of approval . . ." (Jt. Exh. 1).

FINDINGS OF FACT

1. Complainant, National Association of Government Employees, was certified as the exclusive representative of all police officers employed by the Veterans Administration Hospital, Lexington, Kentucky (excluding professional employees, employees engaged in Federal personnel work in other than a purely clerical capacity, management officials, and supervisors as defined in the Order, and all other employees in other exclusively recognized units) on July 8, 1976.

2. The parties signed a collective bargaining agreement on January 3, 1977, which was approved by the Chief Medical Director on February 11, 1977 (Jt. Exh. 1). Article XXIX, Section 1 provided, in part, that this Agreement

"... shall be in full force and effect for a period of three (3) years from the date of approval by the Chief Medical Director ..." (Jt. Exh. 1).

3. Article VIII - TOURS OF DUTY AND BASIC WORKWEEK, Section 3, of the Agreement signed January 3, 1977, provided as follows:

"Section 3. At shift changeover, rotation will be to the next consecutive shift on the schedule now in effect and from the last shift on the schedule to the first shift on the schedule for the other Division." (Jt. Exh. 1, p. 7) (Emphasis supplied.)

The two Divisions are, and were, Leestown Division and Cooper Drive Division (See, Jt. Exh. 2). The Schedule in effect on December 3, 1976 (Jt. Exh. 2) was prepared by Officer Baldwin and initialed by Chief Dixon on December 3, 1976. There is no dispute that this constituted the "schedule now in effect" as referred to in Article VIII, Section 3.

4. On January 21, 1977, Officer Thomas Frederick, President of Local 185, was informed by Respondent of the contemplated change of making the midnight shift responsible for relief of officers on scheduled, or planned leave, which was made effective by Chief Jackie N. Dixon's memorandum of January 25, 1977 (Jt. Exh. 3). Officer Frederick told Chief Dixon on January 21st that he would have to refer this proposal to higher headquarters in the Union.

5. Chief Dixon testified that a robbery of a cashier of some $2,300.00 occurred on, or about, January 6 or 7, 1977, which led to assignment to the Protective Service of responsibility for coverage for money escort, ward payments, and canteen escort.

As this additional responsibility required the presence of all officers assigned to the day shift, he could not continue to use officers from the day shift for relief of officers on scheduled, or planned, leave. After meeting with management personnel on January 20, 1977, at which time the problem was reviewed and it was determined that the midnight shift would have to assume the responsibility for relief, Chief Dixon met with Mr. Frederick on January 21, 1977, and told him of the problem; that they had to come up with another relief man. Mr. Frederick said that after he was informed of the decision, on January 21, 1977, to make the midnight shift responsible for planned relief, he was opposed, "its against the contract" and that he was going to get in touch with Harry Bream, the National Vice President. Mr. Frederick did not thereafter further contact Chief Dixon.

6. Thomas D. Carpenter, Chief, Personnel Services, VA Hospital, Lexington, Kentucky, and Respondent's Chief Negotiator, testified that he had repeatedly and categorically refused to place the schedule into the contract because the schedule was a non-negotiable item. Mr. Carpenter testified that Article VIII, Section 3, represented merely the negotiation of the mechanics of how shifts would be rotated, the length of the shift rotation, etc.; but not the shifts themselves. Mr. Carpenter further testified that night shift differential, pursuant to pay regulations, shall continue when an employee is temporarily assigned to another tour of duty; and that employees who work relief shifts for officers on scheduled, or planned, leave do not work double shifts, i.e., they work the relief shift, not their regular shift.

7. Approximately two weeks prior to the hearing (late August or early September, 1977) the parties agreed on a renegotiated version of Article VIII (Comp. Exh. 1-A) which, as modified, substituted revised language for Sections 3 and 5 and added a new Section 8. The revised Sections of Article VIII now provide as follows:

"Section 3. At shift changeover, rotation will be to the next consecutive shift on the schedule now in effect and from the last shift on the schedule to the first shift on the schedule. However, when the officers are rotated to the Monday - Friday, 7 to 3 shift, they will rotate for one shift change (two months) to the other Division. This assignment is for reorientation purposes and for the purpose of this Agreement will be referred to as the reorientation shift. At the completion of the two months assignment to the reorientation shift, the officer will return to the Division from which he was assigned before the shift change and will be assigned to the next shift on the schedule.

"Section 5. Shift change will be every two (2) months.

"Section 8. It is understood that the Hospital has the right and responsibility to assign and/or reassign police officers to either Division." (Comp. Exh. 1-A).

CONCLUSIONS

There is no dispute that prior to January 25, 1977, the day shift had provided relief for officers on scheduled, or planned, leave and that on January 25, 1977, this responsibility was changed to the midnight shift. Complainant's contention that practice, i.e. that the day shift provide such relief, was contractually agreed to and/or that the January 25, 1977, change constituted a change of Article VIII, Section 3, of the parties negotiated agreement signed on January 3, 1977, is not supported by the literal language of the Agreement. The phrase relied upon by Complainant, "schedule now in effect", has no meaning standing alone and when read in context, this portion of Section 3 plainly states:

"At shift changeover, rotation will be to the next consecutive shift on the schedule now in effect and from the last shift on the schedule to the first shift on the schedule for the other Division." (Jt. Exh. 1, p. 7) (Emphasis supplied.)

Detail of an officer for relief of an officer on scheduled, or planned, leave is not a "shift changeover" or a "rotation" within the meaning of Article VIII, Section 3. To be sure Joint Exhibit 2 was the schedule in effect when Article VIII, Section 3 was agreed to on December 3, 1976, and on January 3, 1977, when the complete Agreement was signed; but Joint Exhibit 2, on which designation of the day shift as "Relief for planned leave" appears, was never made part of the negotiated agreement and, as noted above, Section 3 of the negotiated agreement merely provided that "At shift changeover, rotation will be to the next consecutive shift on the schedule now in effect. ..." Accordingly, the January 25, 1977, change in responsibility for providing relief for planned leave from the day shift to the midnight shift was not a change of the parties negotiated agreement. That is, both before and after January 25, 1977, at shift changeover, rotation was to the next consecutive shift on the schedule in effect on December 3, 1976. Not only is this consistent with the language of Article VIII, Section 3, but is fully supported by the testimony of Respondent's Chief Negotiator, Mr. Carpenter. Moreover, the revision of Article VIII, renegotiated in August-September, 1977, wholly affirms Respondent's position.

At the most, the gravamen of the complaint was that Respondent violated the parties' negotiated agreement by changing "the schedule now in effect" by making the midnight shift responsible for relief of officers on planned leave, rather than the day shift, which, at best, concerned differing and arguable interpretations of such agreement, as distinguished from action which would constitute a clear, unilateral breach of the agreement, and was not a violation of the Order. Department of Army, Watervliet Arsenal, Watervliet, New York, A/SLMR No. 624, 6 A/SLMR 127 (1976); Aerospace Guidance and Metrology Center, Newark Air Force Station, Newark, Ohio, A/SLMR No. 677, 6 A/SLMR 361 (1976); Puget Sound Naval Shipyard, U.S. Department of the Navy, A/SLMR No. 829 (1977). As Judge Kramer, so well stated, in Puget Sound Naval Shipyard, supra,

"We need not decide whether it [Respondent] was wrong. Even assuming it was wrong, not every breach of contract is an unfair labor practice. Under certain circumstances it can be an unfair labor practice. For example, if sufficiently flagrant so that it appears so unreasonable as to cast doubt on the sincerity of the respondent's position, it may rise to the seriousness of a unilateral change in the contract and hence a violation of Section 19(a)(6) of the Executive Order. But as the Assistant Secretary said in Aerospace Guidance and Metrology Center, Newark Air Force Station, A/SLMR No. 677:

'... alleged violations of a negotiated agreement which concern differing and arguable interpretations of such agreement, as distinguished from alleged actions which constitute clear, unilateral breaches of the agreement, are not deemed to be violative of the Order.'

"This case presents just such a disagreement, and hence the disputed conduct ... even if in violation of the agreement, does not constitute a violation of Section 19(a) of the Agreement."

In view of the foregoing, it may be unnecessary to go further; but it seems appropriate, especially as Complainant contends in its Brief, without doubt to avoid the impact of Watervliet, Newark and Puget Sound, supra, that because the agreement had not been approved on January 25, 1977, this case is not governed by a collective bargaining agreement, to note a further and basic fallacy in Complainant's position. As noted above, the negotiated agreement contained no provision which designated the shift responsible for relief for planned leave. The established practice prior to January 25, 1977, was that the day shift was responsible for providing such relief and, on January 25, 1977, this established practice, which through long adherence had become a condition of employment, was changed and responsibility for providing such relief was assigned to the midnight shift; however, the decision was a reserved right of management, pursuant to Sections 11(b) and 12(b) of the Order, as to which Respondent was not obligated to bargain. Alabama National Guard, A/SLMR No. 660, 6 A/SLMR 267 (1976); AFGE Local 1940 and Plum Island Animal Disease Laboratory, Department of Agriculture, Greenport, N.Y., FLRC No. 71A-11 (1971); AFGE, National Joint Council of Food Inspection Locals and Office of the Administrator, Animal and Plant Health Inspection Service, U.S. Department of Agriculture, FLRC No. 73A-36 (Supplemental Decision 1975)(Report No. 73). On January 21, 1977, Respondent advised Complainant's President that, in view of the additional escort duties assigned to the day shift, it would no longer be possible for the day shift to provide relief for planned leave; and that Respondent intended to assign this responsibility to the midnight shift. Complainant, with ample opportunity to negotiate with respect to the impact and implementation of this decision, failed to do so and Respondent did not refuse to consult, confer, or negotiate in violation of Section 19(a)(6) of the Order by issuing its memorandum of January 25, 1977, pursuant to the notice and discussion of January 21, 1977, making the midnight shift responsible for providing relief for planned leave. Indeed, Complainant made it clear in its complaint, as well as in its discussion with Respondent on January 21, 1977, that it did not seek to negotiate on impact or implementation.

Since the Complainant failed to prove a violation of Section 19(a)(1) or (6) of Executive Order 11491, as amended, the complaint should be dismissed.

RECOMMENDATION

The complaint should be dismissed.

UNITED STATES DEPARTMENT OF LABOR
ASSISTANT SECRETARY FOR LABOR-MANAGEMENT RELATIONS
SUMMARY OF SUPPLEMENTAL DECISION AND ORDER
OF THE ASSISTANT SECRETARY
PURSUANT TO SECTION 6 OF EXECUTIVE ORDER 11491, AS AMENDED

INTERNAL REVENUE SERVICE, OGDEN SERVICE CENTER, AND INTERNAL REVENUE SERVICE, et al.
A/SLMR No. 1052

On March 1, 1977, the Assistant Secretary issued his Decision and Order in A/SLMR No. 806, in which he found, among other things, that the Respondents violated Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order by unilaterally terminating certain portions of the parties' expired negotiated agreement, characterized by the Respondents as "institutional benefits." The Assistant Secretary concluded, in this connection, that only those rights and privileges which are based solely on the existence of a written agreement, in effect, terminated with the expiration of the negotiated agreement, while other rights and privileges continued in effect until such time as they were modified or terminated pursuant to negotiations or were changed after a good faith bargaining impasse has been reached.

On March 17, 1978, the Federal Labor Relations Council (Council) issued its consolidated Decision on Appeals rejecting the Assistant Secretary's standard, as noted above, and remanding the case to the Assistant Secretary for action consistent with its decision. The Council held that, upon the expiration of a negotiated agreement, existing personnel policies and practices and matters affecting working conditions within the meaning of Section 11(a) of the Order, whether or not included in a negotiated agreement, continue as established, absent an express agreement by the parties that such personnel policies and practices and matters affecting working conditions terminate upon the expiration of the agreement, or unless otherwise modified in a manner consistent with the Order. The Council noted, in this connection, that only those matters contained in a negotiated agreement which are excepted by Section 11(b) of the Order from the obligation to negotiate may be unilaterally changed by agency management, and that agency regulations issued during an agreement's term become effective upon the agreement's expiration. However, the Council concluded that prior to changing negotiable matters upon which the parties' reached impasse during negotiation of an agreement, adequate notice must be provided by the party desiring to make changes to afford the other party a reasonable period in which to invoke the processes of the Federal Service Impasses Panel, and, if such processes are timely invoked, the parties are required to adhere to the established personnel policies and practices and matters affecting working conditions to the maximum extent possible.

Applying the principles enunciated by the Council to the circumstances of the instant case, the Assistant Secretary found that a contrary result to that reached in A/SLMR No. 806 was not warranted with respect to those matters unilaterally terminated by the Respondents within the ambit of Section 11(a) of the Order. Thus, the Assistant Secretary concluded that the Respondents unilaterally changed certain existing personnel policies and practices and matters affecting working conditions within the meaning of Section 11(a) of the Order without providing adequate notice to the Complainants so as to afford them a reasonable opportunity to invoke the processes of the Federal Service Impasses Panel. Nor was any evidence submitted that an agency regulation had been issued which mandated the termination of Section 11(a) matters upon the expiration of the negotiated agreement. Under these circumstances, the Assistant Secretary found that the Respondents violated Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order.

Accordingly, the Assistant Secretary modified his order in A/SLMR No. 806 consistent with the principles enunciated by the Council.

SUPPLEMENTAL DECISION AND ORDER

On September 3, 1976, Associate Chief Administrative Law Judge Francis E. Dowd issued his Recommended Decision and Order in the above-entitled proceeding, finding, among other things, that the Respondents had not violated Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order. In this regard, the Administrative Law Judge found insufficient evidence to establish that by a memorandum issued on May 29, 1975, by the agency head the Respondents unilaterally changed terms and conditions of employment in derogation of their duty to bargain in good faith.

On March 1, 1977, the Assistant Secretary issued his Decision and Order in A/SLMR No. 806, finding, contrary to the Administrative Law Judge, that the Respondents conduct violated Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order by unilaterally terminating those portions of the parties' expired negotiated agreement characterized by the Respondents as "institutional benefits." Thus, in the Assistant Secretary's view, only those rights and privileges based solely on the existence of a written agreement, in effect, terminated upon the expiration of the negotiated agreement. All other rights and privileges accorded to the exclusive representatives continued in effect until such time as they were modified or eliminated pursuant to negotiations or changed after a good faith bargaining impasse had been reached.

On March 17, 1978, the Federal Labor Relations Council (Council) issued its consolidated Decision On Appeals remanding the subject case to the Assistant Secretary for action consistent with its decision. In the Council's view, upon the expiration of a negotiated agreement, existing personnel policies and practices and matters affecting working conditions within the meaning of Section 11(a) of the Order, whether or not included in a negotiated agreement, continue as established, absent an express agreement by the parties that such personnel policies and practices and matters affecting working conditions terminate upon the expiration of that agreement or unless otherwise modified in a manner consistent with the Order. The Council noted, in this connection, that agency management retains the right, upon the expiration of a negotiated agreement, to unilaterally change those matters contained therein which are excepted from the obligation to negotiate by Section 11(b) of the Order. Similarly, those agency regulations issued during the term of a negotiated agreement which were not operative with respect to the bargaining unit during such term become effective, as mandated by Section 12(a) of the Order, upon the expiration of the agreement. The Council also found that where the parties are renegotiating a comprehensive collective bargaining agreement and reach impasse, changes may not be effected upon the expiration of their prior agreement unless adequate notice is provided prior to the implementation of such otherwise negotiable changes in personnel policies and practices and matters affecting working conditions, to afford the other party a reasonable period in which to invoke the processes of the Federal Service Impasses Panel (Panel). Such changes must not exceed the scope of the proposals advanced during prior negotiations. If the Panel's processes are invoked within a reasonable period of time of such notice, the parties must adhere to the established personnel policies and practices and matters affecting working conditions, including those contained in the expired agreement, to the maximum extent possible.

Applying the principles enunciated by the Council to the instant case, I find that a contrary result to that reached in A/SLMR No. 806 is not warranted with regard to those matters unilaterally terminated by the Respondents after the expiration of the parties' negotiated agreement which were mandatory subjects of bargaining within the ambit of Section 11(a) of the Order. Thus, the evidence herein establishes that the Respondents unilaterally changed certain existing personnel policies and matters affecting working conditions within the meaning of Section 11(a) of the Order -- e.g. posting privileges -- without providing the Complainants with adequate notification so as to afford them a reasonable opportunity to invoke the processes of the Panel. Nor is there any evidence that an agency regulation had been issued during the term of the parties' prior negotiated agreement mandating the Respondents' termination of Section 11(a) matters upon the expiration of such agreement. Under these circumstances, I find that the Respondents violated Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order. In connection with this finding, I shall modify the order in A/SLMR No. 806 consistent with the principles enunciated by the Council.

DECISION ON APPEALS FROM
ASSISTANT SECRETARY DECISIONS

Background of Cases

These appeals arose from two separate decisions of the Assistant Secretary involving unfair labor practice complaints filed by the National Treasury Employees Union (the union) on behalf of itself and certain of its chapters

This Notice must remain posted for 60 consecutive days from the date of posting, and must not be altered, defaced, or covered by any other material.

If employees have any question concerning this Notice or compliance with any of its provisions, they may communicate directly with the Regional Administrator for Labor-Management Services, Labor-Management Services Administration, United States Department of Labor whose address is: 14120 Gateway Bldg., 3535 Market St., Philadelphia, Pennsylvania 19104.

alleging violations of section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order by the Internal Revenue Service (the agency) and certain of its activities.^{1/} Inasmuch as both appeals arise out of the same basic circumstances and factual background, involve the same agency and national labor organization, and present the same major policy issue, the Council here consolidates them for decision on the merits.

The pertinent factual background of these cases, as found by the Assistant Secretary, is as follows: The agency and the union were parties to a multi-center collective bargaining agreement (MCA) covering the employees at the activities involved herein. The MCA was due to expire on April 12, 1975. During the course of negotiations for a new MCA, the parties twice extended the expiration date of the agreement. On April 24, 1975, the parties executed a memorandum of agreement providing that the MCA would remain in effect until negotiations were completed or the union invoked the impasse procedures provided in the Order, and that the MCA would terminate five days after receipt by either party of notice of termination. On May 27, 1975, the union notified the agency that it was declaring an impasse, and would file its appeal with the Federal Service Impasses Panel (Panel) on June 2, 1975. By letter dated May 28, 1975, the agency wrote the union that, while it would honor the union's "unilateral decision and right to terminate the agreement and thus give up the institutional benefits contained therein . . . , other benefits in the agreement . . . accrue to individual employees. We wish to advise you that it is our intent to continue these benefits to employees intact." The agency's letter included a detailed list indicating which provisions of the MCA would continue in effect and which ones would not. The next day (May 29), the agency head sent a memorandum to all employees which included the same list terminating certain provisions of the MCA and continuing others described as "applicable to you as an employee" [Emphasis in original.] This memorandum was issued to the employees without notice to or discussion with the union, and the agency subsequently refused to negotiate with the union over the agency's changes in personnel policies and practices and matters affecting working conditions contained in the memorandum.^{2/}

^{1/} Section 19(a) of the Order provides, in pertinent part:

Sec. 19. Unfair labor practices. (a) Agency management shall not--

(1) interfere with, restrain, or coerce an employee in the exercise of the rights assured by this Order;

(6) refuse to consult, confer, or negotiate with a labor organization as required by this Order.

^{2/} On July 18, 1975, the parties signed a new multi-center agreement, effective October 18, 1975, and agreed to reinstate the previous MCA pending the effective date of the new agreement.

In A/SLMR No. 806 (FLRC No. 77A-40), the union filed a complaint on behalf of itself and 11 of its chapters alleging, in pertinent part, that the agency and 11 of its activities violated section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order by virtue of their elimination of certain portions of the MCA upon its expiration. The agency contended that it eliminated only those portions of the MCA which were "institutional benefits"; i.e., those benefits which, in the agency's view, pertained to the exclusive representative's rights as an organization and therefore terminated with the agreement's expiration. The union asserted that such rights, once negotiated, became personnel policies and practices and other matters affecting working conditions, and, therefore, any unilateral changes with respect to such matters violated the Order. With respect to this complaint, the Assistant Secretary found:

[T]he unilateral elimination of those agreement provisions characterized by the [agency] as "institutional benefits" accruing to the union qua union was violative of Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order. Thus, in my view, only those rights and privileges which are based solely on the existence of a written agreement -- e.g., checkoff privileges -- in effect, terminated with the expiration of a negotiated agreement. On the other hand, other rights and privileges accorded to exclusive representatives continue in effect until such time as they are modified or eliminated pursuant to negotiations or changed after a good faith bargaining impasse has been reached. [Footnotes omitted.]

Under these circumstances, the Assistant Secretary, citing his decision in U.S. Army Corps of Engineers, Philadelphia District,^{3/} found that the

^{3/} In U.S. Army Corps of Engineers, Philadelphia District, A/SLMR No. 673 (June 23, 1976), the Assistant Secretary stated that it has been established that agency management violates its obligation to meet and confer under the Order when it unilaterally changes those terms and conditions of employment which are included within the scope of section 11(a) of the Order. He further determined that, after bargaining to an impasse, agency management does not violate the Order by unilaterally imposing changes in terms and conditions of employment which do not exceed the scope of its proposals made in the prior negotiations, so long as appropriate notice is given to the exclusive representative as to when the changes are to become effective in order to give the exclusive representative ample opportunity to invoke the services of the Panel before the changes are implemented. The Assistant Secretary concluded that the framers of the Order intended to give parties discretion with respect to seeking the Panel's services under section 17. He went on to state that if a party involved in an impasse requested the services of the Panel, it would effectuate the purposes of the Order to require the parties, in the absence of an overriding exigency, to maintain the status quo and permit the processes of the Panel to run their course before the unilateral change in terms and conditions of employment could be effectuated.

activities' "unilateral elimination of other agreement provisions related to the [union's] rights, such as posting privileges, etc., constituted an improper unilateral change in personnel policies and practices in violation of section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order." [Footnotes omitted.]^{4/}

In A/SLMR No. 859 (FLRC No. 77A-92), the union filed a complaint on behalf of itself and its chapter representing employees at the Brookhaven Service Center which alleged, in pertinent part, that the agency violated section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order by unilaterally altering the negotiated grievance procedure after the MCA had expired by eliminating the arbitration provision of such negotiated agreement, and by refusing to process grievances filed thereafter pursuant to the agency grievance procedure. The elimination of the arbitration provision was among the changes contained in the aforementioned memorandum sent to all employees by the agency head which set forth the list of provisions in the MCA that would continue in effect and the ones that would not.

The Assistant Secretary, again citing his decision in U.S. Army Corps of Engineers, Philadelphia District, supra, found that the agency violated section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order by unilaterally excluding arbitration from the negotiated grievance procedure following the expiration of the parties' negotiated agreement. In this regard, the Assistant Secretary stated:

Thus, it has been found previously in Internal Revenue Service, Ogden Service Center, and Internal Revenue Service, et al., A/SLMR No. 806, that, ". . . only those rights and privileges which are based solely on the existence of a written agreement -- e.g., checkoff privileges -- in effect, terminated with the

The union appealed to the Council. The Council, in denying review of the appeal [FLRC No. 76A-94 (Feb. 25, 1977), Report No. 122], did not pass upon the Assistant Secretary's statement concerning the obligation of the parties involved in an impasse to maintain the status quo (absent an overriding exigency) once the services of the Panel have been requested and to avoid effectuating any unilateral changes in terms and conditions of employment until the Panel's processes have run their course. The Council noted that such statement, which had been included in the Assistant Secretary's decision merely as dictum, had not been appealed to the Council and therefore, apart from other considerations, was not properly before the Council for review.

^{4/} The union's complaint had also alleged that the agency and activities had violated section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order by attempting to deal directly with unit employees by means of the memorandum issued to them by the agency head. However, as a grievance over the memorandum had been filed previously at one of the activities, the Assistant Secretary

expiration of a negotiated agreement." In my view, arbitration is not one of those rights or privileges uniquely tied to a written agreement which terminates upon the expiration of a Federal sector negotiated agreement. Rather, I find that arbitration, once agreed upon by the parties as the final step for the settling of disputes arising under a negotiated agreement, continues thereafter as a term and condition of employment, unless the parties have expressly agreed that it terminates with the expiration of such negotiated agreement.^{5/}

The agency, on behalf of itself and its activities, appealed the Assistant Secretary's decision in each case to the Council. Upon consideration of the petitions for review, and the oppositions filed thereto, the Council determined that both decisions of the Assistant Secretary present the same major policy issue concerning "the rights and obligations of the parties with respect to the maintenance and/or modification of existing personnel policies and practices and matters affecting working conditions upon the expiration or termination of an agreement." The Council also determined that the agency's request for a stay in each case met the criteria for granting stays as set forth in section 2411.47(e)(2) of the Council's rules and granted the requests.

In both cases, the agency and the union filed briefs on the merits with the Council as provided for in section 2411.16 of the Council's rules.^{6/} The Department of the Interior filed an amicus curiae brief in FLRC No. 77A-40, as provided in section 2411.49 of the Council's rules.

determined that section 19(d) of the Order precluded his passing upon that aspect of the complaint. The union's petition for review of this portion of the Assistant Secretary's decision was denied by the Council. Internal Revenue Service, Ogden Service Center, et al., A/SLMR No. 806, FLRC No. 77A-40 (Aug. 12, 1977), Report No. 133.

This is not to say that an activity may not unilaterally change a term or condition of employment if such change does not exceed the scope of its proposals made in prior negotiations, and if such change is made after the activity has bargained to impasse in good faith, and where the matter involved has not been submitted to the Federal Service Impasses Panel pursuant to Section 17 of the Order. See U.S. Army Corps of Engineers, Philadelphia District, cited above.

^{6/} The union requested oral argument in both cases here consolidated for decision, and the agency requested oral argument in FLRC No. 77A-92. Pursuant to section 2411.48 of the Council's rules, the requests are denied because the positions of the participants in these cases are adequately reflected in the entire record now before the Council.

The major policy issue presented in this case concerns the rights and obligations of the parties with respect to the maintenance and/or modification of existing personnel policies and practices and matters affecting working conditions upon the expiration or termination of an agreement. The standard enunciated by the Assistant Secretary for determining which provisions of an agreement terminate and which provisions continue in effect upon the expiration of an agreement, as noted above, is that only those rights and privileges which are based solely on the existence of a written agreement terminate with the expiration of the agreement, whereas other rights and privileges accorded to an exclusive representative continue in effect until such time as they are modified or eliminated pursuant to negotiations or changed after a good faith bargaining impasse has been reached. Thus, as previously indicated, the Assistant Secretary concluded that, under his standard, for example, negotiated provisions calling for the arbitration of grievances and posting privileges would survive the expiration of the agreement while checkoff privileges would not. For the reasons stated below, we find this standard to be inconsistent with the purposes of the Order.

Section 11(a) of the Order provides that an "agency and a labor organization that has been accorded exclusive recognition . . . shall meet at reasonable times and confer in good faith with respect to personnel policies and practices and matters affecting working conditions" In addition to the obligation to negotiate concerning personnel policies and practices and matters affecting working conditions, section 11(a) comprehends the obligation of the parties to give effect to the terms of their collective bargaining agreement throughout the duration of that agreement.^{7/} Thus, an agency may not breach its obligation owed to an exclusive representative, as set forth in section 11(a) of the Order, by changing personnel policies and practices and matters affecting working conditions contained in the agreement during the term of that agreement.^{8/}

With respect to established personnel policies and practices and matters affecting working conditions which are not specifically provided for in the parties' agreement, the Council stated in its 1975 Report and Recommendations accompanying the issuance of Executive Order 11838:^{9/}

[T]he question is raised as to whether the Order requires . . . that a party must meet its obligation to negotiate prior to making changes in established personnel policies and practices and matters affecting working conditions during the term of an agreement.

7/ See, e.g., Department of the Air Force, Base Procurement Office, Vandenberg Air Force Base, California, A/SLMR No. 485, FLRC No. 75A-25 (Nov. 19, 1976), Report No. 118, at 8 of the Council's decision.

The Assistant Secretary, when faced with this issue in a case, concluded that the Order does require adequate notice and an opportunity to negotiate prior to changing established personnel policies and practices and matters affecting working conditions during the term of an existing agreement unless the issues thus raised are controlled by current contractual commitments, or a clear and unmistakable waiver is present. We believe that the Assistant Secretary's conclusion on this matter is correct

That is, a party may not unilaterally change established personnel policies and practices and matters affecting working conditions not specifically provided for in the agreement without first fulfilling its obligation to negotiate -- i.e., without first providing notice to the other party of the proposed change and, upon that party's request, negotiating over such proposal. Thus, it is clear that the obligation to negotiate, as set forth in section 11(a) of the Order, requires both parties during the term of an agreement to maintain established personnel policies and practices and matters affecting working conditions, whether or not such terms are incorporated in such agreement, unless and until they are modified in a manner consistent with the Order.

As stated above, the question presented in this case concerns the rights and obligations of the parties with respect to the maintenance and/or modification of existing personnel policies and practices and matters affecting working conditions upon the expiration or termination of an agreement. In our view, existing personnel policies and practices and matters affecting working conditions, whether or not they are included in a negotiated agreement, continue as established upon the expiration of a negotiated agreement, absent an express agreement by the parties that such personnel policies and practices and matters affecting working conditions terminate upon the expiration of that agreement or unless otherwise modified in a manner consistent with the Order.

Such conclusion implements the recognized policy of the Order to foster stability in the Federal labor-management relations program.^{10/} Further, it is consistent with the established framework of the Order which constricts unilateral changes in current personnel policies and practices and matters affecting working conditions and which provides for the peaceful resolution of bargaining disputes. Finally, our conclusion as to the continuation of established personnel policies and practices and matters affecting working conditions may be readily applied by the parties and facilitates "the maintenance of constructive and cooperative relationships between labor organizations and management officials," which is an underlying objective of the Order.^{11/}

In the Council's view, the standard applied by the Assistant Secretary under which "those rights and privileges . . . based solely on the existence of a written agreement . . . [are] terminated with the expiration of a negotiated agreement" is inconsistent with the purposes and policies of the Order. Thus, the application of this standard would reduce desired stability in that certain personnel policies and practices and matters affecting working conditions previously established by the parties' agreement would automatically terminate upon its expiration. In addition, this standard is unclear as to which personnel policies and practices and matters affecting working conditions "are based solely on the existence of a written agreement" and which are not, and such uncertainty would be potentially disruptive of the relationships between the parties. In the latter regard, as noted above,^{12/} the Assistant Secretary found, for example, that negotiated provisions calling for the arbitration of grievances and posting privileges were not dependent upon the existence of a written agreement and therefore would survive the expiration of an agreement, whereas a provision for dues checkoff was dependent upon the existence of such an agreement and therefore would not survive.

Thus, to repeat, the Order in our opinion requires that existing personnel policies and practices and matters affecting working conditions, whether or not they are included in a negotiated agreement, must continue as established upon the expiration of a negotiated agreement, absent an express agreement by the parties that such personnel policies and practices and matters affecting working conditions terminate upon the expiration of that agreement or unless otherwise modified in a manner consistent with the Order.^{13/}

^{13/} This requirement includes dues withholding, which clearly falls within the scope of bargaining under section 11(a) of the Order. Section 21 of the Order provides in pertinent part that allotments of dues terminate when "the dues withholding agreement between the agency and the labor organization is terminated . . ." [Emphasis added.] In the Council's opinion, the language of section 21 requires an affirmative act by one or both parties to the agreement in order to effect cancellation of the dues withholding agreement. That is, the occurrence of the expiration date of a negotiated agreement which contains a dues withholding agreement does not, in and of itself, result in termination of dues withholding. As with other personnel policies and practices and matters affecting working

Of course, just as in the situation where no collective bargaining agreement has previously existed, agency management, upon the expiration of a negotiated agreement, retains the right to unilaterally change provisions contained therein relating to "permissive" subjects of bargaining, i.e., those matters which are excepted from the obligation to negotiate by section 11(b) of the Order,^{14/} and either party may change matters which are outside the scope of such obligation under section 11(a) of the Order. Consequently, absent the parties' agreement to the contrary, the parties are not obligated to maintain those matters upon the expiration of their agreement.^{15/} Similarly, those agency regulations issued during the term of an agreement and which were not operative with respect to the bargaining unit during such term become conditions, dues withholding provisions in expired negotiated agreements continue in effect and cannot be unilaterally changed except as consistent with the bargaining obligation under section 11(a) of the Order. Thus, for example, if the parties during negotiations wish to provide clearly and specifically in their collective bargaining agreement that dues withholding will terminate upon the expiration of the agreement, without the necessity of an affirmative act by the parties, such a provision would constitute a valid waiver of the parties' rights and would operate to terminate dues withholding upon the agreement's expiration. Cf. Labor-Management Relations in the Federal Service (1975), at 49-50, and Defense Supply Agency, Defense Property Disposal Office, Aberdeen Proving Ground, Aberdeen, Maryland, A/SLMR No. 360, 3 FLRC 787, 804-806 [FLRC No. 74A-22 (Dec. 9, 1975), Report No. 88].

[T]he obligation to meet and confer does not include matters with respect to the mission of an agency; its budget; its organization; the number of employees; and the numbers, types, and grades of positions or employees assigned to an organizational unit, work project or tour of duty; the technology of performing its work; or its internal security practices. . . .

In this regard, the Council has held that a proposal advanced during negotiations for a new agreement is excepted from the obligation to bargain by section 11(b) regardless of the fact that the proposal has been contained in prior agreements between the parties. See International Association of Machinists and Aerospace Workers, Local Lodge 1859 and Marine Corps Air Station and Naval Air Rework Facility, Cherry Point, North Carolina, FLRC No. 77A-28 (Feb. 28, 1978), Report No. 145 at note 2.

effective upon the expiration of that agreement.^{16/} Such a result is mandated by section 12(a) of the Order, which, as explained in the Report accompanying the Order, requires that "an agreement must be brought into conformance with current agency policies and regulations at the time it is renegotiated or before it is extended, except where specific exceptions are granted or renewed."^{17/}

Also--just as in the situation where the parties are for the first time negotiating a comprehensive collective bargaining agreement and where upon impasse in those negotiations a party wishes to change otherwise negotiable personnel policies and practices and matters affecting working conditions-- a party to the renegotiation of an agreement may not effect such changes unless it provides the other party with sufficient notice of its intent to implement the changes (which cannot exceed the scope of the proposals advanced by that party during prior negotiations) so that the other party is afforded a reasonable opportunity under the circumstances to invoke the processes of the Federal Service Impasses Panel. If the processes of the Panel are not invoked within a reasonable time of such notification, the Council finds, in agreement with the Assistant Secretary, that it is consistent with the Order for the party seeking to implement the changes to effect those changes. However, once the Panel's processes are invoked within a reasonable time of such notification, we further find, in substantial agreement with the Assistant Secretary, that the parties must adhere to established personnel policies and practices and matters affecting working conditions, including those contained in the expired agreement, to the maximum extent possible.^{18/}

16/ Section 12(a) of the Order provides:

Basic provisions of agreements. Each agreement between an agency and a labor organization is subject to the following requirements--

(a) in the administration of all matters covered by the agreement, officials and employees are governed by existing or future laws and the regulations of appropriate authorities, including policies set forth in the Federal Personnel Manual; by published agency policies and regulations in existence at the time the agreement was approved; and by subsequently published agency policies and regulations required by law or by the regulations of appropriate authorities, or authorized by the terms of a controlling agreement at a higher agency level[.]

17/ Labor-Management Relations in the Federal Service (1975), at 72.

18/ See Department of the Interior, Bureau of Reclamation, Yuma Projects Office, Yuma, Arizona, supra n. 10, at 12 of the decision, in which the phrase "to the maximum extent possible" was indicated to encompass changes consistent with the necessary functioning of the agency.

The above requirements afford a party the opportunity to invoke the impasse resolution machinery of the Order^{19/} and at the same time effectuate the policy of the Order to foster stability in the Federal labor-management relations program. Thus, in our view, it is consistent with the purposes and policies of the Order to require the parties to maintain the status quo to the maximum extent possible once the Panel's processes have been invoked in order to permit the Panel to decide whether to require further negotiations or to exercise jurisdiction over the dispute and, in the 20/ latter event, to take the action deemed necessary to settle the dispute. In this regard, as the Council has previously noted, the impasse resolution machinery of the Panel established by the Order was intended to be (and has operated as) one aspect of the bargaining process.^{21/}

Thus, to summarize the principles discussed herein: Upon the expiration of a negotiated agreement, existing personnel policies and practices and matters affecting working conditions, whether or not they are included in a negotiated agreement, continue as established, absent an express agreement by the parties that such personnel policies and practices and matters affecting working conditions terminate upon the expiration of that agreement or unless otherwise modified in a manner consistent with the Order. However, agency management retains the right upon the expiration of a negotiated agreement to unilaterally change provisions

19/ Sections 16 and 17 of the Order provide:

Sec. 16. Negotiation disputes. The Federal Mediation and Conciliation Service shall provide services and assistance to Federal agencies and labor organizations in the resolution of negotiation disputes. The Service shall determine under what circumstances and in what manner it shall proffer its services.

Sec. 17. Negotiation impasses. When voluntary arrangements, including the services of the Federal Mediation and Conciliation Service or other third-party mediation, fail to resolve a negotiation impasse, either party may request the Federal Service Impasses Panel to consider the matter. The Panel, in its discretion and under the regulations it prescribes, may consider the matter and may recommend procedures to the parties for the resolution of the impasse or may settle the impasse by appropriate action. Arbitration or third-party fact finding with recommendations to assist in the resolution of an impasse may be used by the parties only when authorized or directed by the Panel.

contained therein relating to "permissive" subjects of bargaining, i.e., those matters which are excepted from the obligation to negotiate by section 11(b) of the Order, and either party may change matters which are outside the scope of such obligation under section 11(a) of the Order. Similarly, those agency regulations issued during the term of a negotiated agreement which were not operative with respect to the bargaining unit during such term become effective, as mandated by section 12(a) of the Order, upon the expiration of that agreement. Also, where (as here) the parties are renegotiating a comprehensive collective bargaining agreement and reach impasse, a party may not effect changes in otherwise negotiable personnel policies and practices and matters affecting working conditions without first providing the other party with sufficient notice of its intent to implement the changes (which changes cannot exceed the scope of the proposals advanced during prior negotiations by the party seeking to implement the changes) so that the other party is afforded a reasonable opportunity under the circumstances to invoke the processes of the Panel. If the Panel's processes are not invoked within a reasonable time of such notification, the party seeking to implement the changes may effect those changes. However, once the Panel's processes are invoked within a reasonable time of such notification, the parties must adhere to established personnel policies and practices and matters affecting working conditions, including those contained in the expired agreement, to the maximum extent possible -- i.e., to the extent consistent with the necessary functioning of the agency.

Accordingly, as the Assistant Secretary's decisions in A/SLMR No. 806 and A/SLMR No. 859 are based on a standard which the Council has found to be inconsistent with the purposes of the Order, the Council will remand the cases to him for action consistent with the principles set forth herein.

Conclusion

For the foregoing reasons, we find that the Assistant Secretary's decision and order in each of the above-entitled cases is inconsistent with the purposes of the Order. Accordingly, pursuant to section 2411.18(b) of the Council's rules of procedure, we remand the cases to him for action consistent with our decision herein.

By the Council.

UNITED STATES DEPARTMENT OF LABOR
 ASSISTANT SECRETARY FOR LABOR-MANAGEMENT RELATIONS
 SUMMARY OF SUPPLEMENTAL DECISION AND ORDER
 OF THE ASSISTANT SECRETARY
 PURSUANT TO SECTION 6 OF EXECUTIVE ORDER 11491, AS AMENDED.

DEPARTMENT OF THE TREASURY,
 INTERNAL REVENUE SERVICE,
 BROOKHAVEN SERVICE CENTER
 A/SLMR No. 1053

On June 29, 1977, the Assistant Secretary issued his Decision and Order in A/SLMR No. 859, in which he found, among other things, that the Respondent violated Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order by unilaterally excluding arbitration, which the Respondent characterized as an "institutional benefit," from the negotiated grievance procedure following the expiration of the parties' negotiated agreement. In this regard, the Assistant Secretary, applying the rationale enunciated previously in Internal Revenue Service, Ogden Service Center and Internal Revenue Service, et al., A/SLMR No. 806 (1977), concluded that arbitration was not one of those rights and privileges which are based solely on the existence of a written agreement that, in effect, terminate upon the expiration of a negotiated agreement.

On March 17, 1978, the Federal Labor Relations Council (Council) issued its consolidated Decision on Appeals rejecting the Assistant Secretary's standard, as noted above, and remanding the case to the Assistant Secretary for action consistent with its decision. The Council held that, upon the expiration of a negotiated agreement, existing personnel policies and practices and matters affecting working conditions within the meaning of Section 11(a) of the Order, whether or not included in a negotiated agreement, continue as established, absent an express agreement by the parties that such personnel policies and practices and matters affecting working conditions terminate upon the expiration of the agreement, or unless otherwise modified in a manner consistent with the Order. The Council noted, in this connection, that only those matters contained in a negotiated agreement which are excepted by Section 11(b) of the Order from the obligation to negotiate may be unilaterally changed by agency management, and that agency regulations issued during an agreement's term become effective upon the agreement's expiration. However, the Council concluded that prior to changing negotiable matters upon which the parties reached impasse during negotiation of an agreement, adequate notice must be provided by the party desiring to make changes to afford the other party a reasonable period in which to invoke the processes of the Federal Service Impasses Panel, and if such processes are timely invoked, the parties are required to adhere to the established personnel policies and practices and matters affecting working conditions, to the maximum extent possible.

Applying the principles enunciated by the Council to the circumstances of the instant case, the Assistant Secretary found that a contrary result to that reached in A/SLMR No. 859 was not required. Thus, he concluded that the Respondent's unilateral exclusion of arbitration, which is clearly a mandatory subject of bargaining within the meaning of Section 11(a) of the Order, from the negotiated grievance procedure without providing adequate notice to the Complainant so as to afford it a reasonable opportunity to invoke the processes of the Federal Service Impasses Panel was violative of Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order.

Accordingly, the Assistant Secretary modified his order consistent with the principles enunciated by the Council.

SUPPLEMENTAL DECISION AND ORDER

On November 17, 1976, Administrative Law Judge Garvin Lee Oliver issued his Recommended Decision and Order in the above-entitled proceeding, finding, among other things, that the Respondent violated Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order by unilaterally excluding arbitration from the negotiated grievance procedure following the expiration of the parties' negotiated agreement.

On June 29, 1977, the Assistant Secretary issued his Decision and Order in A/SLMR No. 859, adopting the Administrative Law Judge's conclusion, applying the rationale enunciated previously in Internal Revenue Service, Odgen Service Center, and Internal Revenue Service, et al., A/SLMR No. 806 (1977). In this regard, he found that arbitration was not one of those rights and privileges which are based solely on the existence of a written agreement that terminated upon the expiration of the parties' negotiated agreement.

On March 17, 1978, the Federal Labor Relations Council (Council) issued its consolidated Decision on Appeals remanding the subject case to the Assistant Secretary for action consistent with its decision. In the Council's view, upon the expiration of a negotiated agreement, existing personnel policies and practices and matters affecting working conditions within the meaning of Section 11(a) of the Order, whether or not included in a negotiated agreement, continue as established, absent an express agreement by the parties that such personnel policies and practices and matters affecting working conditions terminate upon the expiration of that agreement or unless otherwise modified in a manner consistent with the Order. The Council noted, in this connection, that agency management retains the right, upon the expiration of a negotiated agreement, to unilaterally change those matters contained therein which are excepted from the obligation to negotiate by Section 11(b) of the Order. Similarly, those agency regulations issued during the term of a negotiated agreement, which were not operative with respect to the bargaining unit during such term, become effective, as mandated by Section 12(a) of the Order, upon the expiration of the agreement. The Council also found that where the parties are renegotiating a comprehensive collective bargaining agreement and reach impasse, changes may not be effected upon expiration of their prior agreement unless adequate notice is provided prior to the implementation of such otherwise negotiable changes in personnel policies and practices and other matters affecting working conditions, so as to afford the other party a reasonable period in which to invoke the processes of the Federal Service Impasses Panel (Panel). Such changes must not exceed the scope of the proposals advanced during prior negotiations. If the Panel's processes are invoked within a reasonable period of time of such notice, the parties must adhere to the established personnel policies and practices and matters affecting working conditions, including those contained in the expired agreement, to the maximum extent possible.

Applying the principles enunciated by the Council to the circumstances of the instant case, I find that a contrary result to that reached in A/SLMR No. 859 is not required. Thus, following the expiration of the parties' negotiated agreement the Respondent herein unilaterally excluded arbitration from the negotiated grievance procedure. Clearly, arbitration is a mandatory subject of bargaining within the ambit of Section 11(a) of the Order. Further, the evidence establishes that the Respondent did not provide the Complainant with sufficient notice of its intent to terminate arbitration so as to afford the Complainant a reasonable opportunity to invoke the processes of the Panel. Nor is there any evidence that an agency regulation had been issued during the term of the parties' prior negotiated agreement mandating the termination of arbitration upon the expiration of such agreement.

Under all of these circumstances, I find that the Respondent's conduct in unilaterally altering the parties' negotiated grievance-arbitration procedure violated Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order. In connection with this finding, I shall modify the order in A/SLMR No. 859 to reflect the violation found herein based on the principles enunciated by the Council.

ORDER

Pursuant to Section 6(b) of Executive Order 11491, as amended, and Section 203.26(b) of the Regulations, the Assistant Secretary of Labor for Labor-Management Relations hereby orders that the Department of the Treasury, Internal Revenue Service, Brookhaven Service Center, shall:

1. Cease and desist from:

(a) Unilaterally changing, after the expiration of a negotiated agreement, the negotiated grievance-arbitration procedure, or any other existing personnel policies and practices and matters affecting working conditions within the ambit of Section 11(a) of the Order, without providing adequate notice to and affording the National Treasury Employees Union, Chapter No. 099, the exclusive representative of its employees, or any other exclusive representative, a reasonable opportunity to invoke the processes of the Federal Service Impasses Panel.

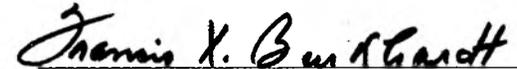

(b) In any like or related manner interfering with, restraining, or coercing its employees in the exercise of rights assured by Executive Order 11491, as amended.

2. Take the following affirmative actions in order to effectuate the purposes and policies of Executive Order 11491, as amended:

(a) Post at the facilities of the Internal Revenue Service, Brookhaven Service Center, copies of the attached notice marked "Appendix" on forms to be furnished by the Assistant Secretary of Labor for Labor-Management Relations. Upon receipt of such forms, they shall be signed by the Director of the Brookhaven Service Center and shall be posted and maintained by him for 60 consecutive days thereafter, in conspicuous places, including all places where notices to employees are customarily posted. The Director of the Brookhaven Service Center shall take reasonable steps to insure that such notices are not altered, defaced, or covered by any other material.

(b) Pursuant to Section 203.27 of the Regulations, notify the Assistant Secretary, in writing, within 30 days from the date of this order as to what steps have been taken to comply herewith.

DECISION ON APPEALS FROM
ASSISTANT SECRETARY DECISIONS

Background of Cases

These appeals arose from two separate decisions of the Assistant Secretary involving unfair labor practice complaints filed by the National Treasury Employees Union (the union) on behalf of itself and certain of its chapters alleging violations of section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order by the Internal Revenue Service (the agency) and certain of its activities.^{1/} Inasmuch as both appeals arise out of the same basic circumstances and factual background, involve the same agency and national labor organization, and present the same major policy issue, the Council here consolidates them for decision on the merits.

The pertinent factual background of these cases, as found by the Assistant Secretary, is as follows: The agency and the union were parties to a multi-center collective bargaining agreement (MCA) covering the employees at the activities involved herein. The MCA was due to expire on April 12, 1975. During the course of negotiations for a new MCA, the parties twice extended the expiration date of the agreement. On April 24, 1975, the parties executed a memorandum of agreement providing that the MCA would remain in effect until negotiations were completed or the union invoked the impasse procedures provided in the Order, and that the MCA would terminate five days after receipt by either party of notice of termination. On May 27, 1975, the union notified the agency that it was declaring an impasse, and would file its appeal with the Federal Service Impasses Panel (Panel) on June 2, 1975. By letter dated May 28, 1975, the agency wrote the union that, while it would honor the union's "unilateral decision and right to terminate the agreement and thus give up the institutional benefits contained therein . . . , other benefits in the agreement . . . accrue to individual employees. We wish to advise you that it is our intent to continue these benefits to employees intact." The agency's letter included a detailed list indicating which provisions of the MCA would continue in effect and which ones would not. The next day (May 29), the agency head sent a memorandum to all employees which included the same list terminating certain provisions of the MCA and continuing others described as "applicable to you as an employee" [Emphasis in original.] This memorandum was issued to the employees without notice to or discussion with the union, and the agency subsequently refused to negotiate with the union over the agency's changes in personnel policies and practices and matters affecting working conditions contained in the memorandum.^{2/}

^{1/} Section 19(a) of the Order provides, in pertinent part:

Sec. 19. Unfair labor practices. (a) Agency management shall not--

(1) interfere with, restrain, or coerce an employee in the exercise of the rights assured by this Order;

(6) refuse to consult, confer, or negotiate with a labor organization as required by this Order.

^{2/} On July 18, 1975, the parties signed a new multi-center agreement, effective October 18, 1975, and agreed to reinstate the previous MCA pending the effective date of the new agreement.

In A/SLMR No. 806 (FLRC No. 77A-40), the union filed a complaint on behalf of itself and 11 of its chapters alleging, in pertinent part, that the agency and 11 of its activities violated section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order by virtue of their elimination of certain portions of the MCA upon its expiration. The agency contended that it eliminated only those portions of the MCA which were "institutional benefits"; i.e., those benefits which, in the agency's view, pertained to the exclusive representative's rights as an organization and therefore terminated with the agreement's expiration. The union asserted that such rights, once negotiated, became personnel policies and practices and other matters affecting working conditions, and, therefore, any unilateral changes with respect to such matters violated the Order. With respect to this complaint, the Assistant Secretary found:

[T]he unilateral elimination of those agreement provisions characterized by the [agency] as "institutional benefits" accruing to the union qua union was violative of Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order. Thus, in my view, only those rights and privileges which are based solely on the existence of a written agreement -- e.g., checkoff privileges -- in effect, terminated with the expiration of a negotiated agreement. On the other hand, other rights and privileges accorded to exclusive representatives continue in effect until such time as they are modified or eliminated pursuant to negotiations or changed after a good faith bargaining impasse has been reached. [Footnotes omitted.]

Under these circumstances, the Assistant Secretary, citing his decision in U.S. Army Corps of Engineers, Philadelphia District,^{3/} found that the

^{3/} In U.S. Army Corps of Engineers, Philadelphia District, A/SLMR No. 673 (June 23, 1976), the Assistant Secretary stated that it has been established that agency management violates its obligation to meet and confer under the Order when it unilaterally changes those terms and conditions of employment which are included within the scope of section 11(a) of the Order. He further determined that, after bargaining to an impasse, agency management does not violate the Order by unilaterally imposing changes in terms and conditions of employment which do not exceed the scope of its proposals made in the prior negotiations, so long as appropriate notice is given to the exclusive representative as to when the changes are to become effective in order to give the exclusive representative ample opportunity to invoke the services of the Panel before the changes are implemented. The Assistant Secretary concluded that the framers of the Order intended to give parties discretion with respect to seeking the Panel's services under section 17. He went on to state that if a party involved in an impasse requested the services of the Panel, it would effectuate the purposes of the Order to require the parties, in the absence of an overriding exigency, to maintain the status quo and permit the processes of the Panel to run their course before the unilateral change in terms and conditions of employment could be effectuated.

activities' "unilateral elimination of other agreement provisions related to the [union's] rights, such as posting privileges, etc., constituted an improper unilateral change in personnel policies and practices in violation of section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order." [Footnotes omitted.]^{4/}

In A/SLMR No. 859 (FLRC No. 77A-92), the union filed a complaint on behalf of itself and its chapter representing employees at the Brookhaven Service Center which alleged, in pertinent part, that the agency violated section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order by unilaterally altering the negotiated grievance procedure after the MCA had expired by eliminating the arbitration provision of such negotiated agreement, and by refusing to process grievances filed thereafter pursuant to the agency grievance procedure. The elimination of the arbitration provision was among the changes contained in the aforementioned memorandum sent to all employees by the agency head which set forth the list of provisions in the MCA that would continue in effect and the ones that would not.

The Assistant Secretary, again citing his decision in U.S. Army Corps of Engineers, Philadelphia District, supra, found that the agency violated section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order by unilaterally excluding arbitration from the negotiated grievance procedure following the expiration of the parties' negotiated agreement. In this regard, the Assistant Secretary stated:

Thus, it has been found previously in Internal Revenue Service, Ogden Service Center, and Internal Revenue Service, et al., A/SLMR No. 806, that, ". . . only those rights and privileges which are based solely on the existence of a written agreement -- e.g., checkoff privileges -- in effect, terminated with the

The union appealed to the Council. The Council, in denying review of the appeal [FLRC No. 76A-94 (Feb. 25, 1977), Report No. 122], did not pass upon the Assistant Secretary's statement concerning the obligation of the parties involved in an impasse to maintain the status quo (absent an overriding exigency) once the services of the Panel have been requested and to avoid effectuating any unilateral changes in terms and conditions of employment until the Panel's processes have run their course. The Council noted that such statement, which had been included in the Assistant Secretary's decision merely as dictum, had not been appealed to the Council and therefore, apart from other considerations, was not properly before the Council for review.

^{4/} The union's complaint had also alleged that the agency and activities had violated section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order by attempting to deal directly with unit employees by means of the memorandum issued to them by the agency head. However, as a grievance over the memorandum had been filed previously at one of the activities, the Assistant Secretary

expiration of a negotiated agreement." In my view, arbitration is not one of those rights or privileges uniquely tied to a written agreement which terminates upon the expiration of a Federal sector negotiated agreement. Rather, I find that arbitration, once agreed upon by the parties as the final step for the settling of disputes arising under a negotiated agreement, continues thereafter as a term and condition of employment, unless the parties have expressly agreed that it terminates with the expiration of such negotiated agreement.^{5/}

The agency, on behalf of itself and its activities, appealed the Assistant Secretary's decision in each case to the Council. Upon consideration of the petitions for review, and the oppositions filed thereto, the Council determined that both decisions of the Assistant Secretary present the same major policy issue concerning "the rights and obligations of the parties with respect to the maintenance and/or modification of existing personnel policies and practices and matters affecting working conditions upon the expiration or termination of an agreement." The Council also determined that the agency's request for a stay in each case met the criteria for granting stays as set forth in section 2411.47(e)(2) of the Council's rules and granted the requests.

In both cases, the agency and the union filed briefs on the merits with the Council as provided for in section 2411.16 of the Council's rules.^{6/} The Department of the Interior filed an amicus curiae brief in FLRC No. 77A-40; as provided in section 2411.49 of the Council's rules.

determined that section 19(d) of the Order precluded his passing upon that aspect of the complaint. The union's petition for review of this portion of the Assistant Secretary's decision was denied by the Council. Internal Revenue Service, Ogden Service Center, et al., A/SLMR No. 806, FLRC No. 77A-40 (Aug. 12, 1977); Report No. 133.

This is not to say that an activity may not unilaterally change a term or condition of employment if such change does not exceed the scope of its proposals made in prior negotiations, and if such change is made after the activity has bargained to impasse in good faith, and where the matter involved has not been submitted to the Federal Service Impasses Panel pursuant to Section 17 of the Order. See U.S. Army Corps of Engineers, Philadelphia District, cited above.

^{6/} The union requested oral argument in both cases here consolidated for decision, and the agency requested oral argument in FLRC No. 77A-92. Pursuant to section 2411.48 of the Council's rules, the requests are denied because the positions of the participants in these cases are adequately reflected in the entire record now before the Council.

The major policy issue presented in this case concerns the rights and obligations of the parties with respect to the maintenance and/or modification of existing personnel policies and practices and matters affecting working conditions upon the expiration or termination of an agreement. The standard enunciated by the Assistant Secretary for determining which provisions of an agreement terminate and which provisions continue in effect upon the expiration of an agreement, as noted above, is that only those rights and privileges which are based solely on the existence of a written agreement terminate with the expiration of the agreement, whereas other rights and privileges accorded to an exclusive representative continue in effect until such time as they are modified or eliminated pursuant to negotiations or changed after a good faith bargaining impasse has been reached. Thus, as previously indicated, the Assistant Secretary concluded that, under his standard, for example, negotiated provisions calling for the arbitration of grievances and posting privileges would survive the expiration of the agreement while checkoff privileges would not. For the reasons stated below, we find this standard to be inconsistent with the purposes of the Order.

Section 11(a) of the Order provides that an "agency and a labor organization that has been accorded exclusive recognition . . . shall meet at reasonable times and confer in good faith with respect to personnel policies and practices and matters affecting working conditions" In addition to the obligation to negotiate concerning personnel policies and practices and matters affecting working conditions, section 11(a) comprehends the obligation of the parties to give effect to the terms of their collective bargaining agreement throughout the duration of that agreement.^{7/} Thus, an agency may not breach its obligation owed to an exclusive representative, as set forth in section 11(a) of the Order, by changing personnel policies and practices and matters affecting working conditions contained in the agreement during the term of that agreement.^{8/}

With respect to established personnel policies and practices and matters affecting working conditions which are not specifically provided for in the parties' agreement, the Council stated in its 1975 Report and Recommendations accompanying the issuance of Executive Order 11838:^{9/}

[T]he question is raised as to whether the Order requires . . . that a party must meet its obligation to negotiate prior to making changes in established personnel policies and practices and matters affecting working conditions during the term of an agreement.

7/ See, e.g., Department of the Air Force, Base Procurement Office, Vandenberg Air Force Base, California, A/SLMR No. 485, FLRC No. 75A-25 (Nov. 19, 1976), Report No. 118, at 8 of the Council's decision.

The Assistant Secretary, when faced with this issue in a case, concluded that the Order does require adequate notice and an opportunity to negotiate prior to changing established personnel policies and practices and matters affecting working conditions during the term of an existing agreement unless the issues thus raised are controlled by current contractual commitments, or a clear and unmistakable waiver is present. We believe that the Assistant Secretary's conclusion on this matter is correct

That is, a party may not unilaterally change established personnel policies and practices and matters affecting working conditions not specifically provided for in the agreement without first fulfilling its obligation to negotiate -- i.e., without first providing notice to the other party of the proposed change and, upon that party's request, negotiating over such proposal. Thus, it is clear that the obligation to negotiate, as set forth in section 11(a) of the Order, requires both parties during the term of an agreement to maintain established personnel policies and practices and matters affecting working conditions, whether or not such terms are incorporated in such agreement, unless and until they are modified in a manner consistent with the Order.

As stated above, the question presented in this case concerns the rights and obligations of the parties with respect to the maintenance and/or modification of existing personnel policies and practices and matters affecting working conditions upon the expiration or termination of an agreement. In our view, existing personnel policies and practices and matters affecting working conditions, whether or not they are included in a negotiated agreement, continue as established upon the expiration of a negotiated agreement, absent an express agreement by the parties that such personnel policies and practices and matters affecting working conditions terminate upon the expiration of that agreement or unless otherwise modified in a manner consistent with the Order.

Such conclusion implements the recognized policy of the Order to foster stability in the Federal labor-management relations program.^{10/} Further, it is consistent with the established framework of the Order which constricts unilateral changes in current personnel policies and practices and matters affecting working conditions and which provides for the peaceful resolution of bargaining disputes. Finally, our conclusion as to the continuation of established personnel policies and practices and matters affecting working conditions may be readily applied by the parties and facilitates "the maintenance of constructive and cooperative relationships between labor organizations and management officials," which is an underlying objective of the Order.^{11/}

In the Council's view, the standard applied by the Assistant Secretary under which "those rights and privileges . . . based solely on the existence of a written agreement . . . [are] terminated with the expiration of a negotiated agreement" is inconsistent with the purposes and policies of the Order. Thus, the application of this standard would reduce desired stability in that certain personnel policies and practices and matters affecting working conditions previously established by the parties' agreement would automatically terminate upon its expiration. In addition, this standard is unclear as to which personnel policies and practices and matters affecting working conditions "are based solely on the existence of a written agreement" and which are not, and such uncertainty would be potentially disruptive of the relationships between the parties. In the latter regard, as noted above,^{12/} the Assistant Secretary found, for example, that negotiated provisions calling for the arbitration of grievances and posting privileges were not dependent upon the existence of a written agreement and therefore would survive the expiration of an agreement, whereas a provision for dues checkoff was dependent upon the existence of such an agreement and therefore would not survive.

Thus, to repeat, the Order in our opinion requires that existing personnel policies and practices and matters affecting working conditions, whether or not they are included in a negotiated agreement, must continue as established upon the expiration of a negotiated agreement, absent an express agreement by the parties that such personnel policies and practices and matters affecting working conditions terminate upon the expiration of that agreement or unless otherwise modified in a manner consistent with the Order.^{13/}

^{12/} Supra at 6.

^{13/} This requirement includes dues withholding, which clearly falls within the scope of bargaining under section 11(a) of the Order. Section 21 of the Order provides in pertinent part that allotments of dues terminate when "the dues withholding agreement between the agency and the labor organization is terminated . . ." [Emphasis added.] In the Council's opinion, the language of section 21 requires an affirmative act by one or both parties to the agreement in order to effect cancellation of the dues withholding agreement. That is, the occurrence of the expiration date of a negotiated agreement which contains a dues withholding agreement does not, in and of itself, result in termination of dues withholding. As with other personnel policies and practices and matters affecting working conditions, dues withholding provisions in expired negotiated agreements continue in effect and cannot be unilaterally changed except as consistent with the bargaining obligation under section 11(a) of the Order. Thus, for example, if the parties during negotiations wish to provide clearly and specifically in their collective bargaining agreement that dues withholding will terminate upon the expiration of the agreement, without the necessity of an affirmative act by the parties, such a provision would constitute a valid waiver of the parties' rights and would operate to terminate dues withholding upon the agreement's expiration. Cf. Labor-Management Relations in the Federal Service (1975), at 49-50, and Defense Supply Agency, Defense Property Disposal Office, Aberdeen Proving Ground, Aberdeen, Maryland, A/SLMR No. 360, 3 FLRC 787, 804-806 [FLRC No. 74A-22 (Dec. 9, 1975), Report No. 88].

Of course, just as in the situation where no collective bargaining agreement has previously existed, agency management, upon the expiration of a negotiated agreement, retains the right to unilaterally change provisions contained therein relating to "permissive" subjects of bargaining, i.e., those matters which are excepted from the obligation to negotiate by section 11(b) of the Order,^{14/} and either party may change matters which are outside the scope of such obligation under section 11(a) of the Order. Consequently, absent the parties' agreement to the contrary, the parties are not obligated to maintain those matters upon the expiration of their agreement.^{15/} Similarly, those agency regulations issued during the term of an agreement and which were not operative with respect to the bargaining unit during such term become

[T]he obligation to meet and confer does not include matters with respect to the mission of an agency; its budget; its organization; the number of employees; and the numbers, types, and grades of positions or employees assigned to an organizational unit, work project or tour of duty; the technology of performing its work; or its internal security practices. . . .

^{15/} See, e.g., AFGE Council of Locals 1497 and 2165 and Region 3, General Services Administration, Baltimore, Maryland, 3 FLRC 396 [FLRC No. 74A-48 (June 26, 1975), Report No. 75]. In this regard, the Council has held that a proposal advanced during negotiations for a new agreement is excepted from the obligation to bargain by section 11(b) regardless of the fact that the proposal has been contained in prior agreements between the parties. See International Association of Machinists and Aerospace Workers, Local Lodge 1859 and Marine Corps Air Station and Naval Air Rework Facility, Cherry Point, North Carolina, FLRC No. 77A-28 (Feb. 28, 1978), Report No. 145 at note 2.

effective upon the expiration of that agreement.^{16/} Such a result is mandated by section 12(a) of the Order, which, as explained in the Report accompanying the Order, requires that "an agreement must be brought into conformance with current agency policies and regulations at the time it is renegotiated or before it is extended, except where specific exceptions are granted or renewed."^{17/}

Also--just as in the situation where the parties are for the first time negotiating a comprehensive collective bargaining agreement and where upon impasse in those negotiations a party wishes to change otherwise negotiable personnel policies and practices and matters affecting working conditions--a party to the renegotiation of an agreement may not effect such changes unless it provides the other party with sufficient notice of its intent to implement the changes (which cannot exceed the scope of the proposals advanced by that party during prior negotiations) so that the other party is afforded a reasonable opportunity under the circumstances to invoke the processes of the Federal Service Impasses Panel. If the processes of the Panel are not invoked within a reasonable time of such notification, the Council finds, in agreement with the Assistant Secretary, that it is consistent with the Order for the party seeking to implement the changes to effect those changes. However, once the Panel's processes are invoked within a reasonable time of such notification, we further find, in substantial agreement with the Assistant Secretary, that the parties must adhere to established personnel policies and practices and matters affecting working conditions, including those contained in the expired agreement, to the maximum extent possible.^{18/}

16/ Section 12(a) of the Order provides:

Basic provisions of agreements. Each agreement between an agency and a labor organization is subject to the following requirements--

(a) in the administration of all matters covered by the agreement, officials and employees are governed by existing or future laws and the regulations of appropriate authorities, including policies set forth in the Federal Personnel Manual; by published agency policies and regulations in existence at the time the agreement was approved; and by subsequently published agency policies and regulations required by law or by the regulations of appropriate authorities, or authorized by the terms of a controlling agreement at a higher agency level[.]

17/ Labor-Management Relations in the Federal Service (1975), at 72.

18/ See Department of the Interior, Bureau of Reclamation, Yuma Projects Office, Yuma, Arizona, supra n. 10, at 12 of the decision, in which the phrase "to the maximum extent possible" was indicated to encompass changes consistent with the necessary functioning of the agency.

The above requirements afford a party the opportunity to invoke the impasse resolution machinery of the Order^{19/} and at the same time effectuate the policy of the Order to foster stability in the Federal labor-management relations program. Thus, in our view, it is consistent with the purposes and policies of the Order to require the parties to maintain the status quo to the maximum extent possible once the Panel's processes have been invoked in order to permit the Panel to decide whether to require further negotiations or to exercise jurisdiction over the dispute and, in the 20/ latter event, to take the action deemed necessary to settle the dispute. In this regard, as the Council has previously noted, the impasse resolution machinery of the Panel established by the Order was^{21/} intended to be (and has operated as) one aspect of the bargaining process.

Summary

Thus, to summarize the principles discussed herein: Upon the expiration of a negotiated agreement, existing personnel policies and practices and matters affecting working conditions, whether or not they are included in a negotiated agreement, continue as established, absent an express agreement by the parties that such personnel policies and practices and matters affecting working conditions terminate upon the expiration of that agreement or unless otherwise modified in a manner consistent with the Order. However, agency management retains the right upon the expiration of a negotiated agreement to unilaterally change provisions

19/ Sections 16 and 17 of the Order provide:

Sec. 16. Negotiation disputes. The Federal Mediation and Conciliation Service shall provide services and assistance to Federal agencies and labor organizations in the resolution of negotiation disputes. The Service shall determine under what circumstances and in what manner it shall proffer its services.

Sec. 17. Negotiation impasses. When voluntary arrangements, including the services of the Federal Mediation and Conciliation Service or other third-party mediation, fail to resolve a negotiation impasse, either party may request the Federal Service Impasses Panel to consider the matter. The Panel, in its discretion and under the regulations it prescribes, may consider the matter and may recommend procedures to the parties for the resolution of the impasse or may settle the impasse by appropriate action. Arbitration or third-party fact finding with recommendations to assist in the resolution of an impasse may be used by the parties only when authorized or directed by the Panel.

contained therein relating to "permissive" subjects of bargaining, i.e., those matters which are excepted from the obligation to negotiate by section 11(b) of the Order, and either party may change matters which are outside the scope of such obligation under section 11(a) of the Order. Similarly, those agency regulations issued during the term of a negotiated agreement which were not operative with respect to the bargaining unit during such term become effective, as mandated by section 12(a) of the Order, upon the expiration of that agreement. Also, where (as here) the parties are renegotiating a comprehensive collective bargaining agreement and reach impasse, a party may not effect changes in otherwise negotiable personnel policies and practices and matters affecting working conditions without first providing the other party with sufficient notice of its intent to implement the changes (which changes cannot exceed the scope of the proposals advanced during prior negotiations by the party seeking to implement the changes) so that the other party is afforded a reasonable opportunity under the circumstances to invoke the processes of the Panel. If the Panel's processes are not invoked within a reasonable time of such notification, the party seeking to implement the changes may effect those changes. However, once the Panel's processes are invoked within a reasonable time of such notification, the parties must adhere to established personnel policies and practices and matters affecting working conditions, including those contained in the expired agreement, to the maximum extent possible -- i.e., to the extent consistent with the necessary functioning of the agency.

Accordingly, as the Assistant Secretary's decisions in A/SLMR No. 806 and A/SLMR No. 859 are based on a standard which the Council has found to be inconsistent with the purposes of the Order, the Council will remand the cases to him for action consistent with the principles set forth herein.

Conclusion

For the foregoing reasons, we find that the Assistant Secretary's decision and order in each of the above-entitled cases is inconsistent with the purposes of the Order. Accordingly, pursuant to section 2411.18(b) of the Council's rules of procedure, we remand the cases to him for action consistent with our decision herein.

By the Council.

UNITED STATES DEPARTMENT OF LABOR
 ASSISTANT SECRETARY FOR LABOR-MANAGEMENT RELATIONS
 SUMMARY OF DECISION AND ORDER OF THE ASSISTANT SECRETARY
 PURSUANT TO SECTION 6 OF EXECUTIVE ORDER 11491, AS AMENDED

NAVY EXCHANGE,
 NAVAL TRAINING CENTER,
 SAN DIEGO, CALIFORNIA
 A/SLMR No. 1054

This case involved an unfair labor practice complaint filed by the American Federation of Government Employees, Local 2285, AFL-CIO (Complainant) alleging that the Respondent violated Section 19(a)(1), (2) and (6) of the Order by unilaterally changing the prices charged for haircuts and the commission rates of its barbers.

The Administrative Law Judge recommended that the complaint be dismissed in its entirety. In reaching this conclusion, he found that the adjustments made by the Respondent were made in accordance with the procedures authorized by FPM Supplement 532-2 and that the Respondent was under no duty to meet and confer on the decision to adjust price and commission rates.

Since the disposition of this case involved, in part, an interpretation of 5 U.S.C. Section 5342-5347 and its implementing Civil Service Commission directives, the Assistant Secretary asked the Commission for an interpretation of its directives as they pertained to the present case. On March 15, 1978, the Commission issued its interpretation in response to the Assistant Secretary's request.

Upon review of the Commission's interpretation and the record herein, which established that the Complainant had notice of the proposed change in commission rates and failed to respond prior to implementation, the Assistant Secretary ordered that the subject complaint be dismissed in its entirety.

DECISION AND ORDER

On March 24, 1977, Administrative Law Judge John D. Henson issued his Recommended Decision and Order in the above-entitled proceeding, finding that the Respondent had not engaged in the unfair labor practices alleged in the complaint and recommending that the complaint be dismissed in its entirety. No exceptions were filed to the Administrative Law Judge's Recommended Decision and Order. 1/

The Assistant Secretary has reviewed the rulings of the Administrative Law Judge made at the hearing and finds that no prejudicial error was committed. The rulings are hereby affirmed. Upon consideration of the Administrative Law Judge's Recommended Decision and Order, and the entire record in the subject case, 2/ I hereby adopt the Administrative Law Judge's findings, conclusions and recommendation, to the extent consistent herewith.

1/ The Complainant's request for an extension of time in which to file exceptions was untimely and, therefore, was denied.

2/ In his Recommended Decision and Order, the Administrative Law Judge appears to have inadvertently utilized the original complaint rather than the amended complaint which was subsequently filed. This inadvertence is hereby corrected. It also appears that the amended complaint is ambiguous in that it uses the date of the change in regular haircut commissions with the subsequently changed commission rate used for recruit haircuts which, in fact, occurred on a subsequent date. However, both parties at the hearing accepted the fact that both commission rate changes were at issue and both were litigated. No party, therefore, appears to have been prejudiced.

The facts herein are fully set forth in the attached Administrative Law Judge's Recommended Decision and Order, and I shall repeat them only to the extent deemed necessary.

The instant complaint, filed by the American Federation of Government Employees, Local 2285, AFL-CIO (AFGE) alleges, in substance, that Respondent violated Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order by its action in January and April 1976, in changing the prices charged for haircuts, and the rate of commission paid to the barbers based upon such prices without first notifying and bargaining in good faith with the AFGE, the exclusive representative of its barbers.

The Respondent is a nonappropriated fund instrumentality which reports to the Navy Resale Systems Office in Brooklyn, New York. The mission of the Exchange is to provide goods and services to authorized patrons at the lowest practicable cost and to provide, through its profits, a source of funds to be used for the welfare and recreation of naval personnel. In order to accomplish the latter part of its mission, the Navy Resale Systems Office established for each Navy Exchange department a minimum net profits goal. In the case of barber shops, the minimum net profit goal was set at 10 percent. In October 1975, a review of the Exchange's operating statement indicated that net profits from the barber shop for the previous nine months had averaged only 5.2 percent. The Exchange management determined that the net profit goal could only be achieved by raising haircut prices and decreasing the percentage commission rate paid each barber per haircut. At this time, barbers, with the exception of a salaried manager, were paid on a straight commission basis which was 65 percent of the price for regular and recruit haircuts.

On December 23, 1975, the Commander of the Exchange and his Administrative Assistant met with the barbers, one of whom was the shop steward, to inform them of the decision to raise haircut prices and lower the commission rate. At that meeting, one or more of the barbers indicated that they were going to check with the Complainant. On January 9, 1976, regular haircut prices were raised from $1.25 to $1.50 and the barbers' commission rate was reduced from 65 percent to 56 percent. On April 4, 1976, recruit haircuts were increased from $.90 to $1.00 and the barber commission rate was reduced from 65 percent to 61 percent. Under the new rates, the record reveals that the barbers received a few cents more per haircut than before the change. The record reveals that the first formal request by the Complainant to negotiate was made in the latter's unfair labor practice charge letter on April 22, 1976.

In his Recommended Decision and Order, the Administrative Law Judge concluded that the Respondent's unilateral change in prices and employee commission rates, without prior consultation with the exclusive representative, was not violative of the Order. In reaching this conclusion, he found that the employees herein are "prevailing rate employees" within the meaning of Public Law 92-392, (Federal Wage System), and its implementing regulations. 3/ The Administrative Law Judge was of the view that the adjustments made by the Respondent were in accord with the procedures mandated by the Statute and its implementing regulations and, therefore, concluded that the Respondent was under no duty to meet and confer on the decision to adjust the price charged and the commission rates paid employees, citing the Federal Labor Relations Council's (Council) decision in Memphis Naval Air Station, Millington, Tennessee, 3 FLRC 483, FLRC No. 74A-104 (1975). 4/

Under the Statute involved, the Civil Service Commission (Commission) is responsible for prescribing the practices and procedures governing the implementation and administration of the Federal Wage System, which are set forth in Federal Personnel Manual (FPM) Supplement 532-2. The Statute provides, in Section 5343(c)(2), that:

The (Commission's) regulations shall provide for participation at all levels by representatives of organizations accorded recognition as the representative of prevailing rate employees in every phase of providing an equitable system for fixing and adjusting the rates of pay for prevailing rate employees. . . . (Emphasis supplied.)

FPM Supplement 532-2, provides, in paragraph S10-2b(2), that:

Existing agency practices with respect to special schedules for NAF employees paid on other than a time-rate basis will be continued pending further instructions to be issued by the Civil Service Commission. However, when the appropriate agency wage fixing authority determines, after appropriate consultation with labor organization representatives, that an earlier change is required such a change may be made earlier. (Emphasis supplied.)

The relevant special pay plans for the Navy Resale Systems Office Exchanges, listed as existing agency practices in Appendix V of FPM Supplement 532-2, provide an allowable commission percentage range of 55 percent to 94 percent for barbers. The basis for rates is determined by the following formula:

Earnings are set so as to be comparable to those of private industry and regular schedule employees performing essentially the same level of work. Private industry data is collected during regular surveys if possible. (No mention is made in Appendix V for alteration of employees commission rates due to insufficient profits.)

4/ The Administrative Law Judge also found that the Complainant had fulfilled its obligation to meet and confer on the impact of its decision.

Since the disposition of this case involves, in part, an interpretation of the Statute, with its implementing Commission directives, the Commission was requested by the Assistant Secretary for an interpretation of its directives as they pertain to certain questions raised in the present case. The Commission's reply, dated March 15, 1978, is attached hereto.

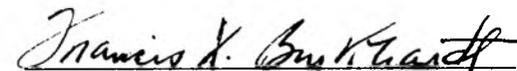

As indicated in the attached statement, the Commission's interpretation of its regulations under the Statute establishes that the only right accorded an exclusive representative to participate in the fixing and adjustment of rates of pay of "prevailing rate employees" is limited to "consultation", unless the parties are covered by a negotiated agreement which enjoys the protection of the savings clause in the Statute. Further, the Commission interprets the agency's obligation to accord "appropriate consultation" to an exclusive representative of its employees, in the absence of negotiated agreement protected by the savings clause, as merely the obligation to notify the exclusive representative of a proposed action to fix or adjust the pay rates, and afford the exclusive representative the opportunity to comment thereon.

In the instant case, the evidence establishes that the Respondent notified the Complainant of its intended action in adjusting the prices charged for haircuts and the commission rates paid to its employees at a meeting of employees, including Complainant's steward, on December 23, 1975. Further, the Complainant failed to respond to this notification until April 22, 1976, long after the effective date of the Respondent's action on January 9, 1976, changing haircut prices and commission rates. Under these circumstances, and in the absence of evidence of the existence of a negotiated agreement between the parties which enjoys the protection of the saving clause of the Statute, I find the Respondent's action on January 9, and April 4, 1976, in adjusting the price charged for haircuts and the commission rate based on such charges did not constitute a violation of Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order. Accordingly, I shall order that the complaint herein be dismissed.

Re: Navy Exchange, Naval Training Center, San Diego, California
Case No. 72-6412(CA)

Dear Mr. Burkhardt:

This is in response to your request for our answers to six questions raised in connection with the Recommended Decision and Order in the above-referenced case. The six questions are repeated below, followed by our answers, which relate to the specific situation described in the Recommended Decision and Order.

1. Do the exclusive representatives of prevailing rate employees have the right to participate in the fixing and adjusting of rates of pay for prevailing rate employees?

The right of exclusive representatives of prevailing rate employees to participate in the fixing and adjusting of rates of pay is limited to consultation unless the parties are covered by a negotiated agreement which enjoys the protection of the savings clause in Section 9(b) of P.L. 93-392.* This case involves nonappropriated fund employees who are paid under special agency schedules. The procedures for fixing and adjusting the pay of nonappropriated fund prevailing rate employees who are paid under special agency schedules are set forth in paragraph S10-2b(2) of FPM Supplement 532-2, which provides that "existing agency practices...will be continued pending further instructions to be issued by the Civil Service Commission." In this case, according to the Findings of Fact contained in the Recommended Decision and Order, it has been the practice of the agency to change the amount of the commission percentage "on at least six previous occasions" since 1965 "without negotiation with the complainant." The file indicates that the exclusive representatives of the employees did not negotiate in the fixing and adjusting of rates of pay on the six previous occasions. No change has been made in the law or applicable CSC instructions to confer this right in the intervening period.

*The savings clause, Section 9(b) of P.L. 92-392, provides that provisions of any negotiated agreement in effect on the date of enactment of the Act (August 19, 1972) may be renewed, extended, modified or improved through negotiation. The law did not change provisions of existing negotiated agreements pertaining to wages, conditions of employment and other employment benefits, affect existing agreements regarding the various items which are negotiable, or preclude the inclusion of new items in connection with renegotiation of any negotiated agreement.

2. If so, do enforcement, appeal and remedial procedures exist under Civil Service Commission regulations if the right of participation is denied by agencies?

The Civil Service Commission regulations do not provide any enforcement, appeal, or remedial procedures to address alleged denials of the union's right of participation.

3. In view of the mbfe restrictive language of paragraph S10-2b(2) of FPM Supplement 532-2, is the right of labor organization participation under 5 U.S.C. 5342 limited only to those instances wherein "existing agency practices" are changed? (Since section 5342 is limited to definitions, and the right of participation is addressed in section 5343(c)(2), we think that you intended to cite section 5343.)

Yes. The Commission's regulations pertaining to special schedules for nonappropriated fund employees who are paid on other than a time rate basis do not grant a right of participation to a labor organization in matters other than a change in pay practices, unless the negotiated agreement is protected by the savings clause as described in our answer to question number 1.

4. What is meant by the term "existing agency practices" set forth in FPM Supplement 532-2? Is it applicable to a change in the procedure for establishing rates or a change in the rates themselves?

The term "existing agency practices" as used in subchapter S10 (S10-2b(2)) means the methods used by the agency to fix and adjust pay. These practices include writing survey job descriptions, determining the firms to be surveyed, establishing payline formulae, analyzing data, determining cost, reviewing past tipping practices and finally setting piecework rates and determining commission.

Yes, the term is applicable to a change in the procedure for establishing rates as well as to a change in the rates themselves.

5. Since appendix V of FPM Supplement 532-2 includes a listing by the Civil Service Commission of existing agency practices with respect to agency payment methods, does the use by an activity of a criterion not mentioned in appendix V as a basis for rates, e.g., insufficient profits, constitute a change in existing agency practice within the meaning of FPM Supplement 532-2?

No. The descriptions in appendix V of special agency schedules are not intended to cover all the details of the various practices by which the agency determines pay; instead, they are brief descriptions which identify the principal factors normally involved in pay such as the basis for rates, evaluation plan, areas of applicability and employee coverage.

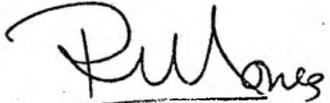

Since insufficient profits appears from the Findings of Fact to have been considered in earlier changes which were effected unilaterally by the agency, we conclude that insufficient profits is a proper criterion under appendix V.

6. What is meant by "appropriate consultation" in paragraph S10-2b(2) of FPM Supplement 532-2?

In the context of paragraph S10-2b(2), "appropriate consultation" refers to the agency's obligation to advise the appropriate labor organization representatives of a proposed decision to take an action, and to afford labor organization representatives an opportunity to comment prior to the final decision.

I hope this information will be helpful to you.

RECOMMENDED DECISION AND ORDER

Statement of the Case

Pursuant to a complaint filed on July 12, 1976, under Executive Order 11491, as amended, by American Federation of Government Employees, Local 2285, AFL-CIO, hereinafter called the Complainant, against the Navy, Navy Exchange, Naval Training Center, San Diego, California, hereinafter called the Respondent, a notice of hearing on complaint was issued by the Regional Administrator for the San Francisco, California, region on October 28, 1976.

The Complainant alleges that the Respondent violated section 19(a)(1), (2), (5) and (6) of the Order.

A hearing was held in the captioned matter on December 14, 1976, in San Diego, California. All parties were afforded full opportunity to be heard, to examine and cross-examine witnesses, and to introduce evidence bearing on the issues involved herein.

Upon the entire record, including my observation of the witnesses and their demeanor, the exhibits and other relevant evidence adduced at the hearing, I make the following findings of fact, conclusions and recommendations.

1. The Respondent is a non-appropriated fund instrumentality whose mission is to provide goods and services to the military personnel and their families at the lowest practicable cost and to provide, through its profits, a source of funds for the maintenance of the Navy recreational program.

2. A guide of operating costs and contribution goals has been established for various departments or components of the Exchange by the Navy Resale System Office. In the case of the barber shop, a maximum payroll of seventy percent and minimum net contribution of ten percent have been established. Wages are authorized on a straight commission basis, with exception of the manager who may be paid a combination of guaranteed salary and commission.¹

1. See Navy Exchange Manual, paragraph 4307, Exhibits C-1 and C-2.

3. In October 1975 a review of the barber shop operations was made, and it was found that the net profit or contribution was 5.2 percent for the preceding nine months which was well below the minimum of ten percent.

4. It was determined by the Respondent that in order to bring the barber shop operations within the guidelines of the manual and achieve the contribution goal of ten percent, it would be necessary to increase the price of regular haircuts from $1.25 to $1.50 and lower the commission rate paid the barbers from sixty-five percent to fifty-six percent. Similar adjustments had been made on at least six previous occasions since 1965 without negotiation with the Complainant.

5. On December 23, 1975, Commander Mezzio, Exchange Officer, and Gary Carter, Administrative Specialist of the Exchange, met with the barbers at the main barber shop and informed them of their decision to adjust prices and commission rates to become effective January 9, 1976, and of similar price adjustments of recruit haircuts to become effective in the indefinite future.

6. On January 9, 1976, the adjustments of regular haircut prices and commission rates were implemented and thereafter in April 1976 the price of recruit haircuts was increased from $.90 to $1.00 and the commission rate was lowered to sixty-one percent.

7. By letter dated April 22, 1976, the Complainant informed the agency of its charges of unfair labor practice by adjusting the commission rate of the barbers without meeting and conferring with the "exclusive" representative and requested a meeting to resolve the issue informally within thirty (30) days.

8. On May 12, 1976, a meeting was held in an attempt to settle the unfair labor practice charge. Those present were Gary Carter; Commander Mezzio; Mr. Kerley, barber shop manager; Mrs. Hansen, personnel manager; Mr. Molina, National Representative of the union; Mrs. Payne, President of the local union; June Bayers, First Vice-President and Chief Steward of the local union; and Wayne Wilburn, barber.

9. At the May 12, 1976, meeting, Gary Carter explained the problem of not meeting the minimum net contribution requirement and put the basic equation of price increase and commission rate decrease on the blackboard resulting in an increase in net profit sufficient to meet the contribution requirement and a final result of increase in net income for the barbers. There was no request or demand by the union representatives or members for further discussion, negotiation or documentary evidence.

10. On July 12, 1976, formal complaint was filed by the Complainant.

Contentions of the Parties

The Complainant argues that the Respondent violated the Order and committed an unfair labor practice by raising the price of service at the barber shop and lowering the employees' commission rate. It contends that this constitutes a new or substantive change in personnel policy which affects the employees of the Complainant. It further argues that the Respondent is obligated to consult, confer or negotiate, as appropriate, the impact on the affected employees as a result of the new or substantive change in personnel policy.

The Respondent takes the position that its decision to adjust price and commission rates is not subject to the bargaining obligation and that there was no obligation to negotiate over the impact or procedures of the change because there is no showing of "adverse impact" or no "procedures" involved in the decision and consequently no subject matter over which to bargain. It further argues that the Complainant had notice of the changes and made no demand to negotiate. Finally, it argues that price and commission rates have been changed often and the Complainant as bargaining agent has never requested to negotiate over either the substantive changes or any impact or procedures.

Discussion and Conclusions

The initial question to be addressed here is the negotiability of the price and commission rate changes implemented by the Respondent in the later part of 1975 and early part of 1976.

Public Law 92-392 (5 U.S.C. § 5342) defines a "prevailing rate employee" to be "... an employee of a non-appropriated fund instrumentality ... who is employed in a recognized trade or craft, or other skilled mechanical craft, or in an unskilled, semiskilled, or skilled manual labor occupation, and any other individual, including a foreman and a supervisor, in a position having trade craft, or laboring experience and knowledge as the paramount requirement;"

It is clear that the barbers employed by the Respondent are prevailing rate employees within the meaning of the Law and have been treated as such by the parties hereto.

Section 5341 of P.L. 92-392 provides that "... rates of pay of prevailing rate employees be fixed and adjusted from time to time as nearly as is consistent with the public interest in accordance with prevailing rates" Under the law, the Civil Service Commission is responsible for prescribing the practices and procedures governing the implementation and administration of the Federal Wage System.

These practices and procedures are embodied in the Federal Personnel Manual Supplement 532-2. In the instant case, I find that the adjustments made by the Exchange were in accordance with the procedures authorized by FPM Supplement 532-2.

In view of the above, I find and conclude that the Respondent was under no duty or obligation to meet and confer on the decision to adjust price and commission rates.²

Although the Respondent may be absolved from the duty and obligation to meet and confer on the decision to raise the price of haircuts and lower the commission rates, consideration must be given to whether it is required under the Order to meet and confer as to the impact and procedures involved in its decision. The Respondent maintains that it is absolved of that obligation because there was no "adverse impact" on the barbers and furthermore there were no "procedures" involved in its decision to change prices and commission rates and consequently no subject matter for negotiations.

The language in the Order, as well as the case law itself, make it clear that an agency is obligated to bargain as to the impact and procedures. Since the decision by the Federal Labor Council on Plum Island Animal Disease Laboratory, Department of Agriculture, Greenport, N. Y. FLRC No. 71A-11, numerous decisions have affirmed the obligation of an agency to bargain in this respect. I find no circumstances in the instant case to relieve the Respondent of that obligation.

The factual circumstances in the instance case, however, are quite clear that the Respondent fulfilled that obligation to meet and confer on the impact and procedures of its decision to adjust prices and commission rates.

Immediately upon reaching its decision, Respondent met with the affected employees at the main barber shop. Mr. Carter explained the problem of not meeting the contribution goals and the decision to adjust price/commission rates. Upon being advised of the decision, one of the barbers informed Gary Carter that "they were going to check that out with the union." They were advised to do so by Carter.

There was no request by the Complainant to meet and confer until April 22, 1976, when Marion Payne, President of the local union, wrote Commander Mezzio, Exchange Officer, charging an unfair labor practice and requesting a meeting within thirty days to attempt to resolve the issue. It is noted that the letter of April 22, 1976, only complained of the failure of the Respondent to meet and confer on the decision.

On May 12, 1976, the Exchange officers met with Mr. Molina, National Representative of the Union; Mrs. Payne, President of Local 2285; Mrs. Bayers, Vice President and Chief Steward of the Local; and Wayne Wilburn, one of the barbers. Gary Carter had the operating statement of the barber shop available, explained the lack of meeting the minimum contribution goals and put the basic equation of the adjustment of price/commission rates on the blackboard showing a result of net increase in pay for the barbers. June Bayers testified that the Respondent did not refuse to meet and confer and that "the Exchange was very good in most instances in cooperating." She further testified that there was no request for further discussion or information.

3. Federal Aviation Administration, National Aviation Facilities Experimental Center, Atlantic City, New Jersey A/SLMR No. 329.

In view of the foregoing, I conclude that the Respondent fulfilled its obligation to meet and confer on the impact and procedures involved in its decision to adjust price/commission rates.

Although there was no allegation in the letter of April 22, 1976, or the formal complaint filed by the Complainant on July 11, 1976, much emphasis has been given to the practice of the barber shop manager being allowed to cut hair while being paid a straight salary, resulting in less receipts going into the fund from which the barbers' commissions are paid.

All the evidence presented establishes that this practice has existed for at least five years preceding this complaint. The evidence also establishes that the Complainant and Respondent entered into a new labor-management agreement dated January 15, 1976. There is no allegation or evidence that the Complainant requested that this matter be considered in negotiating the agreement of January 15, 1976, nor is it contended that the Respondent has ever refused to negotiate this issue. I therefore conclude that this issue is not the subject of an unfair labor practice complaint and therefore not violative of Executive Order 11491.

In summary, considering all of the evidence, it is concluded that Respondent was under no obligation to consult and confer with Complainant on its decision to adjust price/commission rates of the barber shop and that it fulfilled its obligation to meet and confer on the impact of its decision. Accordingly, I conclude Respondent has not violated section 19(a)(1), (2), (5) and (6) of the Order.

Recommendation

Having found that Respondent has not engaged in conduct violative of section 19(a)(1), (2), (5) and (6) of Executive Order 11491, I recommend that the complaint herein be dismissed in its entirety.

UNITED STATES DEPARTMENT OF LABOR

SUMMARY OF DECISION AND ORDER OF THE ASSISTANT SECRETARY
PURSUANT TO SECTION 6 OF EXECUTIVE ORDER 11491, AS AMENDED

GENERAL SERVICES ADMINISTRATION,
NATIONAL ARCHIVES AND RECORDS SERVICE
A/SLMR No. 1055

This case involved an unfair labor practice complaint filed by the American Federation of Government Employees, Local 2578, AFL-CIO (Complainant), alleging that the Respondent violated Section 19(a)(1) and (2) of the Order by discriminating against union officials in the administration of employee automobile parking at the Activity. The complaint further alleged that the Respondent committed an independent Section 19(a)(1) violation when it took certain actions against the Complainant's president, which constituted an attempt to interfere with, restrain, or coerce him in the conduct of business as a union official.

The Administrative Law Judge recommended that the complaint be dismissed in its entirety. With regard to the Section 19(a)(1) and (2) allegations, the Administrative Law Judge found that there was no showing of anti-union discrimination in the assignment of parking space. Moreover, he found that, even assuming uneven treatment, there was no evidence of disparity which may be attributed to union activity, and no evidence of anti-union animus. With regard to the independent Section 19(a)(1) allegation, the Administrative Law Judge found that there was no evidence that the Complainant's president was singled out for unjust treatment.

Noting particularly the absence of exceptions, the Assistant Secretary adopted the findings, conclusions and recommendation of the Administrative Law Judge, and ordered that the complaint be dismissed in its entirety.

Before: LOUIS SCALZO
 Administrative Law Judge

This case arises under Executive Order 11491 as amended (hereinafter referred to as the Order). It was initiated by the filing of an unfair labor practice complaint on January 26, 1977, by Mr. Carmen R. Delle Donne, President of the Complainant labor organization (herein also referred to as the Union). The Complainant alleges that the National Archives and Records Service (herein also referred to as Activity, NARS, or Respondent) violated Sections 19(a)(1), (2) and (6) of the Order by bargaining in bad faith, unilaterally changing an established practice, threatening Mr. Delle Donne in the conduct of union business and discriminating against union officers in the administration of NARS parking regulations.

On May 2, 1977, Acting Regional Administrator Hilary M. Sheply dismissed those portions of the complaint other than allegations that Respondent violated Sections 19(a)(1) and (2) of the Order by discriminating against union officials in the administration of parking regulations. The union thereafter filed a request for review of that part of the Acting Regional Administrator's decision which dismissed portions of the Complaint. On November 2, 1977, the Assistant Secretary affirmed in part, and remanded to the Regional Administrator for hearing, those previously dismissed portions of the Complaint dealing with a possible violation of Section 19(a)(1) arising out of allegedly threatening actions taken against Mr. Delle Donne on December 1, 1976.

Thereafter, on November 23, 1977 the case was noticed for hearing for the purpose of determining whether Respondents violated Sections 19(a)(1) and (2) of the Order by discriminatively denying parking space to union officials, and whether certain actions taken against Mr. Delle Donne on December 1, 1976, constituted an attempt to interfere with, restrain, or coerce him in the conduct of business as a union official, in violation of Section 19(a)(1) of the Order. ^{1/} Pursuant thereto, a hearing was held in Washington, D. C. on January 18, 1978. Both parties were afforded full opportunity to be heard, adduce evidence, and to examine and cross-examine witnesses. Thereafter the parties filed briefs. For good cause shown Complainant was allowed an additional three days in which to file a post-hearing brief. A motion to disallow the Complainant's untimely filed brief is denied. In this regard special consideration has been given to circumstances presented by the fact that Complainant is not represented by skilled counsel, and to the relative complexity which the facts of this particular case would present to one unskilled in litigation. Moreover, no showing of prejudice to the Respondent by such late filing was established.

Upon the basis of the entire record, including my observation of the witnesses and their demeanor, I make the following findings of fact, conclusions and recommendation.

The allegations outlined may not be entirely understood without an awareness of their relationship to aspects of a pattern of collective bargaining negotiations which commenced in November of 1974, and finally terminated with the signing of an agreement by the Union and Respondent on August 23, 1977.

^{1/} The November 23, 1977, notice of hearing (LMSA 1122) erroneously omits reference to Section 19(a)(2) of the Order. However, a letter of the same date accompanying the notice of hearing accurately sets forth the sections of the Order involved, and a telegram dated January 12, 1978 addressed to the Respondent corrects the omission. (Assistant Secretary Exhibits 1, 2 and 3).

After commencing negotiations in November of 1974, negotiations were held until the summer of 1975, at which time efforts to negotiate ended. Both sides thereafter filed unfair labor practice complaints charging a failure to consult, confer or negotiate as required by Sections 19(a)(6) and 19(b)(6) of the Order. ^{2/}

An element in the negotiations had involved efforts on the part of the Union to acquire reserved parking privileges at the National Archives Building, and at a NARS facility in Suitland, Maryland. The Respondent took the position that it could not legally provide parking, and has always refused to provide permanent parking space to the union.

During a pre-hearing conference held prior to the trial of the two unfair labor practice complaints arising out of the breakdown of negotiations, the parties discussed the possibility of reviving efforts to reach a binding agreement. A continuance was granted to permit the parties to make such efforts. Union negotiators took the position that bargaining after working hours at the National Archives Building made it difficult to secure public transit, and further that since public parking lots located nearby closed early, Union negotiators found parking in such lots inconvenient. Because of these considerations the Union requested that parking spaces be provided at the National Archives Building on days when negotiations extended after normal working hours. The record also reflected that the Union had previously requested management to arrange for bargaining sessions to be held after hours to conserve official time. Since the official time provided was thereafter consumed, Union negotiators were faced with the prospect of having to utilize annual leave or leave without pay to continue negotiations held during working hours.

The parties took several weeks to reach agreement on Ground Rules designed to revive negotiations. Much of the discussion centered around the Union's request for parking spaces based upon convenience arguments associated with after hours negotiating. Ground Rules were approved on October 5, 1976. With respect to parking the Rules provided the following:

^{2/} Both complaints were subsequently dismissed. American Federation of Government Employees, Local 2578, AFL-CIO, and National Archives and Records Service, A/SLMR No. 965 (January 11, 1978).

Up to two parking spaces at the National Archives Building may be used by members of the Union Negotiating Team, on those days on which negotiating sessions are to be held, if spaces are available. If one or both of the aforesaid spaces are not available on such occasions then the members of the Union Team may leave up to two cars in the parking area with the cars inside, with the understanding that such cars might need to be moved periodically during the day in order to accommodate the arrival and departure of other vehicles.

The Ground Rules also provided that negotiations would be held daily from 3:15 p.m. until 6:15 p.m. A specially arranged tour of duty for those members of the Union negotiating team who had used their official time was provided. It was determined that the special tour of duty would run from 7:45 a.m. to 4:15 p.m., and that Union Team members would be charged with annual leave or leave without pay for one hour on days on which negotiations began at 3:15 p.m. in the afternoon. Other elements of the Ground Rules dealt with provisions pertaining to cancellation of negotiation sessions, the submission of proposals, the establishment of an agenda, and the method to be employed to indicate tentative agreement on proposals.

Following agreement on the October 5, 1976, Ground Rules a total of five negotiating sessions were held in the National Archives Building. These occurred on October 20, 21, 22, 26 and 27, 1976. Parking privileges were extended in accordance with the Ground Rules on these dates, with the possible exception of some minor, but immaterial, misunderstanding on the part of NARS personnel during the initial use of the Union's parking privilege.

Following these five negotiating sessions, the Union requested and received the assistance of the Federal Mediation and Conciliation Service. A mediator called the parties together and new ground rules were negotiated under the guidance of the mediator. It was agreed that the parties would begin by having negotiations from 10:00 a.m. to 4:30 p.m., and that negotiations would be conducted in an entirely new location some distance from the National Archives Building. Neither side objected to the new hours and the new location. Negotiating sessions were held during normal working hours at the new location on November 17 and 30, 1976, and December 1, 1976.

A fundamental issue arose concerning the effect to be given the provisional parking privilege agreed to by the parties on October 5, 1976. The Respondent took the position that the parking privilege was not intended to be made available to Union negotiators on days when negotiating sessions were conducted during normal working hours, that parking privileges in the October 5, 1976 Ground Rules were applicable only when negotiating after hours, and that since other elements of the October 5, 1976 Ground Rules were not in effect, the obligation to supply parking spaces terminated. The Union, adopting a different view of the October 5, 1976 rule on parking, argued that their parking privileges should have remained intact.

Evidence introduced by the Respondent indicated surprise that Union officials utilized parking spaces on November 17 and 30, 1976, as negotiations on these days were held out of the National Archives Building and totally within working hours. Respondent assumed the existence of a misunderstanding in this regard, and further that the misunderstanding would be cleared up.

The record reflects that Mrs. Claudine Weiher, NARS Deputy Executive Director, and then a member of the NARS bargaining team, notified Lewis M. Robeson, Director of Respondent's Administrative Services Division, after November 17, 1976, and prior to November 30, 1976, that the Union should not be allowed to utilize parking space because she thought negotiations would be taking place during normal working hours.

On the morning of November 30, 1976, Mr. Robeson phoned Mrs. Weiher to advise that the two spaces were being utilized. Mrs. Weiher explained to Mr. Robeson that Union representatives should not be using parking facilities, and further that she would remind Mr. Delle Donne so that there would be no misunderstanding on December 1, 1976, the date of the next scheduled negotiating session.

At the close of bargaining on November 30, 1976, Mrs. Weiher made inquiry of Mr. Delle Donne in substantially the following terms:

I spoke to Carmen and asked him (sic) didn't he realize that he should not be parking because we were negotiating during duty hours and that he shouldn't park there again until such time as we were negotiating after hours. And the discussion became a little bit heated. At no time, however, did Carmen in that discussion say...that the ground rules were still applicable.

The conversation centered on the convenience to him; the hardship traveling back and forth...; how nice it would be and how unfair in his eyes I was being, but nothing to do with the fact that the ground rules were still applicable. (Tr. 139).

A heated exchange followed between Mr. Delle Donne and Mrs. Weiher as a result of Mr. Delle Donne's refusal to accept Respondent's position that parking privileges extended under the October 5, 1976 Ground Rules, did not apply when negotiations were not being conducted after normal working hours. The discussion ended with Mr. Delle Donne intimating that he would use the parking facilities the next day, (December 1, 1976) regardless of Respondent's position. Mrs. Weiher informed Mr. Delle Donne that unauthorized parking would result in his car being ticketed.

Shortly after 5:00 p.m. on November 30, 1976, Mrs. Weiher phoned Mr. Robeson, and explained the situation in order to avoid any misunderstanding the next day. Mr. Robeson was apprised of the negotiating hours scheduled for December 1st, and of the fact that parking should not be allowed.

On the morning of December 1, 1976, William McHugh, an officer of the Union and a member of the Union's negotiating team made an effort to obtain parking space from employees charged with supervision of NARS parking. When refused he did not question the action taken. Mr. McHugh acknowledged that at the time the October 5, 1976 Ground Rules were approved, the Union anticipated negotiating after normal working hours, and further that the parties did not address the question of the procedure to be followed if negotiations occurred entirely during normal working hours. (Tr. 30).

Shortly after Mr. McHugh's unsuccessful attempt to park, Mr. Delle Donne drove into a parking place in the NARS parking garage. A guard on duty at the entrance advised him that he would not be allowed to park. Another guard also informed Mr. Delle Donne that he could not park in the space appropriated, at which time Mr. Delle Donne stated, "Well, I'm going to park there today." When the guard explained that Mr. Robeson would be called, Mr. Delle Donne stated, "Well, go ahead and tell him. Help yourself. I'm going to park there." (Tr. 157). Mr. Delle Donne then left his car and walked away.

A guard advised Mr. Robeson that Mr. Delle Donne had appropriated a parking space without authority. Mr. Robeson then phoned Mrs. Weiher and informed her that Mr. McHugh had attempted to park, and that Mr. Delle Donne had parked despite instructions to the contrary. She again confirmed that Union negotiators had no authority to park in NARS facilities that day. Mr. Robeson then requested the Federal Protection Service to ticket Mr. Delle Donne's car. 3/

Late in the afternoon of December 1, 1976 Mr. Delle Donne informed Mrs. Weiher that he had used a parking place at the NARS garage and that he intended to park there the next day. Mrs. Weiher advised Mr. Delle Donne that she was aware that he had parked in the garage, and that it would be unwise to park illegally on December 2, 1976, because in most instances second offenders were towed away. Upon returning to the NARS parking garage after negotiations on December 1, 1976, Mr. Delle Donne found that a fifteen dollar parking ticket had been issued by a Federal Protection Service officer.

NARS Parking regulations require the ticketing of unauthorized vehicles parked in NARS parking areas. Towing is also authorized in such instances. It was a regular practice to ticket for illegal parking, and an attempt on the part of Mr. Delle Donne to show that ticketing in his case was an unusual procedure, was unsuccessful.

3/ The record reflects prior disobedience of instructions given by a gate guard to Mr. Delle Donne during the summer of 1976, although in the latter case it appeared that the gate guard may not have been aware that Mr. Delle Donne had previously received actual authority to park. (Tr. 47-48, 63).

The record disclosed that the Administrative Services Division of NARS has responsibility for the administration of NARS parking regulations. 4/ A total of seventy-two parking places are provided for approximately nine hundred employees in the main National Archives Building. Under the provisions of the mentioned regulations spaces are provided for division directors and above, and for employees at or above the GS-15 level. Spaces are also provided for carpools under a point system. A limited number of spaces are reserved for official use. 5/

A major portion of the complaint of anti-Union discrimination in the administration of parking regulations pertained to Respondent's policy of allocating carpool parking space when not used by individuals regularly assigned such parking spaces. The record disclosed that when such space is to be vacant for several days or more, an effort is made to assign the space to the next qualified carpool based on the mentioned point system. However, carpool spaces not used for one day, are assigned on a "first come first serve" basis to employees not regularly assigned spaces and who request parking on the days involved. Except for the period when the October 5, 1976 Ground Rules were in effect, Union representatives took advantage of parking privileges under this contingency system.

4/ Functions relating to parking were just one aspect of the work of the Division as the unit also handled work pertaining to contracting, procurement, building alterations and repair, property management and space management.

5/ In this instance the parking places provided by the October 5, 1976 Ground Rules were permitted under the authority of a regulatory provision which reflected Respondent's duty to reserve spaces for official use. (Joint Exhibit 3). However, there was no regulatory obligation to provide such space to the Union.

It is a regular procedure for those charged with the administration of parking facilities to wait until 9:30 a.m., to check carpool parking places to determine which spaces appear to be available. 6/ People wanting to compete for such parking places are required to check with Miss Dotie Carpenter, or Mr. Leroy Talley, in Mr. Robeson's office to ascertain if space is available. 7/ Since carpool captains are required to advise Mr. Robeson's office of anticipated tardiness prior to 9:30 a.m., vacant spaces are considered available after 9:30 a.m. in the absence of a message to the contrary. Efforts on the part of employees to obtain parking prior to 9:30 a.m. usually result in a refusal unless someone reports in earlier that a space will not be utilized and the person seeking space is otherwise entitled to it on a "first come first serve" basis. Gate guards are not authorized to allocate carpool parking spaces available without obtaining the permission of Miss Carpenter or Mr. Talley.

As noted, it is the policy of Mr. Robeson's office to check availability of space at about 9:30 a.m. It was presumed that those leaving assigned parking spaces after the 9:30 a.m. check would return in the absence of information to the contrary. Evidence disclosed that many employees with parking permits frequently leave and return during the course of the day. Those not returning often fail to notify Miss Carpenter or Mr. Talley; nevertheless, Mr. Robeson's office has an obligation to appropriate parking spaces for such permanently assigned parkers under uncertain circumstances involving their return. The responsibility for ascertaining the accuracy of information relating to the availability of parking places not being used rested with Mr. Robeson's office, as it was the duty of his office to insure the integrity of NARS Parking policies for the purpose of providing parking in accordance with regulations.

6/ The workday at the National Archives begins at 8:45 a.m. and ends at 5:15 p.m.

7/ This was but one aspect of their work. As noted, Mr. Robeson's office was assigned responsibility in a number of other important areas of concern.

With respect to Section 19(a)(1) allegations relating to the ticketing of Mr. Delle Donne's car, the record clearly discloses that actions taken on December 1, 1976, arose primarily over a good faith dispute relating to interpretation of the October 5, 1976 Ground Rules. The Assistant Secretary has adopted the position that he will not police or interpret side agreements absent evidence that they constitute independent violations of the Order. Army and Air Force Exchange Service, Kessler Consolidated Exchange, A/SLMR No. 144 (March 28, 1972). Since the entire ticketing episode was the outgrowth of differing and arguable interpretations of the October 5, 1976 Ground Rules, rather than a clear unilateral breach of the Ground Rules, the episode should not have been made the basis of an unfair labor practice complaint. Department of Transportation, Federal Aviation Administration, Western Region, A/SLMR No. 930 (November 7, 1977); Warner Robins Air Logistics Center, Robins Air Force Base, Georgia, A/SLMR No. 912 (October 4, 1977); Puget Sound Naval Shipyard, U.S. Department of the Navy, A/SLMR No. 829 (April 20, 1977); Watervliet Arsenal, U.S. Army Armament Command, Watervliet, New York, A/SLMR No. 726 (October 8, 1976); Aerospace Guidance and Metrology Center, Newark Air Force Station, Newark, Ohio A/SLMR No. 677 (July 23, 1976); General Services Administration, Region 5, Public Buildings Service, Chicago Field Offices, A/SLMR No. 528 (June 30, 1975). Here there was no showing that the October 5, 1976 Ground Rules were breached by the Respondent, nor was there any showing that an alleged breach constituted an independent violation of the Order.

The facts fail to show that Mr. Delle Donne's car was ticketed because of anti-Union animus, or that he was singled out for unjust treatment. He was tactfully warned repeatedly that parking privileges related exclusively to days on which negotiations extended after normal working hours. He parked despite these repeated warnings. With regard to the extension of parking privileges on November 17 and 30, 1976, dates on which the mediation sessions concluded during normal working hours, it must be observed that these two episodes did not mature into an established practice. Mrs. Weiher acted with reasonable promptness to terminate such practice and to achieve compliance with Respondent's interpretation of the Ground Rules as soon as she became aware that Union negotiators had parked at NARS facilities on November 17 and 30, 1976.

Regardless of the interpretation which Mr. Delle Donne attributed to the Ground Rules, Mr. Delle Donne's position did not immunize him from the penalties that all NARS employees faced for willful violations of the parking regulations. The Respondent was not ticketed because of his Union affiliation, but rather because he was deemed illegally parked. The ticketing followed his taking the law into his own hands. It was the direct result of his willful refusal to respond to admonitions designed to preclude him from falling into violation of the parking regulations. In the light of these considerations the ticketing was justified. His infraction was not shielded by any legitimate Union duties that he performed. Veterans Administration, Veterans Benefits Office, A/SLMR No. 296 (August 15, 1973).

Turning to the general allegation of discrimination with respect to parking and correlative charges of a violation of Section 19(a) (1) and (2) of the Order, it must be concluded that an effort to show anti-Union discrimination in the assignment of parking space on a "first come first serve" basis was unsuccessful. There was no evidence of discriminatory treatment of Union members or others. Similarly, an effort to show anti-Union discrimination in the assignment of permanent carpool parking places, or space for official purposes also failed. No evidence was introduced to establish the existence of such discrimination in either case, and no proof was adduced to show that Union officials were subjected to different standards than other employees.

Moreover, even assuming uneven treatment of those applying for parking privileges under the terms of NARS regulations, the record revealed no disparity which may be attributed to Union activity, and no evidence of anti-Union animus. Such a showing is essential in the factual context presented. Veterans Administration Canteen Service, VA Hospital, Phoenix, Arizona, A/SLMR No. 883 (August 26, 1977); Department of Defense, U.S. Navy, Norfolk Naval Shipyard, A/SLMR No. 908 (September 23, 1977); Department of the Treasury, Internal Revenue Service, Indianapolis, Indiana, A/SLMR No. 909 (September 23, 1977).

The Complainant's case rested upon the testimony of four members of the Union negotiating team. These were Mr. Delle Donne and Mr. McHugh, previously mentioned, and Mr. Thomas Lipscomb and Mr. Arthur West.

The testimony of Union witnesses was vague and non-specific in important areas of concern. It clearly appeared that they did not agree with the established policy of requesting such space through Miss Carpenter or Mr. Talley. Instead, they would endeavor to arrange for a direct assignment of unused spaces through a parking lot guard who had no authority to permit them to park. Occasionally, Mr. McHugh and Mr. Delle Donne were successful in frustrating procedure by obtaining unused space directly from a guard on duty.

The testimony of Union witnesses reflects the erroneous belief that the mere existence of vacant space in the NARS parking area meant actual space availability. Reported difficulties encountered by Mr. Delle Donne and Mr. McHugh in their dealings with Mr. Robeson's office appear to have emanated entirely from what appeared as misunderstanding of procedure used to assign unused carpool space, or disagreement over the method of administering parking regulations rather than anti-Union discrimination. 8/ However, despite the foregoing, the record established that Mr. McHugh, received on request, parking permission under the "first come first serve" policy on numerous occasions before and after the days on which the October 5, 1976 Ground Rules were operative. Mr. McHugh made it a habit to arrive before 9:30 a.m. to request that his name be put on a list used in the allocation of available carpool space. In some instances he was phoned by Mr. Robeson's office and advised that space was available for him.

Facts adduced relating to actions taken on December 1, 1976, and with regard to the administration of National Archives policy, clearly reflect an absence of proof tending to show violations of Section 19(a)(1) or 19(a)(2). Under the Rules of the Assistant Secretary, a complainant has the burden of proving allegations of an unfair labor practice complaint by a preponderance of the evidence. 29 C.F.R. §203.15. This burden has not been met.

RECOMMENDATION

Based upon the foregoing findings and conclusions, I recommend that the complaint herein be dismissed.

 SUMMARY OF DECISION AND ORDER OF THE ASSISTANT SECRETARY
 PURSUANT TO SECTION 6 OF EXECUTIVE ORDER 11491, AS AMENDED

GENERAL SERVICES ADMINISTRATION, REGION IX
 A/SLMR No. 1056

This case involved an unfair labor practice complaint filed by the International Federation of Federal Police, Local 41 (Complainant) alleging two separate incidents wherein the Respondent's supervisors made certain statements to the Complainant's president and another employee which interfered with, restrained, or coerced these employees in the exercise of their rights in violation of Section 19(a)(1) of the Executive Order.

The Administrative Law Judge recommended that the complaint be dismissed. In this regard, he found, based on his credibility resolution, that the Respondent's supervisor did not make the statement to the Complainant's president as alleged in the complaint. With respect to the other allegation in the complaint, he found that the Complainant failed to sustain its burden of proof that the statement, even if made by Respondent's supervisor to an employee, violated Section 19(a)(1) of the Order.

Noting particularly the absence of exceptions, the Assistant Secretary adopted the findings, conclusions and recommendation of the Administrative Law Judge and ordered that the complaint be dismissed in its entirety.

RECOMMENDED DECISION AND ORDER

Preliminary Statement

This proceeding was heard in San Francisco, California, on November 1, 1977, and arises under Executive Order 11491, as amended. Pursuant to the Regulations of the Assistant Secretary of Labor for Labor-Management Relations (hereinafter called the Assistant Secretary), a Notice of Hearing on Complaint was issued on August 24, 1977. Additional orders rescheduling the hearing were issued on September 26 and October 14, 1977. This case was initiated by a complaint filed on January 21, 1977 by the International Federation of Federal Police, Local 41 (hereinafter the "Union").

The only issues present in this case were raised for the first time in an amended complaint dated June 9, 1977.

The issues presented are (1) whether Respondents' supervisors made certain statements to the Union president and another employee, and (2) whether such statements interfered with, restrained, or coerced these employees in the exercise of their rights in violation of Section 19(a)(1) of the Executive Order.

At the hearing, all parties were represented and were afforded full opportunity to be heard, adduce evidence, examine and cross-examine witnesses, and argue orally. Thereafter, both parties were given the opportunity to file briefs. Upon the entire record in this case, from my observation of the witnesses and their demeanor, and from all of the testimony and evidence adduced at the hearing, I make the following findings, conclusions, and recommendation.

Findings of Fact and Conclusions of Law

At some time prior to April of 1976, two of the Respondent's Federal Protective Officers (FPO) and a supervisor were allegedly caught gambling on duty. One of the FPO's was Daniel Jaimez, president of the Union. Removal action was taken against all three men, and on April 27, 1976, Jaimez received a final notice of termination from Alfred Rego, a supervisory FPO with the rank of lieutenant.

The Union's first contention is that Rego told Jaimez, upon handing him the notice, that the "real reason" that Jaimez was being terminated was because of his "radical union activities." For the reasons set forth below, I find that Rego did not make this statement.

In the first place, Rego denied making this statement. I found his testimony both forthright and credible. At the time of the hearing he no longer worked for the Government. Furthermore, Rego's version of his conversation with Jaimez differs from the latter's recollection of it. He told Jaimez that, in his opinion, the disciplinary action was "a little severe" considering the nature of the alleged infraction. He did not say that union activities had anything to do with it. However, Jaimez was personally convinced that he was being fired due to his union activities. This conviction is probably the underlying reason for Jaimez' mistaken recollection of the conversation.

It is true that during the course of their conversation, Rego mentioned in a friendly manner, that he considered Jaimez to be "radical." However, this in no way referred to the president's union activities but referred to his personal conduct as a Federal Protective Officer. In this regard he indicated that Jaimez had a reputation for failing to adhere to office hours and for disregarding personal appearance and dress rules established by the Respondent. In the context of this conversation, I conclude that the word "radical" referred to Jaimez' history of disciplinary problems.

The next issue presented for decision concerns a statement allegedly made by Frank Zabrowski, Chief of Respondent's Support Branch to Robert Weathers on April 27, 1976. Weathers was also a Federal Protective Officer. Weathers testified that during a casual conversation with Zabrowski, the latter had stated that he was screening applications for FPO positions. According to Weathers, Zabrowski then said "We just got three more positions. We got rid of the troublemakers, especially Jaimez who has been a thorn in our side since the day he's been on board." Zabrowski denies that he made this statement.

It is possible that Zabrowski made a statement of this nature. ^{1/} However, I am constrained to conclude and hold that the Union has failed to sustain its burden of proving that any statement made by Zabrowski violated Section 19(a)(1) of the Executive Order. The alleged statement clearly refers to the three men who were fired for gambling while on duty. One of these three men was a supervisor; therefore, it is unlikely "troublemakers" would have referred to any union activity. Zabrowski had been a local police chief only six months before, and probably valued employee discipline highly. The alleged statement emphasizes Jaimez as a particularly bad troublemaker. Even if words to this effect were used, I do not find a violation of Section 19(a)(1). I recognize that any negative statements made to an employee about the union president should be scrutinized closely. The evidence presented on this issue is meager. Zabrowski had been working for the Respondent for only a short period of time and did not have any significant knowledge of Jaimez' union activities. Presumably, Zabrowski, like Alfred Rego, was referring to Jaimez' reputation for disciplinary problems in his capacity as an FPO. In any event, I conclude that the Union has failed to sustain its burden of proof on this issue.

^{1/} It is hard to believe that Weathers could remember the exact words uttered about one and half years prior to the hearing.

June 7, 1978

RECOMMENDATION

Having concluded that the Respondent did not violate Section 19(a)(1) of the Order, I hereby recommend that the complaint filed in this case be dismissed in its entirety.

SUMMARY OF SUPPLEMENTAL DECISION AND ORDER OF THE ASSISTANT SECRETARY
PURSUANT TO SECTION 6 OF EXECUTIVE ORDER 11491, AS AMENDED

DEPARTMENT OF THE AIR FORCE, GRISSOM AIR FORCE BASE,
PERU, INDIANA
A/SLMR No. 1057

On June 9, 1977, the Assistant Secretary issued his Decision and Order in A/SLMR No. 852, in which he found that the Respondent had violated Section 19(a)(3) and (1) of the Order by virtue of the publication in the newspaper, the Grissom Contact, of an advertisement by Local 3254, American Federation of Government Employees, AFL-CIO (AFGE). He concluded that such publication constituted the furnishing of services and facilities by the Respondent to a labor organization (AFGE) not in equivalent status with the Complainant, Local 1434, National Federation of Federal Employees, the exclusively recognized representative. In this regard, he found that the Respondent exercised control over the Grissom Contact and that the newspaper was, in effect, an instrumentality of the Respondent irrespective of specific contractual arrangements entered into with the publisher.

On May 2, 1978, the Federal Labor Relations Council (Council) issued its Decision on Appeal in FLRC No. 77A-77, in which it held that the Assistant Secretary's finding of a violation of Section 19(a)(3) and (1) of the Order, in the circumstances of the case, was inconsistent with the purposes of the Order. Accordingly, the Council set aside the Assistant Secretary's decision in A/SLMR No. 852 and remanded the case to him for appropriate action.

Based on the Council's holding in FLRC No. 77A-77, and the rationale contained therein, the Assistant Secretary ordered that the complaint be dismissed in its entirety.

SUPPLEMENTAL DECISION AND ORDER

On December 20, 1976, Administrative Law Judge William B. Devaney issued his Recommended Decision and Order in the above-entitled proceeding, finding, among other things, that the Respondent had engaged in certain unfair labor practices and recommending that it cease and desist therefrom and take certain affirmative action. Thereafter, on June 9, 1977, in A/SLMR No. 852, the Assistant Secretary agreed with the Administrative Law Judge's conclusion that the Respondent had violated Section 19(a)(3) and (1) of the Order by virtue of the publication in the newspaper, the Grissom Contact, of an advertisement by Local 3254, American Federation of Government Employees, AFL-CIO (AFGE). In the Assistant Secretary's view such publication constituted the furnishing of services and facilities by the Respondent to a labor organization (AFGE) which was not in equivalent status with the Complainant, Local 1434, National Federation of Federal Employees, the exclusively recognized representative of the employees of the Respondent. In this regard, he found that the Respondent exercised control over the Grissom Contact and that the newspaper was, in effect, an instrumentality of the Respondent irrespective of specific contractual arrangements entered into with the publisher.

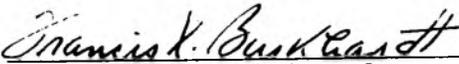

On May 2, 1978, the Federal Labor Relations Council (Council) issued its Decision on Appeal in the subject case, finding that the Assistant Secretary's decision that the Respondent violated Section 19(a)(3) and (1) of the Order was, in the circumstances of the case, inconsistent with the purposes of the Order. Accordingly, pursuant to Section 2411.18(b) of its Rules, the Council set aside the Assistant Secretary's decision and remanded the case to him for appropriate action consistent with its decision.

Based on the Council's holding in the instant case, and the rationale contained therein, I shall order that the complaint herein be dismissed in its entirety.

DECISION ON APPEAL FROM ASSISTANT SECRETARY'S DECISION

Background of Case

This appeal arose from a decision and order of the Assistant Secretary, based upon an unfair labor practice complaint filed by Local 1434, National Federation of Federal Employees (NFFE) against the Department of the Air Force, Grissom Air Force Base, Peru, Indiana (the activity). The Assistant Secretary found that the activity violated section 19(a)(3) (and based on the same conduct section 19(a)(1)) of the Order^{1/} by permitting the publication of an advertisement in a newspaper over which the activity exercised control by a union which was not in equivalent status with NFFE, the exclusively recognized representative of certain of its employees.

1/ Section 19(a) of the Order provides in pertinent part:

Sec. 19. Unfair labor practices. (a) Agency management shall not--

(1) interfere with, restrain, or coerce an employee in the exercise of the rights assured by this Order;

(3) sponsor, control, or otherwise assist a labor organization, except that an agency may furnish customary and routine services and facilities under section 23 of this Order when consistent with the best interests of the agency, its employees, and the organization, and when the services and facilities are furnished, if requested, on an impartial basis to organizations having equivalent status[.]

The pertinent factual background of this case, as found by the Assistant Secretary and based upon the entire record, is as follows: Local 3254, American Federation of Government Employees, AFL-CIO (AFGE)^{2/} placed an advertisement, promoting the benefits of AFGE membership, in the Grissom Contact (hereinafter referred to as the "Contact"). a weekly unofficial newspaper published in the interests of personnel at the activity by a private Publisher not connected with the Air Force. Publication is governed by a contract between the Publisher and the activity. The advertisement appeared prior to the expiration of the negotiated agreement between the activity and NFFE, the exclusive representative of a unit of the activity's employees. The advertisement appeared at a time when a representation petition could have been timely filed, but no such petition had yet been filed by AFGE.^{3/}

The activity furnishes the news content, headlines, editorials, captions and pictures of the Contact; the Publisher solicits and sells advertising and prepares advertising copy. The Publisher's sole revenue is derived from the sale of advertisements. Copies of the Contact are deposited at various places on the base where personnel may, without charge, pick up a copy. The editor of the Contact is an airman detailed by the activity for such duty.

2/ AFGE was designated an "Interested Party" by the Assistant Secretary in this proceeding.

3/ The relevant provisions of the Assistant Secretary's regulations state:

§ 202.3 Timeliness of petition.

(c) When an agreement covering a claimed unit has been signed and dated by the activity and the incumbent exclusive representative, a petition for exclusive recognition or other election petition will be considered timely when filed as follows:

(1) Not more than ninety (90) days and not less than sixty (60) days prior to the terminal date of an agreement having a term of three (3) years or less from the date it was signed and dated by the activity and the incumbent exclusive representative[.]

As noted by the Assistant Secretary, the advertisement appeared during the 30-day "open period" specified in the above-quoted regulation, and subsequently during the same open period AFGE did file a petition seeking to represent the activity's employees.

The contract between the activity and the Publisher provides certain specified limitations on the type of advertisements permitted to be published in the Contact.^{4/} The contract between the activity and the Publisher further provides that each edition of the Contact must contain a statement that "[t]he appearance of advertisements . . . in this publication does not constitute an endorsement by the Department of the Air Force of products or services advertised."^{5/} All dealings which led

4/ The contract between the activity and the Publisher provides, in part, in Paragraph III, ADVERTISING, as follows:

c. "Control." The Publisher shall not accept for publication advertisements that are in conflict with the principles of the Air Force character guidance program. The Publisher shall not solicit advertising or publish advertisements from establishments that have been declared to be "Off Limits" to military personnel by the Base Commander or by the Armed Forces Disciplinary Control Board In addition, the Publisher may request the Information Officer or designated representative(s) to advise him if the contents of any advertisement would cause the Base Commander to bar the paper's circulation on the base. Advertisements which are essentially political in nature or which have political connotations will not be carried in the GRISSOM CONTACT. No advertisement will be carried that is unlawful, detrimental to discipline, that undermines loyalty, or is otherwise contrary to the best interests of Grissom Air Force Base, to the United States Air Force or any part thereof, or to the United States of America. All advertisements shall conform to principles of good taste. In this regard, the Publisher shall not advertise any motion picture or other form of film entertainment which is rated "X" In the event of disagreement over advertising content, the commander of Grissom Air Force Base shall have the final authority for determination.

5/ The edition of the Contact at issue herein contained the following statement as required by the contract:

The Contact is an unofficial newspaper published weekly in the interests of personnel at Grissom AFB of the Strategic Air Command. It is published by James Bannon, an individual, in no way connected with the Air Force. Opinions expressed by publishers and writers are their own and are not to be considered an official expression by the Department of the Air Force. The appearance of advertisements, including supplements and inserts, in this publication does not constitute an endorsement by the Department of the Air Force of products or services advertised. Everything advertised in this publication must be made available for purchase, use or patronage without regard to the race, creed, color, national origin or sex of the purchaser, user or patron. A confirmed violation of this policy of equal opportunities by an advertiser will result in the refusal to print advertising from that source.

to the purchase and preparation of the advertisement here involved were between AFGE officials and a sales representative of the Publisher. The advertisement was solely the product of AFGE and was paid for by AFGE. And, as already indicated, it promoted AFGE membership; and it did not mention NFFE in any manner.^{6/}

The Assistant Secretary, in agreement with the Administrative Law Judge, held that the activity violated section 19(a)(1) and (3) of the Order. In reaching this conclusion, the Assistant Secretary stated as follows:

[T]he publication in the newspaper, the Grissom Contact, of an advertisement by the AFGE constituted a violation of Section 19(a) (3) and (1) of the Order by the Respondent Activity in that its conduct, in permitting such publication, in effect, constituted the furnishing of services and facilities to a labor organization, the AFGE, which was not in equivalent status with the exclusively recognized representative of the Respondent Activity's employees, Local 1434, National Federation of Federal Employees, hereinafter called NFFE. In reaching this conclusion, it was noted particularly that the evidence established that the Respondent Activity exercised control over the Grissom Contact and that the newspaper was, in effect, an instrumentality of the Respondent Activity. In this regard, I view it as immaterial to the finding of a violation herein that the Respondent Activity's contract with the publisher of the Grissom Contact did not specifically forbid an advertisement such as that involved in the subject case. Thus, in my view, as Section 19(a)(3) of the Order prohibits agency management from providing assistance to a labor organization such as the AFGE, not in equivalent status, permitting the publication of an advertisement by the AFGE in a newspaper which it controls is violative of the Order irrespective of the specific contractual agreements entered into with the publisher.

The activity and AFGE appealed the Assistant Secretary's decision and order to the Council. The Council accepted the petitions for review, concluding that a major policy issue was raised as to the interpretation and application of section 19(a)(3) of the Order under the circumstances of the present case. The Council also granted requests by the activity and 6/ The activity had no knowledge of the AFGE advertisement until its airman editor saw the galley proofs containing the advertisement. The airman did not bring the advertisement to the attention of his superior because the airman concluded that it was not deemed in conflict with agency regulations or the contract.

AFGE for a stay, having determined that the requests met the criteria set forth in section 2411.47(e)(2) of its rules. The parties filed briefs with the Council as provided in section 2411.16 of the Council's rules.^{7/}

As noted above, the Council concluded that the decision of the Assistant Secretary in this case raised a major policy issue as to the interpretation and application of section 19(a)(3) of the Order under the circumstances herein. More specifically the question is whether the Assistant Secretary's finding of a 19(a)(3) violation is consistent with the purposes of the Order or, to state it alternatively, whether a finding that the activity violated section 19(a)(3) of the Order by permitting the publication of an advertisement by the AFGE in a newspaper which it controls is consistent with the purposes of the Order.^{8/} For the reasons stated below, we conclude that the Assistant Secretary's finding of a violation, in the circumstances of this case, is not consistent with such purposes.

The proscription in section 19(a)(3), namely that agency management shall not sponsor, control or otherwise assist a labor organization, was an adoption of the identical wording of section 3.2(a)(3) of the Code of Fair Labor Practices, the antecedent of the current 19(a)(3) provision. (3 CFR, 1959-63, Comp. at 852.) Section 19(a)(3) was clearly intended,

^{7/} NFFE requested oral argument. Pursuant to section 2411.48 of the Council's rules, this request is denied because the positions of the participants in this case are reflected adequately in the entire record now before the Council.

^{8/} Section 19(a)(3) provides that agency management shall not sponsor, control or otherwise assist a labor organization. The remaining language contained in the section is a proviso to the otherwise absolute ban. That is, an agency may furnish customary and routine services and facilities when consistent with the best interests of the agency, its employees, and the organization, and when the services and facilities are furnished, if requested, on an impartial basis to organizations having equivalent status. In view of our conclusion herein that agency management has not sponsored, controlled or otherwise assisted AFGE in the circumstances of the case, it is unnecessary to apply the proviso permitting the furnishing of customary and routine services and facilities, under described conditions, to organizations having equivalent status.

as was stated with regard to the Code provision, to prevent agency management from dominating or controlling a labor organization by contributing financial or other support to it and to preserve the independence of such organizations from agency manipulation.^{9/} In the Council's view, this proscription was not intended to reach the conduct of agency management such as is at issue in the circumstances of the instant case.

The extent of management conduct here involved was a failure to prevent the selling of an advertisement by a private individual not connected with the Air Force to appear in an unofficial newspaper published in the interests of personnel at the activity. Agency management took no affirmative action in any manner beneficial to the AFGE in this endeavor. There was no agency management involvement in the sale, preparation or distribution of the advertisement. And all dealings which led to the purchase and preparation of the advertisement were between AFGE officials and a sales representative of the Publisher.

Moreover, not only was the advertisement totally free from any hint of management endorsement, but such endorsement was expressly disavowed by the clear policy statement contained in the newspaper, i.e., that "[t]he Contact is an unofficial newspaper published weekly in the interests of personnel at Grissom AFB of the Strategic Air Command. It is published by James Bannon, an individual, in no way connected with the Air Force. Opinions expressed by publishers and writers are their own and are not to be considered an official expression by the Department of the Air Force. The appearance of advertisements, including supplements and inserts, in this publication does not constitute an endorsement by the Department of the Air Force of products or services advertised. . . ."

Further, it is clear that NFFE, like AFGE, was completely free to buy an advertisement in the Contact and, if it had sought to do so, the advertisement would have been treated no differently from that purchased by AFGE. Likewise, there is no evidence whatsoever of any other conduct by agency management which might be perceived by employees as an indication of support for AFGE or opposition to NFFE.

In the Council's opinion, the proscription that agency management shall not sponsor, control or otherwise assist a labor organization was not intended to cover such circumstances as here involved. That is, a finding of a 19(a)(3) violation based merely on the failure to prevent the publication of the subject advertisement by AFGE is inconsistent with the purposes of the Order.^{10/}

RECOMMENDED DECISION AND ORDER

Statement of the Case

These cases arise under Executive Order 11491, as amended (hereinafter also referred to as the "Order"). Separate charges were filed on, or about, January 8, 1976, by N.T. Wolkomir, President of National Federation of Federal Employees (Complainant), with the American Federation of Government Employees (AFGE), alleging a violation of Section 19(b)(1) of the Order, and with Grissom Air Force Base (Grissom), alleging a violation of Sections 19(a)(1) and (3) of the Order. A complaint against AFGE, alleging a violation of 19(b)(1), was filed February 11, 1976 (Case No. 50-13119(CO)); and a complaint against Grissom, alleging violations of 19(a)(1) and (3) was filed February 12, 1976 (Case No. 50-13120(CA)); an Order Consolidating Cases issued September 15, 1976; and a Notice of Hearing on the consolidated cases also issued on September 15, 1976 (Ass't. Sec. Exh. 4) pursuant to which a hearing was duly held before the undersigned on October 21, 1976, in Peru, Indiana. 1/

The alleged violations of the Order, both against AFGE and against Grissom, turn on a full page advertisement by AFGE which was published in the December 19, 1975, issue of the Grissom Contact, a weekly unofficial newspaper, privately published, pursuant to contract between Grissom and Hometown Publications.

1/ The Complainant's request to correct the transcript as set forth in its motion dated November 23, 1976, no opposition having been filed and as each correction requested appears wholly proper, Complainant's motion is hereby granted and the transcript is hereby corrected as more fully noted in "Appendix B", hereto.

All parties were represented by able counsel, were afforded full opportunity to be heard, to examine and cross-examine witnesses and to introduce evidence bearing on the issues involved and briefs have been timely filed by the parties which have been carefully considered. Upon the basis of the entire record, I make the following findings of fact, conclusions and recommendations:

1. Complainant has held exclusive recognition at Grissom since 1967. Its current contract was signed March 16, 1973, and was for a period expiring March 16, 1976. To be timely, a petition challenging Local 1434's right to represent civilian employees at Grissom would have to have been filed on or after December 17, 1975, but prior to January 16, 1976. AFGE filed a petition for Certification of Representatives on January 12, 1976 (Stipulation, Ass't. Sec. Exh. 3). 2/ Because of the unfair labor practice charges here involved, AFGE's petition for certification has been held in abeyance and Complainant's contract has been extended to March, 1977.

2. The Grissom Contact is a weekly unofficial newspaper published in the interest of personnel at Grissom by Hometown Publication, James Bannon, Publisher. Mr. Bannon is not connected with the Air Force. Publication of the Grissom Contact is governed by a contract between James Bannon and Grissom (Ass't. Sec. Exh. 3, Stipulation, Attachment 2) and by AFR 190-7 (Ass't. Sec. Exh. 3, Stipulation, Attachment 1).

3. Grissom furnishes the news content, headlines, editorials, captions and pictures; the Publisher solicits and sells advertising and prepares advertising copy. The Publisher's sole revenue is derived from the sale of advertisements. Copies of the Grissom Contact are deposited at various places on the base, such as commissary, chow hall, post office, etc. (See, Ass't. Sec. Exh. 3, Stipulation, Attachment 3), where personnel may, without charge, pick up a copy. The editor of the Grissom Contact is an airman detailed by Grissom for such duty. Airman James D. Rosenberg was editor on December 19, 1975, and Sergeant Youngclause was the editor at the time of the hearing. Grissom's Office of Information, currently headed by Major Herbert Lubin, is responsible for the editorial copy of the Grissom Contact.

2/ Complainant and Grissom in Case No. 50-13120(CA) submitted a stipulation of facts and their request for a decision by the Assistant Secretary without a hearing pursuant to Section 203.5(b) of the Regulations; however, in view of the consolidation of Case No. 50-13120(CA) with Case No. 50-13119(CO) and the absence of a like stipulation of facts and a request for a decision by the Assistant Secretary without a hearing in the latter case, a Notice of Hearing issued as to both cases.

4. The contract between Grissom and James Bannon in Paragraph III, Advertising, provided, in part, as follows:

"c. 'Control.' The Publisher shall not accept for publication advertisements that are in conflict with the principles of the Air Force character guidance program. The Publisher shall not solicit advertising or publish advertisements from establishments that have been declared to be 'Off Limits' to military personnel by the Base Commander or by the Armed Forces Disciplinary Control Board ... In addition, the Publisher may request the Information Officer or designated representative(s) to advise him if the contents of any advertisement would cause the Base Commander to bar the paper's circulation on the base. Advertisements which are essentially political in nature or which have political connotations will not be carried in the GRISSOM CONTACT. No advertisement will be carried that is unlawful, detrimental to discipline, that undermines loyalty, or is otherwise contrary to the best interest of Grissom Air Force Base, to the United States Air Force or any part thereof, or to the United States of America. All advertisements shall conform to principles of good taste. In this regard, the Publisher shall not advertise any motion picture or other form of film entertainment which is rated 'X'... In the event of disagreement over advertising content, the commander of Grissom Air Force Base shall have the final authority for determination." (Ass't. Sec. Exh. 3, Stipulation, Attachment 2, pp. 3-4).

Air Force Regulations, provide, in part, as follows:

"12. Commercial Advertising:

"a. To be acceptable for on-base distribution through official channels, no advertising in commercial enterprise publications shall be worded or phrased to give the reader the impression that the Air Force in any way endorses, guarantees, or sponsors any product or service ...

"d. The publisher will request advertisers to observe the highest business ethics and applicable laws in describing goods, services, and commodities ...

"e. Active-duty Air Force military and civilian personnel are prohibited from soliciting or endorsing advertisements in commercial enterprise publications.

"h. Advertisements must conform to the principles of good taste. ..." (AFR 190-7, Ass't. Sec. Exh. 3, Stipulation, Attachment 1).

5. Chester Horning, Sr., then President of AFGE Local 3254 and now Chief Steward, contacted Mrs. Mildred Precourt, sales representative for Hometown Publication, about an advertisement which Mr. Horning, with the assistance of various members of Local 3254, had developed; and Mrs. Precourt, after receiving Mr. Horning's material, wrote the advertisement as it appeared in the December 19, 1975, issue of the Grissom Contact (Jt. Exh. 2, p. 13). The AFGE advertisement was solely the product of AFGE, was paid for by AFGE Local 3254, and Grissom had no knowledge of the advertisement until Editor Rosenberg saw the galley proofs containing the AFGE advertisement on, or about, December 15, 1975. Airman Rosenberg testified that he did not bring the AFGE advertisement to the attention of his superior, Major Lubin, because,

"I found it not to be in violation of any of our regulations or the contract." (Tr. 59)

Major Lubin testified that after publication he saw the AFGE advertisement and did not find that it violated the provisions of AFR 190-7 or the contract. Mrs. Precourt testified that she did not remember that Mr. Horning asked her whether an advertisement such as he sought was acceptable, but that if he had, she would have told him that we could accept it; that she saw absolutely nothing wrong with the advertisement.

6. The AFGE advertisement, of course, extols AFGE; suggests various reasons why Grissom Civilain employees should support AFGE; does not mention Complainant in any manner; and listed three telephone numbers to call for further details (Peru, Bunker Hill and Kokomo). The testimony of various Local 3254 officers indicated that no calls were received at the numbers listed; nevertheless, a petition was filed on January 12, 1976, supported by the requisite showing of interest.

7. Several newspapers serve the area including the Peru Tribune, the Kokomo Tribune, and two Indianapolis newspapers, and Mr. Horning testified that, while they (AFGE Local officers) had discussed placing an advertisement in either the Peru or Kokomo paper, they felt it would be too expensive and, in addition that coverage would be far less than through the Grissom Contact. Mr. Horning also testified that Local 3254 had tried personal contact but had been unable to make employees aware of AFGE's presence; that consideration had been given to passing out leaflets outside the Base as cars entered and left the Base, but that they thought the best avenue was to place an advertisement in the Grissom Contact.

8. No witness had any knowledge of any prior advertisement in the Grissom Contact by any labor organization.

A. Section 19(b)(1) Allegation (Case No. 50-13119(CO)).

Complainant asserts that AFGE's advertisement interfered with, restrained, or coerced employees in the exercise of rights assured by the Order. As the advertisement did no more than extol AFGE without mention of Complainant, obviously there was no threat so that the basis for the 19(b)(1) violation is, quite simply, that AFGE violated the Order by utilizing the Grissom Contact at a time that it did not have "equivalent status." It is recognized that under the National Labor Relations Act (NLRA) interference with organization rights by an employer has been premised on the violation of Sections 7 and 8(a)(1), see, for example, NLRB v. Babcock-Wilcox Co., 351 U.S. 105 (1956);

that the rights of employees to self-organization under Section 7 of the NLRA are essentially similar to the rights to self-organization under Section 1(a) of the Order; and that Section 19(b)(1) of the Order, in language essentially parallel to the language of Section 8(a)(1) of the NLRA, as to an employer, makes it an unfair labor practice for a labor organization to "interfere with, restrain, or coerce an employee in the exercise of his rights assured by the Order", while 19(b)(1) of the Order reaches any interference, restraint or coercion practiced by a labor organization, there is no provision prohibiting, for example, organization activity by a labor organization on an agency's or activity's premises at any time. Although Section 19(a)(3) of the Order makes it an unfair labor practice for an agency to furnish services or facilities except to organizations having equivalent status, an agency violation of Section 19(a)(3) does not make coercive, etc., in violation of 19(b)(1) of the Order, union conduct which, in itself, was wholly uncoercive and lawful, except that the agency or activity could not lawfully furnish such services or facilities until such organization achieved "equivalent status". Indeed, the realities of labor relations require that labor organizations have the fullest possible freedom of communication if the basic right of employees to self-organization, etc., is to have meaning. Consequently, in the absence of a clear and unambiguous restriction, I find no warrant in the Order for finding a labor organization guilty of an unfair labor practice even if it were unlawfully assisted as a result of an employer's violation of 19(a)(3) of the Order.

Thus, even if it is assumed that Grissom violated 19(a)(3) by permitting the advertisement to be carried in the December 19, 1975, issue of the Grissom Contact, I am aware of no precedent, and none has been called to my attention, that a union which solicits or distributes in violation of non-solicitation and non-distribution rules is guilty of an unfair labor practice even if the employer were guilty of an unfair labor practice by permitting or allowing such solicitation or distribution. Indeed, the only precedent called to my attention is to the contrary. In Complaint Against American Federation of Government Employees, Case No. 64-2513(CO), the Assistant Regional Director, Mr. Cullen P. Keough, dismissed the Complaint by letter dated January 27, 1975, stating, in part, as follows:

"... It is alleged that the American Federation of Government Employees (AFGE) violated Section 19(b)(1) and (2) of the Order by having its representatives conduct an organizational drive among employees of the Veterans Administration Hospital, New Orleans, Louisiana, who are represented by Local 169, National Federation of Federal Employees (NFFE). It is also alleged that the AFGE representatives were not employees of the hospital, that they conducted the organizational drive on the hospital premises and contrary to the express instructions of agency management.

"Assuming the above allegations to be true, I find no violations of Section 19(b)(1) and (2) of the Order. It does not follow that the complained of conduct interfered with any employee rights assured under the Order (Section 19(b)(1)) or that it constituted an attempt to induce agency management to coerce an employee in the exercise of such rights (19(b)(2)).

"I am, therefore, dismissing the complaint in this matter." (AFGE Exh. 1b)

The Assistant Secretary of Labor, Mr. Paul J. Fasser, Jr., by letter dated May 29, 1975, denied the request for review, stating, in part, as follows:

". . .

"In agreement with the Assistant Regional Director and based on his reasoning, I find that dismissal of the instant complaint is warranted in that a reasonable basis for the complaint has not been established." (AFGE Exh. 1c).

The Federal Labor Relations Council, FLRC No. 75A-64 (September 30, 1975), denied the request for review, stating, in part, as follows:

"... As to the alleged major policy issue, the Council is of the opinion that in the circumstances presented, noting particularly that the cited Assistant Secretary's decisions all involved an allegation and a finding that an agency had violated section 19(a) when it granted organizational rights to a labor organization (which were not present in the instant case), the decision of the Assistant Secretary does not appear inconsistent with prior decisions and does not raise a major policy issue warranting review." (AFGE Exh. 1a).

As AFGE's conduct did not interfere with any employee rights assured by the Order, I shall recommend that the complaint in Case No. 50-13119(CO) be dismissed.

B. Section 19(a)(1) and (3) Allegations (Case No. 50-13120(CA)).

In the circumstances of this case there is no independent 19(a)(1) violation. Rather, the controlling allegation is that Grissom violated Section 19(a)(3) of the Order by allowing publication of AFGE's advertisement at a time that AFGE did not have "equivalent status" and thereby assisted AFGE. If Grissom violated 19(a)(3) it also, derivatively, violated 19(a)(1). Army and Air Force Exchange Services, Pacific Exchange Systems, Hawaii Regional Exchange, A/SLMR No. 454 (1974); Secretary of the Navy, Department of the Navy, Pentagon and American Federation of Government Employees, AFL-CIO, Case No. 22-6787(CA) (decision of Administrative Law Judge, November 3, 1976).

Section 19(a)(3) provides that Agency management shall not -

"(3) sponsor, control, or otherwise assist a labor organization, except that an agency may furnish customary and routine services and facilities under section 23 of this Order when consistent with the best interests of the agency, its employees, and the organization, and when the services and facilities are furnished, if requested, on an impartial basis to organizations having equivalent status;"

Section 23 provides, in part, as follows:

"Agency implementation. No later than April 1, 1970, each agency shall issue appropriate policies and regulations consistent with this Order for its implementation. This includes but is not limited to a clear statement of the rights of its employees under this Order; ... policies with respect to the use of agency facilities by labor organizations. ..."

The terms "an agency may furnish customary and routine services and facilities" (19(a)(3)) and "agency facilities" (23) are not defined. Complainant contends that: a) the Grissom Contact is an agency service or facility; b) that Grissom may furnish such services and/or facilities on an impartial basis only to labor organizations having equivalent status; c) that on December 19, 1975, AFGE had not filed a representation petition and, therefore, did not have equivalent status and, consequently, Grissom violated 19(a)(3) by furnishing services and/or facilities to AFGE, i.e., utilization of the Grissom Contact. Department of the Navy, Navy Commissary Store Complex, Oakland, A/SLMR No. 654 (1976), where Administrative Law Judge Sternburg, whose decision was adopted by the Assistant Secretary, stated:

"In Department of the Army, U.S. Army Natick Laboratories, Natick, Mass., A/SLMR No. 263 and U.S. Department of Interior, Pacific Coast region, Geological Survey Center, Menlo Park, California, A/SLMR No. 143, the Assistant Secretary concluded that a union which has not raised a question concerning representation by virtue of its action in filing a representation petition ... does not enjoy 'equivalent status' within the meaning of Section 19(a)(3) of the Order. Further, in the absence of 'special circumstances' a labor organization not possessing 'equivalent status' with an incumbent exclusively recognized representative ... may not enjoy the use of the services and facilities of the Activity involved for purposes of organizational activities. Accordingly, in the absence of a showing that the employees involved are inaccessible to reasonable attempts by a labor organization to communicate with them outside the agency's or activity's premises, the granting of access to a union not enjoying 'equivalent status' is violative of Section 19(a)(3) of the Order. ..."

From the foregoing, it is clear that, as AFGE did not, on December 19, 1975, enjoy "equivalent status", if Grissom furnished services and/or facilities within the meaning of Sections 19(a)(3) and (23) it violated Section 19(a)(3).

In the private sector, the importance of freedom of communication to the free exercise of organization rights pursuant to Sections 7 and 8(a)(1) of the National Labor Relations Act (essentially comparable to Sections 1(a) and 19(a)(1) of the Order) has long been recognized and the guiding principle for adjustment of the conflict between §7 rights and property rights has been determined by the Supreme Court. NLRB v. Babcock and Wilcox Co., 351 U.S. 105 (1956); Central Hardware Co. v. NLRB, 407 U.S. 539 (1972). In Central Hardware Co., supra, the Court stated,

"The principle of Babcock is limited to this accommodation between organization rights and property rights. This principle requires a 'yielding' of property rights only in the context of an organization campaign. Moreover, the allowed intrusion on property rights is limited to that necessary to facilitate the exercise of employees' §7 rights. After the requisite need for access to the employer's property has been shown, the access is limited to (i) union organizers; (ii) prescribed nonworking areas of the employer's premises; and (iii) the duration of organization activity. In short, the principle of accommodation announced in Babcock is limited to labor organization campaigns, and the 'yielding' of property rights it may require is both temporary and minimal." (407 U.S. at 543-545)

In further recognition of organization rights, the Board has long required an employer to provide names and addresses of employees in the unit within a specified time after an election agreement is executed or an election is directed. Excelsior Underwear, Inc., 165 NLRB 1236 (1966); NLRB v. Wyman-Gordon Company, 394 U.S. 759 (1969).

Under Executive Order 10988, the predecessor of E.O. 11491, and the Standards of Conduct for Employee Organizations and Code

Fair Practices promulgated pursuant thereto, 3/ it might have been argued with conviction that the private sector standards were reflected in E.O. 10988. Whether this was intended in E.O. 10988 is of little moment as it is perfectly apparent that the Order is vastly different. Thus, the Order in Section 19(a)(3) allows an agency to furnish "services and facilities" to organizations "having equivalent status" which uniformly has been interpreted by the Assistant Secretary to mean that only organizations having equivalent status may be furnished services and facilities. Department of the Treasury, Bureau of Customs, Boston, Massachusetts, A/SLMR No. 169 (1972); Department of the Navy, Navy Commissary Store Complex, Oakland,

3/ Executive Order 10988, the predecessor of E.O. 11491, contained the following:

Section 1(a) "... no interference, restraint, coercion or discrimination is practiced within such agency to encourage or discourage membership in any employee organization."

Section 10. "No later than July 1, 1962, the head of each agency shall issue appropriate policies, rules and regulations for the implementation of this order, including ... policies with respect to the use of agency facilities by employee organizations. ..."

Standards of Conduct for Employee Organizations and Code of Fair Labor Practices, published in the Federal Register May 23, 1963, provided, in part, as follows:

Section 3.2 Prohibited Practices.

"(a) Agency management is prohibited from:

"(3) Sponsoring, controlling or otherwise assisting any employee organization, except that an agency may furnish customary and routine services and facilities pursuant to section 10 of the Order where consistent with the best interests of the agency, its employees and the organization, and where such services and facilities are furnished, if requested, on an impartial basis. ..."

supra. In short, under the Order, an agency, not only is not required, but is affirmatively prohibited from giving aid to labor organizations prior to an organization attaining "equivalent status". The Assistant Secretary has very clearly stated that to allow an agency to furnish services or facilities at any time prior to attainment of "equivalent status" could place in jeopardy the labor-management relations stability sought to be achieved by the Order. Department of the Army, U.S. Army Natick Laboratories, supra.

There is no doubt whatever that the same advertisement in the Peru Tribune or Kokomo Tribune, for example, would have been protected under the Constitution, Thornhill v. Alabama, 310 U.S. 88 (1940); but the Grissom Contact was not a normal newspaper. Despite Grissom's assertion that the Grissom Contact was Mr. Bannon's publication, and it may very well be in some respects, the Grissom Contact is, nevertheless, very much Grissom's newspaper. Grissom writes all the news and editorial content, provides all pictures, captions and headlines, and retains absolute control over advertising which must be submitted to it in galley form prior to publication. Moreover, the publication bears the imprimatur of Grissom from its title to its content. Thus, the contract provides, inter alia, that Grissom's control over advertising includes:

1. Publisher shall not accept advertisements that are in conflict with the principles of the Air Force character guidance program.

2. Publisher shall not publish advertisements from establishments declared to be "Off Limits".

3. Publisher may request the Information Officer or designated representative to advise him if the contents of any advertisement would cause the Base Commander to bar the paper's circulation on the base.

4. Publisher will not accept advertisements which are essentially political in nature or which have political connotations.

5. Publisher shall not publish any advertisement that is unlawful, detrimental to discipline, that undermines loyalty, or is otherwise contrary to the best interests of Grissom Air Force Base, to the United States Air Force or to the United States of America.

6. In the event of disagreement over advertising content, the Commander of Grissom Air Force Base shall have the final authority for determination.

There cannot be the slightest doubt that Grissom retained absolute control over advertising and in the event of disagreement the Base Commander had final authority for determination. Because it had the right to bar any advertisement, exercise of that right would not have constituted a breach of its contract with Hometown Publication; and by its failure to bar AFGE's advertisement in the Base publication with full knowledge of the advertisement prior to its publication, at a time when AFGE did not enjoy "equivalent status", Grissom violated Section 19(a)(3) of the Order. It is with considerable regret that I reach this conclusion as the importance that the electorate be informed of relevant information so as to enable employees to make a reasonable choice seems as compelling in organizing as in the election itself. Nevertheless, in view of the limitation in the Order prohibiting the furnishing of services or facilities except to organizations having equivalent status, I am constrained to conclude that Grissom, with full knowledge of AFGE's advertisement, permitted publication and distribution on its premises of the advertisement in the Grissom Contact which it controlled.

RECOMMENDATIONS

Having found that Respondent AFGE Local 3254 did not violate Section 19(b)(1) of the Order, I recommend that the Complaint in Case No. 50-13119(CO) be dismissed.

Having found that Respondent Department of the Air Force, Grissom Air Force Base, engaged in conduct which was in violation of Section 19(a)(3) of the Executive Order and, derivatively, of Section 19(a)(1) of the Executive Order, I recommend that the Assistant Secretary adopt the following order.

RECOMMENDED ORDER

Pursuant to Section 6(b) of Executive Order 11491, as amended, and Section 203.26(b) of the Regulations, the Assistant Secretary of Labor for Labor-Management Relations hereby orders that Department of the Air Force, Grissom Air Force Base, Peru, Indiana, shall:

1. Cease and desist from:

(a) Assisting the AFGE, or any other labor organization, by permitting advertisements by any labor organization in the Grissom Contact or by otherwise furnishing customary and routine services and facilities to AFGE or any other labor organization at a time when such organizations are not party to a pending representation proceeding raising a question concerning representation and when the employees are represented exclusively by the National Federation of Federal Employees, Local 1434.

2. Take the following affirmative action in order to effectuate the purposes and provisions of the Order:

(a) Post at its facility copies of the attached notice marked "Appendix" on forms to be furnished by the Assistant Secretary for Labor-Management Relations. Upon receipt of such forms, they shall be signed by the Commanding Officer and shall be posted and maintained by him for sixty (60) consecutive days thereafter, in conspicuous places, including all places where notices to employees are customarily posted. The Commanding Officer shall take reasonable steps to insure that such notices are not altered, defaced, or covered by other material.

(b) Pursuant to Section 203.27 of the Regulations, notify the Assistant Secretary within twenty (20) days from the date of this Order as to what steps have been taken to comply herewith.

UNITED STATES DEPARTMENT OF LABOR
ASSISTANT SECRETARY FOR LABOR-MANAGEMENT RELATIONS
SUMMARY OF DECISION AND ORDER OF THE ASSISTANT SECRETARY
PURSUANT TO SECTION 6 OF EXECUTIVE ORDER 11491, AS AMENDED

DEPARTMENT OF THE ARMY,
HEADQUARTERS, UNITED STATES
ARMY HEALTH SERVICES COMMAND,
KENNER ARMY HOSPITAL, DGSC
HEALTH CLINIC, RICHMOND, VIRGINIA
A/SILMR No. 1058

This case involved a petition filed by American Federation of Government Employees, Local 2047, AFL-CIO (AFGE Local 2047) seeking to represent a unit of employees assigned to the U. S. Army Health Clinic, Defense General Supply Center, Richmond, Virginia (DGSC Clinic). The Activity contended that the petitioned for unit was not appropriate for the purpose of exclusive recognition as it would result in needless fragmentation, and that such a unit would impede, rather than promote, effective dealings and efficiency of agency operations. It asserted also that because the DGSC Clinic is serviced by the Fort Lee, Virginia, reservation and is a satellite of the Kenner Army Hospital (Kenner), which is a component of the unit at Fort Lee represented exclusively by AFGE Local 1178, the employees in the petitioned for unit should be included in AFGE Local 1178's exclusively recognized unit. AFGE Local 1178 was not a party to the instant proceeding.

The Assistant Secretary found that the unit sought was not appropriate for the purpose of exclusive recognition. In this regard, he noted that while the petitioned for unit may contain all the unrepresented nonprofessional employees administratively assigned to Kenner, the record did not establish that the claimed employees constitute a residual unit of all the unrepresented employees of the Fort Lee unit exclusively represented by AFGE Local 1178, or that it is a residual unit of that component of AFGE Local 1178's unit--the U.S. Army Commander, Medical Department Activity (MEDDAC) Fort Lee--which includes Kenner. As the employees in the claimed unit share similar job classifications, skills and duties with the employees in the Fort Lee unit, and are subject to the same personnel policies, personnel practices and labor relations policies as the employees in the Fort Lee unit, the Assistant Secretary found that the petitioned for unit would not promote effective dealings and efficiency of agency operations but, rather, would lead to artificial fragmentation, and that the establishment of such a unit would be inconsistent with the objective expressed by the Federal Labor Relations Council of promoting more comprehensive bargaining unit structures in the Federal sector.

Accordingly, the Assistant Secretary ordered that the petition be dismissed.

Case No. 22-08021 (RO)

AMERICAN FEDERATION OF GOVERNMENT
EMPLOYEES, LOCAL 2047, AFL-CIO

Petitioner

DECISION AND ORDER

Upon a petition duly filed under Section 6 of Executive Order 11491, as amended, a hearing was held before Hearing Officer Daniel Francis Sutton. The Hearing Officer's rulings made at the hearing are free from prejudicial error and are hereby affirmed. Upon the entire record in the subject case, including the briefs filed by the parties, the Assistant Secretary finds:

1. The labor organization involved claims to represent certain employees of the Activity.
2. The Petitioner, American Federation of Government Employees, Local 2047, AFL-CIO, hereinafter called AFGE Local 2047, seeks an election in a unit composed of all employees assigned to the U.S. Army Health Clinic, Defense General Supply Center, Richmond, Virginia, hereinafter called DGSC Clinic, excluding all management officials, professional employees, employees engaged in Federal personnel work in other than a purely clerical capacity, and supervisors as defined by the Order.

The Activity contends that the petitioned for unit is not appropriate for the purpose of exclusive recognition as it would result in needless fragmentation which would be inconsistent with the policies of the Order, and that such a unit would impede, rather than promote, effective dealings and efficiency of agency operations. It also asserts that because the DGSC Clinic is serviced by the Fort Lee reservation and is a satellite installation of the Kenner Army Hospital, hereinafter called Kenner, with actual bargaining authority residing in Kenner, the employees in the petitioned for unit should be included in a unit of nonprofessional employees at Fort Lee currently represented by AFGE Local 1178. 2/

Since April 16, 1970, AFGE Local 1178 has represented certain employees physically or administratively assigned to Fort Lee, Virginia. One of the components of AFGE Local 1178's exclusively recognized unit is the Medical Department Activity at Fort Lee, Virginia, hereinafter called MEDDAC, Fort Lee, which is a sub-element of the U.S. Army Health Services Command whose headquarters is located in San Antonio, Texas. Kenner is a department within the MEDDAC, Fort Lee, and its mission is to provide medical care for all personnel located on the Fort Lee reservation and at certain other locations. As part of this service, Kenner's Department of Primary Care and Community Medicine operates nine clinics, five of which are located on the Fort Lee reservation, and four of which are located elsewhere. One of the four clinics not on the Fort Lee reservation is the DGSC Clinic which contains the employees petitioned for by AFGE Local 2047 in this matter. The DGSC Clinic is located at Richmond, Virginia, some 23 miles from Fort Lee. 3/

The mission of the DGSC Clinic is to provide medical care to Defense General Supply Center employees in Richmond, Virginia, and to military personnel and their dependents who also are located at the Defense General Supply Center. Employed at the DGSC Clinic is a civilian doctor, who is the Chief of the Clinic, a military noncommissioned officer, and the three employees in the petitioned for unit, a medical technician, a medical radiology technician and an office administrative assistant (typist). 4/

2/ AFGE Local 1178 is not a party in this proceeding. Its unit of nonprofessional employees is currently described as: "All non-supervisory Class Act employees of the U.S. Army Quartermaster Center and Fort Lee under the jurisdiction of the Commanding General, Fort Lee, Virginia; all non-supervisory Class Act employees of the U.S. Army Communications Command (USACC) Agency, Fort Lee, Virginia; and all non-supervisory Class Act employees of the U.S. Army Commander, Medical Department Activity (MEDDAC) Fort Lee, Virginia, within the boundaries of the Fort Lee reservation, excluding management officials and supervisors, employees engaged in Federal personnel work except in a purely clerical capacity, guards, professionals and temporary employees."

3/ Kenner's three other clinics off the Fort Lee reservation also are located in Virginia. They are at Fort A.P. Hill, Fort Pickett and Charlottesville.

4/ The parties stipulated that these are the only unrepresented nonprofessional employees assigned to Kenner.

Prior to March 9, 1977, the Personnel Department of the Defense General Supply Center in Richmond provided personnel services to the DGSC Clinic, but since that date such services have been provided by the Personnel Department of the U.S. Army Quartermaster Center and Fort Lee. Although, the Chief of the Clinic has authority over the day-to-day operations of the Clinic, ultimate supervision and direction of the Clinic resides in Kenner. Thus, the employees of the Clinic perform essentially the same job functions as other components of Kenner, receive special training and telephonic technical assistance from Kenner, are in the same competitive area for the purposes of promotion as Kenner employees and, although, in a different competitive area for reduction-in-force procedures, are, in all other aspects, treated as Kenner employees with like benefits and services. Further, although the Chief of the Clinic has authority to authorize leave and to establish vacation schedules, such matters are granted pursuant to policies established by Kenner at Fort Lee. In addition, the record reveals that authority for the final resolution of grievances resides in the Commander of Kenner.

Based on the foregoing circumstances, I find that the petitioned for unit is not appropriate for the purpose of exclusive recognition. In this regard, it is noted that while the petitioned for unit may contain all the unrepresented nonprofessional employees administratively assigned to Kenner, the record does not establish that the claimed employees would constitute a residual unit of all the unrepresented employees of the components of the exclusively recognized unit currently represented by AFGE Local 1178, described in footnote 2 above, or that it is a residual unit of MEDDAC, Fort Lee, which is one of the components of the exclusively recognized unit that includes Kenner. As the employees in the claimed unit share similar job classifications, skills and duties with the employees in the exclusively recognized unit at Fort Lee, and are subject to the same personnel policies, personnel practices and labor relations policies as the employees in AFGE Local 1178's unit, established by the Fort Lee Civilian Personnel Office, I find that the petitioned for unit would not promote effective dealings and efficiency of agency operations but, rather, would lead to artificial fragmentation, and that the establishment of such a unit would be inconsistent with the objective as expressed by the Federal Labor Relations Council of promoting more comprehensive bargaining unit structures in the Federal sector. 5/

Accordingly, I shall order that the petition in the instant case be dismissed.

5/ See Defense Supply Agency, Defense Contract Administration Services Region (DCASR), San Francisco, California, Defense Contract Administration Services District (DCASD), Salt Lake City, Utah, FLRC No. 75A-14; Defense Supply Agency, Defense Contract Administration Services Region, San Francisco, FLRC No. 75A-128; and Defense Supply Agency, Defense Contract Administration Services Region (DCASR), San Francisco, Defense Contract Administration Services District (DCASD), Seattle, Washington, FLRC No. 76A-4 (1976).

ORDER

IT IS HEREBY ORDERED that the petition in Case No. 22-08021(RO) be, and it hereby is, dismissed.

Case No. S-E-10 1/

This case involved a complaint filed by the Director, Office of Labor-Management Standards Enforcement (LMSE), against the National Association of Government Employees, Local 12-69-R, alleging that the Respondent labor organization violated Section 18(c) of the Order by failing to file certain required financial disclosure reports.

DIRECTOR, OFFICE OF LABOR-MANAGEMENT STANDARDS ENFORCEMENT, UNITED STATES DEPARTMENT OF LABOR

Complainant

The Administrative Law Judge concluded, in essence, that the Respondent had violated Section 18(c) of the Order by failing to file the reports at issue. In this regard, he noted that the Respondent had been appropriately notified of the hearing scheduled on this matter, but had failed to enter an appearance at the proceeding. In view of the Respondent's failure to appear, and on the basis of evidence introduced by the Complainant at the hearing, he found the allegations contained in the complaint to be true, and recommended that the Respondent be directed to file the delinquent reports.

DECISION AND ORDER

The Assistant Secretary adopted the findings, conclusions and recommendation of the Administrative Law Judge, and issued an appropriate remedial order.

On March 17, 1978, Administrative Law Judge Thomas Schneider issued his Recommended Decision and Order in the above-entitled proceeding, finding that the Respondent labor organization had failed to file certain required financial reports, thereby, in essence, violating Section 18(c) of Executive Order 11491, as amended. No exceptions were filed with respect to the Administrative Law Judge's Recommended Decision and Order.

The Administrative Law Judge concluded that the Respondent failed to file Labor Organization Annual Report Form LM-3 for the fiscal years ending December 31, 1975, and December 31, 1976, thereby violating 29 CFR Part 403, as made applicable by Section 204.3 of the Assistant Secretary's Regulations and Section 18(c) of the Executive Order. 2/ In reaching this conclusion, he noted that although the Respondent had adequate notice, it failed to appear at the hearing. He found the allegations of the complaint to be true based upon evidence introduced at the hearing and the fact that no answer or pleading was made by the Respondent. 3/ The Administrative Law Judge recommended that the Respondent be directed to file Labor Organization Annual Report Form LM-3 for the fiscal years ending December 31, 1975, and December 31, 1976.

The Assistant Secretary has reviewed the rulings of the Administrative Law Judge made at the hearing and finds that no prejudicial error was committed. The rulings are hereby affirmed. Upon consideration of the Administrative Law Judge's Recommended Decision and Order, and the entire record in the subject case, I hereby adopt the findings, conclusions and recommendation of the Administrative Law Judge, as modified herein.

Pursuant to Section 204.91 of the Assistant Secretary's Regulations implementing the Standards of Conduct provisions of Section 18 of the Order, the Assistant Secretary for Labor-Management Relations hereby orders that the National Association of Government Employees, Local 12-69-R, shall:

1. Cease and desist from:

Failing to file Labor Organization Annual Report Form LM-3 for the fiscal years ending December 31, 1975, and December 31, 1976.

2/ Section 18(c) of the Executive Order provides, in pertinent part: "A labor organization which has or seeks recognition as a representative of employees under this Order shall file financial and other reports...."

29 CFR Part 403 sets forth various requirements for the form and content of labor organization annual financial reports, including filing deadlines.

Section 204.3 of the Assistant Secretary's Regulations provides, in pertinent part: "The reporting provisions of Parts 402, 403, and 408 of Chapter IV of this title shall apply to labor organizations subject to Executive Order 11491, as amended...."

3/ Section 204.69(b)(2) of the Assistant Secretary's Regulations provides, in pertinent part: "Failure to file an answer to or plead specifically to any allegation in the complaint shall constitute an admission of such allegation."

4/ As noted by the Administrative Law Judge, the Respondent has made no effort to comply with the processes of the Executive Order in resolving this complaint. In this regard, it is noted that under Section 204.92 of the Assistant Secretary's Regulations, upon a failure to comply with an order to take remedial action, the Assistant Secretary may order cancellation of dues deduction, withdrawal of recognition, or referral to the Federal Labor Relations Council as appropriate.

2. Take the following affirmative actions in order to effectuate the purposes and policies of Executive Order 11491, as amended:

(a) File Labor Organization Annual Report Form LM-3 for the fiscal years ending December 31, 1975, and December 31, 1976, with the Office of Labor-Management Standards Enforcement, U.S. Department of Labor, as required by Section 18(c) of Executive Order 11491, as amended.

(b) In the future, file promptly all similar financial and other reports as they become due, as required by Section 18(c) of the Order.

RECOMMENDED DECISION AND ORDER

Findings of Fact and Conclusions

A complaint was filed herein on behalf of the Director, Office of Labor-Management Standards Enforcement, United States Department of Labor, (hereinafter "Director") on September 13, 1977. The complaint alleged that Respondent failed to file Labor Organization Annual Reports Form LM-3 for fiscal years ending December 31, 1975, and December 31, 1976.

Hearing on the complaint was first scheduled for December 8, 1977, and then rescheduled for January 19, 1978, and rescheduled again for February 23, 1978, at which time said hearing was held in San Francisco. Mrs. Winifred Murphy, President of Respondent, had actual notice of the hearing on February 23, 1978, in that the Administrative Law Judge, who held the hearing, gave her such notice by telephone on January 19, 1978, as well as notice having been sent later by certified and regular mail to 9 Alta Drive, Petaluma, California 94952, the mailing address of Respondent appearing in the Director's file.

Respondent failed to appear at the hearing on February 23, 1978. The Director appeared by his attorney, Mildred Lau Wheeler. No party filed any briefs. On the basis of the evidence introduced at the hearing and under 29 C.F.R. § 204.69(b)(2) the allegations of the complaint are found to be true, and in particular, it is found that Respondent failed to file Labor Organization Annual Reports Form LM-3 for the fiscal years ending December 31, 1975, and December 31, 1976, thereby violating 29 C.F.R. Part 403, as made applicable by 29 C.F.R. § 204.3 and § 18(c) of Executive Order 11491.

Recommended Order

The Respondent is directed to file Labor Organization Annual Reports Form LM-3 for the fiscal years ending December 31, 1975, and December 31, 1976.

OF THE ASSISTANT SECRETARY
PURSUANT TO SECTION 6 OF EXECUTIVE ORDER 11491, AS AMENDED

MARSHALL SPACE FLIGHT CENTER, MARSHALL SPACE FLIGHT CENTER, ALABAMA
A/SLMR No. 1060

This case involved an Application for Decision on Grievability or Arbitrability filed by the Marshall Engineers and Scientists Association, Local 27, International Federation of Professional and Technical Engineers (Applicant) challenging a determination by the Marshall Space Flight Center (Activity) that a grievance filed by the Applicant was not grievable or arbitrable under the parties' negotiated agreement.

The Applicant contended that the Activity violated the negotiated agreement when it filled two supervisory positions from outside the unit, although unit members had applied. The Activity maintained that the grievance could not be processed under the negotiated grievance procedure because the positions involved were management positions outside the Applicant's bargaining unit.

The Administrative Law Judge found that because the grievance involved a matter which arguably concerned the interpretation and application of the negotiated agreement, the dispute was over a matter within the scope of the negotiated grievance procedure and, therefore, should be referred to an arbitrator. In this regard, he also found that there was no prohibition in either the Order or the parties' agreement which would preclude the processing of a grievance on the filling of supervisory vacancies.

The Assistant Secretary adopted the findings, conclusions and recommendation of the Administrative Law Judge, and ordered the Activity to take appropriate action to implement his finding.

DECISION ON GRIEVABILITY-ARBITRABILITY

On March 9, 1978, Administrative Law Judge George A. Fath issued his Recommended Decision and Order in the above-entitled proceeding, finding that the subject matter of the grievance herein was subject to the grievance-arbitration procedure under the parties' negotiated agreement. Thereafter, the Activity filed exceptions with respect to the Administrative Law Judge's Recommended Decision and Order.

The Assistant Secretary has reviewed the rulings of the Administrative Law Judge made at the hearing and finds that no prejudicial error was committed. The rulings are hereby affirmed. Upon consideration of the Administrative Law Judge's Recommended Decision and Order and the entire record in the subject case, including the Activity's exceptions, I hereby adopt the Administrative Law Judge's findings, conclusions and recommendation. Thus, I find that the issue raised by the grievance herein concerning whether certain provisions of the negotiated agreement are applicable to supervisory positions involves a question of interpretation and application of the negotiated agreement and, therefore, is grievable and arbitrable.

FINDING

IT IS HEREBY FOUND that the grievance in Case No. 40-7474(GA) is subject to the grievance and arbitration procedures under the terms of the parties' negotiated agreement.

ORDER

Pursuant to Section 6(a)(5) of Executive Order 11491, as amended, and Section 205.12(a) of the Regulations, it is hereby ordered that the Marshall Space Flight Center shall notify the Assistant Secretary of Labor for Labor-Management Relations, in writing, within 30 days from the date of this order as to what steps have been taken to comply with the above finding.

Before: GEORGE A. FATH

This is a proceeding on an application for Decision on Grievability or Arbitrability, filed pursuant to Section 13(d) of the Executive Order 11491, as amended (hereinafter referred to as the Order), and the provisions of Section 205 of the Regulations (40 Fed. Reg. 89 (1975) by Marshall Engineers and Scientists Association (MESA) and Marshall Space Flight Center (hereinafter called the Activity).

After timely notice a formal hearing on the application was conducted at Huntsville, Alabama. The parties, who were represented by counsel, were given full opportunity to present evidence, oral argument, and briefs on the issues. The hearing was stenographically reported. Briefs were submitted and filed with the record. This decision follows termination of the hearing and it is based on the entire record.

Statement of Proceedings

The Regional Administrator, Atlanta Region, conducted an investigation into the grievance matters alleged in the application for decision. In a Report and Findings on Grievability, dated October 6, 1976, the Commissioner concluded "that the matters grieved are not subject to the Articles cited by the Appellant in its grievance".

The Assistant Secretary granted a request for review of the Regional Administrator's determination and after review remanded the case for hearing to resolve questions of fact and intent of the parties by taking a record of testimony.

Accordingly, the Regional Commissioner issued a notice of hearing and advised the parties that evidence should be adduced at the hearing as to: (1) the collective bargaining agreement between the parties in effect at the time of incident giving rise to the application, including the effective date and duration of this agreement, the grievance procedure contained therein, and the scope of his procedure; (2) the factual circumstances surrounding the incident giving rise to the grievance generating the application, including the dates of the announcements and filling of the vacancies in question; (3) the filing and the processing of the grievance at a issue, including the date the grievance procedure was invoked, those provisions of the parties' negotiated agreement alleged to have been violated, and the position of the Activity at each step in the processing of the grievance; (4) the relevant provisions of the negotiated agreement including the bargaining history of these provisions, the intentions of the parties in their negotiations, and the past practices of the parties regarding their application; especially relevant is the intention of the parties regarding to what extent Article 23 applies to positions outside the bargaining unit for which bargaining unit employees may apply; (5) the denial of the grievability or arbitrability of the matter by the Activity and the rationale behind this denial; and (6) the grounds upon which the Applicant asserts the matter to be grievable or arbitrable.

Agreement

The following are excerpts from the Agreement between the parties effective February 5, 1974 are pertinent to a determination of the issue:

The purpose of this plan is to assure selection from among the best qualified persons available to fill vacancies on the basis of merit, fitness, and qualifications and without regard to race, color, religion, national origin, marital status, sex, age, physical handicap, union affiliation, personal favoritism or political affiliations. The merit promotion plan does not guarantee promotion but rather is intended to assure that all qualified employees receive fair and equitable consideration for promotional opportunities.

Section 23.13. In the event a selecting official fails to select a Highly Qualified candidate who is entitled to consideration for repromotion, he will document his reasons for non-selection. Upon request this documentation will be furnished the employee and/or the UNION President.

DETAILS

Section 25.01. A detail is the temporary assignment of an employee to a different position for a specified period, with the employee returning to his regular duties at the end of the detail. The EMPLOYER may detail employees where such action will relieve a temporary shortage of personnel, will reduce an exceptional volume of work, or will enable more effective administration by permitting necessary flexibility in assigning the work force. All details will be made in conformity with appropriate law and regulations set forth in the Federal Personnel Manual.

Section 25.08. The EMPLOYER will control the duration of details and assure that the details do not compromise the open-competitive principle of the merit system or the principles of job evaluation.

ARTICLE 28

REDUCTION IN FORCE

Section 28.06. Demotions resulting from positions being downgraded other than by correction of a classification error or from a change in classification standards will be accomplished in accordance with reduction-in-force procedures. An employee demoted in NASA without personal cause is entitled to special consideration for repromotion to any vacancy for which he is qualified and in the area of consideration at his former grade (or any intervening grade) before any attempt is made to fill the position by other means. Lists of employees demoted during reduction in force will be established by the EMPLOYER to avoid overlooking them when promotion opportunities occur.

Section 28.07. Employees eligible for repromotion will be given special consideration for promotion vacancies prior to announcement of such vacancies under the Merit Promotion Plan. A file of repromotion consideration memoranda will be maintained in the Labor Relations Office for UNION reference. In the event the vacancy is subsequently announced, repromotion eligibles will be notified by a copy of such announcement.

UNION PROPOSALS REJECTED BY MANAGEMENT

The following proposals, made by the Union during the negotiations leading up to the Agreement, were rejected by the Activity:

ARTICLE XXI

PROMOTIONS AND ASSIGNMENTS

Section 1. All promotional and other job opportunities which are covered by the merit promotion plan and for which Unit employees may be qualified, including supervisory positions, will be advertised by posting on official bulletin boards within the Center and by publication in at least one (1) issue of the Marshall Star (or any subsequent Center newspaper). Announcements will owmain (sic) open a minimum of ten (10) working days. The Employer will furnish the Union a copy of each such announcement prior to the time that it is posted on the official bulletin boards.

Section 2. The minimum area of consideration for GS-14 and GS-15 positions and all supervisory positions for which Unit members may be qualified will be Center-wide. For other positions the area of consideration may be restricted to a major organizational element but it is desirable to have this area of consideration Center-wide also. The area of consideration may be extended or limited as set forth by the merit promotion plan only with the concurrence of the Union Representative on the rating panel or the Union President.

Section 19. The Employer will provide a career development plan, including supervisory and management positions, for the advancement of all Unit employees. The Union will assist management in establishing a career development plan.

Findings of Fact

At all times pertinent hereto, there was a collective bargaining agreement between the parties effective February 5, 1974, covering a term of two years. 1/

Article 11, Grievance Procedure, of the Agreement provides a procedure for the settlement of grievances of the parties and the Unit employees involving the interpretation or application of the Agreement through the procedure contained therein. Unresolved grievances are subject to arbitration under the provisions of Article 12, Grievance Arbitration, of the Agreement.

On forms captioned "Job Opportunities - Merit Promotion Plan", the Activity announced the filling of two supervisory positions, Grades GS-15, for Deputy Director of the Systems Dynamics Laboratory, and Chief Manager of the Engineering Management Office in the Shuttle Projects Office. The opening and closing dates for applications for both positions were April 21, 1976 and April 30, 1976. These positions, outside the bargaining unit, were filled by management from outside the unit though members of the unit had applied.

In a letter to the Activity dated May 28, 1976, the Union charged violations of Articles 3, 6, 23, 25, and 28 of the Agreement, and suggested meeting to resolve the grievance pursuant to the grievance procedure contained in the Agreement. The charges underlying the Union grievance over the selections are set out in the letter: preselection; special consideration not given Repromotion Eligibles; reasons for non-selection of repromotion eligible not persuasive; improper promotion panel membership; ranking procedure by panel improper; application of provisions of MESA-MSFC contract agreement not applied; some repromotion eligibles not sent notice of promotion announcement at time of distribution in accordance with Article 28.07.

The response of the Activity is contained in a letter of 1/ Effective March 25, 1977, the parties entered into a successor agreement for a term of three years.

June 8, 1976, in which it informed the Union that the grievance could not be accepted for processing under the provisions of Article 11, Grievance Procedure because the positions are MSFC management positions and not in the MESA bargaining unit.

The evidence produced by the parties relative to the negotiations leading up to the agreement, the meaning of the provisions relative to supervisory positions, and the intended coverage of the grievance procedure is in conflict.

Mr. Richard J. Persons, International Representative for the International Federation of Professional and Technical Engineers, who was the Chief Negotiator for the Union during the contract negotiations, was called by and gave testimony for the Union. With reference to the extent to which the Union wanted to represent the employees, he testified "We said, 'All promotional and other job opportunities which are covered by the merit promotion plan and for which unit employees may be qualified including supervisory positions'." He said that Section 23.10 was written into the contract in response to the Union's proposal that it have access to certain data in order to intelligently represent the employees in the Unit who might be aggrieved in the selection process for filling vacancies. The Union did not assert the right to represent supervisors applying for supervisory or managerial positions. He quoted management as stating "... you have got to recognize that you do not represent supervisors, however, if a Bargaining Unit employee applies for a supervisory position, we will agree to give you what is necessary in 23.10 in order for you to intelligently represent that employee" (T. 26). It was the Union's intention that this information would be used in the event an employee applied for a supervisory position and felt grieved because of nonselection (T. 27).

Mr. Robert Lewis, alternate spokesman for the Union in the negotiations, corroborated the testimony of Mr. Persons. He testified that the Union continuously expressed an intention to cover promotions in the bargaining unit into threshold supervisory positions, i.e. to be able to grieve the procedural aspects of the promotion process.

Lewis cited the Funderburk case as an example of the parties' accord on the coverage of the grievance procedure. That case involved a repromotion eligible who grieved his nonselection for a supervisory position. The matter was processed pursuant to the grievance and arbitration provisions of the contract without objection from the Activity.

However, when the present grievance was discussed by the parties, the Activity took the position that it was not obligated to negotiate supervisory promotional procedures, and, therefore, it was not obligated to enter into grievance procedure over these supervisory positions.

Mr. Gerald D. Fox, Personnel Director, who was the Alternate Chief Spokesman for the Activity during negotiations stated that the Activity had no intention of including supervisory positions within the provisions of Article 23, Promotions and Assignments. He recalled that the original Union proposal on the subject, submitted as Article XXI, containing references to supervisory positions was rejected by the Activity. He said the reference to supervisory positions was consciously negotiated out of the Agreement, and therefore, no reference to supervisory positions appears in Article 23 of the Agreement. The Union explains that this proposal in Article XXI was withdrawn because management suggested that the use of the term supervisory positions in the proposal was a redundancy inasmuch as the article under discussion (Article 23) covered all positions.

Fox was questioned on the Funderburk case. He explained that the Activity accepted that grievance through administrative error. The Activity did not know that the position over which Funderburk grieved was a supervisory position.

The testimony of Fox dealt largely with interpreting the provisions of the Agreement to the effect that the Activity is not bound to the grievance procedure in this instance.

Mr. Arthur E. Sanderson, who was Chief Negotiator for the Activity during the negotiations, was called by the Activity. He had little recall of the negotiations relative to supervisory positions, and he did not recall that there was any discussion of the application of the grievance procedure to those positions. He testified without aids to memory and his testimony lacked detail. However, based on the feelings he had at the time, he was sure he was not going to let supervisory positions be included in any part of the contract.

Issue

Whether the grievance of the Union, the manner of filling supervisory positions by the Activity, is on a matter subject to the grievance-arbitration procedure contained in their existing Agreement.

Conclusions of Law

Under the Order, as amended, questions as to whether or not a grievance is on a matter subject to the grievance procedure in an existing agreement are referable to the Assistant Secretary for decision.

Section 6(a)(5) provides that the Assistant Secretary shall "decide questions as to whether a grievance is subject to a negotiated grievance procedure or subject to arbitration under an agreement as provided in Section 13(d) of this Order".

Section 13(d) of the Order, as amended, provides:

(d) Questions that cannot be resolved by the parties as to whether or not a grievance is on a matter for which a statutory appeal procedure exists, shall be referred to the Assistant Secretary for decision. Other questions as to whether or not a grievance is on a matter subject to the grievance procedure in an existing agreement, or is subject to arbitration under that agreement, may by agreement of the parties be submitted to arbitration or may be referred to the Assistant Secretary for decision.

The parties do not contend that this is a matter for which a statutory appeal exists.

The responsibilities of the Assistant Secretary under the foregoing sections were addressed by the Federal Labor Relations Council in Department of the Navy, Naval Communications Depot, Crane, Indiana, Assistant Secretary Case No. 50-9667, FLRC No. 74A-19 (Feb. 7, 1975), Report No. 63.

In Community Services Administration, Assistant Secretary Case No. 749, FLRC No. 76A-149 (Aug. 17, 1977), Report No. 124, the Council restated and clarified the principles of Crane.

The issue presented in that case is analogous to the one at hand. The Agency selected an outside applicant for a position over in-house applicants, one of whom was a member of the bargaining unit. There as here, the Union filed a grievance under the parties' negotiated grievance procedure contending that the agency did not adhere to the agreement in filling the vacancy. In the Community Services case, the Council found that the Assistant Secretary interpreted the substantive provisions of the agreement rather than simply whether the grievance involved the interpretation or application of the agreement when he determined that the position was a policy position and excluded from coverage of the grievance procedure of the agreement. In its decision, the Council repeated the conclusions of the Crane case, and further defined the Assistant Secretary's role in deciding whether a dispute is or is not subject to a particular negotiated grievance procedure:

... (1) where an issue is presented concerning the applicability of a statutory appeal procedure, the Assistant Secretary must decide that question; (2) where a dispute is referred to him as to whether a grievance is on a matter subject to a negotiated grievance procedure, the Assistant Secretary must decide such grievability dispute; and (3) in resolving the dispute referred to in (2), above, the Assistant Secretary must consider the relevant agreement provisions (including those provisions which describe the scope and coverage of the negotiated grievance procedure and any substantive provisions of the agreement which are being grieved) in light of related provisions of statute, the Order, and regulations, more particularly where special meaning is attached to words used in the relevant agreement provisions by such statute, regulation, or the Order and there is no indication that any other than the special meaning was intended by the parties.

In deciding whether a dispute is or is not subject to a particular negotiated grievance procedure, it is the responsibility of the Assistant Secretary to consider those "provisions which describe the scope and coverage of the negotiated grievance procedure," i.e., the general scope of such procedure as well as any specific exclusions contained therein. That is, he must decide, just as an arbitrator would decide at the outset in the Federal sector (or as an arbitrator or the Federal court would in the private sector) whether the grievance involves a dispute which the parties intended to be resolved through their negotiated grievance procedure. The Assistant Secretary's consideration of "substantive provisions of the agreement being grieved" would be for the limited purpose of determining whether the grievance involves a claim which on its face is covered by the contract, i.e., involves a matter which arguably concerns the meaning or application of the substantive provision(s) being grieved and which the parties intended to be resolved under the negotiated grievance procedure.

In the same case, the Council noted that the description of the Assistant Secretary's responsibilities under Section 13 (d) of the Order is also in accord with the role of Federal Labor-Management Relations Act (29 U.S.C. 185) to compel specific performance of an arbitration agreement.

The Courts have declined to judge the merits and equities of grievances. The decisions favor arbitration where it is arguably within the scope of the agreement. Where the parties have agreed to submit all questions of contract interpretation to arbitration, the function of the court is confined to determining whether a claim of arbitrability on its face is governed by the contract. Whether a moving party is right or wrong is a question of contract interpretation for the arbitrator. "The Courts, therefore, have no business weighing the merits of the grievance, considering whether there is equity in a particular claim, or determining whether there is particular language in the written instrument which will support the claim." United Steelworkers of America v. American Manufacturing Co., 363 U.S. 564 (1960). The grievance and arbitration provisions of the agreement give it life and are a part of the continuous collective bargaining process. Except for those matters which are specifically excluded from coverage, all questions on which the parties disagree must come within the scope of the grievance and arbitration provisions of the collective bargaining agreement. United Steelworkers v.

Warrior and Gulf Navigation Co., 363 U.S. 574 (1960).

The rules applicable to this case require consideration of the following: Is the subject matter grievable under the Order as amended? Is the subject matter of the grievance in this case excluded from coverage of the grievance procedure contained in the Agreement between the parties? Is there a dispute between the parties involving the interpretation and application of the Agreement?

The Activity contends that supervisors and management officials are excluded from the bargaining unit by Section 10(b) of the Order, as amended, and, therefore, it has a right to refuse to bargain on matters pertaining to the filling of supervisory positions. Inasmuch as Section 10(b) deals with recognition, this argument is inappropriate since there are no questions of recognition or composition of the unit presented by this case.

It argues that management has the recognized right to refuse to bargain on matters pertaining to the filling of supervisory positions. It cites Texas ANG Council of Locals, AFGE and State of Texas National Guard, FLRC No. 74A-71 (Mar. 3, 1976), Report No. 100, and correctly so, in support of the principle that under the Order an Agency has no obligation to bargain on procedures for the filling of supervisory positions outside the bargaining unit. However, that case also holds that the Agency may at its option bargain on such proposals. TANG is not in point and it is not applicable. This case is concerned with the interpretation of the grievance-arbitration provisions of an existing agreement, rather than with the appropriateness of the subject matter for negotiation. The time for raising an objection to the subject matter of bargaining is past. In short, the argument does not address the question as to whether or not the subject of the grievance in this case is a proper matter for processing under the grievance procedure of the parties' Agreement.

If the parties are not prohibited by the Order from negotiating procedures for the filling of supervisory positions, it follows as a corollary from TANG that the Order does not void such provisions in existing agreements. This reasoning, applied to this case, leads to the conclusion that the subject matter of the Union's grievance, the filling of supervisory positions, is not barred by the Order.

Section 11.01 of Article 11, Grievance Procedure, of the Agreement between these parties states clearly that the purpose of the Article is to provide a mutually satisfactory procedure for the settlement of grievances involving the interpretation or application of the Agreement. Article 12, Grievance Arbitration, provides arbitration as the means of settling unresolved grievances resulting from dissatisfaction of the employees or the Union. The text of these Articles indicates an intent, on the part of the drafters to make the grievance-arbitration procedure the sole and exclusive means of resolving disputes over the meaning of the Agreement. Neither Article contains exceptions to coverage, and the language implies universality. The Articles applies to all grievances involving matters of interpretation and application of the Agreement.

The parties gave little attention to the meaning and scope of the grievance procedure contained in their agreement. Instead, they focused on Article 23, Promotions and Assignments. Each contended that its interpretation of that Article was dispositive of the issue in the case. The Union said it intended to include supervisory positions in the terms of the Article. The Activity stated that provisions affecting supervisory positions were consciously negotiated out of the agreement and pointed to its rejection of a Union proposal that would have included supervisory positions. The Union contended that Section 23.04 of the Agreement covers all vacancies. The Activity finds that all vacancies are not covered by the Article because Section 23.11 of the Agreement contains an express recognition by the parties that supervisory positions are outside the bargaining unit. The Activity finds it abundantly clear that the Union was not entitled to copies of supervisory promotion announcements under Section 23.04 of the Agreement.

With all respect due and accorded to the arguments of the parties, the Agreement is not abundantly clear as to what vacancies must be posted, and which supervisory positions, if any, are included within the meaning of the Article on Promotions and Assignments. Section 23.11 places the Union in a position of being able to obtain selection criteria where a unit member applies for a supervisory position. Section 28.07 requires the Activity to give special consideration to repromotion eligibles irrespective of whether they are being considered for supervisory positions. The handling of the Funderburk case, which involved arbitration of a grievance over the selection to fill a supervisory vacancy by a repromotion eligible, seems to belie the Activity's present position. But, to go beyond simply posing these questions is to interpret the substantive provisions of the Agreement. For purposes of this decision, it suffices to find that the parties are in dispute on a matter involving the interpretation and application of the Agreement.

In summary, therefore, it is found: that the Order does not prohibit the processing of a grievance on the matter of filling supervisory vacancies under the provisions of an existing agreement; that the Agreement between the parties does not exclude the matter of filling supervisory positions from the operation of the grievance procedure; and, that the parties are in dispute involving the interpretation and application of the Agreement.

The Union's grievance involves a matter, which, at least, arguably concerns the meaning or application of the contract. Under these circumstances, and, in the absence of a prohibition in the Order or in their Agreement, the parties are bound to follow the procedures established by their contract for settling disputes involving the interpretation and application of the Agreement.

The purposes of the Order and the effectuation of the Agreement will be best served by the continuing collective bargaining opportunity afforded the parties by their contract.

For the reasons stated, it recommended that the case be returned to the parties for further proceedings.

Recommended Order

In consideration of the foregoing, it is recommended that the Assistant Secretary find that the subject matter of the Union's grievance is subject to the grievance-arbitration procedure in the Agreement in effect between the parties at the time the grievance arose, and that the matter be returned to the parties for processing in accordance with that Agreement.

SUMMARY OF DECISION AND ORDER OF THE ASSISTANT SECRETARY
PURSUANT TO SECTION 6 OF EXECUTIVE ORDER 11491, AS AMENDED

DEPARTMENT OF THE TREASURY,
U.S. CUSTOMS SERVICE, REGION VI,
HOUSTON, TEXAS
A/SLMR No. 1061

This case involved an unfair labor practice complaint filed by the National Treasury Employees Union (NTEU), and NTEU Houston Chapter 163, alleging that the Respondent violated Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order when it restricted certain types of overtime work and pay for employees in Customs Region VI without negotiations regarding the impact upon the employees involved.

The Administrative Law Judge concluded that the Respondent had not violated Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order and recommended that the complaint be dismissed. He found, in this regard, that the NTEU had failed to request bargaining on the impact of some of the overtime restrictions proposed by the Respondent, and that the Respondent did, in fact, bargain in good faith regarding the impact of those changes about which it was requested to negotiate.

Noting particularly the absence of exceptions, the Assistant Secretary adopted the findings, conclusions and recommendation of the Administrative Law Judge and ordered that the complaint be dismissed.

RECOMMENDED DECISION

Statement of the Case

This is an Unfair Labor Practice proceeding in which a formal hearing of record was held in Houston, Texas on August 16, 1977, pursuant to Executive Order 11491, as amended, (hereinafter referred to as the Order). In a complaint dated July 21, 1976, the Complainant alleged violations of Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order. It was also alleged that the Regional Commissioner on January 20, 1976 issued a memorandum restricting certain types of over-time work and pay for employees in Customs Region VI that was to be effective on February 1, 1976 and April 1, 1976. Specifically, it was stated in the complaint that: "The union field representative, J. Thornton, in Austin was notified telephonically by management of this proposal. Upon the insistence of Mr. Thornton, on February 18, 1976, a meeting was held in Houston with management and amongst other business, Mr. Thornton notified the representatives of management that NTEU's position was that the policy concerning uncontrollable overtime for Custom Patrol Officers was not being implemented on a fair and equitable basis, and further, outlined at that time the minimum requirements to which the union could subscribe. Management made no response at that time to the proposal. On February 25, 1976, an additional letter BUD-4-02-0 over the signature of Shelby L. White was sent to the District Director in Houston advising him that the requirements of the original letter of January 20, 1976 were to be implemented or scheduled as of April 1, 1976. The unilateral implementation of the policies in the letter are a gross violation of the principle of good faith bargaining in that no meaningful negotiations were ever undertaken between NTEU and Customs Management concerning actions that have severe impact on the employees involved."

The employees concerned in this proceeding are Customs Patrol Officers and Customs Inspectors. The memorandum of January 20, 1976 concerning overtime pay in Customs' Region VI restricted Customs Inspectors and Customs Patrol Officers overtime pay effective February 1, and April 1, 1976. The types of overtime pay effective February 1, 1976 were: (1) the Federal Employees Pay Act overtime, referred to herein as FEPA; and (2) non-reimbursable overtime, referred to as 1911; overtime effective April 1, 1976 is known as Administrative Uncontrollable Overtime, referred to herein as AUO, and applied to Customs Patrol Officers and not Custom Inspectors.

Upon the basis of the entire record, including the evidence adduced, the timely submitted briefs, and my observation of the witnesses and judgment as to their credibility, I make the following findings, conclusions and recommendation.

Findings of Fact

1. The National Treasury Employees Union (hereafter referred to as NTEU) is, and was at all times material herein, the exclusive bargaining representative for Custom Patrol Officers and Customs Inspector employees of Region VI, also known as the Houston Region of the United States Customs Service. There was pending however at the time Notice and restriction of overtime pay was effected a rival union RO petition challenging the status of NCSA's certification. 1/

2. On January 16, 1976, John S. Williams, Chief, Labor Employee Relations Branch, Region VI, U.S. Customs Service, Houston, Texas called James W. Thornton, NTEU Field Representative and advised him of forthcoming restrictions on overtime for Custom Patrol officers and Custom Inspectors in Region VI that would soon take place. The restrictions affecting the employees overtime included FEPA and 1911 to be effective February 1, 1976 and AUO effective April 1, 1976.

3. On January 20, 1976 the Regional Commissioner issued a memorandum to all District Directors regarding the "Budget for the remaining Fiscal Year 1976:", and it provided that effective February 1, 1976:

"1. The Customs Patrol - No FEPA will be used except in emergency situations.

2. All other divisions will cut FEPA overtime by 10 per cent.

"Administratively Uncontrollable Overtime

Effective April 1, 1976, the following restrictions will be observed:

(1) The following positions will be removed from AUO rolls

- (a) Regional Customs Patrol Office
- (b) All Houston District Patrol positions
- (c) At El Paso and Laredo, the Director and his principal assistants for Patrol.

1/ NTEU was certified by the Department of Labor in 1975 as exclusive representative of Region VI employees after National Customs Service Association (NCSA), affiliated with NTEU. The election to resolve the certification petition was completed April 8, 1976 and NTEU was certified as the victor on April 30, 1976. (Respondent's Exhibit No. 1).

(2) Custom Patrol positions located at Rio Grande City, McAllen and Brownsville will be reduced to 15 per cent. All other Customs Patrol positions will be reduced to 10 per cent.

"1911 - Non Reimbursable Overtime. All overtime in this category will be cut 33 1/3 per cent.

For border stations working vehicular traffic, it is directed that as many vehicles and passengers be worked in primary as possible. It is important that we keep all primary lanes open during peak traffic periods.

"Repairs - All repairs will be cut 33 1/3 per cent."

4. The AUO, FEPA and 1911 - Non Reimbursable Overtime provisions contained in the January 20, 1976 memorandum were implemented on February 1 and April 1, 1976 as stated in the memorandum.

5. NTEU Representative Thornton along with Jerry Klepner from NTEU headquarters met with Regional Commissioner of Customs Cleburne Maier, John Biondi, Director of the Personnel division, and John Williams, labor management chief on February 5, 1976 and among the topics discussed were the various restrictions relating to overtime work and pay.

6. On February 18, 1976, NTEU National Field Representative Thornton and Inspector Roger Rogers of Houston NTEU Chapter 163 met with Respondent Officials Assistant Regional Commissioner Modesto Canales, John Williams and John Biondi and overtime restrictions were again discussed. At the meeting the NTEU conceded or agreed with the overtime restrictions and action implemented as to FEPA and 1911 - non-reversible overtime 2/ but disagreed as to the proposed

2/ At the February 18, 1976 conference, Thornton testified:

Q. At that meeting did the union make a proposal?

A. Yes. Yes, we did. We -- our primary concern -- well, at this particular time, this stage of the procedure we knew that regarding 1911 overtime and 1945 FEPA overtime that if money did not exist, and we - we've made the expression several times to members of the unit and members of management (continued on next page)

AUO restrictions on the basis that the cut was not applied evenly throughout the entire region.

7. The Union made no request to bargain with respect to FEPA and 1911 non Reimbursable overtime after having been timely informed of the restrictions on January 16, 1976 before implementation on February 1, 1976.

8. The NTEU did make timely request to bargain as to Administratively Uncontrollable Overtime and this matter was discussed with management officials at bargaining sessions on February 5 and February 18, 1976.

9. The Respondent did not accept the recommendation or proposal made by Complainant Union with respect to AUO and the program was implemented on April 1, 1976.

10. The Respondent did in fact bargain with Complainant Union at its request regarding administratively uncontrollable overtime.

Principal Arguments

In its post-hearing brief the Complainant advanced argument that the Respondent (1) "Customs failed to bargain in good faith as required by Section 11(a) of Executive Order 11491, as amended, and therefore violated Sections 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order" and (2) "During the period in question, the mere pendency of a representation petition alone was insufficient basis for discontinuing recognition of the Complainant."

2/ (continued) that we were not in the money printing business and could not produce money, so it was a matter of getting it allocated otherwise, and if the money was not available it simply could not be paid.

"So in general we agreed with the 33 percent cut and the 10 per cent cut for those two particular types of overtime.

"That -- Our most immediate concern at that particular meeting was what to do about the CPO pay."

Later Thornton stated that while the matter of agreement was not discussed with management... "we felt that there was no other reasonable alternative. The fact that the funds did not exist, they could not be paid, and their proposal in this was fair and equitable because they cut for employees evenly throughout the entire region."

The Respondent advances three major points supporting its position: (1) "The proposal to restrict overtime for employees in Customs Region VI was transmitted to the National Field Representative of NTEU prior to the proposed effective date." (2) "That after being notified on January 16, 1976, of the proposed restrictions in overtime NTEU did not request impact and implementation bargaining until February 10, 1976, and then only on the proposed restrictions in AUO." (3) "Management of Customs Region VI did bargain in good faith with NTEU on the impact and implementation of the proposal to restrict Administratively Uncontrollable Overtime."

The Complainant charges in effect that the Respondent violated Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order by its action in unilaterally reducing overtime work hours and pay of its custom inspectors and Custom Patrol Officers in the Houston, Texas area without negotiation with the Complainant as to impact and implementation resulting from changed working conditions of bargaining unit employees.

Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of Executive Order 11491 provides that "Agency management shall not (1) interfere with, restrain or coerce an employee in the exercise of rights assured by this Order; and (6) refuse to consult, confer or negotiate with a labor organization as required by this Order."

Discussion and Conclusions

1. Neither at the hearing or in its brief did the Respondent seriously contend that the pendency of a rival labor organization petition was a basis for not recognizing the Complainant Union. I conclude from the record that NTEU was at all times material herein, the exclusive bargaining representative for Custom Patrol Officers and Customs Inspector employees in Region VI (Houston), of the United States Customs Service.

2. The record supports Respondents position that NTEU was notified of management's January 16, 1976 proposal to restrict FEPA and 1911 - Non reimbursable overtime effective February 1, 1976, and Administrative Uncontrollable overtime on April 1, 1976. While the importance or significance of the FEPA and 1911 restrictions may not have been fully apparent, there was more than two weeks notice before their implementation without any request for bargaining. There is no dispute between the parties that the proposed decision to cut overtime was management's prerogative under Section 12(b) of the Order and the Union's right to bargain was limited to impact and implementation. There was no timely request to bargain after Notice and even after the FEPA and 1911 overtime restrictions were made effective, it was conceded in effect that NTEU had no quarrel with the manner, method and fairness of management's decision in effectuating the FEPA and 1911 restrictions. I conclude that, management in Customs Region VI did not violate Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order by unilaterally implementing the proposed cuts in FEPA and 1911 overtime on February 1, 1976, after notifying NTEU of this proposal on January 16, 1976 and having received no request to bargain on impact and implementation by NTEU. See, Department of Air Force, Norton Air Force Base, A/SLMR 261; Bureau of Medicine and Surgery, Great Lakes Naval Hospital, A/SLMR 289; Albany Metallurgy Research Center, U.S. Bureau of Mines, A/SLMR 408; United States Air Force Electronics Systems Division (AFSC), Hanscom Air Force Base, A/SLMR 571, In Social Security Administration, Bureau of Hearings and Appeals, Dallas, Texas, A/SLMR 816, the Assistant Secretary held where the Agency notified the Union of its decision to establish a new program, and the union failed to request bargaining concerning the impact and implementation of the institution of the new program, management did not violate Sections 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order by failing to negotiate on impact prior to implementation.

3. There is no dispute that advanced notice of proposed restrictions in Administrative Uncontrollable Overtime was furnished the Union on January 16, 1976 and was briefly discussed by NTEU Representative Thornton with Management officials on February 5, 1976. Thereafter, Complainant on February 10, 1976 made a written demand to bargain on impact. On February 18, 1976 Union representatives met with management officials and expressed the opinion that the proposed AUO cuts in overtime were inequitable. The union proposed equalized cuts regionwide. Respondent replied that certain border cities such as Rio Grande City, McAllen and Brownsville, Texas were allotted the greatest percentage of CPO overtime because of the greater need for surveillance in these areas since they were hot spots for introduction of drugs into the country. It was not felt by management that a city like Houston, which was not on the border required the amount of AUO as the border cities. Other than the equalized regionwide cut that was unacceptable to management, no counterproposals were offered by the Complainant union and the meeting concluded without an agreement on the subject. There was no further request by the Complainant Union to bargain and the AUO restrictions were implemented by the Respondent and became effective April 1, 1976.

An agency is not required to succumb or agree to a complainant union's demands so long as it bargains on the unresolved issues in good faith. I conclude from all the evidence and circumstances in this matter that the Respondent did in fact bargain in good faith with the Complainant and did not refuse to consult, confer or negotiate with the Complainant union as required by the Order. 3/

I further conclude that the Respondent did not interfere with, restrain or coerce an employee in the exercise of rights assured by this Order; and, that Complainant has not sustained its burden of proving by a preponderance of the evidence that the Respondent violated the provisions of Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order.

RECOMMENDATION

Having found from the record 4/ that the Respondent has not engaged in certain conduct prohibited by Sections 19(a)(1) and (6) of Executive Order 11491, as amended; I recommend that the Assistant Secretary of Labor for Labor Management Relations enter an Order dismissing the complaint. herein in its entirety.

Dated: March 20, 1978

3/ I find it unnecessary to discuss the pendency of a rival union's petition in view of the fact that Respondent did not discontinue recognition of the Complainant union in this matter and in fact bargained with it in good faith.

4/ Having announced at the hearing that I would accept briefs if postmarked before the filing date, I consider them to have been timely received.

Case No. 22-07517(CA)

AMERICAN FEDERATION OF GOVERNMENT
EMPLOYEES, LOCAL 2303, AFL-CIO

Complainant

DECISION AND ORDER

This case involved an unfair labor practice complaint filed by the American Federation of Government Employees, Local 2303, AFL-CIO, (Complainant) alleging that the Respondents violated Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order by refusing to negotiate over a change in parking permit fees for employees represented exclusively by the Complainant.

On October 28, 1977, Administrative Law Judge William B. Devaney issued his Recommended Decision and Order in the above-entitled proceeding, finding that the Respondents had engaged in certain unfair labor practices and recommending that they cease and desist therefrom and take certain affirmative actions as set forth in the attached Administrative Law Judge's Recommended Decision and Order. Thereafter, the Respondents filed exceptions with respect to the Administrative Law Judge's Recommended Decision and Order.

In agreement with the Administrative Law Judge, the Assistant Secretary found that the Director, Metropolitan Washington Airport Service (Respondent Director) violated Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order by directing the Airport Manager, Dulles International Airport (Respondent Dulles) to impose new employee parking permit fees on employees in the unit exclusively represented by the Complainant. In this regard, the Assistant Secretary agreed with the Administrative Law Judge that the change in employee parking permit fees is a matter affecting working conditions within the meaning of Section 11(a) of the Order. Furthermore, he found that the terms of the negotiated agreement between the Complainant and Respondent Dulles did not constitute a clear and unmistakable waiver of the Complainant's right to bargain with Respondent Dulles on any such change in the parking permit fees merely because such change was instituted by a new policy developed at a higher agency level, i.e. by Respondent Director. In making such finding, he concluded that it would be inconsistent with the purposes and policies of the Order to permit a higher level of agency management to unilaterally change matters affecting working conditions established by a negotiated agreement when such a change is not required by law or regulations of an appropriate authority.

The Assistant Secretary has reviewed the rulings of the Administrative Law Judge made at the hearing and finds that no prejudicial error was committed. The rulings are hereby affirmed. Upon consideration of the Administrative Law Judge's Recommended Decision and Order and the entire record in the subject case, including the exceptions filed by the Respondents, I hereby adopt the Administrative Law Judge's findings, conclusions, and recommendations, only to the extent consistent herewith.

However, the Assistant Secretary found, contrary to the Administrative Law Judge, that the Respondent Dulles did not violate Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order. In this regard, he concluded that Respondent Dulles, in refusing to negotiate on the change in employee parking permit fees, was engaging in a ministerial act in compliance with the order of higher agency management, i.e. Respondent Director, regardless of the reasons it gave the Complainant for refusing to negotiate on the matter.

The American Federation of Government Employees, Local 2303, AFL-CIO, hereinafter called Complainant, was granted exclusive recognition in 1964 for a unit of all nonsupervisory Wage Grade employees assigned to Dulles International Airport. Dulles International Airport is a subordinate activity of the Metropolitan Washington Airport Service which is a non-national Federal Aviation Administration subdivision.

Accordingly, the Assistant Secretary ordered appropriate remedial action by the Respondent Director for the Section 19(a)(1) and (6) violations he had found and further ordered that those portions of the complaint alleging violations of Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order by Respondent Dulles be dismissed.

On April 16, 1976, the Director of the Metropolitan Washington Airport Service, hereinafter called Respondent Director, advised the Airport Manager of Dulles International Airport, hereinafter called Respondent Dulles, that the parking permit fees for employee parking at the Airport would be increased. Subsequently, Respondent Dulles advised the Complainant of the increase in the fee and the Complainant requested that Respondent Dulles negotiate in this regard. Respondent Dulles refused to negotiate with the Complainant, contending that the matter was not negotiable; however, it offered to "consult" with the Complainant on the matter.

The Administrative Law Judge found that the change in parking permit fees was a change in a working condition which constituted an appropriate subject for bargaining under Section 11(a) of the Order. He concluded also that there was no clear and unmistakable waiver in the negotiated agreement between the Complainant and Respondent Dulles with respect to the right to bargain over this matter. Consequently, he determined that the Respondent Director's order to the Airport Manager of Dulles violated Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order. He also found that Respondent Dulles violated Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order by unilaterally changing employee parking permit fees. In this regard he noted, among other things, that its stated reason for refusing to negotiate the change with the Complainant was that the matter was non-negotiable, rather than that it was ministerially implementing an order from higher agency management.

I agree with the Administrative Law Judge that the change in employee parking permit fees herein constituted a unilateral change of a negotiable working condition within the meaning of Section 11(a) of the Order. Further, it is noted that Article 3, Section 1, of the parties' negotiated agreement obligated Respondent Dulles to consult or negotiate on "...the development and application of personnel policies and practices related to working conditions which are within the discretion of the employer." ^{1/} In this regard, there is no evidence that at the time the negotiated agreement was entered into there were any outstanding regulations or policies of higher agency management, or of any appropriate authorities, which removed from the discretion of Respondent Dulles the authority to negotiate on employee parking permit fees. Nor does the record reflect that, subsequent to the time the negotiated agreement was entered into, any laws were passed, or policies or regulations of any appropriate authorities were adopted, circumscribing or limiting the authority of Respondent Dulles with respect to the matter of employee parking permit fees. Thus, in my view, under the provisions of the Executive Order and under the terms of the parties' negotiated agreement, Respondent Dulles was obligated to negotiate with the Complainant before changing employee parking permit fees. In this context, I find that when the Respondent Director ordered the imposition of the new parking permit fee he, in effect, improperly removed this previously negotiable matter from bargaining at the level of recognition.

^{1/} The term "Employer" is defined in the preamble of the negotiated agreement as "Airport Manager, Dulles International Airport."

Moreover, in my judgment, the terms of the negotiated agreement between the Complainant and Respondent Dulles did not constitute a clear and unmistakable waiver of the Complainant's right to bargain with Respondent Dulles on any proposed change in employee parking permit fees merely because such change was instituted by a new policy developed at a higher agency level, i.e. by Respondent Director. In this regard, the evidence does not establish that the phrase "within the discretion of the employer," as used in Article 3, Section 1, of the negotiated agreement meant other than that Respondent Dulles would negotiate on those Section 11(a) matters that had not been already prescribed by laws or controlling regulations at the time the negotiated agreement was entered into. Thus, the evidence herein does not show that the parties' to the negotiated agreement agreed to any diminution of the bargaining obligation at the level of recognition as a result of any subsequently published higher agency policies and regulations, other than those agency policies or regulations required by law, or by the regulations of appropriate authorities.

To permit a higher level of agency management to unilaterally change conditions of employment established by a negotiated agreement, when such a change is not required by law or regulations of an appropriate authority, would, in effect, permit higher levels of agency management to change the relationship of the parties at the level of recognition, as established by the negotiated agreement, whenever such higher level of agency management so desires, without recourse by the exclusive representative. In my view, this would be inconsistent with the purposes and policies of the Order, absent express agreement by the parties at the level of recognition to permit such conduct. ^{2/} Accordingly, I find that Respondent Director violated Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order by directing that Respondent Dulles impose new employee parking permit fees without first affording the Complainant the opportunity to meet and confer on the decision to effectuate such a change. ^{3/}

However, in the particular circumstances herein, I do not find that Respondent Dulles violated Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order. Thus, in its Pensacola decision in FLRC No. 76A-37, cited above in footnote 3, ^{2/} See Small Business Administration, Richmond, Virginia, District Office, 1 A/SLMR 350, A/SLMR No. 674 (1976), and Department of the Navy, Supervisor of Shipbuilding, Conversion and Repair, Pascagoula, Mississippi, 4 A/SLMR 324, A/SLMR No. 390 (1974). It is noted also that the Federal Labor Relations Council (Council) has held that an agency head or his designee in reviewing a negotiated agreement pursuant to Section 15 of the Order may not modify an otherwise proper matter agreed upon at the level of negotiation. See AFGE Council of Locals 1497 and 2165 and Region 3, General Services Administration, Baltimore, Maryland, FLRC No. 74A-48, 3 FLRC 396 (1975).

^{3/} The Council has stated that no distinction exists between alleged violations of 19(a)(6) and alleged violations of the remainder of Section 19(a) when the acts and conduct are attributable to agency management at a higher organizational level within the agency than the level of exclusive recognition. Thus, it held that the acts and conduct of agency management at the higher level may provide the basis for a finding of a violation of any part of Section 19(a). See Naval Air Rework Facility, Pensacola, Florida, FLRC No. 76A-37 (1977).

the Council held that the acts of higher agency management may not, standing alone, be the basis for finding a separate violation by agency management at a lower level where a unit of exclusive recognition exists. This conclusion was predicated upon the actions of the agency management at the higher level in initiating the conduct found violative of the Order, rather than upon the ministerial conduct of agency management at the level of recognition in implementing the higher level directive. Based on this Council rationale, I find that Respondent Dulles, in ordering the increase in employee parking permit fees pursuant to the direction of Respondent Director, did not violate Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order as it is evident that Respondent Dulles acted in accordance with the Respondent Director's order, regardless of the reasons it gave the Complainant for refusing to negotiate on the matter.

Under the foregoing circumstances, I shall order the Respondent Director to institute appropriate remedial actions and shall dismiss the instant complaint insofar as it alleges a violation of the Order by Respondent Dulles. 4/

Pursuant to Section 6(b) of Executive Order 11491, as amended, and Section 203.26(b) of the Regulations, the Assistant Secretary of Labor for Labor-Management Relations hereby orders that the Director, Metropolitan Washington Airport Service, Federal Aviation Administration, Department of Transportation, shall:

1. Cease and desist from:

(a) Changing terms and conditions of employment at Dulles International Airport by directing the Airport Manager, Dulles International Airport, to increase employee parking permit fees for employees represented exclusively by the American Federation of Government Employees, Local 2303, AFL-CIO, at Dulles International Airport.

(b) In any like or related manner interfering with, restraining, or coercing employees in the exercise of their rights assured by Executive Order 11491, as amended.

2. Take the following affirmative actions in order to effectuate the purposes and policies of Executive Order 11491, as amended:

(a) Direct the Airport Manager, Dulles International Airport, to rescind, in writing, the increase in employee parking permit fees unilaterally implemented after July 1, 1976, for employees represented exclusively by the American Federation of Government Employees, Local 2303, AFL-CIO, at Dulles International Airport.

4/ In reaching the disposition herein, I find it unnecessary to pass on the Administrative Law Judge's findings on pages 14, 15, and 16 of his Recommended Decision and Order concerning the March 12, 1971, Letter of Understanding between the Respondent Dulles and the Complainant on parking matters.

(b) Direct the Airport Manager, Dulles International Airport, to meet and confer, upon request by the American Federation of Government Employees, Local 2303, AFL-CIO, on the increase in employee parking permit fees imposed after July 1, 1976, and not to implement any further increase therein unless such implementation is mutually agreed to by the Airport Manager and the American Federation of Government Employees, Local 2303, AFL-CIO, or there is an impasse in bargaining and appropriate notice is given to the exclusive representative in order to afford such representative ample opportunity to invoke the services of the Federal Service Impasses Panel.

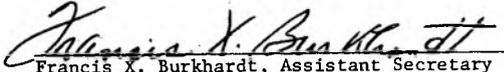

(c) If, following negotiations with American Federation of Government Employees, Local 2303, AFL-CIO, in accordance with Paragraph 2(b) above, it is determined that any employee was adversely affected by the unilateral increase in employee parking permit fees implemented after July 1, 1976, the Director, Metropolitan Washington Airport Service, shall direct the Airport Manager, Dulles International Airport, to make whole such employees, to the extent consistent with applicable law, regulations, and decisions of the Comptroller General.

(d) Post at the Dulles International Airport copies of the attached notice marked "Appendix" on forms to be furnished by the Assistant Secretary of Labor for Labor-Management Relations. Upon receipt of such forms, they shall be signed by the Director, Metropolitan Washington Airport Service, and they shall be posted and maintained at the Dulles International Airport for 60 consecutive days thereafter in conspicuous places, including all places where notices to employees are customarily posted. The Director shall take reasonable steps to insure that such notices are not altered, defaced or covered by any other material.

(e) Pursuant to Section 203.27 of the Regulations, notify the Assistant Secretary, in writing, within 30 days from the date of this order as to what steps have been taken to comply herewith.

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED that those portions of the complaint in Case No. 22-07517(CA) alleging violations of Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order by the Airport Manager, Dulles International Airport, be, and they hereby are, dismissed.

Before: WILLIAM B. DEVANEY
Administrative Law Judge

This case arises under Executive Order 11491, as amended (hereinafter also referred to as the "Order"). It was initiated by a charge filed on July 6, 1976 (Asst. Sec. Exh. 1) and a complaint filed on September 28, 1976, which was amended, pursuant to motion of Complainant granted by the Regional Administrator, on June 6, 1977.

Complainant, Local 2303, American Federation of Government Employees, AFL-CIO, has been the recognized exclusive bargaining representative for non-supervisory, wage-board employees (about 200 in number) of Respondent at Dulles International Airport since 1964. The Airport Manager, Dulles International Airport, and Complainant are parties to a collective bargaining agreement. On April 16, 1976, the Director of Metropolitan Washington Airport Service, a non-national Federal Aviation Administration subdivision with overall responsibility for Dulles International Airport and Washington National Airport, advised each airport manager, i.e. National and Dulles, that, effective July 1, 1976, the permit charge for employee parking at each airport would be increased from $7.00 per year (initial decal charge) to $13.00 per year (initial decal charge) (Jt. Exh. 3). On April 21, 1976, the Airport Manager at Dulles advised Complainant of the increase in parking fees (Jt. Exh. 4). By letter dated April 27, 1976 (Comp. Exh. 3) Complainant requested negotiations on the parking fee charged wage grade employees at Dulles and Respondent Airport Manager (Dulles) by letter dated May 11, 1976 (Jt. Exh. 5) refused, asserting that the matter was not negotiable; however, Respondent Airport Manager offered to "consult". The increase was implemented on July 1, 1976, and the charge was filed by Complainant on July 6, 1976. Respondent Airport Manager on July 30, 1976 (Comp. Exh. 5) again declined to negotiate on the issue of the parking fee charged wage grade employees but again offered to "consult".

The charge alleged a violation of Sections 19(a)(1) and (6), as did the complaint. The complaint named as the activity Dulles International Airport, Metropolitan Washington Airport Service and as the agency The Federal Aviation Administration of the Department of Transportation. Notice of Hearing issued February 11, 1977, for a hearing on April 14, 1977 on the alleged violations of Sections 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order (Asst. Sec. Exh. 3); on April 14, 1977, at the joint request of the parties and for good cause shown, the hearing was postponed until June 13, 1977; on June 6, 1977, the Regional Administrator granted Complainant's motion to amend the complaint to include as an additional Respondent the "Director, Metropolitan Washington Airports, Federal Aviation Administration"; and on June 7, 1977, upon joint motion of the parties, an order Rescheduling Hearing for July 26, 1977, in Washington, D.C. issued (Asst. Sec. Exh. 4), pursuant to which a hearing was duly held before the undersigned.

All parties were represented by able counsel, were afforded full opportunity to be heard, to examine and cross-examine witnesses and to introduce evidence bearing on the issues involved and excellent briefs have been timely filed by the parties which have been carefully considered. Upon the basis of the entire record, I make the following findings of fact, conclusions and recommendations:

FINDINGS OF FACT

1. On October 8, 1970, Dulles International Airport, Employer, and Local 2303 entered into a collective bargaining agreement (Comp. Exh. 1) which was to remain in full force and effect for a period of one year from the date of its approval, January 7, 1971.

2. The agreement of October 8, 1970, did not cover two items, namely, merit promotion policy and parking, as to which the parties had bargained to impasse; a contract, without these items was executed as noted above, and the two issues at impasse were submitted to the Federal Service Impasses Panel. On January 13, 1971, a fact-finding hearing was held, at the commencement of which the parties announced that mutual agreement had been reached on the issue of merit promotion policy and that issue was withdrawn, and the hearing proceeded on the parking issue. The Panel Report and Recommendations For Settlement, In the Matter of: Federal Aviation Administration (Dulles International Airport Washington, D.C. and American Federation of Government Employees, AFL-CIO, Local Union #2303, Case No. 70 FSIP 12, issued on February 26, 1971. The recommendation of the Panel was:

"1. The Union's proposal for reserved parking space for bargaining unit employees be withdrawn.

"2. The parties enter into a joint letter of understanding which will permit the Union to reopen the current labor agreement on the sole matter of 'bargaining unit employee reserved parking space' if the Employer later determines to establish reserved employee parking spaces for non-bargaining unit employees." (70 FSIP 12, p. 8)

The Panel had concluded, inter alia, that:

"The parking spaces now available for bargaining unit employees are adequate.

"The increased charge for decals (permits) is reasonable and was justified in light of the showing of a need to recover some of the cost of providing and maintaining a parking space." (70 FSIP 12, p. 8)

3. On March 22, 1971, the parties executed the following Letter of Understanding:

"LETTER OF UNDERSTANDING BETWEEN AFGE LOCAL 2303 AND AIRPORT MANAGEMENT, DULLES INTERNATIONAL AIRPORT

"The Federal Service Impasses Panel has concluded that existing employee parking areas and procedures at Dulles International Airport are adequate. AFGE Local 2303 agrees to abide by the recommendations of the Federal Service Impasses Panel and withdraw its proposal for reserved parking spaces for bargaining unit employees as presented to the Panel on 13 January 1971. If management should change the parking costs for any group of FAA employees or change the parking arrangement for bargaining unit employees, the union reserves the right to reopen the issue of parking.

4. The October 8, 1970, agreement contained an automatic renewal provision and, presumably, was automatically renewed as the next agreement (Jt. Exh. 1) was signed September 28, 1973.

5. Article III, entitled "Matters Appropriate for Consultation or Negotiation", Sections 1 and 2, of the 1970 and 1973 agreements are identical. Section 1 of Article III of each Agreement provides, in part, as follows:

"Section 1

"It is agreed and understood that matters appropriate for consultation or negotiation between the Parties are the development and application of personnel policies and practices related to working conditions which are within the discretion of the employer. ...

Section 2 of Article III of each Agreement provided:

"Section 2

"It is further agreed that in the absence of compelling circumstances to the contrary the Employer will consult the Union concerning contemplated changes of benefits, practices, understandings, and Employer originated directives."

6. Article III of the 1973 Agreement contains a section 3, not present in the 1970 Agreement which provided as follows:

"Section 3

"The matters appropriate for consultation are not limited to those covered by this agreement."

7. Article XXVII of the 1970 Agreement (Comp. Exh. 1) and Article XXV of the 1973 Agreement (Jt. Exh. 1) are, in all material respects, identical; each is entitled "Parking"; and each relates to parking by the Union President when meeting with management. Although a "parking" matter, this was not an issue on which the parties bargained to impasse in 1970, was not an issue submitted to the Impasses Panel, nor was this item covered by the March 22, 1971 Letter of Understanding.

8. The Management Bargaining Committee's chief spokesman at the 1973 negotiation, Mr. Van Der Veer Smith, testified that the general subject of parking was discussed at all of the negotiation meetings and the subject of parking fees was discussed at least at one of the meetings and came about as a result of the Union's chief negotiator, Mr. Charles W. Cordell, asking why have parking fees, although no formal proposal was made by the Union on parking fees. ^{1/}

9. Mr. Van der Veer Smith further testified that the 1971 Letter of Understanding was not discussed during the 1973 negotiations; but the record is clear that no change in parking arrangements, or the fee charged employees, was contemplated in 1973, indeed the fee remained unchanged until 1976 when it was increased to $13.00, effective July 1, 1976.

10. On April 16, 1976, the Director of Metropolitan Washington Airport Service advised the Manager of Dulles International Airport (as well as the Manager of Washington National Airport) that, effective July 1, 1976, the permit charge for employee parking would be increased to $13.00 per year (Jt. Exh. 3); On April 21, the Airport Manager at Dulles advised Complainant of the increase in parking fees (Jt. Exh. 4); Complainant on April 27, 1976, requested bargaining on the parking fee charged wage grade employees at Dulles (Comp. Exh. 3); and on May 11, 1976, Respondent Airport Manager (Dulles) refused Complainant's request asserting that the matter was not negotiable; but Respondent Airport Manager offered to "consult" (Jt. Exh. 5). Following the filing of the charge on July 6, 1976, Respondent Airport Manager on July 30, 1976, again declined to negotiate but again offered to "consult". (Comp. Exh. 5)

11. Mr. Cordell, President of Local 2303, and Complainant's Chief Negotiator in 1973, a member of Complainant's negotiating team in 1970, and a participant in the impasse

^{1/} Prior to October, 1969, employees enjoyed reserved parking spaces immediately adjacent to the buildings or locations where they worked and management charged 75 cents for a decal or sticker. On October 2, 1969, management changed the space arrangement and raised the fee to $7.50 per year, without negotiating with the Union, which led to the Union raising the matter in the negotiations which, ultimately, led to the bargaining impasse of 1970. (70 FSIP 12, page 5). Mr. Cordell's testimony, largely in reliance on a statement by Respondent's counsel, that the parking fee was increased to $7.50 after the recommendation of the Impasses Panel, was incorrect as shown by the Report of the Panel, as the Report of the Panel shows the increase to $7.50 on October 2, 1969, it necessarily follows that this increase, to $7.50, occurred prior to the bargaining impasse of 1970.

flows from the requirement of Section 11(a) of the Order, the refusal to bargain, at Complainant's request, was a violation of Section 19(a)(6) and, derivatively, of Section 19(a)(1), Army and Air Force Exchange Service, Pacific Exchange System, Hawaii Regional Exchange, A/SLMR No. 454, 4 A/SLMR 790 (1974); Secretary of the Navy, Department of the Navy, Pentagon, A/SLMR No. 924 (1977), wholly apart from the Letter of Understanding entered into by the parties on March 22, 1971. Indeed, the Report and Recommendations of the Federal Labor Relations Council on the Amendment of Executive Order 11491, as amended, which Recommendations were adopted by Executive Order 11838 (February 6, 1975), with respect to the obligation to negotiate, stated, in part, as follows:

"Section 11(a) comprehends an obligation to 'negotiate' with respect to midcontract changes in established personnel policies and practices and matters affecting working conditions. 'Consultation' is required only with respect to those labor organizations accorded 'national consultation rights' under section 9. The term 'meet and confer,' as used in the Order, is intended to be construed as a synonym for 'negotiate.' ... However, the question is raised as to whether the Order requires, in addition, that a party must meet its obligation to negotiate prior to making changes in established personnel policies and practices and matters affecting working conditions during the term of an agreement.

"The Assistant Secretary, when faced with this issue in a case, concluded that the Order does require adequate notice and opportunity to negotiate prior to changing established personnel policies and practices and matters affecting working conditions during the term of an existing agreement unless the issues thus raised are controlled by current contractual commitments, or a clear and unmistakable waiver is present. We believe that the Assistant Secretary's conclusion on this matter is correct and, therefore, no change in the Order is warranted in this regard.

"... the fact that changes in established personnel policies and practices and matters affecting working conditions during the term of an agreement are often the result of changes in circumstances which were not foreseen by either party during the period of contract negotiations makes it appear likely that employee participation at such junctures may be even more important than during the regular negotiation period. . . ." (Labor-Management Relations In The Federal Service (1975), pp. 41-43) (Emphasis by the Council.)

Respondents rely heavily on the phrase "which are within the discretion of the employer" in Section 1 of Article III of both the 1970 and 1973 Agreements. That inclusion of this phrase was not, and is not, is apparent from the fact that this language was incorporated in the Agreement signed on October 8, 1970, and approved January 7, 1971, at which time the parties had bargained to impasse on essentially the same issue - parking - and had submitted the issue to the Federal Service Impasses Panel.

"a clear and unmistakable waiver"

Moreover, Respondents' position that "employer", as defined in the Preamble means "the Airport Manager, Dulles International Airport" who had no discretion because the Director of Metropolitan Washington Airport Service ordered the increase in parking fees, is the familiar Catch 22 argument which the Council laid to rest in Naval Air Rework Facility, Pensacola, Florida, FLRC No. 76A-37 (1977), where the Council held:

"Section 19(a) of the Order provides a list of specified unfair labor practices in which 'agency management' may not engage, including 19(a)(6) which prohibits 'agency management' from refusing to consult, confer, or negotiate with a labor organization as required by the Order. The phrase 'agency management' is specifically defined in section 2(f) of the Order:

"'Agency management' means the the agency head and all management officials, supervisors, and other representatives of management having authority to act for the agency on any matters relating to the implementation of the labor-management relations program established under this order[.]

"Accordingly, it is clear that the acts and conduct of any individual found to be agency management, as defined in section 2(f), may provide the basis for a section 19(a) violation. Of course, pursuant to section 19(a) (4) of the Order, it is the responsibility of the Assistant Secretary to decide whether the labor acts and conduct constitute an unfair or conduct practice. Where he finds that an act or conduct constitutes an unfair practice and that the individuals who committed the act are agency management, there is no basis in the Order to draw artificial distinctions between organizational levels of such agency management so as to relieve them of the responsibility for their acts which the otherwise be violative of the Order.

"... when the obligation to negotiate is breached by the acts and conduct of agency management, such a breach may properly provide the basis for a 19(a) (6) finding regardless of the location of that agency management in the agency chain of command.

"... where ... agency management at the activity level complied with such direction from agency management at a higher level because the activity had no choice but to do so, a separate finding of a violation would not lie against the activity as such, solely on the basis of its ministerial actions in implementing the direction from the higher agency authority.

"Accordingly, ... we conclude that the acts and conduct of agency management at a higher level of an agency's organization may provide the basis for finding a violation of any part of section 19(a) of the Order by 'agency management,' but may not, standing alone provide the basis for finding a separate violation by 'agency management' at a lower organizational level of the agency where a unit of exclusive recognition exists." (Emphasis by the Council.)

A change relating to employee parking, including a change in established fees, is a change in working conditions; the Director, Metropolitan Washington Airport Service, was agency management and as Director was the immediate superior of the Airport Manager, Dulles International Airport which was a constituent part of Metropolitan Washington Airport Service (Comp. Exh. 6); the Director, by his memorandum dated April 16, 1976 stated that effective July 1, 1976, the permit charge for employee parking would be $13.00 (initial decal charge) and further stated:

"It is requested that each airport issue an O&I to replace that document currently in effect and, for sake of uniformity, a copy of each O&I must be transmitted to AMA-50 [Financial Management Staff, Comp. Exh. 6] and my approval prior to issuance."

The Airport Manager, Dulles, Mr. Dexter P. Davis, by memorandum dated April 21, 1976, a copy of which was sent to Complainant, advised that effective July 1, 1976, the permit charge for employee parking at Washington National and Dulles would be $13.00 per year and further stated:

"I am sure many of you will be justifiably concerned about this large increase in the parking decals. I am also convinced that the new fee is a reasonable one and can be fully justified. I will be happy to try and answer any questions that arise."

(Jt. Exh. 3)
On June 1, 1976, Mr. Davis issued his O&I (Jt. Exh. 2) which increased the parking fee to $13.00 in accordance with the Director's memorandum of April 16, 1976, but without reference thereto. Both the Director, in his memorandum of April 16, 1976, and Mr. Davis, in his memorandum of April 21, 1976, presented that the $13.00 fee was "based on actual costs incurred during FY 1975".

On April 27, 1976, Complainant requested negotiation on the parking fee (Comp. Exh. 3) which request Mr. Davis refused on May 11, 1976, because "we do request the fee charged for employee parking decals is not negotiable under our existing labor agreement" (Jt. Exh. 5). Complainant's request to negotiate was repeated in its charge of July 6, 1976 (Comp. Exh. 4) and was again refused by Mr. Davis on July 30, 1976

(Comp. Exh. 5). Clearly, agency management breached its obligation under the Order to negotiate when it refused Complainant's request for negotiations prior to changing an established working condition. The order of the Director to the Airport Managers, including the Manager of Dulles to increase the employee parking fee effective July 1, 1976, constituted a violation of 19(a)(6) and (1) by agency management; however, the refusal of the Airport Manager, Dulles, to negotiate was not, for the reasons set forth hereinafter, solely the result of the Airport Manager, Dulles', ministerial action in implementing the direction from higher authority and, as set forth herein-after, a separate violation of the unit of exclusive organizational level of the agency where the unit of exclusive recognition exists (Dulles International Airport) has also been found.

As noted above, negotiation on parking fees is not precluded in any manner by Section 11(b) or 12 of the Order. In addition, in reaching this conclusion, careful consideration has been given to 31 U.S.C. § 483a and to Office of Management and Budget Circular No. A-25, dated September 23, 1959, and nothing contained in either affects in any manner agency management's obligation to negotiate on the issue of parking fees in this case. Nor is the Assistant Secretary's decision, affirming the Regional Administrator's dismissal of 19(a)(1) and (6) charges, in Warner Robins Air Logistics Center and American Federation of Government Employees Local 987, Case No. 40-7581(CA), July 7, 1977, either to the contrary or determinative, as the issue therein concerned traffic regulations and the Assistant Secretary stated:

"Thus the policy concerning driver suspension privileges only incidentally affected the employees in the unit represented by AFGE. Under the circumstances, I do not view the change of policy dealing with revocation of driver privileges as matter which the employer was obligated to consult and confer with AFGE. Accordingly, there is no reasonable basis for the complaint."

Here, of course, unit employees were required to park in designated areas (Jt. Exh. 2, Par. 4 B. and were prohibited from parking elsewhere when in an on-duty status, Jt. Exh. 2, Par. 7 D.) for which a permit was required (Jt. Exh. 2, Par. 5). Moreover, as set forth hereinafter, the agency and Complainant in 1971 had entered into a Letter of Understanding whereby it had been agreed, inter alia, that if management should change the parking costs for any group of FAA employees, Complainant reserved the right to reopen the issue of parking.

2. Letter of Understanding Remained Fully Effective.

The Letter of Understanding entered into by Respondent Airport Manager and Complainant on March 22, 1971, differs in material and significant respects from the Recommendation of the Federal Service Impasses Panel. For example, the Panel merely recommended a letter of understanding to permit reopening of the current [1970] agreement on the sole matter of "bargaining unit employee reserved parking space", whereas the parties entered into an agreement which, by its terms, was not limited to reopening the sole matter of "bargaining unit employee reserved parking space". Thus, after reciting that the Panel had concluded that existing parking areas and procedures at Dulles were adequate, Complainant agreed to abide by the recommendations of the Panel and withdraw its proposal for reserved parking spaces as presented to the Panel on January 13, 1971. The Letter of Understanding then provided:

"If management should change the parking costs for any group of FAA employees or change the parking arrangement for bargaining unit employees, the union reserves the right to reopen the issue of parking." (Comp. Exh. 2)

As noted, the Letter of Understanding made no reference to the October 8, 1970, agreement and contained no expiration date. In view of the recommendation of the Panel that reopening be limited to this regard, as well as in other regards, quite parties in this regard, it is obvious that the Letter of Understanding intentionally entered into an agreement which was neither keyed to any "current labor agreement" nor made a part of any "current labor agreement". Rather, the Letter of Understanding was "tied to": a) management changing parking costs; and or b) management changing the parking arrangement for bargaining unit employees. Insofar as the then current negotiations were concerned, Complainant withdrew the only issue not already resolved by the October 8, 1970, Agreement.

President Cordell testified that the Recommendation of the Federal Service Impasses Panel had determined Complainant's reserved employee parking demand and that the Letter of Understanding precluded ("took care of") negotiation of any fee unless and until management should change the parking costs or change the parking arrangement for bargaining unit employees. Of course, in 1973, agency management neither proposed nor made any change in parking fees or parking arrangements for bargaining unit employees.

Respondents' argument that the Letter of Understanding was an "institutional benefit" which expired when the 1970 Agreement expired is wholly without merit and is rejected. First, the argument is based on the erroneous assertion that the parties adopted the Recommendation of the Panel. Clearly, the Letter of Understanding executed by the parties on March 22, 1971, did not adopt the Recommendation of the Panel. To the contrary, the Letter of Understanding differed in all material respects from the Recommendation of the Panel. Second, the Letter of Understanding was not incorporated by reference as a part of the 1970 Agreement and the Letter of Understanding contained no expiration date; but, rather, was keyed solely to future management action, i.e., "If management should change the parking costs ... or change the parking arrangement for bargaining unit employees, the union reserves the right to re-open the issue of parking." Third, as the obligation to bargain concerning a change in working conditions flows from the Order, the Letter of Understanding which memorialized the obligation was not, in any event an "institutional benefit" based solely on the existence of a written agreement which terminated with the expiration of a negotiated agreement. Internal Revenue Service, Ogden Service Center, et al. and National Treasury Employees Union, NTEU Chapter No. 066, et al., A/SLMR No. 806 (1977); Department of the Treasury, Internal Revenue Service, Brookhaven Service Center and National Treasury Employees Union and Chapter 099, NTEU, A/SLMR No. 859 (1977); Internal Revenue Service and National Treasury Employees Union, Chapter 8, et al., Case No. 22-7717(CA) (ALJ, October 6, 1977). Agency management in the 1973 negotiations did not seek to terminate the Letter of Understanding and, as there was no bargaining whatever on the matter, obviously no impasse was reached and agency management could not unilaterally change an existing condition of employment established by a collective bargaining agreement, if it were assumed that the Letter of Understanding constituted a condition of employment. U.S. Army Corps of Engineers Philadelphia District and American Federation of Government Employees, Local 902, AFL-CIO, A/SLMR No. 673, a A/SLMR 339 (1976). Indeed, as well stated by Judge Kramer, in Internal Revenue Service and National Treasury Employees Union, Chapter 8, supra,

"... very little contained in an expired agreement expires with the agreement automatically other than the dues withholding provisions. ..."

Fourth, the "institutional benefit" cases have involved the effect of rights and privileges accorded to exclusive representatives in a negotiated agreement when that agreement has been terminated. Here, there was no period during which Complainant's agreement, however defined, had been terminated. To the contrary, the record shows renegotiation of the 1970 Agreement in 1973 without any hiatus so that, in any event, the "institutional benefit" theory does not appear under any interpretation to be applicable; and if applicable, the Letter of Understanding continued "in effect until such time as ... modified or eliminated pursuant to negotiation or changed after a good faith bargaining impasse has been reached." Internal Revenue Service, Ogden Service Center, supra.

Indeed, the primary significance of the Letter of Understanding concerns two considerations which would be applicable even if the Letter of Understanding had been terminated. When executed in 1971, the Letter of Understanding plainly demonstrated that the phrase "within the discretion of the employer" of Section 1 of Article III was not a waiver by Complainant of its right to negotiate an increase in parking fees by agency management and retention of the same language in the 1973 Agreement, without further discussion, certainly does not afford any basis for assertion that "a clear and unmistakable waiver is present". The obligation to negotiate prior to a change in an established working condition flows from Section 11(a) of the Order. An agreement to negotiate concerning such a change would be significant only if the matter concerned a non-mandatory subject of bargaining about which the parties could lawfully negotiate but were not required to negotiate. If, contrary to my conclusion that negotiation of a change in policy concerning employee parking was a mandatory subject of bargaining, and the matter of parking was a permissive, but not mandatory, subject for negotiation, then the conduct of agency management in 1970, when it bargained on the issue to impasse, and entered into a Letter of Understanding in 1971 whereby it agreed to negotiate any change in parking fees or any change in the parking arrangement for bargaining unit employees, constituted an agreement by agency management, whether or not such "agreement" constituted a collective bargaining contract, that it would negotiate any such change in established policy.

3. Remedy

The Council, in Naval Air Rework Facility, supra, stated that,

"... acts and conduct of agency management at a higher level ... may provide the basis for finding a violation of any part of section 19(a) of the Order by 'agency management,' but may not, standing alone, provide the basis for finding a separate violation by 'agency management' at a lower organizational level of the agency where a unit of exclusive recognition exists." (Emphasis by the Council.)

The Council had further stated that a violation would not lie against the activity as such, "solely on the basis of its ministerial actions in implementing the direction from higher agency authority." In the instant case, the record does not show that the Airport Manager, Dulles, ever advised the Director of the Letter of Understanding. Indeed, in his response of May 11, 1976, to Complainant, the Airport Manager asserted that the change in parking fees was not negotiable (Jt. Exh. 5); and in his response of July 30, 1976, the Airport Manager, while asserting that the Letter of Understanding had been superseded, wholly ignored the language of the Letter of Understanding and, erroneously, represented that the Letter of Understanding "was reached ... with the assistance of the Federal Service Impasses Panel concerning ... reserved parking spaces ... The issue was reserved parking spaces" (Comp. Exh. 5); whereas, as noted above, the Letter of Understanding executed by the parties on March 22, 1971, specifically dealt with parking fees.

The Director's memorandum of April 16, 1976, which instructed the Airport Managers at Dulles and at Washington National to increase employee parking charges effective July 1, 1976, and to issue an O&I carrying out such instruction which was to be submitted for his approval prior to issuance (Jt. Exh. 3), because it required a unilateral change in an established working condition constituted a violation of 19(a)(6) and (1) of the Order by the Director, Metropolitan Washington Airport Service.

Pursuant to the Council's decision in Naval Air Rework, supra, I am persuaded that the Airport Manager, Dulles International Airport, also violated 19(a)(6) and (1) of the Order. The record does not show that the Airport Manager advised the Director of the existence of the parties' Letter of Understanding; the record shows that the Airport Manager refused Complainant's request to bargain for the reason that the issue was not bargainable, but without reliance on the instruction of the Director; and the Airport Manager subsequently ignored the actual language of the Letter of Understanding and misrepresented the agreement entered into by the parties. Cf., U.S. Army, Europe and Seventh Army and American Federation of Government Employees, Local 2348, AFL-CIO, et al., Case Nos. 22-6599, 22-6601 (ALJ July 20, 1977). Unlike Respondent AAFES - Europe, in U.S. Army, Europe and Seventh Army, supra, the record does not show that the Airport Manager had no choice in implementing the increase in parking fees as to the bargaining unit employees represented by Complainant and, in addition, Airport Manager by his own action acted in derogation of his obligation to negotiate, pursuant to Section 11(a), in violation of Section 19(a)(6) and (1) of the Order.

I am aware that after July 1, 1976, Respondents further increased the parking fee charged bargaining unit employees (to $16.00); but as this action was not part of the charge or the complaint and Complainant did not seek to amend the complaint to include this action, it is not before me and may not be considered. Professional Air Traffic Controllers Organization, MEBA, AFL-CIO, A/SLMR No. 878 (1977).

As established parking fees were unilaterally changed by agency management, complete effecuation of the purposes of the Order, consistent with the scope of the violations, would require that, in addition to withdrawing the increase in parking fees for bargaining unit employees, bargaining unit employees be made whole for the amount of the increase unlawfully made effective July 1, 1976; however, as such remedy would require the payment of monies by an agency in a situation that established precedent does not afford reasonable assurance as to the propriety of a monetary remedy, I shall recommend that the Assistant Secretary, unless he is satisfied that established precedent does afford reasonable assurance of the propriety of a monetary remedy, obtain an advance decision from the Comptroller General as to the legality of such a payment, as suggested by the Council in Naval Air Rework Facility, supra; or, in the alternative that Respondent agency be ordered to allow as a credit against each future employee parking charge the excess payment made by the individual employee.

Having found that Respondent Metropolitan Washington Airport Service engaged in conduct which was in violation of Sectons 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Executive Order, I recommend that the Assistant Secretary adopt the following order designed to effectuate the policies of Executive Order 11491, as amended:

RECOMMENDED ORDER

Pursuant to Section 6(b) of Executive Order 11491, as amended, and Section 203.26(b) of the Regulations, 29 C.F.R. § 203.26(b), the Assistant Secretary of Labor for Labor-Management Relations hereby orders that the Metropolitan Washington Airport Service, and its Director and the Airport Manager, Dulles International Airport, Federal Aviation Administration,, Department of Transportation, shall:

1. Cease and desist from:
 - a) Giving effect, as to wage grade employees at Dulles International Airport, or ordering or directing that the Airport Manager, Dulles International Airport, implement or maintain in effect, as to wage grade employees at Dulles International Airport, the increase in parking fees unilaterally implemented on July 1, 1976, unless such implementation, as to wage grade employees at Dulles International Airport, is mutually agreed to by the agency and by the exclusive representative of such employees, or after good faith negotiations have exhausted the prospects of concluding an agreement and appropriate notice is given to the exclusive representative in order to afford the exclusive representative ample opportunity to invoke the services of the Federal Service Impasses Panel.

b) Refusing to consult, confer, or negotiate concerning any change in parking fees or parking arrangements for wage grade employees at Dulles International Airport, or refusing to negotiate prior to changing any other condition of employment which is a proper subject for collective bargaining negotiations under Section 11(a) of Executive Order 11491, as amended.

c) Refusing to consult, confer, or negotiate with Local 2303, American Federation of Government Employees, AFL-CIO, or any other exclusive representative of wage grade employees at Dulles International Airport, prior to changing established conditions of employment.

d) Interfering with, restraining or coercing members of Local 2303, American Federation of Government Employees, AFL-CIO in the exercise of rights assured by Executive Order 11491, as amended.

e) In any like or related manner interfering with, restraining, or coercing employees in the exercise of their rights assured by Executive Order 11491, as amended.

2. Take the following affirmative action in order to effectuate the purposes and policies of Executive Order 11491, as amended:

a) Rescind, in writing, the increase in parking charges unilaterally implemented July 1, 1976, as to wage grade employees represented by Local 2303, American Federation of Government Employees, AFL-CIO, unless such implementation is mutually agreed to by the parties, or after good faith negotiations have exhausted the prospects of concluding an agreement and appropriate notice is given to the exclusive representative in order to afford the exclusive representative ample opportunity to invoke the services of the Federal Service Impasses Panel.

b) Reinstate for wage grade employees at Dulles International Airport the parking fee charged for the period ending June 30, 1976, until such time as a new parking charge, as set forth in b) above, may be lawfully implemented.

c) Bargain, after notice and upon request, with Local 2303, American Federation of Government Employees, AFL-CIO, prior to changing any established condition of employment.

d) Make whole the wage grade employees at Dulles International Airport represented by Local 2303, American Federation of Government Employees, AFL-CIO, for the unlawful increase in parking fees, unilaterally implemented on July 1, 1976, by one of the following actions as the Assistant Secretary shall direct:

i) Pay to each member of the bargaining unit the difference between the established parking fee charged for the period ending June 30, 1976, and the amount charged and paid by each bargaining unit employee pursuant to the unilateral increase implemented July 1, 1976; or

ii) Credit each member of the bargaining unit the difference between the established parking fee for the period ending June 30, 1976, and the amount unlawfully charged by Respondents and paid by each bargaining unit employee pursuant to the unilateral change implemented July 1, 1976, against future lawful parking charges until the individual bargaining unit employee has received full credit for the unlawful charges paid by him.

e) Post at Dulles International Airport copies of the attached notice marked "Appendix" on forms to be furnished by the Assistant Secretary of Labor for Labor-Management Relations. Upon receipt of such forms, they shall be signed by the Director, Metropolitan Washington Airport Service and by the Airport Manager, Dulles International Airport, and they shall be posted and maintained by them for 60 consecutive days thereafter, in conspicuous places, including all bulletin boards and other places where notices to employees are customarily posted. The Director and the Airport Manager shall take reasonable steps to insure that such notices are not altered, defaced or covered by any other material.

UNITED STATES DEPARTMENT OF LABOR
ASSISTANT SECRETARY FOR LABOR-MANAGEMENT RELATIONS
SUMMARY OF DECISION AND ORDER OF THE ASSISTANT SECRETARY
PURSUANT TO SECTION 6 OF EXECUTIVE ORDER 11491, AS AMENDED

ARMY AND AIR FORCE EXCHANGE SERVICE,
SHEPPARD AIR FORCE BASE, TEXAS
A/SLMR No. 1063

This case involved a representation petition filed by the American Federation of Government Employees, AFL-CIO, Local 3718 (AFGE) seeking an election in a unit of employees assigned to the motion picture theaters of the Army and Air Force Exchange Service at Sheppard Air Force Base. The AFGE sought to include the employees in its existing unit at the Activity. The Activity took the position that the petitioned for unit was inappropriate because no community of interest existed between the employees in the petitioned for unit and the employees in the AFGE's existing bargaining unit.

The Assistant Secretary found the petitioned for unit was inappropriate for the purpose of exclusive recognition. In this regard, he noted that the claimed employees have certain common skills which are interchangeable and are intermingled in various degrees throughout the Activity with employees who are both represented and unrepresented. He noted also that all personnel policies and practices are administered by the Activity's personnel section and that the proposed unit could not reasonably be expected to promote effective dealings and efficiency of agency operations, but, rather, would lead to the artificial fragmentation of the Activity's unrepresented employees.

Accordingly, the Assistant Secretary ordered that the petition be dismissed.

Case No. 63-7425(RO)

AMERICAN FEDERATION OF GOVERNMENT

Petitioner

DECISION AND ORDER

Upon an amended petition duly filed under Section 6 of Executive Order 11491, as amended, a hearing was held before Hearing Officer Ramon P. Lopez. The Hearing Officer's rulings made at the hearing are free from prejudicial error and are hereby affirmed.

Upon the entire record in the subject case, including the briefs filed by the parties, the Assistant Secretary finds:

1. The labor organization involved claims to represent certain employees of the Activity.

2. The Petitioner, American Federation of Government Employees, AFL-CIO, Local 3718, hereinafter called AFGE, seeks an election in a unit of employees assigned to the two motion picture theaters of the Army and Air Force Exchange Service (AAFES) at Sheppard Air Force Base, Texas. In this connection, it seeks to include the claimed employees in its existing unit of Activity personnel. 1/ The Activity contends that

1/ The AFGE is currently the exclusive representative of employees in a unit described as:

All regular full-time and regular part-time hourly pay plan and commission paid civilian employees; all off-duty military personnel employed in either of the foregoing categories and all temporary employees in the above categories who are employed continuously for a period of more than 180 days, employed by the Sheppard AFB Exchange, excluding all temporary full-time and temporary part-time employees employed for a period of 180

the petitioned for unit is not appropriate for the purpose of exclusive recognition based on an asserted lack of community of interest between the claimed employees and the employees in the AFGE's existing unit. Further, it asserts that such a unit would impair efficiency of agency operations and would not promote effective dealings.

The Activity's mission is to provide military personnel and other authorized persons at the Sheppard Air Force Base with certain merchandise and services. The AAFES is headquartered in San Antonio, Texas, and is organized into seven geographic regions, among which is the Alamo Exchange Region. The Alamo Exchange Region is divided into five area exchanges, one of which is the Oklahoma Area Exchange. The Activity is one of six exchanges within the Oklahoma Area Exchange.

Headed by an Exchange Manager, the Activity is organized into the following components: Retail Main Store, Visual Merchandise, two Retail Branch Stores, three Food Activity facilities, Services/Vending, and Personnel. Each of these components is headed by a supervisor who is directly responsible to the Exchange Manager. The supervisor of the Services/Vending component, in addition to her other duties, is responsible for the operation of two motion picture theaters on the base. 2/ The unit sought herein consists of 13 employees classified as intermittent (regularly scheduled) employed at the two theaters. The record reveals that there are other unrepresented employees at the Activity.

The evidence establishes that most employees of the Activity are designated as regular full-time, regular part-time, temporary full-time, temporary part-time, or intermittent, 3/ and are employed in either

1/ days or less; on-call; casual; management officials; managerial trainees (who perform supervisory duties); professionals; personnel workers in other than a purely clerical capacity; watchmen; supervisors and guards as defined in E.O. 11491.

2/ About July 1975, the Army and Air Force Exchange Motion Picture Service (AAFMPs) merged with the AAFES. Thereafter, until January 1977, employees of AAFMPs were under the direction of military post/base theater officers. On January 1, 1977, the AAFMPs was fully integrated into the AAFES with the employees of the AAFMPs being placed directly under the control of the AAFES.

3/ Exchange Service Bulletin No. 412 (15-91), issued by AAFES Headquarters and dated August 8, 1977, states that intermittent employment covers three types of work situations:

a. Intermittent (casual). An intermittent (casual) employee is hired primarily to perform a nonrecurring job. Intermittent (casual) employees are not normally hired for a definite period nor assigned a regularly scheduled workweek. Intermittent (casual) employees are not eligible for any benefits other than overtime pay, shift differential and environmental differential.

civilian or off-duty military capacities. Employees with the above noted designations are intermingled in various degrees throughout the Activity's operational components and all employees are assigned Department of Defense/Nonappropriated Fund job classifications. Employees in similar job classifications have certain common skills which are interchangeable. All personnel policies and practices are administered by the Activity's personnel section under guidelines established by the AAFES. The record reveals that the Exchange Manager is authorized to approve all personnel actions, serves as a member of the Activity's negotiating team, and is the Activity's representative at the third step of the negotiated grievance procedure covering the Activity's employees in the existing bargaining unit.

Under the circumstances herein, I find that the petitioned for unit is not appropriate for the purpose of exclusive recognition as the claimed employees do not share a community of interest which is separate and apart from other represented and certain other unrepresented employees of the Activity. Thus, the evidence establishes that the claimed employees have certain common skills which are interchangeable and are intermingled in various degrees with employees throughout the Activity, who are both represented and unrepresented. Further, all personnel policies and practices are administered by the Activity's personnel section and the Exchange Manager is authorized to approve all personnel actions. Moreover, in my view, the proposed unit, which contains certain employees at two motion picture theaters on the base, could not reasonably be expected to promote effective dealings and efficiency of agency operations but, rather, would lead to the artificial fragmentation of the Activity's unrepresented employees.

Accordingly, I shall order that the petition herein be dismissed.

3/ b. Intermittent (on-call). An intermittent (on-call) employee is hired to perform a recurring job (including inventory), but is not hired for a definite period nor assigned a regularly scheduled workweek. Intermittent (on-call) employees are not eligible for any benefits other than overtime pay, shift differential and environmental differential.

c. Intermittent (regularly scheduled). An intermittent (regularly scheduled) employee is appointed to serve in a position with a regularly scheduled workweek of less than 20 hours, but is not hired for a definite period. Intermittent (regularly scheduled) employees are not eligible for any benefits other than overtime pay, shift differential, step advancements (except employees paid on a special wage schedule, i.e. commission and theater employees), environmental differential, and time off for holidays when the holiday falls on a scheduled workday.

ORDER

IT IS HEREBY ORDERED that the petition in Case No. 63-7425(RO) be, and it hereby is, dismissed.

Case No. 20-06155(CA)

This case involved an unfair labor practice complaint filed by the Association of Civilian Technicians, Pennsylvania State Council (ACT), alleging that the Respondent violated Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order by refusing to negotiate the impact and implementation of an impending reduction-in-force (RIF) at the Pittsburgh Air National Guard Base.

ASSOCIATION OF CIVILIAN TECHNICIANS,
PENNSYLVANIA STATE COUNCIL

Complainant

The Administrative Law Judge concluded that the complaint should be dismissed. In reaching this conclusion, he noted that, while the Respondent initially informed a local official of the ACT of the impending RIF instead of first informing the State Council of the ACT, which is the exclusive representative, the ACT's local official had immediately informed the State Council and thus this departure from protocol was without significance. As to the alleged refusal to negotiate, the Administrative Law Judge concluded that as a result of the parties' use of different terminology, the ACT never suggested a specific date for a meeting, and never made a specific proposal. Hence, he found that the Respondent did not refuse to discuss or refuse to consider and confer on any proposal.

DECISION AND ORDER

The Assistant Secretary adopted the Administrative Law Judge's findings, conclusions and recommendation that the complaint be dismissed.

On March 22, 1978, Administrative Law Judge Milton Kramer issued his Recommended Decision and Order in the above-entitled proceeding, finding that the Respondent had not engaged in the unfair labor practices alleged in the complaint and recommending that the complaint be dismissed in its entirety. Thereafter, the Complainant filed exceptions with respect to the Administrative Law Judge's Recommended Decision and Order.

The Assistant Secretary has reviewed the rulings of the Administrative Law Judge made at the hearing and finds that no prejudicial error was committed. The rulings are hereby affirmed. Upon consideration of the Administrative Law Judge's Recommended Decision and Order and the entire record in the subject case, including the exceptions filed by the Complainant I hereby adopt the Administrative Law Judge's findings, conclusions and recommendation.

Before: MILTON KRAMER
 Administrative Law Judge

This case arises under Executive Order 11491 as amended. It was initiated by a complaint dated March 28, 1977 and filed March 29, 1977 alleging violations of Sections 19(a)(1), (5), and (6) of the Executive order. Under date of April 5, 1977, the Respondent filed a response to the complaint. On June 27, 1977 the Regional Administrator dismissed the complaint except with respect to the contention that the Respondent violated Sections 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order by failing to meet and confer with the Complainant prior to implementing a reduction-in-force at the Pittsburgh Air National Guard Base. No appeal was taken from that partial dismissal. On July 22, 1977 the Regional Administrator issued a Notice of Hearing to be held September 27, 1977 in Philadelphia, Pennsylvania. Under date of August 31, 1977 the Respondent requested that the Regional Administrator reconsider his issuance of the Notice of Hearing. On September 1, 1977 that request was denied. On October 5, 1977 the Regional Administrator issued his Order Rescheduling Hearing scheduling it for November 3, 1977 in Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania. A hearing was held on that day in that City. Both sides were represented and presented witnesses who were examined and cross-examined, and offered exhibits which with one exception were received in evidence. Both parties waived closing argument and filed timely briefs.

Facts

The Pennsylvania State Council, Association of Civilian Technicians, is the certified exclusive representative of the Army and Air National Guards at the Pittsburgh Airport. It has been such representative of the technicians of the Army National Guard since March of 1971 and of the Air National Guard since March 1973. It is also the representative of the civilian technicians at the other National Guard units in Pennsylvania. Thomas J. Owsinski is the State Chairman of the Council and has been Chairman since October 1976. (He had also been Chairman from 1972 to 1974.) Major George Orndoff is the Labor-Relations Specialist for the Pennsylvania Adjutant General with respect to civilian technicians and the chief negotiator for the Respondent. Although the Council is the statewide representative of the technicians, it has local chapters where there are National Guard units. So far as the record shows, and I find, there are chapters at Pittsburgh and Philadelphia. The unit has the usual exclusions including the exclusion of supervisors.

After the Council was certified statewide, it and the Adjutant General tried to negotiate a statewide collective agreement. They reached agreement on all subjects proposed except two, the procedures when a reduction-in-force was to be made and the requirement of the technicians wearing the uniform of their military grade. The impasse on those two subjects was presented to the Federal Service Impasses Panel. The Panel recommended and then decided that the parties execute a written agreement on the subjects agreed on and upon appropriate notice resume negotiations on the two impasse subjects looking to separate agreements.

In the summer of 1976 the National Guard Bureau decided to convert certain operations at Pittsburgh from a KC-97 type of aircraft to KC-135 aircraft. This would affect the technician manning needs of the 171st Air Refueling Wing and the 112th Tactical Fighter Group. 1/

On October 29, 1976 Colonel Niles, the Adjutant General's Personnel Officer, wrote to the Commander of the 171st Air Refueling Wing at the Pittsburgh Airport advising him that there would be a Reduction-in-Force because of the conversion from the KC-97 to the KC-135, that the effective date for the conversion would be April 1, 1977, that affected technicians would not be terminated but some might be downgraded if they chose to accept lower-graded positions, that there would be no downgrading prior to April 1, 1977, and that specific notices would be issued to affected technicians by November 30, 1976.

Prior to that time, on October 13, 1976, Sgt. Michael Krepitch, President of the ACT Pittsburgh Chapter, was called to the Technician Personnel Office where he met with Col. Niles and Col. Paul Rosenberg, Chief of Support Services for the National Guard at the Greater Pittsburgh International Airport. Krepitch was told of the intended change in aircraft and the consequent change in manning requirements and RIF. Since the bargaining relationship was with the State Council, Krepitch called Owsinski, the State Chairman, who stated he had not had information about it before.

On October 15, 1976 Owsinski wrote to Orndoff as Chief Negotiator for the Respondent protesting the fact that

1/ The impact on the 112th appears to have been quite slight. The evidence in the record concerning it is extremely skimpy, and I make no separate findings concerning it.

Krepitch had been informed of the impending RIF before Owsinski was informed. 2/ Owsinski suggested an early meeting to "negotiate the circumstances and procedures of the upcoming reduction-in-force at Pittsburgh" to be followed immediately by directing their attention to RIF procedures statewide in general and the subject of military uniforms. Owsinski signed his name as Chief Negotiator for the Respondent.

On October 28 Orndoff replied and after explaining other details, including the fact that no technicians would be involuntarily separated but some might have different grades, stated that with respect to the request that the parties meet and "negotiate the circumstances and procedures of the upcoming reduction-in-force", his office was "willing to meet with you and discuss the conversion of this unit and the impact possibilities of the conversion which is at this time established as 1 April 1977." 3/

On November 11, 1976 Owsinski again wrote to Orndoff. In that letter he stated that he had asked for "negotiations on the impact, procedures and related circumstances brought about by the conversion" and that Orndoff had indicated a willingness to "meet and discuss the conversion." He stated also that telephone conversations with Orndoff's office had "implied" that a "meeting can be arranged to meet and discuss the conversion ... but that there can be no negotiations. ..." It continued with the statement that the Complainant was anxious to meet with Orndoff and his "negotiators ... on the matter of the ... conversion under the proper circumstances", and the letter dealt with other matters of protocol. 4/

On November 19 Col. Niles, the Respondent's Personnel Officer, replied to Owsinski's letter of November 11. Niles stated that Owsinski's request "to meet at the negotiating table for the purpose of negotiating the conversion ... is not appropriate. This conversion is a matter for discussion ... as relates to implementation and the impact it may have on currently employed Technicians. ..." 5/ He added that his office was available to "discuss" further the conversion to the different aircraft.

In November 1976 the individual RIF notices were sent to the affected technicians. The notices stated that the RIF would be effective April 1, 1977. In fact the conversion was twice postponed and the RIF did not become effective until July 1, 1977. No technicians lost employment but some were downgraded. Some four or five of them appealed but the record does not indicate the result.

Beginning January 20, 1977 Owsinski and other representatives of the State Council met with Orndoff and other representatives of the Technician Personnel Office in resumption of the negotiations on a state-wide RIF procedure and the wearing of the uniform. These negotiations lasted for three or four months but did not produce agreement. Although mention was made of the two specific RIFs here involved, such mention was not "negotiation" or "discussion". The Complainant at no time made a specific proposal concerning the procedures or impact of these RIFs. 6/ Owsinski did not make any such proposal because he understood from the tenor of the letters described above and from telephone conversations with Orndoff's office that it would not "negotiate" about them but would only "discuss" them if he made a proposal. 7/ There was an agreement in effect between the parties that when meeting to negotiate an agreement the first items to be considered would be the Complainant's proposals. 8/

On November 8, 1976, shortly before the individual RIF notices were issued, Col. Rosenberg told Krepitch that there would be a meeting with the technicians affected by the RIF and that the stewards and chief steward would be invited. Such a meeting was held on November 11. Documents were distributed, including a statement that the RIF would be effectuated April 1, 1977, and a document containing the vacancy announcements for the new positions to be created by the conversion of the aircraft from the KC-97 to the KC-135. The record does not indicate what else, if anything, occurred at the meeting. As noted above, the conversion was repeatedly postponed and was finally effectuated July 1, 1977. Rosenberg kept the President of the Pittsburgh Chapter of ACT advised of the changes in scheduling. The RIF was carried out in accordance with the procedures of the National Guard Bureau's Technician Personnel Pamphlet 910 and local State supplements, the procedures prescribed in the absence of agreements to the contrary.

Discussion and Conclusion

My initial conclusion is that this case arises more from the parties misunderstanding each other rather than from their disagreement over their respective obligations under Executive Order 11491 as amended.

Section 11(a) of the Executive Order imposes on the parties, both of them, the obligation to "meet ... and confer ... with respect to ... matters affecting working conditions, so far as may be appropriate under applicable laws and regulations. ..." It is well settled that although by reason of Sections 11(b) and 12(b) of the Executive Order an agency has no obligation to negotiate concerning its decision to have a RIF, it does have the obligation to notify the union and give it an opportunity to meet and confer on the procedures to be followed in reducing the work force and on the impact of the RIF on adversely affected employees. Department of the Navy, Bureau of Medicine and Surgery, Great Lakes Naval Hospital, 3 A/SLMR 375, A/SLMR No. 289 (1973).

In this case notice was first given on October 13, 1976 of a RIF intended to be effected April 1, 1977, five and a half months later. In fact it was not carried out until July 1, 1977, eight and a half months later. That afforded ample time for the parties to "meet and confer" on the method of implementation of the RIF and its impact. To be sure, the initial notification should have been given to Owsinski, the Chairman of ACT's Pennsylvania State Council, instead of to Krepitch, the President of the local chapter of ACT. But Krepitch immediately told Owsinski who almost immediately communicated with the Respondent about it, and the departure from protocol was without significance.

Prior to the Federal Labor Relations Council's Report and Recommendation in January 1975 on the 1975 amendments of Executive Order 11491, as amended, there was confusion concerning the intended meaning of the words "consult", "confer", and "negotiate" as used in the Executive Order. Unfortunately, despite that Report and Recommendation, much misunderstanding remains and parties quibble over the appropriate appellation to be applied to what they are doing or want to do. 8/ That Report appears lucidly to explain that "consult" refers to, let us say, "talking" pursuant to national consultation rights, while "negotiate" is synonymous with "meet and confer". 9/ But among many it appears to have been read quaquaversally.

In this case Owsinski advised Orndoff on October 15, 1976 that he wanted to "negotiate the circumstances" of the RIF scheduled for April 1, 1977. Orndoff replied that he was willing to "meet with you and discuss" the conversion to the new aircraft and the impact it would have on April 1, 1977, the then scheduled date of the conversion. On November 11 Owsinski wrote to Orndoff stating that telephone conversations with Orndoff's office "indicates" a willingness "to meet and discuss the conversion" but not to negotiate about it, and Owsinski was anxious to meet with the Respondent's "negotiator" on the matter of the conversion.

Orndoff, the Labor Relations Specialist, showed the letter to Niles, the Personnel Officer. Niles apparently understood Owsinski's last letter as requesting negotiations over whether there should be a conversion. And perhaps that is what Owsinski meant. Although at the hearing Owsinski testified that he did not question the right of the Respondent to have a RIF, 10/ in his posthearing brief he criticized the Respondent's reliance at the hearing on its rights under Section 11(b) as "belated". 11/ Niles replied that Owsinski's request "to meet at the negotiating table for the purpose of negotiating the conversion ... is not appropriate" but that the conversion was a "matter for discussion ... as relates to implementation and the impact ... on currently employed Technicians. ..." Owsinski took that reply, and the "tenor" of the correspondence, as a rejection of any negotiations and pursued the matter no further. In any event, no proposal was made concerning implementation or impact and the Respondent did not refuse to consider or talk about any proposal.

The obligation of the Respondent in the situation presented here was, upon request, to get together with the Complainant and talk with it about its concerns about implementation and impact of the coming RIF. It did not have an obligation to agree on the proper appellation to be applied to the nature of the talks. In Department of the Treasury, Internal Revenue Service, Chicago District, 6 A/SLMR 492, 6 A/SLMR Supp. 191, A/SLMR No. 711 (1976) the Complainant insisted on calling the talks negotiating while the Respondent persisted on calling them consulting or conferring. But they did get together and talk, and even reached agreement on some matters. Here the Complainant insisted on proposing negotiations while the Respondent persisted in expressing a willingness to engage in discussions. The FLRC says the obligation is to "meet and confer". 12/ The difference between discussing and conferring is not readily apparent and whatever difference there may be should be insufficient to sustain an unfair labor practice under Section 19(a).

As a result of the parties' use of different terminology, the Complainant never suggested a specific date for meeting and talking and never made a specific proposal, and hence the Respondent did not refuse to meet and talk and did not refuse to consider and confer on any proposal. I conclude there was thus no violation of Sections 19(a)(6) and (1).

RECOMMENDATION

The complaint should be dismissed.

PURSUANT TO SECTION 6 OF EXECUTIVE ORDER 11491, AS AMENDED

DEPARTMENT OF THE NAVY, NORFOLK NAVAL SHIPYARD,

A/SLMR No. 1065

This case involved an unfair labor practice complaint filed by the Tidewater Virginia Federal Employees Metal Trades Council, AFL-CIO, (Complainant) alleging that the Respondent violated Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order when it refused to "negotiate" on the impact of a stagger work-week in Shop 03 of the Norfolk Naval Shipyard.

In recommending that the complaint be dismissed in its entirety, the Administrative Law Judge concluded that the Respondent's offer to consult and confer pursuant to the parties' negotiated agreement did not, on its face, constitute a refusal to negotiate within the meaning of Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order. The Administrative Law Judge concluded that compliance with a contractual obligation to meet, to discuss and to work out mutually acceptable change in good faith may well constitute negotiation, without regard to what the procedure is called by the parties. He noted further that it was the Complainant's refusal to discuss the proposed change which precluded any negotiation.

The Assistant Secretary adopted the findings, conclusions and recommendation of the Administrative Law Judge, and ordered that the complaint be dismissed in its entirety.

RECOMMENDED DECISION AND ORDER

Statement of the Case

This case arises under Executive Order 11491, as amended (hereinafter also referred to as the "Order") and was initiated by a charge dated May 9, 1977 (Asst. Sec. Exh. 5) and a complaint dated June 13, 1977, and filed on June 20, 1977 (Asst. Sec. Exh. 1), alleging violations of Sections 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order because of the refusal of Respondent to negotiate on the impact of a stagger work week in Shop 03 of the Naval Shipyards. Notice of Hearing (Asst. Sec. Exh. 2) issued September 20, 1977, for a hearing on November 1, 1977, and an Order Rescheduling Hearing (Asst. Sec. Exh. 4) issued October 26, 1977, rescheduling the hearing from November 1, 1977, to November 17, 1977, pursuant to which a hearing was duly held before the undersigned on November 17, 1977 in Norfolk, Virginia. At the close of the hearing December 19, 1977, was fixed by agreement of the parties as the date for the filing of briefs; however, Counsel for Complainant subsequently requested, and, for good cause shown, was granted an extension of time to December 27, 1977, and Respondent, which had already filed and served its brief, was allowed until January 6, 1978 to file a Reply.

Both parties were represented, all parties were afforded full opportunity to be heard, to examine and cross-examine witnesses, and to present evidence and testimony of the issues involved and each party has submitted a very helpful brief which has been carefully considered. Upon the basis of the entire record, including my observation of the witnesses and their demeanor, I hereby make the following findings of fact, conclusions and recommendation:

FINDINGS

1. The Tidewater Virginia Federal Employees Metal Trades Council (hereinafter also referred to as the "Council") is the exclusive representative, inter alia, of Respondent Norfolk Naval Shipyards' Public Works. The parties' current collective bargaining agreement (hereinafter also referred to as the "Agreement") was executed August 22, 1973 (Res. Exh. 3).
2. Article 15, entitled "Hours of Work" of the Agreement provides, in relevant part, as follows:

"Section 1. The parties agree that the Employer shall retain the right to establish, disestablish, schedule the starting and ending times, or change basic workweeks or shifts when such action is based on one or more of the following reasons hereto agreed as valid bases:

- "a. the requirement to eliminate inherent safety and/or health hazards.
- "b. continuous operational or surveillance functions
- "c. the requirement to meet scheduled major key event dates

"d. effective utilization of available manpower

"e. the full utilization of tools, equipment, and/or facilities

"It is agreed that the requirement to avoid or reduce overtime is valid basis when considered with one or more of the bases listed above. It is further agreed that before taking any of the actions listed above, the Employer will notify the Council and meet to discuss the proposed change. Such meetings will be to work out mutually acceptable change. Should the parties fail to reach agreement, the Employer shall have the right to effect the change, and any dispute therefrom as to whether the Employer had valid reason in terms of the bases listed herein shall be subject to the grievance and arbitration procedures. It is understood that basic workweek changes of this Section will involve the minimum number of employees possible and will terminate at the expiration of the particular work situation that effected such changes." (Res. Exh. 3, pp. 41-42).

3. Mrs. Lorraine Ratto, Civilian Personnel Manager, Naval Seas Systems Command, and until March, 1977, Director, Employee Relations, Labor Relations, Norfolk Naval Shipyard, was Respondent's chief spokesman at the negotiations for the Agreement, and presented various proposals and counterproposals which show, for example, that the Council, which first opposed any departure from the negotiated workweeks, proposed, in part, as follows:

"Should the parties fail to reach agreement [on change of established M - F workweek] the Employer shall have the right to effect changes, and dispute therefrom shall be subject to the grievance and arbitration procedures. ..." (Res. Exh. 4) and later in slightly different language, that:

"Should the parties fail to reach agreement the Employer shall have the right to effect changes, and dispute therefrom shall be subject to the grievance to [sic] arbitration procedures. ..." (Res. Exh. 4).

In each of the above proposals there was, in addition, the further provision, among others,

"... basic workweek will not be changed to perform work that could reasonably be performed in any other manner or to avoid payment of overtime."

4. As set forth in Paragraph 2, above, Art. 15, Section 1, vis-a-vis grievance and arbitration reads:

"... any dispute therefrom as to whether the Employer had valid reason in terms of the bases listed herein shall be subject to the grievance and arbitration procedures. ..." (Res. Exh. 3) (Emphasis supplied.)

Of course, Art. 15, Section 1, contains the further provision that such changes will involve the minimum number of employees possible and will terminate at the expiration of the particular work situation that effected such changes.

5. In early April, 1977, Superintendent, Utilities, Mr. Leonard Mack Shelton, called Mr. Roy Pennington, Chief Steward of the Power Plant, to his office and told him that he was going to establish a stagger shift in the Power Plant because he was having difficulty getting outages during the week. Mr. Shelton told Mr. Pennington it would require a crew of about 15 men; that this would be a temporary change. Mr. Pennington told Mr. Shelton that, in his opinion, you could get more done Monday through Friday; but that he would advise Mr. Richard F. Lake, President of the Council, and would get back to him. Mr. Pennington did contact Mr. Lake and later told Mr. Shelton that Mr. Lake was going to get a meeting with Captain Trueblood, Public Works Officer. Mr. Pennington further told Mr. Shelton that it had been rumored for some time that there might be a stagger workweek; that a lot of people didn't want to work a stagger workweek; and that if he were going ahead with it, he thought Respondent should try and get volunteers. Mr. Shelton stated that he would do so.

6. Captain Trueblood, and other management officials, met with Mr. Lake, and other representatives of the Council, on April 13, 1977, and on May 5, 1977. At each meeting, Captain Trueblood stated that Respondent was there to discuss the proposed stagger workweek and to work out mutually acceptable change; and, at each meeting, Mr. Lake requested negotiation of the impact and stated that he wanted to discuss ground rules for formal negotiation of the impact of the stagger workweek.

Respondent refused to negotiate impact and the Council refused to discuss the proposed change and/or to attempt, pursuant to Article 15, Section 1, to "work out mutually acceptable change". On each occasion the meeting was of short duration.

7. Following the April 13, 1977 meeting, Mr. Lake wrote Admiral E.T. Westfall, Shipyard Commander, requesting "formal negotiations on the impact of the realignment of the work force as outlined in section 11(b) of Executive Order 11491 as amended." (Res. Exh. 2). Admiral Westfall responded by letter dated May 4, 1977 (Res. Exh. 7), in which he stated, in part, as follows:

"The April 13 meeting was an effort on the part of Captain Trueblood to discuss with you all aspects of this change in order to reach mutual agreement in accordance with the terms of Article 15, Section 1, of our negotiated agreement. ... The conditions of proposed work week changes such as this are clearly set forth in the agreement, and is the procedure for attempting to reach mutual agreement and the resolution of any dispute arising therefrom.

"In view of the above, I have advised Captain Trueblood to meet with you again and fully explore this matter in an attempt to reach mutual agreement regarding this proposed change. ..." (Res. Exh. 7).

8. Mr. Lake testified that he was given the opportunity to meet and confer on the impact of the proposed change, which he declined to accept unless Respondent was willing to "enter into formal negotiations" (Complainant's Summary of May 5, 1977, meeting, Res. Exh. 8); and Respondent, while willing to discuss the impact of the proposed change and to work out mutually acceptable change, pursuant to Article 15, refused to negotiate on the impact of the proposed change (Complainant's Summary and Respondent's Summaries of May 5, 1977, meeting, Res. Exhs. 8 and 10).

9. After the meeting of May 5, 1977, Mr. Shelton sought and obtained volunteers (Res. Exhs. 5, 6); but since those employees had not been on board for an extended time and some were apprentices and helpers, Mr. Shelton concluded that he must assign a crew with use of the volunteers to the extent possible. Accordingly, the first stagger shift (Wednesday through Sunday) was for May 11-15, 1977.

10. The charge herein was filed May 9, 1977, and a further meeting was held by Captain Trueblood on May 23, 1977, at which the parties adhered to their respective positions. This was further confirmed by Admiral Westfall's final decision on the charge dated June 6, 1977 (Res. Exh. 1).

CONCLUSIONS

I. Gravamen Of Complaint Is Not Breach Of Negotiated Agreement

Clearly, the complaint does not allege a violation of the negotiated agreement. To the contrary, Council asserts a violation of Sections 19(a)(1) and (6) because Respondent "refused to enter into formal negotiations concerning the impact of the realignment of the work force in Shop 03." On the other hand, Respondent asserts that the matter is governed wholly by the negotiated agreement which provides, in part, that:

"... It is further agreed that before taking any of the actions listed above, the Employer will notify the Council and meet to discuss the proposed change. Such meetings will be to work out mutually acceptable change. Should the parties fail to reach agreement, the Employer shall have the right to effect the change, and any dispute therefrom as to whether the Employer had valid reasons in terms of the bases listed herein shall be subject to the grievance and arbitration procedures. ..." (Res. Exh. 3).

Obviously, the parties agreed that a change of hours could be made for stated reasons; that before taking such action Respondent must notify the Council, which it did, and meet with the Council to discuss the proposed change and to work out mutually acceptable change, which Respondent tried to do; but which Council refused to entertain. The language of Article 15, Section 1, alone, makes it plain that "meet to discuss the proposed change" and "to work out mutually acceptable change" is broad and encompasses discussion of impact and agreement on impact by mutually acceptable change. Mrs. Ratto's testimony, which was not challenged or disputed, fully supports this construction, namely, that discussion of the proposed change included discussion of impact and implementation.

Council does not disagree in reality; but asserts that discussion without an obligation to negotiate impact is meaningless. Further, Council asserts that it did not waive, by its agreement to discuss, its right under the Order to negotiate impact. Thus, Council points to the fact that Article 15, Section 1, makes cognizable under the grievance and arbitration procedures only:

"... any dispute therefrom as to whether the Employer had valid reasons in terms of the bases listed herein shall be subject to the grievance and arbitration procedures. ..."

The various negotiation proposals and counterproposals, submitted by Respondent, fully support Council's position. That is, Council had proposed various limitations and very broad grievance and arbitration language which would have made any dispute subject to the grievance and arbitration procedures; but Respondent insisted on a provision shorn of most of Council's limitations, for example, "basic workweek will not be changed to perform work that could reasonably be performed in any other manner or to avoid payment of overtime"; and disputes subject to grievance and arbitration were specifically limited to

"any dispute therefrom as to whether the Employer had valid reasons in terms of the bases listed herein. ..."

The parties did, indeed, by the Agreement negotiate concerning proposed changes in the hours of work, including notice, discussion and effort to work out mutually acceptable change, which includes impact of such proposed change. Nevertheless, there was no clear and unmistakable waiver by Council, by its agreement to discuss impact, of its right to negotiate concerning impact. Cf., Department of Treasury, Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms, Washington, D.C., A/SLMR No. 680, 6 A/SLMR 374 (1976); Internal Revenue Service, Omaha District Office A/SLMR No. 417, 4 A/SLMR 493 (1974), which hold, inter alia, that there is no withdrawal of jurisdiction where, as here, the issue is whether a party to an agreement has given up rights granted under the Order; and that in the absence of clear and unmistakable waiver the exclusive representative retains rights granted under the Order. That discussion of impact was not intended as a waiver of Council's right, and Respondent's obligation, to negotiate as to impact is supported by the limited grievance and arbitration provision of Article 15, Section 1. In addition, Article 6, entitled "MATTERS APPROPRIATE FOR CONSULTATION AND NEGOTIATION" provides, in part, as follows:

"Section 1. Appropriate matters include personnel policies and practices and matters affecting working conditions within the unit which are within the discretion of the Employer insofar as is required by applicable laws or regulations." (Res. Exh. 3, p. 10).

For the foregoing reasons, this case is not governed by Department of Army, Watervliet Arsenal, Watervliet, New York, A/SLMR No. 624, 6 A/SLMR 127 (1976); Aerospace Guidance and Metrology Center, Newark Air Force Station, Newark, Ohio, A/SLMR No. 677, 6 A/SLMR 361 (1976); and similar decisions, since no remedy is provided within the grievance machinery of the negotiated agreement as to impact of a change in hours of work.

Respondent's assertion that the proposed change in hours of work was not a "realignment of work forces" is not persuasive. First, a change of work hours is a matter affecting working conditions and is a negotiable item within the meaning of Section 11(a) of the Order. Southeast Exchange Region of the Army and Air Force Exchange Service, Rosewood Warehouse, Columbia, South Carolina, A/SLMR No. 656, 6 A/SLMR 237 (1976); U.S. Army Corps of Engineers, Philadelphia District, A/SLMR No. 673, 6 A/SLMR 339 (1976). Second, Section 11(b) of the Order removes from the obligation to negotiate of 11(a) a proposal relating to the basic workweek and hours of duty only when such proposal "is integrally related to and consequently determinative of the staffing patterns of the agency, i.e., the numbers, types, and grades of positions of employees assigned to an organizational unit, work project or tour of duty of the agency." (Office of the Administrator, Animal and Plant Health Inspection Service, U.S. Department of Agriculture, FLRC No. 73A-36, Supp. Dec. 1975, Report No. 73). See, also, Southeast Exchange Region of the Army and Air Force Exchange Service, supra.

Fourth, even when the obligation to bargain does not, pursuant to Section 11(b), extend to the establishment or change of tours of duty, negotiations may be required on the impact of such actions on the employees involved. AFGE Local 1940 and Plum Island Animal Disease Laboratory, Dept. of Agriculture, Greenport, N.Y., FLRC No. 71A-11, 1 FLRC 100 (1971); Internal Revenue Service, Philadelphia Service Center, Philadelphia, Pennsylvania. A/SLMR No. 771, 6 A.SLMR 719 (1976).

Of course, the instant case does not turn on the reserved right of management pursuant to either Sections 11(b) or 12(b) of the Order since the Agreement specifically provided for change of hours of work for stated reasons and Council did not, and does not, question that Respondent's proposed stagger shift was based on a basis stated in Article 15, Section 1. Accordingly, whether a change of hours of work is a "realignment of work forces", as clearly appears from the decisions, including those set forth hereinabove, or is a matter affecting working conditions and negotiable pursuant to Section 11(a) of the Order, such matter is a subject for negotiations except to the extent that such matter is removed from the obligation to negotiate by Section 11(b) or 12(b) of the Order and even when negotiation is not required on the decision, pursuant to Section 11(b) or 12(b), there is still an obligation to negotiate, upon request, on the impact of such action. The fact that the change is pursuant to a negotiated agreement, rather than as a reserved right of management, does affect the obligation that would attach to an action pursuant to Section 11(b) or 12(b).

II. Obligation To Meet And Confer

I am well aware that the Federal Labor Relations Council in its Report and Recommendation on the Amendment of Executive Order 11491, as amended, stated that:

"The parties to exclusive recognition have an obligation to 'negotiate' rather than to 'consult' on negotiable issues unless they have mutually agreed to limit this obligation in any way. ... The term 'meet and confer,' as used in the Order, is intended to be construed as a synonym for 'negotiate.'" (Pages 43-44).

The Agreement required that Respondent, before changing the hours of work, "notify the Council and meet to discuss the proposed change. Such meetings will be to work out mutually acceptable change. ..." Respondent did notify the Council; did agree to a suggestion of the Chief Steward in the Power Plant that volunteers be solicited; and did meet to discuss all aspects of the proposed change in order to reach mutual agreement pursuant to Article 15, Section 1, of the Agreement. Council refused to attempt to work out mutually acceptable change unless and until Respondent agreed to enter into formal negotiations on the impact of the change and that the Council wished to set up ground rules for negotiation. Respondent, while it was ready and willing to discuss the proposed change and to attempt to work out mutually acceptable change, refused to enter into formal negotiations on impact.

I quite agree with Admiral Westfall's statement that:

"This procedure [Article 15, Section 1] provides opportunity for the parties to arrive at a mutually acceptable change encompassing both impact and procedure regarding such a change." (Res. Exh. 1, pp. 2-3)

However, for the reasons set forth above, there is nothing in Article 15, Section 1 of the Agreement which constitutes a clear and unmistakable waiver by Council of the right under the Order to negotiate concerning the impact of a change in the hours of work pursuant to Article 15, Section 1. Accordingly, Respondent was required to negotiate concerning impact.

The Council misconceives the obligation to negotiate on impact. The Record shows that Council was strongly opposed to the stagger workweek. Indeed, President Lake's insistence on meeting to discuss ground rules and on formal negotiations strongly suggest that President Lake sought this approach as a means to delay the proposed change. Good faith bargaining is not determined by formal trappings or even by how the parties may have characterized their conduct. United States Department of the Treasury Internal Revenue Service, Chicago District, A/SLMR No. 711 (1976) (The Assistant Secretary adopted the Administrative Law Judge's findings, conclusions and recommendation, 6 A/SLMR 492, but the decision of the Administrative Law Judge is not included in Volume 6).

Here, Respondent met twice with Council to discuss the proposed change and to work out mutually acceptable change. Respondent stated its need to assign 12 to 15 employees to the Wednesday through Sunday shift for the purpose of performing maintenance on its utility system; that it contemplated assignments to this shift on a 90 day basis with consideration to acceptance of volunteers; that such stagger shift would be temporary. On each occasion Council was requested to discuss the proposed change and to attempt to work out mutually acceptable change in accordance with the Agreement. Council refused to enter upon any discussion and refused to attempt to work out mutually acceptable change, as it had agreed to do in the Agreement.

With full recognition that Respondent refused to characterize its obligation as negotiating, Council refused to enter upon any discussion whatever. This was not a situation where a party refused to discuss an item. To the contrary, Respondent sought to discuss the proposed change and sought to work out mutually acceptable change, which, in reality, is necessarily the beginning of bargaining. Whether Respondent, however it might characterize its conduct, would, or would not, have complied with its obligation to negotiate cannot be known because Council refused to enter upon any discussion. Because Council refused to discuss the proposed change, it cannot be said that Respondent has refused to negotiate since Council's own refusal to discuss precluded any negotiations. This is not to imply, however, that Respondent was correct in refusing to acknowledge its obligation to negotiate impact; but rather that Respondent's compliance with the terms of the Agreement to discuss the proposed change and to work out mutually acceptable change was not; without more, a refusal to bargain within the meaning of Section 19(a) (6) of the Order. Indeed, compliance with the contractual obligation, to meet, to discuss and to work out mutually acceptable change in good faith, may well constitute negotiation, as required by the Order, without regard to what the procedure is called by the parties.

Moreover, the negotiated agreement of the parties imposed the duty to meet, to discuss and to work out mutually acceptable change, which was, and is, a contractually agreed upon condition. Council's refusal to comply with the terms of its Agreement precludes a finding that Respondent refused to consult, confer, or negotiate with a labor organization as Respondent sought to discuss the proposed change and sought to work out mutually acceptable change. Where, as here, compliance with an agreed procedure requires discussion and attempt to work out mutually acceptable change, unless and until the discussion and efforts to work out mutually acceptable change, the essence of bargaining, demonstrates a refusal to bargain in good faith, a refusal to negotiate has not been established.

RECOMMENDATION

That the complaint should be dismissed.

UNITED STATES DEPARTMENT OF LABOR
ASSISTANT SECRETARY FOR LABOR-MANAGEMENT RELATIONS
SUMMARY OF DECISION AND ORDER OF THE ASSISTANT SECRETARY
PURSUANT TO SECTION 6 OF EXECUTIVE ORDER 11491, AS AMENDED

U.S. CUSTOMS SERVICE, REGION VII,
LOS ANGELES, CALIFORNIA
A/SLMR No.1066

This case involved an unfair labor practice complaint filed by the National Treasury Employees Union, Chapter 103, (NTEU) alleging essentially that the Respondent violated Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order when it failed to provide the NTEU with the opportunity to negotiate concerning impact and implementation prior to conducting a special operation called Star Trek II. The Respondent contended, in part, that it was not obligated to negotiate concerning the procedures to be used or the impact and implementation of the operation since participation by employees in such operations was an established term and condition of employment, and there was no change in the procedures utilized in conducting the operation from those utilized in conducting many such operations in the past.

The Administrative Law Judge found that Star Trek II continued management's longstanding practice of conducting special operations, and that participation in such operations was a well-established condition of employment. However, the Administrative Law Judge found that the Respondent Activity had failed to prove that in the conduct of Star Trek II it had utilized established selection procedures and criteria. In essence, the Administrative Law Judge imposed on the Respondent an obligation to establish that no change had occurred from past operations. Hence, the Administrative Law Judge concluded that Respondent had violated 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order when it implemented Star Trek II, without prior opportunity being given to the NTEU to negotiate concerning the impact and implementation of the selection procedure to be utilized in Star Trek II.

Contrary to the Administrative Law Judge, the Assistant Secretary concluded that the NTEU had not established by a preponderance of the evidence that Star Trek II constituted a change in personnel policies and practices, or matters affecting the terms and conditions of employment of unit employees. He noted that his regulations impose on a complainant the burden of proving by a preponderance of the evidence all allegations of the complaint. Under these circumstances he ordered that the complaint be dismissed in its entirety.

DECISION AND ORDER

On February 28, 1978, Administrative Law Judge Steven E. Halpern issued his Recommended Decision and Order in the above-entitled proceeding, finding that the Respondent had engaged in certain alleged unfair labor practices and recommending that it cease and desist therefrom and take certain affirmative actions as set forth in the attached Administrative Law Judge's Recommended Decision and Order. Thereafter, the Respondent filed exceptions and a supporting brief with respect to the Administrative Law Judge's Recommended Decision and Order and the Complainant filed an answering brief to the Respondent's exceptions.

The Assistant Secretary has reviewed the rulings of the Administrative Law Judge made at the hearing and finds that no prejudicial error was committed. The rulings are hereby affirmed. Upon consideration of the Administrative Law Judge's Recommended Decision and Order and the entire record in the subject case, including the Respondent's exceptions and supporting brief and the Complainant's answering brief, I hereby adopt the Administrative Law Judge's findings, conclusions, and recommendations, only to the extent consistent herewith.

The complaint herein alleged, in essence, that the Respondent violated Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order when it failed to provide further information and an opportunity to negotiate concerning a special operation designated as Star Trek II. The essential facts of the case, which are not in dispute, are set forth, in detail, in the Administrative Law Judge's Recommended Decision and Order, and I shall repeat them only to the extent necessary.

During all times material herein, the Respondent and Complainant have been party to a negotiated agreement covering employees in the bargaining unit for which the Complainant is the exclusively recognized bargaining representative. ^{1/} In the latter part of August or early September 1976, the U.S. Customs Service authorized the Respondent Activity to carry out a special enforcement operation designated as Star Trek II. As part of its preparation for Star Trek II, the Respondent solicited volunteers, furnishing non-specific information about the general nature of the operation, that TDY (temporary duty) assignment away from the regular duty station was involved, and that those selected would not be permitted to take leave until completion of the operation. On September 10, 1976, selections of those employees who were to participate in Star Trek II were made. The participating employees were then notified of their selection, and briefing sessions were held in mid-September.

Sometime prior to September 24, the Respondent's Director of Personnel approached the Complainant's national representative, who was attending a conference on another matter, and informed the latter that there was going to be a special confidential operation similar to Star Trek I, and that if there was any further information that could be made available, it would be given to the Complainant when possible. On September 24, the Complainant's national representative was approached again by the Respondent's Director of Personnel and given a list of employees who had been chosen to participate in Star Trek II. This document stated that the Respondent would conduct Star Trek II "in the very near future." The Complainant's national representative asked for more information, but was told nothing further was available and that when further information was available, it would be given to the Complainant. At this point, no request for negotiations was made by the Complainant and it awaited further information from the Respondent.

Star Trek II began on October 9 and continued until November 17. When the Complainant learned of the implementation from its membership after Star Trek II had begun, its national representative made several calls to the Respondent's labor relations office seeking a negotiating date. On November 3, the Complainant's national representative was informed that, since Star Trek II was confidential, negotiations at that time would jeopardize the success of the operation. The Complainant thereupon filed its unfair labor practice charge on November 9. Subsequent to the conclusion of Star Trek II, and in connection with the pre-complaint investigation procedures, the Respondent offered to negotiate with the Complainant. The Respondent asserted that earlier negotiations concerning Star Trek II had been precluded by security considerations necessary to the success of the operation.

The evidence establishes that since 1969 Respondent has conducted numerous special operations similar to Star Trek II, with 12 such operations having been conducted since April 1974, when the Complainant became the exclusive representative of the Respondent's employees.

^{1/} The Complainant became the exclusive representative in April 1974. The current negotiated agreement extends from November 14, 1975, to November 14, 1978.

The record fails to establish that the Complainant sought bargaining concerning the impact and implementation of such special enforcement operations in the past, although there is evidence of specific notification by the Respondent to the Complainant with respect to at least one special operation in the past, Star Trek I.

The Complainant contends, in essence, that the Respondent violated the Order by effecting Star Trek II without first notifying and affording it a reasonable opportunity to bargain concerning the impact and implementation of the special operation. The Respondent asserts, on the other hand, that it was not obliged to negotiate concerning the impact and implementation of Star Trek II because there was no change from the procedures utilized in the past in carrying out special operations and participation by employees in special operations is an established term and condition of employment.

The Administrative Law Judge found, among other things, that Star Trek II continued management's longstanding practice of conducting special enforcement operations, and that participation in such operations by employees on TDY assignments away from their regular duty stations was a well-established condition of their employment. However, he further found that in the previous special enforcement operations the Respondent Activity had failed to establish the criteria and specific procedures for the selection of employees. Thus, the Administrative Law Judge concluded that the Respondent was obligated to negotiate with the Complainant concerning implementing procedures for the selection of volunteers and selection of participants in Star Trek II and on the impact of its actions with respect to adversely affected employees. The Respondent's failure to negotiate with respect to these matters, in the Administrative Law Judge's view, constituted a violation of Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order. In reaching this conclusion, the Administrative Law Judge rejected the Respondent's defense that it was not obligated to notify and negotiate with the Complainant because no change from the earlier operations had occurred in Star Trek II, noting the absence of evidence in the record as to the procedures utilized in the earlier special enforcement operations. In essence, the Administrative Law Judge imposed upon the Respondent the obligation to establish by a preponderance of the evidence that no change had occurred from its past operations.

Contrary to the Administrative Law Judge, I find insufficient evidence to establish that under the circumstances of this case the Respondent violated Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order. Thus, as noted above, the evidence establishes that the Respondent conducted special enforcement programs similar to Star Trek II in the past. Further, the record is unclear as to the procedures utilized by the Respondent in the past in selecting participating personnel for past special enforcement programs, and whether or not the same procedures were utilized in staffing Star Trek II. It has been held previously that where agency management takes an action which alters established personnel policies and practices or working conditions which fall within the ambit of Sections 11(b) or 12(b) of the Order, it, nevertheless, must afford an exclusive representative reasonable notice and an opportunity to bargain concerning the impact and implementation of such action prior to its implementation. ^{2/} However, it has further been held that agency management's obligation arises only when its action effects a change in existing personnel policies and practices or working conditions of unit employees. ^{3/}

The Assistant Secretary's Regulations impose upon a complainant the burden of proving the allegations of its complaint by a preponderance of the evidence. ^{4/} In my view, the Complainant herein has failed to establish by a preponderance of the evidence that the implementation of the special enforcement operation known as Star Trek II constituted a change in past enforcement operations. Thus, the Complainant failed to present, and the record does not contain, sufficient evidence to establish that the procedures utilized by the Respondent in soliciting volunteers, the method of selecting volunteers, or the conditions of the operation of Star Trek II differed from previous enforcement operations and thereby constituted a change in established personnel policies and practices, or matters affecting the terms and conditions of employees in the exclusively represented unit. Consequently, I find that the evidence herein is insufficient to establish that the Respondent's conduct in this matter was in derogation of its bargaining responsibilities under the Executive Order. Accordingly, I shall order that the subject complaint be dismissed in its entirety.

IT IS HEREBY ORDERED that the complaint in Case No. 72-6746(CA) be, and it hereby is, dismissed.

RECOMMENDED DECISION AND ORDER

Statement of the Case

Pursuant to a complaint filed on March 21, 1977, under Executive Order 11491, as amended, by the National Treasury Employees Union and NTEU Chapter 103, against the U. S. Customs Service, Notice of Hearing was issued by the Regional Administrator, Labor-Management Services Administration, San Francisco Region, on August 9, 1977, and pursuant to his Order Rescheduling Hearing the matter was duly heard on November 28, 1977, in Los Angeles, California.

The complaint charges violations of section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Executive Order and alleges the following:

NTEU is the exclusive representative of all bargaining unit employees in Region VII, U. S. Customs Service. On September 24, 1976, management gave the union an undated memorandum (Attachment A) announcing the proposed TDY assignment - Operation Star Trek II. Mr. George Candish, Region VII Director of Personnel, told Mike Gaide, NTEU National Field Representative, that an "operation" was being planned and more information would be furnished as soon as it became available so NTEU could negotiate if it so desired. No further information was furnished to NTEU. Operation Star Trek II was implemented and several bargaining unit employees were detailed to various posts of duty in October and November, 1976. Repeatedly throughout the latter part of October and early November, NTEU demanded additional information on the operation and a date to commence negotiations. Such requests were denied until November 3, 1976, when management announced that the nature of the operation was confidential and to negotiate on it would jeopardize the operation. No negotiations were held.

Both parties have been afforded a full opportunity to be heard, to adduce evidence bearing on the issues involved, to examine and cross-examine witnesses, to make oral argument and to file briefs.

Upon the entire record, 1/ having observed the witnesses and assessed their credibility, I make the within findings, conclusions and recommendations.

1/ Respondent's motion to correct the transcript hereby is granted and the transcript is corrected in accordance therewith.

Findings

I

Complainant, since April 1974, has been the exclusive representative of Respondent's bargaining unit employees. The parties during all times material hereto were subject to a collective bargaining agreement entered into on October 15, 1975.

II

Inter alia it is Respondent's mission to reduce the flow into this country of illegal drugs and other contraband.

III

In furtherance of its mission Respondent began in 1969 to conduct periodic intensified interdiction operations--also referred to as special operations--concentrating its employees, on temporary duty assignment (TDY), at locations other than their normal duty stations.

IV

Respondent's witness, Marvin E. Milner, 2/ testified that special operations such as Star Trek II, the operation out of which the instant dispute arises, since 1969 have been "standard operating procedure" in which:

... we would garner the intelligence, focalize on a particular area, geographic area, based on the intelligence, smuggling trends, profiles, routes, patterns, et cetera, and then concentrate with manpower and resources in that particular area for designated periods of time. (TR. 238)

According to his testimony at least 12 special operations essentially similar to Star Trek II have been carried out prior thereto within the time frame of Complainant's exclusive representation. His testimony is supported by documentary evidence of a few such operations and there is no evidence to the contrary.

2/ Milner, who was regional coordinator for Star Trek II, has had long and intimate contact with intensified interdiction operations over the years. He was either Assistant Regional Patrol Director or Regional Patrol Director during the entire period of Complainant's representation; prior thereto, during the period from 1969 to 1974, he had been a supervising customs inspector and an operations officer with the division of inspections and control.

Complainant's chief steward, Thomas L. Haugen, himself a participant in Star Trek II, in response to the question "What is the difference, if any, between Star Trek II as a TDY assignment, and any other TDY assignment in your work?" responded: "As far as specifics go, a number of things, but in general, they are the same." (TR. 85)

V

Complainant, through its National Field Representative Mike Gaide, was aware that Respondent had carried out intensified operations prior to Star Trek II (TR. 111 et. seq.). Even apart from his knowledge however, considering the number of such earlier operations it can hardly be believed that other union officials as well were not familiar with management's practice of periodically conducting them. Actual notice had been given as to at least one prior operation, Star Trek I.

VI

At hearing, both sides endeavored to reconstruct the times of occurrence of the events surrounding Star Trek II. The testimony in this regard unfortunately consists largely of approximations and estimates and is so imprecise and overlapping that it cannot be relied upon as the basis for other than a finding of general chronological sequence; and, in some respects even chronology is in doubt. The witnesses apparently testified from memory and understandably their accounts vary.

Overall, however, it appears that Respondent, having made the determination and been authorized by its Washington, D. C. headquarters to carry out Star Trek II, proceeded to implement it, by the following series of steps, commencing in early to mid-September 1976: (a) it issued a solicitation for volunteers giving advice of the general nature of the forthcoming operation, that TDY assignment away from regular duty station was involved and that those selected would not be permitted to take leave until completion of the operation; (b) selections were made from among the volunteers; (c) those volunteers selected to participate were notified and a briefing session was held, probably prior to September 24, 1976; (d) all participants were given ample opportunity to draw the recommended sum of $300.00 in advance travel funds and provisions were made for an additional $150.00 to be available at the TDY station if needed, such total amount being sufficient for each tour; (e) the integrity of Star Trek II requiring internal secrecy as to the time of commencement of its operative or "strike" phase and the situs of the intensified searches, neither the date nor location of the "strike" was disclosed to the participants until 12 hours prior thereto; travel and lodging arrangements were made for them unless they requested otherwise; (f) the first "strike" took place on the morning of October 9, 1977, and the operation was concluded on November 17, 1976 (Exhibit M-8).

VII

Notice of Star Trek II was first given to the union qua union on September 24, 1976, at which time management's Regional Director of Personnel Management, George Candish, handed to NTEU National Field Representative, Mike Gaide, a copy of an undated internal memorandum (Joint Exhibit 5) from its Regional Commissioner to its District Director, giving advice of operation Star Trek II. To said memorandum was affixed a list of those employees who had already been selected to participate, the selection having been made from among those volunteering in response to the earlier solicitation.

It is thus evident that as to the parties inter se elements of the operation having impact on bargaining unit employees had already been implemented, without opportunity for negotiations, prior to September 24, 1976.

The testimony of Candish that he had given Gaide earlier advice of Star Trek II and that the memorandum was furnished pursuant to his agreement to provide further available information is unsupported by the Regional Commissioner's letter of April 14, 1977, which is reproduced hereinbelow. That letter fixes September 24, 1976, as the date of notice to the union of the operation.

Under the circumstances here I do not find such earlier awareness of the operation as Complainant's Chief Steward had as being tantamount to notice to the union. 3/

3/ Dependent upon the situation the cases have gone both ways: U. S. Army Electronics Command, Fort Mammouth,

His knowledge, in any event, came from the information contained in the solicitation and therefore did not pre-cede implementation of the operation overall.

VIII

The parties have an established practice and procedure with regard to mid-contract negotiations on matters of regional scope, which is applicable to this situation. Under that practice regional matters are negotiated at the regional level (TR. 102-103, 160-161). Those proposals upon which the union desires to negotiate are presented at a meeting arranged pursuant to request; specific proposals are not made in advance of such meeting. Accordingly, when, following the aforementioned briefing session Complainant's Chief Steward indicated to Respondent's District Patrol Director his desire to negotiate certain aspects of the operation he was appropriately advised to contact the Assistant Regional Commissioner, and, Complainant has not contended that any action taken by said Chief Steward constituted a valid request to negotiate. Having received said advice he turned the matter over to Mike Gaide, who assumed any further responsibility in the matter.

IX

Since Star Trek II was unilaterally implemented, questions such as the timeliness of Complainant's request to negotiate, whether or not it had sufficient information to formulate proposals for negotiation, whether or not Respondent employed dilatory or misleading tactics and other like and related matters are largely academic. In the interest of continuity and completeness, however, I note the following:

3/ (cont.) New Jersey and National Federation of Federal Employees, Local 476, Independent, Case No. 32-3673(CA); General Services Administration, Region 3, Public Buildings Service, Central Support Field Office, and American Federation of Government Employees, Local 2151, AFL-CIO, A/SLMR No. 583; Headquarters, 63rd Air Base Group (MAC), United States Air Force, Norton Air Force Base, California and American Federation of Government Employees, Local No. 1485, Case No. 72-5762(CA); United States Department of Navy, Bureau of Medicine and Surgery, Great Lakes Naval Hospital, Illinois and Local 167, National Federation of Federal Employees, A/SLMR No. 289.

It is my impression from the testimony that even if, as Candish testified, he did not expressly state, as Gaide contends, that he would negotiate with regard to the operation, Gaide was justified in inferring from whatever Candish said or indicated that he stood ready to negotiate; and, Candish in fact testified that such was his position - at least as to non-secret matters. However, I do not find that Candish made a binding commitment to Gaide that the operation would not be proceeded with until further information was provided and an opportunity to negotiate afforded.

I find that as of September 24, 1976, when it was given a copy of the aforesaid memorandum, Complainant had in its possession sufficient information about Star Trek II to request a meeting and to negotiate in many of those areas which were of concern to it.

It did not then request a meeting, but chose instead to await the further information allegedly promised by Candish. No further information was forthcoming; the action or "strike" phase of the operation began, without further notice, on October 9, 1976; and, Complainant thereafter made its request to negotiate. Such request cannot be considered timely. The two week period between official notice of the operation, and the mounting of the first strike provided Complainant ample opportunity to request negotiations. That it decided to await such further information as might be forthcoming, when it already had in its hands sufficient information on which to commence negotiations, was of its own choosing.

I reiterate that the above is chiefly of academic interest, and for yet a further reason. Hereinbelow I conclude, based upon the position letter from Candish's superior, Respondent's Regional Commissioner, that "management" expressly rejected the concept that prior negotiations were required under the Executive Order; and, would not have entered into negotiations on Star Trek II until it was completed, notwithstanding what Candish may personally have contemplated and indicated. I therefore find that any request for negotiations would have been futile; it is thus of no value to Respondent as a defense, and of no real consequence herein, that Complainant made no formal request to meet and negotiate.

X

On January 14, 1977, Respondent's Regional Commissioner wrote to Complainant's National President, in part, as follows. (Joint Exhibit 4):

On December 14, 1976, my representatives met with members of the National Treasury Employees Union for the purpose of informally resolving a charge by National Treasury Employees Union that this agency violated Executive Order 11491, as amended, by its implementation of Operation Star Trek II.

As explained to your representatives during the meeting, the operation was of a sensitive nature, directly related to the mission of the agency. For security purposes, personnel were informed of its contents only on a "need to know" basis. On September 24, 1976, Mr. Michael Gaide was given all the existing information available by Mr. George Candish, Director, Personnel Management Division. Thereafter, the operation commenced and, for security purposes, no further discussion with the bargaining unit was permitted. When questioned concerning further negotiations by Mr. Gaide, my representative explained to him that post implementation negotiations would be possible upon completion of the operation.

Though we realize the value of such negotiations is reduced, under the circumstances, post termination negotiations are the only feasible manner in which such an operation can be conducted. To have done otherwise could have jeopardized Star Trek II and thereby the mission of the agency.

In the spirit of cooperation and good faith bargaining, this office is willing to sit down and negotiate the impact that Star Trek II had on the bargaining unit. Perhaps this discussion can lead to valuable suggestions for future operations along these lines.

XI

Further, Respondent's then position was definitively set forth by its Regional Commissioner in his April 14, 1977, letter to the Compliance Officer, U. S. Department of Labor, LMSA, in part, as follows (Joint Exhibit 3):

This is in response to allegations made by the National Treasury Employees Union that the United States Customs Service, Region VII, violated Section 19(a), subsection (1) and (6), of Executive Order 11491, as amended. The union claims that management implemented a special operation, code named Star Trek II, without first presenting the exclusive representative the opportunity to negotiate its impact on the bargaining unit. The agency contends that the operation was carried out under security measures, and negotiations could only take place when it came to a conclusion. The following is a brief outline of the agency's position.

The U.S. Customs Service is a law enforcement agency, obligated to protect the revenue of the United States and interdict narcotics and other contraband. In order to carry out its mission, it is necessary from time to time to institute enforcement programs such as Star Trek to catch offenders of Customs' laws off guard. Such programs by their very nature are secretive and can only be detailed on a need to know basis, otherwise the outcome of the operation could be in jeopardy.

With security in mind, on September 24, 1976, representatives of the agency informed the union representative of the existence of Star Trek II and of its imminent implementation. The union was also told that additional information, "if available," would be supplied to it. After the operation commenced, NTEU tried to gain more information and set dates to negotiate its impact on bargaining unit employees.

Their representatives were advised by the Agency that such negotiations could only take place when security precautions became unnecessary, i.e., upon completion of the operation. During a meeting to informally resolve this matter on December 14, 1976, the Agency again stated its willingness to negotiate the impact of the operation after security precautions were resolved. However, the union remained adamant that negotiations must start prior to completion of Star Trek II.

Now that the operation has been completed, the Agency remains willing to negotiate its impact on the bargaining unit employees with the union.

Section 11(a) of the E.O. imparts an obligation to management to negotiate "personnel policies and practices and matters affecting working conditions." However, it does not demand that such negotiations commence prior to or even during a matter affecting the bargaining unit's working conditions. It merely confers an obligation to negotiate. This Agency contends that it is willing to live up to its obligation, but in a manner which will not compromise its ability to carry out its mission.

Conclusions

The dispute in this matter is over management's obligation to meet and negotiate with the exclusive representative of its employees regarding special operation Star Trek II and more specifically with regard to its implementing procedures and impact on adversely affected employees.

As there are no specific proposals to be considered, (TR. 128), I address only the general scope of management's obligation to meet and negotiate.

Positions of the Parties

While it is presently contended on Respondent's behalf that it had no obligation to negotiate the implementation and impact of Star Trek II because that operation merely continued an established past practice and brought about no such change as would require mid-contract negotiations, an entirely different reason was given at and after the time of its refusal to meet and negotiate. Thus management, in the April 14, 1977, letter from its Regional Commissioner takes the clear position that for security reasons no prior negotiations could be had.

It is nevertheless now asserted that management stood ready, up to the October 9, 1976, "strike" to negotiate on non-secret matters. I reject that assertion and the testimony of Mr. Candish, upon which it is based, as being inconsistent with the unambiguous and unequivocal language of said letter which, in my opinion, is not now susceptible of qualification by ameliorative oral testimony from the commissioner's subordinate.

I am obliged to note further that the suggestion in that letter that section 11(a) of the Executive Order does not require prior negotiations is contrary to the view of the Assistant Secretary and the Federal Labor Relations Council. 4/

As to the merits of the defense that all prior negotiations would have compromised the security of the mission, I conclude, that since only the precise "strike" time and location were required to be kept secret, meaningful prior negotiations could have been had on a number of matters of concern to Complainant without compromising the integrity of the operation (TR. 158-159).

I find that no emergency existed in connection with Star Trek II; Respondent's own witness so testified and there is no other evidence to support a contrary finding. I therefore conclude, as Complainant urges, that the emergency provisions of section 12(b)(6) are inapplicable to this proceeding.

Complainant contends that it has made no clear and unmistakable waiver of its right to negotiate. There is no evidence that would support a finding to the contrary, and I therefore conclude that no such waiver has been made. Contrary to the conclusion Complainant would urge, however, such determination is not dispositive of the issues in this matter for it must be determined in the first instance whether or not a right to negotiate existed.

Neither from the Regional Commissioners' aforequoted letters nor from any other evidence adduced can it be concluded that a section 3(b)(3) determination was made in this case, such as would render the Order inapplicable; nor do I understand Respondent at any time so to have contended.

The Assistant Secretary has jurisdiction under sections 6(a)(4) and 11(d) to make the negotiability determinations required herein.

The Collective Bargaining Agreement

The collective bargaining agreement makes no reference to special operations and there is no evidence that contract negotiations were had thereon. It seems that special operation Star Trek I, of which the union had express notice, was conducted at about the time of the negotiations on the contract, but the exact time relationship has not been established and there is no basis for a finding that the parties negotiated the agreement in contemplation of special operations.

There are provisions in the agreement which are incompatible with the exigencies of special operations. Article 29, for example, which requires in part that a schedule of employee placement be posted on official bulletin boards at least five days prior to the beginning of each pay period would foreclose the flexibility management must have in the rapid shifting about of personnel for the effective conduct of special operations.

However, there are numerous provisions contained in the agreement which are of such general nature as to have direct applicability to special operations, such, for example, as Article 27, which deals in part with the financial aspects of travel. Therefore, notwithstanding that special operations per se were not negotiated, I conclude that management was under no obligation to enter into mid-contract negotiations on those procedures already negotiated 5/ into the agreement which it utilized in implementing Star Trek II, which by virtue of their general applicability were applicable as well to special operations. Such proposals as the union may present are thus circumscribed.

The Position Descriptions

5/ In this connection the following testimony was given by Mr. Candish:

Q. In the past have there ever been any negotiations or discussions, well, bargaining with the union regarding details, shift assignments, travel, work assignments?

A. Yes, these are negotiated into the basic contract. (TR. 156)

Trek II are in evidence. Considering them in the light of the uncontroverted evidence accompanying their introduction I conclude that TDY assignments are an expected and expectable part of the duties of these employees.

Complainant has not denied that TDY assignments in special operations or otherwise properly are within the scope of employees duties. 6/ Furthermore, the testimony indicates that to many employees TDY is desirable and sought after. It is part of the union's concern that TDY assignments are not being made equitably and that those not selected suffer in adverse impact, and its challenge is addressed therefore to the procedures utilized in implementing such TDY assignments. As to such procedures the position descriptions are silent and do not have the effect of relieving management of the obligation to negotiate thereon.

Executive Order 11491 - Pertinent Provisions

Section 11(a) of the Order, places a mutual obligation upon an agency and the exclusive representative of its employees to negotiate in good faith with respect to personnel policies and practices and matters affecting working conditions.

However, section 11(b), excepts from the agency's obligation to negotiate "matters with respect to the mission of an agency; its budget; its organization; the number of employees; and the numbers, types, and grades of positions or employees assigned to an organizational unit, work project or tour of duty; the technology of performing its work; or its internal security practices.

Additionally, section 12(b) establishes the following as non-negotiable rights expressly reserved to management:

- (1) to direct employees of the agency:
- (2) to hire, promote, transfer, assign, and retain employees in positions within agency,

6/ International Association of Fire Fighters, Local F-111 and Griffiss Air Force Base, Rome, N.Y., FLRC No. 71A-30. The Federal Labor Relations Council held in Local 174 International Federation of Professional and Technical Engineers, AFL-CIO, CLC and Long Beach Naval Shipyard, Long Beach, California, FLRC No. 73A-16, that temporary assignment of personnel is a right expressly reserved to management by section 12(b) (2) of the Executive Order.

- and to suspend, demote, discharge, or take other disciplinary action against employees;
- (3) to relieve employees from duties because of lack of work or for other legitimate reasons;
- (4) to maintain the efficiency of the Government operations entrusted to them;
- (5) to determine the methods, means, and personnel by which such operations are to be conducted; and
- (6) to take whatever actions may be necessary to carry out the mission of the agency in situations of emergency;

Even so, it is well established that an activity is obligated to bargain concerning the implementing procedures which it observes in the exercise of its excepted 7/ or reserved 8/ decision making and action authority and the impact on adversely affected employees even though the subject matter of the decision and action may be excepted under section 11(b) and/or non-negotiable under section 12(b) of the Order.

It is a limiting factor that the mid-contract obligation to negotiate the implementation and impact of personnel policies and practices and matters affecting working conditions is as to changes 9/ therein or additions 10/ thereto.

Respondent's Obligation to Negotiate With Respect to the Conduct of Operation Star Trek II and the selection of participants; the latter aspects will be considered separately hereinbelow.

The decision to carry out Special Operation Star Trek II, how it was to be conducted (i.e., the "method") and what instrumentalities and resources were to be utilized (i.e., the "means" employed in conducting it) are section 12(b) non-negotiable management reserved rights. Additionally, being integrally related to Respondent's mission, the conduct of the operation falls within the purview of 11(b). Upon such matters management is not obligated to negotiate; 11/ and, Complainant has not seriously contended otherwise.

Absent other considerations, Respondent nevertheless was obligated to bargain concerning the implementing procedures which it observed when it carried out Star Trek II and the impact thereof on adversely affected employees.

The thrust of Respondent's present defense is that Star Trek II brought about no such changes in policy practice or working conditions as would require mid-contract negotiations. The testimony of Respondent's witness Milner prima facie establishes Respondent's regular and ongoing practice of periodically conducting intensified enforcement operations, utilizing personnel on TDY assignments at duty stations away from their regular duty station, which began in 1969 and continued during the several years of Complainant's exclusive representation prior to and through Star Trek II.

It must be observed that each special operation has its own unique characteristics (TR. 170); each succeeding operation thus in some manner is different from its predecessors. The record created in this case, however, does not demonstrate that such differences as may have existed between Star Trek II and its predecessor special operations constituted changes in the nature of the practice itself, or in working conditions, of such significance as would require management to enter into mid-contract negotiations. Neither Complainant's extensive cross-examination of Milner nor any other evidence revealed such.

I find and conclude therefore that Star Trek II continued management's longstanding practice of conducting special operations; that the participation therein of employees, on TDY assignment away from their regular duty stations, was a well established condition of their employment; and, that the unilateral implementation of special operation Star Trek II, except as to the aspects distinguished and discussed hereinbelow, did not violate section 19(a)(1) or (6) of the Order.

Management's Obligation to Negotiate the Solicitation of Volunteers and Selection of Employee Participants in Operation Star Trek II

In implementation of its decision to conduct Special Operation Star Trek II management issued to its employees a solicitation for volunteers for the temporary duty assignments; and, from among the volunteers, the participants were selected.

If there was an obligation on the part of management to negotiate in this situation, of necessity prior notice and opportunity to request negotiation should have been given. This of course presupposes the furnishing of information to the union sufficient to formulate meaningful proposals.

Neither notice nor information was given to the union prior to the solicitation. Neither notice nor information was given to the union prior to the selections.

In consideration of whether or not negotiations were required of management as to the solicitation and selection process, it is necessary first to consider its asserted defense that there was no change in established past practice, which defense I have found meritorious as to the other aspects of the subject operation.

With regard to the procedures employed in the solicitation and selection process Milner, the coordinator of the operation testified in part, as follows:

Q. Now, you mentioned the selected employees. Were these employees selected by management to participate in Star Trek II?

A. They were selected from a list of voluntary employees.

Q. Were all the employees who participated in Star Trek II from volunteers?

A. The (sic) the best of my knowledge, they were.

Q. How were they selected? Were there more volunteers than were selected?

A. Yes, sir, there were.

Q. How were they selected to participate in Star Trek II?

A. I would imagine partially on availability, allowing for personal problems, family problems, or what have you.

(Emphasis supplied, TR. 225)

Q. How were volunteers for Star Trek II notified that they could sign up to be volunteers?

A. Announcements were put out that we would be holding an intensified operation, and people were asked, you know, if they wanted to volunteer. It would require TDY assignments, and there would be some travel involved; and the mechanics, and whether they put a list where they signed up, you know, individually, or they were requested individually by their immediate supervisor, I don't know. But the announcement (sic) was put out that we would be having the operation. (Emphasis supplied, TR. 230)

Q. In terms of how the volunteers were selected, can you tell me a little bit about that?

A. They were selected from the list of people who submitted their names.

Q. What were the criteria?

A. I would have to say, one, availability, known expertise. (Emphasis supplied, TR. 305)

Q. On the selection of volunteers, if more people volunteer than can go, how do you make the selection?

A. As I stated earlier, their known work habits, expertise, availability, physical condition at the time. Those are just some of the factors I would assume, you know--

Q. So you evaluate the employees?

A. I would -- I would say "yes."

Q. And do you have a sort of a standard of evaluation that you use, something like what you just mentioned earlier, those factors are what you would usually take into account?

A. I -- I would assume that the selecting officer, in this case in Star Trek II the assistant coordinator for each division, most definitely took these things into consideration from the listed employees.

Q. Do they have a written procedure for that?

A. I can't answer that question.

Q. Would you know about it if they did, if you are in charge of the whole thing?

A. You mean a selection criteria?

Q. Right.

A. Oh, I am sure I would.

Q. So they don't have one --

A. Not to my knowledge.

Q. -- if you haven't seen it?

A. I -- no, I have not seen it. That is right.

Q. And you would have seen it if there was one?

A. I would assume I would have seen it.
(Emphasis supplied, TR. 336-337)

Mr. Milner's testimony was characterized by candor and forthrightness throughout. I was generally impressed by the depth of his background and experience and he certainly was the most knowledgeable witness as to the logistics of special operations. I have added emphasis by underscoring in the above quoted testimony to highlight his uncertainty in the area of solicitation and selection. I am satisfied both from the character of the language used and the demeanor of the witness while delivering it that this portion of his testimony is reflective of nothing more than areas of consideration which he believes generally appropriate to the selection of participants. It can hardly be found from this testimony, or indeed from any other evidence presented, that there were in fact, existing criteria and specific procedures for the solicitation of volunteers and the selection of participants for special operations which were utilized unchanged in Operation Star Trek II. In the absence of evidence that there was an established practice with regard to the solicitation of volunteers and the selection of participants for special operations the defense that there was no change in prior practice or employment conditions, is unavailable to Respondent. Thus, it remained obligated to negotiate on the procedures of implementation and on impact, as to the solicitation and selection processes.

Such proposals as the union may make in this area however, may deal only with the procedures which management would observe leading to the exercise of the retained management right and must not interfere with the exercise of that right itself. 12/ Management is not obligated to negotiate a proposal which, based upon the special circumstances of a particular case, is integrally related to and consequently determinative of its decisions or action authority. That is to say, it need not negotiate on a proposal which infringes upon or has the effect of negating its excepted or reserved authority. 13/

13/ AFGE Local 1940 and Plum Island Animal Disease Laboratory, Dept. of Agriculture, Greenport, N.Y.,

The union's position is expressed in part in the following colloquy:

JUDGE HALPERN: ... Have you taken the position here at all that there was a requirement that management negotiate who it was going to select?

MS. DAVIS: I think that the procedure for selection is what we are talking about, that what we would like to see negotiated is a procedure for selection which would, you know, set up some equitable methods for people to be selected so people would have a fair chance at an opportunity for a detail like this that frequently can help a person get promoted or whatever, in terms of their career with the customs service. (TR. 307)

The union's concern as thus enunciated lies within the negotiable area of "implementing procedures." It further is of obvious concern to the union that the solicitation for volunteers be made in such a manner as most effectively to reach all eligible employees and, the procedures to be employed by management in making the solicitation is also a proper subject for negotiations.

Star Trek II was implemented only after considerable prior investigation and planning. No overriding exigencies have been shown to have existed to support the proposition that prior negotiations on procedures to be utilized in solicitation of volunteers and selection of participants would unreasonably have delayed, impeded or constricted management in carrying out the operation. 14/

Respondent cites as one reason for its refusal to meet with Complainant, that those matters upon which Complainant indicated a desire to negotiate infringed upon the confidentiality of the operation and would have compromised it. Even if such were the indications, management's approach--a refusal to meet--goes contrary to the council's expression of what the labor-management relationship should be in such a situation as enunciated in its September 10, 1973, Information Announcement, in which it said in part:

In some instances, management representatives have failed to offer feasible, negotiable alternatives to union proposals when they believe the union's proposals to be nonnegotiable. Instead, the management representatives have simply asserted that the union proposals are nonnegotiable giving the unions no alternative but to appeal or to drop the matter from negotiations. On the other hand, where management has offered alternatives, some union representatives have appealed the negotiability of their proposals without first considering and discussing the management proposals at the bargaining table. Both actions are a disservice to labor-management relations and demonstrate a failure on the part of the parties to attempt to work matters out bilaterally.

In summary I conclude that by unilaterally implementing special operation Star Trek II Respondent failed to afford Complainant notice and an opportunity to bargain concerning implementing procedures for the solicitation of volunteers and selection of participants and the impact of its actions upon adversely affected employees, in violation of section 19(a)(6) of the Order.

I further conclude, in accordance with numerous decisions of the Assistant Secretary, that this same conduct is violative of section 19(a)(1) of the Order in that it interferes with, restrains and coerces unit employees in the exercise of the right to be represented by the exclusive representative, as assured by the Order.

The Remedy

Having found that the Respondent has engaged in certain conduct prohibited by section 19(a)(1) and (6) of Executive Order 11491, as amended, I recommend that the Assistant Secretary adopt the order as hereinafter set forth which is designed to effectuate the policies of the Order.

RECOMMENDED ORDER

Pursuant to section 6(b) of Executive Order 11491, and section 203.26(b) of the Regulations, the Assistant Secretary of Labor for Labor-Management Relations hereby Orders that the U. S. Customs Service, Region VII, Los Angeles, California, shall:

1. Cease and desist from:

a. Issuing solicitations for volunteers in special operations such as operation Star Trek II, to employees exclusively represented by the National Treasury Employees Union, Chapter 103, or any other exclusive representative; and selecting participants to be assigned to such special operations, without affording such representative an opportunity to meet and confer, to the extent consonant with law and regulations, on the procedures which management will observe in issuing the solicitations and selecting the participants and on the impact on adversely affected employees;

b. In any like or related manner interfering with, restraining, or coercing employees in the exercise of their rights assured by Executive Order 11491, as amended.

2. Take the following affirmative actions in order to effectuate the purposes and policies of Executive Order 11491, as amended:

a. Notify the National Treasury Employees Union, Chapter 103, or any other exclusive representative of any intended solicitation for volunteers for special operations such as Star Trek II, and, upon request, meet and confer in good faith, to the extent consonant with law and regulations, on the procedures which management will observe in promulgating the solicitation, and on the impact of the solicitation on employees adversely affected;

b. Upon request, meet and confer in good faith with such representative, to the extent consonant with law and regulations, on the procedures which management will observe in selecting participants for such special operations, and on the impact of its selections on employees adversely affected by such action.

c. Furnish to such exclusive representative, on request, such information as may be requested to enable it to formulate meaningful proposals for negotiation, provided that the furnishing of such information is consistent with such security measures as are necessary for the conduct of the operation;

d. Upon request, meet and confer with regard to the impact upon employees adversely affected by the unilateral solicitations and selections involved in Operation Star Trek II.

e. Post at its various facilities throughout Region VII copies of the attached notice marked "Appendix" on forms to be furnished by the Assistant Secretary of Labor-Management Relations. Upon receipt of such forms, they shall be signed by the Regional Commissioner and shall be posted and maintained by him for sixty (60) days thereafter, in conspicuous places, including all bulletin boards and other places where notices to employees are customarily posted. The Regional Commissioner shall take reasonable steps to insure that such notices are not altered, defaced, or covered by any other material.

f. Pursuant to section 203.27 of the Regulations, notify the Assistant Secretary, in writing, within thirty (30) days from the date of this Order as to what steps have been taken to comply herewith.

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED that the complaint, insofar as it alleges other violations of section 19(a)(1) and (6) be, and it hereby is, dismissed.

UNITED STATES DEPARTMENT OF LABOR
ASSISTANT SECRETARY FOR LABOR-MANAGEMENT RELATIONS
SUMMARY OF SECOND SUPPLEMENTAL DECISION AND ORDER
OF THE ASSISTANT SECRETARY
PURSUANT TO SECTION 6 OF EXECUTIVE ORDER 11491, AS AMENDED

GENERAL SERVICES ADMINISTRATION,
REGIONAL OFFICE, REGION 4
A/SLMR No. 1067

On October 31, 1975, the Assistant Secretary issued his Decision and Direction of Election in 5 A/SLMR 669, A/SLMR No. 575 (1975), finding that the claimed unit consisting of all professional and nonprofessional employees of the Regional Office, General Services Administration, Region 4, was appropriate for the purpose of exclusive recognition under the Order. On February 14, 1977, the Federal Labor Relations Council (Council), before determining whether to accept or deny the Activity's petition for review, remanded the subject case to the Assistant Secretary for clarification in the light of the principles enumerated in its consolidated DCASR decision. Thereafter, on November 7, 1977, the Assistant Secretary issued his Supplemental Decision and Remand in A/SLMR No. 928, in which he remanded the subject case to the appropriate Regional Administrator for the purpose of reopening the record to secure additional evidence in order to provide an adequate basis upon which to make affirmative determinations regarding "effective dealings" and "efficiency of agency operations."

In light of this evidence secured at the reopened hearing, and based on the rationale of the Council as expressed in its consolidated DCASR decision, the Assistant Secretary found that the unit sought herein was not appropriate for the purpose of exclusive recognition under Section 10(b) of the Order. He noted that although the employees in the sought Regional Office unit enjoyed a clear and identifiable community of interest, the evidence established that the sought unit, which does not constitute a functional or craft grouping of employees and is less than region wide in scope, would not promote effective dealings or efficiency of agency operations. He also found that the establishment of the claimed unit would result in further fragmentation of the Activity.

Accordingly, since the claimed unit did not satisfy equally each of the three criteria set forth in Section 10(b) of the Order, the Assistant Secretary found that the unit sought herein by the AFGE was not appropriate for the purpose of exclusive recognition under the Order and ordered that the Certification of Representative previously issued to the Petitioner herein be revoked, and that the petition be dismissed.

SECOND SUPPLEMENTAL DECISION AND ORDER

On October 31, 1975, the Assistant Secretary issued his Decision and Direction of Election in the above-captioned case in 5 A/SLMR 669, A/SLMR No. 575 (1975), finding, in essence, that the claimed unit consisting of all professional and nonprofessional employees of the Regional Office, General Services Administration (GSA), Region 4, was appropriate for the purpose of exclusive recognition under the Order. 1/ Thereafter, on February 4, 1977, the Federal Labor Relations Council (Council), before determining whether to accept or deny the Activity's petition for review in the instant case, remanded the subject case to the Assistant Secretary for clarification in the light of the principles enunciated in its consolidated Defense Supply Agency, Defense Contract Administration Services Region (DCASR) decision.2/

1/ Pursuant to the Assistant Secretary's Decision and Direction of Election, an election was held in the unit found appropriate. The professional employees cast a majority of their ballots against representation, and a Certification of Results of Election was issued on April 2, 1976. The 351 nonprofessional employees voted to be represented by the Petitioner and a Certification of Representative was issued on April 2, 1976. On September 14, 1977, a multi-unit negotiated agreement was signed by the parties covering the employees in the above certified unit as well as employees in two other units.

Thereafter, on November 7, 1977, the Assistant Secretary issued his Supplemental Decision and Remand in the above-captioned case in A/SLMR No. 928, in which he remanded the subject case to the appropriate Regional Administrator for the purpose of reopening the record to secure additional evidence in order to provide an adequate basis upon which to make affirmative determinations regarding "effective dealings" and "efficiency of agency operations." On February 22, 1978, a hearing was held before Hearing Officer Renee B. Rux. The Hearing Officer's rulings made at the hearing are free from prejudicial error and are hereby affirmed.

Upon the entire record in the subject case, including the facts developed at both hearings, and the briefs filed by the Activity and American Federation of Government Employees, Local 2067, AFL-CIO, hereinafter called AFGE, the Assistant Secretary finds:

The Activity has consistently asserted that the unit sought herein by the AFGE is not appropriate for the purpose of exclusive recognition because it will not promote effective dealings or efficiency of agency operations, and will encourage the further fragmentation of units within the Activity. The Activity contends that the only appropriate unit would be a residual unit of all unrepresented Region 4 employees, including the claimed Regional Office employees.

The record reveals that the Activity currently employs approximately 2,128 employees, of whom approximately 1,642, are eligible to be represented exclusively. Of the latter number, approximately 1,181 are currently represented by labor organizations in 18 exclusively represented bargaining units covered by 12 existing negotiated agreements. Besides the employees in the unit sought herein, there are 461 unrepresented employees located at 77 locations scattered throughout the Region.

The Regional Personnel Office in Atlanta, Georgia, is responsible for all personnel functions for the entire Region. In this regard, the record reveals that all personnel records are kept in this office and that all personnel actions within the Region are required to be approved by the Regional Personnel Office. All employees of the Region, regardless of their location, are subject to common personnel policies and practices with respect to promotion, disciplinary action, leave schedules and wage increases. Also, there are uniform working conditions throughout the Region, such as standardized hours and wages, award programs, overtime and various employee benefits.

The overall labor relations policy for the GSA is established in GSA headquarters in Washington, D.C. and is transmitted to the Regional Offices for implementation. The Regional Office is the only organizational level of the Agency below the Central Office level where labor relations specialists are assigned. The Regional Labor Relations Officer is responsible for all labor relations matters within the Region, and he has been delegated substantial discretion in handling labor relations matters. Thus, both he and his staff are responsible for the handling of all unfair labor practice and unit determination cases as well as grievances filed under either the GSA grievance procedure or one of the numerous negotiated grievance procedures. They also are responsible for the negotiation and administration of negotiated agreements and for training supervisors in the administration of negotiated agreements and the handling of grievances. Due to the variance in the numerous negotiated agreements within the Region, each agreement requires specialized handling.

Under the particular circumstances of this case, and based on the rationale of the Council as expressed in its DCASR decision, cited above, I find the unit sought herein is not appropriate for the purpose of exclusive recognition under Section 10(b) of the Order. Thus, although, as previously found in A/SLMR No. 575, the employees in the sought Regional Office unit enjoy a clear and identifiable community of interest, the evidence as supplemented at the reopened hearing, further establishes that such a unit, which does not constitute a grouping of employees along functional or craft lines and which is less than region-wide in scope, will not promote effective dealings or efficiency of agency operations. In this regard, it was particularly noted that the Activity's Regional Personnel Office located in Atlanta, Georgia, is responsible for all personnel functions for the entire Region, and that labor relations policies which are determined at the Central Office in Washington, D. C. are implemented on a regional basis by the Regional Labor Relations Officer and his staff. Thus, as it appears that all personnel and labor relations authority rest at the Regional level or above, I find that the petitioned for unit containing only Regional Office employees, will not promote effective dealings or efficiency of agency operations. Moreover, as the Activity already contains 18 separate bargaining units and 12 separate negotiated agreements, in my view, the establishment of the claimed unit of Regional employees would promote further fragmentation of the Activity as there would still exist additional groupings of unrepresented employees within Region 4.

Accordingly, since the claimed unit does not satisfy equally each of the three criteria set forth in Section 10(b) of the Order, I find that the unit sought herein by the AFGE is not appropriate for the purpose of exclusive recognition under the Order. Therefore, I shall order that Certification of Representative previously issued to the Petitioner herein be revoked, and that the petition be dismissed.

ORDER

IT IS HEREBY ORDERED that the Certification of Representative issued in Case No. 40-6038(RO) be, and it hereby is, revoked, and that the petition in Case No. 40-6038(RO) be, and it hereby is, dismissed.

OF THE ASSISTANT SECRETARY
PURSUANT TO SECTION 6 OF EXECUTIVE ORDER 11491, AS AMENDED

DEPARTMENT OF TRANSPORTATION, NATIONAL HIGHWAY TRAFFIC SAFETY ADMINISTRATION
A/SLMR No. 1068

This case involved a petition for clarification of unit (CU) filed by the American Federation of Government Employees, Local 3313, AFL-CIO (AFGE) seeking to clarify the status of some 13 Operations Research Analysts in the GS-1515 job classification series. The Activity took the position that the Operations Research Analysts should be excluded from the exclusively recognized unit of nonprofessional employees because they are professional employees by virtue of their scientific training and their performance of specialized studies.

The Assistant Secretary found, in agreement with the Activity, that the Operations Research Analysts are professional employees and, therefore, are not within the exclusively recognized unit of nonprofessional employees. In reaching this conclusion, the Assistant Secretary considered the educational requirements for the Operations Research Analyst position and the intellectual and varied nature of their work which requires use of mathematical and scientific disciplines.

Accordingly, the Assistant Secretary clarified the unit consistent with his decision.

DECISION AND ORDER CLARIFYING UNIT

This matter is before the Assistant Secretary pursuant to Regional Administrator Hilary M. Sheply's Order Transferring Case to the Assistant Secretary of Labor in accordance with Section 206.5 of the Assistant Secretary's Regulations.

Upon consideration of the entire record in the subject case, including the parties' statement of issues and stipulation of facts, accompanying exhibits and a brief submitted by the Activity, the Assistant Secretary finds:

The Petitioner, American Federation of Government Employees, Local 3313, AFL-CIO, hereinafter called AFGE, was certified on May 4, 1973, as the exclusive representative of a nationwide unit of all nonprofessional employees assigned to the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration, hereinafter called Activity, of the Department of Transportation. In this clarification of unit proceeding, the AFGE seeks to include within the existing unit the Operations Research Analysts in the GS-1515 job classification series. The Activity, on the other hand, contends that the aforementioned employees are professional employees and, therefore, are not within the exclusively recognized unit of nonprofessional employees.

The mission of the Activity is to support the national goals and statutory responsibilities of the Secretary of Transportation with respect to the development and administration of programs that implement legislation designed to reduce automotive fuel consumption and economic losses, and to safeguard the motor vehicle consuming public through regulation, research, information, and education. 1/

The evidence establishes that there are some 13 Operations Research Analysts in the GS-1515 series, hereinafter called Analysts, employed by the Activity. 2/ The Analysts are located in various offices and divisions under four Associate Administrators of the Activity and in a Regional Office. 3/ Among the job functions performed by the Analysts are the making of economic impact studies related to the Activity's rulemaking authority; the design of surveys to obtain needed data with respect to elements of the highway safety programs; and assistance to the states in determining statistical data requirements and in devising adequate data collection procedures so that analysis and evaluation of highway safety programs may be conducted in an effective manner. The Analysts are responsible for investigating the nature of such assigned problems and independently determining the appropriate techniques for data collection, treatment and analysis. A primary method of fulfilling specific assignments is the development of scientific "models" to provide a simplified representation of the operation of a specific problem related to traffic safety. The record reflects that the creation of such "models" requires the utilization of rigorous mathematical, statistical and scientific theories.

The basic educational qualification for the Analyst position is at least a Bachelor's degree from an accredited college or university, with a course of study that included 24 semester hours of coursework in any combination of the following: operations research, mathematics, statistics, logic, and subject matter courses which require substantial competence in mathematics or statistics. The record also reveals that in addition to the foregoing education requirements, a graduate degree in the field of operations research is highly desirable and may be substituted for professional work experience as qualification for positions above the GS-9 level. 4/

1/ The Activity was established in the Department of Commerce in 1966 and, thereafter, was transferred to the Department of Transportation in 1967 as two separate departments, combining into the current single activity in 1970.

2/ The record reveals that the Activity employs 1 Analyst at the GS-9 grade level, 2 Analysts at the GS-11 grade level, 1 Analyst at the GS-12 grade level, 1 Analyst at the GS-11 grade level, 6 Analysts at the GS-14 grade level and 2 Analysts at the GS-15 grade level.

3/ The four Associate Administrators are: the Associate Administrator for Rulemaking, the Associate Administrator for Traffic Safety Programs, the Associate Administrator for Research and Development, and the Associate Administrator for Plans and Programs.

4/ The evidence establishes that all the Analysts have at least a baccalaureate degree and, in many instances, advanced degrees in fields related to their work.

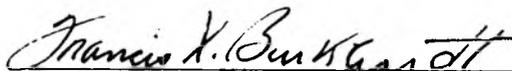

Under the circumstances herein, I find that the Operations Research Analysts, GS-1515, are professional employees within the meaning of the Order. Thus, the evidence establishes that the work of the Analyst is predominately intellectual and varied, involves the exercise of discretion and judgement, cannot be standardized, and requires knowledge of an advanced type normally acquired by a prolonged course of specialized intellectual instruction. In this regard, it is noted particularly that the Analysts spend a major portion of their time analyzing the outcome of the use of certain scientific "models", that they are constantly developing new "models" in order to solve the problems of traffic safety, and that the performance of their various tasks requires that the Analysts be trained in specialized fields involving mathematical and scientific disciplines.

Accordingly, as the Operations Research Analysts, GS-1515, are professional employees within the meaning of the Order, 5/ I find that they are not within the exclusively recognized unit of nonprofessional employees represented by the AFGE.

ORDER

IT IS HEREBY ORDERED that the unit sought to be clarified herein, for which the American Federation of Government Employees, Local 3313, AFL-CIO, was certified as the exclusive representative on May 4, 1973, be, and it hereby is, clarified by excluding from the unit Operations Research Analysts, GS-1515, assigned to the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration.

DEPARTMENT OF THE AIR FORCE,

GRAND FORKS, NORTH DAKOTA
A/SLMR No. 1069

This case arose when the American Federation of Government Employees AFL-CIO, Local 1347 (AFGE) filed a petition on September 20, 1977, seeking an election in a unit of all nonprofessional Air Force Civilian employees paid from appropriated funds employed on Grand Forks Air Force Base, North Dakota, including on-base tenant organizations. The petitioned for unit is coextensive with the unit for which the Intervenor, the National Federation of Federal Employees, Local 1347 (NFFE) was recognized as the exclusive representative.

The NFFE took the position that the open period of a renewed agreement of one year between the Activity and the NFFE should be consistent with the open period of the parties' initial agreement when such initial agreement runs for more than three years from the date it was signed and dated locally. The AFGE asserted, on the other hand, that its petition was timely filed because it was filed during the open period of the renewed agreement between the Activity and the NFFE which it argued ran from December 17, 1976 (the terminal date of the initial three year agreement) to December 17, 1977.

The Assistant Secretary found that the AFGE's petition was timely filed. He noted that although, under Section 202.3 (c)(2) of the Assistant Secretary's Regulations the open period for filing a petition under the initial agreement was from August 16, 1976, to September 15, 1976, because the agreement ran for more than three years from the time it was signed and dated locally, the open period under Section 202.3 (c)(1) of the Regulations for the one year renewed agreement was fixed by the terminal date of such agreement which could clearly be ascertained by reference to the agreement itself.

Accordingly, as the AFGE's petition was filed during the open period of the renewed agreement, he directed an election in the unit found appropriate.

DECISION AND DIRECTION OF ELECTION

This matter is before the Assistant Secretary pursuant to Regional Administrator for Labor-Management Services Cullen P. Keough's Order Transferring Case to the Assistant Secretary in accordance with Section 206.5 of the Assistant Secretary's Regulations.

Upon consideration of the entire record in the subject case, including the parties' stipulation of facts, accompanying exhibits, and a brief filed by the Intervenor, National Federation of Federal Employees, Local 1347, hereinafter called NFFE, the Assistant Secretary finds:

1. The labor organizations involved claim to represent certain employees of the Activity.
2. The Petitioner, American Federation of Government Employees, AFL-CIO, Local 1347, hereinafter called AFGE, seeks an election in a unit of all eligible Air Force civilian employees paid from appropriated funds employed on Grand Forks Air Force Base, North Dakota, including on-base tenant organizations. The petitioned for unit is coextensive with the unit for which the NFFE was recognized as the exclusive representative in 1967. It is undisputed that the sole issue before the Assistant Secretary in this matter is whether the AFGE's petition in this matter was timely filed.

The record reflects that on November 14, 1973, the Activity and the NFFE signed and dated a negotiated agreement which was approved by the Director of Civilian Personnel, Headquarters, Strategic Air Command, United States Air Force on December 17, 1973. The agreement provides, in pertinent part, that its effective date and the effective date of any supplement thereafter, is the date of approval by the Headquarters, United States Air Force. It further provides that it is binding on the parties for three years from the effective date and from year to year thereafter, unless either party notifies the other in writing not more than 90 days nor less than 60 days prior to such date or any subsequent anniversary date of a desire to modify or terminate the agreement. The parties stipulated that no such notification was given prior to the agreement's expiration in 1976, and that, therefore, the agreement was automatically renewed in 1976. The AFGE's petition in this matter was filed on September 20, 1977.

Sections 202.3(c)(1) and (2) of the Assistant Secretary's Regulations provide that in order for a petition to be timely filed, it must be filed:

- (1) Not more than ninety (90) days and not less than sixty (60) days prior to the terminal date of an agreement having a term of three years or less from the date it was signed and dated by the activity and the incumbent exclusive representative; or
- (2) Not more than ninety (90) days and not less than sixty (60) days prior to the expiration of the initial three (3) years period of an agreement having a term of more than three (3) years from the date it was signed and dated by the activity and the incumbent exclusive representative;

The NFFE takes the position that the open period of the renewed agreement herein should be consistent with the open period of the parties' initial agreement of 1973, as such initial agreement ran more than three years from the date it was signed and dated locally. Thus, in effect, the NFFE contends that since the open period of the three-year agreement, which was signed and dated locally on November 14, 1973, ran from August 16, 1976, to September 15, 1976, the same open period should apply in any subsequent year in which the agreement was renewed automatically in accordance with its terms. In these circumstances, the NFFE asserts that the AFGE's petition of September 20, 1977, was untimely with respect to the renewed agreement. The AFGE asserts, on the other hand, that its petition of September 20, 1977, was timely because it was filed during the open period of the automatically renewed agreement which ran for one year from December 17, 1976 (the terminal date of the initial agreement) to December 17, 1977. 1/

1/ The AFGE contends the open period in the renewed agreement ran from September 18, 1977, to October 18, 1977.

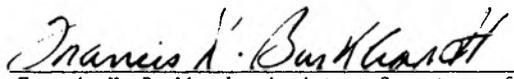

Under the circumstances of this case, I find the petition herein was timely filed. As contended by the NFFE, under Section 202.3(c)(2) of the Assistant Secretary's Regulations the open period of the initial agreement ran from August 16, 1976, to September 15, 1976, because the agreement had a term of more than three years from the time it was signed and dated locally (November 14, 1973). 2/ However, different conditions apply with respect to determining the open period of the renewed one year agreement, which I consider to be a new agreement for bar purposes. Thus, in view of its one-year duration, the open period of such agreement is governed by the provisions of Section 202.3 (c)(1) of the Assistant Secretary's Regulations, which concern agreements having a term of three years or less. Inasmuch as the terminal date of the renewed one-year agreement could be clearly ascertained by its terminal date, consistent with Section 202.3 (c)(1) of the Assistant Secretary's Regulations such terminal date established the open period of the renewed agreement. And as the AFGE's petition of September 20, 1977, was filed timely during the 60-90 day period prior to the termination of the renewed one-year agreement, I shall direct an election in the following unit which I find to be appropriate for the purpose of exclusive recognition under Executive Order 11491, as amended:

All eligible Air Force civilian employees paid from appropriated funds employed on Grand Forks Air Force Base, North Dakota, including on-base tenant organizations, excluding professional employees, management officials, employees engaged in Federal personnel work in other than a purely clerical capacity, and supervisors as defined in Executive Order 11491, as amended.

DIRECTION OF ELECTION

An election by secret ballot shall be conducted among the employees of the unit found appropriate as early as possible, but not later than 60 days from the date below. The appropriate Area Administrator shall supervise the election, subject to the Assistant Secretary's Regulations. Eligible to vote are all those in the unit who were employed during the payroll immediately preceding the date below, including employees who did not work during that period because they were out ill, or on vacation or on furlough, including those in the military service who appear in person at the polls. Ineligible to vote are employees who quit, or were discharged for cause, since the designated payroll period and who have not been rehired or reinstated before the election date. Those eligible shall vote whether they desire to be represented for the purpose of exclusive recognition by the National Federation of Federal Employees, Local 1347; by the American Federation of Government Employees, AFL-CIO, Local 1347; or by neither.

SUMMARY OF DECISION AND ORDER OF THE ASSISTANT SECRETARY
PURSUANT TO SECTION 6 OF EXECUTIVE ORDER 11491, AS AMENDED

DEPARTMENT OF THE TREASURY,
BUREAU OF ALCOHOL, TOBACCO AND FIREARMS, MIDWEST REGION,
CHICAGO, ILLINOIS
A/SLMR No.1070

This case involved an unfair labor practice complaint filed by the National Treasury Employees Union (NTEU) and NTEU Chapter 94 alleging that the Respondent violated Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order by its failure to notify the exclusive representative and give it the opportunity to be present at meetings held by management with bargaining unit employees at which matters affecting working conditions were discussed. The NTEU asserted that the meetings were formal discussions within the meaning of Section 10(e) of the Order and, therefore, the Respondent's failure to give notice effectively bypassed the exclusive representative.

The Administrative Law Judge concluded that the Respondent violated Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order. Thus, in his view, while the purpose of the meetings was to solicit suggestions from bargaining unit employees with respect to a management proposal over a matter excluded from the obligation to bargain by Section 11(b) and 12(b) of the Order, the Respondent should have anticipated that matters impacting on working conditions also would be discussed. The Administrative Law Judge noted that at one of the meetings there was discussion about the impact of the proposed changes. He found that the Respondent failed to give the exclusive representative notice of a formal discussion within the meaning of Section 10(e) and, therefore, deprived it of the opportunity to be represented.

The Assistant Secretary adopted the findings, conclusions and recommendations of the Administrative Law Judge. Accordingly, he ordered that the Respondent cease and desist from engaging in the conduct found violative of the Order and that it take certain affirmative actions.

DECISION AND ORDER

On March 9, 1978, Administrative Law Judge Milton Kramer issued his Recommended Decision and Order in the above-entitled proceeding, finding that the Respondent had engaged in the unfair labor practices alleged in the complaint and recommending that it take certain affirmative actions as set forth in the attached Administrative Law Judge's Recommended Decision and Order. Thereafter, both the Respondent and the Complainant filed exceptions and supporting briefs with respect to the Administrative Law Judge's Recommended Decision and Order and the Complainant filed an answering brief with respect to the Respondent's exceptions.

The Assistant Secretary has reviewed the rulings of the Administrative Law Judge made at the hearing and finds that no prejudicial error was committed. The rulings are hereby affirmed. Upon consideration of the Administrative Law Judge's Recommended Decision and Order and the entire record in the subject case, including the exceptions and supporting briefs filed by the parties and the answering brief to the Respondent's exceptions filed by the Complainant, I hereby adopt the Administrative Law Judge's findings, conclusions and recommendations.

Pursuant to Section 6(b) of Executive Order 11491, as amended, and Section 203.26(b) of the Regulations, the Assistant Secretary of Labor for Labor-Management Relations hereby orders that the Department of the Treasury, Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms, Midwest Region, shall:

1. Cease and desist from:

(a) Engaging in formal discussions with unit employees concerning the impact of a change in the methods and means by which its operations are performed on the general working conditions of employees in the unit when such employees are represented exclusively by the National Treasury Employees Union, or any other labor organization, without affording such labor organization the opportunity to be represented at such discussions.

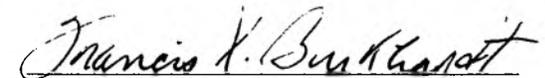

(b) In any like or related manner interfering with, restraining, or coercing its employees in the exercise of their rights assured by Executive Order 11491, as amended.

2. Take the following affirmative actions to effectuate the purposes and policies of Executive Order 11491, as amended:

(a) Post at all of its facilities in the Midwest Region 1/ copies of the attached notice marked "Appendix" on forms to be furnished by the Assistant Secretary of Labor for Labor-Management Relations. Upon receipt of such forms, they shall be signed by the Regional Director of the Midwest Region, and shall be posted and maintained by him for 60 consecutive days thereafter in conspicuous places, including all bulletin boards and other places where notices to employees are customarily posted. The Regional Director shall take reasonable steps to insure that such notices are not altered, defaced, or covered by any other material.

(b) Pursuant to Section 203.27 of the Regulations, notify the Assistant Secretary, in writing, within 30 days from the date of this order as to what steps have been taken to comply herewith.

Francis X. Burkhardt, Assistant Secretary of Labor for Labor-Management Relations

1/ Under the circumstances herein, I have ordered that the remedial notices to employees be posted at all of the Respondent's facilities in the Midwest Region. The violation to be remedied in this matter involves an improper failure by the Respondent to notify the Chapter President of the Complainant, NTEU Chapter 94, of a formal discussion and afford the latter an opportunity to be represented at such discussion. In view of the nature of the violation and the Administrative Law Judge's undisputed finding that NTEU Chapter 94 acts for the NTEU in the Midwest Region of the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms, I find that a posting coextensive with NTEU Chapter 94's jurisdiction in the Midwest Region is warranted.

RECOMMENDED DECISION AND ORDER

Statement of the Case

This case arises under Executive Order 11491 as amended. It was initiated by a complaint dated April 4, 1977 and filed April 6, 1977 alleging violations of Sections 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Executive Order. The violations were alleged to consist of the Respondent holding two meetings with a group of employees at which contemplated changes in personnel policies and practices and other matters affecting working conditions were allegedly discussed thereby bypassing the union.

On July 6, 1977 the Acting Regional Regional Administrator issued a Notice of Hearing and the next day the Regional Administrator issued an Order Rescheduling Hearing for a hearing to be held September 19, 1977 in Chicago, Illinois. A hearing was held that day in that City. Both sides were represented by counsel. They presented witnesses who were examined and cross-examined and offered exhibits which were received in evidence with one exception. Both parties made closing arguments and filed timely briefs.

Facts

The National Treasury Employees Union, the national organization, is the certified exclusive representative of a nationwide unit of the employees of the Treasury Department's Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms (with the usual exclusions). It was so certified in March 1974. In the administration of the collective bargaining relationship NTEU generally acts through an appropriate chapter (local) of its organization. The chapter that acts for it in the Midwest Region of the Bureau is Chapter 94. There are about 1,000 employees in the nationwide unit of whom about 170 are employed in the Midwest Region. The headquarters of the Midwest Region are in the Klucynski Building, the Federal Office Building at 230 South Dearborn Street, Chicago, Illinois. About 50 employees of the Midwest Region in the unit are employed at that location and about 120 employees of the Midwest Region in the unit are employed in various area offices as Field Inspectors and in other capacities.

Prior to April 1977 the Firearms and Explosives Licensing Section of the Midwest Region of the Bureau had seven Examiners in the unit and seven clerks with a clerk assigned to each Examiner. They comprised the entire Section. Evelyn Fusco was their supervisor. The Examiners, with the assistance of their clerks, processed original applications for licenses and renewal applications.

Arthur Davidson is the Chief, Technical Service, of the Midwest Region. The 50 unit employees in the Midwest Region headquarters are under his supervision. Edward Lake is an Analyst, under a Chief Analyst, for the Regional Administrator. His function included the analysis of operations and the development of ideas for improvement.

Beginning some months prior to August 20, 1976 Lake began developing plans for revising the method of operation of the Firearms and Explosives Licensing Section of the Midwest Region of the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms. In developing such plans he consulted some with Fusco and Davidson. He did not consult with the Complainants. The change in operating procedure he tentatively arrived at included a change in the function of the individual clerks and a change in the location of the file cabinets. Instead of a clerk being assigned to an individual Examiner to assist her 1/ in all aspects of her work, each clerk would be assigned to a specific task (typing, filing, etc. at one of four "stations") for all the Examiners. Also, instead of each Examiner having a large filing cabinet at her individual desk those filing cabinets would be placed at a central location and the individual Examiner would have a miniature cabinet at her desk. The revised prospective procedure was reduced to writing in chart or tabular form. 2/

On August 20, 1976 the seven Examiners were called to a meeting with Davidson (Chief), Lake (Analyst), and Fusco (supervisor). Copies of the plan were distributed and Davidson told the Examiners to read them and make notes on any comments they had for discussion at a subsequent meeting. This was a very brief meeting.

The next meeting was on September 1, 1976, with the Examiners and the same management representatives to discuss the plans. Davidson wanted the benefit of the expertise of those who did the work of the Section above the clerical level. Five of the Examiners expressed a preference for retaining the existing method of operation. Included in the reasons given was the impact the revised procedure would have on the clerks, such as that it would make their work more boring, would make them less qualified for promotion to Examiner should a vacancy occur, and others. Davidson commented that perhaps the clerks' stations could be rotated. This was an extended meeting.

1/ In this time and climate it is cumbersome to select the proper gender of the pronoun to refer to a random member of a group including both males and females. Judging from the given names of the seven Examiners, I conclude that six of them were females. In referring to one of them at random I will use the the feminine pronoun and trust that Jose Sanchez will not take affront.

2/ Exhs. C1-C4.

NTEU, the certified representative, had designated its chapter Presidents as its representative to receive communications from the Regions of the Bureau on all matters not pertaining to the processing of a pending grievance. Hyman Abrams ^{3/} was the President of Chapter 94. He was not given notice of or an opportunity to be represented at either the August 20 or September 1 meeting.

Davidson found those meetings unproductive and none of the Examiners' suggestions was adopted.

It was decided to put the plan into effect on April 4, 1977. On March 10, 1977 Davidson wrote to Abrams advising him of the decision to institute the change in operations and stating that if the Chapter desired to discuss the impact, if any, on bargaining unit members management would meet with Abrams or his designated representative on March 18. ^{4/} No reply was received by March 24 and on that day Davidson again wrote to Abrams stating that management was going to meet with the Examiners on March 30 at 1:00 P.M. and with the Clerks on March 31 at 9:00 A.M. to inform them of the changes and provide instructions; the letter stated that the notice was given "to provide the Union an opportunity to be present at these formal discussions". ^{5/} Abrams was out of town on vacation from March 5 through March 31 and did not receive either of those letters until his return. He had not designated an alternate to act for him in his absence.

The complaint is directed to the August 20 and September 1 meetings. The Complainant takes the position that at those meetings there were discussed changes in personnel policies and practices and other matters affecting working conditions and its not being given an opportunity to be present deprived it of its right under the last sentence of Section 10(e) of the Executive Order in violation of Section 19(a)(6) and derivatively in violation of Section 19(a)(1).

Discussion and Conclusions

Were this a case of first impression I would find that the failure to apprise the Complainants of the August 20 and September 1, 1976 meetings was not an unfair labor practice in violation of Sections 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Executive Order.

^{3/} The transcript uniformly refers to him as Hyrum Abrams. It appears from various exhibits that his given name is Hyman. Such errors are hereby corrected.

^{5/} Exh. R-2.

Their purpose was to solicit suggestions from the employees in the best position to make informed suggestions, concerning changes by the Respondent in "the technology of performing its work" and the methods and means by which such operations are to be conducted, subjects specifically excluded from the obligation to meet and confer by Sections 11(b) and 12(b) of the Executive Order. They were a sort of oral "suggestion box" for improvements in methods of operation. ^{6/}

But it should have been anticipated that at such a meeting the matter of the impact of the proposed changes on working conditions or personnel practices and policies would arise. And in fact they did arise at the September 1, 1976 meeting. Specifically, at that meeting some Examiners suggested that the proposed changes would have an adverse impact on the working conditions of the clerks and their opportunities for advancement, and Davidson replied with a suggested antidote or palliative. Thus I am constrained by Internal Revenue Service, Ogden Service Center, A/SLMR No. 944 (November 23, 1977) to hold that the meeting on September 1, 1977, without the Complainants being given an opportunity to be represented, violated their right under the last sentence of Section 10(e) of the Executive Order in violation of Section 19(a)(6) and derivatively of the employees' right under Section 19(a)(1).

RECOMMENDATION

I recommend that the Assistant Secretary issue the order attached hereto together with its Appendix.

The Complainants are requesting that the posting be "throughout the unit", i.e., nationwide. The Respondent named in the complaint and in the Notice of Hearing is the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms, Midwest Region. The wrong that occurred was in the Firearms and Explosive Licensing Section of the Midwest Region of the Bureau. It is located entirely in regional headquarters in Chicago, and consists of about 15 of the 50 employees at that headquarters. The wrong was committed by one whose jurisdiction did not extend beyond the regional headquarters. A posting at the Midwest Regional Headquarters would be sufficient. I do not believe it necessary or appropriate "to effectuate the policies of the order" ^{7/} to have the notice posted in every town and hamlet that may have a distillery inspector of the Bureau a thousand or two thousand miles from Chicago because of a marginal violation in the Firearms and Explosives Licensing Section at the Midwest Regional Office. 8/ Accordingly, I recommend that the posting be ordered at the Midwest Regional Office of the Bureau in Chicago.

^{7/} Regulations, § 203.26(b).

SUMMARY OF DECISION AND DIRECTION OF ELECTION
OF THE ASSISTANT SECRETARY
PURSUANT TO SECTION 6 OF EXECUTIVE ORDER 11491, AS AMENDED

ENVIRONMENTAL PROTECTION AGENCY,
ENVIRONMENTAL RESEARCH LABORATORY,
NARRAGANSETT, RHODE ISLAND
A/SLMR No. 1071

This case arose as a result of a petition filed by an individual seeking the decertification of the Intervenor, National Association of Government Employees, Local R1-240 (NAGE), and a petition filed by the American Federation of Government Employees, AFL-CIO (AFGE) seeking an election in a unit consisting of all professional and nonprofessional employees of the Activity. The parties herein agreed to the appropriateness of the petitioned for unit, which is coextensive with the unit for which the NAGE is the incumbent exclusive representative. However, the AFGE and the NAGE took the position, with which the Activity and the individual Petitioner disagree, that certain student employees classified as either a "1040" or a "graduate student" should be excluded from the claimed unit.

Under the particular circumstances of this case, the Assistant Secretary found that the Activity's "1040" and "graduate student" employees should be included in the unit found appropriate. Thus, he noted that such employees share a community of interest with the Activity's other professional and nonprofessional employees, that such current employees have been employed by the Activity for substantial periods of time, and that, therefore, such employees have a reasonable expectancy of continued employment at the Activity.

Accordingly, the Assistant Secretary ordered an election in the unit found appropriate.

UNITED STATES DEPARTMENT OF LABOR
BEFORE THE ASSISTANT SECRETARY FOR LABOR-MANAGEMENT RELATIONS

Upon petitions duly filed under Section 6 of Executive Order 11491, as amended, a consolidated hearing was held before Hearing Officer Carol C. Blackburn. The Hearing Officer's rulings made at the hearing are free from prejudicial error and are hereby affirmed.

Upon the entire record in the subject cases, the Assistant Secretary finds:

1. The labor organizations involved claim to represent certain employees of the Activity.

2. In Case No. 31-11018(DR), the Petitioner, Walter B. Galloway, an employee of the Activity, seeks the decertification of the Intervenor, National Association of Government Employees, Local R1-240, hereinafter called NAGE, as the exclusive representative of certain Activity employees. In Case No. 31-11022(RO), the Petitioner, American Federation of Government Employees, AFL-CIO, hereinafter called AFGE, seeks an election in a unit consisting of all professional and nonprofessional employees of the Environmental Research Laboratory, Narragansett, Rhode Island, excluding management officials, employees engaged in Federal personnel work in other than a purely clerical capacity, and supervisors as defined by the Order. 2/

At the hearing, the parties agreed as to the appropriateness of the petitioned for unit, which is coextensive with the unit currently represented by the NAGE which was certified in 1972. 3/ The AFGE and the NAGE take the position, with which the Activity and Galloway disagree, that certain employees under either a "1040" appointment or a "graduate student" appointment should be excluded from the unit. 4/

2/ The parties stipulated that there is no bar to an election in this matter and that employees classified as professionals are professional employees within the meaning of the Order.

3/ The Certification of Representative excluded guards from the unit. The parties stipulated that guards have never been employed at the Activity.

4/ The term "1040" appointment refers to the maximum number of hours such employees may work annually. Chapter 213, Appendix C-2(q) of the Federal Personnel Manual (FPM) states, in pertinent part, that:

. . . appointees are to assist scientific, professional, or technical employees. Persons employed under this provision shall be: (1) Bona fide high school science or mathematics teachers or (2) bona fide students at high schools or accredited colleges or universities who are pursuing courses related to the field in which employed.

1/ The Activity's name appears as amended at the hearing.

The Activity is one of eight such laboratories within the Environmental Protection Agency and is headed by a Director who reports directly to the Director, Office of Research Development, in Washington, D.C. The Activity's programs involve developing water quality criteria to assure the protection and propagation of marine life. With regard to the two disputed employee classifications, the record reveals that the "1040" and "graduate student" employees share with the Activity's other professional and nonprofessional employees common supervision and duties, similar working conditions, job classification and performance evaluation procedures as well as some of the same fringe benefits, such as annual leave, sick leave, holiday pay and eligibility for awards. Further, they are paid according to the same wage schedule as other professional and nonprofessional employees of the Activity.

Since 1973 the Activity has hired employees in the "1040" and "graduate student" classifications. Of the current 36 "1040" employees, there are 22 professionals and 14 nonprofessionals. All three current "graduate student" employees are professional employees. Of the currently employed employees in these classifications, 47 percent of the "1040" employees have been employed from 1½ to 3 years. The "graduate student" employees have been employed from 1 to 3 years and were classified for 1 or 2 of those years as "1040" employees. The "1040" employees work part-time during the period October to May, and full-time from June to September. The appointments of the "1040" employees are renewed annually as long as they are pursuing high school or college courses related to the field in which they are employed. The evidence establishes that such employees could possibly be employed by the Activity for several years as they progress from "1040" to "graduate student" status.

Under the particular circumstances of this case, I find that the Activity's "1040" and "graduate student" employees should be included in the unit found appropriate. Thus, as noted above, the record reveals 4/ No person shall be employed under this provision in (i) positions of a routine clerical type or (ii) in excess of 1040 working hours a year; . . .

The term "graduate student" appointment refers to the qualifications required for such appointment. Item (p) of the above noted Appendix to the FPM states that employees can receive such appointments for:

positions of a scientific, professional, or analytical nature when /the positions are/ filled by bona fide graduate students at accredited colleges or universities provided that the work performed for the agency is to be used by the student as a basis for completing certain academic requirements toward a graduate degree. Employments under this provision may be continued only so long as the foregoing conditions are met, and the total period of such employment shall not exceed one year in any individual case: Provided, That such employment may, with the approval of the Commission, be extended for not to exceed an additional year.

that such employees share common supervision, similar working conditions and duties, and common personnel policies and practices with the Activity's other professional and nonprofessional employees. In addition, the evidence establishes that a substantial number of the "1040" and "graduate student" employees have been employed by the Activity for substantial periods of time and that, therefore, they have a reasonable expectancy of continued employment at the Activity. 5/ Accordingly, I shall include the "1040" and "graduate student" employees in the unit found appropriate.

As noted above, the unit involved herein was certified under Executive Order 11491, as amended. Accordingly, and noting the lack of any disagreement between the parties as to the appropriateness of the unit, I find that the following employees constitute a unit appropriate for the purpose of exclusive recognition within the meaning of Section 10 of Executive Order 11491, as amended:

All professional and nonprofessional employees, including temporary full-time employees who are employed for a period not to exceed one year and employees classified as either a 1040 or a graduate student employee, of the Environmental Research Laboratory, Narragansett, Rhode Island, excluding confidential employees, management officials, employees engaged in Federal personnel work in other than a purely clerical capacity, and supervisors as defined in the Order. 6/

It is noted that the unit found appropriate includes professional employees and that the Assistant Secretary is prohibited by Section 10(b)(4) of the Order from including professional employees in the unit with employees who are not professionals unless a majority of the professional employees votes for inclusion in such a unit. Accordingly, the desires of the professional employees as to inclusion in the unit with nonprofessional employees must be ascertained. I shall, therefore, direct separate elections in the following groups:

5/ See General Services Administration, Region 10, Interagency Motor Pool No. 2, Portland, Oregon, 2 A/SLMR 195, A/SLMR No. 146 (1972), and U.S. Department of Agriculture, Forest Service, Schenck Civilian Conservation Center, North Carolina and Forest Service, National Forests of North Carolina, 1 A/SLMR 551, A/SLMR No. 116 (1971).

6/ The parties stipulated that temporary full-time employees should be included in the unit. They also stipulated that the following employees should be excluded from the unit: the Secretary to the Director of the Activity, because she is a confidential employee within the meaning of the Order; and employees classified as either a Stay-In-School or a summer employee because employees in these classifications do not share a community of interest with the Activity's professional and nonprofessional employees or have a reasonable expectancy of continued employment at the Activity. There was no evidence that these stipulations were improper.

Voting Group (a): All professional employees, including temporary full-time employees who are employed for a period not to exceed one year and employees classified as either a 1040 or a graduate student employee, of the Environmental Research Laboratory, Narragansett, Rhode Island, excluding all nonprofessional employees, confidential employees, management officials, employees engaged in Federal personnel work in other than a purely clerical capacity, and supervisors as defined in the Order.

Voting Group (b): All nonprofessional employees, including temporary full-time employees who are employed for a period not to exceed one year and employees classified as either a 1040 or a graduate student employee, of the Environmental Research Laboratory, Narragansett, Rhode Island, excluding all professional employees, confidential employees, management officials, employees engaged in Federal personnel work in other than a purely clerical capacity, and supervisors as defined in the Order.

The employees in the nonprofessional Voting Group (b) will be polled whether they desire to be represented by American Federation of Government Employees, AFL-CIO; National Association of Government Employees, Local R1-240; or neither.

The employees in the professional Voting Group (a) will be asked two questions on their ballots: (1) whether or not they wish to be included with the nonprofessional employees for the purpose of exclusive recognition, and (2) whether they wish to be represented for the purpose of exclusive recognition by American Federation of Government Employees, AFL-CIO; National Association of Government Employees, Local R1-240; or neither. In the event that the majority of the valid votes in Voting Group (a) are cast in favor of inclusion in the same unit as the nonprofessional employees, the ballots of Voting Group (a) shall be combined with those of Voting Group (b).

Unless a majority of the valid votes of Voting Group (a) are cast for inclusion in the same unit as the nonprofessional employees, they will be taken to have indicated their desire to constitute a separate unit and an appropriate certification will be issued indicating whether American Federation of Government Employees, AFL-CIO; National Association of Government Employees, Local R1-240; or neither was selected by the professional employee unit.

The unit determination in the subject case is based, in part, then upon the results of the election among the professional employees. However, I will now make the following findings in regard to the appropriate unit:

1. If a majority of the professional employees votes for inclusion in the same unit as the nonprofessional employees, I find that the following employees will constitute a unit appropriate for the purpose of exclusive recognition within the meaning of Section 10 of the Order:

All professional and nonprofessional employees, including temporary full-time employees who are employed for a period not to exceed one year and employees classified as either a 1040 or a graduate student employee, of the Environmental Research Laboratory, Narragansett, Rhode Island, excluding confidential employees, management officials, employees engaged in Federal personnel work in other than a purely clerical capacity, and supervisors as defined in the Order.

2. If a majority of the professional employees does not vote for inclusion in the same unit as the nonprofessional employees, I find that the following groups of employees constitute separate units appropriate for the purpose of exclusive recognition within the meaning of Section 10 of the Order:

- a. All professional employees, including temporary full-time employees who are employed for a period not to exceed one year and employees classified as either a 1040 or a graduate student employee, of the Environmental Research Laboratory, Narragansett, Rhode Island, excluding all nonprofessional employees, confidential employees, management officials, employees engaged in Federal personnel work in other than a purely clerical capacity, and supervisors as defined in the Order.
- b. All nonprofessional employees, including temporary full-time employees who are employed for a period not to exceed one year and employees classified as either a 1040 or a graduate student employee, of the Environmental Research Laboratory, Narragansett, Rhode Island, excluding all professional employees, confidential employees, management officials, employees engaged in Federal personnel work in other than a purely clerical capacity, and supervisors as defined in the Order.

DIRECTION OF ELECTION

An election by secret ballot shall be conducted among the employees in the unit found appropriate as early as possible, but not later than 60 days from the date below. The appropriate Area Administrator shall supervise the election, subject to the Assistant Secretary's Regulations. Eligible to vote are those in the units who were employed during the payroll period immediately preceding the date below, including employees who did not work during that period because they were out ill, or on vacation, or on furlough, including those in the military service who appear in person at the polls. Ineligible to vote are employees who quit or were discharged for cause since the designated payroll period, and who have not been rehired or reinstated before the election date.

Those eligible shall vote whether they desire to be represented for the purpose of exclusive recognition by American Federation of Government Employees, AFL-CIO; National Association of Government Employees, Local R1-240; or neither.

This case involved a petition filed by the Aeronautical Center Employees Organization, PATCO/MEBA, AFL-CIO, (PATCO) seeking an election in a unit of all unrepresented, nonprofessional, non-instructor employees of the Federal Aviation Administration Academy (Academy), located at the Federal Aviation Administration Aeronautical Center (Center) in Oklahoma City, Oklahoma. The Activity contended that the unit sought was inappropriate under Section 10(b) of the Order as the employees involved do not share a community of interest separate and distinct from other Center nonprofessional employees and that such unit would lead to fragmentation and would not promote effective dealings and efficiency of agency operations. It also asserted that the employees in the petitioned for unit should be included in a Center-wide unit of all unrepresented nonprofessional employees.

The Assistant Secretary found that the claimed unit was appropriate for the purpose of exclusive recognition. In this regard, he noted that the petitioned for unit was, in effect, a residual unit of all unrepresented, nonprofessional employees of the Academy and that such unit was consistent with the division-level bargaining history at the Center. As he found that the petitioned for employees shared a clear and identifiable community of interest and that the petitioned for unit would reduce unit fragmentation at the Academy and would promote effective dealings and efficiency of agency operations, he ordered an election in the unit found appropriate.

DECISION AND DIRECTION OF ELECTION

Upon a petition duly filed under Section 6 of Executive Order 11491, as amended, a hearing was held before Hearing Officer Paul H. Hall. The Hearing Officer's rulings made at the hearing are free from prejudicial error and are hereby affirmed.

Upon the entire record in this case, including a brief submitted by the Petitioner, Aeronautical Center Employees Organization, PATCO/MEBA, AFL-CIO, hereinafter called PATCO, the Assistant Secretary finds:

1. The labor organization involved claims to represent certain employees of the Activity.
2. In its amended petition, the PATCO seeks an election in a unit of all unrepresented, nonprofessional, non-instructor employees of the Federal Aviation Administration (FAA) Academy, a component of the Aeronautical Center, hereinafter called Center, located in Oklahoma City, Oklahoma. The Activity contends that the unit sought is inappropriate under Section 10(b) of the Order as the employees involved do not share a community of interest separate and distinct from other Center employees and that such unit would lead to fragmentation and would not promote effective dealings and efficiency of agency operations. Further, it asserts that the employees in the petitioned for unit should be included in a Center-wide unit of all unrepresented nonprofessional employees.

The Center is an intermediate field organization of the FAA with operating, research and support functions which are national in scope and cannot be performed at the regional level. It is comprised of 16 organizational components including, among others, the FAA Depot, the Civil Aeromedical Institute, the Airmen and Aircraft Registry (for civilian aircraft registrations and airmen's records), an Aircraft Services Base (to maintain and modify FAA aircraft), and the FAA Academy, hereinafter called Academy. Also located at the Center are various staff functions necessary to support its operations. Each divisional component has its own organizational structure and supervision, with the division heads exercising the authority to hire, discharge, award and promote the employees assigned to their respective divisions.

The mission of the FAA Academy is to provide training and retraining for FAA employees and other governmental and non-governmental personnel. In fulfilling its mission, the Academy, pursuant to the direction and supervision of the Superintendent of the Academy, employs approximately 550 instructors assigned from various FAA regions, currently represented exclusively by the PATCO, and approximately 86 nonprofessional "non-instructors" in administrative support positions who are the subject of the PATCO's instant petition.

The history of bargaining at the Center reveals a pattern of division-level bargaining units. In this regard, the record reflects that of the 16 above-noted organizational components, eight other than the Academy have exclusively recognized units. All such units have been organized at the division level and have been established pursuant to the agreement of the parties or under the procedures of Executive Order 10988. ^{1/} The record further reveals that within the Academy itself, the PATCO has been the exclusive representative for a unit of all instructors since 1973.

The petitioned for unit consists principally of clerical employees and the Center asserts that there are other similarly situated employees in other divisions. However, the evidence establishes that the claimed employees of the Academy share a common training mission different from other components of the Center, common overall supervision and generally similar job duties. Also, as in the case of other division heads, the Superintendent of the Academy has the authority to hire, discharge, award and promote employees of the Academy. Moreover, the Superintendent of the Academy is authorized to act as the deciding official in the case of minor adverse actions and can render final decisions on formal agency grievances. Although all Academy employees are serviced by the Center's ^{1/} Some of the units of exclusive recognition contain employees in similar job classifications as those in the petitioned for unit. The record reflects that the American Federation of Government Employees, AFL-CIO, herein called AFGE, is the exclusive representative of seven of the above-noted division-level units and that the National Association of Government Employees represents the remaining unit. Subsequent to the hearing in this matter, the Assistant Secretary, pursuant to a petition for consolidation of units filed by the AFGE, directed an election to consolidate the seven units represented exclusively by the AFGE. See Department of Transportation, Federal Aviation Administration Aeronautical Center, Oklahoma City, Oklahoma, A/SLMR No. 1021 (1978).

Personnel Office, which also handles labor relations and assists in contract negotiations for each division, each division head at the Center, including the Superintendent of the Academy, approves the final negotiated agreement and is responsible for its administration.

Based on the particular circumstances herein, I find that the claimed unit of all nonprofessional, non-instructor employees of the Academy is appropriate for the purpose of exclusive recognition. Thus, the evidence establishes that the petitioned for unit is, in effect, a residual unit of all unrepresented, nonprofessional employees of the Academy and that such a division-level residual unit coincides with the existing bargaining pattern at the Center, a pattern which has been established, for the most part, based on the Center's desire in the past for division-level bargaining. In my view, since the petitioned for employees of the Academy share a common mission and overall supervision, generally similar job duties, and enjoy uniform personnel policies and practices and labor relations policies, they have a clear and identifiable community of interest. I find also that such a residual unit of employees of the Academy, which is consistent with the division-level bargaining history at the Center and with the labor relations responsibility of the Academy Superintendent, will promote effective dealings and efficiency of agency operations and reduce unit fragmentation at the Academy. 2/

Accordingly, I find that the following unit is appropriate for the purpose of exclusive recognition under Section 10(b) of Executive Order 11491, as amended:

All non-instructor employees of the FAA Academy, Aeronautical Center, Oklahoma City, Oklahoma, excluding management officials, professional employees, employees engaged in Federal personnel work in other than a purely clerical capacity, confidential employees and supervisors as defined in Executive Order 11491, as amended.

DECISION AND ORDER

This case involved an unfair labor practice complaint filed by the National Association of Air Traffic Specialists (NAATS) alleging that the Respondent, the Federal Aviation Administration, violated Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order by failing to consult, confer or negotiate with certain of its facility representatives. The NAATS, which holds national exclusive recognition, argued that under the terms of the parties' agreement, it had the right to designate facility representatives of its choice. The Respondent contended that as the facility representatives were not employed at the particular facility to which they had been assigned, there was no obligation under the Order or the parties' negotiated agreement which required the Respondent to recognize and deal with such facility representatives.

The Administrative Law Judge recommended dismissal of the complaint on the basis that the dispute involved a question of contract interpretation. He noted that neither the Order nor the parties' agreement required the Respondent to deal with non-resident facility representatives, and that, therefore, the Respondent's conduct was not violative of the Order.

The Assistant Secretary concurred with the Administrative Law Judge's determination that the complaint be dismissed but for different reasons. He noted that a labor organization holding exclusive recognition has the right under the Order to select its own representatives when dealing with agency management, absent a clear and unmistakable waiver. In the circumstances of this case, no such waiver was found to exist.

Rather, the Assistant Secretary found that Section 19(d) of the Order precluded further processing of the complaint. In this regard, the record revealed that several days prior to the filing of the pre-complaint charge, the Complainant had filed and actively pursued a contractual grievance which raised the same issue. Under these circumstances, the Assistant Secretary ordered that the complaint be dismissed in its entirety.

On April 25, 1978, Administrative Law Judge Edwin S. Bernstein issued his Recommended Decision and Order in the above-entitled proceeding, finding that the Respondent had not engaged in the unfair labor practices alleged in the complaint and recommending that the complaint be dismissed in its entirety. No exceptions were filed to the Administrative Law Judge's Recommended Decision and Order.

The Assistant Secretary has reviewed the rulings of the Administrative Law Judge made at the hearing and finds that no prejudicial error was committed. The rulings are hereby affirmed. Upon consideration of the Administrative Law Judge's Recommended Decision and Order and the entire record in the subject case, I hereby adopt the Administrative Law Judge's findings, conclusions and recommendations, only to the extent consistent herewith.

The Complainant, which holds national exclusive recognition for a unit of Air Traffic Control Specialists employed in over 300 Flight Service Stations, alleged that the Respondent violated Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order by failing to consult, confer or negotiate with certain of its designated facility representatives. The Complainant argued that under the terms of the parties' negotiated agreement, it had the right to designate a facility representative at each of the Respondent's Flight Service Stations. The Respondent, on the other hand, argued, in part, that it had no contractual obligation to consult with facility representatives who were not employed at the particular facility to which they had been so designated.

The Administrative Law Judge, in dismissing the instant complaint, found that as there was no specific requirement in either the Order or the parties' negotiated agreement that the Respondent recognize and deal with non-resident facility representatives, the Respondent's conduct was not violative of the Order. In this regard, he concluded that the question pertaining to the designation of facility representatives was a matter of contract interpretation.

While I agree with the Administrative Law Judge's conclusion that the complaint should be dismissed, I reach such conclusion for different reasons. It has previously been held that a labor organization holding exclusive recognition has the right under the Order to select its own representatives when dealing with agency management. 1/ It has further been held that in order to establish a waiver of a right granted under the Order, such waiver must be clear and unmistakable. 2/ In this regard, noting, as did the Administrative Law Judge, that the parties' had reasonably differing interpretations of the various pertinent articles of their negotiated agreement, I find insufficient evidence to establish that the Complainant clearly and unmistakably waived its right to select its own representatives at each of the Respondent's facilities where unit employees were located.

However, in the particular circumstances of this case, I find that Section 19(d) of the Order precludes further processing of the instant complaint. 3/ The record reveals that several days prior to the filing of the pre-complaint charge in this matter the Complainant's Central Region Director filed a contractual grievance with the Respondent's Central Region Director regarding the latter's refusal to consult with a unit employee who had been designated as the facility representative at Flight Service Stations at which he was not employed. The grievance was denied on both procedural grounds and on its merits. Thereafter, the Complainant requested arbitration. The Respondent replied that as the grievance and the pre-complaint charge raised the same issue, the Complainant should indicate which procedure it wished to pursue. The Complainant took the position that as the grievance presented a "regional issue" while the unfair labor practice charge raised a "national issue", it was not estopped from pursuing both actions. However, it decided to defer its arbitration request pending disposition of the unfair labor practice charge.

In my view, as the issue raised in the grievance was the same as that raised in the unfair labor practice charge, i.e., the alleged failure to consult, confer or negotiate with certain of the Complainant's facility representatives, and as the Complainant's actions indicated that it actively pursued the grievance, even to the point of requesting arbitration, I find that Section 19(d) of the Order precludes further processing of the complaint and shall order that it be dismissed on this basis. 4/ With respect to the Complainant's contention that the grievance raised a "regional issue" while the charge dealt with a "national issue", it was noted that the issues raised in both forums are identical, and, as the parties are operating under a nationwide agreement, any resolution of the grievance would be applicable to the nationwide unit. 5/

IT IS HEREBY ORDERED that the complaint in Case No. 22-07949(CA) be, and it hereby is, dismissed.

RECOMMENDED DECISION AND ORDER

This proceeding was initiated upon the filing of a complaint by National Association of Air Traffic Specialists ("the Union") against Department of Transportation, Federal Aviation Administration ("the Agency") on May 5, 1977.

The complaint alleged that the Agency violated Sections 19(a)(1) and (6) of Executive Order 11491, as amended ("the Executive Order") by refusing to recognize, consult, confer and negotiate with union - appointed Facility Representatives ("FACREPS"). The Regional Administrator for the Philadelphia Region issued a Notice of Hearing on July 20, 1977 with respect to alleged violations of Sections 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Executive Order.

A hearing was held before me in Washington, D.C. on September 28, 1977. Both parties were present and were afforded a full opportunity to be heard, to examine and cross-examine witnesses, and to adduce relevant evidence. Briefs were filed by both parties.

Upon the entire record in this case and my observation of the witnesses and their demeanor, I make the following findings of fact, conclusions of law, and recommendation.

Findings of Fact

The Union holds national exclusive recognition rights for all air traffic control specialists employed at over 300 Agency flight service stations in the 50 United States, Guam, Puerto Rico and the Canal Zone. These stations are located from 50 to 100 miles apart.

The parties' current labor agreement, made effective November 1, 1976 included the following provisions:

ARTICLE 4--UNION REPRESENTATIVES AND RIGHTS

Section 1. The Union may designate Facility Representatives at each facility. The Union may designate one representative and one designee for each team, crew, or group, as appropriate, in each facility. Normally, on each tour of duty, the Union may designate one representative to deal with first and second level supervisors. At the tour representative's option, he may designate an alternate to act on his behalf in dealing with first and second level supervisors. In addition, the Union shall designate in writing one principal representative and one designee. Only the principal representative and/or his designee may deal with the Facility Chief.

ARTICLE 11--NAMES OF EMPLOYEES AND COMMUNICATION

Section 3. At facilities where the Union has no designated representative or members, the Employer agrees to contact each employee by mail or other appropriate means and inform them of the Union's exclusive representative status. The Employer will explain that the Union has the right and the responsibility under Executive Order 11491 to represent all employees in the unit. The message to employees will enclose an address card that the employee may return to the Union signifying his or her desire to be placed on the Union mailing list, and will advise the employee of the name and address of the Union's Regional Representative for that FAA Region.

Under the parties' agreement, a Facilities Representative's role is to represent the employees at the flight service station.

The allegations center around similar actions regarding four flight service stations located at Dyersberg, Tennessee; Emporia, Kansas; Chadron, Nebraska; and Sidney, Nebraska. Because there were no union members at these stations, the Union designated an employee from another station as a non-resident Facilities Representative. The Union notified the chiefs of the stations by letters dated December 28, 1976 for Dyersberg; February 17, 1977 for Chadron and Sidney; and September 3, 1977 for Emporia. In similar letters, the Agency refused to recognize the designees. Typical of the Agency's responses was a letter dated March 23, 1977 referring to the Dyersberg designee which stated in part:

Roy, I appreciate what you are trying to do, but I cannot agree to recognize an employee from another facility as facility representative. My view is based primarily on two factors -- there is no contractual provision or requirement for a "nonresident" facility representative. Secondly, and most important, to have such an arrangement is totally impractical. There is simply no way a facility chief could meet many of the contractual obligations required of him if the facility representative was an occasional visitor.

Conclusions of Law

The Union contended that the Agency's refusal to recognize and confer with non-resident FACREPS violated Sections 19(a) (1) and (6) of the Executive Order because it resulted in non-compliance by the Agency with the following language of Section 10(e) of the Executive Order:

"The labor organization shall be given the opportunity to be represented at formal discussions between management and employees or employee representatives concerning grievances, personnel policies and practices, or other matters affecting general working conditions of employees in the unit."

The Agency acknowledged that it is obligated to meet and confer with the Union and its representatives, however, it contended that where there are no Union members at a facility, the Agency is obligated to deal with national union representatives and not with non-resident FACREPS.

The Union argued that the language of Article 4 of the parties' agreement supports its position. The Agency disagreed.

The Assistant Secretary has consistently held that a sincere dispute concerning differing and arguable interpretations of a labor-management agreement, as distinguished from clear, unilateral breaches of the agreement, is not an unfair labor practice in violation of the Executive Order. General Services Administration, Region 5, Public Buildings Service, Chicago Field Offices, A/SLMR No. 528; Federal Aviation Administration, Muskegon Air Traffic Control Tower, A/SLMR No. 534; Department of Army, Watervliet Arsenal, Watervliet, New York, A/SLMR No. 624; Aerospace Guidance and Metrology Center, Newark Air Force Station, Newark, Ohio, A/SLMR No. 677.

The Executive Order does not specifically require the Agency to recognize and deal with non-resident FACREPS. Nor can it be concluded with any degree of certainty that the parties' agreement requires this. Therefore, the Agency's position here does not constitute a clear, unilateral breach of its obligations under the agreement and Executive Order. Rather it constitutes a sincere, good faith interpretation with regard to language in Articles 4(1) and 11(3) of the parties' agreement which probably supports the Agency's position and at best is ambiguous.

The Union's designation of Mr. Rasmussen as a non-resident FACREP for 12 days at the Minneapolis Flight Service Station did not result in a waiver of the Agency's position. There was no evidence that the Agency knew of Mr. Rasmussen's designation.

Accordingly, the Agency did not violate the Executive Order.

Recommendation

Having found that Respondent did not violate the Executive Order, I recommend that the complaint be dismissed in its entirety.

1/ I can not attach any significance to the fact that the last three words of the first sentence of Article 4(1) read, "in each facility" in the 1973 agreement and "at each facility" in the 1976 agreement. Both Webster's New World Dictionary & Roget's International Thesaurus list "in" and "at" as synonyms. Furthermore, the testimony of both Mr. Worthley & Mr. Heinbach supports the conclusion that the change resulted because the Article was copied from another labor agreement rather than from any intent to change the meaning of the phrase.

A/SIMR No. 1074

This case involved an unfair labor practice complaint filed by the National Treasury Employees Union (NTEU) and NTEU Chapters 66, 67, 70, 71, 72, 73, 78, 82, 97 and 98 (Complainant), alleging that the Respondent violated Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order by refusing to negotiate the impact and implementation of its decision to institute new Standard Position Descriptions and Classification Guidelines for the GS-592 series Tax Examiners and Tax Assistants as it affected employees at the GS-6 level and below. The Respondent concluded that it was not obligated to bargain with the Complainant concerning the impact and implementation of its action with respect to employees classified as Tax Examiners and Tax Assistants, GS-6 or below, as none of these employees would be downgraded, but would be reassigned and/or reclassified and that, since Article 6, Section 2(B)(5) of the parties' Multi-Center Agreement applies to this type of situation, the Complainant had waived its right to bargain on the impact and implementation of the decision as it applied to this group of employees.

The Assistant Secretary found that the evidence was insufficient to establish that the Complainant had waived the right to negotiate with respect to impact and implementation of the change of position and/or classification as it affected employees at the GS-6 level and below. In this regard, the Assistant Secretary noted that while Article 6, Section 2(B)(5) of the parties' Multi-Center Agreement applied to the filling of a position by a lateral reassignment, the evidence did not establish that such Article was meant to encompass personnel actions such as involved herein without the Respondent having the obligation to bargain on impact and implementation. Under these circumstances, the Assistant Secretary found that the Respondent's refusal to negotiate as to the procedures used in implementing the New Position Descriptions and Classification Guidelines as they affected employees classified as GS-592 series Tax Examiners and Tax Assistants, GS-6 and below, and on the impact of such Guidelines on adversely affected employees constituted a violation of 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order.

Accordingly, the Assistant Secretary ordered the Respondent to cease and desist from the conduct found violative and to take certain affirmative action.

DECISION AND ORDER

This matter is before the Assistant Secretary pursuant to Regional Administrator Hilary M. Shepley's Order Transferring Case to the Assistant Secretary of Labor in accordance with Section 203.5(b), 203.7(a)(4) and 206.5(a) of the Assistant Secretary's Regulations.

Upon consideration of the entire record in the subject case, including the parties' stipulation of facts and accompanying exhibits, the Assistant Secretary finds:

The complaint herein alleges that the Respondent violated Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of Executive Order 11491, as amended, by refusing to negotiate the impact and implementation of its decision to institute new Standard Position Descriptions and Classification Guidelines for the GS-592 series Tax Examiners and Tax Assistants as it affected employees GS-6 and below. The Respondent contends that it was not obligated to bargain with the Complainant concerning the impact and implementation of its actions with respect to employees classified as Tax Examiners or Tax Assistants, grade GS-6 or below. In this regard, it asserts that none of the Tax Examiners or Tax Assistants at the GS-6 level and below would be down-graded, but, rather, they would be reassigned and/or reclassified. Moreover, since Article 6, Section 2(B)(5) of the parties' Multi-Center Agreement applies to this type of situation, the Respondent takes the position that the Complainant had waived its right to bargain on the impact and implementation of the decision to issue new Standard Position Descriptions and Classification Guidelines as they applied to the disputed group of employees.

The undisputed facts, as stipulated by the parties, are as follows:

The National Treasury Employees Union (NTEU) is the exclusive representative of certain Internal Revenue Service (IRS) employees at the Kansas City, Ogden, Chamblee, Philadelphia, Austin, Covington, Fresno and Brookhaven Service Centers, the Detroit Data Center and the Martinsburg National Computer Center. The exclusively recognized unit encompasses approximately 30,000 employees. On March 21, 1975, Billy Brown, Director of the Personnel Division of the IRS, notified Vincent L. Connery, President of the NTEU, that the final draft of the new Standard Position Descriptions and Classification Guidelines for the GS-592 series Tax Examiners and Tax Assistants would result in approximately 50 down-grades per Service Center. ^{1/} On March 26, 1975, Connery notified Brown of the NTEU's desire to negotiate on the impact and implementation of the decision to implement the new position descriptions. Brown notified Connery on March 31, 1975, that the Regions would have until July 1, 1976, to effect the reclassifications and that the local Center management would be dealing with their respective local unions before any redeployment plan was finalized.

On July 18, 1975, the Respondent and the NTEU executed a Multi-Center negotiated agreement. Thereafter, on February 5, 1976, Brown notified Robert Tobias, General Counsel of the NTEU, that redeployment guidelines covering the contemplated down-grades would be issued on February 16, 1976. The parties met on February 20, 1976, and the NTEU was informed that approximately 500 down-grades would result from the new Standard. On February 26, 1976, Tobias transmitted a proposed Memorandum of Understanding to the Respondent which contained the NTEU's position on the manner of implementing the contemplated down-grading. On March 1, 1976, the parties met and agreed to negotiate the impact and implementation on a multi-unit basis.

On September 9, 1976, the Respondent informed Tobias that the GS-592 classification guidelines were being implemented. The next day, Tobias notified the Respondent that the NTEU demanded that implementation cease pending the outcome of negotiations. On September 17, 1976, the parties met and discussed all of the NTEU's proposals. As indicated above, the Respondent took the position that the NTEU had waived its right to negotiate procedures for lateral reassignments by virtue of Article 6, Section 2(B)(5) of the parties' Multi-Center Agreement. ^{2/}

^{1/} The new position description and classification guidelines were developed to address questions raised by the Civil Service Commission (CSC) with regard to the application of the classification standards applicable to Tax Examiners and Tax Assistants.

^{2/} Article 6 of the Multi-Center Agreement reads, in pertinent part:

Exceptions to the coverage of this Article will be as follows: . . .

A. Employees adversely affected by a reclassification action will be referred for consideration for any available vacancy before the vacancy is filled by other means.

B. Employees adversely affected by a reclassification action will be considered as follows:

1. The employer will post the vacancy announcement and indicate that only those adversely affected by a reclassification action will be considered.

2. If there are more basically qualified applicants than available positions, the employees with the greatest length of Service Center employment will be reassigned first.

misclassified GS-6 or below could be laterally reassigned to another position and/or classification without loss of grade. Its latter position was contingent upon receiving a two year moratorium from the CSC for implementation of the latter's decision. 4/

The NTEU was of the view that the loss of position and/or classification created a sufficient adverse impact to require negotiations on the impact and procedures for implementation of the CSC decision. It further asserted that it had not waived its right to negotiate because the issue of GS-592 reassignments was not discussed during the negotiation of the Multi-Center negotiated agreement.

On October 19, 1976, the parties met in a negotiating session and the NTEU indicated that the parties were at an impasse. The Respondent removed all of the conditions that it had placed upon reassigning employees who were at the GS-6 level and below at the September 17, 1976, meeting and indicated that no GS-6 and below would be down-graded and that the project would be accomplished with reassignments to different positions and/or classifications. The Respondent again asserted its position that since no GS-6 employee or below would be down-graded, Section 3 of NTEU's proposals was non-negotiable with respect to GS-6 and below and that, therefore, there was, and could be, no impasse concerning that Section as it affected such employees. The Respondent also stated that its proposals would be implemented on November 1, 1976. At no time during the meetings between the parties did the Respondent refuse to negotiate the impact of the new guidelines on employees at the GS-7 level and above, inasmuch as it could make no guarantee that such employees would not be down-graded.

On October 26, 1976, the NTEU filed its pre-complaint charge in this matter alleging that the Respondent had violated Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order by its refusal to bargain upon request. Thereafter, 3/ 3. If there are an insufficient number of basically qualified /applicants/ all who applied . . . will be reassigned and the affected employees with the least length of Service Center employment will fill the remainder of the positions.

C. Employees will retain their option of whether to accept reassignment.

1. Affected employees who choose not to be reassigned will be given salary retention rights.

2. Affected employees who choose not to be reassigned will be given special consideration pursuant to FPM Chapter 335, Subchapter 4-3 for positions for which they apply.

4/ The IRS requested a two-year period from the CSC to effect the necessary reclassifications in order to provide enough time to redeploy, without demotions, the incumbents of the affected positions.

on November 1, 1976, the NTEU requested the Federal Mediation and Conciliation Service to assign a mediator to the negotiations and the parties subsequently met in three mediation sessions. Although the Respondent did discuss other sections of the NTEU's proposals, it maintained throughout these sessions that Section 3 of the NTEU's proposals was non-negotiable as it applied to employees at the GS-6 level and below.

FINDINGS AND CONCLUSIONS

The Respondent herein has consistently acknowledged its obligation to bargain on the impact and implementation of the down-grading of some 500 employees caused by the new Standard Position Descriptions and Classification Guidelines for the GS-592 series Tax Examiners and Tax Assistants. In this regard, the record is clear that the Respondent, in fact, negotiated with the NTEU with respect to the impact and implementation of the down-grading of employees at the GS-7 level and above. However, the Respondent also has consistently refused to bargain in this regard concerning the employees classified GS-6 and below. As noted above, it has taken the position that by virtue of Article 6, Section 2(B)(5) of the parties' Multi-Center negotiated agreement the NTEU waived its right to negotiate where, as here, the employees involved in a personnel action were transferred laterally without loss of grade.

It has previously been held that in order to establish a waiver by a party of a right granted under the Executive Order, such waiver must be clear and unmistakable. Further, a waiver will not be found merely from the fact that a negotiated agreement omits specific reference to a right granted by the Executive Order or that a labor organization has failed in negotiations to obtain protection with respect to certain of the rights granted by the Order. ^{5/} In the instant case, I find that the evidence is insufficient to establish that the NTEU waived the right to negotiate with respect to impact and implementation of the change of position and/or classification as it affected employees at the GS-6 level and below. Thus, while Article 6, Section 2(B)(5) of the parties' Multi-Center negotiated agreement concerns the filling of a position by a lateral reassignment, the evidence does not establish that such Article was meant to afford the Respondent the right to make reassignments necessitated by a change in personnel policies without having to bargain with the Complainant on the impact and implementation of such decision. Under these circumstances, I find that the Respondent was under an obligation to negotiate over the impact and implementation of its actions with respect to employees at the GS-6 level and below as the Complainant had not clearly and unmistakably waived its right to negotiate with regard to such matters. Accordingly, I find that the Respondent's refusal, upon the request of the Complainant, to negotiate on the procedures used

This Notice must remain posted for 60 consecutive days from the date of posting, and must not be altered, defaced, or covered by any other material.

If employees have any question concerning this Notice or compliance with any of its provisions, they may communicate directly with the Regional Administrator for Labor-Management Services, Labor-Management Services Administration, United States Department of Labor, whose address is: 4120 Gateway Building, 3535 Market St., Philadelphia, Pennsylvania 19104.

This case involved a petition for clarification of unit (CU) filed by the General Services Administration, National Archives and Records Service (Activity). The Activity sought to exclude employees of the National Archives Trust Fund Board (Board) from an exclusively recognized unit of all professional and nonprofessional employees of the National Archives and Records Service (NARS), Washington, D.C., Metropolitan Area, represented by the American Federation of Government Employees, Local 2758, AFL-CIO (AFGE). The Activity took the position that the Assistant Secretary does not have jurisdiction over the Board because it is not an "agency" within the meaning of Section 2(a) of the Order, and that employees of the Board are not covered by the definition of "employee" found in Section 2(b) of the Order. The AFGE contended that the Board and its employees are covered by the Order and that they are within the recognized unit. The Activity and the AFGE stipulated that if the Assistant Secretary asserted jurisdiction over the Board and its employees, the appropriate unit in the instant case should include the employees of the Board, as such employees have a community of interest with employees of the NARS, and such unit would promote effective dealings and efficiency of agency operations.

The Assistant Secretary concluded that the Board is an independent establishment within the meaning of Section 104 of title 5 of the United States Code. Accordingly, he found the Board to be an "agency" within the meaning of Section 2(a) of the Order whose mission and business activities are functionally related to the NARS. He found also that Board employees are "employees" within the meaning of Section 2(b) of the Order, and that the unit herein should be clarified to reflect that employees of the Board have been and remain within the exclusively recognized unit. In this regard, he noted that employees of the Board and of the NARS share a clear and identifiable community of interest and that, as stipulated by the parties, inclusion of the Board's employees in the subject unit would promote effective dealings and efficiency of agency operations.

Accordingly, the Assistant Secretary ordered that the unit herein be clarified to reflect his findings.

DECISION AND ORDER CLARIFYING UNIT

This matter is before the Assistant Secretary pursuant to Regional Administrator Hilary M. Sheply's Order Transferring Case to the Assistant Secretary of Labor in accordance with Section 206.5 of the Assistant Secretary's Regulations.

Upon consideration of the entire record in the subject case, including the parties' joint stipulation of facts and statement of issues, accompanying exhibits and briefs, 1/ the Assistant Secretary finds:

On July 28, 1977, the Activity filed its amended petition for clarification of unit (CU) seeking to exclude employees of the National Archives Trust Fund Board from an exclusively recognized unit of all professional and nonprofessional employees of the National Archives and

1/ The Activity-Petitioner, hereinafter called Activity, subsequent to the Order Transferring Case to the Assistant Secretary filed a Motion To Insert Material Deleted Typographically from a Joint Stipulation of Facts. In the absence of any opposition, the Activity's Motion is hereby granted. The Activity's further request to file a post-stipulation brief was granted and, thereafter, the American Federation of Government Employees, Local 2758, AFL-CIO, hereinafter called AFGE, was permitted to file a brief in response to the Activity's post-stipulation brief.

Records Service (NARS), Washington, D.C., Metropolitan Area, represented exclusively by the AFGE. In this connection, the Activity asserts that the Assistant Secretary does not have jurisdiction over the National Archives Trust Fund Board, hereinafter called the Board, because it is not an "agency" within the meaning of Section 2(a) of the Order, 2/ and the employees of the Board are not covered by the definition of "employee" set forth in Section 2(b) of the Order. 3/ On the other hand, the AFGE contends that the Board and its employees are covered by the Order and are included within the exclusively recognized unit.

On December 28, 1970, the AFGE was certified as the exclusive representative of all professional and nonprofessional employees of the NARS Central Office in the Washington, D.C., Metropolitan Area. The Board was not specifically mentioned in the description of the bargaining unit as certified, but employees of the Board were included in the voter eligibility list and voted in the representation election held on December 17, 1970. Further, a number of Board employees are presently on dues deductions pursuant to Article 20 of the parties' negotiated agreement.

The Activity and the AFGE stipulated that if the Assistant Secretary asserts jurisdiction over the Board and its employees, the appropriate unit in the instant case should include the employees of the Board, as such employees share a community of interest with employees of the NARS, and such unit would promote effective dealings and efficiency of agency operations.

2/ Section 2(a) of the Order defines an "agency" as: "...an executive department, a Government corporation, and an independent establishment as defined in Section 104 of title 5, United States Code, except the General Accounting Office."

Section 104 of title 5 of the United States Code, in relevant part, defines an independent establishment as: "...(1) an establishment in the executive branch (other than the United States Postal Service or the Postal Rate Commission) which is not an Executive department, military department, Government corporation, or part thereof, or any part of an independent establishment...."

3/ Section 2(b) of the Order defines an "employee" as: "...an employee of an agency and an employee of a nonappropriated fund instrumentality of the United States but does not include, for the purpose of exclusive recognition or national consultation rights, a supervisor, except as provided in section 24 of this Order."

The NARS, located within the General Services Administration, hereinafter called GSA, performs a variety of functions relating to the preservation, use, and disposition of the records of the United States Government. In the National Archives Building and regional branches, the NARS preserves and makes available for research, as well as places on exhibit, the Nation's records of enduring value. Among its other activities are the administration of a network of Federal records centers to store and service non-current records of Federal agencies, operation of a Presidential Library system and a government-wide records management program to improve the management and quality of Federal records and facilitate prompt disposition of inactive records, and publication of legislative, regulatory and other widely used documents. The director of the NARS is the Archivist of the United States.

The Board was created by an Act of Congress on July 9, 1941, and was designed to support the activities of the National Archives establishment. The Board's mission is to accept, receive, hold, and administer gifts or bequests of money, securities, or other personal property for the benefit of the NARS, and to finance and administer the reproduction or publication of records and other historical materials. The scope of the activities administered by the Board was augmented in 1948 by an amendment to the National Archives Act which provided that funds collected by the National Archives for copying records were to be paid into and administered as part of the National Archives Trust Fund, and in 1955 by the Presidential Libraries Act which provided that funds received in connection with Presidential Libraries were to be administered as part of the National Archives Trust Fund. The statutory members of the Board are the Archivist of the United States, who serves as Chairman, ^{4/} and the Chairmen of the Senate Committee on Post Office and Civil Service and the House Committee on Government Operations. Further, as indicated in the publication, National Archives Trust Fund Board, A GSA Handbook, which is a compilation of the by-laws and regulations of the Board, the Executive Director of the NARS is designated as Secretary to the Board. The by-laws of the Board provide that "the Secretary shall be the chief executive officer of the Board." ^{5/}

^{4/} The Archivist of the United States is appointed by the Administrator of the GSA.

^{5/} The by-laws of the Board, "Section 3. Secretary. " provide that:

The Secretary shall be appointed by the Chairman, with approval of the Board, and may be removed at any time. The Secretary shall be the chief executive officer of the Board and, subject to the control of the Board and the Chairman, shall exercise general supervision over all the

Board employees are appointed by the Board without regard to Civil Service laws and their duties and compensation are fixed by the Board. Compensation of persons employed by the Board is paid out of income from trust funds available to the Board for that purpose. However, Board employees may be considered employees of the GSA for purposes of personnel and payroll administration, are included in the annual GSA Affirmative Action Plan designed for the upward mobility of GSA employees, and may be bonded on the same basis as if they were employees of the GSA, upon approval by the Chairman (Archivist). The Chairman may also authorize the Secretary, Directors of Presidential Libraries administered by the GSA, and Regional Directors of the NARS, to appoint and fix the duties of Board employees. ^{6/}

The record shows that Board and NARS employees are serviced by the same personnel office and receive administrative support from the NARS, work together in the National Archives Building, accrue annual and sick leave in the same fashion, have the option of choosing the same Health Benefits Plan and joining the Civil Service Retirement System, share common immediate and overall supervision, perform similar duties and have like job titles. The GSA grievance procedure is utilized by Board employees, except that the Archivist of the United States, who acts as deciding official in such grievances, retains authority to make the final decision and no GSA official may impose a different final decision, which is possible in the case of a grievance filed by a NARS employee. The record reveals that there have been a number of transfers of employees between the Board and the NARS, and that the by-laws of the Board mandate that no employee of the GSA shall be adversely affected by a reassignment to a similar position when working for the Board. However, in order for a Board employee to apply for a NARS position, such employee must have obtained competitive status from prior service or have been referred from an appropriate Civil Service Commission register. Prior to accepting a Board position, a NARS employee must resign from the competitive service.

^{5/} business and affairs of the Board. He shall be responsible for the receipt and disbursement of trust funds in accordance with the law and the actions of the Board and the Chairman; shall maintain detailed accounts of receipts and expenditures and detailed records of the receipt and disposition of each gift or bequest made to the Board in a manner approved by the Board, shall represent the Board in determining investments to be made or retained by the Secretary of the Treasury. He shall record the proceedings of all meetings of the Board; shall have custody of its records; shall prepare such rules and information relating to the Board's organization and procedures as may be appropriate for publication in the Federal Register; and shall perform such other duties as may be prescribed by the Board or the Chairman.

^{6/} Although Board employees are not subject to Civil Service Commission regulations, the record reveals that in actual practice such regulations generally are followed in matters of pay and leave administration.

Under all of the foregoing circumstances, I conclude that the National Archives Trust Fund Board is an independent establishment within the meaning of Section 104 of title 5 of the United States Code. Accordingly, I find it to be an "agency" within the meaning of Section 2(a) of the Order whose mission and business activities are functionally related to the NARS. In this regard, it is noted particularly that the statutory Chairman of the Board is the Archivist of the United States, an official appointed by the Administrator of the GSA, and, further, that the Secretary of the Board, who is its chief administrative officer, is the Executive Director of the NARS. Moreover, in my judgment, a finding that the Board is an "agency" within the meaning of Section 2(a) of the Order for the purpose of collective bargaining in no way conflicts with the Congressional concern that the Board accept and administer gifts, or bequests of money, securities or other personal property for the benefit of the NARS, or interferes with the Board's ability to collect and administer funds from the National Archives establishment or various Presidential libraries as part of the National Archives Trust Fund.

I find also that Board employees are "employees" within the meaning of Section 2(b) of the Order as they are employees of an "agency" as defined in the Order. In this regard, it is noted that the determination of whether employees, such as those involved herein, are subject to the jurisdiction of the Order, is dependent on whether they are employees of an "agency", rather than on their method of appointment, pay, or coverage under Civil Service laws and regulations. 7/

I find further that the unit herein should be clarified to reflect that the employees of the Board have been and remain within the exclusively recognized unit. In this regard, it is noted that employees of the Board were included in the voter eligibility list and voted in the representation election held in December 1970, are presently on dues checkoff and no evidence was presented that the AFGE has not represented such employees. Additionally, as noted previously, employees of the Board and the NARS share a clear and identifiable community of interest as they have common supervision, are serviced by the identical personnel office, receive administrative support from the NARS, work together in the National Archives Building and have similar job titles and duties. Moreover, as stipulated to by the parties, I find that inclusion of the Board's employees in the AFGE's unit would promote effective dealings and efficiency of agency operations.

Accordingly, and because employees of the Board have been and continue to be included in the AFGE's unit, I shall order that the existing exclusively recognized unit be clarified to reflect the inclusion of the professional and nonprofessional employees of the Board who are located in the Washington, D.C., Metropolitan Area.

ORDER

IT IS HEREBY ORDERED that the unit sought to be clarified herein, for which American Federation of Government Employees, Local 2578, AFL-CIO, was certified on December 28, 1970, be, and it hereby is, clarified by including in the description of said unit the professional and non-professional employees of the National Archives Trust Fund Board in the Washington, D.C., Metropolitan Area.

ASSISTANT SECRETARY FOR LABOR-MANAGEMENT RELATIONS
SUMMARY OF DECISION AND DIRECTION OF ELECTION
OF THE ASSISTANT SECRETARY
PURSUANT TO SECTION 6 OF EXECUTIVE ORDER 11491, AS AMENDED

FEDERAL ELECTION COMMISSION
A/SLMR No. 1076

This case involved a representation petition filed by the National Treasury Employees Union seeking an election in a unit consisting of all professional and nonprofessional employees of the Federal Election Commission. The Activity contended that certain categories of employees, including Attorneys, Research Assistants, Investigators, Auditors and Disclosure Analysts, were not eligible for inclusion in the proposed unit as their inclusion might result in a conflict of interest. The Activity further argued that the Attorneys should also be excluded on the basis that they acted as management officials. If, however, the Attorneys were found to be eligible for inclusion in a bargaining unit, the Activity argued that they should comprise a separate unit. Finally, the Activity took the position that temporary employees should be excluded from the unit.

The Assistant Secretary found that the claimed unit was appropriate for the purpose of exclusive recognition. In this regard, he noted that the employees in the proposed unit share a clear and identifiable community of interest in that they are engaged in a common mission with common overall supervision, are engaged in a highly integrated operation requiring a high degree of cooperative effort, enjoy uniform personnel policies and practices, and are employed in a single location. The Assistant Secretary further found that such unit would promote effective dealings and efficiency of agency operations. In this regard, the record revealed that the proposed unit embraces all eligible employees of the Activity, and that the level of recognition would occur at the same level where personnel and labor relations policies and practices are established and implemented. Further, the establishment of the claimed Activity-wide unit would, in the Assistant Secretary's view, prevent the fragmentation of the Activity's employees.

With respect to the eligibility questions, the Assistant Secretary found no basis under the Order to exclude certain categories of employees on the basis of a potential conflict of interest; that the Attorneys who were alleged to be management officials were not involved in internal policy formulation within the Activity; that a separate unit limited solely to Attorneys was unwarranted in the circumstances herein; and that temporary employees had a reasonable expectancy of continued employment and therefore their inclusion in the unit found appropriate was warranted.

Accordingly, the Assistant Secretary ordered an election in the unit found appropriate.

Case No. 22-8591(RO)

NATIONAL TREASURY EMPLOYEES UNION

Petitioner

DECISION AND DIRECTION OF ELECTION

Upon a petition duly filed under Section 6 of Executive Order 11491, as amended, a hearing was held before Hearing Officer Daryl F. Stephens. The Hearing Officer's rulings made at the hearing are free from prejudicial error and are hereby affirmed.

Upon the entire record in the case, including the briefs filed by the parties, the Assistant Secretary finds:

1. The labor organization involved claims to represent certain employees of the Activity.

2. The Petitioner, National Treasury Employees Union, hereinafter called NTEU, seeks an election in a unit of all professional and non-professional General Schedule employees, including temporary employees, of the Federal Election Commission, excluding guards, management officials, confidential employees, employees engaged in Federal personnel work in other than a purely clerical capacity, and supervisors as defined in the Order. The Activity takes the position that the unit as petitioned for is not appropriate for the purpose of exclusive recognition under the Order. In this regard, it contends that certain categories of employees, including Attorneys, Research Assistants, Investigators, Auditors and Disclosure Analysts, are not eligible for inclusion in the petitioned for unit as their inclusion in such a unit might result in a conflict of interest. It further argues that Attorneys also should be excluded from any unit found appropriate on the basis that they are involved in the formulation of policy and are, therefore, management officials. In the alternative, the Activity contends that if Attorneys are found to be eligible for inclusion in a bargaining unit, they should comprise a separate unit on the basis that Attorneys share a clear and identifiable community of interest separate and distinct from all other Activity employees, and that they constitute a functional grouping of employees within the meaning of Section 10(b) of the Order. ^{1/} Finally, the Activity contends that temporary employees should be excluded from any unit found appropriate as they do not have a reasonable expectation of continued employment.

Located in Washington, D.C., the Activity was created by the Federal Election Campaign Act of 1971, as amended, (FECA) and has the responsibility for implementing, administering and enforcing the FECA, the Presidential Election Campaign Fund Act, and the Presidential Primary Matching Payment Account Act. Among its duties, the Activity receives and processes reports and statements filed by candidates, committees and other persons required to file under the Federal election laws; conducts audits of candidates and committees; issues advisory opinions and promulgates regulations interpreting the FECA; determines the eligibility of and makes payments to political candidates receiving public funds; and conducts investigations into possible violations of the FECA with the authority to initiate civil enforcement actions or attempt to remedy violations by conciliation.

The Activity is headed by six Presidential appointees and two non-voting ex officio members, the Secretary of the Senate and the Clerk of the House of Representatives. These Commissioners are responsible for administering, seeking compliance with, and formulating policy under the FECA, and for the overall direction of the Activity. All major policy decisions must be approved by a vote of four of the six voting Commissioners.

Below the level of the Commissioners, the Activity is essentially divided into two areas - the Office of the Staff Director and the Office of the General Counsel. The Staff Director, who is appointed by the Commissioners, is the chief executive officer of the Activity and, as such, is responsible for the overall management, operation and administration of the Activity. Reporting directly to the Staff Director is the Director of the Planning and Management Group, which reviews and evaluates Commission goals and programs. Also reporting organizationally to the Office of the Staff Director are the Assistant Staff Directors of the following divisions: Audit, Administrative, Reports Analysis, Public Disclosure, Data Systems, and Information.

The Audit Division, among other things, conducts audits of candidates, committees and other persons subject to the Federal election laws, makes initial recommendations as to the eligibility of candidates

^{1/} Section 10(b) of the Order states, in pertinent part, that:

A unit may be established on a plant or installation, craft, functional, or other basis which will ensure a clear and identifiable community of interest among the employees concerned and will promote effective dealings and efficiency of agency operations. . . .

to receive public funds, assists the General Counsel on enforcement matters, and compiles reports on publicly funded candidates which are submitted to Congress.

The Administrative Division supplies a variety of support services to the Activity, including budget and accounting, personnel, office supplies and services and editorial services. The Personnel Branch of this Division administers personnel policies for all Activity employees. With respect to hiring, the record reveals that the FECA empowered the Staff Director with the authority to appoint personnel, including temporary and intermittent employees, subject to approval by the Commissioners. Vacancy announcements are prepared and posted internally by the Personnel Branch, which also conducts recruitment outside the Activity. For vacancies within the Office of the Staff Director, applicants are interviewed by the division head or Assistant Staff Director who makes a recommendation to the Staff Director or the Assistant Staff Director of the Administrative Division. The recommendation is then forwarded to the Office of the General Counsel for review before being forwarded to the Commissioners. The Office of the General Counsel maintains its own recruitment program in which Attorney positions are advertised in major law journals, newspapers, and are posted at selected law schools. Applicants are first interviewed by team leaders and are then referred to the Associate General Counsel who makes a recommendation to the General Counsel which recommendation is then forwarded to the Commissioners.

The Personnel Branch performs a variety of duties in addition to processing new appointments and promotions. It notifies both the Offices of the General Counsel and the Staff Director of upcoming employee performance evaluations and forwards the necessary forms, and also maintains all employees' official personnel files. Apart from services rendered by its Personnel Branch, the Administrative Division provides additional services in the way of travel disbursements for all Commission employees and the preparation, for Commission review, of monthly budget analyses and a general budget, which utilizes input from the General Counsel.

As a result of a 1976 reorganization within the Activity, the former Disclosure Division became two separate divisions, the Reports Analysis Division and the Public Disclosure Division. These Divisions are responsible for all reports and statements filed with the Commission from their receipt, through the entry of the data into a computerized reporting system, to an analysis of their compliance with requirements of the FECA. The Data Systems Division is responsible for the development of computer based information systems. The operations of these three Divisions is highly integrated and requires a great deal of cooperative effort.

Finally, the Information Division provides and disseminates information to persons subject to or interested in Federal election laws. All publications issued by this Division must first be reviewed by the Office of the General Counsel for legal sufficiency prior to issuance. This Division is also responsible for responding to all Freedom of Information Act requests subject to legal advice provided by the Office of the General Counsel.

Enforcement and policy matters are handled by the Office of the General Counsel, which reports directly to the Commissioners. The General Counsel, who, like the Staff Director, is appointed by the Commissioners, provides the Commission with legal guidance and advice on all policy matters and represents the Commission in all litigation and enforcement proceedings. Within the Office of the General Counsel are four enforcement teams each headed by an Assistant General Counsel and staffed with Attorneys, Investigators and Research Assistants. There are Assistant General Counsels in the areas of legislation, policy and advisory opinions and regulations, and an Associate General Counsel for Enforcement who oversees the enforcement teams. Additionally, the Office of the General Counsel employs summer interns.

The Offices of the Staff Director and the General Counsel work closely on a variety of matters. Documents which are prepared by various divisions within the Office of the Staff Director are referred to the General Counsel through the Staff Director for a review of legal sufficiency. For example, reports completed by the Audit Division are referred to the Office of the General Counsel for review before being submitted to the Commission for approval. Irregularities or possible violations of the Federal election laws which are discovered by Auditors or the staff of the Reports Analysis Division in the regular course of their duties are referred to the Office of the General Counsel which may then decide to take further action. Where further investigation is warranted, Auditors may assist staff Attorneys in field examinations.

Personnel policies, applicable to Commission employees, were initially formulated by a task force, which included Attorneys and employees of the Office of the Staff Director, and were then submitted to the Commissioners for approval. These policies, which apply uniformly to all employees, include regulations involving equal employment opportunity, leave usage, incentive awards and quality increases, appointments and promotions and a grievances/complaints procedure.

Currently, there is no trained labor relations staff at the Commission. The record reveals that the Office of the General Counsel would handle labor relations for the Commission, including the negotiation of collective bargaining agreements which would be subject to approval by the Commissioner.

Based on all of the foregoing, I find that the proposed unit, consisting of all professional and nonprofessional employees of the Activity, is appropriate for the purpose of exclusive recognition under the Order.

Thus, as noted above, the evidence establishes that the employees in the proposed unit are engaged in a common mission with common overall supervision, are engaged in a highly integrated operation requiring a high degree of cooperative effort, enjoy uniform personnel policies and practices, and are employed in a single location. Consequently, I find that the employees in the claimed unit share a clear and identifiable community of interest. Moreover, I find that such unit will promote effective dealings and efficiency of agency operations. In this regard, the record reveals that the proposed unit embraces all eligible employees of the Activity, and that the level of recognition would occur at the same level where personnel and labor relations policies and practices are established and implemented. Further, the establishment of the claimed Activity-wide unit would prevent fragmentation of the Activity's employees.

Eligibility Issues

Attorneys, Research Assistants, Investigators, Auditors and Disclosure Analysts

As indicated above, the Activity contends that certain categories of employees, including Attorneys, Research Assistants, Investigators, Auditors, and Disclosure Analysts, should be excluded from the unit on the basis of a potential conflict of interest. In this regard, the Activity asserts that a conflict of interest, either real or apparent, would exist if employees of the Commission, whose official duties are to ensure compliance with, and enforcement of, the FECA, were to be represented by a labor organization which might engage in certain types of political activity falling within the jurisdiction of the Commission.

In my view, there is no basis under the Order for the exclusion of such employees. Thus, while Section 3 of the Order excludes certain employees and agencies from its coverage, 2/ the employees in the

2/ Section 3 of the Order states, in pertinent part:

(b) This Order (except section 22) does not apply to --

- (1) The Federal Bureau of Investigation;
- (2) The Central Intelligence Agency; disputed categories herein do not fall within such exclusions. In this regard, there has been no agency head determination that the inclusion of such employees would be inconsistent with national security requirements or the internal security of the agency. Nor is there any contention that the employees should be excluded on the basis that they administer a labor-management relations law or the Order. ^{3/} Moreover, as there was no evidence presented that the disputed employees have in the past been called upon to scrutinize reports filed by the NTEU or have had to review political activity engaged in by such labor organizations, I find that it has not been established that the inclusion of employees classified as Attorneys, Research Assistants, Investigators, Auditors and Disclosure Analysts in the unit found appropriate will result in a conflict of interest, either real or apparent. ^{4/} Accordingly, I find that such employees should be included in the unit found appropriate. ^{5/}

(c) The head of an agency may, in his sole judgment, suspend any provision of this Order (except section 22) with respect to any agency installation or activity located outside the United States, when he determines that this is necessary in the national interest, subject to the conditions he prescribes.

As noted above, the Activity also argues that Attorneys are management officials and, as such, should be excluded from any unit found appropriate. In this regard, it points to the fact that the Attorneys are primarily responsible for making policy recommendations to the Commissioners so that, in effect, it is the Attorneys who assume the policy making role rather than the Commissioners.

The record reveals that Attorneys are, from time-to-time, assigned policy matters, which include the issuance of advisory opinions whereby individuals or parties seek prospective advice on what courses of action are permissible under Federal election laws. For the most part, such policy formulation as engaged in by the Attorneys involves the interpretation of Federal election laws which is directed to parties over whom the Activity exercises jurisdiction, rather than involving internal policy formulation applicable to the Activity's employees. ^{6/} Under these circumstances, I find that they are not management officials within the meaning of the Order. ^{7/}

^{4/} During the course of the hearing in this matter, the Hearing Officer sustained the NTEU's objection to the Activity's line of questioning concerning the potential conflict of interest and suggested instead that the Activity present its arguments in a post-hearing brief. In my view, there is sufficient basis in the record herein to make a determination concerning the issues presented.

^{5/} As noted above, the record reveals that the Office of the General Counsel would handle labor relations for the Commission. Those Attorneys clearly acting in behalf of the agency on a regular basis with respect to the implementation of the agency's labor-management relations program should not be included in any unit found appropriate. Cf. United States Department of Justice, Immigration and Naturalization Service, San Francisco District, San Francisco, California, 6 A/SLMR 553, A/SLMR No. 730 (1976).

^{6/} Cf. Portland Area Office, Department of Housing and Urban Development, 1 A/SLMR 522, A/SLMR No. 111 (1971), wherein the Assistant Secretary found that an employee was not a management official on the basis that he did not participate in the formulation or determination of activity policies.

^{7/} With regard to those Attorneys who may have served on the task force which formulated a set of personnel policies, the record reveals that the duties of this task force were confined to one period of time. As there was no evidence that such duties are of a recurring nature, I find no basis to presently exclude those Attorneys as being management officials.

The Activity further argues that, in the event the Attorneys are found eligible for inclusion in a unit, a separate unit of Attorneys be found appropriate on the basis that they constitute a functional grouping of employees. In this regard, the Activity claims that the Office of the General Counsel and the Office of the Staff Director have separate missions, different personnel policies and practices, and that the Attorneys share educational requirements and working conditions which are different from other employees. The NTEU, on the other hand, argues that a separate unit for Attorneys would be inconsistent with the policies of the Order.

In its 1975 Report and Recommendations, the Federal Labor Relations Council addressed the issue of the status of Attorneys under the Order, finding no reason to accord them special status, and noting further that the processes of the Order were sufficient for resolving any questions concerning the status of Attorneys. Under these circumstances, and noting the Activity's highly integrated operation and the fact that under Section 10(b)(4) of the Order all professional employees, including Attorneys, will have an opportunity to vote whether they desire to be represented and, if so, whether they wish to be included in a unit limited solely to professional employees, or whether they wish to be included in a more comprehensive unit as petitioned for herein, I find that a separate unit limited solely to Attorneys is not justified. 8/

Temporary Employees

The Activity takes the position that temporary employees should be excluded from any unit found appropriate as they do not have a reasonable expectancy of continued employment.

The record establishes that since 1975, there have been 181 temporary appointments, of which 58 have been converted to permanent status. At the time of the hearing in this matter, the Activity employed 17 temporary employees of whom six were being considered for conversion to permanent status. Generally, the temporary appointments last for a period of several months and, in many instances, are extended for additional periods. The record also reveals that temporary employees perform the same duties as permanent employees, share the same job classifications and grade structure, compete for vacancies, enjoy common supervision and working conditions and receive many, though not all, of the benefits to which permanent employees are entitled. Under these circumstances, I find that temporary employees share in the community of interest enjoyed by the permanent employees, that they have a reasonable expectancy of continued employment, and that, therefore, their inclusion in the unit found appropriate is warranted.

8/ Cf. United States Department of the Treasury, Office of Regional Counsel, Western Region, 1 FLRC 258, FLRC No. 72A-32 (1973).

Accordingly, I find that the following employees constitute a unit appropriate for the purpose of exclusive recognition within the meaning of Section 10 of Executive Order 11491, as amended:

All professional and nonprofessional employees of the Federal Election Commission, including temporary employees, excluding management officials, confidential employees, employees engaged in Federal personnel work in other than a purely clerical capacity, and supervisors as defined in the Order. 9/

As noted above, the unit found appropriate includes professional employees. However, the Assistant Secretary is prohibited by Section 10(b)(4) of the Order from including professional employees in any unit with nonprofessional employees unless a majority of the professional employees votes for inclusion in such a unit. Accordingly, the desires of the professional employees must be ascertained. I shall, therefore, direct separate elections in the following groups.

Voting Group (a): All professional employees of the Federal Election Commission, including temporary employees, excluding all nonprofessional employees, management officials, confidential employees, employees engaged in Federal personnel work in other than a purely clerical capacity, and supervisors as defined in the Order.

Voting Group (b): All nonprofessional employees of the Federal Election Commission, including temporary employees, excluding all professional employees, management officials, confidential employees, employees engaged in Federal personnel work in other than a purely clerical capacity, and supervisors as defined in the Order.

The employees in the nonprofessional voting group (b) will be polled whether or not they desire to be represented by the National Treasury Employees Union.

The employees in the professional voting group (a) will be asked two questions on their ballots: (1) whether or not they wish to be included with the nonprofessional employees for the purpose of exclusive recognition, and (2) whether or not they wish to be represented for the purpose of exclusive recognition by the National Treasury Employees Union. In the event that the majority of the 9/ The petitioned for unit herein specifically excluded guards. In its 1975 Report and Recommendations the Federal Labor Relations Council recommended that guards be treated for representational purposes the same as other employees, and the Order was subsequently amended to reflect this recommendation. In the absence of evidence in the record pertaining to guards, I make no finding as to their unit eligibility.

valid votes in voting group (a) are cast in favor of inclusion in the same unit as the nonprofessional employees, the ballots of voting group (a) shall be combined with those of voting group (b).

Unless a majority of the valid votes of voting group (a) is cast for inclusion in the same unit as the nonprofessional employees, they will be taken to have indicated their desire to constitute a separate unit, and an appropriate certification will be issued indicating whether or not the National Treasury Employees Union was selected by the professional employee unit.

The unit determination in the subject case is based, in part, then, upon the result of the election among the professional employees. However, I will now make the following findings in regard to the appropriate unit:

1. If a majority of the professional employees votes for inclusion in the same unit as the nonprofessional employees, I find that the following employees will constitute a unit appropriate for the purpose of exclusive recognition within the meaning of Section 10 of the Order:

All professional and nonprofessional employees of the Federal Election Commission, including temporary employees, excluding management officials, confidential employees, employees engaged in Federal personnel work in other than a purely clerical capacity, and supervisors as defined in the Order.

2. If a majority of the professional employees does not vote for inclusion in the same unit as the nonprofessional employees, I find that the following groups of employees constitute separate units appropriate for the purpose of exclusive recognition within the meaning of Section 10 of the Order:

a. All professional employees of the Federal Election Commission, including temporary employees, excluding all nonprofessional employees, management officials, confidential employees, employees engaged in Federal personnel work in other than a purely clerical capacity, and supervisors as defined in the Order.

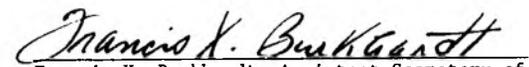

b. All nonprofessional employees of the Federal Election Commission, including temporary employees, excluding all professional employees, management officials, confidential employees, employees engaged in Federal personnel work in other than a purely clerical capacity, and supervisors as defined in the Order.

DIRECTION OF ELECTION

An election by secret ballot shall be conducted among the employees in the units found appropriate as early as possible, but not later than 60 days from the date below. The appropriate Area Administrator shall supervise the election, subject to the Assistant Secretary's Regulations. Eligible to vote are those in the units who were employed during the payroll period immediately preceding the date below, including employees who did not work during that period because they were out ill, or on vacation or on furlough, including those in the military service who appear in person at the polls. Ineligible to vote are employees who quit or were discharged for cause since the designated payroll period and who have not been rehired or reinstated before the election date. Those eligible shall vote whether or not they desire to be represented for the purpose of exclusive recognition by the National Treasury Employees Union.

DECISION AND DIRECTION OF ELECTION

Upon a petition duly filed under Section 6 of Executive Order 11491, as amended, a hearing was held before Hearing Officer John P. Nuchereno. The Hearing Officer's rulings made at the hearing are free from prejudicial error and are hereby affirmed.

Upon the entire record in this case, the Assistant Secretary finds:

1. The labor organizations involved claim to represent certain employees of the Activity.
2. The Petitioner, American Federation of Government Employees, AFL-CIO, Local Union 3306, hereinafter called AFGE, seeks an election in a unit consisting of all professional employees of the Veterans Administration Hospital, Canandaigua, New York, excluding staff nurses and nurse instructors, management officials, confidential employees, employees engaged in Federal personnel work in other than a purely clerical capacity, guards and supervisors as defined in the Order. The unit is coextensive with the unit for which the Intervenor, National Federation of Federal Employees, Local 492, hereinafter called NFFE, is currently the incumbent exclusive representative. 1/

1/ The NFFE was granted exclusive recognition in the aforementioned unit in 1966. The petitioned for unit is essentially as set forth in the February 8, 1974, negotiated agreement between the Activity and the NFFE.

This case involved a representation petition filed by the American Federation of Government Employees, AFL-CIO, Local Union 3306 (AFGE) seeking an election in a unit of certain professional employees of the Veterans Administration Hospital, Canandaigua, New York. The petitioned for unit is coextensive with the unit for which the National Federation of Federal Employees, Local 492 (NFFE) is the incumbent exclusive representative. The Activity and the NFFE took the position that their negotiated agreement which was signed locally on December 17, 1973, and became effective on February 8, 1974, and which provided for automatic renewal triannually until modified or terminated, constituted a bar to the subject petition, and that, therefore, the AFGE's petition, which was filed on October 21, 1977, was not timely filed.

On December 10, 1976, the NFFE wrote the Activity that it "would like to negotiate their contract prior to February 8, 1977." In its communication the NFFE set forth certain articles of the negotiated agreement that it wished to revise. However, in the subsequent negotiations the parties negotiated on a number of matters, including a new duration period, in addition to the matters specified in the December 10 letter.

The Assistant Secretary found that the NFFE's agreement became one of indefinite duration after February 8, 1977, and thus could not serve as a bar to the AFGE's petition of October 21, 1977. In the Assistant Secretary's view, when the parties commenced negotiations immediately prior to and following the anniversary date of the agreement, it became unclear as to whether the parties intended to merely modify the existing agreement, terminate the existing agreement and negotiate a new agreement with a different term, or continue the old agreement indefinitely pending completion of negotiations. In this ambiguous setting, third parties wishing to challenge the representative status of the NFFE had no way of ascertaining the appropriate time for the filing of a petition. In the Assistant Secretary's view, such a situation might also give the NFFE an unfair advantage in being able to negotiate a completely new agreement and yet retain protection from challenges by third parties while the negotiations continued.

Accordingly, the Assistant Secretary ordered an election in the unit found appropriate.

The Veterans Administration Hospital, Canandaigua, New York, hereinafter called the Activity, and the NFFE take the position that their negotiated agreement constitutes a bar to the instant petition. The agreement, which was signed locally on December 17, 1973, became effective on February 8, 1974, when approved by the Chief Medical Director and provides for a duration period of three years from its effective date and for automatic renewal triannually until modified or terminated. 2/ The Activity and the NFFE contend that the negotiated agreement renewed itself on February 8, 1977, for a period of three years and constituted a bar to the AFGE's petition, which was filed on October 21, 1977. On the other hand, the AFGE contends that the 1973 negotiated agreement does not serve as a bar to its petition since, even if the agreement renewed itself in 1977, it is an agreement of indefinite duration.

The evidence establishes that on December 10, 1976, the NFFE wrote the Activity stating that it "would like to negotiate their contract prior to February 8, 1977." This communication set forth certain specific articles of the negotiated agreement that the NFFE wished to revise. Negotiating sessions commenced on January 26, 1977, and continued until September 15, 1977. The record reflects that the bargaining sessions involved a number of items and articles in the agreement in addition to those specified in the NFFE's December 10 letter, including a proposal to change the duration of the agreement. However, the parties failed to sign any new agreement or modification of the existing agreement. On October 21, 1977, the AFGE filed the instant petition.

Under the foregoing circumstances, I find that there was no agreement bar to the filing of the subject petition. As indicated above, the NFFE gave notice of its desire to revise the parties' existing agreement in December 1976, which resulted in several negotiating sessions being held during the subsequent six-month period. It was unclear from the NFFE's bargaining request and from the nature of the actual negotiations as to whether the parties intended to merely modify their existing agreement, terminate the existing agreement and negotiate a new agreement with a different term, or continue the old agreement indefinitely pending completion of negotiations. In this ambiguous setting, third-parties wishing to challenge the representative status of the NFFE had no way of ascertaining the appropriate time for the filing of a petition. In addition, this potentially created an unfair advantage for the incumbent labor organization in that it was possible for it to negotiate indefinitely for a completely new agreement and yet retain protection from challenges by third-parties while the negotiations continued.

2/ The agreement provides, in pertinent part:
Article 39 - DURATION OF AGREEMENT AND MODIFICATION

1. This agreement shall... remain in effect for a period of three (3) years from its effective date and be automatically renewable every three (3) years on the third anniversary date thereafter until modified or terminated as provided herein. Each new 3 year period will be a new duration period with a new effective date. (Continued)

Under these circumstances, I find that the extended agreement was one of indefinite duration after February 8, 1977, and that, therefore, such agreement could not serve as a bar to the AFGE's petition of October 21, 1977. Thus, in my view, the ambiguous arrangement which existed herein did not constitute a final, fixed term agreement and lacked the stability sought to be achieved by the agreement bar principle. 3/

Accordingly, I shall direct an election in the following unit which I find appropriate for the purpose of exclusive recognition under Executive Order 11491, as amended: 4/

All professional employees of the Veterans Administration Hospital, Canandaigua, New York, excluding staff nurses and nurse instructors, nonprofessional employees, management officials, confidential employees, employees engaged in Federal personnel work in other than a purely clerical capacity, guards, and supervisors as defined in the Order.

DIRECTION OF ELECTION

An election by secret ballot shall be conducted among employees in the unit found appropriate as early as possible, but not later than 60 days from the date below. The appropriate Area Administrator shall supervise the election subject to the Assistant Secretary's Regulations.

- 2/ 2. Once each calendar year, either party may request modification of this agreement by notifying each other, not less than sixty (60) days prior to the anniversary date of this agreement, that a conference is desired to consider the need for revising this agreement. If either party indicates its intention to modify or make changes during the aforesaid periods, the agreement shall remain in full force and effect until such changes are negotiated....

Article 40 - TERMINATION OF AGREEMENT

2. Either party may terminate this agreement and all amendments thereto on the terminal date of the agreement as determined in Article 39, or on any subsequent terminal date, by giving the other party written notice at least sixty (60) days in advance. It is provided in Section 1 of this article, the VA Hospital may not terminate this agreement without prior approval of the Chief, Medical Director, Department of Medicine and Surgery, VA Central Office, Washington, D.C.
- 3/ See Veterans Administration Health Care Facility, Montrose, New York, A/SLMR No. 980 (1978), and the cases cited therein.
- 4/ There was no dispute as to the appropriateness of the petitioned for unit.

PURSUANT TO SECTION 6 OF EXECUTIVE ORDER 11491, AS AMENDED

A/SLMR No. 1078

This case involved an unfair labor practice complaint filed by the American Federation of Government Employees, AFL-CIO, Local Union 3027 (Complainant) alleging, in essence, that the Respondent violated Section 19(a)(1), (2) and (4) of the Order by terminating Vincent Valadez, a probationary/trial employee, in reprisal for the filing of a grievance. The Complainant further alleged that the Respondent, by the conduct and statements of two of its supervisors, one of whose supervisory status was in dispute, interfered with, restrained, or coerced employees in the exercise of their rights guaranteed by the Order, and discouraged membership in a labor organization.

The Administrative Law Judge, noting that the 19(a)(1) allegation was derivative in nature and finding that one of the claimed supervisors was, in fact, not a supervisor at the time of Valadez' termination, concluded that the evidence did not establish that the Respondent interfered with, restrained, or coerced employees in the exercise of their rights. Similarly, he found no evidence that the Respondent discouraged union membership or discriminated against employees, including Valadez, because of their union activity. Finally, the Administrative Law Judge concluded that Valadez' termination was not due to the exercise of his rights guaranteed by the Order.

Noting particularly the absence of exceptions, the Assistant Secretary adopted the findings, conclusions and recommendation of the Administrative Law Judge and ordered that the complaint be dismissed.

RECOMMENDED DECISION AND ORDER

Statement of the Case

This proceeding arises pursuant to a complaint filed on June 9, 1977, under Executive Order 11491, as amended, hereinafter referred to as the Order, by the American Federation of Government Employees, Local Chapter 3027, against the Defense/Texas Air National Guard, 149th TFGP, TexANG Kelly Air Force Base, Texas. The proceeding was initiated by a charge filed on or about September 22, 1976 alleging violations of Section 19(a)(2) and (4) of the Order and a complaint filed on June 9, 1977 alleging violations of Sections 19(a)(1)(2) and (4) of the Order. The complaint states:

"On or about 21 September Management for the AFGE's Section conducted surveys on Mr. Vincent Valadez and Mr. Gary Beseth, both of whom have formal grievances pending. The survey consists of tape recording conversations of other people answering questions concerning Mr. Beseth and Mr. Valadez. Management has also initiated termination action on Mr. Valadez which is without a doubt reprisal for having filed a grievance on 19 August 1976. Mr. Valadez was terminated on 30 September 1976."

A Notice of Hearing on Complaint dated December 7, 1977 referenced alleged 19(a)(1)(2) and (4) violations of the Order. 1/ The 19(a) alleged violation was stated by Complainant at the hearing held on February 15 and 16, 1978, in San Antonio, Texas, to be derivative of the 19(a)(2) and (4) alleged violations. At the hearing all parties were afforded full opportunity to be heard, to examine and cross-examine witnesses, to introduce evidence and to file post-hearing briefs.

1/ Respondent's motion to dismiss dated June 22, 1977 referred to in the Acting Regional Administrator's letter of December 7, 1977 was referred to the Administrative Law Judge for consideration.

Upon the entire record, including my observation of the witnesses and their demeanor, and the timely briefs filed by the parties, I make the following findings of fact, conclusions and recommendation.

Findings of Fact

1. At all pertinent and material times herein, the Complainant was the exclusive representative of all technicians in the Texas Air National Guard, 149th TFGP Kelly Air Force Base, Texas.

2. The Texas National Guard has State and Federal missions. For the State, it provides properly trained, organized and appropriately equipped units to perform State functions directed by the Governor of Texas and the Attorney General such as military support of civil defense, disaster relief and supplementing law enforcement agencies of the State. Its Federal mission is to provide units, in accordance with Department of Defense Mobilization Program, of sufficient strength, state of training and equipment to be deployed to meet schedules in current war plans. The 149th Tactical Fighter Groups located at Kelly Air Force Base is one of the Air National Guard units in Texas. Its mission is to provide combat-ready air crews to Tactical Air Command (TAC) for the purpose of executing tactical fighter missions. The F-100 Tactical fighter aircraft is the basic weapons system of the unit.

3. The 149th Tactical Fighter Group is composed of approximately 99 officers and 764 enlisted personnel. The unit is supported by a full time work force of 200 National Guard Technicians. National Guard technicians are federal employees and their responsibilities encompass administrative training, logistics and operational activities, as well as the utilization, maintenance and repair of equipment issued to the National Guard of Texas by the Federal Government. Except as prescribed by the Secretary of the Army or Air Force, technicians, as a condition of employment, must be members of the National Guard holding the military grade of an officer, warrant officer, or enlisted man as required by the position in which they are employed.

4. Vincent Valadez, Jr. was a probationary employee with the Air Technician Detachment at Kelly Air Force Base, San Antonio, Texas during the period from October 12, 1975 to September 30, 1976. He worked as a Powered Ground Equipment

Mechanic WG-10, step 4 civil service wise and was a Staff Sergeant when on reserve duty. Prior to October 1975, he had graduated from high school in 1969, attended college for a brief period and served in the active reserves. For several summers before October 1975, he had temporary appointments to work 60 days or more with the Texas Air National Guard as a weapons mechanic. The record does not establish that he had service that was creditable toward his probationary period.

5. Gary Wayne Beseth has been employed at Respondent's activity at Kelly Air Force Base for about five years. He initially completed a one year probationary period of employment. During 1976 he served Civil-Service wise as a WG-10, step 4, employee and militarily in the Air National Guard as a Staff Sergeant.

6. Both Beseth and Valadez were members of AFGE Local, Union No. 3027 while employed during 1976.

7. James D. Johnston was the Power Support Equipment mechanic Foreman at the Texas Air National Guard Base at all pertinent times material to this proceeding. As foreman he was supervisor of two departments, the Inspection Shop and the Pick Up and Delivery Shop.

8. Arthur Fernandez and L.W. Workman were the respective supervisors working under Mr. Johnston when Vincent Valadez began his probationary employment in October 1975.

9. Arthur Fernandez was Valadez' immediate or first line supervisor when Valadez began his probationary employment. He evaluated him in January and early May 1976 but the latter evaluation was withdrawn because Fernandez was no longer a supervisor. James D. Johnston had assumed the first line supervisory duties of Fernandez in early May 1976. Evaluations thereafter were by Johnston who advised Valadez the reasons for withdrawal of the Fernandez May 1976 evaluation of him. 2/

2/ The two departments headed by Johnston were comprised of three supervisors including himself, Fernandez and Workman and three WG-10 employees Gary W. Beseth, Rudy Castillo and Vincent Valadez. Six persons were not considered sufficient to justify three supervisors and the supervisory jobs of Fernandez and Workman were abolished because of a higher level agency determination.

Valadez' evaluations by Johnston were on May 22 and August 31, 1976. Each of Valadez's evaluations were discussed with him and none were more than borderline as to satisfactory adjustment and progress. The latter was unsatisfactory and separation was recommended. I do not find that any incidents relating to Valadez' application in March 1976 to attend a course that was later cancelled had any significant impact or relationship to the Unfair Labor Practice alledged in August 1976.

10. On the basis of the entire record, I find a clear pattern of unsatisfactory job performance throughout Vincent Valadez's probationary period of employment.

11. Four other probationary employees have been under the supervision of Johnston since 1971 and Valadez is the only one that has been terminated at the end of the probationary period.

12. Johnston had also been a member of AFGE Local 3027 until he was promoted to a position in management.

13. Arthur Fernandez is and was a member of AFGE Local 3027 during 1976 when Valadez' probationary employment was terminated.

14. Fernandez and Johnston became aware of Valadez's membership in the Union when he applied to attend a steward training class in March 1977. He was not a steward at the time but was designated as an alternate by the Union. The class did not materialize and was cancelled.

15. When Valadez discussed his employment status and job dissatisfactions with Colonel Donald Kerr in April 1976, he made no mention of his membership in or activities with a labor union.

16. The record does not warrant an inference of union animus or discriminatory motive on the part of the Respondent that is recognizable under the Order.

17. The record does not support Complainant's assertion that the termination of Valadez's probationary employment in September 1976 caused decline in union membership. The overwhelming evidence from members who had resigned including Wilfred R. Wildman the immediate past Local Union President, was that they had left the union because they were dissatisfied with its operation and management or for personal reasons unrelated to this proceeding. None had left because of fear or reprisal from the Respondent. 3/

18. There is conflicting testimony between James D. Johnston and Gary Wayne Beseth as to the type of evaluation Beseth observed to have been prepared with regard to Valadez in August 1976. Under all the circumstances, having considered the testimony of the witnesses and observed their demeanor, I find that the evaluation of record is the only one made by Mr. Johnston and there was no satisfactory rating of Valadez in August 1976.

19. Valadez and Beseth had each filed a complaint against management relating to statements alleged to have been made by Arthur Fernandez, however, the complaint by Beseth was withdrawn prior to the hearing.

Position of the Parties

The Complainant alleges in substance that Arthur Fernandez and J. D. Johnston by their conduct and statements to bargaining unit members interfered with, restrained and coerced employees in the exercise of rights assured them under the Order and discouraged union membership; that union employees Gary Beseth and Vincent Valadez, Jr., were disciplined and discriminated against as far as tenure, promotion and retention are concerned by reason of having filed complaints under the Order. By reason of the above actions, the Respondent violated sections 19(a)(1)(2) and (4) of the Order.

The Respondent denies Complainant's allegations and asserts the complaint should be dismissed because of lack of specificity and not being timely filed within 60 days after a final answer. Respondent further asserts that Arthur Fernandez was not a management official or supervisor at the time of the incidents mentioned in the complaint and had not been since early May 1976 and this was well known to Vincent Valadez, Jr. In fact Respondent states Fernandez was a member of AFGE Local Union 3027. Further, the Activity

3/ At the hearing 10 witnesses offered testimony as to reasons for leaving the Union and Respondent offered to bring in 20 additional ones. I cut off the additional witnesses because of the pattern of testimony established which was not rebutted after a rather unimpressive attempt. The premise that Valadez was being separated because of evaluation by someone who was not a supervisor was unfounded. Valadez was advised in May 1966 that Johnston was his supervisor and he, Johnston, made the evaluations eventuating in his separation.

argues that Vincent Valadez' separation at the expiration of his probationary period of employment resulted solely from unsatisfactory job performance. The Activity relies in part upon its argument that Valadez demonstrated a pattern of unsatisfactory performance before any Respondent Management official or supervisor was aware that he was a member of a union.

Section 19(a) of the Order

Section 19 of the Order relates to Unfair Labor Practices and provides in part that:

- "(a) Agency management shall not -
 - (1) interfere with, restrain, or coerce an employee in the exercise of the rights assured by this Order;
 - (2) encourage or discourage membership in a labor organization by discrimination in regard to hiring, tenure, promotion, or other conditions of employment;
 - (4) discipline or otherwise discriminate against an employee because he has filed a complaint or given testimony under this Order."

Conclusions of Law

1. On the basis of the above findings of fact, I conclude that Arthur Fernandez, Jr. was not a supervisor within the meaning of Section 2(c) of the Order after the first week in May 1976 and was not a supervisor at the time the allegations attributed to him in the Complaint occurred.

2. Since Arthur Fernandez, Jr., was not a management official or supervisor but a rank and file dues paying member of AFGE Local 3027 for several months before the allegations attributed to him in the Complaint was filed, he did not by his conduct and statements interfere with, restrain, or coerce bargaining unit employees in the exercise of their rights assured under the Order.

3. The record does not establish that James D. Johnston, either by his conduct or statements to bargaining union members interfered with, restrained, or coerced Valadez or Beseth or any bargaining unit employees in the exercise of their rights assured by the Order.

4. The record does not establish that Arthur Fernandez or James Johnston by their statements or conduct discouraged membership in a labor organization.

5. The record does establish that Gary Beseth and Vincent Valadez, Jr. each filed a grievance but the grievance of Beseth was subsequently withdrawn. Neither Beseth or Valadez or any other employee was disciplined or discriminated against because of any complaint or testimony given under the Order.

6. Neither Valadez, Beseth or any other employee is shown to have been discriminated against by the Respondent in regard to hiring, tenure, promotion, retention or other employment conditions because of their union activity.

7. The record does not establish that Texas Air National Guard employees have been encouraged or discouraged from membership or activity in a labor organization by reason of actions of Arthur Fernandez or James D. Johnston.

8. Vincent Valadez's separation from his job by Respondent during his trial or probationary period neither interfered with his or Complainant's exercise of any rights under the Order nor was his discharge motivated by union activities in violation of the Order. The record as a whole evidences a clear pattern of borderline and unsatisfactory performance on the part of Valadez before any management official or supervisor was aware he was an active union member. There was no significant improvement thereafter demonstrated before his probationary status was terminated.

Despite the contentions, the record is replete with evidence that he (Valadez) was not subject to disparate treatment. His final performance was evaluated because regulations so required and not because of his union activities. The regulations also required that a trial employee's separation be based upon the subjective evaluation of his supervisor or supervisors as was done in this case. The evidence establishes it is the practice of the Activity not to deny career tenure to employees who have performed satisfactorily during their trial periods. Satisfactory performance by Valadez was not demonstrated.

It is not my function to determine whether Valadez's separation was justified or that his probationary status was incorrect, but whether there was discriminatory motivation as to his discharge because of his union activities. I conclude that the Complainant has failed to meet the required burden of proof. Therefore, the termination of Vincent P. Valadez probationary employment was not related to his exercise of the rights assured him by the Order.

Conclusion

In conclusion, I find that the Respondent did not violate either Sections 19(a)(1)(2) or (4) of the Order by separating Vincent Valadez, Jr., from his position on September 30, 1976 or by reason of any statements or acts of conduct on the part of Arthur Fernandez and James D. Johnston. In regard to the latter conclusion the evidence is clear that Fernandez was not a supervisor or held out to be one after the first week in May 1976 and the evidence does not establish any discriminatory statements or acts on the part of James Johnston. In fact, there are no allegations against Johnston in the complaint nor does the record show that management had any part in any alleged tape recordings mentioned in the complaint or had possession of any such alleged recordings.

As to the motion to dismiss, the charge letter dated September 22, 1976 alleging a violation on September 21, was sent to the Texas Adjutant General and there was a response on October 1, 1976 stating that AFGE Local Union 3027 had no standing as a labor organization to file an unfair labor practice charge with this Department since its formal recognition was withdrawn on June 1, 1971. There was no statement in the letter that the determination was a final one. The complaint dated April 24, 1977 is shown to have been filed with the Area Director on June 9, 1977 and the Respondent was notified on or about the same date. Thus, there was a complaint by a labor organization within 9 months of the occurrence of the alleged unfair practice.

In view of my recommended disposition of the matter on the merits, I find it unnecessary to rule on the motion to dismiss.

Recommendation

In view of the foregoing findings and conclusions, I recommend that the complaint herein be dismissed in its entirety.

SUMMARY OF DECISION AND ORDER OF THE ASSISTANT SECRETARY
PURSUANT TO SECTION 6 OF EXECUTIVE ORDER 11491, AS AMENDED

INTERNAL REVENUE SERVICE, NATIONAL OFFICE,
OFFICE OF INTERNATIONAL OPERATIONS
A/SLMR No. 1079

This case involved an unfair labor practice complaint filed by the National Treasury Employees Union and the National Treasury Employees Union, Chapter 83 (Complainant) alleging that the Respondent violated Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order by refusing to permit a union attorney to attend a Step 2 grievance meeting held under the parties' negotiated agreement to discuss an employee's grievance. The Respondent took the position that the Assistant Secretary should decline jurisdiction in this matter because the basic dispute involves interpretation of the parties' negotiated agreement. It further asserted that if the Assistant Secretary retains jurisdiction in this matter, the Complainant waived its Section 10(e) right to designate whomever it chose to represent it at the grievance meeting.

The Administrative Law Judge recommended that the complaint be dismissed. In reaching this result, he noted that the instant dispute centers on whether the Complainant waived rights otherwise granted it under Section 10(e) of the Order. He found that, in view of the language of the parties' negotiated agreement and the history of bargaining between the parties, the Complainant knowingly and intentionally waived its right to designate, as its Section 10(e) representative, individuals other than those specifically enumerated in the negotiated grievance procedure. Accordingly, the Administrative Law Judge concluded that the Respondent's conduct herein did not violate Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order and recommended that the complaint be dismissed in its entirety.

The Assistant Secretary adopted the Administrative Law Judge's findings, conclusions and recommendation and ordered that the complaint be dismissed in its entirety.

DECISION AND ORDER

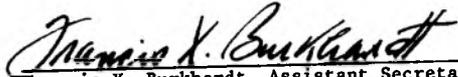

On March 27, 1978, Administrative Law Judge Burton S. Thereafter, the Complainant filed exceptions and a supporting brief with respect to the Administrative Law Judge's Recommended Decision and Order.

The Assistant Secretary has reviewed the rulings of the Administrative Law Judge made at the hearing and finds that no prejudicial error was committed. The rulings are hereby affirmed. RECOMMENDED DECISION AND ORDER

Statement of the Case

Pursuant to a complaint filed on September 2, 1977, under Executive Order 11491, as amended, by the National Treasury Employees Union and NTEU Chapter 83 (hereafter called the Union), against the Internal Revenue Service, National Office, Office of International Operations (hereafter called the Activity), a Notice of Hearing on Complaint was issued by the Assistant Regional Administrator for the Philadelphia Region on January 5, 1978.

The complaint alleges that the Activity violated Sections 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order by refusing to permit Linda Lipsett, a union attorney, to attend a Step 2 Grievance Meeting held to discuss an employee's grievance.

A hearing was held in this matter on February 21, 1978, in Washington, D.C. All parties were afforded full opportunity to be heard, to examine and cross-examine witnesses, and to introduce evidence. Post-hearing briefs have been received from both parties and given careful consideration.

Upon the entire record in this case, including the arguments and stipulations of counsel, I make the following findings of fact, conclusions and recommendations.

Findings of Fact

The Union is the exclusive bargaining representative for approximately 2500 professional and nonprofessional employees of the National Office of the Internal Revenue Service in Washington, D.C. and a party to the National Office Agreement negotiated in 1975 covering such employees. Article 35 of this agreement sets out a 5-step procedure for processing employee grievances arising under the Agreement.

The essential facts of this controversy are not in dispute. On June 10, 1977, pursuant to Article 35, Section 7 of the National Office Agreement, a Step 2 Grievance Meeting was held to discuss the grievance of Ms. Penelope Wagener, a unit employee. Representing the Activity at this meeting were Ms. Beverly Weber, an IRS Labor Relations Specialist; Mr. James Phillips, an IRS Bureau Chief; and Mr. John Carey, Assistant Chief of Audit. Accompanying the grievant were Ms. Shirley Koonce, a steward for NTEU Chapter 85; and Ms. Linda Lipsett, an attorney for the Union.

Prior to the start of the meeting, Ms. Weber objected to Ms. Lipsett's attendance and informed her that the grievance would not be discussed if Ms. Lipsett insisted on being present. Ms. Lipsett subsequently left under protest, and the meeting commenced with Ms. Koonce present and participating.

On June 29, 1977, Ms. Lipsett's protest was made the subject of an unfair labor practice charge filed with the Activity. Efforts to settle the dispute proved unavailing, and the filing of a complaint with the Assistant Secretary's office led to the instant proceedings.

Discussion and Conclusions

The Activity argues that the Assistant Secretary should decline jurisdiction in this matter since the basic dispute involves interpretation of provisions of the parties' negotiated agreement. Article 35, Section 7 of the contract sets out who can be present at a Step 2 Grievance Meeting and therefore, the Activity argues, the Union's remedy lies in a grievance filed under the parties' negotiated procedure and not in an unfair labor practice proceeding. The Activity cites Department of Transportation, Federal Aviation Administration, Western Region, A/SLMR No. 930 (Nov. 7, 1977) as precedent for its position.

However the Activity misconstrues the Assistant Secretary's previous holdings in this area and the Union's basic contention in this case. In the case cited supra, the Assistant Secretary held that a legitimate dispute over interpretation of the negotiated agreement, without more, is insufficient to support an unfair labor practice charge, since such a dispute does not amount to a violation of the Executive Order. 1/

Here, the Union alleges more than a mere breach of contract. The Union asserts that its rights under Section 10(e) of the Order have been violated, and that these rights have not been waived or usurped by its acceptance of the National Office Agreement. The Assistant Secretary has repeatedly held that he will not relinquish jurisdiction where at issue is the question whether a party to an agreement has given up rights guaranteed by the Order. See, e.g., Department of the Treasury, Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco, and Firearms, Washington, D.C., A/SLMR No. 680 (July 26, 1976); NASA, Kennedy Space Center, Kennedy Space Center, Florida, A/SLMR No 223 (Dec. 4, 1972). Therefore, since the instance dispute centers on whether the Union has waived rights otherwise granted it under Section 10(e) of the Order, I conclude that the Assistant Secretary should retain jurisdiction in this matter.

1/ See Department of Transportation, supra, at 4.

Turning to the merits of this controversy, it first must be noted that neither party disputes the Union's right, under Section 10(e) of the Executive Order, to have a representative of its own choosing present at grievance meetings of the type involved herein. 2/ Indeed, in Fort Jackson, A/SLMR No. 242 (Jan. 17, 1973), the Assistant Secretary emphasized that the choice of a Section 10(e) representative "must be left to the exclusive representative and not to the whim of management." 3/ Accordingly, I conclude that the Union had a right, under Section 10(e) of the Order to designate whomever it chose to represent the Union at the grievance meeting in question here. Therefore, if the Activity is to prevail in this action, it must show that the Union waived or otherwise relinquished this right afforded it under the Order.

The proponent of such a waiver bears a heavy burden of persuasion; the Assistant Secretary has repeatedly held that he will only find a waiver of rights granted under the Executive Order where there is clear and unmistakable evidence of such. 4/ Thus, the Assistant Secretary has refused to find a waiver merely from the fact that an agreement omits specific reference to a right 5/, or is otherwise ambiguous. 6/ Nevertheless, an examination of the contract language, bargaining history, and entire record herein forces me to conclude that, in designating the specific representatives which may be present at meetings at each level of the negotiated grievance process, the Union waived its right, under Section 10(e)

2/ See, e.g., Internal Revenue Service, Cincinnati District, Cincinnati, Ohio, A/SLMR No. 705 (Sept. 15, 1976); U.S. Department of the Treasury, Internal Revenue Service, Pittsburgh District, Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania, A/SLMR No. 498 (March 31, 1975).

3/ Fort Jackson, supra at 4; accord, Internal Revenue Service, Omaha District Office, A/SLMR No. 417 (July 31, 1974).

4/ See, U.S. Army Finance and Accounting Center, Fort Benjamin Harrison, Indianapolis, Indiana, A/SLMR No. 651 (May 19, 1976); United States Department of the Navy Naval Ordnance Station, Louisville, Kentucky, A/SLMR No. 400 (June 21, 1974).

5/ See, NASA, Kennedy Space Center, Kennedy Space Center, Florida, A/SLMR No. 223 (Dec. 4, 1972).

of the Order, to designate different or additional representatives to attend these meetings.

A waiver has been defined as the intentional relinquishment of a known right. 7/ Nowhere in the parties' negotiated agreement is there language expressly waiving the Union's right to designate representatives of their own choosing in Article 35, Section 7 grievance meetings. Indeed, the specific contract provision in controversy here is at best ambiguous on this point. Article 35, Section 7 of the parties' agreement states in pertinent part:

Step 2

An employee dissatisfied with the answer provided in Step 1 may appeal his grievance to the appropriate Branch Chief. If such appeal is made either party may request a hearing be held to discuss the matter... The foregoing meeting will be between the office of the Branch Chief and the aggrieved and/or his or her Union steward.

Clearly this language designates who may be present at Step 2 Grievance Meetings; just as clearly, it does not indicate who may not be present at these meetings. The Activity argues that all other representatives are barred by exclusion. To support this contention, the Activity relies on other language in the contract, a perceived scheme of informality at the early stages of the grievance procedure, and the history of bargaining between the parties.

The Activity argues that the clearly delineated scheme of the grievance machinery is to have initial grievance meetings low-key and informal, introducing more formal procedures and higher levels of authority later in the process. Having a union attorney present at a Step 2 Grievance Meeting allegedly would destroy the informality of this meeting, defeating its intended function in the overall grievance process.

The Activity's contentions are supported by the testimony of Mr. Irving A. Des Roches, chief negotiator for the Internal Revenue Service in matters involving union represented employees. Mr. Des Roches testified that this grievance procedure was designed to perpetuate the tested policy of escalating the levels of responsibility attendant at different levels of the procedure.

The contract itself also clearly evinces this design. Thus, Article 35, Section 7 provides that a Step 2 Grievance Meeting shall be between the office of the Branch Chief, the aggrieved, and/or his or her Union steward; a Step 3 Grievance Meeting envisions attendance by the office of the Division Director, the aggrieved, and/or his or her Union steward; Step 4 envisions attendance by the Office of the Assistant Commissioner, the aggrieved, his or her Union steward, and/or the Chief steward. Finally, at Step 5, the meeting is between the Office of the Deputy Commissioner, the aggrieved, his or her Union steward, the Chief steward, the NTEU Joint Council President and/or a representative of the NTEU National Office of the Union. To allow a representative of the Union's National Office to attend a Step 2 Grievance Meeting, even as a non-participating observer, clearly would disrupt the scheme of escalating levels of responsibility that the contract clearly envisions.

However, Mr. Des Roches also testified that this procedure was initially formulated in 1971-72 during negotiations with NTEU's predecessor union. Furthermore, he testified that the procedure presently embodied in Article 35, Section 7 of the National Office Agreement was adopted more or less intact from previous agreements, and there was no discussion in the negotiations leading up to this agreement of who could or could not attend a Step 2 Grievance Meeting. Normally, a union will not be bound by the designs and intentions of its predecessor. Here, however, the Union submitted a proposal to introduce representatives from the Union's National Office at a Step 4 Grievance Meeting. ^{8/} This proposal was submitted during negotiations leading to the adoption of the National Office Agreement, and was subsequently withdrawn. I find that by submitting and subsequently withdrawing such a proposal, the Union evinced an awareness that it was bound to limit its representatives to those individuals specifically designated by the agreement. Why submit such a proposal if the Union had not waived its right to designate as a representative whomever it wished? That the Union was aware it had relinquished this right by acceding to this agreement is also evident from the language of Section 7 itself. With regard to the Union's representatives at a Step 5 Grievance Meeting, the contract states:

^{8/} See Respondent's Exhibit #1.

"If the offices of the NTEU Joint Council President and Chief Steward positions are held by one individual, this does not authorize an additional Union steward at the meeting."

This language clearly suggests that the representatives designated to attend grievance meetings in Section 7 are the only individuals authorized to be present.

No one of the elements discussed herein is sufficient to surmount the heavy burden which a "clear and unmistakable" test imposes. However, viewing the circumstances of this case in its entirety with special attention to the language of the agreement and the history of bargaining between the parties, I am convinced that the Union knowingly and intentionally waived its right to designate, as its Section 10(e) representative, individuals other than those specifically enumerated in Article 35, Section 7 of the negotiated agreement. Therefore I conclude that the Activity did not violate Section 19(a)(1) or (6) of the Order by denying the Union this right in the circumstances set forth herein.

Recommendation

Having found that the Activity has not engaged in conduct prohibited by Sections 19(a)(1) and (6) of Executive Order 11491, as amended, I recommend the complaint herein be dismissed in its entirety.

A/SLMR No. 1080

This case involved an unfair labor practice complaint filed by the American Federation of Government Employees, AFL-CIO, Local 3512, (AFGE) alleging that the Respondent violated Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order by unilaterally instituting a new telephone policy of referring incoming calls for union officials through the Activity's Labor Relations Officer without affording the AFGE an opportunity to meet and confer concerning the implementation of the policy or its impact on unit employees. The Respondent contended that the policy was simply a re-affirmation of an already existing policy, was concerned solely with Federal Telecommunications Service (FTS) calls, and, moreover, the AFGE had never requested to meet and confer concerning the implementation and impact of the telephone policy.

The Administrative Law Judge found that the Respondent had changed its telephone policy with respect to incoming calls for union officials and that the policy was implemented before the AFGE had an opportunity to request to meet and confer concerning that policy. In this regard, he noted that although the telephone policy ostensibly concerned only FTS calls, it was virtually impossible to differentiate between incoming FTS calls and regular incoming telephone calls. Thus, the Administrative Law Judge concluded, among other things, that by unilaterally implementing the procedure concerning incoming calls to union officials, the Respondent failed to provide the AFGE with timely notice and an opportunity to bargain concerning new procedures for screening incoming calls to union officials and the impact of such procedures upon adversely affected employees, in violation of Section 19(a)(6) and (1) of the Order.

Noting particularly the absence of exceptions, the Assistant Secretary adopted the findings, conclusions and recommendation of the Administrative Law Judge, and issued an appropriate remedial order.

DECISION AND ORDER

On April 21, 1978, Administrative Law Judge Joseph A. Matera issued his Recommended Decision and Order in the above-entitled proceeding, finding that the Respondent had engaged in certain unfair labor practices and recommending that it cease and desist therefrom and take certain affirmative actions as set forth in the attached Administrative Law Judge's Recommended Decision and Order. No exceptions were filed to the Administrative Law Judge's Recommended Decision and Order.

The Assistant Secretary has reviewed the rulings of the Administrative Law Judge made at the hearing and finds that no prejudicial error was committed. The rulings are hereby affirmed. Upon consideration of the Administrative Law Judge's Recommended Decision and Order and the entire record in this case, and noting particularly the absence of exceptions, I hereby adopt the Administrative Law Judge's findings, conclusions, and recommendation, to the extent consistent herewith. 1/

RECOMMENDED DECISION AND ORDER

Statement of the Case

Pursuant to a Notice of Hearing on a Complaint, issued on December 19, 1977, by the Regional Administrator, Labor-Management Services Administration of the U. S. Department of Labor, Kansas City Region, a hearing in this case was conducted on January 31, 1978, at Albuquerque, New Mexico. This proceeding was initiated under Executive Order 11491, as amended (hereinafter called the Order) by the filing of a complaint on August 5, 1977, by William E. Wade, National Representative, American Federation of Government Employees, Local 3512, AFL-CIO (hereinafter the "Union"), against Albuquerque Data Operations Center (hereinafter called Respondent). This Center is part of the Bureau of Data Processing, U. S. Department of Health, Education and Welfare (hereinafter called Agency).

The said complaint charged a violation of section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order as a result of the alleged unilateral change of policy by Respondent concerning the use of agency telephones for incoming calls to union officials.

The parties were represented at the hearing and were afforded full opportunity to be heard, to adduce evidence, and to examine and cross-examine witnesses. Thereafter, both the Union and Respondent made genuine efforts to resolve their dispute prior to decision, requiring a delay in the filing of briefs. The briefs of both parties were received and have been duly considered.

Upon the entire record in this case, and from my observations of the witnesses and their demeanor, and from all of the testimony and evidence adduced at the hearing I make the following findings of fact, conclusions of law and recommendations.

Findings of Fact

The Union herein was at all times material hereto the exclusive collective bargaining representative of certain employees of the Respondent. At all such times and particularly during May, 1977, the parties were negotiating a general labor agreement and were operating only under an Interim Memorandum of Understanding (R-1). The general agreement did not become effective until October 31, 1977.

The Albuquerque Data Operations Center is a field Installation Branch of the Bureau of Data Processing, Social Security Administration, Baltimore, Maryland. It employs approximately 450 persons and incorporates a stand-alone administrative, personnel and labor-relations function to service its staff, including a full time Labor Relations Officer, Mr. John Tony Armijo. This staff person deals with on-site labor-management concerns and is liaison to the agency's Labor-Relations Officer in Baltimore.

On August 5, 1977, a complaint was filed by the Union against Respondent with the Department of Labor (Case No. 63-7603(CA)) alleging a violation of section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order, as the result of an alleged change of policy by the Respondent regarding incoming calls to union officials.

The facts show that on May 11, 1977, Mr. Armijo, the personnel and labor-relations officer of Respondent, called a meeting with the union president and vice-president, the union national representative also being present as an observer. At this meeting the official minutes indicate that he informed the Union that:

... it is now ADOC policy on incoming calls to any union official of 3412 that Mr. Armijo be informed of the call. Mr. Armijo will then return the call, gather the information from the caller, and transmit the information to the Union.

On outgoing calls the Union is to request Mr. Armijo's prior approval before making FTS calls and presenting the reasons why the call is necessary. If Mr. Armijo is so convinced that the call is necessary he will give his approval. (Jt. Exh. No. 2).

This procedure for incoming calls was included in a subsequent memorandum to all supervisors two days after the May 11, 1977, meeting (R-8) as follows:

... Union officials were informed that they had never been given the right to use the FTS facility. Therefore all requests to make an FTS phone call by union officials are to be made to the ADOC Labor Relations Officer and the decision for permission to use the FTS would be made on a case-by-case basis, to assure management control over Operations, Code 0906 time used by union officials. Supervisors, or their employees, who answer incoming FTS calls for union officials are to take the name, FTS number, and message of the caller and the supervisor is to give the information only to the Labor Relations Officer who will then contact the union official to transmit the message. (R. Exh. No. 8, emphasis supplied).

At the May 11, 1978, meeting, at which this policy was announced, the minutes of the meeting indicate that the union president, Dolores Esquivel, stated she felt she could comply with the FTS policy and that the Union had not deviated from that FTS policy in the past (R-8).

Prior to implementation of this policy concerning Federal Communication Calls (hereinafter called FTS calls), testimony indicated that all incoming calls to the union president or other officials were handled in the same way as for all other employees. If the call was an emergency call, it would be given directly to the union president. If it was not, a telephone number would be taken and given to the union president to return the call. No apparent distinction was made regarding FTS and commercial calls. With the advent of the FTS policy concerning outgoing or incoming FTS calls to union officials, any incoming call to union officials required the procedure set forth in the memorandum of May 13, 1977. While this procedure related to FTS calls only, the testimony indicates, and I find, that it was not possible to tell whether an incoming call was on an FTS line or on a commercial line. In effect, therefore, all calls to union officials required the described screening process after May 13, 1977.

Shortly after this telephone policy was implemented, the Union was provided with its own office space at Respondent's facility. On or about May 25, 1977, a commercial telephone was installed in that office for the Union's use.

It is the position of Respondent that its notification to the Union on May 11, 1977, was a reaffirmation of its policy on FTS telephone usage and was not a new position, hence did not require bargaining with the Union. It points to several occasions in past bargaining sessions with the Union when it refused requests by the Union for general FTS telephone capability, on the basis that such utilization is prohibited by agency regulation. In continuing its focus on the issue as one involving FTS usage, it points to the fact that it did allow proper use of FTS by the Union through clearance with its Labor Relations Officer of proposed outgoing FTS calls on a case-by-case basis. This policy which is the subject of the complaint, was undertaken according to Respondent, as a result of direction from the Assistant Bureau Director at the parent office of DHEW to control use and abuse of the FTS capability. A suspected abuse of the FTS capability by the union president, in indicating time spent on calls that may not have been made, was also set forth as a further justifying basis for this new policy. Finally the Respondent argues that when this policy was presented at the May 11, 1977, meeting the Union offered no objections, but rather indicated through its president that it could comply with the policy, and did not indicate any desire to bargain.

The Union disputes the fact that the issue between the parties herein simply is one of FTS usage. It maintains that its charge relates rather to the improper screening of incoming calls to union officials, a new policy about which it was not given the opportunity to negotiate or confer prior to its announcement at the May 11, 1977, meeting and its formal implementation by memo two days after that meeting. As to the union president's indication at that May 11 meeting that she could comply with the announced policy, she testified that this related to outgoing FTS calls, since there never was a policy on incoming calls prior to the meeting.

The Respondent, at the hearing and in its brief, has treated the charge filed by the Union as one dealing primarily with the appropriateness of use of the FTS facility by the Union. However, the charge filed by the Union makes it clear that the essence of its complaint was the procedure for handling of incoming calls to Union officials after May 11, 1977, when the Respondent announced its policy in this respect, and whether this policy constituted a change requiring Respondent to meet and confer or negotiate with the Union prior to its implementation. The matter of FTS usage is discussed herein. However, I conceive the principal issue to be whether the Respondent agency stands in violation of the Executive Order, and specifically section 19(a)(1) and (6), by its failure to meet and confer/negotiate with the Union prior to its implementation of the telephone policy affecting incoming calls to union officials enunciated at the Union-Management meeting of May 11, 1977, which was confirmed by the management memo of May 13, 1977.*

*To avoid misunderstanding in this respect, the parties were instructed at the conclusion of the hearing as to my position in regard to the basis of the complaint and the issues to be addressed, and no questions were raised by either party. (See transcript at p. 219, lines 12-21).

Conclusions of Law

Those portions of section 19(a) of the Order which are pertinent to the issues raised herein provide that Agency management shall not (1) interfere with, restrain, or coerce an employee in the exercise of the rights as assured by the Order, or (6) refuse to consult, confer, or negotiate with a labor organization as required by this Order.

Section 11(a) of the Order creates a mutual duty upon an agency and a union to negotiate in good faith in respect to personnel policies, practices and matters affecting working conditions so far as may be appropriate under applicable laws and regulations.

Section 11(b) provides that in prescribing regulations relating to personnel policies, practices and working conditions an agency shall have due regard for the obligation imposed by paragraph (a) of this section. In addition, section 12(a) establishes that any agreement between an agency and a labor organization is subject to existing or future laws and regulations, by published agency policies and regulations in existence at the time the agreement was approved. Under section 12(b) management officials retain the right in accordance with applicable law and regulation "... (4) to maintain the efficiency of government operations entrusted to them"

However, it is well established that even as to accepted or reserved areas of management, there is an obligation to bargain regarding the implementing procedures which it employs in respect to these areas. United Air Force Electronics Systems Division (AFSC)-and-Local 975, National Federation of Federal Employees, A/SLMR No. 571; Department of Navy, Dallas Naval Air Station-and-American Federation of Government Employees Local Union 2427, AFL-CIO, A/SLMR No. 510. However, the requirement of negotiation as to the implementation and impact of personnel policies and practices and matters affecting working conditions relates only to changes therein. (Department of the Navy, Mare Island Naval Shipyard and Federal Employees Metal Trades Council, AFL-CIO, A/SLMR No. 736) or additions thereto. (Section 11(d) of the Order).

Respondent's defense is that its announcement regarding FTS usage on May 11, 1977, brought about no such changes or additions in policy, practice or working conditions as would require negotiation before implementation. Even if negotiation was required, Respondent argues that the Union requested no such bargaining and even indicated through its president it could comply, thus leaving management free to act.

It must first be observed that under 10(e) of the Order, a labor organization which is authorized to act as exclusive bargaining representative carries a responsibility of representing all interests of all employees in the unit and to this end must be assured of an effective means of communication. Cf. Internal Revenue Service, Office of District Director and National Treasury Employees Union and United States Civil Service Commission, FLRC No. 72 A-50. While the purpose alleged by Respondent for its May 11, 1977, policy statement was laudable, that of controlling the unauthorized use and abuse of FTS calls, its implementation did involve a change in past agency practice concerning incoming calls to union officials.

This is clear from the straight-forward testimony of the Respondent's Labor Relations Officer beginning on page 128 of the transcript:

JUDGE MATERA: So, your testimony then is that prior to May of 1977, insofar as any incoming calls were concerned, whether it be on F.T.S. lines of whether it be on commercial lines, there was no policy that you knew of concerning the control of such incoming calls to union officials?

THE WITNESS: No, Sir.

JUDGE MATERA: No. policy.

THE WITNESS: Number two, I don't think there is a way you can distinguish between a commercial long-distance call and an F.T.S. call.

JUDGE MATERA: Following the May, 1977 meeting then, was the first time you instituted a control on incoming calls to union officials, is that correct?

THE WITNESS: Yes. sir.

JUDGE MATERA: And following May of 1977, then, any incoming calls for union officials, as I understand it now, if it was on an F.T.S. line, had to be reported?

THE WITNESS: To me.

JUDGE MATERA: To you, by the person taking that call, before they could relay it on to a union official, is that correct?

THE WITNESS: Yes, sir.

JUDGE MATERA: You just testified that there isn't any way to tell whether a call coming in on an F.T.S. line or on a commercial line.

THE WITNESS: Let's put it this way. I can't distinguish, maybe someone else can, I don't know.

This impact of the policy of Respondent was the essence of the complaint filed by the Union. As the testimony from witnesses for the Union as well as Respondent made clear at the hearing, the overall effect of the announced policy was to provide for the screening not only of FTS calls to union officials, but of all potential calls to union officials since it was not possible to tell whether an incoming call was on a FTS or commercial line. Thus, on all calls to union officials, it became the policy of the Respondent to require that its Labor Relations Officer be informed of the call, return the call, gather the information from the caller, and transmit this information to the Union.

I conclude from the record that this procedure clearly differed from that utilized by Respondent prior to the May 11, 1977, meeting, when messages taken on non-emergency calls for union officials were then directly relayed to that official to return, in the same manner as calls for all other personnel. I also find that the unilaterally implemented procedure produced a significant interference with the Union's exercise of its rights under the Order. It was the testimony of one witness, (beginning on page 78 of the transcript) Louis Montenegro, a national representative of the Union, that he experienced repeated difficulties and delays in trying to contact the local president of the Union at Respondent's facility after the implementation of this procedure. In addition, I find that the adopted procedure constituted a potential breach of confidentiality in the required screening of callers by the Respondent's Labor Relations Officer so as to constitute a violation of the obligation of Respondent to provide an effective means of communication to the Union, as required under 10(e) of the Order. The requirement that all persons desiring to speak with a union official give to the Respondent's Labor Relations Officer the nature of their business would to my mind produce a chilling effect on the free communication necessary to a free, vigorous and healthy agency-union relationship. While the Labor Relations Officer testified that this aspect of the stated policy at the May 11, 1977, meeting was in the nature of a facetious remark exchanged with the union officials (T. 132), this requirement to gather information from Union callers nevertheless appeared on the written memorandum to supervisors on May 13, 1977, formally implementing this policy (R-8). Such a policy would have the further coercive effect of tending to dissuade employees or others with whom the Union must communicate, from consulting with the Union or seeking its assistance because of apprehension regarding confidentiality. Cf. Veterans Administration, Veterans Administration Data Processing Center and National Federation of Federal Employees, Ind., Local 1745, A/SLMR No. 663. This unilateral action by Respondent would further restrain the Union in the exercise of its responsibilities under the Order by evidencing to employees the fact that the activity could act to change conditions of employment that are properly subject to negotiation without regard to its obligation to consult with the employees' exclusive representative. Cf. United States Air Force, Kingsley Field, Klamath Falls, Oregon and National Federation of Federal Employees, Local 704, Independent (NFFE) A/SLMR No. 443.

The Respondent argues that even if there was a duty to bargain concerning the matter in issue, since the Union requested no bargaining and at the May 11, 1977, meeting indicated it could comply with the FTS policy, the Respondent was free to act and any requirement to bargain was in essence waived.

A waiver of the critical right to negotiate must be shown in a clear and unmistakable fashion. Cf. NASA Kennedy Space Center, Florida and American Federation of Government Employees (AFL-CIO), A/SLMR No. 223; Utah Army National Guard, Salt Lake City and American Federation of Federal Employees, Local 2724, A/SLMR, No. 966.

Having found that the implementation and impact of the change in phone procedure required negotiation by management prior to its inception, it follows that sufficient prior notice and the meaningful opportunity by the Union to request negotiation should have been afforded. This further presupposes the furnishing to the Union of sufficient information to allow the Union to prepare meaningful proposals in respect to the proposed change.

Neither meaningful notice nor information of any kind was given to the Union concerning the meeting of May 11, 1977. There was no apparent opportunity for the union officials to analyze the impact of the proposed change prior to its announcement at the May 11 meeting. As the minutes of that meeting indicate, the labor relations officer served only to announce "... that it is now the ADOC policy..." (R-8). (Emphasis supplied). The procedure for incoming calls was not open to discussion and was made official throughout the agency two days later with the May 13, 1977, memorandum to the supervisors. Under those circumstances, the statement by the Union president that she felt that she could comply with FTS policy and that the Union had not deviated from that policy hardly constituted a meaningful waiver of the Union's right to negotiate. As she explained in her testimony at the hearing, she was referring to the policy as to outgoing FTS calls. With the lack of notice or information to the Union prior to this meeting, I find this explanation at trial perfectly reasonable and reject any notion that there was a waiver of the duty to bargain.

To summarize, I find that by unilaterally implementing the procedure concerning incoming calls to union officials, Respondent failed to provide Complainant with appropriate, timely and meaningful notice, and an opportunity to bargain concerning new procedures for screening incoming calls to union officials, and the impact of such procedures upon adversely affected employees, in violation of section 19(a) (6) of the Order.

I further conclude that by unilaterally implementing a new procedure regarding incoming telephone calls to union officials, Respondent violated section 19(a)(1) and 10(e) of the Order in that its conduct interfered with Complainant's effective means of communication, restraining and coercing employees in the exercise of the rights assured by the Order.

As noted above, several weeks after the incoming call procedure was established, Respondent provided the Union with a separate office and a commercial telephone. In light of the testimony by the union's president that she spends about 90 percent of her time performing duties on behalf of the Union, the basis for insuring of free and effective communication already exists. However, testimony at the hearing also established that the policy in question is still in effect "even today" for any incoming calls received outside of the Union phone. Thus, even though the Respondent here has established the means to avoid future violations of the Act by this commendable provision to the Union of a separate office and phone, to effectuate the purposes of the Order, other unit employees should be clearly informed that the Respondent will not continue the screening of any incoming calls to union officials, and this acknowledgement by Respondent will act to assure the discontinuance of any future similar occurrences. Since incoming calls not directed to the Union office should be few in number with increased knowledge of the Union office number, the direct transmittal of these calls to the union office, or informing the caller of the union office number should create little, if any, burden or disruption of Respondent's operation. I therefore recommend adoption of the Order set forth below.

PURSUANT TO SECTION 6 OF EXECUTIVE ORDER 11491, AS AMENDED

INTERNAL REVENUE SERVICE AND
INTERNAL REVENUE SERVICE,
SOUTH CAROLINA DISTRICT OFFICE
A/SLMR No. 1081

This case involved an unfair labor practice complaint filed by the National Treasury Employees Union (NTEU) and NTEU Chapter 55 alleging that the Respondent violated Section 19(a)(1) and (2) of the Order by revoking the eligibility of two employees to serve in the capacity of Acting Group Manager in retaliation for their cancelling U.S. Government Savings Bond allotments.

The Administrative Law Judge concluded that the Respondents' conduct was violative of Section 19(a)(1) and (2) of the Order. In this regard, he found that the Respondents' removal of the two employees from the list of those eligible to serve as Acting Group Manager was taken as a reprisal for their discontinuing their savings bond allotments. He further found that as the employees' bond cancellations constituted activity sponsored by the NTEU, undertaken to support the NTEU's attempt to secure a favorable agreement with the Respondent, such activity was protected by Section 1(a) of the Order.

Noting particularly the absence of exceptions, the Assistant Secretary adopted the Administrative Law Judge's findings, conclusions and recommendations. Accordingly, he ordered the Respondent to cease and desist from engaging in the conduct found violative of the Order and to take certain affirmative actions.

The Assistant Secretary has reviewed the rulings of the Administrative Law Judge made at the hearing and finds that no prejudicial error was committed. The rulings are hereby affirmed. RECOMMENDED DECISION AND ORDER

Preliminary Statement

This proceeding arises under Executive Order 11491, as amended (hereinafter referred to as the Order). Pursuant to the Regulations of the Assistant Secretary of Labor for Labor-Management Relations (hereinafter referred to as the Assistant Secretary), a Notice of Hearing on Complaint issued on September 27, 1977 with reference to alleged violations of Sections 19(a)(1) and (2) of the Order. The complaint, filed on July 17, 1977 by the National Treasury Employees Union and NTEU Chapter 55 (hereinafter referred to as the Union or Complainant) alleged that Internal Revenue Service and Internal Revenue Service South Carolina District (hereinafter referred to as the Activity or Respondent) violated the Order by revoking two employees' eligibility to serve in the capacity of Acting Group Manager in retaliation for their cancelling U.S. Government savings bond allotments.

At the hearing held on November 9, 1977 the parties were represented and afforded full opportunity to adduce evidence, and call, examine and cross-examine witnesses and argue orally. Briefs were filed by the parties and have been duly considered.

Upon the entire record in this matter, my observation of the witnesses and their demeanor and from my evaluation of the evidence, I make the following findings of fact and conclusions of law.

Findings and Conclusions

At all times material hereto the Union has been the exclusive collective bargaining representative of various employees located within the Activity's Columbia, South Carolina District. During the Fall of 1976 the Activity and the Union were engaged in negotiations for a new multi-district agreement. The Union concluded that an impasse in negotiations had occurred and by letter to all members dated November 2, 1977, the Union's President urged that members show a common resolve, solidarity and support for the Union's objectives by, inter alia, notifying the Activity's Personnel Office that they were cancelling their U.S. saving bond allotments. Some of the Activity's supervisory employees, including Herman Lesslie, a Greenville, South Carolina Group Manager, retained their membership in the Union and accordingly, they also received a copy of the Union's November 2 letter announcing the bond cancellation drive.

Dan Brown and Roger Bremer, employees of the Activity's Columbia District, Greenville Group 1, audit unit, responded to the Union's appeal and in support thereof, cancelled their bond allotments. The cancellations were transmitted through a local Union steward to the Activity on November 15, 1976. At this time Revenue Agent Brown and Bremer worked in Group Manager Lesslie's unit and were authorized to act as Group Manager in Lesslie's absence. Employees deemed qualified to be Acting Group Manager were designated on a list posted by Lesslie. Brown had been frequently designated Acting Group Manager, his latest designation having occurred during a three day period in early November. Bremer was less senior in service than Brown and others qualified for Acting Group Manager and accordingly, had never been given an opportunity to act for Lesslie in that position.

On November 16, 1976, Lesslie received a telephone call from his superior, J.T. Epting, Audit Division Chief. Epting told Lesslie that Brown and Bremer could no longer be designated as Acting Group Manager. Lesslie asked for the reasons this action was being taken and Epting informed him that he could probably "guess why." At this time Epting was aware that Brown and Bremer had cancelled their bond allotments. Thereupon, Lesslie on November 16 published another list of employees eligible to act as Group Manager in his absence. The November 16 list simply revised the prior list which had been in effect since June 26, 1976 by deleting Brown and Bremer's names, leaving two employees on the eligibility list.

On that same day Brown questioned Lesslie as to why his name was not included among those eligible to serve as Acting Group Manager. Lesslie replied that Epting ordered him to remove Brown's name and acknowledged not knowing Epting's motive. Lesslie indicated that he thought the Review Staff 1/ had complained that Brown and Bremer made direct contacts with that group without getting the necessary clearance and accordingly, checked into the matter. Review Staff informed Lesslie that it made no complaints about Brown or Bremer. Brown suggested that Epting ordered his removal from the list because he cancelled his bond allotment and Lesslie replied that perhaps, that was the reason.

1/ Review Staff examines Audit Division cases to assure that proper and accurate procedures have been followed and provides assistance to Agents in resolving technical problems.

Agent Bremer 2/ met with Lesslie on November 17, 1976 and questioned his removal from the Acting Group Manager list. Lesslie said he had received a telephone call and was told to remove him. Lesslie did not disclose that it was Epting who called. Bremer asked why had the party calling ordered him removal and Lesslie said that he also asked that question and was told, "guess why." Bremer said he felt the action was taken in retaliation for cancelling his bond allotment. According to Bremer's undisputed testimony:

"(Lesslie) in effect told me that he didn't know that what he had just done in removing me was retaliatory, but he did tell me he had gone to the trouble of calling review staff to find out what it was that I had done that warranted my removal and that review staff didn't know why I was being removed."

The record evidence establishes and I find that Brown and Bremer's work competency, habits and performance met the Activity's standards for Acting Group Manager eligibility throughout the period June 26 through November 16, 1976. In addition, I reject the various explanations offered by Respondent regarding the reasons why Brown and Bremer were removed from the list of those employees eligible to serve as Acting Group Manager, such as inordinate or unauthorized contacts with Review Staff, poor attendance or excess utilization of time in disposing cases. 3/ Accordingly, based upon the Activity's knowledge of Brown and Bremer's bond allotment cancellations and the reason therefore, the timing of the Activity's action taken the very next day after the cancellations and the lack of any credible or persuasive reason for such action, I find and conclude that the Activity's removing employees Brown and Bremer from the list of those eligible to serve as Acting Group Manager,

2/ At the time of the hearing Bremer was on leave without pay status, having made application for disability retirement in May 1977.

3/ Neither Lesslie nor Epting testified at the hearing, Epting having died sometime previous thereto. However, internal agency memoranda from Lesslie and Epting, dated November 20, 1976 and December 14, 1976 respectively, were offered and received in evidence without objection.

therefore depriving them of being afforded an opportunity to serve in that capacity, 4/ was taken as a reprisal for their discontinuing their savings bond allotments.

I further find and conclude that Brown and Bremer's bond cancellations, sponsored by the Union and undertaken to support the Union's attempt to secure a favorable agreement with the Activity, was conduct protected by Section 1(a) of the Order. 5/ In these circumstances I conclude that the Activity's action against Brown and Bremer constituted a violation of Sections 19(a)(1) and (2) of the Order, as alleged.

Respondent contends in its brief that assuming a reprisal for engaging in protected activity occurred, no violation of the Order can be found herein since by choosing to cancel their bond allotments, Brown and Bremer aligned themselves with the Union and thereby created a conflict of interest if allowed to serve in the position of acting group manager. Respondent argues that "(i)t is widely known that the purchasing of bonds is an activity greatly encouraged by the United States Government, especially in its role as an employer. As with any other management program, the bond program is disseminated through and managed by agency management." Thus, Respondent concludes it was not obligated to have a manager who was "actively campaigning" against a management program.

However, there is no evidence in this case that, at the Activity, it was a group manager's responsibility to support and encourage the purchase of savings bonds by payroll deduction. Nor can cancelling a bond allotment under the circumstances herein be equated so readily to "actively campaigning" against a management program. Moreover, the record evidence does not indicate that this "conflict of interest" consideration was any part of Respondent's reason

4/ When being considered for promotion into a management position, more favorable consideration is given to an employee who has served as an acting manager than to an employee who has not served in that capacity. Being found eligible to serve as a manager is, obviously, a necessary prerequisite to actual service.

5/ Section 1(a) of the Order provides, in relevant part, that employees ". . . (have) the right, freely and without fear of penalty or reprisal, to form, join, and assist a labor organization or to refrain from any such activity, and each employee shall be protected in the exercise of this right."

for finding Brown and Bremer's ineligibility to act as group manager. Indeed, this contention appears for the first time in Respondent's post-hearing brief. Accordingly, it is rejected.

Recommendations

Having found that Respondent has engaged in conduct violative of Sections 19(a)(1) and (2) of the Order through the revoking of employees Brown and Bremer's eligibility to serve as Acting Group Manager, I recommend that the Assistant Secretary adopt the order as hereinafter set forth which is designed to effectuate the policies of the Order.

A/SLMR No. 1082

This case involved a petition for consolidation of units filed by Local 3272, American Federation of Government Employees, AFL-CIO (AFGE Local 3272) seeking to consolidate eight units for which it is the current exclusive representative into a consolidated unit consisting of all nonprofessional employees of the Bureau of Field Operations, Social Security Administration Region V-B District and Branch Offices located in Flint, Lansing, Traverse City, Muskegon, Kalamazoo, Jackson, Mt. Pleasant and Grand Rapids, Michigan. The Activity contended, essentially, that the proposed consolidated unit was not appropriate because it does not meet the criteria established by Section 10(b) of the Order.

The Assistant Secretary noted that in its review of appeals from certain of the Assistant Secretary's decisions involving the consolidation of units, the Federal Labor Relations Council (Council) construed the Assistant Secretary's establishment of a presumption in favor of consolidation "---as a recognition and affirmation of the strong policy in the Federal labor-management relations program of facilitating consolidation---." Based on the facts and policy considerations involved, the Assistant Secretary found that the proposed consolidated unit was appropriate for the purpose of exclusive recognition under the Order. He noted that all employees in the unit sought share a common mission, common overall supervision, uniform job classifications, essentially common working conditions and uniform personnel policies and labor relations practices. Under these circumstances, the Assistant Secretary found that the employees in the petitioned for consolidated unit shared a clear and identifiable community of interest.

Furthermore, he found that as all employees are serviced by the same personnel office, and the Assistant Regional Commissioner for Field Operations has the responsibility for providing regional leadership and line supervision in Region V-B, the proposed consolidated unit would promote effective dealings. Moreover, noting that the Assistant Regional Commissioner for Field Operations coordinates the operation of the components within the proposed consolidated unit, and provides leadership and direction over all the components in the proposed unit, the Assistant Secretary found that the proposed consolidated unit would promote the efficiency of the agency's operations. Finally, the Assistant Secretary noted that the petitioned for consolidated unit, which provided for bargaining in a single unit, rather than in the existing eight bargaining units, would promote a more comprehensive bargaining unit structure and reduce fragmentation.

Accordingly, the Assistant Secretary directed an election in the consolidated unit found appropriate.

DECISION AND DIRECTION OF ELECTION

Upon a petition duly filed under Section 6 of Executive Order 11491, as amended, a hearing was held before Hearing Officer Charles Latham. The Hearing Officer's rulings made at the hearing are free from prejudicial error and are hereby affirmed.

Upon consideration of the entire record in the subject case, including briefs filed by the parties, the Assistant Secretary finds:

The Petitioner, Local 3272, American Federation of Government Employees, AFL-CIO, herein called AFGE Local 3272, seeks to consolidate eight units for which it is the current exclusive representative into a consolidated unit consisting of all nonprofessional employees of Social Security Administration (SSA) District and Branch Offices located in Flint, Lansing, Traverse City, Muskegon, Kalamazoo, Jackson, Mt. Pleasant and Grand Rapids, Michigan, excluding management officials, confidential employees, employees engaged in Federal personnel work in other than a purely clerical capacity, and supervisors as defined in Executive Order 11491, as amended. The Activity contends that the proposed consolidated unit is not appropriate for the purpose of exclusive recognition because it does not meet the criteria established by Section 10(b) of the Order as the employees in the existing units do not share a community of interest separate and apart from employees in other District Offices within SSA Region V-B. It further asserts that the proposed consolidated unit is not geographically or administratively coherent and, therefore, would not promote effective dealings and efficiency of agency operations, and that it is based solely upon AFGE Local 3272's extent of organization in that a sizeable proportion of the employees excluded are in existing bargaining units represented by other AFGE locals in other districts within the same geographical area. If the consolidated unit petitioned for is found to be appropriate, the Activity requests that an election be held.

The Regional Office of Region V-B of the Bureau of Field Operations of the SSA is located in Chicago, Illinois, is under the direction of an Assistant Regional Commissioner for Field Operations, 1/ and covers the States of Michigan and Ohio. Region V-B is further divided into Area Offices located in Areas 7, 8 and 14. The Area Offices, which are headed by Area Directors, are further divided into District Offices, Branch Offices and Teleservice Centers which have managers who report to their respective Area Directors. Area Directors, as well as District Managers, perform their duties under the general administrative supervision and direction of the Assistant Regional Commissioner. District Managers have been delegated and effectively exercise day-to-day authority over the District Offices, including the authority to bargain with labor organizations, to handle grievances, and to negotiate with labor organizations for agreements covering employees of their facilities, but they are responsible to the Assistant Regional Commissioner. 2/

Of the existing units represented by AFGE Local 3272 in Region V-B, seven are located within Area 8 and one is located within Area 14. The record reveals that all district and branch offices include employees with similar job classifications, performing similar work, and that all employees throughout Region V-B enjoy common overall supervision, uniform personnel policies and practices and essentially similar working conditions, which may vary from area to area depending upon the workload.

In its review of appeals from certain of the Assistant Secretary's decisions involving the consolidation of units, 3/ the Federal Labor Relations Council (Council) construed the Assistant Secretary's establishment of a presumption in favor of consolidations "---as a recognition and affirmation of the strong policy in the Federal labor-management relations program of facilitating consolidation---." The Council noted that such affirmation accurately reflected its policy as set forth in its 1975 Report and Recommendations of facilitating the consolidation of existing units which conform to the appropriate unit criteria contained in Section 10(b) of the Order.

Noting particularly the clear policy pronouncement of the Council in the consolidation of units area, I find that the petitioned for consolidated unit, which encompasses all of the units in Region V-B represented exclusively by AFGE Local 3272, is appropriate for the purpose of exclusive recognition

1/ The Assistant Regional Commissioner for Field Operations was formerly known as the Regional Representative.

2/ The record discloses that personnel services for all employees are provided by the Regional Personnel Office of the Department of Health, Education, and Welfare.

3/ Education Division, Department of Health, Education and Welfare, Washington, D.C., A/SLMR No. 822 (1977), FLRC No. 77A-88; Internal Revenue Service, Washington, D.C. and National Treasury Employees Union, A/SLMR No. 831 (1977), FLRC No. 77A-112; and Bureau of Field Operations, Office of Program Operations, Social Security Administration, Department of Health, Education and Welfare, Chicago Region V-A, A/SLMR No. 876 (1977), FLRC No. 77A-136.

under the Order. Thus, all the employees within the proposed consolidated unit share common overall supervision, essentially similar job classifications and working conditions, and uniform personnel policies and labor relations practices. Under these circumstances, I find that the employees in the proposed consolidated unit share a clear and identifiable community of interest. Further, as all employees of Region V-B are serviced by the same personnel office and the Assistant Regional Commissioner, who serves as a member of the SSA Regional Commissioner's executive staff, has the responsibility for providing regional leadership and line supervision for planning, organizing and directing district, branch and teleservice operations in Region V-B, I find that the proposed consolidated unit will promote effective dealings. Moreover, as the Assistant Regional Commissioner coordinates the operations of the components within the proposed consolidated unit, and provides regional leadership and line direction for these units, I find that the proposed consolidated unit will promote the efficiency of the agency's operations. Finally, I find that the proposed consolidated unit, which provides for bargaining in a single unit, rather than in the existing eight bargaining units, will promote a more comprehensive bargaining unit structure and reduce fragmentation.

Accordingly, I find that the following employees constitute a unit appropriate for the purpose of exclusive recognition under Executive Order 11491, as amended: 4/

All employees of the Bureau of Field Operations, Social Security Administration Region V-B District and Branch Offices located in Flint, Lansing, Traverse City, Muskegon, Kalamazoo, Jackson, Mt. Pleasant, and Grand Rapids, Michigan, excluding professional employees, management officials, confidential employees, employees engaged in Federal personnel work in other than a purely clerical capacity, and supervisors as defined in Executive Order 11491, as amended.

DIRECTION OF ELECTION

An election by secret ballot shall be conducted among employees in the unit found appropriate, as early as possible, but not later than 60 days from the date below. The appropriate Area Administrator shall supervise the election, subject to the Assistant Secretary's Regulations. SUMMARY OF DECISION AND ORDER OF THE ASSISTANT SECRETARY

PURSUANT TO SECTION 6 OF EXECUTIVE ORDER 11491, AS AMENDED

VETERANS ADMINISTRATION HOSPITAL,
LINCOLN, NEBRASKA
A/SLMR No.1083

This consolidated proceeding arose upon the filing of two unfair labor practice complaints by Local 2219, American Federation of Government Employees, AFL-CIO (Complainant). One complaint alleged, in substance, that the Respondent had refused to bargain about the establishment of a new tour of duty in the Respondent's operating room late shift in violation of Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order. The second complaint alleged, in substance, that the Respondent violated Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order when it decided to continue the revised schedule permanently despite an oral promise made by a supervisor of the Respondent to certain members of the operating room staff that it would maintain the revised hours only for a trial three month period after which the impact of the change would be reviewed before a decision would be made on a permanent change.

The Administrative Law Judge found that the Respondent had not violated Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order. He recommended dismissal of the first complaint as it was inconsistent with the second complaint which conceded that the change in tours of duty had been agreed to by the Complainant. He also recommended dismissal of the second complaint finding: that the supervisor who allegedly promised to review the change before it was permanently implemented lacked the authority to bind the Respondent to such a promise; that even if there was an agreement to reconsider the change, the Respondent had fulfilled its bargaining obligation when it held meetings with the Complainant's members subsequent to the effective date of the change; that the establishment of a new tour of duty was integrally related to and consequently determinative of the Respondent's staffing patterns, and, thus, was not a subject on which the Respondent was required to negotiate except with respect to impact, but that the Complainant never requested such impact negotiation; and that, in any event, there was nothing remaining to negotiate on impact.

Noting particularly the absence of exceptions, the Assistant Secretary adopted the findings, conclusions and recommendation of the Administrative Law Judge and ordered that the complaints be dismissed.

The Assistant Secretary has reviewed the rulings of the Administrative Law Judge made at the hearing and finds that no prejudicial error was committed. The rulings are hereby affirmed. RECOMMENDED DECISION AND ORDER

These cases arise under Executive Order 11491 as amended. Case No. 60-5180 ("the first case") was initiated by a complaint dated May 9, 1977 and filed May 16, 1977. Case No. 60-5404 ("the second case") was initiated by a complaint dated September 15, 1977 and filed September 19, 1977. In the first case the complaint alleged a violation of Sections 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Executive Order by the Respondent changing the working hours of certain employees on December 1, 1976 without negotiating with the Complainant, their collective representative. In the second case the complaint, by the same Complainant signed by the same officer against the same Respondent, alleged a violation of Sections 19(a)(1) and (6) by the Respondent advising the personnel involved that it had decided to continue the revised hours despite an agreement on November 2, 1976 with the Complainant to put the revised hours in effect for a period of 90 days after which the impact of the change would be reviewed by the Respondent and the employees involved before a decision would be made on a permanent change.

On November 23, 1977 the Regional Administrator issued an order consolidating the cases and the same day issued a Notice of Hearing for a hearing to be held December 15, 1977 in Lincoln, Nebraska. Hearings were held on that day in that City. Both sides were represented and presented witnesses who were examined and cross-examined and offered exhibits which were received in evidence. Both parties made closing arguments and filed timely briefs.

Facts

The Complainant is the certified exclusive representative of a unit of Respondent's employees, including non-supervisory nurses. Ten employees in the unit are employed in the operating room. Five of them are Registered Nurses and five are nursing assistants known as Technicians. Their immediate supervisor is a supervisory Registered Nurse.

As provided in the collective agreement between the parties, there are regular monthly meetings between the Complainant and management officials. 1/ There are occasional additional such meetings. Also, the President of the Local is authorized to consult with the chief of a service or higher authority on some matters. 2/ The agreement has a special provision for nurses; it authorizes them to discuss individual or group problems with their immediate supervisor and the next higher level supervisor. 3/ It was also accepted practice for the nurses to take up individual or group problems with higher authority than provided in the agreement.

Prior to 1976 the nurses and Technicians assigned to the operating room all worked from 7:00 A.M. to 3:30 P.M. Monday through Friday. Early in 1976 the tours of duty were changed so that four of the five RNs and Technicians continued to work from 7:00 A.M. to 3:30 P.M. but the fifth would work from 8:00 A.M. to 4:30 P.M. Which one of the nurses and Technicians would work the late shift was left to them. The Technicians preferred a regular rotation; each of them would work the late shift every fifth week, and the Respondent accepted that arrangement. The nurses preferred a more flexible arrangement. Each month a schedule would be arranged for the monthly period from the 15th of one month to the 15th of the next month. The nurses would work out among themselves who would work the late shift on which days, in accordance with their own convenience and preference, and the Respondent accepted that arrangement.

If an operation had to be performed commencing after 4:30 P.M. the Respondent would call a Registered Nurse and a Technician to report for overtime work. Sometimes the persons called, principally the Technicians, would not return the calls made to them and the operation would be performed inadequately staffed. For that reason, and to reduce the amount of overtime, the Respondent decided to change the late shift to 9:00 A.M. to 5:30 A.M., a starting and quitting time one hour later than then in effect. Shortly before November 2, 1976 the supervisory Registered Nurse in the operating room had a meeting with the others in the operating room and informed them of the intended change. The RNs indicated disapproval, and the Technicians supported the RNs.

On November 2, 1976 the Respondent had a special meeting with the Complainant to advise it of the change in the late shift effective the first Sunday after November 30. The Complainant interposed no objection and made no proposals and did not initiate any discussions concerning the impact of the change, then or thereafter. After the formal announcement Katherine Deines, the supervisory Registered Nurse in the operating room, again met with the operating room RNs who again voiced opposition to the projected change. The opposition was based on dislike of having to work sometimes as late as 5:30 P.M. buttressed with the argument that their services were needed more between 8:00 A.M. and 9:00 A.M. than between 4:30 P.M. and 5:30 P.M. when there would normally be little or nothing to do. Deines, who had initiated the change with her superior officials, suggested to the RNs that they should not be too concerned because after about three months or so she would re-evaluate the success of the change in the tour of duty. To the knowledge of the nurses and the Complainant, Deines did not have authority to bind the Respondent to an agreement or statement of policy. No representative of the Respondent authorized to commit the Respondent to anything ever represented that the new tour of duty was being established for a trial period of three months after which it would be reconsidered in consultation with the Complainant.

2/ J. Exh. 1, Art. 3, Sec. 5.2, p. 7.
3/ J. Exh. 1, Art. 15, Sec. 8, p. 31.

Assignments to the new shift of 9:00 A.M. to 5:30 P.M. were made in the same manner as assignments had been made to the previous 8:00 A.M. to 4:30 P.M. shift, i.e., the Technicians were assigned to the late shift every fifth week, as they preferred, and the RNs worked out among themselves monthly which one of them would work the late shift on each scheduled work-day in accordance with their own needs and preferences. Each of them works the late shift about equally with the others.

Around February 1, 1977 the nurses in the operating room discussed with Deines their concern over the continuation of the new shift and over three other matters. It was agreed that Deines would arrange to have them present these "areas of concern" directly to the Hospital Director, and this was done. The nurses chose Mrs. Doris Kincheloe, one of the RNs in the operating room, to be their spokesperson at the meeting. On February 2, 1977 a meeting was held with the Hospital Director and the "areas of concern" presented and taken under advisement. On March 9, 1977 a meeting was held again. The Hospital Director stated that the 9:00 A.M. to 5:30 P.M. shift would be continued because it avoided substantial overtime. 4/

The Complainant and the Respondent have regular monthly meetings and occasional special meetings. The Chief of Nursing

4/ R. Exh. 3, item 3.

Services has regular monthly meetings with the nursing stewards. Since the announcement of the new shift on November 2, 1976 at no time has the Union attempted to negotiate concerning the impact of the establishment of the new tour of duty. The operating room nurses have discussed the new shift with management but only to oppose it, not to discuss or negotiate its impact or the procedures for implementing it. The Complainant expressly does not contend that the new tour of duty has been applied unequally or unjustly. 5/

Discussion and Conclusions

The first complaint alleges that the Respondent violated Sections 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Executive Order by changing the working hours on December 1, 1976 without negotiating. The second complaint, signed by the same Complainant official who signed the first complaint, alleges that on November 2, 1976 the Complainant agreed to the change. The first complaint should therefore be dismissed; making a change by agreement is not a refusal to negotiate.

The second complaint alleges also that management's original proposal had been to initiate the change of one of the five shifts by one hour for a 90-day period at the end of which its impact would be reviewed by management "and the employees involved" with "consideration given to both viewpoints before a decision was made on the permanent implementation of the shift change." I have found that no one with authority to bind the Respondent ever suggested such a commitment, and Deines, the Nursing Superintendent in the operating room, suggested only that she would re-evaluate the success of the change after about three months or so. There is no evidence she did not do so, and I find that she did.

Secondly, if there was such an agreement, it is not alleged, and I could not find, that it included an agreement that the Respondent would revert to the earlier late shift while "management and the employees involved" reviewed the "overall impact". Even if there was an agreement to discuss and reconsider after three months, it was fulfilled. Management and "the employees involved" reviewed the situation after two months and after three months preceding their determination that the new late shift would continue. Around February 1, 1977, two months after the commencement of the new late shift, the nurses in the operating room discussed its continuation with Deines, their supervisor. Deines arranged for them to discuss it further with the Hospital Director and this was done on February 2. On March 9, 1977 they met again and discussed it with the Hospital Director and he concluded that the new shift should continue in order to keep down overtime.

Furthermore, the change in the late shift was an integral part of the staffing pattern of the operating room in performing that part of the work of the agency. As such, the change was not a subject on which the Respondent was required to negotiate by the Executive Order. 6/ Its only obligation was to negotiate, on request, concerning the impact of the change of shift. But it was never requested to do so. While the change of shift was discussed a number of times, neither the Complainant nor "the employees involved" ever raised the question of impact. The only suggestion of the nurses was that the change be rescinded, a determination not required to be negotiated.

Finally, it is difficult to find an impact to negotiate. The employees had exactly the impact, qua impact, they wanted. The Technicians wanted a strict weekly rotation in the late shift, and management concurred. The RNs preferred working out monthly among themselves which of them would be assigned to the late shift on which days, and management concurred in that arrangement also. I can find nothing remaining on which to negotiate concerning the impact of the change in the late shift.

RECOMMENDATION

Both complaints should be dismissed.

SUMMARY OF DECISION AND ORDER OF THE ASSISTANT SECRETARY
PURSUANT TO SECTION 6 OF EXECUTIVE ORDER 11491, AS AMENDED

OGDEN AIR LOGISTICS CENTER,
HILL AIR FORCE BASE, UTAH
A/SLMR No. 1084

This case involved an unfair labor practice complaint filed by the American Federation of Government Employees, AFL-CIO, Local 1592 (AFGE) alleging essentially that the Respondent violated Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order when it implemented a new policy for lowering the average grade of unit employees without giving the AFGE an opportunity to bargain over the impact and implementation of such change.

The Administrative Law Judge found that the Respondent had not violated Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order. In this regard, he found that the Respondent notified the AFGE of the proposed new policy on October 6, 1976, and requested the AFGE's comments. The AFGE did not respond to the communication of October 6, 1976, or request bargaining on the new policy or the impact it would have on unit employees before its implementation in January 1977. Under these circumstances, the Administrative Law Judge recommended that the complaint be dismissed in its entirety.

Noting particularly the absence of exceptions, the Assistant Secretary adopted the findings, conclusions and recommendations of the Administrative Law Judge and ordered that the complaint be dismissed.

RECOMMENDED DECISION AND ORDER

Preliminary Statement

This proceeding arises under Executive Order 11491, as amended. Pursuant to the regulations of the Assistant Secretary of Labor for Labor-Management Relations, a Notice of Hearing on Complaint was issued on December 29, 1977, with reference to alleged violations of sections 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order.

This case was initiated by a complaint filed on October 7, 1977, by the American Federation of Government Employees AFL-CIO, Local 1592 (hereinafter the "Union") against Ogden Air Logistics Center, Hill Air Force Base, Utah (hereinafter the "Respondent").

Hearing was held in Ogden, Utah, on February 13, 1978, at which time all parties were represented and were afforded full opportunity to be heard, adduce evidence, examine and cross-examine witnesses, and argue orally. Thereafter, both parties filed briefs which have been considered. Upon the entire record, from my observation of the witnesses and their demeanor, and from all of the testimony and evidence, I make the following findings, conclusions, and recommendations.

Issues

The issues presented for decision are as follows:

1. Did the Respondent refuse to negotiate the impact of its plan/policy of General Schedule average grade reduction? If so, was this refusal in violation of section 19(a)(1) and section 19(a)(6) of Executive Order 11491, as amended?
2. Was the union notified prior to 8 July 1977, regarding the above-mentioned plan/policy as alleged by the Respondent and denied by the Union? If the Complainant was notified, did the silence on this matter until 8 July 1977, constitute a waiver of its rights to negotiate the impact of said plan/policy?
3. The Respondent alleges that said plan/policy does not have an adverse impact on the work force. If so, is the Respondent obligated to consult, confer or negotiate on the impact of said plan/policy?

Findings of Fact

1. At all times relevant to this proceeding, the Union was the exclusive representative of various civilian employees at Ogden Air Logistics Center, Hill Air Force Base, Utah.

2. For several years prior to 1976, Respondent had been engaged in a program to control and exercise restraint on increases in GS average grade and salary trends. Respondent's action was prompted by mandate from the President of the United States, Secretary of Defense and down through the chain of command to the Commander at the Ogden Air Logistics Center.

3. On June 26, 1974, a regulation was issued by Respondent to effectuate this mandate. The June 26, 1974, regulation is identified as AFR 40-312.

4. In 1976, it became clear to Respondent that AFR 40-312 would have to be supplemented in order to accomplish the goal of controlling the increase in the General Schedule Average Grade.

5. On October 6, 1976, Respondent mailed copies of a proposed supplement to AFR 40-312 to the various organizations at Hill Air Force Base including the Union. By letter of transmittal of the proposed supplement, Respondent requested "your coordination and/or comments on the attached proposed AFR 40-312/Ogden ALC Supplement by 15 October 1976." The Union did not respond.

6. In January, 1977, AFR 40-312/ALC Supplement 1 was published and distributed by Respondent.

7. As the months went on, Respondent became aware that the requirements of the regulation were not being achieved. It was determined that the Commanding General should issue a letter to the major organizations of Hill Air Force Base calling attention to AFR 40-312/ALC Supplement 1 and to include the goals they were to achieve as provided for in the supplement.

8. A letter was prepared for the Commanding General's signature. Clair E. Frischknecht, Chief of the Position Management Section in the Civil Personnel Office of Respondent, called Neil B. Breeden, President of the Local Union, and made an appointment to discuss the regulation. On July 11, 1977, Frischknecht went to the Union office and gave Breeden a copy of the proposed letter from the Commanding General along with a staff summary sheet, and advised him that these were, in effect, a "follow-on" to the regulation. Breeden looked at the first few pages of the documents and informed Frischknecht that he would not concur with that letter. The following day, July 12, 1977, Breeden filed an unfair labor practice charge on which this complaint is based.

Contentions of the Parties

The Union does not challenge Respondent's decision to establish a program for reduction of average grade as being a reserved right of management under the Executive Order. However, it contends that Respondent denied the exclusive representative an opportunity to meet and confer concerning the impact and implementation of its decision by failing to notify the Union prior to issuing AFR 40-312/ALC Supplement 1.

Respondent maintains that the Union was given reasonable opportunity to meet and confer on the impact and implementation of the supplement to AFR 40-312 but that the Union waived its right to consult, confer or negotiate by failing to request consultation or bargaining on the subject. Respondent further contends that the supplemental regulation has no adverse impact on the employees.

Discussion and Conclusions

There is no dispute that the decision to establish a program of General Schedule average grade reduction was a reserved right of Respondent under the Executive Order. Both at the hearing and in its brief, the Union made it clear that it does not contend that this management retained right requires consultation.

The sole question is whether Respondent gave notice to the Union prior to implementation of its decision and whether it afforded the Union an opportunity to negotiate upon request, regarding the impact and implementation of that decision. For reasons set forth below, I conclude that Respondent did give the Union notice prior to implementation of its decision to supplement the existing regulation pertaining to General Schedule average grade reduction and that Respondent did not fail or refuse to bargain with regard to impact or implementation of that decision.

Respondent's Exhibit 2, which was received in evidence, is a copy of a letter of transmittal dated October 6, 1977, together with a copy of the proposed supplemental regulation. The subject of the letter of transmittal is "Proposed AFR 40-312/Ogden ALC Supplement 1." The letter is directed to various organizations concerned including AFGE Local 1592, the Union herein. It states, "Request your coordination and/or comments on the attached proposed AFR 40-312/Ogden ALC Supplement by 15 October 1976." It is signed by Edwin C. Hudson, Lt. Col. USAF, Chief of Personnel.

Clair Frischknecht, Chief of the Position Management Section of Respondent's Personnel Office, testified that a draft of the proposed supplemental regulation was prepared in his office and under his direction and instructions were given to his secretary, Mary Kilburn, to transmit the proposed regulation to the various organizations for their comments. Specific instructions were given to furnish the Union a copy. He testified that he received no response from the Union.

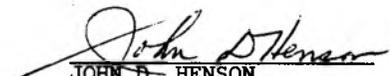

Mary Kilburn testified that she mailed a copy of the proposed regulation and request for comment to the Union on October 6, 1976. She also testified that the Union did not respond.

Neil Breeden, President of AFGE, Local 1592 testified that in the regular course of Union business that all proposed changes in existing regulations directed to the Union by management are submitted to him for his consideration. He has no recollection of receiving the proposed supplement which was mailed to the Union on October 6, 1976, and maintains that his first knowledge of Respondent's plan/policy of General Schedule average grade reduction was on July 11, 1977, when Clair Frischknecht came to the Union office with the letter prepared for the Commanding General's signature. Mr. Breeden admitted that on numerous occasions he had been mistaken about receipt of regulations from management and that it was possible that he had received the proposed supplement mailed on October 6, 1976. The record reflects that Mr. Breeden had knowledge and was consulted concerning a previous unfair labor practice charge against Respondent involving General Schedule average grade reduction which was filed on January 21, 1976. I find that Respondent notified the Union of the proposed supplement to AFR 40-312 by letter dated October 6, 1976, and requested the Union's coordination and/or comments by October 15, 1976. I further find that despite the aforementioned notice, no request for bargaining, on either the procedures to be utilized or the impact on unit employees, was ever made by the Union. In the absence of such a request, insufficient basis exists for a 19(a)(6) finding. U.S. Department of Air Force, Base, A/SLMR No. 261 (April 30, 1973); Internal Revenue Service, Philadelphia Service Center, Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, A/SLMR No. 771 (1976).

Recommendation

July 21, 1978

Having found that Respondent has not engaged in certain conduct prohibited by sections 19(a)(1) and (6) of Executive Order 11491, as amended, I recommend that the Complaint herein be dismissed in its entirety.

SUMMARY OF DECISION AND ORDER OF THE ASSISTANT SECRETARY
PURSUANT TO SECTION 6 OF EXECUTIVE ORDER 11491, AS AMENDED

PENNSYLVANIA ARMY AND AIR NATIONAL GUARD
A/SLMR No. 1085

This case involved an unfair labor practice complaint filed by the Pennsylvania State Council, Association of Civilian Technicians, Inc. (Complainant) alleging essentially that the Respondent violated Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order as a result of certain statements to employees made by the Commanding Officer of the facility involved.

The Administrative Law Judge concluded that the Respondent's conduct was violative of Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order. In this connection, he found that remarks made by a facility Commander concerning the cancellation of four job announcements because of the Complainant's bargaining position interfered with employees in the exercise of their right to be represented by a collective bargaining agent. He also found improper the publication of the results of negotiations in such a manner as to indicate that the outcome of such negotiations were inimical to employee interests, or that employees would receive more favorable treatment if their exclusive representative refrained from dealing with the Respondent.

The Assistant Secretary adopted the Administrative Law Judge's findings, conclusions and recommendations. Accordingly, he ordered the Respondent to cease and desist from engaging in the conduct found violative of the Order and take certain affirmative actions.

RECOMMENDED DECISION AND ORDER

This is a proceeding brought under Executive Order 11491, as amended (hereafter, "the Order") by Pennsylvania State Council, Association of Civilian Technicians, Inc. (hereafter, "Council"), the exclusive bargaining agent for employees of Pennsylvania Army and Air National Guard, against the agency.

Council complains that PAANG violated sections 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order 1/ by, through the Commanding Officer of the facility, calling a general shop meeting on November 18, 1976 at which he stated, inter alia;

Are there any other questions? I thought there would be one thing for sure, but since nobody is going to ask, I'll bring it up. It concerns the four job announcements and why they were withdrawn. Since it was brought to my attention that there was some confusion on the subject, not only by you but my supervisors also.

The reason I cancelled the announcements was because the three union stewards did not agree with the area of consideration, and in trying to cooperate with them, even though I didn't agree with them, I went ahead and cancelled the announcements.

A hearing was held in Harrisburg, Pennsylvania, on November 17, 1977. Briefly, the record shows the following.

Statement of the Case

It is undisputed that the Commanding Officer made the remarks set forth above in the circumstances set forth.

Witnesses called by complainant stated that, following the above remarks, the Commanding Officer was asked by an employee whether the cancelled job announcements would be reissued. According to the witness, he replied that he doubted the jobs would be re-announced and that "you can thank your stewards for that." The Commanding Officer testified that he had introduced his remarks concerning the withdrawal of the job announcements by stating that he was "going to tell you my opinion - now mind you I only speak for myself... not the facility commander or State Aviation Officer, or a representative of the Adjutant General."

1/ Sec. 19. Unfair labor practices (a) Agency management shall not--

(1) interfere with, restrain, or coerce an employee in the exercise of the rights assured by this Order;

* * *

(6) refuse to consult, confer, or negotiate with a labor organization as required by this Order

He also stated that he had told the assembled employees about the job announcement withdrawals because he had received inquiries from employees and he wanted to "clear the air". He agreed that all employees who had responded to the announcements had been informed of the withdrawals in early November. 2/

According to the Commander, following his remarks, a union steward stated, "Colonel, what you are saying here sounds anti-union." He testified that he didn't respond because he "didn't want to get into a...contest with [the steward] over the point at that time and I wanted to see if there were any questions of relevance from the rest of the people, with the limited time I had available."

Findings of Fact and Conclusions of Law

Having considered the entire record including the testimony, exhibits and briefs of the parties and having observed the demeanor of the witnesses, I make the following findings

2/ The text of the letter informing applicants signed by the commanding officer is as follows;

1. I wish to take this opportunity to thank you for your interest in the Pennsylvania Army Aviation Program evidenced by your application to announcement #185-76.

2. The purpose of this correspondence is to inform you that this announcement is being cancelled due to objections presented by all three shop stewards at the Facility. The shop stewards' objections are:

a. That the area of consideration is not restricted to employees of AASF #1.

b. That no prior announcement was made as to what specific duties this work leader would be assigned once he was hired.

3. I regret that it has become necessary to cancel this announcement. All applicants were from the Facility and I feel that it would have resulted in a promotion for a deserving individual.

4. You are encouraged to continue to further your qualifications and apply for future promotion opportunities.

of fact, conclusions of law and recommended decision and order based thereon.

The facts are as set forth in the statement of the case. All witnesses were credible as to facts. Neither contradictions nor inconsistencies in matters of substance appear in the testimony of the various witnesses.

Briefly, PAANG argues that it "has shown through evidence and testimony that the specific remarks [alleged to] be...derogatory were made for one purpose, that of providing clarification and information as to what had happened to cause the job announcements to be withdrawn--his remarks were not directed against any person or organization."

The argument addresses an issue which is not presented. Thus, the issue is not what PAANG, its agents or counsel perceive to be the purpose of the remarks, rather the issue is what was the substance, effect and result of the remarks reasonable to be anticipated by PAANG.

It is undoubtedly true that a gratuitous explanation to bargaining unit employees to the effect that job opportunities have been lost, that their second level supervisor "doubted" that the jobs would be re-announced and that the employees could "thank your [collective bargaining agent] for that," 3/ is calculated to convey information.

However, the import of that information is in my opinion, that the bargaining agent has engaged in representation inimical to the best interest of unit employees. Were there any question concerning the meaning of the information as well the reasonably anticipated effect, it is dispelled by the Commander's earlier written notification to unit members who had sought to avail themselves of the job announcements. Thus, they were informed that the announcements had been "cancelled due to objections presented by all three shop stewards," inter alia "that the area of consideration is not restricted to employees of AASF #1" and provided also with the news that "[a]ll applicants were from the Facility and I feel it would have resulted in a promotion for a deserving individual.

The Commanding Officer impressed me as an intelligent and experienced person, a leader of men, well schooled in techniques of motivation, encouragement of desired responses and discouragement of responses and attitudes regarded as undesirable.

3/ It is undenied that this statement was made by the Commander.

The short of it is that I am convinced that he knew precisely what the effect of his remarks would be--to interfere with employees in the exercise of their right to be represented by a collective bargaining agent. The remarks themselves, regardless of effect, violate section 19(a)(1) of the Order. C.E., FAA, Airways Facilities Sector, Tampa, Florida, A/SLMR No 725. Similarly, to the extent that such remarks "encourage the bypassing of the exclusive representative and imply] that employees will receive more favorable treatment if their representative refrains from dealing with" management, the remarks violate section 19(a)(6) of the Order. Department of Defense, Norfolk Naval Shipyard, A/SLMR No. 746.

RECOMMENDATION

Having found that Pennsylvania Army and Air National Guard engaged in conduct in violation of section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order by discouraging its employees in the exercise of their rights to representation by a collective bargaining agent and by implying that employees will receive more favorable treatment if their representative refrains from dealing with management, I recommend that the Assistant Secretary adopt the following order.

RECOMMENDED ORDER

Pursuant to Section 6(b) of Executive Order 11491, as amended and Section 203.26(b) of the Regulations, the Assistant Secretary of Labor for Labor-Management Relations hereby orders that Pennsylvania Army and Air National Guard shall:

1. Cease and desist from:

OF THE ASSISTANT SECRETARY
PURSUANT TO SECTION 6 OF EXECUTIVE ORDER 11491, AS AMENDED

FEDERAL AVIATION ADMINISTRATION, ATLANTA AIRWAY FACILITIES SECTOR,
ATLANTA, GEORGIA
A/SLMR No. 1086

This case involved a petition filed by the Professional Airways Systems Specialists (PASS) seeking an election in a unit described as all General Schedule and Wage Grade employees assigned to the Atlanta, Georgia, Airway Facilities Sector 12(a) located at the Atlanta Municipal Airport. The Activity contended that the unit sought by PASS was inappropriate as the employees do not share a community of interest separate and distinct from other Agency employees, and that such a unit would not reduce existing fragmentation or promote effective dealings and efficiency of agency operations. The Intervenor, American Federation of Government Employees, AFL-CIO, Local 3322 (AFGE), which is the current exclusive representative of the claimed unit, took the position that such unit was appropriate.

The Assistant Secretary found that the claimed unit continued to constitute an appropriate unit for the purpose of exclusive recognition under the Order. In this regard, he noted that the record did not contain any newly discovered or previously unavailable facts or changed circumstances that have occurred since the AFGE's recertification in 1976, as the result of a self-determination election order in A/SLMR No. 600. Therefore, he found that the petitioned for unit continued to constitute a comprehensive grouping of employees who share a clear and identifiable community of interest. He also found that such unit would promote effective dealings and efficiency of agency operations.

Accordingly, the Assistant Secretary ordered an election in the unit found appropriate.

DECISION AND DIRECTION OF ELECTION

Upon a petition duly filed under Section 6 of Executive Order 11491, as amended, a hearing was held before Hearing Officer Annette Allen. The Hearing Officer's rulings made at the hearing are free from prejudicial error and are hereby affirmed.

Upon the entire record in this case, including a brief submitted by the Activity, the Assistant Secretary finds:

1. The labor organizations involved claim to represent certain employees of the Activity.

2. In its amended petition, the Petitioner, Professional Airways Systems Specialists, hereinafter called PASS, seeks an election in an existing unit of all General Schedule (GS) and Wage Grade (WG) employees of the Federal Aviation Administration assigned to the Atlanta, Georgia, Airway Facilities Sector 12(a), located at the Atlanta Municipal Airport. ^{1/} The Activity contends that the unit sought is inappropriate under Section 10(b) of the Order as the employees involved do not share a community of interest separate and distinct from the other employees in Sector 12, and that such unit would not reduce existing fragmentation or promote effective dealings and efficiency of agency operations. The Intervenor, American Federation of Government Employees, AFL-CIO, Local 3322, hereinafter called AFGE, which is the current exclusive representative of the employees in the claimed unit, takes the position that such unit is appropriate for the purpose of exclusive recognition. ^{2/}

^{1/} The unit description in the petition herein was amended at the hearing to change the designation for that part of the Atlanta Airway Facilities Sector located at the Atlanta Municipal Airport from 18200 to its current designation of 12(a).

The mission of the Federal Aviation Administration, hereinafter called FAA, is to provide a safe and expeditious flow of aircraft in the National Airspace System. The Southern Region of the FAA is headed by a Regional Director. Under his jurisdiction is the Southern Region's Airway Facilities Division, which is composed of four branches: the Program and Planning Branch, the Electronic Engineering Branch, the Maintenance Operations Branch, and the Environmental Engineering Branch. The Division also contains several sectors, of which the Activity is one, each headed by a Sector Manager who is responsible to the Division Chief. The mission of the Activity, and all airway facilities sectors, is to maintain and operate all National Airspace System facilities within the sector, assuring that performance is within established tolerances of accuracy and meets operational requirements of availability and reliability; to maintain environmental support facilities and equipment; and to effectively manage available resources. The Activity consists of four operational units: the Sector headquarters at the Atlanta Municipal Airport (Sector 12(a)), the Fulton County Sector Field Office (Sector 12(b)), the Marietta Sector Field Office (Sector 12(c)), and the Peachtree-DeKalb Sector Field Office (Sector 12(d)).

At the hearing, the parties stipulated as to the history of bargaining in the petitioned for unit. The stipulation indicates that on July 9, 1971, pursuant to a consent election agreement, AFGE Local 2123 was certified as the exclusive representative of employees in the petitioned for unit. On November 23, 1971, an amendment of certification was issued by the Regional Administrator changing the name of the exclusive representative from AFGE Local 2123 to AFGE Local 3322. On July 25, 1973, in Federal Aviation Administration, Atlanta Airway Facility, Sector 12, Atlanta, Georgia, 3 A/SLMR 366, A/SLMR No. 287 (1973), the Assistant Secretary found that the Activity had improperly refused to negotiate with the AFGE regarding the ground rules for negotiating an agreement. Negotiations between the parties subsequently were conducted in 1973 and 1974 but no agreement was reached. As a result of the self-determination election ordered in Federal Aviation Administration (FAA) and Federal Aviation Administration, Eastern Region, 5 A/SLMR 776, A/SLMR No. 600 (1975), on September 21, 1976, the AFGE was recertified as the exclusive representative of the claimed unit. 3/ Negotiations between the parties resumed in February 1977, but were terminated in May 1977. Subsequently, on September 22, 1977, the PASS filed the instant petition for the employees in the existing unit represented exclusively by the AFGE.

^{2/} The parties stipulated that there is no bar to an election in this matter.

The parties stipulated that 53 of 79 positions in the Activity are in the claimed unit at the Sector headquarters office and that the remaining 26 positions are divided among the 3 sector field offices, noted above. Employees of the three sector field offices currently are included in a nationwide bargaining unit of Airway Facilities Division employees exclusively represented by the Federal Aviation Science and Technological Association/National Association of Government Employees, hereinafter called FASTA/NAGE. 4/ The majority of employees in the claimed unit are classified as Electronic Technicians, GS-856 series, and are responsible for maintaining air traffic control and navigational aid electronics systems to ensure continuous and reliable operation of equipment critical to the National Airspace System.

The parties also stipulated that, consistent with the FAA policy of delegating authority with respect to personnel and labor relations matters to the lowest possible level, the authority for such matters has been delegated to the Activity's Regional Director, subject to FAA and Civil Service guidelines. In this regard, the Regional Director has sole authority within the Region to negotiate collective bargaining agreements.

It is undisputed that the petitioned for unit has remained unchanged since September 1976, when the AFGE was recertified as the exclusive representative of the unit employees. In this regard, there is no evidence that, since the recertification, there has been a significant alteration in the FAA's operations or any change in the mission or functions of the employees in the unit sought which would affect the previously established appropriateness of such unit.

Based on the foregoing circumstances, I find that the petitioned for unit continues to constitute an appropriate unit for the purpose of exclusive recognition within the meaning of Section 10(b) of the Order. Thus, the record does not contain any newly discovered or previously unavailable facts or changed circumstances that have occurred since the recertification of the AFGE in September 1976; nor do the parties contend

3/ During the processing of the petitions which resulted in the Decision and Direction of Elections in A/SLMR No. 600, neither the Activity nor the FAA contended that the petitioned for unit was not appropriate for the purpose of exclusive recognition under the Order.

4/ FASTA/NAGE filed an untimely request to intervene in this matter which was denied.

otherwise. It has been previously held that the same parties cannot relitigate the same issues considered in a prior proceeding, in the absence of evidence of some intervening change in circumstances. 5/ Although the issue to which the above principle was applied involved the bargaining unit eligibility of certain employees, this principle, in my view, is also applicable to the issue herein. Thus, where, as here, the parties in a prior proceeding did not contend that the claimed unit was inappropriate, in my view, it would not effectuate the purposes and policies of the Order to reconsider, in the absence of evidence of some change in circumstances, the appropriateness of the unit which was determined in a prior proceeding involving the same parties. Under these circumstances, I find the petitioned for unit continues to constitute a grouping of employees who share a clear and identifiable community of interest. Thus, such employees share a common mission, common overall supervision, generally similar job classifications and duties, and enjoy uniform personnel policies and practices and labor relations. Further, noting that the claimed unit is coextensive with the unit represented by the AFGE since 1971 and that there is a long history of negotiations between the parties with respect to such unit, I find that it will promote effective dealings and efficiency of agency operations. 6/

Accordingly, I find that the following unit is appropriate for the purpose of exclusive recognition under Section 10(b) of Executive Order 11491, as amended:

All GS and WG employees of the Federal Aviation Administration assigned to the Atlanta, Georgia, Airway Facilities Sector 12(a), Atlanta Municipal Airport, excluding personnel assigned to receive training, professional employees, management officials, employees engaged in Federal personnel work in other than a purely clerical capacity, guards, and supervisors as defined in the Order.

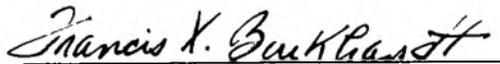

5/ Cf. United States Department of Agriculture, Animal and Plant Health Inspection Service, Plant Protection and Quarantine, A/SLMR No. 1038 (1978), and Internal Revenue Service, Office of the Regional Commissioner, Southeast Region, A/SLMR No. 870 (1977), FLRC No. 77A-122 (1978).

6/ As noted above, there has been a long bargaining history in the petitioned for unit, but without a successfully negotiated agreement. In my view, the inability of the parties to consummate a negotiated agreement, is not, by itself, sufficient basis to conclude that such unit has failed to promote effective dealings, particularly where, as here, there is evidence of a past refusal to bargain in good faith by the Activity.

July 25, 1978

An election by secret ballot shall be conducted among the employees in the unit found appropriate as soon as possible but not later than 60 days from the date below. The appropriate Area Administrator shall supervise the election, subject to the Assistant Secretary's Regulations. Eligible to vote are those in the unit who were employed during the payroll period immediately preceding the date below including employees who did not work during that period because they were out ill, or on vacation, or on furlough, including those in the military service who appear in person at the polls. Ineligible to vote are employees who quit or who were discharged for cause since the designated payroll period and who have not been rehired or reinstated before the election date. Those eligible shall vote whether they desire to be represented for the purpose of exclusive recognition by the Professional Airways Systems Specialists; the American Federation of Government Employees, AFL-CIO, Local 3322; or neither.

UNITED STATES DEPARTMENT OF LABOR
ASSISTANT SECRETARY FOR LABOR-MANAGEMENT RELATIONS
SUMMARY OF DECISION AND ORDER OF THE ASSISTANT SECRETARY
PURSUANT TO SECTION 6 OF EXECUTIVE ORDER 11491, AS AMENDED

PENNSYLVANIA ARMY AND AIR NATIONAL GUARD
A/SLMR No. 1087

This case involved an unfair labor practice complaint filed by the Pennsylvania State Council, Association of Civilian Technicians, Inc. (Complainant) alleging that the Respondent violated Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order by refusing to process an employee's grievance under the negotiated grievance procedure.

The Administrative Law Judge concluded that the Respondent had not violated Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order. He noted that a refusal to process a grievance through a negotiated grievance procedure on the basis that it is not grievable or arbitrable, if without bad faith, does not constitute an unfair labor practice, as the Complainant may seek a grievability or arbitrability determination pursuant to Section 13(d) of the Order. The Administrative Law Judge found no evidence of bad faith on the part of the Respondent herein. He noted, in this regard, that the Respondent had not refused to process the grievance under an agency procedure, and, further, that a representative of the Complainant had implied that there was some question as to whether the negotiated grievance procedure was applicable in the instant case. Accordingly, he recommended that the complaint be dismissed in its entirety.

The Assistant Secretary adopted the Administrative Law Judge findings, conclusions and recommendation, and ordered that the complaint be dismissed.

RECOMMENDED DECISION

Findings of Fact and Conclusions of Law

This case arises under Executive Order 11491 as amended (hereinafter referred to as the Order). The complaint alleges that the Pennsylvania Army and Air National Guard (hereinafter referred to as the Activity or Employer) violated Sections 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order by refusing to process a grievance in accordance with a negotiated grievance procedure provided in a labor management relations agreement entered into by the Activity and the Pennsylvania State Council, Association of Civilian Technicians, Inc., (hereinafter referred to as the Complainant or Association). ^{1/}

Under the terms of a multi-unit labor management relations agreement, the Association is the authorized bargaining representative for all non-supervisory Pennsylvania Army and Air National Guard Wage Board and General Schedule Technicians employed in the State of Pennsylvania. ^{2/} The agreement provides a five step grievance procedure which culminates in arbitration at the option of the Association or the Employer.

^{1/} It is noted that a complaint filed on May 31, 1977, alleged violations of Sections 19(a)(1), (2), (5) and (6) of the Order, and that an amended complaint filed on December 1, 1977, refers to alleged violations of Sections 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order. The Notice of Hearing on Complaint, dated February 15, 1978, mistakenly includes Sections 19(a)(2) and (5). However, a letter of the same date addressed to the parties by the Regional Administrator in connection with issuance of the Notice of Hearing on Complaint correctly sets forth the issue in the case as involving the question of whether the Activity violated Sections 19(a)(1) and (6) by engaging in conduct alleged in the amended complaint filed on December 1, 1977.

^{2/} The agreement became effective as of May 7, 1976, and was in effect during all periods pertinent herein.

The record reflects that the grievance in question initially related to a proposal to issue a memorandum notifying Walter Combs, a bargaining unit employee, of a ninety-day warning of unsatisfactory job performance. ^{3/} After actual issuance of the memorandum in question, the grievance took the form of an effort to effect removal of the memorandum from the file, and a controversion of the Activity's evaluation of Mr. Combs' job performance. The Association deemed these efforts to be the first step in the negotiated grievance procedure. However, the first-line supervisor refused to take any action concerning the issuance of the memorandum.

The grievance was thereafter reviewed at the second step level by the next higher supervisor, who on February 18, 1977, advised Mr. Combs' shop steward that the Activity had determined that there was sufficient justification for issuance of the memorandum. (Joint Exhibit 3). At this point the Association, through a National Representative, sought to perfect the second step of the grievance procedure by requesting from the Activity, a written decision setting forth elements of information required by the collective bargaining agreement. In addition, the Association sought to escalate the grievance to the third step. (Joint Exhibit 4). The additional details sought, together with a denial of grievability, were provided by the Activity in a March 17, 1977 memorandum signed by the second level supervisor. (Joint Exhibit 5).

^{3/} An official reprimand addressed to Mr. Combs by the Activity in connection with the incident was withdrawn and destroyed. The record revealed that the grievance in question involved the first attempt to use the negotiated grievance procedure as a basis for questioning the issuance of a ninety-day prior warning of unsatisfactory performance. (Tr. 194-195). The Complainant's National Field Representative, a former State Chairman of the Association, and chief negotiator, implied that the applicability of the grievance procedure in this type of case was not entirely free from doubt. (Tr. 192-194).

At a March 15, 1977 meeting, Colonel Paul Rosenberg, a representative of the Activity informed the Complainant, that the grievance was not grievable under the grievance procedure set out in Article VII of the collective bargaining agreement. The meeting, which lasted about two hours, was devoted primarily to the appropriate procedure to be utilized in processing the grievance. It clearly appeared that a great deal of confusion surrounded the disposition of the grievance. The Complainant took the position that the Activity should proceed to step three of the negotiated grievance procedure under the terms of the collective bargaining agreement; however, at the meeting discussion also related to the question of whether Mr. Combs should have proceeded under an entirely different procedure provided in the collective bargaining agreement for disciplinary and adverse action cases, or under a clause requiring a complete "identification of facts" in cases wherein a bargaining unit employee is made the target of a "charge, (or) defamation." ^{4/} However, neither of the last two mentioned portions of the collective bargaining agreement are claimed as a basis for the grievance filed by Mr. Combs. Instead, the Complainant relies entirely upon the ground that Article VII, Section 7.1(a) of the agreement embraces the issue posed by the grievance. This section provides:

Section 7.1 General:

(a) The purpose of this Article is to implement the provisions that pertain to grievances and to establish procedures deemed necessary for all concerned, for the consideration of grievances over the interpretation or application of the agreement. A grievance means a request by a Technician or a group of Technicians in the unit for relief concerning any matter not prohibited by a statutory appeals procedure. This negotiated procedure is the exclusive procedure available to the Employer, the Association and the Technicians in the unit for the processing of grievances concerning the interpretation and application of the negotiated agreement.

^{4/} See respectively, Articles I and XII of the agreement. (Respondent's Exhibit 1). Counsel for the Complainant acknowledged that provisions of the agreement are less than clear in this regard. (Tr. 215-216).

The Association made it clear that the unfair labor practice complaint rests upon the Activity's refusal to process the grievance under Article VII.

The Activity denies that Section 7.1(a) can be construed as including the Combs grievance, and that therefore the grievance does not fall within the purview of the negotiated grievance procedure. ^{5/}

Although the Activity took the position that the grievance was not grievable under the contract, it offered to process the grievance under regulations promulgated by the Pennsylvania Army and Air National Guard. (Joint Exhibit 7). The alternative procedure suggested involved three steps, the first two of which closely resembled the grievance procedure set out in the collective bargaining agreement. However, the grievance

^{5/} A denial of grievability under the contract was also communicated to the Association prior to the meeting of March 15, 1977 (Tr. 65-66), and on March 25, 1977. (Complainant's Exhibit 3). The agency view is also reflected in letters dated April 26, 1977, June 8, 1977 and June 27, 1977, prepared by the Activity's Personnel Officer. (Respondent Exhibits 3 through 5).

Procedure provided in Pennsylvania Army and Air Force National Guard regulations differed substantially from the negotiated grievance procedure after the first two steps, and the former did not involve the possibility of arbitration. 6/

Section 6(a)(5) of the Order provides that "the Assistant Secretary shall...decide questions as to whether a grievance is subject to a negotiated grievance procedure or subject to arbitration under an agreement as provided in Section 13(d) of this Order." Section 13(d) of the Order provides:

Questions that cannot be resolved by the parties as to whether or not a grievance is on a matter for which a statutory appeal procedure exists,

6/ It is noted that the arbitration provision in the collective bargaining agreement provides that "the Employer or the Association may invoke arbitration over unit employees grievances on matters limited to the application or interpretation of this agreement....Disputes over what is subject to the grievance procedure or arbitration may be referred to the Assistant Secretary of Labor for decision...." (Respondent's Exhibit 1, Article XVIII, Section 18.1).

Prior to the February 6, 1975 amendments of Executive Order 11491, Section 13(a) of the Order limited the scope of the negotiated grievance procedure to the "consideration of grievances over the interpretation or application of the agreement." The collective bargaining agreement involved in this case was, in large measure, negotiated prior to expansion of the permissible scope of negotiated grievance procedure. Although the Association made efforts to expand the scope of the negotiated grievance procedure to the extent allowed after the February 6, 1975 amendment of Section 13(a), these efforts were either not successful or only partially successful. (Tr. 192-193).

shall be referred to the Assistant Secretary for decision. Other questions as to whether or not a grievance is on a matter subject to the grievance procedure in an existing agreement, or is subject to arbitration under that agreement, may by agreement of the parties be submitted to arbitration or may be referred to the Assistant Secretary for decision.

The Assistant Secretary has held that a refusal to process a grievance through a negotiated grievance procedure, if without bad faith, does not constitute an unfair labor practice, as a complainant in such cases has a right under Section 13(d) of the Order to file an application requesting the Assistant Secretary to decide questions as to grievability and arbitrability of the grievance involved. National Labor Relations Board Region 17 and National Labor Relations Board, A/SLMR No. 670 (1976); Veterans Administration Hospital, Waco, Texas, A/SLMR No. 735 (1976); Naval Air Rework Facility, A/SLMR no. 849 (1977). In U.S. Air Force, Headquarters, 31st Combat Support Group (TAC), Homestead Air Force Base, Florida, Assistant Secretary Case No. 42-2649 (CA), FLRC No. 75 A-82 (November 18, 1975), Report No. 91, the Council refused to disturb a ruling of the Assistant Secretary wherein the Assistant Secretary adopted the following language of an Assistant Regional Director:

[I]n the absence of bad faith, grievability and arbitrability questions...are not matters to be resolved under Section 19 [unfair labor practice procedures] of the Order.

July 25, 1978

Facts developed in this case reflect no evidence of bad faith on the part of the Employer. Moreover, a representative of the Association implied that the applicability of the grievance procedure in this case is not entirely free from doubt, and it was acknowledged that the factual situation presented by the grievance was a case of first impression under the negotiated grievance procedure. Also, it must be noted that the Activity did not in fact refuse to process the grievance under agency regulations.

Based on the record it would not be possible to conclude that the Activity was in bad faith when refusing to process the grievance in accordance with the grievance procedure provided in the collective bargaining agreement.

RECOMMENDATION

Having found that the Activity did not violate Sections 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order by refusing to process the grievance submitted, I recommend that the complaint herein be dismissed in its entirety.

A/SLMR No. 1088

This case involved an unfair labor practice complaint filed by the American Federation of Government Employees, Local 2924, AFL-CIO (Complainant) alleging that the Respondent violated Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order by refusing to negotiate with the Complainant over the implementation and impact of a reduction-in-force (RIF). The Respondent argued that under the parties' negotiated agreement it is obligated to notify the Complainant and negotiate the impact and implementation of a RIF only when ten or more permanent employees in any one competitive level are affected. The Respondent claimed that in the RIF herein, less than ten permanent employees in any one competitive level were affected.

The Administrative Law Judge concluded that the Respondent had not engaged in conduct violative of the Order. He found that as the parties' negotiated agreement limited the Respondent's obligation to notify the Complainant concerning RIFs, and that since less than ten employees in any one competitive level were affected by the subject RIF, the Respondent was not obligated to notify the Complainant in this regard. Further, the Administrative Law Judge found that there was no proof that the Respondent misinterpreted the meaning of "competitive level" to its advantage, thus limiting the number of employees in one competitive level. He therefore recommended that the complaint be dismissed.

The Assistant Secretary adopted the Administrative Law Judge's findings, conclusions and recommendation and ordered that the complaint be dismissed in its entirety.

RECOMMENDED DECISION AND ORDER

Statement of the Case

Pursuant to an amended complaint filed by the American Federation of Government Employees, Local 2924, AFL-CIO, ("The Union"), under date of June 28, 1977, against the Department of the Air Force, Davis-Monthan Air Force Base, Tucson, Arizona, a Notice of Hearing on Complaint was issued by the Regional Administrator for the San Francisco region September 13, 1977.

The Union alleged respondent violated sections 19(a)(1) and 19(a)(6) of Executive Order 11491, as amended, by refusing to negotiate with the Union over the implementation and impact of a reduction in force (RIF) which occurred February 18, 1977, at the air force base commissary. The Union contended that in excess of ten persons of the same competitive level were affected. Respondent contended the requirement of notification was waived by the collective bargaining agreement signed in June of 1976, between respondent and the Union, which provided for notification only where the RIF affected ten or more employees of the same competitive level. It was contended fewer than ten employees of the same competitive level were here affected.

A hearing was held in Tucson, Arizona, November 10, 1977, at which time exhibits were received and witnesses examined.

Upon the basis of the entire record the following findings of fact, conclusions and recommendations are made.

Findings of Fact

The present unfair labor practice charge had its conception in 1975, while the now effective collective bargaining agreement was being negotiated. The parties, after weeks of negotiations, remained apart on many issues. One of those issues was the prior contractual provision that respondent need notify the Union of a proposed reduction in force only where ten or more employees in any one competitive level were to be affected. The Union wished to be advised, under the new agreement, so that they might negotiate on implementation and impact when any employee was to be the subject of a RIF. Respondent held out for the old provision.

A mediator was brought into the negotiations. He suggested, and both sides agreed, that the outstanding issues be reduced to five each. Otherwise the contract was to remain as before. Notification in the event of any RIF was not one of the five issues selected by the Union. Hence, the contractual provision was to remain as before. When the new agreement was signed in June of 1976, Article 5 read as follows:

MATTERS FOR CONSULTATION AND NEGOTIATION

Section 1.

It is agreed that matters appropriate for consultation and negotiation between the parties shall include personnel policies and working conditions, including but not limited to such matters as safety, training, labor management cooperation, employee services, methods of adjusting grievances, granting leave, promotion plans, demotion practices, pay practices, reduction in force practices, and hours of work which are within the discretion of the employer. These matters relate to policy determinations only, not to individual satisfactions.

Article 27 read as follows:

REDUCTION IN FORCE

The employer agrees to notify the union of proposed reduction in force affecting ten or more permanent employees in any one competitive level. The employer further agrees that it will notify the union as far in advance as practicable giving the approximate number of employees and competitive level to be affected as known at that time, the date and action to be effected, and the reason for the reduction in force. Reduction in force, for the purpose of this paragraph, is defined in the Federal Personnel Manual. The union agrees to convey the information thus received objectively to the employees when queried.

It is clear from the evidence that the Union negotiators were not pleased with the language of Article 27. Nevertheless, the contract was signed on behalf of both the respondent and the Union June 7, 1976, and was approved by the Acting Director of Civilian Personnel June 29, 1976.

As a result of a directive from Headquarters, Air Force Commissary Services, deleting positions, a RIF was implemented by respondent on February 18, 1977. The Union was given no notification of the RIF prior to its implementation. Respondent purposely gave no notification because it had determined that fewer than ten persons of the same competitive level would be affected. Respondent concluded there was no requirement notice be given.

When word of the RIF became known the Union, not unexpectedly, was most concerned.

Union's Contentions

It is the contention of the Union that the collective bargaining agreement was signed under "extreme pressure." It is also contended that respondent misinterprets the meaning of "competitive level." It further contends management misconstrues the meaning of "affected." That is, the Union states that even if fewer than ten persons of the same competitive level are the victims of a RIF, because of seniority and "bumping rights" those actually RIF'd can take the jobs of others, thus creating a "domino" effect.

Respondent's Contentions

Respondent states that "What the Union failed to obtain at the bargaining table, it cannot now secure through these unfair labor practice proceedings." That the Union negotiators were under "extreme pressure" when the five issues were retained, and at the time the agreement was signed, is immaterial. Respondent states it does not incorrectly interpret the meaning of "competitive level" because competitive levels are determined by the provisions of the Federal Personnel Manual. Respondent admits there is a domino effect, but counters by stating that here, with the bumping rights, there were a total of 13 people affected. Of that 13, no more than eight were of the same competitive level. Finally, respondent contends this matter should be resolved under the negotiated grievance procedure rather than under the Unfair Labor Practice provisions of the Order.

Respondent's Motion to Dismiss

Respondent contends the negotiated agreement of the parties provides for the grievance procedure as the exclusive means to resolve this dispute. Article 33 of the agreement provides, in applicable part:

GRIEVANCE AND ARBITRATION PROCEDURE

Section 1.

The purpose of this article is to establish procedures for the consideration of the grievances and will be the exclusive procedure available to the employer, the union, and the employees and the units for absolving grievances. This procedure will not cover matters for which statutory appeals procedures exist. Such matters will be presented under an authorized procedure available for that purpose.

Section 2.

A grievance is defined to be any dispute or complaint between the employer and the union or an employee or employees covered by this agreement involving the interpretation or application of this agreement. The employer agrees that those policies and regulations which affect working conditions of employees in the unit shall be applied fairly and equitably insofar as they are within the employer's discretion.

Section 19(d) of the Executive Order provides, however:

Issues which can properly be raised under an appeals procedure may not be raised under this section. Issues which can be raised under a grievance procedure may, in the discretion of the aggrieved party, be raised under that procedure or the complaint procedure under this section but not under both procedures.

A like motion was made in General Services Administration, Region 5, A/SLMR No. 528. The agreement between the parties there had like language that the grievance procedure shall be the exclusive procedure available. The Assistant Secretary adopted without exception the Administrative Law Judge's recommended decision, which stated, in part:

A breach of contract can be an Unfair Labor Practice. When it is, it may be presented either as a grievance under the grievance procedure or it may be presented as an Unfair Labor Practice under the Executive Order. That is exactly what is provided in section 19(d) of the Order.

See also Department of the Navy, Portsmouth Naval Shipyard, A/SLMR No. 508.

On the basis of section 19(d) of the Executive Order and the above authority, respondent's Motion to Dismiss is denied.

Discussion, Further Findings of Fact and Conclusion

There is here no contention the Union had any right to negotiate on whether a RIF would occur. It is well established no such right exists. Department of the Navy, Great Lakes Naval Hospital, A/SLMR No. 289. It is equally well established, absent an agreement to the contrary, that there is an obligation to give notice of an impending RIF and to provide an opportunity to meet and confer as to the procedures management intends to observe in effecting the RIF (implementation) and to meet and confer in good faith concerning the impact of the RIF decision. Department of the Navy, supra; Department of the Army, Fort Monmouth, New Jersey, A/SLMR No. 679.

Article five of the collective bargaining agreement states, that as a matter of policy determination (as opposed to individual dissatisfaction) RIF is a matter for consultation and negotiation. That requirement is limited by Article 27, however, in which it is specifically provided the employer agrees to notify the Union of a proposed RIF affecting ten or more permanent employees in any one competitive level.

Article 27 was the result of difficult negotiations. It was a concession by the Union to reach an overall ultimate agreement. The Article is binding upon both parties, for it is established there can, by contract, be a waiver of what is normally an established right. Veterans Administration Center, Bath, New York, A/SLMR No. 335.

Ten employees who received rift notices were identified by the Union. There was also a general conclusion that these ten employees would have bumping rights and thus affect up to twenty employees. There was no proof, by the Union, of the actual number of employees affected. Nor was there any proof of the number of affected employees in the same competitive level. The Union admitted that of the ten who received RIF notices, not all were of the same competitive level.

29 C.F.R. § 203.15 provides:

A complainant in asserting a violation of the order shall have the burden of proving the allegations of the complaint by a preponderance of the evidence.

General conclusions, without foundation, and without establishing the numbers affected in the same competitive level, does not constitute sufficient evidence to meet the burden of proof.

Respondent, on the other hand, established that a total of thirteen employees were affected. No more than eight were in the same competitive level.

There was a general allegation by the Union that respondent misinterpreted the meaning of competitive level to its advantage, thus limiting the number of employees in one competitive level. Again, there was no proof of this assertion.

Article 27 of the negotiated agreement provides that a RIF for the purposes of the agreement, is defined in the Federal Personnel Manual. The manual, as a part of the RIF procedure, defines competitive level. In general, competitive level is defined as one where there is "similarity of duties, responsibilities, pay schedule, and terms of appointment; and similarity of requirements for experience, training, skills and aptitudes."

Karen L. Young, an employer relations specialist, a creditable witness, testified the competitive levels for this RIF were determined in the usual manner using the criteria of the Federal Personnel Manual. Her testimony established that the highest number in one competitive level affected was eight, consisting of seven store workers and one warehouseman. The remaining five affected employees fell into three other competitive levels.

In conclusion, no violation of the Executive Order has been established.

Recommendation

Having found that respondent has not engaged in conduct violative of sections 19(a)(1) and 19(a)(6) of the Executive Order, I recommend that the complaint be dismissed in its entirety.

UNITED STATES DEPARTMENT OF LABOR
ASSISTANT SECRETARY FOR LABOR-MANAGEMENT RELATIONS
SUMMARY OF DECISION AND ORDER OF THE ASSISTANT SECRETARY
PURSUANT TO SECTION 6 OF EXECUTIVE ORDER 11491, AS AMENDED

DEPARTMENT OF THE NAVY, NAVAL AIR REWORK FACILITY, ALAMEDA, CALIFORNIA
A/SLMR No. 1089

This case involved eight unfair labor practice complaints filed by the International Association of Machinists and Aerospace Workers, Lodge No. 739, AFL-CIO (IAM) alleging that the Respondent violated Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order by "unilaterally" announcing certain restrictions and limitations on the use of official time by IAM officers and officials without consultation with the IAM.

The Administrative Law Judge found that the Respondent had violated Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order. He also found independent Section 19(a)(1) violations in three instances. In this connection, he concluded that the Respondent's interpretation of the parties' negotiated agreement, which resulted in the announced restrictions and limitations, constituted unilateral changes in conditions of employment and patent breaches of the negotiated agreement of such a magnitude as to rise to the level of unfair labor practices. The Administrative Law Judge predicated his conclusion that the Respondent violated the Order on his finding that it had interpreted the parties' negotiated agreement without prior "consultation" with the IAM. He concluded that the interpretation of the agreement was "necessary" but not a "unilateral" interpretation. Thus, he implied that by making a unilateral interpretation of the parties' negotiated agreement without bargaining with the IAM, the Respondent had, in effect, engaged in conduct which was per se violative of the Order, regardless of the reasonableness of that interpretation, and that such action constituted a clear and patent breach of the parties' negotiated agreement.

The Assistant Secretary found, contrary to the Administrative Law Judge, that the Respondent did not violate Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order. He noted that a party to a negotiated agreement acts at its peril in interpreting and applying such agreement. Thus, if the Respondent's interpretation of the negotiated agreement was such that it resulted in a clear and patent breach of the terms of the agreement, then that interpretation could also rise to the level of an unfair labor practice as well as being a matter of contract interpretation. On the other hand, if the Respondent's interpretation was arguably within the terms of the negotiated agreement, then such interpretation would simply be a matter of contract interpretation to be resolved through the parties' grievance and arbitration machinery.

Under the circumstances herein, the Assistant Secretary found that as the record was insufficient to establish that the NARF's conduct constituted unilateral changes from past practices, and as it was arguable that the NARF's announcements concerning official time constituted reasonable interpretations of the parties' negotiated agreement, such announcements did not, standing alone, constitute violations of Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order. Moreover, as the record did not reflect any allegations of an independent Section 19(a)(1) violation in any of the subject complaints, the Assistant Secretary did not adopt the Administrative Law Judge's findings of such independent Section 19(a)(1) violations.

Accordingly, he ordered that the complaints be dismissed in their entirety.

DECISION AND ORDER

On February 3, 1978, Administrative Law Judge Ben H. Walley issued his Recommended Decision and Order in the above-entitled consolidated proceeding, finding that the Respondent had engaged in certain of the alleged unfair labor practices and recommending that it take affirmative action as set forth in the attached Administrative Law Judge's Recommended Decision and Order. The Administrative Law Judge also recommended dismissal of the complaint in Case No. 70-5490(CA). Thereafter, the Respondent filed exceptions with respect to the Administrative Law Judge's Recommended Decision and Order.

The Assistant Secretary has reviewed the rulings of the Administrative Law Judge made at the hearing and finds that no prejudicial error was committed. The rulings are hereby affirmed. Upon consideration of the Administrative Law Judge's Recommended Decision and Order and the entire record in the subject cases, including the Respondent's exceptions, I hereby adopt the Administrative Law Judge's, findings, conclusions and recommendations, only to the extent consistent herewith.

The Administrative Law Judge found that the unfair labor practice complaints in this matter were related to announcements alleged to have been made by the Respondent at a union-management meeting held on August 2, 1976. He noted that at the meeting the Respondent announced certain conclusions it had reached concerning the use of official time by union officers required to administer the parties' negotiated agreement. The Administrative Law Judge concluded that the Respondent's failure to negotiate or consult on these matters constituted a clear and patent breach of the parties' negotiated agreement and a violation of the Order. Contrary to the Administrative Law Judge, I find that the Respondent's actions did not rise to the level of unfair labor practices and, therefore, the complaints herein should be dismissed in their entirety.

The Complainant, International Association of Machinists and Aerospace Workers, Lodge No. 739, AFL-CIO, hereinafter called IAM, was certified on August 1, 1975, as the exclusive representative for, among others, a unit of all Wage Grade employees at the Respondent, the Naval Air Rework Facility, Alameda, California, hereinafter called NARF. Thereafter, the parties entered into a negotiated agreement which became effective on October 15, 1975. The record indicates that the parties met on February 5, 1976, pursuant to Article VIII (Union-Management Meetings) of their negotiated agreement to discuss what, in management's view, was considered "unnecessary" and "excessive" usage of official time on the part of IAM officers and stewards. 1/ The Administrative Law Judge found that the meeting was not a negotiation on use of official time. However, he noted that there was general agreement among the parties to improve, if not eliminate, the use of "excessive" official time, although no attempt was made to define the terms "necessary" or "excessive" time. Apparently, the meeting did not achieve the desired results and the parties met again on August 2, 1976, at which time the Respondent announced several conclusions it had reached on the use of official time, as more particularly set forth by the Administrative Law Judge on page 4 of his Recommended Decision and Order and which form the basis of the instant complaints. Although the Administrative Law Judge noted that the announcements were to be implemented immediately, he made no finding, and the record is inconclusive, as to which, if any, of the announcements were, in fact, implemented. Each of the subsequently filed unfair labor practice complaints in this matter allege violations of Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order relating to specific statements regarding the use of official time allegedly made by the Respondent at the meeting of August 2nd. In this regard, the IAM alleged, generally, that the NARF "unilaterally" announced restrictions and limitations on the use of official time by IAM officers and officials, and that in each instance such announcements were made "without consultation" with the IAM.

Specifically, in Case No. 70-5487(CA), the IAM alleged that the NARF improperly required that all IAM staff representatives, prior to entering a work area, must state their purpose in speaking to unit employees or management representatives prior to any representation activities.

In Case No. 70-5488(CA), the IAM alleged that the NARF improperly required all IAM stewards and officers to advise their respective supervisors of the articles and sections of the negotiated agreement giving rise to the request for union representation prior to their contacting the unit employee requesting representation. Moreover, those stewards or officers who did not identify or were unable to identify the articles and sections of the agreement, should the supervisor agree to release them, would be given only one hour to carry out their representation functions.

1/ Article VI, Section 4 of the parties' negotiated agreement states, in pertinent part, that stewards "shall be allowed necessary time to investigate" pending grievances. Section 5 of Article VI of the agreement states, in pertinent part, that employees involved in union representational activities "...shall guard against the use of excessive time."

Case No. 70-5489(CA) concerned the allegedly improper addition of a "return time" block to the shop passes currently in use for stewards and officers and the additional requirement that stewards and officers estimate their return time to their respective work areas prior to leaving on union business.

In Case No. 70-5490(CA), the IAM alleged that the NARF improperly announced that stewards and officers were involving themselves in counseling unit employees rather than investigating complaints and that the NARF would not pay for such activity since the NARF employed paid counselors who were to be used by unit employees, not IAM representatives.

In Case No. 70-5491(CA), the IAM alleged that the NARF improperly announced that there could be no complaint by a unit employee "until something has happened adversely which is identifiable in the negotiated agreement." Thus, in the IAM's view, a supervisor would make a decision as to whether there is a bona fide complaint.

Case No. 70-5492(CA) concerned the NARF's alleged improper policy of not permitting stewards or officers to be on the clock for any time spent researching agency rules and regulations.

Finally, in Case Nos. 70-5493(CA) and 70-5494(CA), the IAM alleged that the NARF improperly imposed on stewards and officers an immediate limitation, and on the President of Lodge No. 739, a limitation by December 31, 1976, of 20 percent of scheduled work hours in administering the parties' negotiated agreement and representing bargaining unit employees.

The Administrative Law Judge concluded that the NARF's interpretations of the parties' negotiated agreement "without consultation" with the IAM, as manifested by its August 2nd announcements, constituted unilateral changes in conditions of employment and patent breaches of the parties' negotiated agreement of such a magnitude as to rise to the level of unfair labor practices. Thus, he concluded that the NARF violated Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order in Case Nos. 70-5488(CA), 70-5489(CA), 70-5492(CA), 70-5493(CA) and 70-5494(CA) and independently violated Section 19(a)(1) of the Order in Case Nos. 70-5487(CA), 70-5488(CA) and 70-5491(CA). In regard to Case No. 70-5490(CA), he found that the evidence did not support the complaint and recommended that it be dismissed.

While I agree with the Administrative Law Judge's conclusion that the evidence does not support a finding of violation in Case No. 70-5490(CA),

I find, with regard to the remaining complaints, and contrary to the Administrative Law Judge, that the NARF's conduct was not violative of Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order. 2/

As indicated above, the Administrative Law Judge predicated his conclusion that the NARF had violated the Order in the remaining seven complaints on the basis that the NARF had interpreted the parties' negotiated agreement without prior "consultation" or negotiation with the IAM. In this regard, he concluded that interpretation of the parties' negotiated agreement was "necessary" but that "unilateral" interpretation was improper. Thus, he implied that the NARF could interpret the agreement, but only after negotiation with the IAM.

In my view, a party to a negotiated agreement acts at its peril in interpreting and applying such agreement. Thus, if the NARF's interpretation of the negotiated agreement was such that it resulted in a clear and patent breach of the terms of the agreement, then such interpretation could rise to the level of an unfair labor practice as well as being a matter of contract interpretation. On the other hand, if the NARF's interpretation was arguably within the terms of the negotiated agreement, then such interpretation would merely be a matter of contract interpretation to be resolved through the parties' grievance and arbitration machinery. In this context, I disagree with the Administrative Law Judge's apparent conclusion that by making a "unilateral" interpretation of the parties' negotiated agreement, the NARF had, in effect, engaged in conduct which was per se violative of the Order, regardless of the reasonableness of that interpretation, and that such interpretation made without bargaining with the exclusive representative, constituted a clear and patent breach of the parties' negotiated agreement. 4/

2/ As indicated above, the Administrative Law Judge found violations of Section 19(a)(1) of the Order in Case No. 70-5487(CA), 70-5488(CA) and 70-5491(CA). Since the record reflects that there were no allegations of an independent Section 19(a)(1) violation in any of these cases, I conclude that there is no basis for his finding of such independent 19(a)(1) violations.

3/ See Watervliet Arsenal, U.S. Army Armament Command, Watervliet, New York, 6 A/SLMR 526, A/SLMR No. 726 (1976); Department of Army, Watervliet Arsenal, Watervliet, New York, 6 A/SLMR 127, A/SLMR 624 (1976); Federal Aviation Administration, Muskegan Air Traffic Control Tower, 5 A/SLMR No. 457, A/SLMR No. 534 (1975); and General Services Administration, Region 5, Public Buildings Service, Chicago Field Offices 5 A/SLMR 424, A/SLMR No. 528 (1975).

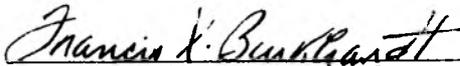

4/ Moreover, although the IAM alleged that the August 2nd announcements constituted unilateral changes in past practices or existing conditions of employment, it is noted that the Administrative Law Judge made no specific findings with respect to whether the announcements constituted changes from existing practices. I find that the evidence in this regard is inconclusive and that the IAM has not sustained its burden of proving such unilateral changes.

In regard to the Section 19(a)(1) and (6) violations alleged in Case Nos. 70-5488(CA), 70-5489(CA), 70-5492(CA), 70-5493(CA) and 70-5494(CA), I find that the language of the parties' negotiated agreement, in particular Article VI, Sections 4, 5 and 10, and Article XXVIII, is susceptible to varying reasonable interpretations. Thus, as the record is insufficient to establish that the NARF's conduct constituted unilateral changes from past practices, and as it is arguable that the NARF's August 2nd announcements in regard to the above-numbered complaints constituted reasonable interpretations of the parties' agreement, I conclude that such announcements did not, standing alone, constitute violations of Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order. Accordingly, I shall order that all of the complaints herein be dismissed in their entirety.

ORDER

IT IS HEREBY ORDERED that the complaints in Case Nos. 70-5487(CA), 70-5488(CA), 70-5489(CA), 70-5490(CA), 70-5491(CA), 70-5492(CA), 70-5493(CA) and 70-5494(CA) be, and they hereby are, dismissed.

RECOMMENDED DECISION AND ORDER

Statement of the Case(s)

On October 19, 1976, a complaint was filed on each of the aforesaid styled and numbered cases by International Association of Aerospace Workers, AFL-CIO, Naval Aircraft

Lodge No. 739, Hayward, California, 94545, (hereafter referred to as Complainant), against Naval Air Rework Facility, Department of the Navy, Naval Air Station, Alameda, California, 94501 (hereafter referred to as Respondent); each of said complaints alleging a violation of Executive Order 11491, as amended, particularly section 19(a), subsections (1) and (6), and several of said complaints additionally alleging violations of subsections (2) and (3) of said Order (violations of additional subsections are of no significance due to amendments set out below) (Asst. Sec. Ex. 1(a)1(h)).

On March 24, 1977, an amended complaint was filed in cases numbered 70-5488, '5489, '5490, '5491, '5493 and '5494; each such amendment deleting the allegations of violations of additional subsections of the Order, leaving the originals and each Amended Complaint to charge only violations of section 19(a), subsections (1) and (6) of said Order (Asst. Sec. Ex. 1(i)-1(n)).

On April 13, 1977, after due consideration and to effectuate the purposes of the Order the Regional Administrator, Labor-Management Services Administration, issued his Order consolidating all of said eight (8) cases (Asst. Sec. Ex. 1(o)), and on said date issued Notice of Consolidated Hearing on said Complaints, as amended, to be held on May 16, 1977, in San Francisco, California.

While each of the aforesaid eight (8) complaints alleges a violation of section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order, and although the factual situations upon which each separate complaint is founded differs somewhat from the others, they each arise out of the same meeting and have been consolidated. However, where the "factual situation" requires particular disposition to a resolution of the case, such differences will be observed to the extent considered necessary to resolve the entire problem(s).

The basic issue to be addressed and identified by the Regional Administrator was: Whether Respondent's announcements at the August 2, 1976, meeting with Complainant regarding the representational activities of unit employees constituted violations of section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order by unilaterally establishing general limitations on and the procedures for the use of official duty time for representational purposes for employee representatives of the I.A.M.? The "general limitations" established and the procedures for the use of official duty time will be identified as they unfold.

The hearing was held on May 16, 1977, and all parties were afforded full opportunity to be heard, to offer, examine and cross-examine witnesses, to introduce evidence considered relevant to their respective positions in the premises, and at the conclusion of the hearing to argue their position orally, which was waived, and to file briefs and argument.

After hearing the testimony of the witnesses and observing their demeanor, having reviewed the exhibits, briefs and the entire record, I make the following Findings of Fact, Conclusions and Recommendations.

Findings of Fact

1. During 1975, an agreement (hereafter referred to as such) was negotiated by and between the parties hereto under the provisions of Executive Order 11491, as amended, (hereafter referred to as Order), which was approved and became effective on October 15, 1975. At all times material to the issues here involved said agreement was in full force and effect. A copy of said agreement was offered and admitted into evidence as Union Exhibit #1.

2. According to the terms of the agreement, the Union, acting through its officers and representatives, is the exclusive representative of all employees in the unit and here involved, and Respondent, acting by and through the named individuals, is the responsible party and subject to the Decision and Order of the Assistant Secretary for Labor Management Relations.

3. The use of official duty time by the Union in the administration of the agreement was a matter for observation and inquiry from the outset and was addressed in a joint meeting on February 5, 1976. At this meeting management stated its position that if the same amount of time that had been used in the transition period should continue at the same rate, it would be considered "excessive." There was general agreement reached on a method or procedure to improve, if not eliminate the use of "excessive" time (Cl. Ex. 2 and 3) but no changes were made in the language of the original agreement. This did not accomplish the desired results and a management meeting was held on May 11, 1976, at which time management had concluded that "some of the officers continue to use excessive time in the administration of the negotiated agreement." It was decided that management must reach a mutual understanding as to what is considered "reasonable" or "necessary" time (Cl. Ex. 13). It appeared and was reported at this meeting that some of the officers were utilizing in excess of 40 percent of their time to administer the agreement. There is nothing of record to reflect that the union was present or participated in this meeting or was informed of management's decisions or planned course of action.

Nevertheless, on August 2, 1976, a Union-Management meeting was conducted, at which time management announced certain conclusions it had reached on the use of official time by union officers required to administer the agreement. First, and specifically, every union representative will spend a majority of his time working on the product; that all union officers and the chief steward (except the President) shall spend no more than 20 percent of their time in administering the agreement; and, the President will begin immediately spending a majority of his time on the work product. Further, the President is to reduce the time spent on administering the contract to 20 percent by December 31, 1976. In addition, plant visitations by non-unit union representatives and Union officers and stewards being granted permission to leave their assigned work area to conduct authorized contractual business were addressed.

Non-Unit Union representatives were to be governed by regulations dealing with visitors. They were to register with a receptionist, "stating the nature of the business, who is to be visited, where, and for how long." He is to be escorted to the person visited, to meet only with those individuals identified to the receptionist, and cannot enter a restricted or security area without prior approval from the Division Director. Employees were to obtain permission from the supervisor prior to leaving the work area to meet with visitors during working hours.

Union officers and stewards were to comply with Article VI of the Agreement and the procedures allegedly agreed to at the meeting of February 5, 1976. Specifically, they were to obtain permission to leave their job from their supervisor and advise who they were going to see and what shop they were going to visit. The supervisors will determine if the business is appropriate and indicate on the shop pass the amount of time authorized for stewards and verbally advise officers of the time of expected return. If the union representative cannot identify the exact nature of his business, the supervisor may authorize a maximum of one hour. All employees are required to obtain permission from the supervisor to leave the job area to discuss a complaint or grievance. And, the union is authorized official duty time for researching agency rules directly related to a specific complaint or grievance.

The foregoing "limitations" and "procedures" were to become effective immediately following the meeting at which they were announced, except the delays specified, and they are the primary source of the alleged unilateral actions of management in violation of the agreement.

Conclusions

The provisions of the Agreement relevant to the use of "official duty time" by representatives of the bargaining unit are found in Article VI, sections 4, 5, 9 and 10, and the procedures for its use are generally outlined in Article VI and Article XXVIII. The language used in these articles to measure or qualify the use of time are: (1) The "necessary amount" of time; (2) shall be allowed "necessary time" to investigate; (3) guard against the use of "excessive time"; (4) conduct their business in an "efficient manner"; and (5) for certain specified duties not here involved, "shall not exceed an average of 100 hours per year." Article VI, section 5.C., particularly governs use of the Shop/Pass and Article VI, section 2 provides for the designation of twenty-one (21) shop stewards to assure each employee ready access to the services of a steward.

Obviously, the use of official time by employee representatives to process grievances was a matter of concern from the effective date of the agreement. Two meetings, one on February 5, 1976, and one on May 11, 1976, had been held in an attempt to find a "method or procedure" to reduce the amounts of such time required. Admittedly, considerable progress had been made. But, none of the contacts or meetings of the parties had ever discussed placing a "limitation" on the time to be used in processing grievances, only procedures that were thought to be a means of accelerating the service and thereby reduce the need for it.

The meeting of February 6, 1976, a joint meeting of the parties, was not a negotiation of the use of "official duty time" for processing grievances. No attempt was made to define "necessary time", "excessive time", or the use of time in an "efficient manner". The meeting of Respondent on May 11, 1976, did discuss "necessary" and "excessive" time but the decisions reached, if any, were not communicated to the union.

It was announced by Respondent on August 2, 1976, that effective immediately, the use of official time by representatives of the employees, except the union president, will be limited to not to exceed 20 percent of their time, and the president will begin immediately spending a majority of his time on the work product and will, by December 31, 1976, reduce his representational time to 20 percent of his time. These limitations were directed to the officers of the union, the Grievance Chairman and the Chief Steward. It had been determined on May 12, 1976, that: "Overall the 29 stewards are utilizing less than 10 percent of their time in the administration of the agreement. The majority of the stewards are utilizing approximately 5 percent of their time in the administration of the agreement (Cl. Ex. 13). Actually, only two (2) stewards were identified as using an "excessive amount of time" in relation to other stewards (Cl. Ex. 8). These announcements without prior consultation as good faith bargaining, were a unilateral change in a condition of employment.

It is well settled, both under the Executive Order applicable to public employees and the National Labor Relations Act applicable to employer-employee relations in the private sector, that a unilateral change in a condition of employment without prior consultation or good faith bargaining is violative of sections 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Executive Order and sections 8(a)(1) and (5) of the National Labor Relations Act, respectively. Also, it is well settled that in the field of management prerogative, i.e., the rights reserved under section 12(b) of the Order, and employer may make unilateral changes provided that prior to the institution of such changes it gives adequate notice and upon request bargains and/or consults with the union concerning the impact on unit employees.

In the instant case there was in effect an agreement which recognized that "official duty time" may be used by unit employee representatives while investigating and resolving complaints and grievances. Since the agreement provides for the use of "official duty time" for its administration and Respondent has announced limitations on its use, the question has been raised: (1) When does the alleged breach of the terms of an agreement constitute a unilateral change in its terms that rises to the level of an unfair labor practice; or (2) when does it present a question of interpretation of an agreement to be resolved through the processes provided by the agreement, i.e., the grievance-arbitration procedure? The question was answered in General Services Administration Region 5 Public Buildings Service, Chicago Field Offices, A/SLMR No. 528, where the Assistant Secretary adopted the findings, conclusions and recommendations of the Administrative Law Judge when he observed that: "(a) breach of contract can be not only a breach but under certain circumstances can be also an unfair labor practice. For example, if sufficiently flagrant and persistent, a breach of contract may rise to the seriousness of a unilateral change in the contract and hence a violation of the Executive Order." He went on to observe that if it involved contract interpretation, if an unfair labor practice is alleged, "it must be established that the breach was so patent as to imply that the Respondent could not reasonably have thought otherwise and thereby engaged in an attempted unilateral change violative of the Order."

Respondent contends that the statements made by its representatives at the meeting held on August 2, 1976, were at most, good faith interpretation of the negotiated agreement and could not have constituted a violation of the Executive Order. Therefore, if there are differences of opinion, they should be resolved within the processes of the agreement, i.e., the grievance-arbitration procedures, relying on Department of the Air Force, Base Procurement Office, Vandenburg Air Force Base, California, FLRC No. 75A-25.

As mentioned above, the joint meeting of February 5, 1976, was a general discussion of a problem and all parties committed themselves to a solution. Considerable progress had been made but Respondent was not satisfied and it held a meeting on May 11, 1976, discussed "necessary" and "excessive" time and decided on a course of action, directed certain persons present to make specified preparations but did not communicate these decisions or procedures to the union. Instead, on August 2, 1976, without prior disclosure and to become effective immediately, it was announced by Respondent that the limitation and procedures set out above would be observed.

I find and conclude that the acts and actions of Respondent in attempting to put into effect, immediately, "limitation" on the use of official duty time, and to prescribe specific "procedures" for the use of such time, which had been under active consideration by Respondent for some three months prior thereto, to be a "patent" breach of the agreement and of such magnitude as to be tantamount to and was a unilateral change in a condition of employment, without prior consultation or good faith bargaining, and is a violation of section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Executive Order. San Antonio Air Logistics Center, San Antonio Air Material Area (AFLC), Kelly Air Force Base, Texas, A/SLMR No. 540; Watervliet Arsenal, U. S. Army Armament Command, Watervliet, New York, A/SLMR No. 726.

Since I find that the conduct of Respondent was a patent breach of the agreement, I do not believe that Respondent is entitled to the protection of the principles enunciated in Vandenburg Air Force Case, A/SLMR No. 485, FLRC No. 75A-25, supra, nor do I believe that its actions come within the provisions of section 20 of the Order. The use of "official time" here involved was representational time authorized by the agreement and the "limitations" had not been set out therein. Interpretation was necessary, but not "unilateral" interpretation.

In summary and in addition to the foregoing, I find and conclude that the evidence of records supports the following specifics:

Case No. 70-5487:

Paragraph A - This charge is within the terms of the agreement and not a violation and should be dismissed.

Paragraph B - Insofar as I.A.M. staff representatives are required to state the "purpose" of their visits, it is a violation of section 19(a)(1) of the Order.

Case No. 70-5488, as amended:

Paragraph A - Requiring representatives to advise supervisors the particular article and section of the agreement violated and allowing supervisors to determine its appropriateness is a violation of section 19(a)(1).

Paragraph B - Failing to identify the particular article and section involved and limiting the time for representational service, without prior consultation, is a violation of section 19(a)(1) and (6).

Case No. 70-5489:

Paragraphs A and B Requiring any procedure which "limits the time" used in representational activities, without prior consultation, is a violation of section 19(a)(1) and (6).

Case No. 70-5490:

I find that the evidence of record does not support this charge and should be dismissed in its entirety.

Case No. 70-5491:

While it is true that there can be no complaint until something adverse has happened, the decision of such cannot be reserved to a supervisor exclusively. Therefore, it is a violation of section 19(a)(1).

Case No. 70-5492:

Depriving I.A.M. staff officers of the use of official duty time to make appropriate research of agency rules and regulations, without prior consultation, is a violation of section 19(a)(1) and (6).

Case No. 70-5493:

We are not required to determine the reasonableness of the "limitation", only that it has been imposed. Therefore, the imposition of time limitations on the use of official duty time, without prior consultation, is a violation of section 19(a)(1) and (6).

Case No. 70-5494, as amended:

The imposition of time limitations on the use of official time spent in administering the agreement, without prior consultation, is a violation of section 19(a)(1) and (6).

Recommendations

Based upon the foregoing Findings of Fact and Conclusions, and therein having found that Respondent has engaged in certain conduct prohibited by section 19(a)(1) and (6) of Executive Order 11491, as amended, I recommend that the Assistant Secretary adopt the following Order designed to effectuate the purposes and policies of the Order.

SUMMARY OF DECISION AND ORDER OF THE ASSISTANT SECRETARY
PURSUANT TO SECTION 6 OF EXECUTIVE ORDER 11491, AS AMENDED

VETERANS ADMINISTRATION HOSPITAL,
MINNEAPOLIS, MINNESOTA
A/SLMR No. 1090

This case involved an unfair labor practice complaint filed by Sidney M. Sanford, an individual, alleging that the Respondent violated Section 19(a)(1) and (2) of the Order when it dismissed him from his employment as a Purchase and Hire (P&H) employee in reprisal for his union activity.

The Complainant was the President of the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers, Local 292, AFL-CIO (IBEW). He was hired through the IBEW's hiring hall, along with four other electricians, to work as a temporary, or P&H, employee of the Respondent. Other than occasional use by the Respondent of the IBEW hiring hall to obtain temporary or intermittent employees, there is no collective bargaining relationship between the IBEW and the Respondent. During the Complainant's second week on the job, it became clear to the electrician foreman that Sanford would be seeking approximately four hours leave without pay (P&H employees get no regular Federal benefits) on a recurring weekly basis to do work involved with his union office, but unrelated to the Activity. The foreman indicated that the Activity's work precluded the granting of regular, recurring leave and if the Complainant were to maintain his request, the foreman would have to ask him to resign. The foreman indicated that he had never been asked for recurring leave by a P&H employee during his 11 year tenure.

The Administrative Law Judge concluded that there was no basis for the complaint. In so doing, he found that there was no evidence of animus, and that there was no discrimination against the Complainant, as his termination occurred because his request for recurring leave was inconsistent with the requirements of the job for which he had been hired.

The Assistant Secretary adopted the Administrative Law Judge's findings, conclusions and recommendation and ordered that the complaint be dismissed in its entirety.

RECOMMENDED DECISION AND ORDER

Preliminary Statement

This case arises under Executive Order 11491 as amended. It was initiated by a complaint dated September 27, 1977 and filed September 29, 1977, alleging a violation of Sections 19(a)(1) and (2) of the Executive Order. The violation was alleged to consist of discriminatorily terminating the Complainant's employment with the Respondent because his duties as President of a local of the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers required him to take a few hours off from work for the Respondent every Monday to attend to those duties. This termination was alleged to have been taken in reprisal for his activities as President of the IBEW local. The Respondent filed an extensive response to the complaint dated October 26, 1977 in the nature of a brief and a motion to dismiss.

On December 6, 1977 the Acting Regional Administrator issued a Notice of Hearing to be held February 9, 1977 in Minneapolis, Minnesota. A hearing was held on that day in that City. Both parties were represented by counsel. They presented witnesses who were examined and cross-examined and offered exhibits which with two exceptions were received in evidence. Both parties made closing arguments and timely filed well-reasoned briefs on March 13, 1978.

Preliminary Procedural Matter

At the beginning of the hearing counsel for the Complainant requested that after the completion of the testimony at that session the hearing be recessed instead of being closed to give him an opportunity to obtain employee records from the Respondent to show that Respondent's termination of Sanford was discriminatory, and perhaps offer additional testimony at a reconvened hearing. He stated that he had been retained only the day before the hearing. The request was denied. 1/ The request was renewed near the close of the testimony and again denied. 2/

After the briefs were filed counsel for the Complainant wrote to me concerning the same subject in a letter dated March 28 and received April 3, 1978. I answered in a letter dated April 6. Under date of April 10 counsel for Complainant responded to my answer. The record is reopened to make copies of those letters part of the record as Exhibits ALJ-1, ALJ-2, and ALJ-3, and the record is again closed.

Facts

The Respondent, in accordance with Veterans Administration regulations, sometimes employs employees in the various construction trades on an intermittent or temporary basis for the duration of a construction or remodeling project. Such employees are known as "Purchase and Hire" (P & H) employees. The Respondent obtains such employees by calling the hiring hall of the local union of the craft in which it seeks P & H employees. Such employees are paid at a rate above the prevailing scale because they get no credit toward a Government pension, do not receive annual or sick leave, get no paid holidays, and no help toward medical or hospital insurance.

1/ Tr. 14-16.
2/ Tr. 119-20.

In July 1977 the Respondent was about to commence a series of interrelated reconstruction projects, the second and subsequent project dependent on the completion of the one before. The projects were beyond the workload capacity of its permanent employees and it added some P & H employees for the project. It called the hiring hall of Local 292, International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers and asked for five electricians. On July 18, 1977 they reported to John T. Massey, the Respondent's Electrician Foreman. He told them that, unlike the hours on many union construction projects in the area, the hours of work were 8:00 A.M. to 4:30 P.M. and that the workweek was a five-day week Monday through Friday.

One of the five electricians was Sidney M. Sanford. He had worked for the Respondent as a P & H electrician about seven years earlier. At that time also Massey was his foreman. In the meantime he had become President of Local 292, IBEW. The Local had about 3,000 members about half of whom worked, when employed, in electrical construction work. Sanford's duties as President required him to take Monday afternoons off from work to attend to payroll matters, dealing with the bank, and other matters. Occasionally, he would have to take other time off to attend trustees' meetings; he was a trustee of several union funds. Massey makes the decisions on granting or denying leave to P & H electricians.

Local 292, IBEW does not represent any employees of the Respondent nor is it seeking to do so. There are four units of Respondent's employees represented by labor organizations. P and H employees are not included in any of the units.

The day Sanford reported for work, Monday, July 18, he told Massey he would need some time off that afternoon to attend to some business. He did not disclose the nature of the business. Massey assented, and Sanford signed off for the afternoon. (P & H employees did not accumulate leave and were not paid for time they signed off from work.) On Thursday of that week he took a couple of hours off, without asking for or obtaining leave, to attend a union trustees meeting; he simply signed off from work.

The following Monday Sanford again signed for and took the afternoon off without obtaining or asking for Massey's approval. The next day Massey spoke to Sanford about his recurrent absences and was told by Sanford that he had to have every Monday afternoon off to attend to his duties as President of Local 292, IBEW, and asked to be let off the afternoon of the following Monday. Massey denied permission and told Sanford that the job was a five-day job 8:00 A.M. to 4:30 P.M. Sanford persisted that he had to have every Monday afternoon off. Massey suggested Sanford take care of his union business after 4:30 P.M. and Sanford replied that he could not because some of it involved visits to the bank which was closed at that time. Massey told Sanford to think about it over night and decide whether to give up the union business or resign from his employment. The next morning (Wednesday) Sanford told Massey he still had to have every Monday afternoon off. Massey suggested Sanford again think about it over night. The next morning (Thursday) Sanford again said he had to have Monday afternoons off and Massey advised him he would have to resign his P & H job or be terminated. Sanford said he needed time off that day for a dental appointment, and Massey consented.

Sanford refused to resign and termination papers were prepared. The termination form 3/ had typewritten on it:

"Employee refused to work a 40 hr. tour of duty. He insisted on 4 hrs. off every Monday. He was given the option of resigning or being terminated and he chose to be terminated."

The form was presented to Sanford. He changed the word "refused" in the above-quoted statement to "unable because of union duties", and signed the form. He was terminated July 29, 1977. He was replaced by another electrician from the union hiring hall.

In his unfair-labor-practice charge preceding his complaint Sanford stated that he had to have a few hours off every Monday. 4/ He stated also that the Respondent had advance notice that he would take time off every Monday to attend to his union duties, but there is no evidence to sustain that statement, not even in his own direct testimony, and I find that the Respondent did not have advance notice.

The series of projects for which Sanford and the other P & H employees were hired was considered urgent. The first step was to remodel some space for an enlarged pharmacy.

3/ Exh. C-2.
4/ Tr. 47; Exh. A/S 2-A.

The materials occupying that space were moved temporarily elsewhere. When the pharmacy moved to its new space its old space was going to be remodelled for another function to be moved in, and so forth. A delay in completion of the new pharmacy would thus delay all subsequent steps.

Much of the electrical work in the new pharmacy required two men to perform. When one of them left the other would either be assigned to other non-urgent work or he would get one of the regular maintenance men to help him.

When Sanford was a P & H employee seven years earlier he was not President of his local. He did not have difficulty getting time off occasionally. During his 1977 employment others did not have difficulty getting time off occasionally. Massey had been Electrician Foreman for eleven years. Never before had a P & H electrician asked for time off on a regular basis. He felt that the nature of the P & H work did not permit the employment of an electrician who could not normally work the regular 40-hour week, and Respondent's Chief of Engineering Service was of the same view.

Massey was a member of IBEW in the District of Columbia for four years before he entered Government service. After entering Government service he organized an A.F.G.E. local in Salisbury, North Carolina. He is a member of an A.F.G.E. local which is the exclusive representative of a unit of Respondent's employees.

Discussion and Conclusions

The complaint alleges a violation of Sections 19(a)(1) and (2) of the Executive Order. Sanford was the only P & H electrician who had ever asked Massey for regular recurrent time off during the eleven years he had been Electrician Foreman. Assuming the other elements of a 19(a)(2) violation were present, there was no discrimination; no one else similarly situated was treated differently because there was no one else similarly situated. There was thus no violation of Section 19(a)(2). 5/

5/ Department of the Treasury, Internal Revenue Service and IRS Chicago District and National Treasury Employees Union and NTEU Chapter 10, A/SLMR No. 1042.

Nor was there a violation of Section 19(a)(1). That Section interdicts an agency from interfering with, restraining, or coercing an employee in the exercise of his rights "assured by this Order." We need not decide whether the right assured by Section 1(a) of the Order "freely and without fear of penalty or reprisal to ... assist a labor organization" is without limitation with respect to the relationship between the "labor organization" and the agency or activity. Here there was no relationship between IBEW and the Respondent other than the fact that the Respondent sometimes called the IBEW hiring hall to obtain temporary or intermittent employees. IBEW did not represent any of Respondent's employees nor was it seeking to do so. Sanford happened to be President of Local 292 of IBEW, and it was that "labor organization" he insisted on assisting while taking time off from his job with the Respondent.

While Local 292 does not represent nor is it seeking to represent any of Respondent's employees, I take judicial notice that some other locals of IBEW do represent some Government employees. Even if we assume that the right of a Government employee to assist a "labor organization" extends to include the right of an employee of Respondent to assist Local 292 -- even if we assume (contrary to fact) that Local 292 was the certified exclusive representative of a unit of Respondent's employees including Sanford, -- the right to assist a labor organization is not without limit. 6/ At least when there is absent any agreement providing otherwise, it is limited by the obligation of the employee to perform his job.

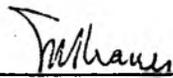

The Complainant alleges, and his brief argues, that Sanford's termination was in reprisal for his engaging in performing his duties as President of Local 292. Such assertion implies anti-union animus on the part of Massey. But the evidence does not sustain such assertion. What evidence there is in the record indicates the contrary. The record is persuasive that Massey was of the sincere belief that the nature of the P & H job for which Sanford was hired was inconsistent with Sanford regularly on a recurrent basis taking off at least a few hours a week, and his superior, the Chief of Engineering Services, concurred. Yet Sanford refused to work the regular scheduled workweek. His employment was terminated for that reason, and the fact that his refusal was based on his desire to assist Local 292 is simply coincidental and irrelevant. He has failed to sustain his burden of proof 7/ that he was terminated because of his union activities.

RECOMMENDATION

The complaint should be dismissed.

Case No. 22-7717(CA)

INTERNAL REVENUE SERVICE
A/SLMR No. 1091

On March 3, 1978, the Assistant Secretary issued his Decision and Order in Internal Revenue Service, A/SLMR No. 998, in which he found, among other things, that the Respondent violated Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order based on unilateral changes in certain personnel policies and practices after the expiration of the parties' negotiated agreement. Except for those provisions based solely on the existence of the agreement, the Assistant Secretary found that the items cancelled by the Respondent had become terms and conditions of employment which survived the agreement and, therefore, could not be changed unilaterally after the agreement expired, without affording the Complainants, the National Treasury Employees Union, Chapter 8, et al., an opportunity to invoke the processes of the Federal Service Impasses Panel. He based his determination on the rationale expressed in Internal Revenue Service, Ogden Service Center, and Internal Revenue Service, et al., A/SLMR No. 806 (1977), and Department of the Treasury, Internal Revenue Service, Brookhaven Service Center, A/SLMR No. 859 (1977).

On March 17, 1978, the Federal Labor Relations Council (Council) issued its consolidated Decision on Appeals in A/SLMR Nos. 806 and 859 (FLRC Nos. 77A-40 and 77A-92), remanding the cases to the Assistant Secretary for action consistent with its decision. In view of the rationale expressed in the Council's decision, the Assistant Secretary reconsidered his Decision in A/SLMR No. 998, and concluded that a contrary result to that reached in A/SLMR No. 998 was not warranted. Thus, he found that the Respondent's conduct in the instant case violated Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order, and modified his order in A/SLMR No. 998 consistent with the principles enunciated by the Council.

SUPPLEMENTAL DECISION AND ORDER

On March 3, 1978, the Assistant Secretary issued his Decision and Order in the above-entitled proceeding, finding, in agreement with the Administrative Law Judge, that the Respondent violated Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order based on unilateral changes in certain personnel policies and practices after the expiration of the parties' negotiated agreement. Except for those provisions based solely on the existence of the negotiated agreement, the Assistant Secretary found that the items cancelled by the Respondent had become terms and conditions of employment which survived the agreement and, therefore, could not be changed unilaterally after the agreement expired without affording the Complainants an opportunity to invoke the processes of the Federal Service Impasses Panel (Panel). The Assistant Secretary based his determination on the rationale expressed in Internal Revenue Service, Ogden Service Center, and Internal Revenue Service, et al., A/SLMR No. 806 (1977), and Department of the Treasury, Internal Revenue Service, Brookhaven Service Center, A/SLMR No. 859 (1977).

On March 17, 1978, the Federal Labor Relations Council (Council) issued its consolidated Decision on Appeals in A/SLMR Nos. 806 and 859 (FLRC Nos. 77A-40 and 77A-92), remanding the cases to the Assistant Secretary for action consistent with its decision. In view of the rationale expressed in the Council's decision, I granted a Motion for Reconsideration in the instant case filed by the Respondent and joined in by the Complainants.

In the Council's view, upon the expiration of a negotiated agreement, existing personnel policies and practices and matters affecting working conditions within the meaning of Section 11(a) of the Order, whether or not included in a negotiated agreement, continue as established, absent an express agreement by the parties that such personnel policies and practices and matters affecting working conditions terminate upon the expiration of that agreement or unless otherwise modified in a manner consistent with the Order. The Council noted, however, in this connection, that agency management retains the right, upon the expiration of a negotiated agreement, to unilaterally change those matters contained therein which are excepted from the obligation to negotiate by Section 11(b) of the Order. Similarly, those agency regulations issued during the term of a negotiated agreement which were not operative with respect to the bargaining unit during such term, become effective, as mandated by Section 12(a) of the Order, upon the expiration of the agreement. The Council also found that where the parties are renegotiating a comprehensive collective bargaining agreement and reach impasse, changes may not be effected upon expiration of their prior agreement unless adequate notice is provided prior to the implementation of such otherwise negotiable changes in personnel policies and practices and other matters affecting working conditions, so as to afford the other party a reasonable period in which to invoke the processes of the Panel. If the Panel's processes are invoked within a reasonable period of time of such notice, the parties must adhere to established personnel policies and practices and matters affecting working conditions, including those contained in the expired agreement, to the maximum extent possible.

Applying the foregoing principles enunciated by the Council to the circumstances of the instant case, I find that a contrary result to that reached in A/SLMR No. 998 is not warranted. Thus, the evidence establishes that following the expiration of the parties' negotiated agreement, the Respondent herein unilaterally terminated certain provisions of the parties' expired negotiated agreement, including such items as the contractual grievance procedure and non-advisory arbitration, which were mandatory subjects of bargaining within the ambit of Section 11(a) of the Order. ^{1/} Further, the evidence establishes that, prior to its action, the Respondent failed to afford the Complainants a reasonable opportunity to invoke the services of the Panel, although the latter had expressed an intent to do so.

Under all of these circumstances, I find that the Respondent's conduct violated Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order. In connection with this finding, I shall modify the order in A/SLMR No. 998 consistent with the principles enunciated by the Council.

^{1/} See Department of the Treasury, Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms, A/SLMR No. 1049 (1978). There is no evidence that an agency regulation had been issued during the term of the parties' negotiated agreement mandating the Respondent's termination of Section 11(a) matters upon the expiration of such agreement.

ORDER

Pursuant to Section 6(b) of Executive Order 11491, as amended, and Section 203.26(b) of the Regulations, the Assistant Secretary of Labor for Labor-Management Relations hereby orders that the Internal Revenue Service shall:

1. Cease and desist from:

(a) Making unilateral changes in existing personnel policies and practices and matters affecting working conditions within the ambit of Section 11(a) of the Order, after the expiration of a negotiated agreement and in the absence of a bargaining impasse, or, if a bargaining impasse exists, without affording the National Treasury Employees Union, Chapter 8, et al., or any other exclusive representative, the opportunity to invoke the services of the Federal Service Impasses Panel at a time prior to the implementation of such changes.

(b) In any like or related manner interfering with, restraining, or coercing employees in the exercise of their rights assured by Executive Order 11491, as amended.

2. Take the following affirmative actions in order to effectuate the purposes and policies of Executive Order 11491, as amended:

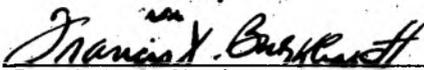

(a) Proceed to grievance-nonadvisory arbitration in any case in which the past refusal to do so was predicated upon the expiration of the Multi-District Agreement between the Internal Revenue Service and the National Treasury Employees Union, Chapter 8, et al., upon appropriate request, within 21 days after the date of this order.

(b) To the extent consonant with law and regulations, restore all benefits, including annual leave, denied due to unilateral changes in existing personnel policies and practices and matters affecting working conditions within the ambit of Section 11(a) of the Order after the expiration of the May 3, 1974, negotiated agreement for the period November 8, 1975, to December 23, 1975.

(c) Post at the District Offices of the Internal Revenue Service that were parties to said Multi-District Agreement, copies of the attached notice marked "Appendix" on forms to be furnished by the Assistant Secretary of Labor for Labor-Management Relations. Upon receipt of such forms, they shall be signed by the Director of each said District Office and shall be posted and maintained by him for 60 consecutive days thereafter, in conspicuous places, including all places where notices to employees are customarily posted. Said Directors shall take reasonable steps to insure that such notices are not altered, defaced, or covered by any other material.

(d) Pursuant to Section 203.27 of the Regulations, notify the Assistant Secretary, in writing, within 30 days of the date of this order as to what steps have been taken to comply herewith.

RECOMMENDED DECISION AND ORDER

Preliminary Statement

This case arises under Executive Order 11491 as amended. It was initiated by a complaint filed January 10, 1977 alleging a violation of Sections 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Executive Order. The violation was alleged to consist of the Respondent unilaterally declaring terminated 61 provisions of an expired Multi-District agreement when the Complainant advised the Respondent that negotiations were at an impasse and that it intended to request the services of the Federal Service Impasses Panel.

The Respondent filed a response to the complaint in which it stated that the provisions of the agreement that were cancelled were those that concern benefits or duties accruing directly to the Complainant as an institution, which benefits and duties arose solely from the negotiated agreement and did not survive the expiration of the agreement. The response argued that the cancellation of such rights of the union therefore was not in violation of the Executive Order.

On April 14, 1977 the Acting Regional Administrator issued a Notice of Hearing to be held in Washington, D.C. on May 31, 1977. Pursuant to an Order Rescheduling Hearing, a hearing was held in Washington on June 15, 1977. Both parties were represented by counsel. They introduced a stipulation and joint exhibits. The Complainant offered in evidence thirteen exhibits, the authenticity of which the Respondent conceded, but the admissibility of which the Respondent opposed. Eleven of them were received in evidence. Neither party offered any witnesses and both waived closing argument. Both sides filed briefs.

FACTS

1. On June 8, 1976, the Internal Revenue Service acting on behalf of 57 IRS District Offices throughout the United States, and the National Treasury Employees Union acting on behalf of its chapters and joint councils that represented unit employees of IRS in those 57 offices, began negotiations on a successor collective bargaining to replace the Multi-District Agreement covering approximately 30,000 employees in the aforementioned 57 IRS District Offices.

2. The agreement sought to be negotiated would be the third such multi-unit agreement between the parties and was to be known as Multi-District Agreement III (MDA III).

3. The parties met and negotiated on approximately 40 separate occasions between June and September 1976 in an effort to reach agreement.

4. The expiration date of MDA II was August 3, 1976. On July 28, 1976 the parties were still in negotiation on MDA III and they extended MDA II to September 3, 1976. On August 27, 1976 they again extended it subject to either party filing a request with the Federal Service Impasses Panel. The August 27 agreement extended MDA II "until such time as the Union invokes Impasse as provided for in Executive Order 11491, as amended" and further provided:

"... Each party reserves the right, subsequent to the termination of 'mediation' or the termination of direct negotiations between the parties, to serve upon the other party in writing a five-day notice of termination of this extension agreement. The agreement will then terminate at midnight of the fifth (5th) calendar day after receipt by either party of a notice of termination. The Union agrees to give the Employer five (5) days notice in writing prior to exercising its right to invoke the Impasse Procedures referred to above. ..."

5. On November 2, 1976, NTEU National President, Vincent L. Connery, informed the Commissioner of the Internal Revenue Service, Donald C. Alexander, that NTEU was terminating the August 27 extension and informed him that it would be proceeding to the Federal Service Impasses Panel by filing a request with FSIP after five days as provided in the August 27 extension agreement.

6. By letter dated November 5, 1976 Billy J. Brown, IRS Director of Personnel, acknowledged the NTEU communication of November 2 and informed NTEU President Connery that IRS considered the contract terminated and that the termination ended the "institutional benefits" to the Union contained in the contract. A list of the "institutional benefits" was attached. It stated also that other benefits in the agreement that accrue to individual employees would continue in effect. 1/

7. On November 8, 1976 NTEU by letter to Commissioner Alexander charged IRS with violating Sections 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Executive Order by its letter of November 5, 1976.

8. On November 8, 1976 NTEU by letter to Commissioner Alexander requested a meeting with IRS to discuss the IRS letter of November 5, 1976 and its attachment.

9. On November 19, 1976 a meeting was held by representatives of IRS and NTEU to try to resolve the issues raised by the IRS letter of November 5, 1976 and the NTEU unfair-labor-practice charge of November 8, 1976. No agreement was reached.

10. On December 7, 1976 the IRS Director of the Personnel Division by letter informed the NTEU National President of the IRS final decision that no violation of the Executive Order had occurred.

11. On December 17, 1976 NTEU President Connery executed the complaint in this case and the same day NTEU General Counsel Tobias mailed it to the Area Director. It was filed January 10, 1977.

12. On December 23, 1976 the parties agreed that effective that date MDA II would again become effective immediately "until the implementation date of the Multi-District III agreement" which had been negotiated and was pending ratification. MDA III was ratified and became effective May 1, 1977, replacing the reinstated MDA II.

13. During the period MDA II was not in effect preceding the effective date of MDA III, November 8 to December 23, 1975, the Respondent denied to the Complainant what it considered "institutional benefits" of MDA II. Thus administrative time to stewards was denied on three occasions, 2/ IRS denied permission to post a union publication on a bulletin board, 3/ it denied permission to hold a chapter meeting in an IRS meeting room, and it held grievances not subject to arbitration if the grievance was filed during that period although arbitration was not invoked until after MDA II was reinstated on December 23, 1976. 4/

DISCUSSION

I. The Proper Parties

I. The Agency contends that the complaint should be dismissed because not filed against the proper parties, i.e., the exclusive recognition is by 57 separate District Offices which have the bargaining relationship, either certified or recognized, and they are indispensable parties, while the complaint here is against the National Internal Revenue Service.

The conduct complained of was directed by the National IRS which also engaged in the negotiations on behalf of the District Offices. It was the National IRS office that declared the "institutional benefits" terminated at the expiration of MDA II, and determined its consequences.

3/ C. Exh. 9.
4/ C. Exhs. 3, 5, 6, 7, 8.

A priori, and on the authority of several decisions of the Assistant Secretary, 5/ an agency need not have a bargaining relationship with a union to commit a violation of section 19(a)(1) of the Executive Order. Just about anyone could be guilty of interfering with, restraining, or coercing an employee in the exercise of his rights assured by the Executive Order. So at most this position of the Respondent could plausibly have been directed only to dismissing the complaint with respect to its 19(a)(6) aspect, -- for whatever purpose that would have served.

But since the decision of the Federal Labor Relations Council in Naval Air Rework Facility, Pensacola, Florida and Secretary of the Navy and American Federation of Government Employees, AFL-CIO, Local 1960, FLRC No. 76A-37 (May 4, 1977) and of the Assistant Secretary in the same case on remand, A/SLMR No. 873 (August 4, 1977), it is settled that agency management above the organizational level of exclusive recognition commits a violation of section 19(a)(6) as well as 19(a)(1) when it is responsible for the improper conduct alleged.

The complaint should not be dismissed for failure to name the appropriate respondent.

II. The Merits

II. The Respondent contends that for the period MDA II expired and was not extended or reinstated by agreement, it expired "in its entirety, and nothing is left." 6/ It concedes, however, that the terms of the agreement that were required subjects of bargaining became established working conditions and could not be changed unilaterally without bargaining for their rescission. It takes the position that the provisions of the agreement it declared of no effect were only those that conferred "institutional benefits", i.e., benefits to the union which existed only because of the existence of the agreement. The Assistant Secretary has addressed himself to this problem or related problems at least three times.

In U.S. Army Corps of Engineers, Philadelphia District and American Federation of Government Employees, Local 902, AFL-CIO, A/SLMR No. 673 (June 23, 1976), the parties engaged in good faith bargaining until they reached impasse. Neither party invoked the services of the Federal Service Impasses Panel. The Assistant Secretary said that in such situation the agency had the right unilaterally to change existing conditions of employment which change did not exceed the scope of the change it proposed during the negotiations. The agency did make a change that did not exceed the scope of what it proposed. However, it did so abruptly without notice to the union in time to give it "ample opportunity" to invoke the services of the Panel. The union then invoked the services of the Panel and filed a complaint under the Executive Order. The Assistant Secretary held that such conduct by the agency violated Sections 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Executive Order. The reason it was found to be such a violation was that the union must be given an opportunity to invoke such services and if it does "it will effectuate the purposes of the Order to require that the parties must, in the absence of an overriding exigency, maintain the status quo and permit the processes of the Panel to run its course before a unilateral change in terms or conditions of employment can be effectuated."

It is observed that in the instant case the Complainant was under contractual obligation to give the Respondent five days notice of its intent to invoke the services of FSIP. ^{7/} It did so on November 2, 1976, and only three days later, before the Complainant could lawfully carry out its intent, the Respondent by letter of November 5 advised the Complainant that what it considered "institutional benefits" conferred by the agreement were no longer in effect. ^{8/} (It is observed also that among what the Respondent designated as "institutional benefits" no longer in effect was the right of an employee to invoke arbitration of a grievance if he was unsuccessful in the preceding four steps of processing the grievance as provided in the agreement.)

Internal Revenue Service, Ogden Service Center, et al. and National Treasury Employees Union, NTEU Chapter No. 066, et al., A/SLMR No. 806 was decided March 1, 1977, after the critical events in this case, and the parties did not have the benefit of its teaching to guide their conduct

So far as the issues in that case are relevant to the issues in this case, the material facts are the same in both cases except that that case did not involve the question of resort to FSIP. The agreement that expired in that case was a Multi-Center Agreement (MCA) instead of a Multi-District Agreement. The Internal Revenue Service declared certain provisions of MCA no longer in effect. Among them were provisions for administrative leave for union representatives to prepare grievances, posting on bulletin boards, permission to the union to address new employees and training classes, and the allowance of appeals of grievances to arbitration. The Administrative Law Judge recommended that the unilateral termination of such arrangements upon expiration of the agreement be held not violative of the Executive Order. In disagreement with the ALJ the Assistant Secretary held:

^{7/} Exh. J 4.
^{8/} Exh. J 6.

"... the unilateral elimination of those agreement provisions characterized by the Respondent as 'institutional benefits' accruing to the union qua union was violative of Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order. Thus, in my view, only those rights and privileges which are based solely on the existence of a written agreement -- e.g., checkoff privileges -- in effect, terminated with the expiration of a negotiated agreement. On the other hand, other rights and privileges accorded to exclusive representatives continue in effect until such time as they as they are modified or eliminated pursuant to negotiations or changed after a good faith bargaining impasse has been reached. Under these circumstances, I find that the Respondent Service Centers' unilateral elimination of other agreement provisions related to the NTEU's rights, such as posting privileges, etc., constituted an improper unilateral change in personnel policies and practices in violation of Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order." [Footnotes omitted.]

A still later decision of the Assistant Secretary involving essentially the same parties, is Department of the Treasury, Internal Revenue Service, Brookhaven Service Center and National Treasury Employees Union and Chapter 099, NTEU, A/SLMR No. 859, decided June 29, 1977. In that case the underlying facts were the same as in A/SLMR No. 806, i.e., the same MCA had expired. The Respondent had refused arbitration as the last step in grievance procedure because of its position that with the expiration of the agreement that provision had become inoperative as an "institutional benefit" of the expired agreement. The Assistant Secretary held:

"... arbitration is not one of those rights or privileges uniquely tied to a written agreement which terminates upon the expiration of a Federal sector negotiated agreement. Rather ... arbitration, once agreed upon by the parties as the final step for the settling of disputes arising under a negotiated agreement, continues thereafter as a term and condition of employment . . ."

The Assistant Secretary added a footnote that this holding did not mean that an activity could not unilaterally change a condition of employment if such change did not exceed the scope of its proposals in prior negotiations and the parties had bargained to impasse over such proposal and the matters had not been submitted to FSIP, citing U.S. Army Corps of Engineers, Philadelphia District, supra.

I conclude that very little contained in an expired agreement expires with the agreement automatically other than the dues withholding provisions. The provisions the Respondent asserted were no longer effective after expiration are set forth in the attachment to Joint Exhibit 6. It would unreasonably prolong this Recommended Decision to discuss them seriatim. The complaint describes them as some 61 separate provisions in the "MDA II". On the basis of the decisions discussed above, I conclude that only Article 34, providing for advisory arbitration of adverse actions which the Complainant concedes expired with the expiration of the agreement; 9/ the last sentence of Article 35, Section 3(A), authorizing the union to initiate a grievance when it believes it has been denied a right under the agreement; Article 37, providing for a Labor-Management Relations Committee consisting of representatives of the union and representatives of Management; and Article 38, providing for dues withholding, expired with the expiration of the agreement. 10/ I do not consider those provisions to be included in the phrase

9/ Plaintiff's brief, p. 12, fn. 4.

10/ Article 35, Section 3B, providing that the Union would have the right to be present at formal discussions between an employee and management concerning a grievance, survives not because it is a provision of the agreement but because it is mandated by the last sentence of Section 10(e) of the Executive Order.

"terms or conditions of employment" as used in U.S. Army Corps of Engineers, Philadelphia District, supra, and hence not within the interdiction of that case against an agency unilaterally changing a contract provision after impasse without giving the union an opportunity to invoke the services of the Federal Service Impasses Panel. Also, Article 39, setting forth the duration and termination of the agreement, became obsolete with its expiration.

III. The Remedy

The complaint complains of "some 61 separate provisions in the" MDA that were unilaterally cancelled. The charge preceding the complaint charged a violation of Sections 19(a)(1) and (6) in the Respondent announcing its intention to ignore 61 provisions of the expired agreement.

The Respondent objected to the admission in evidence of eleven Complainant exhibits showing eleven instances of the Respondent carrying out its announced intention, on the ground that they postdated the original charge and in most cases the complaint. I do not believe it would further the purposes of the Order or the Regulations to require a charge and complaint to sustain an unfair labor practice allegation when an agency announces its intention to commit an unfair labor practice and then to require another charge and complaint to permit the complainant to show each instance of the agency carrying out its announced intention. Such evidence is not so much evidence of an additional unfair labor practice but is more in the nature of evidence of the damages flowing from the originally alleged unfair labor practice.

Some of the instances of improperly carrying out the announced unlawful intention are irremediable, such as denying bulletin posting and denying space for a union meeting, except insofar as ordering the Respondent to desist from such conduct in the future should the same situation arise again may be considered remedial. The denial of administrative leave to a steward to discuss a grievance or present it, which was authorized by the agreement but denied on the ground that "institutional benefits" had terminated is remediable if the steward took annual leave, by restoring such leave. The refusal to proceed to arbitration with a grievance can be remedied to the extent that the Respondent can be ordered to proceed to arbitration upon request of the Complainant made within 21 days 11/ of the date of the order in this case.

11/ The period allowed for invoking arbitration in MDA II. Jt. Exh. 1, Art. 36, Section 8.

RECOMMENDATION

Accordingly, I recommend that the Assistant Secretary order the Respondent to cease and desist similarly to the cease and desist order in A/SLMR No. 806, order the Respondent to restore annual leave charged to employees when administrative leave was authorized by the agreement but denied because of the expiration of MDA II, and order the Respondent to proceed to arbitration if requested by the Complainant within 21 days in any case in which the past refusal to do so was predicated on the expiration of MDA II.

A proposed Order so ordering is attached hereto as Attachment A, and a notice to be posted is attached hereto as Appendix A.

UNITED STATES DEPARTMENT OF LABOR
ASSISTANT SECRETARY FOR LABOR-MANAGEMENT RELATIONS
SUMMARY OF DECISION AND ORDER OF THE ASSISTANT SECRETARY
PURSUANT TO SECTION 6 OF EXECUTIVE ORDER 11491, AS AMENDED

INTERNAL REVENUE SERVICE AND
BROOKHAVEN SERVICE CENTER
A/SLMR No. 1092

This case involved an unfair labor practice complaint filed by the National Treasury Employees Union (NTEU) and NTEU Chapter 99 (Complainants) alleging that the Respondents, the Internal Revenue Service (IRS) and its Brookhaven Service Center, violated Section 19(a)(1) of the Order by denying four employees their designated choice of representatives as their personal representative in an agency grievance procedure solely on the basis that their chosen representatives were affiliated with the Complainants. The Complainants contended essentially that a meeting between employees and management involving grievances filed under the IRS' grievance procedure constituted a formal discussion within the meaning of Section 10(e) of the Order and that employees involved in such a procedure are entitled to union representation. Conversely, the Respondents took the position that the Order does not provide an employee with a protected right to union representation in an agency grievance procedure, and that the denial of such representation under the particular circumstances of this case was not violative of the Order.

The Respondents denied the individual employees representation by the NTEU in a grievance filed under the IRS' grievance procedure on the basis that such representation presented a potential conflict of interest. In denying such representation, the Respondents relied on recent amendments to Part 771 Agency Grievance System of title 5 of the Code of Federal Regulations, which, among other things, modified Part 771 to permit an agency to disallow an employee's selection of a representative "...on the grounds of conflict of interest or conflict of position."

The Assistant Secretary found that the Respondents' conduct in denying the four employees involved representation by the Complainants under the IRS' grievance procedure was not violative of Section 19(a)(1) of the Order. He noted that the Respondents' conduct was based on provisions contained in the regulations of an appropriate authority outside the IRS, in this instance the Civil Service Commission (Commission), whose regulations regulate agency grievance systems. He noted further that, absent evidence of anti-union motivation, the enforcement of the rules governing the IRS' grievance procedure, which procedure is the creation of the IRS pursuant to the requirements of the Commission, is the responsibility of the IRS and the Commission. And where, as in the instant case, the Commission has specifically regulated agency grievance procedures by providing that an agency head may deny employees a particular representative on the grounds of conflict of interest or conflict of position, the Assistant Secretary concluded the unfair labor practice procedures of the Order cannot, in effect, be utilized to police the agency's application of the Commission's regulations.

Accordingly, the Assistant Secretary found, under the particular circumstances of this case, that the Respondents' conduct in denying employees their choice of representation based on the provisions of the Code of Federal Regulations was not violative of Section 19(a)(1) of the Order, and he ordered that the complaint be dismissed in its entirety.

DECISION AND ORDER

This matter is before the Assistant Secretary pursuant to Regional Administrator Hilary M. Sheply's Order Transferring Case to the Assistant Secretary of Labor in accordance with Sections 203.5(b), 203.7(a)(4) and 206.5(a) of the Assistant Secretary's Regulations.

Upon consideration of the entire record in the subject case, including the parties' stipulation of facts, accompanying exhibits and briefs, the Assistant Secretary finds:

The complaint herein alleges that the Internal Revenue Service and its Brookhaven Service Center, hereinafter called Respondents, violated Section 19(a)(1) of the Order by denying four employees their designated choice of representatives as their personal representative in an agency grievance procedure solely on the basis that their chosen representatives were affiliated with the National Treasury Employees Union (NTEU) and NTEU Chapter 99, hereinafter called NTEU or Complainants. The Complainants contend essentially that a meeting between an employee and management concerning an agency grievance constitutes a formal discussion within the meaning of Section 10(e) of the Order and that therefore the affected employees in this matter are entitled to union representation in the processing of their agency grievances. The Respondents contend, on the other hand, that the Order does not provide an employee with a protected right to union representation in an agency grievance procedure and that the denial of such representation under the particular circumstances of this case was not violative of the Order.

The undisputed facts, as stipulated by the parties, are as follows:

Four bargaining unit employees at the Internal Revenue Service's (IRS) Brookhaven Service Center applied for promotion to supervisory positions during November and December 1976. In accordance with the Internal Revenue Manual, each applicant's supervisor prepared a Performance Evaluation and a Report of Managerial Potential for each applicant to be utilized in evaluating them in connection with the applied for supervisory positions. After receiving copies of their evaluations and reports, the four applicants filed agency grievances under the IRS' grievance procedure contesting their promotion evaluations. Each of the four applicants designated an NTEU National Field Representative and/or an NTEU Chapter 99 Union Representative as her representative. Thereafter, the Brookhaven Service Center Director advised each of the four applicants that he was denying their request for union representation. In this regard, he stated, that, "Since you have applied for a supervisory position, Union representation on this agency grievance would present a potential conflict of interest." ^{1/}

The NTEU's General Counsel, Robert Tobias, appealed the denials of the representatives of said applicants to Billy J. Brown, the Director of the IRS' Personnel Division. Mr. Brown responded to each employee by affirming the Brookhaven Service Center Director's denials of their designated NTEU representatives. He based his decision on amendments published on November 2, 1976, to Part 771 Agency Grievance System of title 5, Code of Federal Regulations. In this regard, Section 771.105 now provides, in part:

§771.105 Presentation of a grievance

(c) The agency shall have the right:

(1)

(2) To disallow any selection the employee makes with regard to a representative on the grounds of conflict of interest or conflict of position.

(d) The employee shall have the right to challenge the decision to disallow his/her choice of representative to the head of the agency or a person the head of the agency has designated in accordance with the procedures described in the agency grievance procedure...The decision [of the agency head or his designee] will be final.

Prior to the above amendments of the Code, an employee's right to be represented by a representative of his own choosing was not qualified in this manner.

^{1/} He also informed the employees that, "You may have a representative of your own choosing as long as that individual is not a steward or official of NTEU."

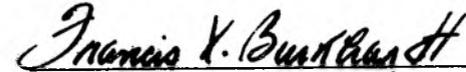

FINDINGS AND CONCLUSIONS

ORDER

IT IS HEREBY ORDERED that the complaint in Case No. 22-07995(CA) be, and it hereby is, dismissed.

Dated, Washington, D.C.

July 27, 1978

Francis X. Burkhardt, Assistant Secretary of Labor for Labor-Management Relations

Under the particular circumstances of this case, I find that the Respondents' conduct in denying the four employees involved herein representation by the Complainants under the IRS' grievance procedure was not violative of Section 19(a)(1) of the Order. Thus, as indicated above, the Respondents' refusal to permit the NTEU to represent the employees involved in the IRS' grievance procedure was based on certain provisions contained in the regulations of an appropriate authority outside the IRS, the Civil Service Commission, whose regulations regulate agency grievance systems. The Commission's regulations provide, in effect, that an agency shall have the right to disallow any selection which an employee makes with regard to a representative on the grounds of conflict of interest or conflict of position and that, upon challenge of the decision to disallow the choice of representative to the head of the agency or his/her designee, the decision of the agency head or his/her designee will be final.

In accordance with the foregoing Civil Service Commission's procedure, the Complainants herein appealed the determination of the Brookhaven Service Center Director denying the employees' request for union representation to the Director of the IRS' Personnel Division. The latter affirmed the Center Director's decision that union representation in the circumstances involved would present a potential conflict of interest.

While I might disagree with the Respondents' application of the Civil Service Commission's regulations in the instant proceeding, I find that, absent evidence of anti-union motivation ^{2/}, the enforcement of the rules governing IRS' grievance procedure, which procedure is the creation of the IRS pursuant to the requirements of the Civil Service Commission, is the responsibility of the IRS and the Civil Service Commission. ^{3/} And where, as here, the Commission has specifically regulated agency grievance procedures by providing that an agency head may deny employees a particular representative on the grounds of conflict of interest or conflict of position, in my view, the unfair labor practice procedures of the Order cannot, in effect, be utilized to police the agency's application of the Commission's regulations.

Accordingly, under the particular circumstances herein, I find that the Respondents' conduct in denying four employees their choice of representation based on the provisions of Part 771 of title 5 of the Code of Federal Regulations was not violative of Section 19(a)(1) of the Order, and I shall, therefore, order that the subject complaint be dismissed in its entirety.

^{2/} There was no allegation of anti-union motivation in this matter.

Case No. 70-5722(CA)

This case involved an unfair labor practice complaint filed by the American Federation of Government Employees, Local 1931, AFL-CIO (Complainant) alleging that the Respondent violated Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order by failing to consult and confer with the Complainant before changing a policy and practice of furnishing copies of certain documents upon request. The Respondent contended there was no established past practice in this regard, and, in addition, with respect to the X118C rating schedules, that the material was confidential.

AMERICAN FEDERATION OF GOVERNMENT EMPLOYEES,
LOCAL 1931, AFL-CIO

Complainant

The Administrative Law Judge found, with the exception of the X118C rating schedules, that the practice of furnishing copies had matured into a term and condition of employment and that prior to changing such a term and condition of employment, the Respondent should have given the Complainant an opportunity to consult, confer, or negotiate. He found the X118C rating schedules to be confidential material which the Respondent could properly deny the Complainant without affording it an opportunity to negotiate.

DECISION AND ORDER

On May 25, 1978, Administrative Law Judge Thomas Schneider issued his Recommended Decision and Order in the above-entitled proceeding, finding that the Respondent had engaged in conduct which was violative of Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order and recommending that it cease and desist therefrom. ^{1/} No exceptions were filed to the Administrative Law Judge's Recommended Decision and Order.

Noting particularly the absence of exceptions, the Assistant Secretary adopted the Administrative Law Judge's findings, conclusions and recommendations, and ordered that the Respondent cease and desist from the conduct found violative of the Order and that it take certain affirmative actions.

The Assistant Secretary has reviewed the rulings of the Administrative Law Judge made at the hearing and finds that no prejudicial error was committed. The rulings are hereby affirmed. Upon consideration of the Administrative Law Judge's Recommended Decision and Order and the entire record in this case, and noting particularly that no exceptions were filed, I hereby adopt the Administrative Law Judge's findings, conclusions and recommendations, as modified herein.

ORDER

Pursuant to Section 6(b) of Executive Order 11491, as amended, and Section 203.26(b) of the Regulations, the Assistant Secretary of Labor for Labor-Management Relations hereby orders that the Department of the Navy, Naval Weapons Station, Concord, California, shall:

^{1/} In his proposed remedial order, the Administrative Law Judge did not recommend that the Respondent take any affirmative action.

1. Cease and desist from:

(a) Instituting a change in the policy and practice of furnishing the American Federation of Government Employees, Local 1931, AFL-CIO, the exclusive representative of certain of its employees, upon request, copies of documents such as those sought by the Union in its March 5, 1977, request, with the exception of XI18C rating schedules, without first affording such representative notice and an opportunity to meet and confer concerning a proposed change in such policy and practice.

(b) In any like or related manner, interfering with, restraining, or coercing its employees in the exercise of their rights assured by Executive Order 11491, as amended.

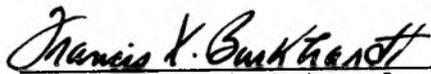

2. Take the following affirmative actions in order to effectuate the purposes and policies of Executive Order 11491, as amended:

(a) Upon request, furnish the American Federation of Government Employees, Local 1931, AFL-CIO, with copies of all documents sought in its March 5, 1977, letter, with the exception of the XI18C rating schedules.

(b) Post at its facility at the Department of the Navy, Naval Weapons Station, Concord, California, copies of the attached notice marked "Appendix" on forms to be furnished by the Assistant Secretary of Labor for Labor-Management Relations. Upon receipt of such forms, they shall be signed by the Commanding Officer, Department of the Navy, Naval Weapons Station, Concord, California, and they shall be posted and maintained by him for 60 consecutive days thereafter, in conspicuous places, including all places where notices to employees are customarily posted. The Commanding Officer shall take reasonable steps to insure that such notices are not altered, defaced, or covered by any other material.

(c) Pursuant to Section 203.27 of the Regulations, notify the Assistant Secretary, in writing, within 30 days from the date of this order as to what steps have been taken to comply herewith.

RECOMMENDED DECISION AND ORDER

This proceeding is brought under Executive Order 11491, as amended (the "Order") by the American Federation of Government Employees, Local 1931, AFL-CIO, (the "Union") against the Department of the Navy, Naval Weapons Station, Concord, California (the "Activity"). In its amended complaint, filed September 26, 1977, the Union charged the Activity with violating sections 19(a), (1) and (6) of the Order by failing to confer and consult with the Union before changing a policy and practice of furnishing the Union duplicated copies of certain materials upon request.

A hearing was held in San Francisco, California, on January 9, 1978, and briefs were filed by both sides thereafter. Based upon the evidence and arguments presented I make the following findings of fact and conclusions and recommended order.

Findings of Fact and Conclusions

At all material times, the Union was the recognized exclusive representative of all employees as defined in the basic agreement between the parties, dated March 19, 1974.

In the years prior to March 5, 1977, various Union officials would from time to time request copies of various documents from Activity management. The kinds of documents requested would include federal wage standards, position descriptions, excerpts from the Federal Personnel Manual, regulations, copies of "X118C's", and other material. These requests were usually granted to the extent that the Activity had the material from which copies could be made. In particular, Mr. A. Compaglia, the Supervisory Labor Relations Specialist who spoke for the Commanding Officer on labor management relations, was very cooperative. On occasion, if he was busy he would suggest to the requesting Union official that he take the material to be copied to the copier and make the desired copies himself. (Unfortunately, at the time of hearing Mr. Compaglia was incapacitated so that he could not testify personally. However, his sworn statement was introduced and considered.)

On March 5, 1977, Mr. Wilfred J. Scott, President of the Union by letter requested the following information:

The letter further requested "that this information be provided immediately in order that we may assist employees in processing their Reduction-In-Force three or four pages each.

On March 7, 1977, Mr. Compaglia responded with the following letter:

It is this letter of refusal that triggered this unfair labor practice charge. The Union contends that the refusal to furnish the requested copies was retaliation for the Union having filed nine unfair labor practice complaints shortly before. The Activity contends that it was never its practice to furnish copies on demand. In any event, it is agreed that the parties did not negotiate concerning the subject of copying prior to the Activity's letter of March 7, 1977. It should be noted that effective September 23, 1977, i.e., six months after the beginning of the controversy, the parties executed a written agreement regarding the use of copying machines, which includes a provision that the Union will pay four cents per copy when it uses the Activity's machines.

The fact of this agreement shows that the use of copying machines is a subject that can be negotiated. It does not, of course, show what the practice had been prior to its execution.

It should be noted that there is no dispute here about access to information (except X118C's as noted below). The Activity has always been willing to give the Union access to documents. At issue is the furnishing of copies.

It is well established that once a practice has matured into a term and condition of employment management may not unilaterally change it without consulting with the union. Veterans Administration, Veteran Administration Regional Office, New York Region and American Federation of Government Employees, Local Union 1151, AFL-CIO, A/SLMR No. 694; Internal Revenue Service, Office of the Regional Commissioner, Western Region and National Treasury Employees' Union, A/SLMR No. 473.

As noted above, prior to March 1977, the Union had usually obtained copies it requested. The Activity contends, however, that there was no established practice. It contends that there was no practice to furnish X118C's because this was confidential material. X118C's were described at the hearing as something akin to a job grading sheet for a particular job, in the nature of testing material. Since several credible witnesses testified that this was confidential material, at least to the extent that it could not be copied although on occasion it could be examined, and since Civil Service Commission Regional Letter No. 75-6 makes rating schedules confidential to this extent, I conclude that it was proper to deny the Union copies of X118C's, regardless of past practice and even without an opportunity to negotiate on this point.

The evidence presented by the Activity pertained largely to reasons why the Union was refused the copies it requested in March 1977.

Several of the Activity's witnesses gave the impression that it was entirely discretionary with them to determine whether the Union needed a copy of a given document. Such discretion cannot be exercised in this context. The policy underlying the Order is to provide "employees an opportunity to participate in the formulation and implementation of personnel policies and practices", and to maintain "cooperative relationships between labor organizations and management officials." Order, Preamble. This implies more equality between the Union and Management than these witnesses acknowledged. If a Union is to represent employees effectively, its officials must in the first instance decide what they need to do the job. It is not for management to decide that a copy of this regulation or that job description is irrelevant to the Union's task.

One Personnel Management Specialist testified it was his policy not to furnish copies of materials unless he had extra copies or he felt there was need for it. But the weight of the evidence indicates that, in fact, requests for copies were almost always honored by at least some management personnel, unless the requested matter was privileged.

The Activity contended that the Union was not entitled to the copies it requested because it was not representing employees who had appeals pending. An Activity witness testified that in the past he had supplied the Union with copies of documents, but generally only when appeals were pending. Here the evidence shows that there was an immediate need for the information sought because 25 or 30 employees were threatened with a reduction in force and the Union had to help them decide whether to appeal. Whether an appeal had actually been filed is an immaterial technicality in the instant case.

The Activity also contends that it was past practice to refuse to give the Union copies of material the Union already had. But the evidence showed only one instance in which the Union was refused a copy of a Civilian Manpower Management Instruction, (Tr. 54) because it had just recently been given a copy of the identical instruction. That was an exception to the practice of general cooperation, not a negation of the practice itself. At times there had been discussions as to whether a particular item was necessary, but these discussions were always settled amicably.

Furthermore, I find that position descriptions and wage standards are periodically changed, and that the most convenient way of determining the currency of these documents is to get a copy of the latest version.

The Activity contends that the items requested in May of 1977 were unusually lengthy. At most they amounted to 30-40 pages. This argument seems contrived.

Several witnesses testified to the conclusion that there was no change in policy concerning copies in March of 1977. However, the specifics prior to that time show that copies were furnished and the Activity's letter of March 7, 1977, shows that copies would not be as readily furnished thereafter.

Therefore, with the exception of X118C's, I find that the practice of furnishing copies had matured into a term and condition of employment. Prior to changing such a term and condition, the Activity should have given the Union an opportunity to consult, confer or negotiate. Order, Section 19(a)(6).

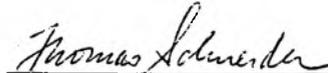

Recommended Order

It is recommended that the Activity be directed by the Assistant Secretary to cease and desist from:

(a) changing existing terms and conditions of employment without first meeting and conferring with the American Federation of Government Employees, Local 1931, AFL-CIO;

(b) in any like or related manner interfering with, restraining or coercing employees in the exercise of their rights assured by Executive Order 11491, as amended; and to post a notice of its intent in the form attached as "Exhibit A" in conspicuous places at the station including all bulletin boards where notices to employees are customarily posted. Respondent should be directed to take reasonable steps to insure that such notices remain posted for 60 days and are not altered, defaced, or covered.

SUMMARY OF DECISION AND ORDER OF THE ASSISTANT SECRETARY

GENERAL SERVICES ADMINISTRATION,

A/SLMR No. 1094

This case involved an unfair labor practice complaint filed by the American Federation of Government Employees, Council of Locals 1497 and 2195 (AFGE) alleging that the Respondent violated Section 19(a)(1) and (2) of the Order when one of its supervisors made disparaging remarks to employees about the AFGE.

The Administrative Law Judge concluded that the Respondent's conduct was violative of Section 19(a)(1) of the Order. In this regard, he found that the statements made by the Respondent's supervisor to several employees who were members of the AFGE were imbued with hostility, disdain and disparagement to the AFGE, and that said statements demeaned the AFGE and tended to convey to employees the futility of union representation and discouraged employees from exercising rights granted under Section 1(a) of the Order. However, he recommended dismissal of the Section 19(a)(2) allegation in the complaint as no evidence was adduced to support such allegation.

Noting particularly the absence of exceptions, the Assistant Secretary adopted the Administrative Law Judge's findings, conclusions and recommendations. Accordingly, he ordered the Respondent to cease and desist from engaging in the conduct found violative of the Order and to take certain affirmative actions. He also ordered that portion of the complaint alleging a violation of Section 19(a)(2) of the Order be dismissed.

On May 31, 1978, Administrative Law Judge Salvatore J. The Administrative Law Judge also found that the Respondent's conduct was not violative of Section 19(a)(2) of the Order and recommended that that aspect of the complaint be dismissed. No exceptions were filed to the Administrative Law Judge's Recommended Decision and Order.

The Assistant Secretary has reviewed the rulings of the Administrative Law Judge made at the hearing and finds that no prejudicial error was committed. The rulings are hereby affirmed. RECOMMENDED DECISION AND ORDER

Preliminary Statement

This proceeding arises under the provisions of Executive Order 11491, as amended (hereinafter referred to as the Order). Pursuant to the Regulations of the Assistant Secretary of Labor for Labor-Management Relations (hereinafter referred to as the Assistant Secretary), a Notice of Hearing on Complaint issued on January 19, 1978 with reference to alleged violations of Sections 19(a)(1) and (2) of the Order. The complaint, filed on August 25, 1977 by American Federation of Government Employees, Council of Locals 1497 and 2195 (hereinafter referred to as the Union or Complainant) asserted that General Services Administration, Region 3, violated the Order when one of its supervisor's allegedly made disparaging remarks to employees about the Union.

At the hearing held on February 28, 1978 the parties were represented and afforded full opportunity to adduce evidence and call, examine and cross-examine witnesses and argue orally. Complainant filed a brief which has been duly considered.

Upon the entire record in this matter, my observation of the witnesses and their demeanor and from my evaluation of the evidence, I make the following:

Findings of Fact and Conclusions of Law

At all times material hereto the Union has been the exclusive collective bargaining representative of various of the Activity's employees including carpenter shop employees at the Activity's Woodlawn, Maryland facility. In May 1977 the carpenter shop was comprised of approximately seven employees including Kenneth Rollins, the shop foreman.

While at work in the carpenter shop on May 24, 1977 employee Ralph Caldwell, a Union member, received notice that he was being transferred from the Woodlawn facility to the Activity's facility at Ft. Meade, Maryland. Caldwell was opposed to being transferred to Ft. Meade and relayed his discontent to his personal friend and foreman, Kenneth Rollins. 1/ During this conversation Rollins informed Caldwell that he had done all he could to keep Caldwell at Woodlawn and commented to the effect, "you pay all that money to the Union, why don't you get your money's worth and get the Union to do something for you." 2/

1/ Caldwell had previously lived near Ft. Meade and moved to the Woodlawn area several years ago upon being transferred to the Woodlawn facility.

2/ At some undisclosed previous time Rollins expressed the opinion to Caldwell that the Union wasn't doing him much good and Caldwell was wasting his money. Such testimony was vague and without reference to specific date of occurrence and accordingly, will not be relied upon in this decision.

At about that same time, Union President Elder Phenecie was observed walking in a hallway adjoining the carpenter shop and Rollins told Caldwell to go and get the matter "straightened out."

Caldwell left Rollins, called for Phenecie and engaged Phenecie in a conversation a few yards from Rollins office where Rollins and Caldwell had concluded their discussion. Caldwell told Phenecie that he was unhappy with the transfer and wanted to have a meeting at the facility with one of the Union's National representatives to discuss the matter. Phenecie responded that a meeting would have to be arranged for someplace other than the Woodlawn facility. Caldwell loudly complained that he was getting no help from the Union regarding the transfer and demanded that Phenecie get a National representative to the facility immediately. Phenecie countered that he couldn't get the National representative to the facility right then but would call and see if he could contact him and arrange a meeting somewhere. Caldwell bitterly complained that he had paid his Union dues for years and the first time he asked for help, the Union could not get a representative to the facility.

Rollins was observing the discussion from the doorway of his office and remarked something to the effect: "See, the 'f____' 3/ Union isn't going to do you any good. They spend all your money to go to Las Vegas, so they can't help you out, Ralph. You should join our union. It only costs $60 a year and we have parties and all." 4/ Phenecie left and later arranged for a meeting between Caldwell and a National representative at another location.

The record reveals that around the same period of time as the May 24, 1977 incident, described above, carpenter shop employee and Union member Oliver Adair returned from his lunch break one or two minutes late on several occasions.

3/ Obscenity deleted.

4/ Although Rollins denied having made this statement, I credit the testimony of Phenecie as supported in part by employee Vass and, to a degree, Caldwell.

The Las Vegas reference relates to the location of the Union's prior National Convention which Phenecie attended as a delegate.

As to the remarks concerning "our Union," the record does not establish the existence of any organization with which Rollins might have been associated. However, Rollins statement might have been merely a cutting remark made simply to annoy Caldwell and Phenecie.

When this occurred, Adair was informed by Rollins that such lateness would be recorded and when sufficiently accumulated, Adair would be "charged" for this time. Rollins told Adair that he could go to the "f____" 5/ or "god damned" Union about the matter if he wished to, but it would do no good. 6/

The Union contends that Rollins employed "special vulgarity" to insult the Union. The use of profanity and obscenities was not uncommon in the carpenter shop nor was Rollins a stranger to such use. Frequently, such words are used from habit and are not intended to nor do they convey an insult or deprecation. Thus, in assessing such language, the words themselves are not as important as the thrust of the entire statement under consideration.

In all the circumstances herein, I conclude that Rollins' remarks made to Caldwell and Phenecie while together on May 24, 1977, and Rollins' remarks to Adair around that same time, violated Section 19(a)(1) of the Order. 7/ Rollins' statements were imbued with hostility, disdain and disparagement to the Union. Such pejorative remarks in these circumstances demeaned the Union and tended to convey to employees the futility of union representation and discourage employees from exercising rights granted under Section 1(a) of the Order. 8/ Accordingly, by such conduct the Activity interfered with, restrained and coerced employees within the meaning of Section 19(a)(1) of the Order. 9/

5/ Obscenity deleted.

6/ Other remarks to the effect that the Union was no good, allegedly made by Rollins at undisclosed times are not relied on herein due to the vagueness of the testimony with regard thereto.

7/ No evidence was adduced to support the allegation that Respondent violated Section 19(a)(2) of the Order. Therefore, I shall recommend that allegation be dismissed.

8/ Section 1(a) of the Order provides, in relevant part, that employees ". . . (have) the right, freely and without fear of penalty or reprisal, to form, join, and assist a labor organization or to refrain from any such activity, and each employee shall be protected in the exercise of this right."

SUMMARY OF DECISION AND ORDER OF THE ASSISTANT SECRETARY
PURSUANT TO SECTION 6 OF EXECUTIVE ORDER 11491, AS AMENDED

OGDEN AIR LOGISTICS CENTER,
HILL AIR FORCE BASE, UTAH
A/SLMR No. 1095

This case involved an unfair labor practice complaint filed by the American Federation of Government Employees, AFL-CIO, Local 1592, (Complainant) alleging that the Respondent violated Section 19(a)(1) and (2) of the Order when a supervisor told the Complainant's Vice President, among other things, that if he had any influence he would not promote the Vice President due to the fact that his union activities took too much time from work.

The Administrative Law Judge found that the supervisor had violated Section 19(a)(1) of the Order by indicating to the employee that if he had any influence, the employee would not be promoted due to time spent on union business. In addition, she found that such statement made in the presence of numerous employees had a "chilling effect" on all employees and improperly penalized employees who, as union representatives, are exercising rights assured under the Order. However, the Administrative Law Judge dismissed the Section 19(a)(1) and (2) allegation based on the failure to promote, finding that there was insufficient evidence to establish that the Respondent failed to promote the employee in question due to his union activity.

Noting particularly the absence of exceptions, the Assistant Secretary adopted the findings, conclusions and recommendations of the Administrative Law Judge, and ordered the Respondent to cease and desist from the conduct found violative of the Order and to take certain affirmative actions.

RECOMMENDED DECISION AND ORDER

Statement of the Case

Pursuant to a complaint, filed October 3, 1977, as amended February 13, 1978, under Executive Order 11491, as amended, by Local 1592, American Federation of Government Employees, AFL-CIO, (hereinafter called the Union or Complainant), against the Ogden Air Logistics Center, Hill Air Force Base, (hereinafter called the Respondent or Air Force), a Notice of Hearing on complaint was issued by the Assistant Regional Director for the Kansas City Region on February 16, 1978.

The complaint alleges that the Air Force violated sections 19(a)(1) and (2) of the Executive Order when Mr. Ted. D. Keeling, a supervisor, stated to Mr. John Darlington, AFGE Local 1592 Vice President, that, in essence, if he had any influence, he would not promote Mr. Darlington to Wage Grade-8 missile loader due to Mr. Darlington's union activities which took too much work time and his failure to rotate shifts because of his union position.

A hearing was held in the captioned matter on March 30, 1978, at Hill Air Force Base, Utah. All parties were afforded full opportunity to be heard, to examine and cross-examine witnesses, and to introduce evidence bearing on the issues herein.

Upon the basis of the entire record, including my observation of the witnesses and their demeanor, the exhibits and other relevant evidence adduced at the hearing, I make the following findings of fact, conclusions, and recommendations:

Findings of Fact

Mr. John Darlington worked at the Air Freight Terminal at Hill Air Force Base from September 1966 to May or June 1977. Mr. Darlington has been a union steward or officer since 1967 or 1968, and stated that during 1976 and the first part of 1977, he did spend quite a bit of time on union grievances and arbitrations.

At the time Mr. Darlington was hired, he had a handicapped code 30 due to impaired vision. The appointment as an aircraft loader was made with knowledge of Mr. Darlington's handicap. The handicap resulted in a restriction to daylight driving of motor pool vehicles. There is no evidence that the vision problem in any way affected his job performance. Mr. Darlington received high work appraisals in the last few years. The duties of an aircraft loader at times included assisting in the loading and unloading of missiles, when the missile loading and aircraft loading crews worked together. Consequently, Darlington participated in the loading and unloading of missiles.

In July of 1976, Mr. Darlington developed a seizure disorder and was placed under additional medical restrictions including prohibition from working above the ground, working or moving equipment or machinery, and moving aircraft. As a result of medical examinations by a doctor of his choice, Mr. Darlington was informed by the dispensary that he was subject to the above restrictions plus he could not work on scaffolds or ladders, and he would not be permitted to drive a government vehicle at all. These stated restrictions pertained to most of the duties performed by a missile loader and Mr. Darlington stated that the medical restrictions could have been a primary reason for his not being selected for a promotion from aircraft loader to missile loader. Mr. Darlington believes, to the best of his recollection, that he participated in the loading and unloading of missiles at least once after the imposition of these more extensive work restrictions. As of May 2, 1977, Mr. Darlington was terminated as an aircraft loader and placed in the handicapped program, which found him a position as a GS-4 Supply Clerk.

Prior to Mr. Darlington's placement in the handicapped program, he was a Wage Grade-7 aircraft loader who was placed on at least two promotion profiles for consideration for advancement to a Wage Grade-8 missile loader. The exact dates of the promotion profiles were not placed in evidence, but it appears they were prepared and issued prior to April 20, 1977.

On April 20, 1977, Mr. Darlington was in the lunchroom on a break or during lunch with approximately 10 co-workers and a supervisor, Mr. Ted Keeling. Mr. Keeling was an aircraft loading foreman. Darlington and Keeling were close friends since approximately 1966. During the break, Darlington mentioned to Keeling that he had been on several promotion profiles but was never promoted to a missile loader. Mr. Keeling indicated that if he had any influence, Mr. Darlington would not be promoted and gave as his reasons that that Darlington spent too much time on union business and he would not change shifts. Darlington did not change shifts pursuant to provisions of the union agreement. Neither Darlington nor his supervisors knew how much time he devoted to union-related activities but during 1976 and 1977 he was on leave without pay to perform his union obligations. Darlington did not know how the supervisors worked around his absences but stated he recognized that the absences did create problems.

The nonsupervisory employees who testified did not know how selections for promotions to Wage Grade-8 missile loaders were made. Several foremen who testified also were unclear regarding the mechanics of the selection process. Therefore, neither Mr. Darlington nor the other members of the crew present at the conversation, or who were subsequently privy to the incident, knew if Mr. Keeling influenced or actually made the selection of the individuals promoted.

The statement was not mere banter between friends. An aircraft freight loader present, Lloyd A. Green, believed Mr. Keeling was quite serious in his statement, that he was not joking and further that he had never heard much joking between Keeling and Darlington.

Another co-worker of Darlington, William A. Lefflar, Jr., noticed Darlington was agitated right after the above-described conversation and asked Keeling approximately 15 to 20 minutes after the actual incident what had transpired. Keeling told him, in essence, that he said to Darlington that he spends too much time on union business and not enough time on the job. Therefore, if it was up to Keeling, Darlington would never be promoted to Wage Grade-8 missile loader, due to Keeling's concern that Darlington was not sufficiently reliable because of his union activities to assume the position. The recitation of what had previously transpired gave no indication of joking or mere friendly advice.

It appears that Mr. Keeling received an official reprimand regarding his statements to Mr. Darlington, but there is no indication that the reprimand was a matter of general knowledge to the members of the Union who overheard the original conversation or were later informed of the statement.

The evidence regarding the method of selections for advancement from the promotion profile is conflicting. However, the general consensus appears to be that aircraft loading foremen do not directly vote on promotions to missile loaders. However, an aircraft missile loading foreman prior to voting on a selection might discuss an individual with the various supervisors at the air freight terminal, including aircraft loading foremen such as Mr. Keeling. Consequently any adverse comment by the warehouse or aircraft loading foreman could have a derogatory influence on possible selections for promotion. The missile loading foremen do render their opinions on the individual employees named on the promotion profile privately to the shift manager. Then, the shift manager makes the final decision. The shift manager at the time of the incident herein involved, Everett Lee Mackey, testified that he also might ask an aircraft loading or warehouse foreman's opinion in determining who to promote. Therefore, it must be concluded that an aircraft loading or warehouse foreman could influence the promotion decision. However, there is no evidence that Mr. Keeling ever shared his opinion with fellow supervisors and the shift manager does not think he received any input from Keeling. The shift manager does not recall failing to promote Mr. Darlington due to his union activities. He recalls choosing the individual he felt was most qualified, even though he had less time at the air freight terminal than Darlington. There was no showing that Darlington was more qualified than any of the individuals selected.

The evidence does indicate that Darlington was a good employee and at one time was assigned as a group leader supervising other employees. However, it was not demonstrated that the position of group leader was considered qualifying experience for promotion to a missile loader, or that those individuals chosen for promotion did not have the same or similar qualifying experience.

Analysis and Conclusions

Section 1(a) of the Executive Order guarantees each employee the right, freely and without fear of penalty or reprisal, to join and assist a labor organization. The right to assist a labor organization "extends to participation in the management of the organization and acting for the organization in the capacity of an organization representative; including presentation of its views to officers of the executive branch... or other appropriate authority." Abridgement of these rights with respect to hiring, tenure, promotion or interference by restraint or coercion is violative of section 19(a)(1) and (2) of the Order.

Section 12(b) of the Order provides, in part, that agency management officials retain the right, in accordance with applicable law and regulations, to direct employees of the Agency; to hire, promote, transfer, assign and retain employees in positions within the Agency, and to suspend, demote, discharge, or take other discipline action against employees; to maintain the efficiency of government operations entrusted to them; and, to determine the methods, means, and personnel by which such operations are to be conducted.

In this proceeding, there is no allegation by the Activity that Mr. Darlington acted in a manner while performing union duties, which resulted in a conflict of interest or was otherwise incompatible with law or with his official duties.

The complaint alleges, essentially, that the discrimination was established verbally during the work break at the lunchroom. The record clearly established that a supervisor, Mr. Keeling, informed Mr. Darlington that in Keeling's view, Darlington's advancement potential was severely circumscribed if not nonexistent due to Darlington's authorized union representational duties.

Mr. Keeling indicated that if he had anything to do with it (which was possible due to his supervisory position) Darlington would not be promoted to a missile loader as long as he continued to be extremely active and spent what Keeling felt to be an undue amount of time on union representational duties.

Although there is an indication that the Activity did reprimand Mr. Keeling for making the statement, there is no clear showing that the Activity disavowed the statement of Mr. Keeling. The record also fails to show that the other members of the unit were informed of the Activity's displeasure with Mr. Keeling's statement. Consequently, the statement of Mr. Keeling, as a supervisor, must be attributed to the Activity.

It is clear from the record that Mr. Darlington was given what was amounted to a carte blanche to perform representational duties. There was no question, or evidence, that Darlington or Local 1592 agreed to surrender Darlington's career opportunities as a trade-off for his being permitted to devote time to union activities during the work day. Thus, for a supervisor to state to Darlington in the presence of a substantial number of fellow employees, that his career opportunities were greatly circumscribed as long as he continued to perform his authorized union duties is interference with, restraint and coercion of Mr. Darlington, as well as the other employees present, in the exercise of their rights assured by this Order to join and assist a labor organization.

Assuming, for the moment, that Mr. Keeling at the time he made the statement may not have had an actual impact upon Mr. Darlington's promotion potential, does not alter the conclusion that the Order was violated. The evidence clearly demonstrates that the employees did not know how promotion profiles were compiled and how the individuals listed thereon were subsequently chosen for advancement to missile loaders. Therefore, the statement to Mr. Darlington would, and is hereby found to have had a restraining and coercive effect upon those employees present at the discussion as well as those later informed of the statement. Accordingly, I find that the Respondent's conduct on April 20, 1977, was violative of section 19(a) (1) of the Order.

Complainant also seeks a finding that Darlington's failure to receive a promotion to Wage Grade-8 missile loader was based upon union animus. Section 203.15 of the regulations imposes upon the Complainant the burden of proving the allegations of the complaint by a preponderance of the evidence. The Complainant has failed to sustain this burden regarding the allegation that Darlington was not promoted because of his union activities.

The finding that Respondent was aware of Darlington's union activities and the existence of a statement by an agent of Respondent indicative of animus toward Darlington's union responsibilities is insufficient to support a conclusion that the selections for promotion were discriminatory. The record is devoid of any evidence regarding Darlington's performance compared to those of his colleagues. There is complete lack of any evidence that the merit promotion system was not followed. The only evidence that Darlington was singled out for praise was his assignment as a team leader, but how long-lived that assignment was, how many team leaders were appointed by Respondent, whether the position of team leader was considered qualifying experience for promotion to missile loader, and whether those appointed to the position of missile loader also had team leader experience, were facts not placed in evidence.

There is also a complete lack of evidence that Keeling communicated his opinions to any other supervisor. The supervisors that were called to testify either stated that they did not discuss the matter with Keeling or the question was never asked. Those supervisors that were in the decision making position regarding Darlington's promotion were not shown to have any union animus or to have been influenced in any way by his union activities.

The nonselection of Darlington cannot be found lacking in justification so as to give rise to the inference that the only explanation reasonably inferred from the facts were his union activities. Darlington's medical problems with the attendant work restrictions as well as the plethora of other valid judgmental factors which enter into the decision to promote an individual could as readily, if not more likely, have been the basis for the nonselection.

In conclusion, I find that the record will not support a finding that Respondent failed to promote Mr. Darlington due to his union activities. In these circumstances I am constrained to recommend that the complaint as to a violation of sections 19(a)(1) and 19(a)(2) of the Executive Order based on Respondents failure or refusal to select John Darlington to fill a Wage Grade-8 vacancy position for missile loader be dismissed.

SUMMARY OF DECISION AND ORDER OF THE ASSISTANT SECRETARY
PURSUANT TO SECTION 6 OF EXECUTIVE ORDER 11491, AS AMENDED

EQUAL EMPLOYMENT OPPORTUNITY COMMISSION
A/SLMR No. 1096

This case involved an unfair labor practice complaint filed by the American Federation of Government Employees, AFL-CIO (AFGE) alleging that the Respondent violated Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order by refusing to negotiate with the AFGE concerning changes in personnel policies and practices or other matters affecting working conditions which could result from the implementation of four draft directives concerning various personnel policies which the Respondent had submitted to the AFGE for comment. The Respondent took the position, based on its interpretation of the parties' negotiated agreement, that it was only required to consult, but not to negotiate, with the AFGE concerning these changes.

The Administrative Law Judge concluded that the negotiated agreement did not constitute a clear and unmistakable waiver by the AFGE of its right to negotiate pursuant to Section 11(a) of the Order. Consequently, he concluded that the Respondent's attempt, at a meeting on June 11, 1976, to limit the discussion concerning the draft directives to "consultation," rather than negotiation, constituted a refusal to bargain in violation of Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order.

The Assistant Secretary adopted the Administrative Law Judge's finding of violation. In so doing, he noted that evidence of conduct subsequent to the alleged refusal to bargain should have been admitted into the record as such evidence could be utilized to demonstrate that the alleged refusal had been cured. Under the circumstances of this case, however, the Respondent was not found to have been prejudiced by the Administrative Law Judge's ruling. Accordingly, the Assistant Secretary ordered the Respondent to cease and desist from engaging in the conduct found violative of the Order and to take certain affirmative actions.

DECISION AND ORDER

On April 14, 1978, Administrative Law Judge Edwin A. Bernstein issued his Recommended Decision and Order in the above-entitled proceeding, finding that the Respondent had engaged in the unfair labor practices alleged in the complaint and recommending that it cease and desist therefrom and take certain affirmative actions as set forth in the attached Administrative Law Judge's Recommended Decision and Order. Thereafter, the Respondent filed exceptions and a supporting brief with respect to the Administrative Law Judge's Recommended Decision and Order.

The Assistant Secretary has reviewed the rulings of the Administrative Law Judge made at the hearing and finds that no prejudicial error was committed. The rulings are hereby affirmed. Upon consideration of the Administrative Law Judge's Recommended Decision and Order and the entire record in the subject case, including the Respondent's exceptions and supporting brief, I hereby adopt the Administrative Law Judge's findings, 1/ conclusions and recommendations, as modified herein.

At the June 11, 1976, meeting between the parties, the Respondent, based on its interpretation of the negotiated agreement, stated that it was required only to consult, but not to negotiate, with the Complainant concerning changes in personnel policies and practices or other matters affecting working conditions which could result from the implementation of four draft directives concerning various personnel policies which it had submitted to the Complainant. The Complainant's position was that the negotiated agreement did not constitute a clear and unmistakable waiver of its right to negotiate in this regard pursuant to Section 11(a) of the Order. After reviewing the agreement, the Administrative Law Judge found that it did not constitute a waiver by the Complainant of its right to negotiate. Consequently, he concluded that the Respondent's attempt at the June 11, 1976, meeting to limit the discussion concerning the draft directives to "consultation," rather than negotiation, constituted a refusal to bargain in violation of Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order.

1/ In reaching the disposition herein, I find it unnecessary to pass upon the Administrative Law Judge's finding, at page 7 of his Recommended Decision and Order, that the Respondent made submission by the Complainant of written comments on the four draft directives involved herein a prerequisite to further discussions.

To refute the contention that it had refused to bargain on June 11, 1976, the Respondent attempted to introduce evidence at the hearing that it had engaged in continuing discussions with the Complainant regarding the directives at issue. The Administrative Law Judge, however, sustained the Respondent's objections to the receipt of certain evidence relating to events subsequent to the June 11, 1976, meeting. In my view, evidence of conduct subsequent to the alleged refusal to bargain should have been admitted into the record in this matter as such evidence could be utilized to demonstrate that an alleged refusal to bargain had been cured by the Respondent's subsequent conduct. To this end, therefore, I find that the Administrative Law Judge should have received the proffered evidence. However, for the reasons stated below, I find that the Respondent was not prejudiced by the Administrative Law Judge's ruling.

The Administrative Law Judge found, and I agree, that the Respondent violated Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order by refusing to negotiate on June 11, 1976, based on its incorrect interpretation of the parties' negotiated agreement. My review of the record, including exhibits placed in the rejected exhibits file and certain testimony which was admitted into evidence regarding the subsequent meetings, shows that the Respondent at no time abandoned its position that the parties' negotiated agreement constituted a waiver by the Complainant of its bargaining rights set forth in the Order. In my opinion, by basing its defense to the instant complaint on its interpretation of the agreement the Respondent acted at its peril, and the finding herein, that the parties' negotiated agreement did not constitute a clear and unmistakable waiver, in effect, nullifies the Respondent's defense. Thus, under the particular circumstances of this case, I find that a mere willingness by the Respondent to engage in further "consultations" did not cure its improper refusal to meet and confer in good faith within the meaning of Section 11(a) of the Order. 2/

RECOMMENDED DECISION AND ORDER

This proceeding was initiated upon the filing of a complaint by American Federation of Government Employees, AFL-CIO ("the Union") against Equal Employment Opportunity Commission ("the Agency") on March 2, 1977.

The complaint alleged that the Agency violated Sections 19(a) (1) and (6) of Executive Order 11491, as amended ("the Executive Order") by refusing the Union's request to meet, confer, consult and negotiate regarding proposed personnel regulations and directives.

By letter decision dated May 13, 1977, the Regional Administrator for the Philadelphia Region determined that a reasonable basis for the complaint was established with regard to four proposed policies and procedures: the Upward Mobility Program, EEOC Policies and Procedures, Disciplinary Actions, and Selection Procedures and Appointment Authority. On June 29, 1977 the Regional Administrator issued a Notice of Hearing with respect to alleged violations of Sections 19(a) (1) (6) of the Executive Order regarding these four proposed policies and procedures.

A hearing was held before me in Washington, D.C. on September 1 and 6, 1977. Both parties were present and were afforded a full opportunity to be heard, to examine and cross-examine witnesses, to adduce relevant evidence, and to file briefs.

Upon the entire record in this case and my observations of the witnesses and their demeanor, I make the following findings of fact, conclusions of law, and recommendation.

Findings of Fact

On July 6, 1971, American Federation of Government Employees, AFL-CIO ("AFGE") was granted exclusive recognition to represent all employees in the bargaining unit at the U.S. Equal Employment Opportunity Commission ("EEOC"). The parties negotiated the National Labor Management Agreement, effective June 29, 1974. In a Memorandum of Understanding dated April 28, 1975, the parties agreed that pending AFGE's establishment of a Council of Locals, the authority to act on day-to-day labor-management matters was delegated to Local 2667, which was located at the headquarters office.

On September 18, 1975, AFGE's National President wrote to the Agency confirming that a National Council of EEOC Locals would be established and specifying complete authority regarding the parties' exclusive recognition agreement that would be delegated by the Union to the Council upon its establishment.

On April 26, 1976, AFGE again wrote EEOC confirming that a National Council had been established and the delegation of authority to the Council was effective as of that date. The Council consisted of eight locals with Mr. Edward Watkins as its president.

On April 28, 1976, the Agency sent the Union a draft directive concerning the Upward Mobility Program and requested the Union to submit its comments by May 14, 1976.

On May 25, 1976, the Agency sent the Union a draft directive for Disciplinary Actions and requested the Union to return the draft with its comments by June 11, 1976.

On May 26, 1976, the Agency sent the Union a draft directive for Selection Procedures and Appointment Authority and requested the Union to return the draft with its comments by June 14, 1976.

On April 28, 1976, the Agency sent the Union a draft directive for EEOC Policies and Procedures and requested the Union to return the draft with its comments by a specified date.

By memoranda dated May 14, 1976, of Mr. Watkins to Mr. LeRoy B. Curtis, Chief of the Agency's Labor Management Relations Branch, the Union requested the Agency to meet to negotiate the Upward Mobility Program and EEOC Policies and Procedures draft directives. On or about that date, Mr. Watkins made a similar written request to the Agency regarding the Disciplinary Actions draft directive.

At a preliminary meeting on June 10, 1976, the parties agreed to meet on the next day to discuss specific matters. The Agency was represented at the June 11, 1976 meeting by Robert Amoroso, Director of Administration; Beverly Gary, Director of Personnel; LeRoy Curtis; and Lonnie Crawford, then Special Assistant to the Vice-Chairperson. The Union was represented primarily by Edward Watkins and Doris O. Hildreth, a Contract Specialist.

At the June 11, 1976 meeting, the Union requested negotiations regarding the four proposed draft directives. Ms. Gary stated that the Agency was not obligated to negotiate since pursuant to Article 6 of the parties' agreement, all that was required was that the Agency "consult" with the Union. Ms. Hildreth responded, "Article 24 of the same agreement required the parties to meet and confer on any changes in personnel policies and practices affecting working conditions." Ms. Hildreth then reiterated her demand for negotiations. Ms. Gary refused, telling the Union "You're not going to tell us how to run our agency." The discussion became heated and when it became apparent that neither party would alter its position, the parties turned to other subjects.

By letter dated June 21, 1976, the Union wrote Ethel Bent Walsh, the Agency's Vice-Chairperson:

"During the labor-management meeting that was held June 11, 1976, the question was raised by management representatives as to how the union was to respond to these draft proposals. The Union's position is that we meet and confer. Management's position is that there is no obligation for the parties to meet and confer (negotiate) with regards to such proposals."

In the instant case there is no clear and unmistakable waiver of a right to negotiate. Therefore, the parties under Executive Order 11419, as amended, are obligated to negotiate such changes. Failure to do so would constitute an unfair labor practice."

On August 11, 1976, the Union filed an unfair labor practice charge against the Agency alleging that the Agency violated Section 19(a)(6) of the Executive Order in that the Agency refused to meet, confer and negotiate with regard to personnel practices and policies affecting working conditions. The charge specified draft directives regarding Selection Procedure and Appointment Authority, Upward Mobility and Disciplinary Actions but did not refer to EEOC Policies and Procedures.

By letter of September 15, 1976, the Agency responded to the charge stating:

"There was no intent on the part of the parties that Agency regulations would become the subject of negotiation at any time during the subject of the Agreement."

The Union filed its complaint on March 2, 1977. Although the charge did not list EEOC Policies and Procedures, the Complaint included this draft directive as a basis for the unfair labor practice.

In response to the Union's unfair labor practice complaint, Mr. Curtis wrote on behalf of the Agency on March 22, 1977:

"It is true that the union indicated its interest in negotiating on the various matters. However, by failing to submit its comments or proposals to the agency, no basis for negotiations existed ... the agency can not agree to negotiate in a vacuum, i.e., in the absence to any specific proposals by the union ... In the absence of such affirmative union comments or proposals, the bargaining requested by the union simply can not take place."

The parties stipulated and I find that the Upward Mobility directive was published on September 10, 1976; the Disciplinary Action directive was published on September 20, 1976; and the Selection Procedures and Appointment Authority directive was never published. The parties are uncertain whether or not the EEOC Policies and Procedures Directive was ever published.

Conclusions of Law

I find that the Agency violated Sections 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Executive Order by refusing to meet, confer and negotiate with the Union's Council of EEOC Locals regarding draft directives entitled: Upward Mobility Program; EEOC Policies and Procedures; Disciplinary Actions; and Selection Procedures and Appointment Authority.

From April 26, 1976 onward, the Council was the exclusive bargaining representative of employees covered in the parties' June 29, 1974 agreement.

It is undisputed that these four draft directives contained personnel policies, practices and matters affecting working conditions. Therefore, pursuant to Section 11 of the Executive Order they were appropriate subjects for negotiation by the parties.

The Agency argued that Article 6 constituted a waiver of the Union's right to negotiate these draft directives. I disagree.

Article 6e reads:

"No new directives on matters affecting personnel policies, practices, or working conditions shall be adopted by the EMPLOYER without prior consultation with the UNION. No substantive changes shall be made in any existing regulation concerning personnel policies, practices or working conditions without prior consultation with the UNION."

However, Article 24 of the same agreement reads:

"The EMPLOYER and UNION agree to meet at reasonable times and confer in good faith with respect to personnel policies and practices and matters affecting working conditions as appropriate under E.O. 11491, as amended."

The Assistant Secretary has held, "in order to establish a waiver of a right granted under the Executive Order, such waiver must be clear and unmistakable." NASA, Kennedy Space Center, Kennedy Space Center, Florida, A/SLMR No. 223. See also: Social Security Administration, Department of Health, Education and Welfare, Wilkes-Barre Operations Branch, Wilkes-Barre, Pennsylvania, A/SLMR No. 889.

The parties' agreement in the Kennedy Space Center case like the agreement here used the term "consult". The Assistant Secretary found no waiver there and I find no waiver here. 1/

1/ In its Report and Recommendations of January 1975, the Federal Labor Relations Council commented regarding confusion that has resulted from the mis-use of the term, "consult" as follows:

Finally, we believe that the confusion which has developed over the apparent interchangeable use of the terms "consult," "meet and confer," and "negotiate" with respect to relationships between agencies and labor organizations in the Order should be eliminated. The parties to

It is clear to me that by June 11, 1976, the Union had requested the Agency to negotiate regarding all four subject draft directives. By memoranda dated May 14, 1976, which were entered into evidence, the Union requested negotiations regarding the Upward Mobility Programs and EEOC Policies and Procedures draft directives. I believe Mr. Watkins' testimony that he sent a similar memorandum to the Agency on or about the same date regarding Disciplinary Actions and in any event I am convinced by the testimony of Mr. Watkins and Ms. Hildreth, that at the June 11, 1976 meeting the Union requested negotiations regarding all of these directives.

I further find that at the June 11, 1976 meeting, the Agency clearly refused to negotiate with regard to these four draft directives. When the Agency forwarded the draft directives to the Union on April 28 and May 25 and 26, 1976, it indicated that it expected the Union to submit written comments. Mr. Curtis letter of March 22, 1977 in answer to the complaint confirmed that the Agency made such a submission a prerequisite to further discussions. However, during the June 11, 1976 meeting the Agency adopted a slightly different approach. This exclusive recognition have an obligation to "negotiate" rather than to "consult" on negotiable issues unless they mutually have agreed to limit this obligation in any way. In the Federal labor-management relations program, "consultation" is required only as it pertains to the duty owed by agencies to labor organizations which have been accorded national consultation rights under section 9 of the Order. The term "meet and confer," as used in the Order, is intended to be construed as a synonym for "negotiate."

Report and Recommendations on the Amendment of Executive Order 11491 from the Federal Labor Relations Council, January 1975, pp. 41-42.

Also, the fact that the Council's predecessor may not have requested negotiation in other matters does not amount to waiver of the right to meet and confer.

time they spelled out their view that they were not obligated to negotiate but only to consult. Although during the hearing, I attempted to learn what the Agency meant by "consult", I never was able to elicit a clear response to such questions. However, it is clear that the Agency defined "consult" on June 11, 1976 and continues to define the word as meaning not negotiating, but something less. Thus, clearly on June 11, 1976 by adopting this incorrect interpretation of its obligations, the Agency refused to negotiate in violation of the Executive Order.

The fact that two of the draft directives may not have been published does not detract from the violations of the Executive Order. The violations consisted of the refusal to negotiate with the Union matters that were properly negotiable under the Executive Order.

I do not agree with the Agency's contention that the filing of the complaint was untimely. The applicable regulation at 29 CFR §203.2(b)(3) reads:

"A complaint must be filed within nine (9) months of the occurrence of the alleged unfair labor practice or within sixty (60) days of the service of a respondent's written final decision on the charging party whichever is the shorter period of time."

The Agency disputed the Regional Administrator's decision that the alleged unfair labor practice occurred on June 11, 1976, arguing that any such practice occurred on May 14, 1976. I find that the violations occurred on June 11, 1976 and therefore the complaint was filed within the required nine months of that date.

29 CFR §203.2(b)(1) requires a written final decision to be expressly designated as such. Since there was no designated final decision, the 60 day limitation period does not apply.

Although the Union alleged failure to negotiate regarding the EEOC Policies and Procedures draft directive in its March 2, 1977 complaint, this was not included in the August 11, 1976 charge. In its brief, the Agency argued that because the Union failed to include this in the charge, "the Department of Labor improperly accepted AFGE's amendment of the unfair labor practice at the formal stage." However, such a failure is a procedural defect which must be objected to before the hearing. Veterans Administration Hospital, Charleston, South Carolina, A/SLMR No. 87; Defense General Supply Center, A/SLMR No. 821; Department of the Treasury, Internal Revenue Service, Brookhaven Service Center, A/SLMR No. 859. The Agency was aware of the defect when it received the March 2, 1977 complaint. Its failure to raise objection in its answer to the complaint or at any time before the September 1, 1977 hearing defeats the objection.

In its brief the Agency contended:

"The unfair labor practice charge of August 11, 1976, does not include an alleged violation of Section 19(a)(1) of the Order (A.S. Exh. No. 4). The Activity takes the position that this amendment of the charge at the formal stage should be dismissed to conform to section 203.2 of the Rules and Regulations of the Assistant Secretary."

While the charge alleged only violations of Section 19(a)(6), the complaint and the notice of hearing referred to violations of both Sections 19(a)(1) and (6). The refusal to negotiate violated the express language of Section 19(a)(6). However, it is also a derivative violation of Section 19(a)(1) even though that section was not referred to in the charge. Army and Air Force Exchange Service, Pacific Exchange System, Hawaii Regional Exchange, A/SLMR No. 454. Therefore, I find that the Agency's refusal to negotiate resulted in violations of both Sections 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Executive Order.

Recommendation

Having found that Respondent has engaged in conduct prohibited by Sections 19(a)(1) and (6) of Executive Order 11491, as amended, I recommend that the Assistant Secretary adopt the following order designed to effectuate the purposes and policies of the Executive Order.

Recommended Order

Pursuant to Section 6(b) of Executive Order 11491, as amended and Section 203.26(b) of the Regulations promulgated thereunder, the Assistant Secretary of Labor for Labor-Management Relations hereby orders that the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission shall:

c. In any like or related manner interfering with, restraining or coercing its employees in the exercise of their rights assured by the Executive Order as amended.

2. Take the following affirmative actions in order to effectuate the purposes and policies of the Executive Order:

OF THE ASSISTANT SECRETARY
PURSUANT TO SECTION 6 OF EXECUTIVE ORDER 11491, AS AMENDED

DEPARTMENT OF HEALTH, EDUCATION

ADMINISTRATION, REGION V
A/SLMR No. 1097

This case involved a petition for clarification of unit filed by Local 3400, American Federation of Government Employees, AFL-CIO (AFGE) seeking to clarify the unit eligibility of several groups of employees. The Activity contended that the petitioned for employees are ineligible for inclusion, as 12 employees in six job categories are supervisors and the remaining seven employees are confidential employees. The AFGE, which is the exclusive representative of certain employees of the Activity, contended that none of the employees in question are supervisors or confidential employees and, therefore, they all are eligible for inclusion within its exclusively recognized unit.

The Assistant Secretary found that five of the 12 employees asserted to be supervisors are not supervisors within the meaning of the Order and should be included in the unit. He made no finding regarding the supervisory status of one employee who was no longer employed by the Activity at the time of the hearing in this case. The Assistant Secretary also found that the seven employees alleged to be confidential employees are engaged in Federal personnel work in other than a purely clerical capacity within the meaning of the Order and should be excluded on that basis.

Accordingly, the Assistant Secretary clarified the unit consistent with his findings.

DECISION AND ORDER CLARIFYING UNIT

Upon a petition duly filed under Section 6 of Executive Order 11491, as amended, a hearing was held before Hearing Officer Timothy P. McGough. The Hearing Officer's rulings made at the hearing are free from prejudicial error and are hereby affirmed.

Upon the entire record in this case, including briefs filed by the Activity and the Petitioner, Local 3400, American Federation of Government Employees, AFL-CIO, herein called AFGE, the Assistant Secretary finds:

In this proceeding, the AFGE seeks to clarify the status of 19 employees to include them in its exclusively recognized unit. The Activity contends that the petitioned for employees are ineligible for inclusion in the unit on the ground that 12 employees in six job categories are supervisors and the remaining employees are confidential employees.

The AFGE was granted exclusive recognition for the unit involved herein on February 22, 1973. The unit, as subsequently clarified on June 6, 1975, is composed of all professional and nonprofessional employees of the Department of Health, Education and Welfare, Region V, including employees of the Development Center Bureau of Hearings and Appeals, Social Security Administration, Region V. All of the disputed employees are employed in the Social Security Administration Regional Office.

With respect to the 12 employees in the six job categories who the Activity contends are supervisors, the record discloses that the job descriptions of the classifications at issue do not contain supervisory functions and that the incumbents are neither the "raters" for performance evaluation purposes of the employees they work with, nor the "selecting officials" for filling vacancies, and do not have the authority to sign off officially on leave requests. 1/ In regard to specific disputed employees, I make the following findings and conclusions:

Group 1: Senior Social Insurance Program Specialist, GS-105-13

(Senior Operations Specialist)

Sandra Bookout testified for herself and Judy Hoch 2/ with respect to Social Security Administration position No. 1943 in the Operations Branch of the Division of Operational Support.

The record reveals that generally the incumbents do not have the authority to hire employees or effectively to recommend such action. 3/ With respect to other supervisory criteria, the evidence is insufficient to establish that Group 1 incumbents normally exercise any supervisory authority requiring the use of independent judgment, or have the authority to effectively recommend such action. Under these circumstances, I find that they are not supervisors within the meaning of Section 2(c) of the Order, and should be included in the exclusively recognized unit.

Group 2: Senior Social Insurance Program Specialist, GS-105-13

(Senior Data Operations Specialist)

Jerry L. Huffman testified for himself and Ronald Zane with respect to Social Security Administration position No. 1947 in the ADP Systems Branch of the Division of Operational Support.

The evidence indicates that in one instance in the absence of his immediate supervisor, Huffman was given the authority to hire a clerical employee. However, it indicates further that the incumbents normally do not have the authority to hire employees or effectively to recommend such action. As the evidence is insufficient to establish that Group 2 incumbents normally exercise any supervisory authority requiring the use of independent judgment or have the authority to effectively recommend such action, I find that they are not supervisors within the meaning of Section 2(c) of the Order, and should be included in the exclusively recognized unit.

1/ Generally, each incumbent, a GS-13, works with three GS-12 employees and one clerical employee.

2/ The parties stipulated that only a limited number of representative witnesses from each disputed group would be called to testify at the hearing, and that unit eligibility would be determined on the basis of the testimony of such representative witnesses.

3/ On one occasion, in the absence of their immediate supervisor, Bookout and Hoch jointly hired a GS-5 employee and a GS-6 employee.

Group 3: Senior Social Insurance Operations Specialist, GS-105-13

(Senior Disability Program Operations Specialist)

Gloria J. Panama and Larry Braden each testified as to duties under Social Security Administration position No. 51409 on the Program Operations Staff under the Assistant Regional Commissioner for Disability Insurance.

Gloria J. Panama has effectively recommended two awards and has written numerous letters of commendation for signature by higher authority. According to the record, no recommendation by Panama for an award or letter of commendation has ever been disapproved. The evidence establishes that the exercise of the foregoing authority is not of a merely routine or clerical nature but rather requires the use of independent judgment. Under these circumstances, I find that Panama is a supervisor within the meaning of Section 2(c) of the Order and should be excluded from the exclusively recognized unit.

Larry Braden has the authority to recommend employee awards; however, the record reveals that he has not exercised this authority. As the evidence does not establish that Braden either exercises supervisory authority requiring the use of independent judgment, or effectively recommends such action, I find that he is not a supervisor within the meaning of Section 2(c) of the Order and should be included in the exclusively recognized unit.

Group 4: Senior Social Insurance Program Specialist, GS-105-13

(Senior Supplemental Security Income Program Operations Specialist)

Susan Crawford testified for herself and Linda White with respect to Social Security Administration position No. 1960 on the Program Operations Staff under the Assistant Regional Commissioner for Supplemental Security Income.

The record reveals that Group 4 incumbents do all the interviewing of candidates for vacant positions on the staff and make effective hiring recommendations to the hiring officer. The evidence establishes that the exercise of the foregoing authority is not of a merely routine or clerical nature but rather requires the use of independent judgment. Under these circumstances, I find that Group 4 incumbents are supervisors within the meaning of Section 2(c) of the Order and should be excluded from the exclusively recognized unit.

Group 5: Senior Social Insurance Program Analyst, GS-105-13

(Senior Disability Program Analyst)

Joel Lowery testified for himself and Terry Ashcraft with respect to Social Security Administration position No. 51508 in the Analysis and Evaluation Section of the Program Appraisal Staff under the Assistant Regional Commissioner for Disability Insurance.

The record reveals that Joel Lowery has the authority to recommend employee reassignments and has effectively exercised this authority. Further, the evidence establishes that the exercise of the foregoing authority is not of a merely routine or clerical nature but rather requires the use of independent judgment. Under these circumstances, I find that the incumbents are supervisors within the meaning of Section 2(c) of the Order and should be excluded from the exclusively recognized unit.

Group 6: Senior Social Insurance Program Specialist, GS-105-13

(Senior Retirement Survivors Insurance Program Operations Specialist)

Robert Coughlin and Anthony A. Maziarek ^{4/} each testified as to his actual duties under Social Security Administration position No. 1963 in the Office of the Assistant Regional Commissioner for Retirement and Survivors Insurance.

Robert Coughlin has effectively recommended quality increases and cash awards for employees. The record reveals that no recommendation by Coughlin for quality increases and cash awards has ever been disapproved. Recently, Coughlin effectively recommended that two professionals and one clerk-typist be hired. No recommendation by Coughlin that an individual be hired has ever been disapproved. The evidence establishes that the foregoing exercise of authority is not of a merely routine or clerical nature but rather requires the use of independent judgment. Under these circumstances, I find that Coughlin is a supervisor within the meaning of Section 2(c) of the Order and should be excluded from the exclusively recognized unit. ^{5/}

Group 7: Social Insurance Specialist (Field Operations), GS-105-12

(Field Operations Staff Specialist--FOSS)

Patricia A. Biggers testified for herself and six other employees with respect to Social Security Administration position No. 1953. The record shows that Biggers, John Doyle, Hattie Jordan, and Bobbie Matlin work for a supervisory FOSS under the Assistant Regional Commissioner for Field Operations (West) and that Faye McDonald, Louise Pernice, and Larry Soliday work for a supervisory FOSS under the Assistant Regional Commissioner for Field Operations (East).

^{4/} As the record discloses that at the time of the hearing in this matter Maziarek's position had been vacated by him, I will make no determination as to his supervisory status.

^{5/} Having found Coughlin to be a supervisor, I find it unnecessary to decide whether his effective recommendation to reorganize his immediate staff into two units rendered him a supervisor under Section 2(c) of the Order.

Group 7 employees review Equal Employment Opportunity complaint files containing "unsanitized" materials, represent management at consultation meetings with a labor organization and with a management association, give advice to the field on labor relations questions, and are involved with adverse actions, promotion actions, employee complaints or grievances, and the review of personnel relations in the field district offices.

SUMMARY OF DECISION AND ORDER OF THE ASSISTANT SECRETARY
PURSUANT TO SECTION 6 OF EXECUTIVE ORDER 11491, AS AMENDED

I find that the character and extent of the Group 7 employees' involvement in personnel matters warrants the conclusion that they are engaged in non-clerical Federal personnel work for the Activity. As Section 10(b)(2) of the Order specifically excludes from bargaining units employees engaged in Federal personnel work in other than a purely clerical capacity, I find that the Group 7 employees at issue should be excluded on this basis from the exclusively recognized unit. 6/

ORDER

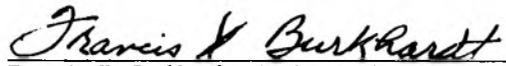

IT IS HEREBY ORDERED that the exclusively recognized unit sought to be clarified herein, represented by Local 3400, American Federation of Government Employees, AFL-CIO, be, and it hereby is, clarified by excluding from said unit Gloria J. Panama, Robert Coughlin, and the incumbents in positions in Groups 4, 5 and 7 above, and by including in said unit Larry Braden and the incumbents in positions in Groups 1 and 2 above. 7/

This case involved an unfair labor practice complaint filed by the National Federation of Federal Employees, Local 187 (Complainant) alleging that the Respondent violated Section 19(a)(1) of the Order when its Labor-Management Relations Officer threatened to have the Complainant's President and Vice-President transferred to another school as a solution to labor-management problems at the Flandreau Indian School. The Respondent denied any such threat.

The Administrative Law Judge concluded that no such threat was made by the Respondent, and recommended that the complaint be dismissed in its entirety.

Dated, Washington, D.C.
August 4, 1978

Noting particularly the absence of exceptions, the Assistant Secretary adopted the findings, conclusions and recommendation of the Administrative Law Judge and ordered that the complaint be dismissed.

Labor for Labor-Management Relations

6/ Under these circumstances, it was considered unnecessary to decide whether Group 7 employees should be excluded from the unit on the basis that they are confidential employees. See U.S. Department of Agriculture, Farmers Home Administration, Colorado, 6 A/SLMR 6 2, A/SLMR No. 752 (1976).

7/ As indicated above, my findings regarding supervisory status run to the named incumbents in Groups 3 and 6 above, rather than to the two groups as a whole.

RECOMMENDED DECISION AND ORDER

Preliminary Statement

This case arises under Executive Order 11491 as amended. It was initiated by a complaint dated July 24, 1977 and filed July 27, 1977 alleging a violation of Section 19(a)(1) of the Executive Order. The violation was alleged to consist of the Respondent's Labor-Management Relations Officer threatening to have the Complainant's President and Vice-President removed to another school as a solution to Labor-Management problems at the Flandreau Indian School. Under date of August 10, 1977 the Respondent filed a response to the complaint denying the allegations of the complaint and making certain affirmative allegations.

On January 13, 1978 the Regional Administrator issued a Notice of Hearing for a hearing to be held March 28, 1978 in Sioux Falls, South Dakota. A hearing was held on that day in that City. Both parties were represented by counsel. They presented witnesses who were examined and cross-examined and offered exhibits which with one exception were received in evidence. Both parties made closing arguments and filed briefs.

Facts

Local 187 of the National Federation of Federal Employees is the recognized exclusive representative of a unit of non-supervisory professional and non-professional employees of the Flandreau Indian School. Among the professional employees in the unit are four guidance counselors under the immediate supervision of Carol Anderson, Education Specialist. She, in turn, is under the immediate supervision of Harold LaRoche, Pupil Personnel Services Director. At all relevant times George V. Renville, one of the guidance counsellors, was President of Local 187 and John J. Brown, another of the guidance counsellors, was Vice-President of the Local.

The Flandreau Indian School is under the immediate direction of a Superintendent who reports to the Area Director of the Aberdeen Area Office of the Bureau of Indian Affairs.

For some time relations between Renville and Brown on the one hand and LaRoche and Anderson on the other hand had been bad and getting worse. In 1976 Renville and Brown filed a grievance complainant of continuous harassment by LaRoche and Anderson. The grievance was processed through the agency-prescribed grievance procedure. It came before a Department of the Interior Administrative Law Judge who made Findings and Recommendations. 1/ She found that the grievants had been harassed in a number of respects, none of them having any relationship to their union activities or their union offices. There was no intimation that any of the incidents was prompted by their union activities or affiliation. They pertained largely to the parties' differing views on job content and the manner of performance of the day-to-day work activities. The ALJ found that "the tone of communications from Mr. LaRoche and Miss Anderson to the grievants bespoke the attitude of impatient, critical adults toward recalcitrant children."

The ALJ found that "the onus for maintaining good working relationships is on the supervisors." As part of the remedy she recommended that Renville and Brown be relieved of supervision by LaRoche or Anderson and placed under the direct supervision of the Superintendent. This the Area Director refused to do. His office was of the view that supervision of the guidance counsellors should not be fragmented, that having the counsellors under the direct supervision of the Superintendent would be bad policy, and he was of the firm view that personnel problems are not solved by reassigning supervision.

There followed a series of correspondence from the Complainant to the Aberdeen Area Office concerning alleged improper conduct of LaRoche. Melvin Rousee, the Labor-Management Relations Officer of the Aberdeen Area Office, was unclear on just what the Complainant's dissatisfactions with LaRoche were. He told the Area Director about his uncertainties and was told to clarify what the issues were. He wrote a letter on April 8, 1977 for the signature of the Area Director to Renville suggesting that instead of his replying to each of the numerous letters they have a conference in Flandreau during the week of April 25, 1977 to clarify the issues and that Renville make such an appointment through the Superintendent. On April 12, 1977 Renville and Brown replied asking for a conference on April 26, stating that the "issues and concerns" were "all the contents" of current and past unfair labor practices, "grievances, etc. concerning Harold LaRoche and Carol Anderson", and recommending that LaRoche be given a position somewhere else and that the entire counselling function be placed directly under the Superintendent. Renville and Brown had earlier asked that LaRoche be placed in another position at another installation.

A meeting was held April 26, 1977 as requested by Renville and Brown. It lasted from 1:00 p.m. to 5:30 p.m. Present were four people from the Aberdeen Area Office, Acting Superintendent Swenson, Renville, and Brown. Most of the time was consumed in discussing one of three points in a pending unfair-labor-practice complaint; there were also pending two other unfair-labor-practice charges and a number of grievances. The subject of transferring LaRoche was also brought up. The people from the Aberdeen Area Office were opposed to fragmenting the counsellors and Rousseau stated that if any part of the section was moved the entire section would have to be moved. He mentioned also that there would be problems in moving because moving the section would probably mean filling newly created positions and only LaRoche and Renville had Indian preference in employment and could probably be moved if they so chose. Those two names were the only names specifically mentioned in this part of the conference, but somehow Renville and Brown misunderstood Rousseau to threaten to move them out of Flandreau. Rousseau, while he did mention the possibility of moving the entire section, took the position that none of it should be moved for a variety of reasons including the firm view of the Area Director that reassignment was not a way to resolve personality conflicts.

About seven weeks later Rousseau met again with Renville and Brown (and a Department of Labor Compliance Officer) to discuss three pending unfair-labor-practice complaints or charges. (All three were resolved.) In the course of the conversation Renville said Rousseau at the April 26 meeting had threatened to move him and Brown. Rousseau said he had not meant any such threat and if he had been so understood he apologized.

The entire guidance counsellor group, including the four counsellors, their supervisor Anderson, and her supervisor LaRoche, are well educated, each of them having been awarded at least a Master's degree.

Discussion and Conclusions

Although at the hearing in this case there was vented - much disaffection on the part of Renville and Brown with the employment situation at the Flandreau Indian School, the only subject of the complaint in this case is the alleged, and denied, threat of Rousseau to transfer Renville and Brown to solve a number of labor-management problems.

I have concluded that such threat was not made although Renville, and probably Brown, understood it to have been made.

On June 16 and 17, 1977, about seven weeks after the conference at which the alleged threat took place, and more than a month before the complaint in this case was filed, the three parties met again. Renville mentioned the threat Rousseau was alleged to have made, Rousseau said he had not intended or made any such threat, and that if he had been so understood he was sorry and apologized.

In these circumstances, since I have found that the alleged threat was not made, the complaint should be dismissed.

RECOMMENDATION

The complaint should be dismissed.

SUMMARY OF DECISION AND ORDER OF THE ASSISTANT SECRETARY
PURSUANT TO SECTION 6 OF EXECUTIVE ORDER 11491, AS AMENDED

DEPARTMENT OF THE TREASURY,
INTERNAL REVENUE SERVICE,
AUSTIN DISTRICT, AUSTIN, TEXAS
A/SLMR No. 1099

This case involved an unfair labor practice complaint filed by the National Treasury Employees Union (NTEU) and its Chapter 52 (Complainant) alleging that the Respondent had violated Section 19(a)(1) of the Order based on the conduct of its Audit Division Group Manager, in making certain statements to an employee concerning the "jurisdiction" of the Complainant with respect to the Respondent.

The Administrative Law Judge found that the statements had not been made and he recommended that the complaint be dismissed in its entirety. However, the Administrative Law Judge also concluded that if the statements had been made, they would not constitute a violation of the Order. In adopting the recommendation of the Administrative Law Judge that the complaint be dismissed, the Assistant Secretary noted that in view of the adoption of the Administrative Law Judge's finding that the statements had not been made, it was unnecessary for him to pass upon the Administrative Law Judge's further conclusion with respect to whether the statements would be violative of the Order if they had, in fact, been made. Accordingly, the Assistant Secretary ordered that the complaint be dismissed in its entirety.

DECISION AND ORDER

On June 28, 1978, Administrative Law Judge Rhea M. Burrow issued his Recommended Decision in the above-entitled proceeding, finding that the Respondent had not engaged in the unfair labor practice alleged in the complaint and recommending that the complaint be dismissed in its entirety. Thereafter, the Complainant filed exceptions and a supporting brief with respect to the Administrative Law Judge's Recommended Decision.

The Assistant Secretary has reviewed the rulings of the Administrative Law Judge made at the hearing and finds that no prejudicial error was committed. The rulings are hereby affirmed. Upon consideration of the Administrative Law Judge's Recommended Decision and the entire record in the subject case, including the exceptions and supporting brief filed by the Complainant, I hereby adopt the Administrative Law Judge's findings, 1/ conclusions 2/ and recommendation.

1/ In the first paragraph of page 3 of the Administrative Law Judge's Recommended Decision the date "November---19, 1976" is set forth instead of "November---16, 1976". Further, in the first line on page 8, the name "Keller" is set forth instead of the name "Medina." These inadvertent errors are hereby corrected.

2/ In view of the Administrative Law Judge's finding, to which no exception was filed, that Keller did not make the alleged statements attributed to him by the Complainant, I find it unnecessary to pass upon his further conclusion as to whether the statements would have been violative of the Order if they had, in fact, been made.

RECOMMENDED DECISION

This is an unfair labor practice proceeding in which a formal hearing of record was held on March 14, 1978 in Austin, Texas pursuant to Executive Order 11491, as amended, (hereinafter referred to as the Order). The Respondent is charged with having violated Section 19(a)(1) of the Order. The complaint dated March 11, 1977 alleged:

"On December 17, 1976, Carol Keller, Group Manager, Audit Division, Internal Revenue Service, Laredo, Texas, delivered to Joe Medina, Revenue Agent, Laredo, Texas, a 60-day notice with regard to his prospective within-grade increase. As Keller handed Medina the written notice, he also gave him a copy to be furnished at his option to NTEU Chapter No. 52, and stated...'it won't do them any good. They have no jurisdiction over us.'

"Joe Medina is a member of the bargaining unit for which NTEU is the recognized exclusive bargaining representative. Manager Keller's statement tended to discourage him from exercising his protected rights under Executive Order 11491, as amended, and disparaged the union in his eyes."

Upon the basis of the entire record including the evidence adduced, the briefs submitted by the parties,^{1/} and my observation of the witnesses and judgement of their credibility, I make the following findings, conclusions and recommendations.

Findings of Fact

1. The National Treasury Employees Union (hereinafter referred to as NTEU) and its local Chapter 52, was at all times material herein, the exclusive bargaining representative for employees bargaining unit at the Department of the Treasury, Internal Revenue Service, Austin District, Austin Texas.

^{1/} In accordance with announcement at the hearing that Briefs postmarked May 1, 1978 would be considered as timely submitted, the briefs received are considered to have been timely filed.

2. On December 6, 1976, Jose Medina, a Revenue Agent at Laredo, Texas was given a memorandum dated December 2, 1976 advising him that Carol Keller, Group I (1107) RA Manger, San Antonio was unable to certify that his (Medina's) level of work performance was such as to justify a recommendation for a within grade increase at this time. Sepcific deficiencies were set forth in detail with notation that these deficiencies had previously been discussed with him on November 4, 9, and 19, 1976, and suggestions were made in the discussions and in the memorandum as to how to improve such deficiencies.

3. Jose Medina was employed at Respondents place of business in Laredo, Texas from August 1973 to August 1977. He worked as a Tax Auditor until July 1976 and thereafter as a Revenue Agent. His grade for a part of the time he was a Tax Auditor and Revenue Agent was that of a GS-9.

4. On December 17, 1976 Medina was given a memorandum by Group Manager Carol Keller dated December 10, 1976, subject: "Failure to Meet Position Standards", advising him that his pattern of performance was not meeting with the requirements of a GS-9 agent and that unless he improved to a satisfactory level during the next 60 calendar days he would have no alternative but to recommend his removal for the efficiency of the Internal Revenue Service. Various deficiencies were specified in the memorandum. Jose Medina immediately buckslipped the 60 day letter to George Sam (Union President of Chapter 25, Austin Texas) on the same day, (December 17, 1976). The last paragraph of the note to the union stated: "Keller said that the union is not even recognized since there is no agreement contract. I'm at his mercy. What can you do?"

5. In a memorandum addressed to George Sam on January 28, 1977, by Medina, the following happened on December 17, 1976 as to the 60-day letter and denial of a within grade increase:

"Mr. Keller was doing case reviews on three of my taxpayers that I was auditing and he spent most of the morning with me in the office. Just before he left at noon, on December 17, 1976, Keller called me into the conference room and issued me the 60-day letter and he advised me verbally that an 80-day letter would be given to me within a few days.

"Mr. Keller made the comment that a copy of the 60-day letter was given to me additionally just in case I wanted the union to know about my problems. He stated, 'although Management and NTEU have no union contract, a copy of the letter is given as a formality. It won't do them any good; they have no jurisdiction over us.'

"I told Mr. Keller that I intended the Union to represent me because I was a union member and I was going to file a grievance. He said that I had the prerogative..."

6. Keller categorically denied in the answer filed in this proceeding that he made the statement attributed to him in the complaint that "...it won't do them any good. They have no jurisdiction over us." He did admit that at one of the meetings with Medina in December 1976, there was some discussion about whether Management's contract with the union may have expired.

There is one thing certain Medina did not mention the statements in the buckskip forwarded to Local Union Chapter 25, President, contemporaneous with December 17, 1976 and it first surfaced in the memorandum of January 28, 1977 more than 5 weeks after the discussion.

7. Meanwhile, between December 17, 1976 and the 60-day period for improvement Mr. Keller recommended that he be granted Union 2 training which Medina had requested. While he did not meet all of the objectives desired by the lead instructor, Mr. Keller reported he did make some improvement and he continued to work until August 17, 1977. He was not terminated by reason of any deficiencies reported and Mr. Keller continued to be his supervisor until he resigned in August 1977 to enter law school.

8. While Medina admits that he was somewhat upset and angry with his supervisor, Keller, concerning the memoranda given him in December 1976 and he felt Keller was out to get him, I do not find that Keller expressed any antagonism or ill feelings toward him. The detailed evaluations with specific suggestions for improvement and time spent with him in reviewing various aspects of his work suggested the opposite. This, coupled with the recommendation for the unit training during the 60-day period of improvement is not in my opinion the type of action demonstrated by a supervisor not interested in his improvement and welfare. However, this finding is not dispositive of the unfair labor practice controversy to be concluded on the basis of a credibility issue.

Discussions and Conclusions

Section 19 of the Order relating to Unfair Labor Practices, provides "(a) Agency management shall not - (1) interfere with, restrain, or coerce an employee in the exercise of the rights assured by this Order."

The parties in this proceeding stipulated that NTEU and its local Chapter 52 was at all times material herein the exclusive representative for bargaining unit employees at the Department of Treasury, Internal Revenue Service in the Austin, Texas District.

While some evidence indicated the multi center collective bargaining agreement (MCA) covering employees at the activity involved herein had expired in early 1976, the obligations were recognized as to be continued and treated so in practice. It is noted that such practice was approved by the Federal Labor Relations Council in two cases before it, FLRC Nos. 77 A-40 and 77 A-92, March 23, 1978 where it held in pertinent part that: "In our view, existing personnel policies and practices and matters affecting working conditions, whether or not they included in a negotiated agreement, continue as established upon expiration of a negotiated agreement, absent an express agreement by the parties that such personnel policies and practices and matters affecting working conditions terminate upon expiration of that agreement unless otherwise modified in a manner consistent with the Order."

It is undisputed that on December 17, 1976, Medina was given copies of the December 17, 1976 letter for himself and his NTEU representative concerning his failure to Meet Position Standards for job retention. It is also undisputed that when he, Medina, indicated that he intended for the union to represent him because he was a union member and was going to file grievance he was told that was his prerogative. Not only was Medina informed by Keller of entitlement to union representative on December 17, 1976, but he had also previously been informed on December 6, 1976 of such entitlement, when he was given a memorandum for himself and one for his union representative, as to his level of work performance to justify a within-grade increase.

The proof at the hearing related to remarks allegedly made at the December 17, 1976 meeting by Keller to Medina concerning failure to meet position standards for job retention and not to a 60-day notice with regard to a prospective within-grade increase; the latter occurred on December 6, 1976. In view of the variance between proof at the hearing and that specified in the complaint as to substance of the subject matter and contents of the Notice issued December 17, 1976, the Complainant failed to establish that the alleged remarks attributed to Keller occurred in connection with the Notice as to the level of Medina's work performance to justify a within-grade increase as specified in the complaint. The Notice pertaining to the level of work performance to justify a within-grade increase was issued on December 2, 1976, delivered to Medina on December 6, 1976 and not on December 17, 1976 as alleged in the complaint; at the hearing it was undisputed that the remarks "...it won't do them any good. They have no jurisdiction over us," were not made in connection with the Notice to Medina on December 6, 1976 relating to his level of work performance to justify a within-grade increase.

The subject matter for discussion on December 17, 1976 concerned Notice as to Medina's failure to meet position standards for job retention and did not pertain to merit for a within-grade increase. The complaint is concluded to be deficient to the extent that the subject matter of the discussion on December 17, 1976 was erroneous.

It is not disputed that Keller was a former NTEU member before he was promoted to a supervisory or management position. Likewise, there is no controversy that Keller reviewed several of Medina's cases with him on the morning of December 17, 1976 and about noon on that date called him into the conference room and handed him the Notice of Failure to Meet Position Standards for job retention. A second copy of this Notice was attached for the union. Neither Medina or Keller was aware of the current status of the Union's agreement with the respondent on December 17, 1976 although both were aware there had been some previous problems. In any event, and regardless of the status of the contract, Keller testified that he acted and treated the situation in the same manner as if the agreement was in effect and that his discussion with Medina was in private as is customary in actions of this type.

The significant difference in the versions as to what happened on December 17, 1976 between Medina and Keller is that Keller categorically denies having made the remarks attributed to him by Medina that "...it won't do them any good. They have no jurisdiction over us." It is noteworthy that Medina did not refer to the alleged remarks minutes after the discussion when he attached a copy to the December 17, 1976 Notice to Union Local President George Sam, and they first surfaced and were expressed some five weeks later. Medina admitted that he felt Keller was out to get his job and expressed that opinion to him before and after December 17, 1976. I do not find the opinion supported by the record.

While the testimony between Medina and Keller is conflicting when I review the events before, at the time of the discussion, and subsequent thereto, I find that Keller did not make the remarks in the context presented, if at all, that were attributed to him in the complaint, that is "...it won't do them any good. They have no jurisdiction over us." I conclude that Keller was the more credible witness as to the events occurring at the time of December 17, 1976 meeting.

Even if Keller had made the statement in the context presented that were attributed to him by Medina, I conclude they did not have the effect of discouraging him as an employee from exercising his rights under the Order.

In the first place, Medina took the matter up with the Union within minutes after his December 17, 1976 discussion with Keller. He testified:

"Q. So you were discouraged by Mr. Keller's statements as to your ability to go to the Union?

"A. I wasn't actually discouraged to go to them because I belonged to the Union, but I was discouraged in what he had said, because apparently there was no union contract at that time, and if that was the case I could not have adequate representation by them."

Contra to Complainant's assertion, Keller's alleged statement did not discourage or tend to discourage Medina from exercising Executive Order rights. Further, the alleged statements were not inherently coercive when analyzed as to both content and the circumstances surrounding the incident. I reflect Medina's testimony that he was not in any way discouraged. Whether or not the agreement between the Complainant and Respondent had expired, it was treated by the parties as being in effect before and after December 17, 1976. For example, each notice given to Keller was accompanied by an additional copy for the Union; too, shortly after the December 17, 1976 Keller approved a request for training submitted by the Union on Medina's behalf. The discussion on December 17, 1976 was in the nature of a performance interview or appraisal, with only Keller and Medina present; and was not a formal discussion within the meaning of Section 10(e) of the Order.

Despite the fact that Medina had admittedly accused Keller of trying to get his job prior to December 17, 1976, Keller painstakingly prepared memoranda suggesting ways for him to improve his work. He again on December 17, 1976 worked with him on review of his cases and in the job retention memorandum given him on that date again suggested ways of improvement that would enable him to retain his position. The unusual effort expended in trying to help him, Medina, improved his status as a Revenue Agent is not that calculated to show disrespect to him or his representative. Moreover, he was advised to take his problem to NTEU. If any hostility is shown on the part of either party, it was not by Keller against Medina. I credit Keller's testimony on cross examination.

"Q. I'm confused Mr. Keller. If you can't really recall much about what you said, or what you may have said to Mr. Medina about the status of the contract, tho brought it up, whether you brought it up, whether he brought it up, and yet you are positive that you did not make these statements."

"A. I had no reason to tell Mr. Medina that the Union did not have jurisdiction over him. I didn't feel that way. It was not in my mind to tell him that when I went down there. There's no reason for me to tell him that. If he needed protection of the Union, I told him he could do or he should do whatever he felt like he needed to do in this situation.

The Complainant offered no proof at the hearing that the Union was disparaged by the alleged remarks attributed to Keller by Medina. Further, in all of the contacts and discussions between Medina and Keller, there is no reference by Medina that Keller had on any other occasion expressed anti-union bias or disdain for the Union. Therefore, reliance or disparagement is made on the basis that the alleged remarks attributed to Keller were per se disparaging. Since the alleged remarks were not contemporaneous with December 17, 1976 and they first surfaced more than five weeks after the incident, I find it unusual that Medina could remember so well the quotes and be able to add other quotes mentioned at even more remote dates. When recalling events of remote vintage memory for the important tends to diminish and the routine or obscure become magnified. Under the circumstances in this case, I do not find that the statements attributed to Keller by Medina were made, particularly in the context depicted, or even, if made, that any more than deminimus disparagement did or could have resulted.

From the foregoing, I conclude that:

1. The Respondent did not interfere with, restrain, or coerce an employee in the exercise of the rights assured by the Order.
2. The Complainant has not sustained its burden of proving by a preponderance of the evidence that the Respondent violated the provisions of Section 19(a)(1) of the Order.

RECOMMENDATION

Upon the basis of the above findings, conclusions, and entire record, I recommend to the Assistant Secretary that the Complainant in Case No. 63-73000(CA) be dismissed in its entirety.

DECISION AND ORDER

This case involved an unfair labor practice complaint filed by the National Association of Government Employees, Local R5-168 (NAGE) alleging, among other things, that the Respondent violated Section 19(a)(1) of the Order based on alleged threatening remarks made to a unit employee by the Respondent at a meeting held May 12, 1976. The complaint alleged, in this regard, that the Respondent threatened the unit employee that she would be found unqualified for her present position if she "stirred things up and dirtied up the water" by consulting the NAGE and/or by filing a grievance over the promotion she sought.

In agreement with the Administrative Law Judge, the Assistant Secretary found that the Respondent's threat constituted a violation of Section 19(a)(1) of the Order. However, the Assistant Secretary did not adopt the Administrative Law Judge's finding of a Section 19(a)(1) violation based on an allegation that the Respondent had improperly carried out its threat. This latter allegation had been the basis for a Section 19(a)(2) complaint which was dismissed at an earlier stage in the proceeding. As the Assistant Secretary had sustained the dismissal of this portion of the complaint, he concluded that the allegation that the threat was carried out was not before him, whether treated as an alleged violation of Section 19(a)(1) or Section 19(a)(2) of the Order.

Accordingly, the Assistant Secretary ordered that the Respondent cease and desist from the conduct found violative of the Order, and take certain affirmative actions.

On May 2, 1978, Administrative Law Judge William B. Devaney issued his Recommended Decision and Order in the above-entitled proceeding, finding that the Respondent had violated Section 19(a)(1) of the Executive Order and recommending that it cease and desist therefrom and take certain affirmative actions as set forth in the attached Administrative Law Judge's Recommended Decision and Order. Thereafter, the Respondent filed exceptions to the Administrative Law Judge's Recommended Decision and Order.

The Assistant Secretary has reviewed the rulings of the Administrative Law Judge made at the hearing and finds that no prejudicial error was committed. 1/ The rulings are hereby affirmed. Upon consideration of the Administrative Law Judge's Recommended Decision and Order and the entire record in this case, including the exceptions filed by the Respondent, I hereby adopt the Administrative Law Judge's findings, conclusions, and recommendations, as modified herein.

1/ During the course of the hearing, while questioning the Respondent's witness, Norman E. Lewis, the Administrative Law Judge made certain gratuitous remarks disparaging the witness' answers. Although I have determined that the Administrative Law Judge's comments did not prejudice the Respondent, it should be noted that I view such remarks to have been uncalled for and inappropriate.

The Administrative Law Judge found, and I agree, that the Respondent violated Section 19(a)(1) of the Order when, on May 12, 1976, the Chief of its Staffing Branch in the Civilian Personnel Office threatened Bonnie Ham, a bargaining unit employee, that she would be found unqualified for her present position if she "stirred things up and dirtied up the water" by consulting the Complainant and/or by filing a grievance over a promotion she sought. The Administrative Law Judge found that the Respondent further violated Section 19(a)(1) by carrying out its threat when it informed the Civil Service Commission that Ham was not qualified for her present position, after she consulted the Complainant and indicated her intention to file a grievance.

At an earlier stage in this proceeding, the Regional Administrator dismissed the allegation that the Respondent's May 12, 1976, threat violated Section 19(a)(1) of the Order, as well as the allegation that the Respondent carried out its threat in violation of Section 19(a)(2) of the Order. Upon a request for review seeking reversal of the Regional Administrator's dismissal of the complaint, the Assistant Secretary sustained the Regional Administrator's finding on the Section 19(a)(2) aspect of the complaint, but reinstated the Section 19(a)(1) allegation regarding the threat. Under these circumstances, I conclude that the allegation that the Respondent improperly carried out its threat was not before the Administrative Law Judge, 2/ whether treated as an alleged violation of Section 19(a)(1) or Section 19(a)(2) of the Order and, therefore, under the particular circumstances herein, I cannot adopt his finding in that regard.

RECOMMENDED DECISION AND ORDER

Statement of the Case

This is a proceeding under Executive Order 11491, as amended (hereinafter also referred to as the "Order"), which was instituted by a charge filed on, or about, June 17, 1976; a complaint the date of filing not having shown; and a 1st Amendment to the complaint (Asst. Sec. Exh. 1) dated August 4, 1976, and filed August 25, 1976. The 1st Amendment to the complaint alleged violations of Section 19(a)(1), (2) and (4) of the Order. The Regional Administrator dismissed the entire complaint; but, on November 11, 1977, the Assistant Secretary reversed a portion of the Regional Administrator's dismissal of the complaint and found that a reasonable basis for the 19(a)(1) allegation concerning improper statements by a representative of Respondent had been shown and, on December 29, 1977, the Acting Regional Administrator advised the parties that, inasmuch as there had been no satisfactory settlement, he was issuing a Notice of Hearing (Asst. Sec. Exh. 2). Notice of Hearing on the 19(a)(1) allegation of the complaint (Asst. Sec. Exh. 3) issued on December 29, 1977, pursuant to which a hearing before the undersigned was duly held in Leesville, Louisiana, on March 9, 1978.

Both parties were represented by counsel, all parties were afforded full opportunity to be heard, to examine and cross-examine witnesses, and to present evidence and testimony. At the hearing March 23, 1978, was fixed as the date for submission of briefs, in particular on the question of remedy; however, this time was subsequently extended, at the request of Complainant and for good cause shown, to April 7, 1978. Briefs were timely filed by both parties and have been carefully considered. Upon the basis of the entire record, including my observation of the witnesses and their demeanor, I make the following findings of fact, conclusions and recommendation.

FINDINGS

1. In January, 1975, a job description for "Education Technician (Typing)" was issued by Respondent, dated January 6, 1975 (Res. Exh. 1). This position was announced by Respondent, on or about, January 9, 1975, and a large number of bids for the new position were received (Mrs. Bonnie L. Ham credibly testified that there were 52 applicants; and Mr. C.H. Lohfink, Area Manager (New Orleans) of the United States Civil Service Commission in a letter dated November 9, 1976 (Res. Exh. 5), stated that the file furnished by Respondent "shows that 32 applicants for the vacancy were evaluated.").

2. The job description reads, in part, as follows:

"This position has been engineered to a lower level for in-hire purposes. Upon the satisfactory completion of twelve months training, incumbent may be considered for promotion to Education Technician, GS-1702-7, provided that official qualification requirements are met and that evaluation of position can be supported based on position qualification standards current at that time.

... (Res. Exh. 1).

3. Mrs. Bonnie L. Ham was selected for the position and began work as an Education Technician on May 11, 1976. Mrs. Ham had been employed by Louisiana State University from September 1, 1966, to April 30, 1971, and by Southwest Louisiana University from May 1, 1971, to October 29, 1971. She was initially employed by Respondent as a Secretary-Steno, GS-318-04 in 1972 and was subsequently promoted to GS-5, presumably in November, 1974 (Res. Exh. 6 appears to be in error and "Secretary-Steno, GS-318-04 from 11-74 to present" should apparently read GS-318-05 from 11-74; in any event, Mrs. Ham was a GS-5 prior to her bidding for the "Education Technicain (Typing)" position and was secretary to Director, (Industrial Operations). She had outstanding performance appraisals in 1973 and 1974. In addition, Mrs. Ham had 41 semester hours of college credits.

4. Mrs. Ham's performance as Education Technicain was excellent; she received a superior performance award; and was recommended for promotion to GS-7. Indeed, Mr. Delbert J. Wilson, Education Director, testified that he had thought her promotion to GS-7 was to be automatic upon satisfactory completion of the one year training period and Mrs. Ham had been excellent or outstanding in all phases of her job.

5. Ms. Wanda Martin, Civilian Personnel Office, Position and Pay Management, Fort Polk, testified that when she received the request for Mrs. Ham's promotion, she concluded that the position could not be upgraded to GS-7 without prior Commission (Civil Service Commission) approval and that the position should be established at GS-6 rather than GS-7; that this was discussed with Mr. Burton W. Cooley, then Chief, Staffing Branch; and that Mr. Cooley set up a meeting with Mrs. Ham and her supervisors for May 12, 1976, to discuss the one grade interval series. Ms. Martin testified that she was familiar with the Education Technician job description and was aware that it stated that the incumbent would be promoted to the 7 level upon completion of necessary training and necessary qualification requirements; but stated that she had no knowledge concerning qualification requirements.

6. In attendance at the May 12, 1976, meeting were: Mr. Cooley, Ms. Martin, Mrs. Ham, Mr. Wilson and Mr. Leland A. Slaydon, presently Senior Counselor and in 1976 was Deputy Director of Education. Messrs. Wilson and Slaydon were the immediate supervisors of Mrs. Ham; they had recommended her promotion to GS-7; and they disagreed with Mr. Cooley's desire to rewrite the job description to a GS-6. Recognizing Ms. Martin's express denial of any knowledge concerning qualification requirements, Mr. Wilson's testimony, which was fully confirmed by the testimony of Mrs. Ham, Mr. Slaydon and Ms. Martin, is most revealing. Mr. Wilson testified,

"Mr. Cooley said she did not have the qualifying experience. And Mrs. Ham disagreed and mentioned the University experience. And he said he didn't know about that, and she said, 'It's in the record.' Now some way, I don't know whether Mrs. Martin, or somebody handed -- Bonnie got the record and she thumbed through it and found it and got up and took it over and Mr. Cooley was thumbing through it, looking at it. Then I believe Mr. Cooley made the remark, this time, that it would not be considered specialized experience." (Tr. 65).

Mr. Wilson further testified that Mr. Cooley stated that Mrs. Ham's 5 year employment with LSU and SLU was not qualifying because "'it was administrative.'" (Tr. 74). Mr. Wilson then testified:

"I think in general terms, if it were administrative in a college set-up, then it would be what we're looking for.

"Q. You wanted people that understood credit-hours and semesters, and so forth"

"A. Right. And an analysis of certain reports, or attendance and reasons for doing certain things." (Tr. 74).

Mrs. Ham testified as follows:

"... Mr. Cooley said I was not qualified And so I asked Mr. Cooley why was I not qualified. And he said I lacked the necessary specialized experience. I asked Mr. Cooley to show me what was the necessary specialized experience - which was considered specialized experience. So he showed me in the handbook, and an example was 'working for a University, in a registrar's office' as an example for my particular education technician job. 1/ And so I told Mr. Cooley, I said, 'But I have that experience in my folder. I worked for L.S.U. at Eunice for approximately 5 years, and that was what was considered specialized experience when I was hired.'

"Q. What was his response when you told him that?"

1/ The document referred to as the "X-118 Standard" (Res. Exh. 9) does give as an example work as an assistant in a college registrar's office; but even a cursory reading of this document makes plain that the controlling requirement for Specialized experience is as follows:

"This is experience which has demonstrated that the applicant has acquired and is able to apply the knowledge, skills, and abilities which are appropriate in the particular nature and grade of the position.

"Typically, such experience is ... work which is basically similar or closely related to the work of the position to be filled, or in the same specific program area with which the position is concerned or in a similar or closely related kind of program. ..." [Then follow two examples, one of which was employment in a college registrar's office]. (Res. Exh. 9).

It is obvious that place of employment, i.e., whether in a College Registrar's office or in a college Business Manager's office, is immaterial. To the contrary, the controlling consideration is whether the applicant's specialized experience "has demonstrated that the applicant has acquired and is able to apply the knowledge, skills and abilities which are appropriate to the particular nature and grade level of the position."

"A. He said it was not in my folder. And I said it was. And I asked for my folder, and I showed him where it was, in my 201 Personnel Folder." (Tr. 18-19).

7. Mr. Cooley told Mrs. Ham that if she initialed a change of the job description he would promote her to a GS-6; however Mrs. Ham stated that she believed she met all qualifications for GS-7 and when it became apparent that it was not going to be possible to resolve the disagreement at the meeting, Mr. Slaydon stated that if Mrs. Ham was dissatisfied with Mr. Cooley's opinion she had a right to file a grievance, go to the union and take the matter further. Mr. Slaydon testified that Mr. Cooley then stated,

"... if she went further and stirred things up and dirtied up the water, he might find she was not even qualified to be a GS-5" (Tr. 50).

The testimony of Mrs. Ham (Tr. 21, 28) and Mr. Wilson (Tr. 65-66) fully corroborated the testimony of Mr. Slaydon and even Ms. Martin admitted that Mr. Cooley said "'Mrs. Ham there is some question as to whether you even qualify for the 5 level.'" (Tr. 87).

8. The Inspector General Team was at Fort Polk and there was a time for complaints from civilian personnel and Mrs. Ham took the matter to the Inspector General, Colonel Chamberlain, and informed him of the meeting, including Mr. Cooley's threat. A day or two later, Colonel Chamberlain informed Mrs. Ham that he had reviewed at length her personnel folder; had met with Mr. Norman E. Lewis, Civilian Personnel Officer and Mr. Cooley's superior; had recommended that Mr. Lewis promote Mrs. Ham, stating that his review of her personnel file demonstrated, in his opinion, that she should be promoted and noting further that Mrs. Ham's 41 semester hours of college credits should, in his opinion as a previous civilian personnel officer, have been considered as specialized experience; and that Mr. Lewis would call Mrs. Ham. Mr. Lewis never called Mrs. Ham.

9. Mrs. Ham did go to the Inspector General, did consult the Union and did make known her intention to file a grievance. Whether a formal grievance had been filed on or before June 10, 1976, Mr. Lewis in his letter of June 10, 1976, to the New Orleans Branch of CSC (Res. Exh. 2), expressly acknowledged Mrs. Ham's intention to file a formal grievance and, as threatened by Mr. Cooley on May 12, 1976, "if she went further and stirred things up and dirtied up the water", Mr. Lewis carried out Mr. Cooley's threat by representing to CSC that experience previously credited as specialized had now been found to have been "general in nature".

10. Mr. Lewis' letter of June 10, 1976, bears little relation to fact and appears largely divorced from reality. For example, he stated that "upon initiation of the promotion action, another staffing specialist questioned the employee's overall qualification to be promoted to GS-07, for the reason that she did not meet the basic qualification requirements at the time she was placed in the GS-05 position." (Res. Exh. 2, ¶ 1C.). Ms. Wanda Martin, the staffing specialist who received the promotion request, testified that she concluded that the position could not be upgraded to GS-7 without prior Commission approval and that the position should be established at GS-6 rather than GS-7. Mrs. Martin categorically denied that she had any knowledge concerning qualification requirements.

If, perchance, Mr. Lewis had reference to Mr. Cooley as the other "staffing specialist" the record shows without contradiction that when Mr. Cooley made the statement that he might "find she was not even qualified to be a GS-5" he did not know of Mrs. Ham's five years experience with two universities.

Mr. Lewis stated in his letter of June 10, 1976, "The specific experience in question is that experience gained while employed in the Business Manager's Office at Louisiana State University, Eunice Branch, during the period 9-1-66 until 4-30-71 and at Southwestern Louisiana University from 5-1-71 to 10-29-71. This experience was initially credited as specialized in qualifying Mrs. Ham for her present position. However, in comparing her description of duties in the LSU job to the X-118 Standard for GS-05 level work in the 1702 Education Technician Series, that experience is now found to have been general in nature." At the hearing, Mr. Lewis demonstrated a remarkable inability to state what the duties of an Education Technician (Typing) are, beyond typing and filing which he stated Mrs. Ham was qualified to perform; wholly failed to point to anything in Mrs. Ham's university experience which was not closely related to the duties of Education Technician (Typing); and admitted that her experience at LSU and SLU demonstrated full understanding of educational work, college credits, all the language that would be used, etc. Of course, Mr. Slayton specifically testified with respect to Mr. Cooley's comment about Mrs. Ham's 5 years of college administrative experience, "... if it were administrative in a college set-up, then it would be what we're looking for."

11. Mr. Cooley on May 12, 1976, had offered to promote Mrs. Ham to Education Technician (Typing) GS-6 if she would agree to a revised job description. Mr. Cooley on May 12, 1976, made it clear that if Mrs. Ham did not agree to the revised job description and accept a GS-6 he might find that she was not even qualified to be a GS-5. Mr. Lewis' letter of June 10, 1976, carried out Mr. Cooley's threat, notwithstanding Colonel Chamberlain's strong recommendation to the contrary. Not only did Mr. Lewis fail to give any specific justification for his conclusionary assertions; but he, obviously, withheld any reference to Mrs. Ham's 41 semester hours of college credits, which Colonel Chamberlain believed further constituted specialized experience, and he made no effort to determine the nature of Mrs. Ham's work at LSU and SLU. Not only did Mr. Lewis not discuss the matter with Mrs. Ham; but Mrs. Ham was not even informed of the letter of June 10, 1976, until sometime after the letter had been submitted to CSC.

12. Mr. C.H. Lohfink, Area Manager, New Orleans Area Office, CSC, on July 9, 1976, responded to Mr. Lewis' letter of June 10, 1976, in part, as follows:

"On the basis of information submitted with your letter and a review of the appropriate X-118 qualification standard, it is our opinion that Mrs. Ham was not qualified for placement in the GS-1702-05 position in April, 1975, because she lacked the one year specialized experience requirement described in that standard. It is our opinion, also, that she is not now qualified for promotion to GS-1702-06 because she lacks the two years specialized experience required, or to GS-1702-7 because she lacks the three years specialized experience required." (Res. Exh. 3).

13. Mr. Lewis responded by letter dated July 30, 1976, and stated, in part, as follows:

"2. ...Credit was awarded for specialized experience gained while the applicant was employed by an education institution in a purely clerical capacity. The staffing specialist failed to differentiate between the function of a registrar's office and a business manager's office. ...

* * * *

"4. ...this Command in coordination with management officials of the Education Center, requested that Ms. Ham be retained in the position for which she was selected. Her performance has been totally satisfactory and potential for advancement to the GS-1702-07 target level has been fully demonstrated.

"5. It is proposed to consider Mrs. Ham for promotion to the GS-06 level o/a 12 May 1977, and subsequent promotion to the target level grade of GS-07 when time in grade and qualification requirements are met.

"6. Request favorable consideration of retention in the position and crediting of experience gained since appointment to the position." (Res. Exh. 4).

14. Mr. Lohfink replied to Mr. Lewis' letter of July 30, 1976, by letter dated November 9, 1976, in which he stated, in part, as follows:

"... Mrs. Ham presumably now meets the necessary qualification requirements, but it has been determined that she entirely lacked the specialized experience requirements at the time of promotion. Commission approval of her retention depends, inter alia, on how close she was to meeting the qualification requirements at the time of promotion. ..." (Res. Exh. 5) (Emphasis in original.)

15. Mr. Cooley responded to Mr. Lohfink's letter of November 9, 1976, by letter dated January 10, 1977, in which he stated, in part, as follows:

"In evaluating these candidates against the qualification requirements and against the JREC, it is clearly evident that the three candidates placed in the Best Qualified group possessed skills that exceeded the qualifications of the other qualified candidates. Summary of the comparisons are as follows:

- "Glenda Smith ... [declined the position]
- "Bonnie Ham ...
- "Kay Ketchum ... [has since resigned]
- (Res. Exh. 6)

16. Mr. Lohfink responded to Mr. Cooley's letter of January 10, 1977, by letter dated February 10, 1977, and stated, in part, as follows:

"This is in reference to your letter, dated January 10, 1977, and our telephone conversation of February 2, 1977, about the matter of Mrs. Bonnie Ham's selection for and retention in the position of Education Technician (Typing), GS-1702-05.

"It appears that the basic issue of whether Mrs. Ham met the specialized experience requirement at the time of her promotion has been reactivated by your reference to a submission from Mrs. Ham's former employer, an educational institution, purporting to clarify the nature and quality of her experience in that employment. Your agency must carefully assess the credibility and creditability of the information furnished and determine whether it warrants a reversal of your previous decision that Mrs. Ham was not qualified at the time of her promotion. If it is determined that Mrs. Ham was qualified on the basis of this additional information, then there was not in fact a regulatory violation in the selection of Mrs. Ham.

"If, on the other hand, the previously conceded regulatory violation remains, the following must be considered:

* * * *

5) Although Mrs. Ham lacked the specialized experience requirement at the time of her promotion in April 1975, we consider that she has acquired the necessary specialized experience during the period April 1975 to April 1976 for her present position.

"For the foregoing reasons and because of the length of time elapsing since Mrs. Ham's promotion, we approve your agency's retaining her in her present position. However, only her service in the position since April 1976, when she first met the specialized experience requirement, may be credited for promotion purposes. Otherwise, we believe she would unfairly benefit further from the initial error of your agency in selecting her for a position for which she was not qualified. ..." (Res. Exh. 7).

17. In May, 1977, Mrs. Ham was promoted to GS-6.

CONCLUSIONS

The record shows directly and clearly that Mr. Cooley, Chief of Respondent's Staffing Branch, Civilian Personnel Office, on May 12, 1976:

- a) Offered to promote Mrs. Ham to Education Technician GS-6 if she would initial a change of the job description (which provided for promotion from GS-5 to GS-7); and
- b) Told Mrs. Ham that if she did not initial the change of the job description and went further and stirred things up and dirtied up the water he might find she was not even qualified to be a GS-5.

Mrs. Ham, believing that she was qualified, and that she possessed the requisite specialized experience, as had, indeed, been determined when she was selected in April, 1975, for the job, did speak to Colonel Chamberlain, the Inspector General, did consult the Union and did make known her intention to file a grievance; and Mr. Lewis, Respondent's Civilian Personnel Officer and Mr. Cooley's superior, by letter dated June 10, 1976, to the CSC, promptly and emphatically carried out Mr. Cooley's threat of May 12, 1976.

In preparing the job description in 1975, the Civilian Personnel Office had provided for a two grade promotion, from the in-hire level of GS-5 to GS-7, upon completion of twelve months training. When Mrs. Ham's promotion request was received in 1976, Ms. Wanda Martin, Position and Pay Management, Civilian Personnel Office, concluded that the position could not be upgraded to GS-7 without prior Commission approval and, accordingly, that the position should be established at GS-6 rather than GS-7.

The job description provided for virtually automatic promotion to GS-7 upon satisfactory completion of 12 months training and Mrs. Ham's performance had been excellent and she had received a superior performance award. This was the unqualified understanding of Mr. Delbert J. Wilson, Education Director, Mr. Leland A. Slayton, presently Senior Counselor and in 1976 was Deputy Director of Education, Mrs. Ham, and even Ms. Wanda Martin. Mr. Cooley, when advised by Ms. Martin of the error in providing for a two-year promotion increment in a 1702 series job, deigned to admit error and although he offered to promote Mrs. Ham to GS-6 if she initialed a revised job description, when Mr. Slayton suggested that if Mrs. Ham was dissatisfied with Mr. Cooley's opinion she had a right to file a grievance, go to the union and take the matter further Mr. Cooley stated that if she "went further" he might find that she was not even qualified to hold the GS-5 position (as Education Technician (Typing)). Mrs. Ham did not initial the revised job description; she did "go further"; and Mr. Cooley's threat was duly carried out by Mr. Lewis' letter of June 10, 1976. Not only did Mr. Lewis carry out the threat made by Mr. Cooley on May 12, 1976, but he did so after Colonel Chamberlain, the Inspector General, had discussed the matter with him and had strongly recommended that Mrs. Ham be promoted.

That the professed basis for Respondent's assertion that Mrs. Ham lacked the specialized experience, credited upon her selection, was contrived and wholly lacking in substance is apparent. Mr. Cooley made his statement that he might find that Mrs. Ham was not even qualified to be a GS-5 without knowledge that Mrs. Ham had had 5 years experience at LSU and at SLU; when Mrs. Ham called this experience to his attention, Mr. Cooley asserted that this was administrative and did not qualify; Mr. Lewis in his letter of June 10, 1976, asserted that because Mrs. Ham's experience was in a Business Manager's office it was "general in nature"; in his letter of June 30, 1976, Mr. Lewis asserted that Mrs. Ham had been employed by an educational institution in a "purely clerical capacity. The staffing specialist failed to differentiate between the function of a registrar's office and a business manager's office". Perhaps Mr. Lewis was deluded by the example in the "X-118 Standard"; but it should be obvious that place of employment, that is, in a Registrar's office or in a Business Manager's office, is immaterial; that the controlling consideration is whether the applicant's specialized experience "has demonstrated that the applicant has acquired and is able to apply the knowledge, skills and abilities which are appropriate to the particular nature and grade level of the position."

That purely clerical experience would not constitute specialized experience within the meaning of the "X-118 Standard" may very well be true; but it would be equally true whether such purely clerical experience was gained in a college Registrar's office or in a college Business Manager's office.

Mr. Lewis did not talk to Mrs. Ham about her work at LSU and SLU nor did he make any inquiry of either institution as to Mrs. Ham's work experience, notwithstanding that his own staffing specialist had, in 1975, determined that Mrs. Ham's experience at LSU and SLU constituted specialized experience and notwithstanding that Colonel Chamberlain, himself a former Civilian Personnel Officer, had, after careful review of Mrs. Ham's personnel file, strongly recommended that Mrs. Ham be promoted. Moreover, neither Mr. Lewis nor Mr. Cooley in any of the correspondence to Mr. Lohfink ever mentioned that Mrs. Ham had 41 semester hours of college credits, which Colonel Chamberlain concluded further constituted specialized experience, although Respondent took pains to set forth college credits of other applicants. Finally, Mr. Lohfink, in his letter of February 10, 1977, to Mr. Cooley, noted, "... a submission from Mrs. Ham's former employer, an educational institution, purporting to clarify the nature and quality of her experience in that employment." Although the actual submission was not offered in evidence or otherwise explained, Mr. Lohfink's comments with respect thereto clearly imply that Respondent's prior assertions as to the nature and quality of Mrs. Ham's work at LSU and SLU were, in fact, false and I specifically draw such inference. But equally significant, and perhaps even more significant, was the fact that Respondent purported to make "findings", contrary to the determination made by its own staffing specialist in 1975, without any effort to ascertain the facts, notwithstanding its full awareness of Mrs. Ham's assertions and the recommendation of the Inspector General, and the "findings" not only were wholly unsubstantiated and made with reckless disregard for truth, but were false and were intended to punish Mrs. Ham for the exercise of rights protected under the Order.

Thus, the record shows that Respondent on May 12, 1976, violated Section 19(a)(1) of the Order by Mr. Cooley's threat to find that Mrs. Ham was not qualified to be a GS-5 if she "went further and stirred things up and dirtied up the water" by consulting Complainant and/or by filing a grievance; that agency management thereby interfered with, restrained, and coerced Mrs. Ham in the exercise of rights assured by the Order, including specifically her right to file a grievance and her right to consult her collective bargaining representative. The record further shows that because Mrs. Ham did "go further", that is, she did consult Complainant and she did make known her intention to file a grievance, Mr. Lewis, Respondent's Civilian Personnel Officer, by letter dated June 10, 1976, carried out with alacrity Mr. Cooley's threat of May 12, 1976, and did purport to find that Mrs. Ham "was not even qualified to be a GS-5". Respondent thereby further violated Section 19(a)(1) of the Order.

As Mr. Cooley, on May 12, 1976, had offered to promote Mrs. Ham to GS-6 if she would initial a revised job description for the position of Education Technician (Typing) and thereby relinquish her presumed and apparent right to promotion to GS-7, pursuant to the original job description, it is clear, and I specifically find, that but for Respondent's wrongful action, in violation of Section 19(a)(1) of the Order, Mrs. Ham would have been promoted to GS-6 on May 12, 1976, recognizing that Respondent was foreclosed by CSC Regulations from promoting her to GS-7 without Commission approval; and I further find that but for Respondent's wrongful action, Mrs. Ham would have had not less than three years specialized experience, the requirement for GS-7, as of May 12, 1977.

REMEDY

Respondent's wrongful action, in violation of Section 19(a)(1) of the Order, on May 12, 1976, by its threat to find Mrs. Ham not qualified to be an Education Technician (Typing) GS-5 if she did not initial a revised job description and accept promotion to GS-6, whereas the job description provided for promotion to GS-7 upon satisfactory completion of 12 months training, and "went further and stirred things up and dirtied up the water" by consulting with Complainant and/or by filing a grievance; and on June 10, 1976, when it carried out its threat because Mrs. Ham had gone further and had consulted Complainant and had made known her intention to file a formal grievance, and purported to find that Mrs. Ham was not qualified to be a GS-5 by disallowing specialized experience previously credited. Respondent's wrongful action had two immediate results. First, she was denied any promotion. Second, by disallowing the specialized experience previously credited, Respondent subjected Mrs. Ham to removal from the position she occupied, because, Respondent asserted, she should not have been selected, although Respondent subsequently requested "in coordination with management officials of the Education Center" that Mrs. Ham be retained in the position and CSC on February 10, 1977, approved.

As Respondent had the authority to promote Mrs. Ham on May 12, 1976, to GS-6, as it offered to do if she initialed a revised job description; and as Respondent wrongfully found that specialized experience, credited when Mrs. Ham was selected for the Education Technician (Typing) job in 1975, should not have been credited, in direct retaliation for Mrs. Ham's lawful and protected right under the Order to consult Complainant and/or to file a grievance, Mrs. Ham was denied promotion to GS-6 on May 12, 1976, wholly because of Respondent's wrongful action in violation of the Order and I shall recommend that her promotion to GS-6, on, or about, May 12, 1977, be made retroactive to May 12, 1976, together with all pay and allowances. For the reasons set forth herein, the record clearly shows, and I have so found, that, but for the wrongful action of Respondent, Mrs. Ham would have been promoted on May 12, 1976, to GS-6. Accordingly, the award of backpay to remedy the unfair labor practice is fully in accordance with the Decisions of the Comptroller General in No. B-180010, 54 Comp. Gen. 760 (March 19, 1975); No. B-175275, 54 Comp. Gen. 1071, 1074-1075 (June 20, 1975), No. B-180010.03, 56 Comp. Gen. 8 (October 7, 1976); Naval Air Rework Facility, Pensacola, Florida and Secretary of the Navy, Department of the Navy, Washington, D.C., A/SLMR No. 608, 6 A/SLMR 67 (1976), affd. in part and set aside in part, FLRC No. 76A-37, Report No. 125 (June 2, 1977), Supplemental Decision, A/SLMR No. 873 (August 4, 1977).

Respondent's action in disallowing credit for Mrs. Ham's specialized experience, which had been duly credited after appropriate review and analysis in 1975, was motivated wholly by Respondent's wrongful and unlawful intent to punish Mrs. Ham for her exercise of rights protected by the Order. Whether Mrs. Ham could have been promoted to GS-7, in accordance with the job description for the Education Technician (Typing) position, was not wholly within Respondent's control; but, while Commission approval was required (see, Res. Exh. 9), Respondent, but for its wrongful action in violation of the Order, could have, and should have, submitted such recommendation to the Commission. There can be no doubt that the only remedy which could fully correct the wrongful action of Respondent would be the retroactive promotion of Mrs. Ham to GS-7 as of May 12, 1976; however, such remedy is precluded. Thus the Comptroller General, in No. B-180010, supra, has stated:

"Although every personnel action which directly affects an employee and which has been found to be an unfair labor practice may also be considered to be an unjustified or unwarranted personnel action, the remedies under the Back Pay Act are not available unless the A/SLMR can also establish that but for the wrongful action, the withdrawal of pay, allowances, and differentials would not have occurred. ..." (54 Comp. Gen. at 763).

As series 1702 is identified as one of the "exceptions" not included in the list which may be considered to be in lines of work properly classified at two-grade intervals (Res. Exh. 9, Federal Personnel Manual, Inst. 202), it cannot be said that, but for Respondent's wrongful action, Mrs. Ham would have been promoted to GS-7 on May 12, 1976, inasmuch as a two grade promotion in this series was authorized only upon prior approval of the Commission. Respondent's error in issuing the job description in 1975, pursuant to which Mrs. Ham was selected, does not negate in any manner this requirement.

Nevertheless, as Respondent's wrongful action was its disallowance of credit, duly granted in 1975 for specialized experience at the time of Mrs. Ham's selection for her present position, removal of such disallowance of credit as recommended herein, will mean that Mrs Ham began her present duties on May 11, 1975, with one year's credit for specialized experience; that, but for Respondent's wrongful action, she would have been promoted to GS-6 on May 12, 1976(and I have recommended that her promotion to GS-6 be made retroactive to May 12, 1976); and that, but for Respondent's wrongful action, she would have been eligible for promotion to GS-7 on May 12, 1977, at which time she would have had not less than 3 years specialized experience including service in the position since May 11, 1975. 2/ Accordingly, I shall further recommend that Mrs. Ham

2/ It is recognized that in his letter of July 9, 1976, Mr. Lohfink used language which could imply a determination by CSC that Mrs. Ham was not qualified for placement in the GS-1702-05 position in April, 1975; however, read in context it seems (Continued) be promoted to GS-7, retroactive to May 12, 1977, and that she be paid in full for the difference in all pay and allowances between a GS-6, to which she was promoted on that date, and a GS-7 to which she would have been promoted but for Respondent's wrongful action. See No. B-180010,54 Comp. Gen. 760, et al., supra.

To insure full and effective remedy of Respondent's wrongful action, 3/ I shall further recommend, in addition to the customary affirmative action, including posting, that: i) Respondent expunge from Mrs. Ham's personnel record all references to the purported "finding", as set forth, for example, in Mr. Lewis' letter dated June 10, 1976, that experience initially credited as specialized experience apparent that Mr. Lohfink merely accepted the information submitted by Mr. Lewis in his letter of June 10, 1976. That Mr. Lohfink did not make, or intend to imply that he had made, any independent determination of qualification is made clear by his letter of February 10, 1977, in which he stated, inter alia,

"Your agency must ... determine whether It warrants a reversal of your previous decision that Mrs. Ham was not qualified at the time of her promotion."

Moreover, such result is fully consistent with the concluding sentence of the second paragraph of Mr. Lohfink's letter of February 10, 1977, inasmuch as there was, absent Respondent's wrongful action, no regulatory violation in the selection of Mrs. Ham.

3/ As noted herein, Mr. Lewis stated in his letter of June 10, 1976, that Mrs. Ham intended to file a formal grievance. Although it is assumed that a grievance was filed, neither party offered the grievance in evidence.

More important, Respondent has not asserted that Section 19(d) of the Order applies. Cf. Department of the Interior, Bureau of Reclamation, Yuma Projects Office, Yuma, Arizona, A/SLMR No. 401, 4 A/SLMR 406, (1974), set aside and remanded, FLRC No. 74A-52 (1976), Supplemental Decision and Order, A/SLMR No. 808 (1977).

was not properly credited in qualifying Mrs. Ham for her present position; and ii) Respondent restore to Mrs. Ham full credit for specialized experience initially credited in qualifying Mrs. Ham for her present position.

RECOMMENDATION

Having found that Respondent has engaged in conduct violative of Section 19(a)(1) of Executive Order 11491, as amended, I recommend that the Assistant Secretary adopt the following order designed to effectuate the policies of the Executive Order:

 PURSUANT TO SECTION 6 OF EXECUTIVE ORDER 11491, AS AMENDED

DEPARTMENT OF HEALTH, EDUCATION

 A/SLMR No. 1101

This case involved an unfair labor practice complaint filed by American Federation of Government Employees, AFL-CIO, Local 1760 (AFGE) alleging that Respondent violated Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order by refusing to negotiate, on or about February 11, 1977, with the AFGE over the procedures to be followed in connection with a proposed detail of employees from one office component to another, as well as over the adverse impact of such a detail on the bargaining unit employees.

The Administrative Law Judge concluded that the Respondent violated Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order by its failure to timely notify the AFGE and afford it a reasonable opportunity to meet and confer concerning the impact and implementation of the Respondent's decision to detail certain of its employees. In reaching this conclusion, the Administrative Law Judge rejected the Respondent's defense that the AFGE is not the exclusive representative of the employees in the unit and had no standing to file the instant complaint. Rather, based upon record evidence, the Administrative Law Judge found that the AFGE is the agent of the exclusive representative, the National Office of the American Federation of Government Employees, AFL-CIO (National Council of Social Security Payment Center Locals) for the purpose of representing the Respondent's employees in local matters affecting personnel policies and practices and other working terms and conditions and, therefore, had standing to file the instant complaint. Further, the Administrative Law Judge rejected the contention of the Respondent that any obligation owed to the AFGE was restricted only to "consultation," rather than "negotiation."

The Assistant Secretary adopted the findings, conclusions and recommendations of the Administrative Law Judge, and ordered that the Respondent cease and desist from engaging in the conduct found violative of the Order and take certain affirmative actions.

DECISION AND ORDER

On June 8, 1978, Administrative Law Judge William Naimark issued his Recommended Decision and Order in the above-entitled proceeding, finding that the Respondent had engaged in the unfair labor practices alleged in the complaint and recommending that it cease and desist therefrom and take certain affirmative action as set forth in the attached Administrative Law Judge's Recommended Decision and Order. Thereafter, the Respondent filed exceptions and a supporting brief with respect to the Administrative Law Judge's Recommended Decision and Order.

The Assistant Secretary has reviewed the rulings of the Administrative Law Judge made at the hearing and finds that no prejudicial error was committed. The rulings are hereby affirmed. Upon consideration of the Administrative Law Judge's Recommended Decision and Order and the entire record in this case, including the exceptions and supporting brief filed by the Respondent, I hereby adopt the Administrative Law Judge's findings, 1/ conclusions and recommendations.

1/ The Respondent excepted to certain credibility findings made by the Administrative Law Judge. In Navy Exchange, U.S. Naval Air Station Quonset Point, Rhode Island, 2 A/SLMR 377, A/SLMR No. 180 (1972), the Assistant Secretary held that as a matter of policy he would not overturn an Administrative Law Judge's resolution with respect to credibility unless the preponderance of all the relevant evidence established that such resolution clearly was incorrect. Based on a review of the record in this case, I find no basis for reversing the Administrative Law Judge's credibility findings.

Pursuant to Section 6(b) of Executive Order 11491, as amended, and Section 203.26(b) of the Regulations, the Assistant Secretary of Labor for Labor-Management Relations hereby orders that the Department of Health, Education and Welfare, Social Security Administration, BRSL, Northeastern Program Service Center shall:

1. Cease and desist from:

(a) Instituting a detail or assignment of employees represented exclusively by the National Office, American Federation of Government Employees, AFL-CIO (National Council of Social Security Payment Center Locals), without first notifying the American Federation of Government Employees, AFL-CIO, Local 1760, the authorized representative of the exclusively recognized labor organization, and affording it the opportunity to meet and confer, to the extent consonant with law and regulations, on the procedures which management will observe in implementing such detail or assignment, and on the impact such detail or assignment will have on adversely affected employees in the exclusively recognized unit.

(b) In any like or related manner, interfering with, restraining, or coercing its employees in the exercise of their rights assured by Executive Order 11491, as amended.

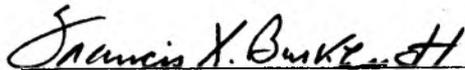

2. Take the following affirmative actions in order to effectuate the purposes and policies of Executive Order 11491, as amended:

(a) Notify the American Federation of Government Employees, AFL-CIO, Local 1760, the authorized representative of the National Office, American Federation of Government Employees, AFL-CIO (National Council of Social Payment Center Locals), the employees' exclusive bargaining representative, of any intended detail or assignment of employees and, upon request, meet and confer, to the extent consonant with law and regulations, on the procedures which management will observe in implementing such detail or assignment, and on the impact such detail or assignment will have on adversely affected employees in the exclusively recognized unit.

(b) Post at its facility at the Northeastern Program Center copies of the attached notice marked "Appendix" on forms to be furnished by the Assistant Secretary of Labor for Labor-Management Relations. Upon receipt of such forms, they shall be signed by the Director of the Northeastern Program Service Center and shall be posted and maintained by him for 60 consecutive days thereafter in conspicuous places, including all bulletin boards and other places where notices to employees are customarily posted. The Director shall take reasonable steps to insure that such notices are not altered, defaced, or covered by any other material.

RECOMMENDED DECISION AND ORDER

Statement of the Case

Pursuant to a Notice of Hearing on Complaint issued on February 10, 1978 by the Acting Regional Administrator for Labor-Management Services Administration, U.S. Department of Labor, New York Region, a hearing was held before the undersigned on March 7 and April 14, 1978 at New York, New York.

This proceeding was initiated under Executive Order 11491, as amended (herein called the Order). A complaint was filed on April 14, 1977 by American Federation of Government Employees, AFL-CIO, Local 1760 (herein called Complainant) against Department of Health, Education and Welfare, Social Security Administration, BRSI, Northeastern Program Service Center (herein called Respondent). It alleged, in substance, that Respondent violated Sections 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order by refusing to negotiate, on or about February 11, 1977, with Complainant over the procedures to be followed in connection with a proposed detail of employees from one office component to another, as well as over the adverse impact of such a detail on the bargaining unit employees.

Respondent submitted a response to the complaint, dated May 9, 1977 wherein it alleged that: (a) there was no obligation to meet and confer with the local union over conditions of employment; (b) management was obliged merely to consult with Complainant over local matters, and it fulfilled its obligation by meeting with Complainant and consulting on this proposed detail; (c) the detail of employees had not substantial impact on employees in the bargaining unit. The alleged violations of the Order were denied.

Both parties were represented at the hearing, were afforded full opportunity to be heard, to adduce evidence and to examine as well as cross-examine witnesses. Thereafter, briefs were filed which have been duly considered.

Upon the entire record in this case, from my observation of the witnesses and their demeanor, and from all of the testimony and evidence adduced at the hearing, I make the following findings, conclusions and recommendations:

Findings of Fact

1. The Bureau of Retirement and Survivor's Insurance has six program service centers located throughout the United States - one in each of six major cities. The one involved herein is the Northeastern Program Service Center. These centers review claims prepared by district offices, adjudicate and determine entitlements, and certify benefits for beneficiaries to the Treasury Department.

2. The National Council of Social Security Payment Center Locals, American Federation of Government Employees, AFL-CIO (herein called the Council) is composed of six local unions representing unit employees in each service center.

3. By letter dated February 27, 1969 J.F. Griner, National President of American Federation of Government Employees, AFL-CIO, notified the Commission of Social Security Administration that recognition will be granted to the national AFGE rather than the Council, and that the national office of AFGE is the bargaining agent for the Council.

4. By letter dated June 10, 1969 Hugh F. McKenna, Director of BRSI, advised Griner that the national office of AFGE, AFL-CIO (Council of Social Security Payment Center Locals) was granted exclusive recognition for a unit of all non-supervisory employees at the Payment Centers.

5. The Bureau and AFGE have been parties to collective bargaining agreements since 1971. The most recent written agreement was effective by its terms on March 15, 1974 for a period of two years. It was subsequently extended and continues in effect at the present time.

6. The aforesaid written agreement identifies the exclusive bargaining representative of the unit employees of the Program Centers as the national office of the American Federation of Government Employees, AFL-CIO (National Council of Social Security Payment Center Locals), hereinafter referred to as the Council.

7. (a) Article 2, Section (a) of the aforesaid agreement provides, in substance, that representatives of the Bureau and Council shall meet semi-annually to confer and consult with respect to personnel policies and practices or other matters affecting working conditions.

(b) Article 2, Section (c) of the aforesaid agreement provides, in substance, that labor-management meetings in the Program Center to confer on local personnel policies, practices, and general working conditions shall be held monthly unless deferred by mutual consent.

(c) Article 2, Section (e) of the said agreement provides, in substance, that (1) the Bureau will consult with the Council on matters re personnel policies, practices and working conditions (2) the Program Center will consult with its respective Local on matters within the authority of the Regional Representatives re personnel policies, practices and working conditions.

(d) Article 30 of the aforesaid agreement provides for the negotiation of supplemental agreements at each installation (Program Center) between the Center and the Local thereat. All local supplemental agreements are deemed part of the master agreement. Provision is also made in Section (d) of this Article for the establishment of ground rules to govern negotiations.

8. Under date of March 5, 1973, McKenna sent the Council a copy of the Bureau's Instruction (SSA-BRSI Instruction 711-1) pertaining to the labor-managements relations policy of the Bureau. Under the heading, "Purpose", it is stated therein that the individual Payment Center locals are representatives of AFGE (NCSSPCL) in the respective payment centers, and, as such, the Bureau consults and negotiate with them on appropriate local matters. 1/

9. On February 10, 1977, 2/ Julius Bergman, Respondent's labor relations specialist, telephoned James Arnet, Complainant's vice-president, to inform him that management intended to establish a detail of employees to process annual reports and that Bergman wanted to discuss it with the proper union representative. Arnet suggested that Bergman speak with George Sekzer and Irwin Berger, both of whom were vice-presidents of the local union.

10. A meeting took place on February 11 which was attended by Bergman, Sekzer and Berger. The management official stated that a detail of five employees would commence on Monday, February 14 to sort and code annual reports. 3/ He added that four employees would be selected from different modules and one individual would be chosen from College Point. The union officials asked Bergman how the detail

1/ Under the heading "Bureau Relationships with the Union" the instruction, though declaring that the union's right to be consulted applies to the same subjects that are negotiable, draws a definitive distinction between negotiation and consultation.

2/ Except as otherwise stated, all dates hereinafter mentioned are in 1977.

3/ These reports are made by beneficiaries who contribute for retirement under Social Security. Each year they are coded in respect to the total earnings for the preceding year, the months in which no services were performed, and the estimate of earnings for the current year. This procedure, which has been in effect for five years, commences in February and continues until April annually.

would be selected, whether by seniority or on a voluntary basis; if members of the detail would be rotated or confined to the original selectees; whether overtime would be paid to these employees; and what procedure would be followed in sending a member from College Point. 4/ Bergman replied that he couldn't answer these questions; that he was there to advise them that the detail would take place along the lines he indicated; and that he would get back to the union later re their inquiries.

11. Later in the day, on February 11, the aforesaid respective agents of the Program Centers and Complainant met again. Bergman told the union agents the three named branch chiefs had been assigned to select the detail for the coding. When Berger asked if the union could consult with said chiefs as to the impact of the detail, Bergman said he would try to arrange a meeting in that regard later that afternoon. No such meeting was arranged.

12. Arnet spoke to Bergman on February 14, and the latter informed the union official that the detail had been implemented; that Respondent saw no need to discuss the matter further with the union.

Conclusions

In resisting the alleged violations of the Order attributed to it, Respondent contends as follows: (1) since the national office of AFGE is the bargaining agent for the employees at the Program Centers, Respondent is not obligated to bargain with the local herein (Complainant) except as to supplemental agreements in accordance with Article 30 of the written agreement; (2) in respect to daily matters affecting the Program Center, management's responsibility is limited under the contract (Article 2, Section (e)) to consultation rather than including an obligation to negotiate over such policies or working conditions; (3) the detail of employees herein by Respondent reflected no adverse impact or any adverse implementation problems as a result thereof, and it does not appear the union was unable to carry out its representational duties when the employees failed to answer the queries posed by Complainant.

4/ Employees at College Point report to work between 7-9 a.m. and leave 8 1/2 hours later. The detailee from College Point would report at 8:15 a.m., thus affecting his regular schedule.

Respondent challenges the right of Complainant to initiate this proceeding and require it to bargain over the detail of five employees to process annual reports. In effect, it contends that the local union has no standing except as to supplemental agreements, to require management to negotiate over local matters.

In dealing with a similar issue, the Assistant Secretary has declared that an activity is obligated only to meet and confer with the national exclusive representative, and not with a constituent local unless such local has been authorized to act on behalf of the exclusive representative. Bureau of the Mint, et. al., A/SLMR No. 750. In the cited case he concluded there was no specific authorization for the local union to act on behalf of the AFGE; that the sole responsibility of the activity was to meet and confer with the national union over the impact and implementation of a decision to grant two hours administrative leave; and that the contractual requirements of "consultation" with the local union on implementation of changes in shift assignment and hours of work did not apply to a one-time grant of administrative leave.

Certain factors present in the case at bar make it distinguishable from the Bureau of the Mint case, supra. The tenor of the agreement herein warrants a reasonable inference that local 1760 was granted the right to deal with the Program Center concerning either local matters not covered by the master agreement or changes affecting the Center. Thus, Article 2, Section (e) specifically states the Program Center will consult with its respective local as to personnel matters, practices and working conditions affecting such Center. Moreover, the agreement provides under Article 2, Section (c), that labor-management meetings at the Program Centers will be held monthly to confer on local personnel policies, practices and general working conditions.

Respondent, however, argues that its only obligation to negotiate with Complainant concerns supplemental agreements applicable to the local installation in accordance with Article 30 of the master agreement. It insists that the provisions of Article 2 merely require management to "consult" with the local union re changes in working conditions or policies, and that, except for the limitation imposed under Article 30, its obligation to negotiate extends solely to the exclusive bargaining representative, the national AFGE.

I do not agree. While it is true that the agreement allows for the negotiation of supplemental contracts at the local installation, I am not persuaded such a provision forecloses the local union from conducting further negotiations as to matters affecting the Program Center. Such a foreclosure is not explicit by the terms of the agreement, nor can it be inferred from the aforementioned articles therein. Contrariwise, the language employed envisages further "dealings" between the local union and the respective Center. In such a posture, I am constrained to conclude that Complainant has been acknowledged by the national union to act on its behalf as to matters affecting the local installation. Further, management has, in effect, acceded to its responsibility to recognize the local union in this regard. Thus, the Bureau's Instruction 711-1 (SSA-BRSI) declares that the individual Payment Center locals are representatives of AFGE in the respective centers, and, as such, the Bureau consults and negotiates with them on local matters. Attempts by Respondent to disavow its responsibility toward the local union, in the face of the foregoing, assumes a contradictory position. Moreover, such a position flies in the face of the Assistant Secretary's decision in a case involving the same parties herein, Department of Health, Education and Welfare, Social Security Administration, BRSI, Northeastern Program Service Center, A/SLMR No. 984. It was concluded therein that the Respondent was obligated under the order to afford the Complainant (Local 1760) notice and an opportunity to meet and confer on procedures to be utilized in effectuating its decision to transfer claims cases. 5/ In my opinion this cited decision lays to rest the issue as to whether local 1760 represents the Respondent's employees and is entitled to act for the national AFGE in respect to matters affecting this installation. 6/

Finally, I do not subscribe to management's view that its obligation toward Complainant, in respect to ongoing policies and practices, is limited to consultation as distinguished from negotiation. The Council has recognized no such distinction on negotiable issues unless this obligation is mutually limited by the parties. While the word "consult" appears in the master agreement, there was no express demarcation between it and the term "negotiate." Moreover,

5/ The complaint was, however, dismissed based on a finding that Complainant failed to request bargaining on impact and implementation.

6/ See also Department of Health, Education and Welfare, Social Security Administration, BRSI, A/SLMR No. 1022.

reference is also made, under Article 2, Section (c), to the fact that meetings will be held in the Centers to confer on local conditions and practices. To find a waiver of the local union's right to seek bargaining over issues pertaining to the Program Center's employees, and limit Respondent's obligation to consultations, the parties must so provide in clear and unmistakable language. See Kennedy Space Center, A/SLMR No. 566. In the case at bar the words "consult" and "negotiate" appear in various provisions of the agreement. Mere usage of these terms does not, in my opinion, spell out a differentiation between them, particularly since the terms were used interchangeably in the earlier days of public sector bargaining. Accordingly, I conclude management may not properly confine its obligations to consultation with Complainant concerning matters affecting the Program Center herein. 7/

Respondent argues further that, assuming arguendo, it must negotiate or bargain with Complainant re local issues or changes in working conditions, the detailing of five employees herein did not create a substantial impact on personnel policies, practices, and working conditions, citing Department of Defense, Air National Guard, Texas Air National Guard, Camp Mabry, Austin, Texas, A/SLMR No. 738. I do not agree. The assignment of five employees to work in a different area on special reports for several months must necessarily result in material impact. Such an assignment prompted concern by Complainant as to the procedure to be followed in selecting the individuals, whether assignments would be made on a voluntary and rotational basis, to what extent the detail would affect the member selected from College Point since the hours thereat differed from those in effect during the detail, and whether overtime would be paid to the members. These issues are, in my opinion, important and the decision may adversely affect unit employees. 8/

7/ I am aware that Bureau attempted to distinguish these terms in its Instruction 711-1. But this declaration constituted its own interpretation of "consultation" and "negotiation". It was neither agreed to by Complainant nor reflective of the Council's interpretations of these words.

8/ Cf. Department of Health, Education and Welfare, Social Security Administration, et. al., supra, where the Assistant Secretary found that the decision to transfer claims cases had a material impact on employees so as to require Respondent to meet and confer thereon.

Moreover, unlike the circumstances present in A/SLMR No. 984 involving these parties, the record herein establishes that Complainant did request that management bargain over the impact and implementation of the detail. A specific request to do so was made by Complainant on February 11 at which time Bergman stated he would try to arrange a meeting in that regard. Moreover, I do not conclude that management's partial replies to the union's inquiries fulfill its obligation to meet and confer re the procedures to be followed and the impact of its decision. Apart from the fact that Bergman was unable to answer the union's questions re the detail, he never arranged a meeting between the parties. Moreover, Bergman advised Arnet on February 14 that management saw no need to discuss the detail which had already been implemented. Accordingly, I find and conclude that Respondent violated Sections 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order by failing and refusing to meet and confer with Complainant over the procedures to be invoked in the implementation of the detail of five employees on February 14 to sort and code annual reports, as well as the impact upon those adversely affected.

Recommendation

Having found that Respondent has engaged in certain conduct which is violative of Sections 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order, I recommend that the Assistant Secretary adopt the following order designed to effectuate the purposes of Executive Order 11491, as amended.

Recommended Order

Pursuant to Section 6(b) of Executive Order 11491, as amended, and Section 203.26(b) of the Regulations, the Assistant Secretary of Labor for Labor-Management Relations hereby orders that the Department of Health, Education and Welfare, Social Security Administration, BRSI, Northeastern Program Service Center shall:

SUMMARY OF DECISION AND ORDER OF THE ASSISTANT SECRETARY
PURSUANT TO SECTION 6 OF EXECUTIVE ORDER 11491, AS AMENDED

DEPARTMENT OF THE AIR FORCE,
924th TACTICAL AIR GROUP RESERVE, BERGSTROM AIR FORCE BASE, TEXAS
A/SLMR No. 1102

This case involved a representation petition filed by the National Federation of Federal Employees, Local 1926 (NFFE) seeking a unit of all nonsupervisory, nonprofessional Wage Grade and General Schedule employees employed by the 924th Tactical Air Group Reserve (924th TAG) located at the Bergstrom Air Force Base, Texas (Bergstrom). The Intervenor, the American Federation of Government Employees, Local 2539, AFL-CIO (AFGE) had been granted exclusive recognition in 1967 for a unit of all non-professional appropriated fund employees at Bergstrom. The Activity and the AFGE contended that the employees of the 924th TAG were within the unit represented by the AFGE, that the NFFE's petition was untimely filed and, finally, that the unit sought was not appropriate for the purpose of exclusive recognition.

The Assistant Secretary concluded that employees of the 924th TAG are within the exclusively recognized unit represented by the AFGE at Bergstrom. In this regard, he found that when the 924th TAG was transferred on March 31, 1976, from Ellington Air Force Base to Bergstrom, the employees of the 924th TAG accreted into the unit represented by the AFGE and, further, that they continue to remain a part of such unit.

Accordingly, as the petitioned for employees are within the exclusively recognized unit represented by the AFGE, and as the NFFE's petition was untimely filed with respect to the negotiated agreement between Bergstrom and the AFGE covering such unit, the Assistant Secretary ordered that the petition be dismissed.

DECISION AND ORDER

Upon a petition duly filed under Section 6 of Executive Order 11491, as amended, a hearing was held before Hearing Officer A. Jack Lewis. The Hearing Officer's rulings made at the hearing are free from prejudicial error and are hereby affirmed.

Upon the entire record in this case, including a brief filed by the Activity, 1/ the Assistant Secretary finds:

1. The labor organizations involved herein claim to represent certain employees of the 924th Tactical Air Group Reserve, hereinafter called 924th TAG.
2. The NFFE seeks an election in a unit of all nonsupervisory, nonprofessional Wage Grade and General Schedule employees employed by the 924th TAG. The Activity contends that the employees in the unit sought by the NFFE are a part of the AFGE's exclusively recognized unit at Bergstrom Air Force Base, hereinafter called Bergstrom, that there is an agreement bar to the petition filed by the NFFE on December 16, 1977, that the employees in the petitioned for unit do not possess a clear and identifiable community of interest separate and distinct from other employees at Bergstrom and, finally, that such a unit would not promote effective dealings and efficiency of agency operations. The Intervenor, American Federation of Government Employees, Local 2539, AFL-CIO, hereinafter called AFGE, agrees with the Activity's position in this matter.

1/ The Petitioner, National Federation of Federal Employees, Local 1926, hereinafter called NFFE, filed an untimely brief which has not been considered.

On December 22, 1967, the AFGE was accorded exclusive recognition for a base-wide unit of all nonprofessional appropriated fund employees at Bergstrom. The most recent agreement between the parties was signed July 29, 1977, and is effective for a period of three years from the date of execution. 2/ The 924th TAG is an Air Force Reserve unit whose day-to-day operations involve reservist training and aircraft maintenance and which was originally located at Ellington Air Force Base, Texas. On March 31, 1976, the 924th TAG, along with the 10th Air Force Reserve, 3/ were transferred to Bergstrom which transfer resulted in the relocation of some 134 employees of the 924th TAG and 70 employees of the 10th Air Force Reserve from Ellington. There are presently some 143 appropriated fund Wage Grade and General Schedule employees in the 924th TAG.

The record shows that the Commander of the 67th Tactical Reconnaissance Wing is also the Base Commander at Bergstrom and that he is in charge of civilian personnel and labor-management relations functions for all organizations at Bergstrom, including the 924th TAG. 4/ In this capacity, the Base Commander has authority to settle grievances; select, reassign and separate employees; carry out a disciplinary program; classify civilian positions; determine training needs; maintain an effective health and safety program; insure the proper and efficient use of base facilities; and service the work and recreational needs of employees. In addition, he has the authority to negotiate with employee organizations and meet regularly with labor organizations enjoying exclusive recognition on matters relating to personnel policies and practices. The record further shows that all employees at Bergstrom, including those of the 924th TAG, share comparable salary, hours, skills, job series and classifications; are subject to the same personnel policies and practices; and are serviced by a Central Civilian Personnel Office which acts as a common appointing and servicing authority.

2/ The AFGE's unit encompasses some 533 employees in addition to the employees of the 924th TAG.

3/ Both units were represented at Ellington by another Local of the NFFE, Local 112, in a base-wide unit of nonprofessional Wage Grade and General Schedule employees.

4/ Other tenant organizations at Bergstrom are the aforementioned 10th Air Force Reserve; the Headquarters, Twelfth Air Force; DET 1,400 Management Engineering Squadron; 602 No. Tactical Air Control Wing; DET 10, 25th Weather Squadron; 423 Field Training Detachment; 1882 Communications Squadron; DET 12, Tactical Communications Area; DET 1001, Air Force Office of Special Investigations; DET 406, Air Force Audit Agency Office; Electronic Systems Division; and TAC NCO Academy and Air Force Commissary Services.

Although some of the 924th TAG employees are Air Force Reserve Technicians (ART), who are required to maintain active duty status in the Air Force Reserve in order to retain their civilian positions, 5/ the record reveals that ART employees are treated in the same manner as other employees with respect to personnel policies and practices. 6/ Moreover, all the employees in the petitioned for unit use the same procedures as other Bergstrom employees for grievances, promotions, reductions-in-force, transfers and classification appeals, and are free to use the same lunchrooms and cafeterias, wash-up rooms, parking and recreational facilities. Also, the employees of the 924th TAG work in buildings specifically assigned to the 924th TAG which are in close proximity to other Bergstrom offices and work locations.

The evidence establishes that the AFGE has represented, and continues to represent, the 924th TAG employees in grievances, Equal Employment Opportunity complaints, and in matters effecting the working conditions of such employees. In addition, certain employees of the 924th TAG are on AFGE dues check-off.

Based on these circumstances, I conclude that the employees of the 924th TAG are within the exclusively recognized unit represented by the AFGE at Bergstrom. 7/ In this regard, I find that when the 924th TAG was transferred on March 31, 1976, to Bergstrom, the employees of the 924th TAG accreted into the unit represented by the AFGE, and that they continue to remain a part of such unit. Thus, as noted above, the AFGE's exclusively recognized unit includes all nonappropriated fund employees at Bergstrom; the AFGE has represented employees of the 924th TAG since their transfer from Ellington Air Force Base; the Base Commander is in charge of all civilian personnel and labor-management relations functions, and has full authority to negotiate with employee organizations; and all Bergstrom employees are serviced by the same Central Civilian Personnel Office. Moreover, employees of the 924th TAG and other employees at Bergstrom work in close proximity to each other; utilize identical procedures for grievances, promotions, classification appeals, reductions-in-force and transfers; have similar skills and job series; are subject to the same personnel policies and practices; and share comparable salaries and hours of work. In these circumstances, I conclude that employees of the 924th TAG and other unit employees located at Bergstrom

5/ It is noted that the 10th Air Force Reserve, which is not included in the petitioned for unit, also includes a number of ART employees.

6/ The current negotiated agreement between the AFGE and the Activity has provisions for Air Force Reserve personnel, including ART personnel.

7/ Cf. United States Department of the Air Force, 434 S.O.W., Air Force Reserve, Grissom Air Force Base, Indiana, 2 A/SLMR 215, A/SLMR No. 149 (1972).

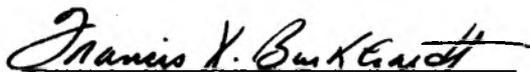

continue to share an identifiable community of interest, and that the existing unit represented by the AFGE, including employees of the 924th TAG, promotes effective dealings and efficiency of agency operations, and also reduces the potential for unit fragmentation. 8/

Accordingly, as the petitioned for employees are within the exclusively recognized unit represented by the AFGE, and as the NFFE's petition was untimely filed with respect to the AFGE's negotiated agreement covering such unit, I shall dismiss the petition in the subject case. 9/

SUMMARY OF DECISION AND ORDER OF THE ASSISTANT SECRETARY
PURSUANT TO SECTION 6 OF EXECUTIVE ORDER 11491, AS AMENDED

DEPARTMENT OF THE ARMY, YAKIMA FIRING CENTER,
FORT LEWIS, WASHINGTON
A/SLMR No. 1103

This proceeding arose upon the filing of three unfair labor practice complaints by the International Association of Fire Fighters, Local F-202, AFL-CIO (Complainant) against the Department of the Army, Yakima Firing Center, Fort Lewis, Washington (Respondent).

The complaint in Case No. 71-4471(CA) alleged violations of Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order by the Respondent's refusal to meet and confer on the impact on adversely affected employees of its decision to assign six military augmentees to the Respondent's fire station, and by a statement by a military officer to a union official to the effect that the augmentee situation was a military matter, not the business of the union, and that "you have now been conferred with." The Administrative Law Judge recommended that the complaint be dismissed with respect to the military officer's statement and the exchange that preceded it. However, he found that the Respondent violated Section 19(a)(1) and (6) by refusing to negotiate with the Complainant concerning the impact of assigning additional personnel to the fire station.

The complaint in Case No. 71-4475(CA) alleged violations of Section 19(a)(1) and (6) by certain actions of the Respondent's Commanding Officer. The Administrative Law Judge concluded that the evidence failed to establish any violation.

The complaint in Case No. 71-4476(CA) alleged violations of Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order based on statements alleged to have been made by Respondent's facilities engineer to a union official regarding the proper use of the chain of command, the Respondent's use of augmentees at the fire station, and an "anecdote" about labor-management relations. The Administrative Law Judge concluded that this complaint should be dismissed. In this regard, he found neither evidence of a restraining or coercive effect upon the union official, nor evidence of threats or promised benefits.

Noting particularly the absence of exceptions, the Assistant Secretary adopted the Administrative Law Judge's findings, conclusions, and recommendations. Accordingly, the Assistant Secretary ordered the Respondent to cease and desist from engaging in the conduct found violative of the Order and take certain affirmative actions.

8/ Cf. Department of the Army, Fort McPherson, Georgia, FLRC No. 76A-82.

9/ Inasmuch as the petition herein was untimely filed, I find it unnecessary to determine whether the unit sought, which is, in effect, a portion of an existing exclusively recognized unit, would otherwise be appropriate.

DECISION AND ORDER

On June 16, 1978, Administrative Law Judge Thomas Schneider issued his Recommended Decision and Order in the subject cases, finding that the Respondent had engaged in one of the unfair labor practices alleged in the complaint in Case No. 71-4471(CA), and finding further that it had not engaged in the unfair labor practices alleged in the complaints in Case Nos. 71-4475(CA) and 71-4476(CA). With regard to the complaint in Case No. 71-4471(CA), the Administrative Law Judge recommended that the Respondent cease and desist from the conduct that he found to be violative of Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order. 1/ He recommended that the complaints in Case Nos. 71-4475(CA) and 71-4476(CA) be dismissed in their entirety. No exceptions were filed to the Administrative Law Judge's Recommended Decision and Order.

The Assistant Secretary has reviewed the rulings of the Administrative Law Judge made at the hearing and finds that no prejudicial error was committed. The rulings are hereby affirmed. Upon consideration of the Administrative Law Judge's Recommended Decision and Order and the entire record in these cases,

1/ In his proposed remedial order, the Administrative Law Judge did not recommend that the Respondent take any affirmative action other than posting a Notice to Employees.

and noting particularly the absence of exceptions, I hereby adopt the Administrative Law Judge's findings, conclusions, and recommendations. 2/

ORDER

Pursuant to Section 6(b) of Executive Order 11491, as amended, and Section 203.26(b) of the Regulations, the Assistant Secretary of Labor for Labor-Management Relations hereby orders that the Department of the Army, Yakima Firing Center, Fort Lewis, Washington, shall:

1. Cease and desist from:

(a) Refusing to meet and confer with the International Association of Fire Fighters, Local F-202, AFL-CIO, concerning the impact on adversely affected employees of assigning additional personnel to the fire station at the Yakima Firing Center.

(b) In any like or related manner interfering with, restraining, or coercing its employees in the exercise of their rights assured by Executive Order 11491, as amended.

2. Take the following affirmative actions in order to effectuate the purposes and policies of the Order:

(a) Upon request by the International Association of Fire Fighters, Local F-202, AFL-CIO, meet and confer, to the extent consonant with law and regulations, concerning the impact on adversely affected employees of assigning additional personnel to the fire station at the Yakima Firing Center.

(b) Post at the fire station, Department of the Army, Yakima Firing Center, Fort Lewis, Washington, copies of the attached notice marked "Appendix" on forms to be furnished by the Assistant Secretary of Labor for Labor-Management Relations. Upon receipt of such forms, they shall be signed by the Commanding Officer of the Firing Center and shall be posted and maintained by him for 60 consecutive days thereafter, in conspicuous places, including all bulletin boards and other places where notices to employees

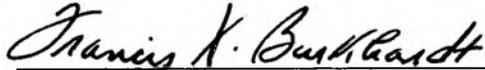

2/ It is well settled that the obligation to meet and confer on the impact of a decision by agency management (as here, the realignment of work forces) is mandatory under Section 11(a) of the Order. Thus, I do not adopt the Administrative Law Judge's Recommended Decision and Order insofar as it implies that bargaining on impact might be only a permissive subject of bargaining under Section 11(b) of the Order. Federal Railroad Administration, 4/SLMR 497, A/SLMR No. 418 (1974), Federal Aviation Administration, National Aviation Facilities Experimental Center, Atlantic City, New Jersey, 3 A/SLMR 626, A/SLMR No. 329 (1973), and United States Department of the Navy, Bureau of Medicine and Surgery, Great Lakes Naval Hospital, Illinois, 3 A/SLMR 376, A/SLMR No. 289 (1973). are customarily posted. The Commanding Officer of the Firing Center shall take reasonable steps to insure that such notices are not altered, defaced, or covered by other material.

(c) Pursuant to Section 203.27 of the Regulations, notify the Assistant Secretary, in writing, within 30 days from the date of this order as to what steps have been taken to comply herewith.

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED that the complaints in Case Nos. 71-4475(CA) and 71-4476(CA) be, and they hereby are, dismissed.

RECOMMENDED DECISION AND ORDER

This proceeding consists of three consolidated cases under Executive Order 11491, as amended (the Order).

* The official transcript erroneously designated the numbers of the cases heard. The numbers given here are correct.

In each case the International Association of Firefighters, Local F-202, AFL-CIO (Union) alleges that the Department of the Army, Yakima Firing Center, Fort Lewis, Washington (the Activity or Respondent) violated various subsections of section 19 of the Order. The Regional Administrator, San Francisco Region, Labor-Management Services Administration, set the matter for hearing with reference to alleged violations of section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order. The hearing was held before me on April 11, 1978, in Yakima, Washington. At all material times the Union was the recognized exclusive representative of employees at the fire station at the Yakima Firing Center, although no agreement had been signed.

Case 71-4471 involves an alleged failure by Respondent to consult with the Union prior to assigning six additional military brush fire fighters, called "augmentees," to the fire station for a six-month period commencing in May 1977.

Case 71-4475 involves a conversation that Lt. Col. Dieterich, the Commander of the Activity, had with two fire fighters on April 28, 1977, respecting a complaint of unsafe conditions at the firehouse.

Case 71-4476 involves a discussion Mr. Cecil E. Wise, Facilities Engineer at the Activity, had with Mr. James B. Young, a Union official, on May 6, 1977, respecting various subjects.

Findings of Fact and Conclusions

Case No. 71-4471

During the 1976 brush fire season, i.e., a year before the incidents giving rise to the instant complaints, the activity augmented the normal strength of the fire station with military personnel who were not trained fire fighters, but who received some training in fighting brush fires. These men slept and ate in the firehouse with the regular fire fighters, which caused severe overcrowding - a condition which the fire chief described as "almost unbearable at times." (Tr. 124).

In order to avoid such overcrowding in 1977, the Activity arranged for the augmentees to eat and sleep in facilities other than in the fire station. Thus, the impact of the augmentees upon the facilities at the fire station was far less in 1977 than the previous year. In all, there were a total of six augmentees assigned for duty at the fire station in 1977. The regular complement of personnel at the fire station consists of eleven fire fighters including the chief, plus six other military fire fighters for a total of seventeen. (Tr. 42). The six augmentees thus represented a 35 percent increase in staffing. The augmentees shared the regular fire fighters' coffee mess, although some witnesses suggested that the augmentees shared in buying the coffee. They shared the day room and t.v. facilities, and the latrine. Although they were not supposed to use the refrigerator, they did use it.

It is obvious that the decision whether or not to assign augmentees to the fire station is a matter with respect to the mission of the agency which need not be conferred about. Order, section 11(b); 12(b). The impact of realigning work forces may nevertheless be negotiated. Order, section 11(b). The confusion between these two concepts - assignment of personnel and impact of such assignment - seems to lie at the heart of the controversy here. Thus the Commander of the Activity, Lt. Col. Dietderich, testified as follows:

"I don't think I'm required to ask the union, by Executive Order, to ask the union if I can bring in augmentees to fight range fires. If that's the case, then I must have to ask the union if I can use the soldiers in the field out there. Correct?" (Tr. 74)

The Colonel was obviously correct regarding his decision to bring in augmentees. He was mistaken about his duty to meet and confer regarding impact. Department of the Navy, Naval Plant Representative Office, Baltimore, Maryland and National Federation of Federal Employees, Local 1624, A/SLMR No. 486 (1975); Pennsylvania Army National Guard and Association of Civilian Technicians, Inc., A/SLMR No. 475 (1975); see, Tidewater Virginia Federal Employees Metal Trades Council and Naval Public Works Center Norfolk, Virginia, FLRC No. 71A-56 (1973).

At the conclusion of a short exchange between one Captain Aranow and Mr. Young (a Union official) on May 4, 1977, Captain Aronow said, "You have now been conferred with." It is clear that this statement and the exchange that preceded it was not intended to fulfill any obligation the Activity may have had to meet and confer. Rather, the Activity contends that it had no duty to meet and confer because the six augmentees had no impact on the remaining fire fighters. Although the impact was far less than in 1976, it was not negligible. Not only were the day facilities being shared by the augmentees, but the job of fighting brush fires was being shared by personnel less highly trained than the regular fire fighters. This obviously had an impact on working conditions. I further note that the Respondent had ample time - about six months - in which to give the Union notice and an opportunity to consult about impact. I therefore conclude that the Activity failed to fulfill its obligation under section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order.

Of course, it is possible for emergencies to arise, which would require immediate augmentation. In such cases consultation about impact would have to wait. For this reason I recommend that consultation about impact only be required if additional personnel are to be assigned to the fire station for periods exceeding thirty days.

On April 28, 1977, Lt. Col. Dietderich, Commanding Officer of the Activity went to the fire station in response to an order he received from higher headquarters to investigate an allegedly unsafe condition at the fire house. The condition was wax on the floor, which, when covered with dust allegedly became slippery. The Colonel was concerned about this allegation, not only because it involved safety, but also because the matter was called to his attention by his superiors rather than by his subordinates in the chain of command. When he arrived at the fire station only two people were there, Mr. Charbonneau and Mr. Seelbinder. Neither of them had complained to the Commanding General of the unsafe condition. That complaint had come from the Union, by its then president, Bruce Kincaid.

Lt. Col. Dietderich, as far as the evidence shows, made no remarks concerning the Union to Charbonneau or Seelbinder. He asked to see the allegedly unsafe condition, and had it corrected forthwith. He may have mentioned the chain of command, but it is clear he did not interfere with, restrain or coerce either of the men in the exercise of any of their rights. Mr. Charbonneau's testimony unambiguously showed that this incident was a perfectly proper on-the-spot investigation by the Commanding Officer. I conclude that it involved no violations of the Order.

On May 6, 1977, Cecil E. Wise, facilities engineer, whose duties included supervision of the fire station, had a conversation with James B. Young, who was both a regular fire fighter and an officer of the Union. The conversation took place in Wise's office and was a sequel both to the letter written by the Union to the Commanding General regarding wax on the floor, and the appearance of the augmentees at the fire station two days before. The acting Fire Chief, Sergeant Rush, had told Mr. Wise that Young had been irate when he saw the augmentees at the station without the Union having been consulted. And Wise was aware that the Union had by-passed him in the chain of command when it complained to the Commanding General directly. Mr. Wise, who testified at the hearing, prided himself on a past career, including many years in private industry, in which labor-management relations were good. I construe the evidence to show that Mr. Wise's efforts in this conversation were aimed at soothing Mr. Young and improving labor-management relations at the Activity. In that context he told an anecdote about a senior union member telling a younger member that the company, not the union, paid his salary. Although this anecdote was not particularly amusing to Mr. Young, it could hardly have had a restraining or coercive effect upon him. There was no evidence of threats or promised benefits. Accordingly, I conclude that Mr. Wise's comments did not violate the Order.

Recommended Order

It is recommended that the complaints in cases 71-4475 and 71-4476 be dismissed in their entirety.

It is further recommended that in case 71-4471 the Activity be directed by the Assistant Secretary to cease and desist from:

(a) refusing to consult, confer, or negotiate with the International Association of Fire Fighters, Local F-202, AFL-CIO concerning the impact of assigning additional personnel to the fire station at the Yakima Firing Center for any period in excess of thirty days;

(b) in any like or related manner interfering with, restraining or coercing employees in the exercise of their rights assured by Executive Order 11491, as amended; and to post a notice of its intent in the form attached as "Exhibit A" in conspicuous places at the station including all bulletin boards where notices to employees are customarily posted. Respondent should be directed to take reasonable steps to insure that such notices remain posted for 60 days and are not altered, defaced, or covered.

PURSUANT TO SECTION 6 OF EXECUTIVE ORDER 11491, AS AMENDED

U. S. DEPARTMENT OF THE NAVY,
NAVAL AIR ENGINEERING CENTER,
LAKEHURST, NEW JERSEY
A/SLMR No. 1104

This case involved an RA petition filed by the Naval Air Engineering Center, Lakehurst, New Jersey, (Activity) subsequent to a reorganization which disestablished two of the three separate commands at Lakehurst, New Jersey, and merged these two commands into the Activity. Specifically, the Activity contended that six of the eight exclusively recognized units at the Activity, the Naval Air Station (NAS), and the Naval Air Test Facility (NATF) are now inappropriate as a result of the reorganization, and that a unit of all General Schedule and Wage Grade employees, excluding professional employees and firefighters, in addition to the standard exclusions, is now appropriate.

The Assistant Secretary found that the unit contended to be appropriate by the Activity was inappropriate. In this regard, he found, with respect to four of the six units disputed by the Activity, that the reorganization had resulted in a material alteration in their scope and character, which resulted in their disappearance as recognizable appropriate units. With regard to the other two units, he found that their scope and character had not been materially affected by the reorganization, and that they remained intact and appropriate for the purpose of exclusive recognition under the Order. Accordingly, the Assistant Secretary found that an Activitywide unit, excluding those employees in the units remaining appropriate, as well as the undisputed units, was appropriate for the purpose of exclusive recognition.

In this regard, he found that such employees, in effect, constituted a residual unit of all unrepresented employees of the Activity, enjoyed a clear and identifiable community of interest, and that such unit would promote effective dealings and efficiency of agency operations, and would prevent the further fragmentation of the Activity's employees. Accordingly, he directed an election in the unit found appropriate, and dismissed the petition insofar as it related to the two bargaining units which he found continued, subsequent to the reorganization, to be appropriate.

Upon a petition duly filed under Section 6 of Executive Order 11491, as amended, a hearing was held before Hearing Officer Allan W. Stadtmauer. The Hearing Officer's rulings made at the hearing are free from prejudicial error and are hereby affirmed.

Upon the entire record in this case, including briefs submitted by the Philadelphia Metal Trades Council, AFL-CIO, hereinafter called MTC, and the National Federation of Federal Employees, Locals 23 and 284, hereinafter referred to as NFFE Local 23 and NFFE Local 284, respectively, the Assistant Secretary finds:

The Naval Air Engineering Center, Lakehurst, New Jersey, hereinafter called the Activity, filed the subject petition seeking a determination by the Assistant Secretary with respect to the effect of a recent reorganization on the continued appropriateness of six of the eight exclusively recognized units at the Activity, the Naval Air Station (NAS), and the Naval Air Test Facility (NATF). As a result of the reorganization, the NAS and NATF were disestablished, and their missions, resources, and personnel were transferred to the Activity. Specifically, the Activity contends that certain of the exclusively recognized units are inappropriate due to the reorganization which consolidated the functions, resources and personnel of the NAS and the NATF into the Activity, which now has the combined mission of the former commands. ^{1/} It argues that, under present circumstances, the only unit appropriate for the purpose of exclusive recognition is a unit of all employees of the Activity, excluding all employees engaged in Federal personnel work in other than a purely clerical capacity, confidential employees, management officials, supervisors, and professional employees and firefighters who are included in existing exclusively recognized units.

The Intervenor, NFFE Local 284 and NFFE Local 23; the MTC; the National Association of Planners, Estimators, Programmers, and Production Controllers, Local #4 (NAPEPPC); and the National Association of Government Inspectors and Quality Assurance Personnel, Unit 2 (NAGIQAP), contend that the reorganization of the Activity was essentially a paper reorganization, and that the units for which each labor organization was accorded exclusive recognition continue to be identifiable, viable and

^{1/} The Activity does not challenge the continued appropriateness of a unit represented by NFFE Local 23 of all professional General Schedule (GS) employees recognized by the Activity in 1971. It also does not challenge the continued appropriateness of a unit represented by the International Association of Firefighters, Local 114 (IAFF) of all eligible civilian employees in the Fire Protection Division, consisting of Structural and Crash Branches, recognized appropriate. In addition, the NAGIQAP asserts that the petition, as it relates to its exclusively recognized unit, is untimely on the basis of an asserted agreement bar. The MTC contends that the subject petition is untimely as to its exclusively recognized unit on the basis of an asserted certification bar. NFFE Locals 23 and 284 take the position that the further processing of the instant petition with regard to their certified exclusively represented units is precluded by the existence of a "blocking" unfair labor practice complaint. Prior to the hearing in this matter, the International Association of Machinists and Aerospace Workers, AFL-CIO, Local 2581 (IAM), took the position that its unit survived the reorganization and remained appropriate. However, it subsequently indicated that it now concurs with the Activity's position and requests that it be allowed to participate in whatever election the Assistant Secretary directs in this matter.

BACKGROUND

The mission of the Activity is to conduct, provide, operate and maintain test sites, facilities and support services for programs of research, engineering, development, development test and evaluation system integration, limited production procurement and fleet engineering support in aircraft launching, recovery and landing aid systems, and ground support equipment for aircraft and airborne weapons systems. Prior to 1974, there were essentially two major naval commands at Lakehurst, New Jersey, the NAS and the NATF. The NAS was a support activity without a technical mission. The NATF tested equipment designed by the Activity, then located in Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, and other commands. In 1974, the Activity, was transferred to Lakehurst as part of a Shore Establishment Realignment Program (SER). Because of its technical mission, the Activity became the host command at Lakehurst. The NAS and the NATF continued to function as separate commands, but the NAS was made a subordinate command of the Activity. No question regarding the appropriateness of the exclusively recognized units at the Activity, the NAS or the NATF was raised at the time of the 1974 transfer.

At the time of the 1977 reorganization, the civilian labor force of the Activity was organized among five separate bargaining units. NFFE Local 23 was the certified exclusive representative of two units: an Activitywide unit of professional employees and an Activitywide unit of nonprofessional GS employees. Both units were certified in August 1971, and both were covered by a multi-unit negotiated agreement which expired on July 18, 1977. 2/ The MTC was granted exclusive recognition in April 1964, for an Activitywide unit consisting of approximately 167 Wage Grade (WG) employees. The most recent negotiated agreement for this unit expired on February 1977, and no negotiated agreement presently is in effect. The NAPEPPC was granted exclusive recognition in October 1965, for a unit consisting of all the Activity's nonsupervisory planners, estimators, progressmen, and production controllers. This unit is currently covered by a negotiated agreement with an expiration date of May 8, 1979. Finally, the NAGIQAP was granted exclusive recognition in December 1969, for a unit composed of all WG inspectors and nonprofessional GS quality assurance personnel of the Quality Assurance Office. Prior to the reorganization, this latter unit consisted of approximately 30 GS employees who were covered by a negotiated agreement with an expiration date of July 26, 1978.

1/ by the NAS in 1965. This latter unit and its employees were transferred to the Activity as a result of the reorganization and consists of 42 employees. Since neither the Activity nor any of the intervenors questioned the appropriateness of these units, neither unit will be considered in this decision.

2/ As noted above, the appropriateness of the professional unit represented by NFFE Local 23 is not at issue herein.

The NAS had two exclusively represented bargaining units. The first unit consisted of firefighters represented by the IAFF, which was granted exclusive recognition in June 1965. 3/ The second unit consists of all remaining eligible nonprofessional employees, approximately 160 GS and 239 WG employees, for which the IAM was certified as the exclusive representative in November 1975. This unit was covered by a negotiated agreement, which is due to expire on December 9, 1978.

All eligible nonprofessional employees of the NATF, consisting of 136 GS employees and 103 WG employees, were represented by NFFE Local 284, which had been granted exclusive recognition in June 1967. NFFE local 284's negotiated agreement covering such unit expired in May 1978.

In late February 1977, the Department of the Navy directed the consolidation of the three naval commands located at Lakehurst. The consolidation was to occur through the disestablishment of the NATF and the NAS, and the expansion of the Activity so that it would assume the personnel, functions and missions of the NAS and the NATF. The consolidation was to be completed in three phases. Phase I involved the disestablishment of the NATF and the NAS and the corresponding expansion of the Activity. During Phase I, employees of the NATF and the NAS were assigned to one of three interim departments within the reorganized Activity, designated as the Test Group, the Engineering Group and the Support Group. Phase II, effective June 5, 1977, involved the integration of the three departments of Phase I into a unified organizational structure. Phase III was pending at the time of the hearing in this matter.

The extent of the reorganization of the Activity is demonstrated by the following comparison between the pre-Phase I organizational structure and the post-Phase II organizational structure:

Prior to the reorganization, the Activity's Commanding Officer had two deputies, an Executive Officer, a Naval Officer, and a civilian Chief Engineer, (General Engineer GS-801-16). There was a single line of authority from the Commander through the deputies to the Activity's six staff offices and six departments. The staff offices consisted of an Administrative Office, a Civilian Personnel Office, a Staff Civil Engineer, a Supply Office, a Plans and Programs Office and a Quality Assurance Office. The Equal Employment Opportunity Office reported directly to the Commander. The Activity's departments consisted of the Departments of: Comptroller, Ground Support Equipment, Specifications and Standards, Fleet Technical Service, and Engineering.

As a result of the Phase II reorganization, the lines of authority and administrative structure were significantly altered so that the two deputies to the Commander now have separate lines of authority over their respective staffs and departments. The Executive Officer exercises supervision over the Legal Office, Public Affairs Office, Chaplain's Office, Aviation Safety Officer, General Safety Officer, Tenant Support Office, Support Assistant, Small Business Assistant, Equal Opportunity Office, Comptroller, Administration, Civilian Personnel, Computer Systems, Public Works, Security, Supply, Navy Exchange, and Air. The other deputy, now called the Technical Director, has line supervision over the Plans and Programs Office, Test and Evaluation Coordination, Quality Assurance Office, Ship Installations Engineering, Ground Support Equipment, Engineering Specifications and Standards, Test, Fleet Technical Services and Development Shops and Site Support Departments.

In addition to administrative changes in the Activity's structure, Activity, NAS and NATF personnel were reassigned to the newly designated departments. Since the NAS and the NATF were totally disestablished, the majority of administrative and physical transfers involved their personnel. A majority of the nonprofessional GS employees transferred from the NATF were assigned to the Test Department and the Public Works Department, with the remaining employees scattered throughout five other components. Approximately 136 WG employees were transferred from the NATF to the following components: Quality Assurance, Public Works, Development and Site Support, and Test. Approximately 279 nonprofessional GS employees were transferred from the NAS to the following Departments: Administration, Air, Computer Systems, Civilian Personnel, Security, Supply, Public Works, Comptroller, and a small number of employees to various other divisions. Approximately 239 WG employees transferred from the NAS were assigned to Administration, Supply and Public Works.

In addition to adding personnel and components to the activity, the reorganization also precipitated a greater degree of interplay, interdependence and interaction among the divisions of the Activity since the majority of the divisions were intended to become more specialized and, as a result, tended to rely on services and general support from other divisions. Personnel were temporarily detailed from one department to another as their special skills were needed. In addition, some lines of supervision were altered at the department level and at the employee level. For example, in the Development Site and Support Department (DSSD), the number of general foremen was altered, production superintendents were interchanged, and the employee-supervisor ratio was changed slightly. Efforts were made activitywide to eliminate the overlapping of responsibility and duplication of work. A minority of employees involved in administrative transfers from the NAS and the NAFTA also were physically relocated, resulting, in some cases, in new working hours, use of time cards, different shifts and lunch periods and more changes in day to day job sites. Some blue collar position descriptions were changed, and the Public Works Department is now responsible for basewide facility maintenance, including support of test operations. Further, the areas of competition for promotions, reductions-in-force (RIF) and career ladders are now based on a single command, rather than the multi-command basis prior to the reorganization.

THE EFFECT OF THE REORGANIZATION

Pursuant to the Activity's assertion in its RA petition that six of its units are no longer appropriate as a result of the 1977 reorganization, I have examined the reorganization's effect upon each of the six units. With respect to certain of the individual units, I find that the reorganization resulted in a material alteration in their scope and character which resulted, in effect, in their disappearance as recognizable appropriate units. As to certain other individual units, I find that the scope and character of such units were not materially affected by the reorganization, although there were some changes in the units due to additional personnel and changes in organizational mission.

Upon examination of the record, I make the following findings with respect to the continued appropriateness of each of the six exclusively recognized units:

1. The NAPEPPC Unit

This unit, composed of all nonsupervisory planners, estimators, progressmen, and production controllers employed by the Activity, contains both WG and GS employees. As a result of the reorganization, approximately 15 employees in these job classifications were transferred from the Public Works Department of the NAS to the Activity. Employees so classified now work primarily in only two divisions of the Activity, the Plans and Programs Office and the Public Works Department.

The record reveals that the nonsupervisory planners, estimators, progressmen and production controllers of the Activity, including those added to its jurisdiction as a result of the reorganization, remain in essentially the same physical location and perform the same job functions as prior to the reorganization, and that there has been no significant change in their working conditions. It further appears that the immediate supervision of these employees remain substantially unchanged, and that they continue to share common skills, have comparable working conditions and training and there is little or no interchange between these employees and other WG and GS employees at the Activity.

2. The NAGIQAP Unit

This unit was composed of all WG and GS employees of the Quality Assurance Office of the Naval Air Engineering Center. Prior to the reorganization, the unit consisted of 30 GS employees. As a result of the reorganization, four WG inspectors from the disestablished NATF were transferred to the Quality Assurance Office. It was stipulated at the hearing that all NAEC Quality Assurance Office personnel now possess similar skills and perform similar duties, and that the additional mission of test site quality assurance has had little impact on the duties and working conditions of employees of the Quality Assurance Office.

The record reveals that the WG and GS employees of the Quality Assurance Office, including those transferred to the office as a result of the reorganization, remain in essentially the same physical locations, perform the same job functions as prior to the reorganization, and that there has been no significant addition to, or changes in, their working conditions and immediate supervision.

Based on the foregoing circumstances I find that the two above noted units are each a functionally distinct grouping of employees who continue, subsequent to the reorganization, to enjoy separate and distinct communities of interest. The record reveals that both units have experienced a history of effective labor-management relations since their establishment, and that they remain basically unchanged by the reorganization and, as such, viable and appropriate for the purpose of exclusive recognition. Moreover, in my view, these units can reasonably be expected to promote effective dealings and efficiency of agency operations. In this regard, it was noted particularly that in a similar situation the Activity has taken the position that a functionally distinct grouping of firefighting employees remains appropriate, and that the existence of such a unit would not have an adverse impact on effective dealings or efficiency of agency operations. Under all of these circumstances, I shall dismiss the instant petition as it relates to these units. 4/

3. The IAM Unit

This unit was composed of all WG and GS employees of the Naval Air Station, excluding professional employees, management officials, employees engaged in Federal personnel work in other than a clerical capacity, firefighters, supervisors, guards and temporary employees.

4/ In view of my determination that the NAPEPPC unit remains appropriate, I find it unnecessary to pass upon the NAPEPPC's motion to dismiss the RA petition, as it applied to this unit, based on the existence of an agreement bar.

4. The NFFE Local 284 Unit

This unit was composed of all WG and GS employees employed by the Naval Air Test Facility, excluding all managerial, professional and supervisory personnel.

5. The NFFE Local 23 Unit

This unit was composed of all of the eligible GS employees of the Activity, excluding professionals, those employees represented by the National Association of Planners, Estimators, Progressmen, Production Controllers, Local 4 and the National Association of Government Inspectors and Quality Assurance Personnel, Unit 2, and management officials, supervisors, employees engaged in Federal personnel work other than those in a purely clerical capacity, and guards.

6. The MTC Unit

This unit was composed of all WG employees of the Activity, excluding all GS employees, professional employees, supervisory employees, and management officials.

At the hearing, NFFE Locals 23 and 284 and the MTC renewed pre-hearings motions which were referred by the Hearing Officer to the Assistant Secretary. In the first motion, NFFE Locals 23 and 284 moved to dismiss the subject petition as it relates to their units on grounds that further processing of the petition was improper until final disposition of an unfair labor practice complaint in Case No. 22-07332(CA). In the second motion, the MTC moved to dismiss the petition as it relates to its unit on the basis of an asserted certification bar.

As to the first motion, I take official notice that Case No. 22-07332(CA) involved a complaint filed by the National Federation of Federal Employees against the Department of the Navy, Office of Civilian Personnel, alleging violations of Sections 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order based upon an alleged improper refusal to "consult" pursuant to national consultation rights enjoyed by the National Federation of Federal Employees. 5/ Because this complaint involves different parties and different levels of recognition than are involved herein, I find that it does not block further processing of the instant petition. Accordingly, the motion to dismiss filed by NFFE Locals 23 and 284 is hereby denied.

With regard to the second motion, the MTC asserts that the Activity's RA petition is untimely under Section 202.3(b) of the Assistant

5/ The gravamen of the complaint in Case No. 22-07332(CA) involved an alleged failure of the Department of the Navy to consult regarding the then proposed reorganization involved herein. On March 22, 1978, I issued my Decision and Order in this case, finding that the Department of the Navy violated Section 19(a)(1) and (6) as alleged in the complaint. See A/SLMR No. 1012. This Decision and Order is presently pending an appeal before the Federal Labor Relations Council.

Secretary's Regulations. 6/ The MTC was certified as the exclusive representative for its unit on April 22, 1977, as a result of a challenging petition filed by a rival labor organization. While it concedes that an agreement bar will not bar an RA petition when a reorganization has substantially affected the appropriateness of a unit, it argues that this result is based on the wording of Section 202.3(c) of the Assistant Secretary's Regulations. 7/ Thus, the MTC argues, since Section 202.3(c) specifically provides that a petition may be filed at any time when "unusual circumstances exist which substantially affect the unit or the majority representation," and since no such wording exists in Section 202.3(b) of the Regulations which involves certification bars, the Assistant Secretary is required to dismiss the instant petition as the "unusual circumstances" provision does not apply to Section 202.3(b). The MTC asserts further that it was certified on April 22, 1977, after Phase I of the reorganization was underway, and it would be inequitable to allow the appropriateness of its unit to be challenged by the instant petition when the Activity failed to challenge the appropriateness of the unit in the earlier case.

It has previously been held that an RA petition filed in good faith by an activity or agency, based on substantial changes in the character and scope of a unit, is considered to raise the "unusual circumstances" contemplated by Section 202.3(c)(3) of the Assistant Secretary's Regulations and, therefore, is not subject to the timeliness requirements set forth in Section 202.3 of the Regulations. 8/ In this regard, I reject the MTC's contention which asserts, in effect, that since there is no similar proviso in Section 202.3(b) regarding "unusual circumstances", the existence of "unusual circumstances" does not operate as an exception to the timeliness requirement established in Section 202.3(b) of the Regulations. Such an illogical result should not be read into the Regulations of the Assistant Secretary. Thus, in my view, the policy consideration of promoting stability by providing

6/ Section 202.3(b) of the Regulations provides: "When there is a certified exclusive representative of the employees, a petition will not be considered timely if filed within twelve (12) months after the certification as the exclusive representative of employees in an appropriate unit, unless a signed and dated agreement covering the claimed unit has been entered into in which case paragraph (c) of this section shall be applicable."

7/ Section 202.3(c) of the Regulations provides that "When an agreement covering a claimed unit has been signed and dated by the activity and the incumbent exclusive representative, a petition for exclusive recognition or other election petition will be considered timely when filed as follows: . . . (3) Any time when unusual circumstances exist which substantially affect the unit or the majority representation."

exclusive representatives periods free from challenges to their majority status is the same for both certification bars and agreement bars. Consequently, in my judgment, a certification bar, like an agreement bar, may bar an RA petition only if that petition is based on a good faith doubt as to the continuing majority status of the incumbent exclusive representative. Since the instant RA petition alleges that the MTC unit is no longer appropriate due to substantial changes in the character and scope of the unit, I find that the above noted policy consideration is not applicable.

Nor do I find merit in the MTC's argument as to the inequity of allowing the Activity to file the instant petition when it failed to question the appropriateness of the unit in the earlier representation case. Thus, the record clearly reveals that the MTC has enjoyed a long and successful history of bargaining with the Activity, and that at the time of the processing of the earlier petition the MTC had knowledge of the pending reorganization. Further, the record reveals that the reason that the Activity did not question the appropriateness of the unit at that time was the absence of finality of the details of the reorganization plan. The instant RA petition was filed by the Activity when the details of the reorganization plan had crystallized in sufficient final form to allow the Assistant Secretary a reasonable basis upon which to base his determination of the continued appropriateness of the unit involved. Accordingly, the motion to dismiss filed by the MTC is hereby denied.

With regard to the impact of the reorganization on these four exclusively recognized units, as noted above, the evidence establishes that the NAS and NATF were disestablished, and that the unit employees involved were physically and/or administratively transferred to the various divisions within the Activity where they were commingled with other employees of the Activity. As a consequence, employees of each of the three former commands now work along side each other, sharing common supervision, generally similar job classifications and duties, and enjoy a high degree of integration of operations with other employees in their own and in other divisions. The record also reveals that the reorganization of the Activity resulted in significant changes in, and additions to, the mission and organizational structure of the Activity. Thus, the Activity's mission was altered and enlarged so as to encompass the missions of the former NATF and NAS, the organizational structure of the Activity was significantly altered, refined and enlarged, and employees of the Activity and the former NATF and NAS were thoroughly integrated throughout the various organizational components of the Activity.

Under these circumstances, I find that the June 6, 1977, reorganization, in effect, created a new organizational entity, and effected a substantial change in both the scope and character of each of the exclusively recognized units represented by the IAM, the MTC, and NFFE Locals 23 and 284 which were not functional units within the meaning of Section 10(b) of the Order. Accordingly, I find that the reorganization rendered these exclusively recognized units inappropriate for the purpose of exclusive recognition under the Order.

As set forth above, I have found that certain of the units involved herein are no longer appropriate as a result of the 1977 reorganization, and I have found that certain other units remain appropriate for the purpose of exclusive representation. In these circumstances, I reject the contention of the Activity that only an overall activitywide unit of nonprofessional GS and WG employees, excluding professional and fire-fighter employees, would be appropriate for the purpose of exclusive recognition, inasmuch as certain of the currently recognized units have remained appropriate subsequent to the reorganization. However, I find, based on the factors outlined above, that an activitywide unit, excluding employees in the four exclusively recognized units which remained appropriate subsequent to the reorganization, is appropriate for the purpose of exclusive recognition under the Order. 9/ Thus, as noted above, such employees share a common mission, common overall supervision, engage in a highly organized and integrated work function, and enjoy common personnel and labor relations policies and practices. Under these circumstances, I find that such employees enjoy a clear and identifiable community of interest. Moreover, I find that such unit, embracing all employees of the Activity not otherwise represented, constituting, in effect, a residual unit of the Activity's unrepresented employees, would promote effective dealings and efficiency of agency operations, and would prevent the further fragmentation of the Activity's employees.

Accordingly, I find that the following employees constitute a unit appropriate for the purpose of exclusive recognition under Executive Order 11491, as amended: 10/

All Wage Grade and General Schedule employees of the Naval Air Engineering Center, Lakehurst, New Jersey, excluding professional employees, firefighters, inspectors and quality assurance personnel of the Quality Assurance Office, planners, estimators, progressmen, and production controllers, management officials, employees engaged in Federal personnel work in other than a purely clerical capacity and supervisors as defined in the Order.

9/ Cf. Idaho Panhandle National Forests, United States Department of Agriculture, 4 A/SLMR 351, A/SLMR No. 394 (1974).

10/ In the absence of any record evidence as to whether or not NFFE Local 284, NFFE Local 23, or the MTC desire to appear on the ballot in this matter, they will be placed on the ballot because they have properly intervened herein.

An election by secret ballot shall be conducted among employees in the unit found appropriate as early as possible, but no later than 60 days from the date below. The appropriate Area Administrator shall supervise the election, subject to the Assistant Secretary's Regulations. Eligible to vote are those in the unit who were employed during the payroll period immediately preceding the date below, including employees who did not work during that period because they were out ill or on vacation or on furlough, including those in the military service who appear in person at the polls. Ineligible to vote are employees who have quit or were discharged for cause since the designated payroll period and who have not been rehired or reinstated before the election date. Those eligible shall vote whether they desire to be represented for the purpose of exclusive recognition by the International Association of Machinists and Aerospace Workers, AFL-CIO, Local 2581; the National Federation of Federal Employees, Local 284; the Philadelphia Metal Trades Council, AFL-CIO; or the National Federation of Federal Employees, Local 23; or by no labor organization.

Because the above Direction of Election is in a unit different than contended to be appropriate by the Activity, the IAM, NFFE Locals 284 and 23, and the MTC, I shall permit any of these labor organizations to withdraw if they do not desire to proceed to an election in the unit found appropriate in the subject case upon notice to the appropriate Area Administrator within 10 days of the date below. If any of these labor organizations desire to proceed to an election because the unit found appropriate is different than that contended to be appropriate by the Activity, I direct that the Activity, as soon as possible, shall post copies of a Notice of Unit Determination, which shall be furnished by the appropriate Area Administrator, in places where notices are normally posted affecting employees in the unit found appropriate. Such notice shall conform in all respects to the requirements of Section 202.4(b) and (c) of the Assistant Secretary's Regulations. Further, any labor organization which seeks to intervene in this matter must do so in accordance with the requirements of Section 202.5 of the Assistant Secretary's Regulations. Any timely intervention will be granted solely for the purpose of appearing on the ballot among the employees in the unit found appropriate.

ORDER

IT IS HEREBY ORDERED that the petition in Case No. 32-5035(RA), insofar as it relates to the bargaining units exclusively represented by the National Association of Planners, Estimators, Progressmen and Production Controllers, Local No. 4, and the National Association of Government Inspectors and Quality Assurance Personnel, Unit No. 2, be, and it hereby is, dismissed.

SUMMARY OF DECISION, ORDER AND DIRECTION OF ELECTION
OF THE ASSISTANT SECRETARY
PURSUANT TO SECTION 6 OF EXECUTIVE ORDER 11491, AS AMENDED

GENERAL SERVICES ADMINISTRATION,
REGION 3
A/SLMR No. 1105

Involved herein were two petitions filed by the General Services Administration, Region 3 (Activity-Petitioner). At issue in both cases' is placement of a unit of Sign Shop employees currently represented by the Washington Federal Printing Workers Union, Local 713, International Printing and Graphics Communications Union, AFL-CIO (Printers Union). By its petition for clarification of unit (CU), the Activity sought to clarify an existing bargaining unit represented by the American Federation of Government Employees, AFL-CIO, Local 2151 (AFGE) to include the Sign Shop employees. By its RA petition, the Activity-Petitioner sought a determination whether, subsequent to a reorganization, the Sign Shop unit remained appropriate for the purpose of exclusive recognition under the Order. In addition, the Activity-Petitioner asserted a good faith doubt that the Printers Union continued to represent a majority of employees in the Sign Shop unit.

In the CU case, the Assistant Secretary found that there was insufficient basis to support the Activity-Petitioner's contention that the Sign Shop employees accreted to the unit employees represented by AFGE Local 2151. Rather, the Assistant Secretary found that employees in the Sign Shop unit continued to maintain a community of interest separate and distinct from that of other employees. He noted in this regard that in the 12 years since this functional craft unit was deemed appropriate for the purpose of exclusive recognition, including the time since a reorganization occurred during 1972-73, its overall function and structure underwent no appreciable change, and its employees continued to perform the same work under essentially the same supervision without any significant degree of interchange, transfer or commingling with employees represented by AFGE Local 2151. Further, he noted that the Sign Shop had been in operation in its present location under the same conditions since the reorganization, and that there was no evidence that effective dealings or efficiency of agency operations had been adversely affected. Finally, the Assistant Secretary noted particularly the continued desire of the incumbent Printers Union to represent unit employees. He, therefore, ordered that the CU petition be dismissed.

With respect to the RA petition, the Assistant Secretary noted that he had already found in the CU case that the unit represented by the Printers Union remained appropriate for the purpose of exclusive recognition under the Order. He concluded, however, that the evidence was sufficient to support a good faith doubt by the Activity-Petitioner as to the majority status of the Printers Union. He noted, in this regard, that the Printers Union had neither negotiated an agreement nor requested negotiations at any time since it became the exclusive representative of employees in the Sign Shop in 1966. Also, during that time, no grievances were filed or processed. In addition, the parties stipulated that although the Activity-Petitioner made 11 separate attempts since August 1976, to solicit comments from the Printers Union on proposed changes in operating and personnel policies, the Union responded only in two unrelated instances. Finally, the Assistant Secretary noted that despite an attempt by the Printers Union in January 1978, to add to its membership, only one of nine eligible unit employees had authorized dues deduction. Under these circumstances, the Assistant Secretary ordered that an election be conducted in the appropriate unit.

DECISION, ORDER AND DIRECTION OF ELECTION

Upon petitions duly filed under Section 6 of Executive Order 11491, as amended, a consolidated hearing was held before Hearing Officer Ralph R. Smith. The Hearing Officer's rulings made at the hearing are free from prejudicial error and are hereby affirmed.

Upon the entire record in these cases, the Assistant Secretary finds:

In Case No. 22-08772(CU), the General Services Administration (GSA), Region 3, hereinafter referred to as the Activity or the Activity-Petitioner, filed a petition for clarification of unit (CU) seeking to clarify an existing

1/ The name of the labor organization appears essentially as amended at the hearing. The American Federation of Government Employees, AFL-CIO, Local 2151 (AFGE) was included originally in these proceedings as a party in interest and was served with copies of all correspondence and notices relevant hereto. However, it did not seek official intervenor status in the proceedings and did not enter an appearance at the consolidated hearing. Accordingly, the AFGE is no longer viewed to be a party in interest in this matter.

bargaining unit represented exclusively by AFGE Local 2151, 2/ by including in said unit certain employees currently represented by the Washington Federal Printing Workers Union, Local 713, International Printing and Graphics Communications Union, AFL-CIO, hereinafter referred to as the Printers Union.

In Case No. 22-08080(RA), the Activity-Petitioner filed an RA petition seeking a determination whether as a result of a 1972-73 reorganization the bargaining unit represented exclusively by the Printers Union remained appropriate for the purpose of exclusive recognition under the Order. In addition, the Activity-Petitioner asserted a good faith doubt that the Printers Union continued to represent a majority of employees in the exclusively recognized unit.

At issue in the subject cases is a unit of "all nonsupervisory employees of the Sign Shop, Central Repair and Services Section, Special Services Branch, Public Buildings Service, Metropolitan Washington area," GSA, Region 3. The Sign Shop is one of many trade and craft shops within the GSA, and generally is responsible for providing the GSA with engraved, embossed and painted signs on both a regional and a nationwide basis. It also performs various other graphic arts projects, such as the engraving of the Great Seal of the United States. The Printers Union has held exclusive recognition for the Sign Shop unit since 1966.

Early in 1972, the Activity-Petitioner embarked on a long-term reorganization plan, apparently designed to consolidate various operations conducted by branches of its Public Buildings Service (PBS). By the time the reorganization was completed in late 1973, the Special Services Branch of the PBS was eliminated entirely, with its operations transferred and redelegated to other branches of the PBS.

As a part of the Special Services Branch, the Sign Shop was directly affected by the reorganization, undergoing both physical and administrative changes. In March 1972, it was transferred from the Washington Navy Yard, Washington, D. C., to its present location in the Combined Shops Facility, Bladensburg, Maryland. Thereafter, in October 1973, a related administrative transfer placed the Sign Shop under the Contract Services Branch of the PBS' Building Operations Division.

As a result of the relocation, the Sign Shop currently shares the Combined Shops Facility with three other trade and craft shops (Fabric and Upholstery Shop, Uniform Shop, and Bulk Storage Facility Shop) whose employees are represented by AFGE Local 2151. Although there was one instance where certain employees from the other shops were detailed to the Sign Shop to perform basic, non-technical tasks, there is no other evidence of interchange between Sign Shop employees and those in other shops. Further, no Sign Shop employee has ever been either temporarily detailed or permanently transferred to any other of the Combined Shops.

2/ AFGE Local 2151 is the exclusive representative of a unit of all trades and crafts and other Wage Board employees in the Public Buildings Service, GSA, Region 3, Washington, D. C., Metropolitan area, excluding management officials, employees engaged in Federal personnel work in other than a purely clerical capacity, guards and supervisors as defined by the Order, employees designated WS-08 and above, and employees already in exclusively recognized units.

As to the effect of the administrative transfer, the record reveals that prior to 1973, the Sign Shop Foreman reported directly to the Chief of the Central Repair and Services Section, who then was responsible to the Chief of the Special Services Branch. Now he reports to the Chief of the Combined Shops, who, in turn, reports to the Chief of the Contract Services Branch. The authority of the Foreman both to approve employee leave and to recommend employee awards was unaffected by the reorganization. Although the general personnel policies and staffing patterns of the Sign Shop are directed by the same Personnel Office which handles similar matters for the other Combined Shops, this is no departure from pre-reorganization procedure inasmuch as the Activity-Petitioner has a single office which handles all of its personnel matters. Finally, the mission of the Sign Shop has not changed since the 1972-73 reorganization.

With respect to the instant CU petition, I find insufficient basis to support the Activity-Petitioner's contention that the Sign Shop employees have accreted to the unit of employees represented by AFGE Local 2151. In Department of the Army, Fort McPherson, Georgia, FLRC No. 76A-82 (1977), the Federal Labor Relations Council (Council) held that appropriate unit determinations, including those arising in the context of a claimed accretion of one unit to another resulting from a reorganization, require an affirmative determination that the unit ultimately found appropriate "clearly, convincingly and equally" satisfy each of the criteria contained in Section 10(b) of the Order. In addition, and of special significance in the circumstances herein, the Council noted that a past bargaining history involving a labor organization which continues to claim to represent the unit employees is a relevant consideration in determining whether the previously existing unit remains appropriate under the Order. Fort McPherson, cited above, at footnote 11.

With regard to the Section 10(b) criteria, I find that employees in the Sign Shop unit continue to maintain a community of interest separate and distinct from that of other PBS employees. In this regard, I note particularly that in the 12 years since this functional craft unit was deemed appropriate for the purpose of exclusive recognition, including the time since the 1972-73 reorganization, its overall function and structure have undergone no appreciable change, and its employees continue to perform the same work under essentially the same supervision without any significant degree of interchange, transfer or commingling with employees represented by AFGE Local 2151. In addition, I note that the Sign Shop has been in operation at Bladensburg under the same conditions since 1973, and that there is no evidence that effective dealings or efficiency of agency operations have been adversely affected. Finally, of importance is the continued desire of the incumbent Printers Union to represent the unit employees. Under all these circumstances, I shall order that the instant CU petition be dismissed.

The RA petition in Case No. 22-08080(RA) raises two issues. As to the first, concerning the continued appropriateness of the exclusively recognized unit represented by the Printers Union, I have found above that such unit remains appropriate for the purpose of exclusive recognition under the Order. Second, the Activity-Petitioner asserts a good faith doubt concerning the continued majority status of the Printers Union. In this regard, the record reveals that although the Printers Union has held exclusive recognition for the Sign Shop unit since 1966, it has neither negotiated an agreement with the Activity-Petitioner nor requested negotiations at any time during this period. Further, in the 12 years that the Printers Union has held exclusive recognition, no grievances have been filed or processed. In addition, the parties stipulated that although the Activity-Petitioner has made 11 separate attempts since August 1976, to solicit comments from the Printers Union on proposed changes in operating and personnel policies, the Union has responded only in two unrelated instances. Finally, the evidence establishes that despite an attempt by the Printers Union in January 1978, to add to its membership, only one of nine eligible unit employees has authorized dues deduction.

When viewed in their totality, I find that the above-noted circumstances are sufficient to support a good faith doubt by the Activity-Petitioner as to the majority status of the Printers Union and that it will effectuate the purposes and policies of the Order to afford the unit employees the opportunity to express their desires with respect to continued exclusive representation by that labor organization.

Accordingly, I shall direct an election in the following unit which I find to be appropriate for the purpose of exclusive recognition under Executive Order 11491, as amended:

All employees of the Sign Shop, Combined Shops, Contract Services Branch, Building Operations Division, Public Buildings Service, GSA, Region 3, excluding Sign Painter Foreman, WB-4104-17, employees engaged in Federal personnel work in other than a purely clerical capacity, management officials and other supervisors as defined in the Order. 3/

SUMMARY OF DECISION AND ORDER OF THE ASSISTANT SECRETARY
PURSUANT TO SECTION 6 OF EXECUTIVE ORDER 11491, AS AMENDED

DEPARTMENT OF THE TREASURY,
INTERNAL REVENUE SERVICE,

DALLAS, TEXAS
A/SLMR No. 1106

Dated, Washington, D. C.
August 23, 1978

Francis X. Burkhardt, Assistant Secretary of Labor for Labor-Management Relations

This case involved an unfair labor practice complaint filed by the National Treasury Employees Union (NTEU), and NTEU Chapter 91 alleging, in substance, that the Respondent violated Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order when it failed to negotiate on the impact and implementation of a change in the method used to select work samples of Appeals Officers for performance review.

The Administrative Law Judge concluded that the Respondent had no obligation under the Order to bargain over the impact and implementation of the revised system of selecting cases for review because he found that this change had no discernible effect upon the Appeals Officers' working conditions. He therefore recommended that the complaint be dismissed in this regard. However, the Administrative Law Judge found that a supervisor in the Respondent's New Orleans Branch Office went beyond merely implementing the new system for selecting cases for review and misinterpreted the plan to mean that new time standards were established, thereby changing the terms and conditions of employment for employees in the New Orleans Branch Office without negotiating on impact and implementation in violation of Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order.

Contrary to the Administrative Law Judge, the Assistant Secretary found that the new basis for selecting cases for performance evaluation effected a change in employee terms and conditions of employment. Thus, prior to April 1, 1976, the Appeals Officers working for the Respondent could generally expect that a cross-section of their work product would form the basis for their performance evaluation. Subsequent to April 1, 1976, a skewed sample of their work, either limited to or weighted toward those cases which exceeded certain average lengths of time for completion of cases, or "trigger points," would form the basis for their evaluation. In the Assistant Secretary's view, this change to an unbalanced sample of work selected for review, in contrast with the prior system involving Branch Chiefs' discretionary selections, constituted a change in the base from which performance evaluations were to be made and, therefore, was a change in employee terms and conditions of employment giving rise to the obligation of the Respondent to meet and confer, upon request, with the exclusive representative concerning the impact and implementation of the change. Therefore, he concluded that the Respondent's failure to fulfill its bargaining obligation in this regard constituted a violation of Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order. In view of this disposition, it was considered unnecessary to make a finding in connection with the implementation of the system in the Respondent's New Orleans Branch Office.

4/ Noting the above finding that the unit involved herein did not accrete to the unit exclusively represented at the Activity by AFGE Local 2151, and the fact that AFGE Local 2151 did not otherwise have standing to intervene herein, if a majority of ballots are cast against representation, the unit then will be unrepresented.

Accordingly, the Assistant Secretary ordered the Respondent to cease and desist from engaging in the conduct found violative of the Order and to take certain affirmative actions.

DECISION AND ORDER

On March 17, 1978, Administrative Law Judge Salvatore J. Arrigo issued his Recommended Decision and Order in the above-entitled proceeding, finding that the Respondent had engaged in certain unfair labor practices and recommending that it cease and desist therefrom and take certain affirmative actions as set forth in the attached Administrative Law Judge's Recommended Decision and Order. The Administrative Law Judge also found that the Respondent had not engaged in certain other alleged unfair labor practices and recommended that the complaint be dismissed in that regard. Thereafter, both the Respondent and the Complainant filed exceptions and supporting briefs with respect to the Administrative Law Judge's Recommended Decision and Order, and each party filed an answering brief with respect to the other's exceptions.

The Assistant Secretary has reviewed the rulings of the Administrative Law Judge made at the hearing and finds that no prejudicial error was committed. The rulings are hereby affirmed. Upon consideration of the Administrative Law Judge's Recommended Decision and Order and the entire record in the subject case, including the exceptions, briefs, and answering briefs filed by the parties, I hereby adopt the Administrative Law Judge's findings, conclusions and recommendations, to the extent consistent herewith.

The complaint alleges, in substance, that the Respondent violated Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order when it failed to negotiate on the impact and implementation of a change in the method used to select work samples of Appeals Officers for performance review.

The Administrative Law Judge concluded that the Respondent had no obligation under the Order to bargain over the impact and implementation of the revised system of selecting cases for review because he found that this change had no discernible effect upon the Appeals Officers' working conditions. He therefore recommended that the complaint be dismissed in this regard. However, the Administrative Law Judge found that a supervisor in the Respondent's New Orleans Branch Office went beyond merely implementing the new system for selecting cases for review and misinterpreted the plan to mean that new time standards were established, thereby changing the terms and conditions of employment for employees in the New Orleans Branch Office without negotiating on impact and implementation in violation of Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order.

Prior to April 1, 1976, the Branch Chief in each of the Respondent's five Appellate Branch Offices was required to conduct an in depth review of a representative sample of the work of each Appeals Officer he supervised. 1/ The review included, among other factors, consideration of the quality of the decision in each case, the promptness of the conference held with the taxpayer, the promptness of the final determination, the case management, and the write-up of the case. The selection of cases to be reviewed was at the discretion of each Branch Chief. On April 1, 1976, the Respondent implemented a new basis for selection of the work sample to be reviewed for performance evaluation. Under this new system, the Branch Chief would review, at a minimum, performance on all cases which exceeded "trigger points" based on national and regional average lengths of time for completion of various classes of cases. The new system of selecting cases for review removed the Branch Chiefs' discretion in selecting cases for review, although they might still review cases in addition to those required by the "trigger point" based sample. 2/

Contrary to the Administrative Law Judge, I find that the new basis for selecting cases for performance evaluation effected a change in employee terms and conditions of employment. 3/ Thus, prior to April 1, 1976, the Appeals Officers working for the Respondent could generally expect that a cross-section of their work product would form the basis for their performance evaluation. Subsequent to April 1, 1976, a skewed sample of their work, either limited to or weighted toward those cases which exceeded the "trigger points," would form the basis for their evaluation. In my view, this change to an unbalanced sample of work selected for review in contrast with the prior system involving Branch Chiefs' discretionary selections, constituted a change in the base from 1/ There is also an Assistant Branch Chief in the Dallas Branch Office who supervises Appeals Officers.

2/ As noted by the Administrative Law Judge, the new system of sampling was not used by the Respondent Activity after November 1976.

3/ A failure to bargain about the impact and implementation of the change in another kind of sampling technique has previously been found to violate Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order. Department of the Treasury, Internal Revenue Service, Fresno Service Center, A/SLMR No. 983 (1978).

which performance evaluations were to be made and, therefore, was a change in employee terms and conditions of employment giving rise to the obligation of the Respondent to meet and confer, upon request, with the exclusive representative concerning the impact and implementation of such change. 4/ The Administrative Law Judge found, and I agree, that the Complainant's demand to negotiate was sufficient to clearly apprise the Respondent that it desired to negotiate on any element of the change which was negotiable. Therefore, I conclude that the Respondent's subsequent failure to fulfill its bargaining obligation in this regard constituted a violation of Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order. 5/

Pursuant to Section 6(b) of Executive Order 11491, as amended, and Section 203.26(b) of the Regulations, the Assistant Secretary of Labor for Labor-Management Relations hereby orders that the Department of the Treasury, Internal Revenue Service, Southwest Region, Dallas, Texas, shall:

1. Cease and desist from:

(a) Instituting changes in the system by which Branch Chiefs sample work accomplished by Appeals Officers for the purpose of evaluating their performance without affording the National Treasury Employees Union, Chapter 91, the exclusive representative of the affected employees, a reasonable opportunity to meet and confer, to the extent consonant with law and regulations, on the procedures to be used in implementing the change and on the impact of such change on adversely affected employees.

(b) In any like or related manner, interfering with, restraining, or coercing employees in the exercise of their rights assured by Executive Order 11491, as amended.

2. Take the following affirmative actions in order to effectuate the purposes and policies of Executive Order 11491, as amended:

(a) Upon request by the National Treasury Employees Union, Chapter 91, the exclusive representative of its employees, meet and confer, to the extent consonant with law and regulations, on the procedures to be used in implementing a change in the system by which Branch Chiefs sample the work accomplished by Appeals Officers for the purpose of evaluating their performance and on the impact of such change on adversely affected employees.

4/ The impact of the change in the sample herein was demonstrated as more supervisory memoranda concerning the timeliness of case handling were placed in employee personnel files after the change than before.

5/ In view of the disposition herein, it was considered unnecessary to make a finding regarding a separate violation in connection with the implementation of the system in the Respondent's New Orleans Branch Office.

(b) Upon request, reevaluate, using the present sampling system, any employee whose current annual evaluation is based, in whole or in part, on individual cases selected for review during the period from April 1, 1976, through November 19, 1976, if the cases were selected for review based on the sampling system implemented on April 1, 1976.

(c) Post at all Department of the Treasury, Internal Revenue Service, Southwest Region, Dallas, Texas, facilities and installations copies of the attached notice marked "Appendix" on forms to be furnished by the Assistant Secretary of Labor for Labor-Management Relations. Upon receipt of such forms, they shall be signed by the Regional Commissioner and shall be posted and maintained by him for 60 consecutive days thereafter, in conspicuous places, including all bulletin boards and other places where notices to employees are customarily posted. The Regional Commissioner shall take reasonable steps to insure that such notices are not altered, defaced, or covered by any other material.

(d) Pursuant to Section 203.27 of the Regulations, notify the Assistant Secretary, in writing, within 30 days from the date of this order as to what steps have been taken to comply herewith.

RECOMMENDED DECISION AND ORDER

Preliminary Statement

This proceeding arises under the provisions of Executive Order 11491, as amended (hereinafter referred to as the Order). Pursuant to the Regulations of the Assistant Secretary of Labor for Labor-Management Relations (hereinafter referred to as the Assistant Secretary), a Notice of Hearing on complaint issued on June 1, 1977 with reference to alleged violations of 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order. The complaint, filed on August 2, 1976 by the National Treasury Employees Union and NTEU Chapter 91 (hereinafter referred to as the Union or Complainant) asserted that the Internal Revenue Service, Southwest Region (hereinafter referred to as the Activity or Respondent) violated the Order by refusing to negotiate with the Union with regard to an alleged change in the manner of supervisory review, assessment and evaluation of unit employees' work.

At the hearing held on July 7, 1977 the parties were represented by counsel and afforded full opportunity to adduce evidence and call, examine and cross-examine witnesses and argue orally. Both parties filed briefs.

Upon the entire record in this matter, my observation of the witnesses and their demeanor and from my evaluation of the evidence, I make the following:

Findings of Fact

At all times material hereto the Union has been the exclusive collective bargaining representative of various of the Activity's employees including all Appeals Officers located within the Activity's Southwest Region. Appeals Officers are located in five appellate branch offices in Dallas, Texas, Denver, Colorado, Houston, Texas, New Orleans, Louisiana, and Oklahoma City, Oklahoma. Appeals Officers are supervised by and responsible to Branch Chiefs who are in turn responsible to the Activity's Assistant Regional Commissioner, Appellate.

Appeals Officers review cases involving disputed tax assessments and make recommendations as to tax determinations and how the controversy might be resolved without litigation. Traditionally, a Branch Chief evaluated an Appeals Officer's work by selecting certain cases, at his own discretion, and reviewing that case on the basis of the Appeals Officer's overall work performance. In the New Orleans Branch Office, as in other offices generally, an Appeals Officer's case handling was evaluated in terms of such factors as the type of statement prepared to support the recommendation, quality of decision and the utilization of time in completing the assignment. The various elements considered were assigned weights of 1 to 5 to reflect the Appeals Officer's performance on the case.

In March 1976 the Activity established a new "trigger point" system designating which cases were to be reviewed by Branch Chiefs. The new system was not intended to change the type of review a case was to receive. Further, there is no evidence that any change in the type of evaluation a case received after it was "triggered" for review was any different than pre-change review in appellate branch offices in the Activity's Southwest Region other than the New Orleans Office.

At a meeting of New Orleans Appeals Officers conducted by the Branch Chief on March 16, 1976 the Appeals Officers were informed that the system by which their cases were selected for review by the Branch Chief was to be changed effective April 1. According to the Branch Chief, the new evaluation system was so designed that it would automatically "trigger" for in-depth review certain cases where the time expended by the Appeals Officer to decide a case exceeded or was less than 25% of a predetermined amount of work time allowed for a case of a particular dollar value. If the Branch Chief decided that an excessive amount of time was utilized by the Appeals Officer, then a derogatory memorandum would be placed in his personnel "drop" file unless the Appeals Officer presented a good reason for what was determined to be excessive utilization of time. 1/ The Branch Chief indicated that only an exceptional case which exceeded the time-value criteria would not cause a derogatory memorandum to be placed in an individual's file. 2/ Further, the Appeals Officers in New Orleans were informed that the Branch Chief would no longer utilize the numerical rating system then employed by the Branch Chief when evaluating case performance.

NTEU Chapter 91 President, J.M. Pilie, an Appeals Officer in the New Orleans office, was present when the Branch Chief informed the group of the change on March 16, 1976. Sometime between March 16 and April 1 Pilie asked the Branch Chief what the work time and dollar values were that established the "trigger points". The Branch Chief at first replied he didn't know. When asked again by Pilie at a subsequent time the Branch Chief refused to supply this information indicating that the Assistant Regional Commissioner forbade the dissemination of this information.

1/ Previously derogatory comments were placed in Appeals Officers' files by the Branch Chief, but they were few in number.

2/ Timeliness in case handling is a factor considered when an employee is appraised for promotion. (See Respondent's Exhibit No. 3).

On March 23, 1976, Pilie wrote the following letter to Assistant Regional Commissioner Douglas M. Moore:

"It has come to the attention of NTEU, Chapter 91, that you propose to institute a system which will trigger cases which Appellate Branch Chiefs will be obliged to review. The procedure is apparently based on the dollar amount of the proposed deficiency or overassessment and the amount of time spent on the case by the Appellate Conferee.

"According to my understanding, if the amount of time spent is over or under the national (or regional) average by 25% or more, it will require review by the Branch Chief. If the time spent is in excess of the average by 25% or more, and the Branch Chief cannot justify the excessive time by reviewing the case, he will question the conferee concerning the excessive time.

"If the Chief is not satisfied with the answers to his questions he will write a narrative report which will be placed in the Conferee's "drop file" and this will be part of the criteria used in evaluating the conferee's performance.

"NTEU Chapter 91 hereby notifies you that such a system violates Article 9, Section 4, of the Multi-Regional Agreement and demands that it not be implemented.

"If you intend to institute a system which incorporates elements which do not violate the Agreement, NTEU Chapter 91 hereby demands that negotiations be undertaken prior to implementation of such a system. I await your reply regarding an appropriate time for discussions to begin. 3/3/ Article 9, Section 4 of the parties collective bargaining agreement provides:

"A. The statistics concerning field enforcement officers' performance maintained by the Employer for the purpose of forecasting and monitoring aspects of work planning control programs will not be used as quotas, allocations or as specific amounts of work that must be completed.

[Cont'd]

In a letter dated March 29, 1976 Assistant Regional Commissioner Moore responded to President Pilie, stating:

"In reply to your letter of March 23, 1976, the plan concerning case review by Appellate supervisors will not violate Article 9, Section 4, of the Multi-Regional Agreement. On the contrary, it is within the spirit and intent of the contract provisions to reserve to management the right to raise questions with any individual about the amount of time being spent on individual cases or the results being achieved.

"The procedure is designed to identify units meriting commendation for case handling as well as to identify problems in case management.

"I am of the opinion also that the elements of the plan are not negotiable. Section 11(b) of Executive Order 11491, as amended, leaves to management the right to establish criteria by which to select work to be reviewed.

"In the conviction that you have been adequately briefed on this matter, the new criteria for selecting units to be reviewed will become operative on April 1, 1976."

The change became effective at all Branch Offices in the Southwest Region on April 1, 1976. In the New Orleans office, the change resulted in a substantial increase in the number of derogatory memoranda reflecting excessive time used in case dispositions which were placed into Appellate Officers "drop" files. In other offices in the Region, while the new system resulted in more cases being reviewed in-depth by Branch Chiefs, the vast majority of the reviews did not result in any increase in either commendatory comments or comments reflecting excessive case handling time.

"B. The tax enforcement results of individual appellate conferees and appellate auditors will not be accumulated and maintained as a regular statistic in such a way as to identify the product of any individual enforcement officer. Provided, however, that the Employer may raise any question with an individual enforcement officer about the number of cases he has turned in during a specific period, the amount of time he has been spending on individual cases, or the kind of results he has been getting. [Cont'd]

Thereafter, by letter dated April 28, 1976 the Union filed an unfair labor practice charge with the Activity alleging violations of Sections 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order contending that "(s)ome of the elements of the changes violated the Multi-District Agreement between the parties while other elements were not covered by the ... Agreement". The Union's letter recited Pilie's demand to negotiate the changes to the extent they were not covered by the agreement and alleged the Activity "ignored the demand to negotiate by unilaterally implementing all elements of the changes on April 1, 1976."

In addition, by letter dated April 30, 1976 President Pilie filed a grievance 4/ with the Activity's Regional Commissioner alleging violations of Article 9, Sections 4 (A)(B) and (C) of the agreement, stating:

"Chapter 91, Federal Treasury Employees Union, hereby files a grievance due to violations of the provisions of the Multi-Regional Agreement, as more fully set out below.

"Section 4(A) of Article 9 of the Multi-Regional Agreement provides that statistics maintained by the Employer for the purpose of forecasting and monitoring aspects of work planning control programs will not be used as quotas, allocations or as specific amounts of work that must be completed.

"The Appellate Branch Chiefs in the Southwest Region have been ordered by the ARC-Appellate to use such statistics as quotas and allocations in order that management may measure individual conferees' performances. The Branch Chiefs have been instructed that if they find that a conferee is determined to be performing at 25% above or below these statistical quotas he is to be commended or reprimanded unless it is determined that there is justification for more or less time having been spent on the unit of cases involved. If it is determined that there was no proper justification, a narrative report must be written by the Branch Chief and placed in the Appellate conferee's "drop file" which file will be used later for the evaluation of the conferee's performance. In addition, the quotas are used as specific amounts of work that must be completed within the statistical time limit based on the dollar amount of the deficiency or overassessment, with the 25% tolerance. These quotas and requirements are in violation of Article 9, Section 4(A), of the Multi-Regional Agreement.

"C. Enforcement production records will not be used to establish individual quantity performance standards. None of the foregoing will be used to compare one field enforcement officer with another."

"Section 4(B) of Article of the Multi-Regional Agreement provides that the tax enforcement results of individual Appellate conferees will not be accumulated and maintained as a regular statistic in such a way as to identify the product of any individual.

"The tax enforcement results of individual Appellate conferees are being accumulated in the Branch Offices and are being maintained in a manner to identify the product of the conferee. This is in violation of Section 4 (B) of Article 9 of the Multi-Regional Agreement. The proviso in this Section does not encompass the employer's using time and dollar statistics to establish quotas with which to evaluate the performances of Appellate conferees.

"Article 9, Section 4(C), provides that enforcement production records will not be used to establish quantity performance standards and that these records will not be used to compare one field enforcement officer with another.

"The amount of time expended by an individual Appellate conferee on cases worked by him or her are being compared with compiled production statistics (the origin of which is known only to the ARC-Appellate). These statistics purportedly indicate the average amount of time spent by other conferees on cases involving deficiencies or overassessments of comparable amounts. This is in direct violation of Section 4(C) of Article 9 of the Multi-Regional Agreement.

"Based on the foregoing, NTEU Chapter 91 requests the following remedial actions:

1. A statement from the Regional Commissioner endorsing the principles outlined in Article 9, Section 1(A) which provide that all evaluations of performance will be made in a fair and objective manner only by the employee's immediate supervisor who is immediately responsible for the employee's work.
2. The Regional Commissioner will order the immediate discontinuance of the violations referred to above and of the procedures which have been in effect since April 1, 1976 which are producing these recurring violations.

"It is requested that in accordance with the provisions of Article 32, Section 10(B) of the Multi-Regional Agreement, it be mutually agreed that steps 2 and 3 referred to in Article 32, Section 7, be waived."

On May 18, 1976 the Activity responded to the grievance at the third step. Assistant Regional Commissioner Moore replied as follows:

"Your letter of April 30 has been referred to me by the Regional Commissioner.

"You contend I have ordered the Branch Chiefs to use statistics to set quotas and allocations to measure individual performance. You further state that specific amounts of work must be completed within the statistical time unit based on a dollar amount of deficiency or overassessment within a 25% tolerance. This simply is not the situation.

"What I have done is set guidelines for required case review. The Appellate supervisors have been asked to review any case which has more or less time on it than those guidelines. The reviewer will then have three alternatives at his/her discretion - 1) a commendation for superior time utilization; 2) a notation on Form 3564 that the time is justified; or 3) an in-depth review to determine the reason or reasons for the amount of time expended on the unit. This may or may not result in a recordation of performance per Article 9, Section 1.(B).(2). Such a decision will be made on a case-by-case basis by the supervisor.

"There have never been nor will any quotas be set for individual employees in Appellate.

"Regional Commissioner Memorandum 12-42 specifically deals with Policy Statement P-1-20. I believe the review procedure conforms with these guidelines as well as with Article 9, Section 4, of Multi-Regional Agreement. No production rate - that is, an average time per case - has been nor will be computed for an individual. No time and dollar statistics are maintained on individual production.

"No quantity performance standards have been set. Certainly, no individual is being compared with another nor evaluated on such a basis. Time utilization will continue to be evaluated on the basis of the particular case and the problems therein.

"I hope that the explanation I have made of its origin and purpose will assuage your fears regarding the effects on an individual's performance evaluation. The Appellate supervisors will be making an analysis of conferee's work on a 'business as usual' basis - that is, whatever individual problems arise will be worked out with the individual - not against some arbitrary standard.

"The foregoing comments are provided further to explain that neither production goals nor statistical evaluation methods for individuals are being used.

"Previously - on March 29 - I wrote you a letter explaining in some detail the review procedures you are now grieving. In that letter, I told you the procedure would take effect on April 1.

"Since the grievance is untimely, the merits of your contention are not being further considered and remedial relief you requested is denied."

On May 27, 1976, President Pilie filed with the Regional Commissioner a step four grievance on the matter. The Regional Commissioner, on June 28, 1976, concluded the grievance was untimely and concurred in Moore's decision to deny any remedial relief. By letter dated June 21, 1976 the Union invoked arbitration and the parties selected an arbitrator to hear the matter.

While it was in effect, the new system designating which cases were to be reviewed was modified twice in an attempt to decrease the number of cases requiring review. The system was finally abandoned on November 14, 1976. At this time case review reverted to the pre April 1, 1976 procedure whereby Branch Chiefs used their discretion in deciding which cases would receive an in-depth review.

On June 13, 1977 the Union withdrew its grievance, with prejudice, stating, inter alia, that they "...assume the Internal Revenue Service would have refused to arbitrate the cases and instead would have filed an arbitrability petition."

Positions of the Parties

The Union contends that the Activity's refusal to negotiate with regard to the implementation of the new system of "triggering" case review and the impact of that change on affected employees violated Sections 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order.

The Activity contends: the new system of case review did not affect policies, practices and working conditions of unit employees and asserts Complainant failed to sustain its burden of proof in this regard; no adequate request to negotiate on the matter was made by the Union; in any event the unfair labor practice complaint should be considered moot since the new system terminated on November 19, 1976; the case really involves a matter of good faith interpretation of Article 9, Section 4 of the agreement and no patent breach of the agreement has occurred; and an unfair labor practice finding is barred by virtue of Section 19(d) of the Order since the Complainant sought a disposition of the issue by invoking the grievance procedures of the agreement. 5/

Discussion and Conclusions

Section 11(a) of the Order provides, in relevant part:

"An agency and a labor organization that has been accorded exclusive recognition, through appropriate representatives, shall meet at reasonable times and confer in good faith with respect to personnel policies and practices and matters affecting working conditions."

The vast majority of managerial decisions, by their very nature, in some manner relate to personnel policies and practices affecting working conditions, (hereinafter referred to simply as working conditions). However, other Sections of the Order specifically exclude numerous areas of typical managerial concern from the general bargaining obligation imposed by Section 11(a), even though these subjects clearly affect the working conditions of bargaining unit employees. Thus, Section 11(b) provides in part:

"(b) In prescribing regulations relating to personnel policies and practices and working conditions, an agency shall have due regard for the obligation imposed by paragraph (a) of this section. However, the obligation to meet and confer does not include matters with respect to the mission of an agency; its budget; its organization; the number of employees; and the numbers, types, and grades of positions or employees assigned to an organizational unit, work project or tour of duty; the technology of performing its work; or its internal security practices. This does not preclude the parties from negotiating agreements providing appropriate arrangements for employees adversely affected by the impact of realignment of work forces or technological change. "

5/ Section 19(d) provides, in relevant part:

"Issues which can properly be raised under a grievance procedure may, in the discretion of the aggrieved party, be raised under that procedure or the complaint procedure under this section, but not under both procedures."

Section 12(b) states:

"(b) management officials of the agency retain the right, in accordance with applicable laws and regulations -

- (1) to direct employees of the agency;
- (2) to hire, promote, transfer, assign, and retain employees in positions with the agency, and to suspend, demote, discharge, or take other disciplinary action against employees;
- (3) to relieve employees from duties because of lack of work or for other legitimate reasons;
- (4) to maintain the efficiency of the Government operations entrusted to them;
- (5) to determine the methods, means, and personnel by which such operations are to be conducted; and
- (6) to take whatever actions may be necessary to carry out the mission of the agency in situations of emergency...."

Decision of the Federal Labor Relations Council reveal that even in these matters of express management prerogative, an agency must provide the exclusive representative of its employees with an opportunity to negotiate on "...procedures, to the extent consonant with law and regulations, which management will observe in reaching the decision or taking the action involved, provided that such procedures do not have the effect of negating the authority reserved" and on the impact of the agency's decision on those employees adversely affected. 6/

Decisions of the Assistant Secretary indicate that even though an agency is privileged to make unilateral decisions on the matters set forth in Sections 11(b) and 12(b), nevertheless, prior to changing a policy or working condition encompassed by these Sections an agency must provide the exclusive representative an opportunity to negotiate the procedures observed in reaching the decision, implementing the action and the impact on adversely affected employees. 7/

In the case herein the Union does not claim that the Activity is obligated to negotiate with the Union regarding the decision to revise the system of selecting cases for supervisory review. Rather, the Union acknowledges that it is seeking to negotiate with the Activity only as to matters concerning procedures and impact relative to the change. 8/

I conclude the Activity was under no obligation under the Order to bargain with the Union on matters of implementation or adverse impact.

Essentially, the Activity effectuated a general revision in the methodology employed by its supervisors in fulfilling their assigned tasks of case review. Supervisors were no longer to use their own discretion in deciding which cases were to be reviewed. Instead, "trigger points", which mandated review, were established. As applied to all Branch Offices, the Activity did not contemplate changing the nature of the in-depth review a case received, only which cases were to be selected for that review. While some unit employees and the Union may have misconstrued the establishment of the "trigger point" system to be the establishment of goals and time targets which were not an element in the previous system of work evaluation, the evidence reveals that no such general intention was manifest. Nor does the evidence establish that, except with regard to the New Orleans Branch Office, infra, the Activity utilized "trigger points" as goals or time targets for case handling evaluation purposes.

Both before and after the change, unit employees' duties and obligations remained the same. Standards of case handling performance, including timeliness of case handling, remained unaffected. Supervisors, notwithstanding the advent of the new "trigger points", continued to assess the timeliness of case handling using their own independent judgment. Unit employees both before and after the change were given the opportunity to challenge a supervisor's derogatory appraisal of case handling by inserting an explanatory memorandum in the drop file, if they so desired. If perhaps the new procedure disclosed case handling deficiencies which then led to revised work performance standards, 8/ The transcript is replete with statements of counsel for both Complainant and Respondent reflecting the posture of the case in this regard.

those new standards would, of course, be in a different posture for consideration. However, the possibility of such an eventuality is too speculative to have the effect of characterizing the revision of case review selection techniques as an employee working condition.

Thus, I find and conclude that what actually changed was a term and condition of employment for supervisors, a change which had no discernable affect upon the Appeals Officers' working conditions. Accordingly, I conclude that Respondent's refusal to negotiate with Complainant as to the implementation and impact of the revised system of selecting cases for review as it generally applied to all of the Activity's Branch Offices did not violate Sections 19(a) (1) and (6) of the Order. 9/

As indicated above, virtually any managerial action could be viewed in such a manner, perhaps strained, to have an affect, however slight, upon working conditions of unit employees. A literal reading of the Order might well then compel a conclusion that any such managerial action carries with it the concomitant obligation to, upon demand, bargain with the exclusive representative on the matter, at least with regard to the implementation and adverse impact of the action. Nevertheless, I conclude that the obligation to bargain with the Union on the matter herein did not arise since the change had insufficient impact, if any, on the work unit employees performed, their manner of performance or evaluations. 10/

9/ See Department of the Navy, Norfolk Naval Shipyard, A/SLMR No. 805 which involved a claim that the activity therein was obligated to negotiate with the exclusive representative concerning the establishment, implementation and impact of a policy of using radar to enforce speed limits at the activity's facilities. The Assistant Secretary found that the decision to use radar to enforce speed limits did not affect or change employees, terms and conditions of employment. Accordingly, the complaint was dismissed in that the activity was not required to negotiate concerning the "new method of enforcing existing policy."

10/ See generally Department of Defense, Air National Guard, Texas Air National Guard, Camp Mabry, Austin, Texas 6 A/SLMR 591, A/SLMR No. 738, where the Assistant Secretary held that a past practice of allowing the consumption of alcoholic beverages at parties at a government facility was not a working condition contemplated by Section 11(a) of the Order. More significantly, the Assistant Secretary stated: [Cont'd on next page]

Further, it appears that in the Federal Labor Relations Council's view, the mere fact that an management action affects or has an impact on unit employees is not the controlling criteria when non unit supervisory positions are being considered. Thus, in Texas ANG Council of Locals, AFGE, FLRC 74A-71 (March 3, 1976), Report No. 100, the Council considered the negotiability of a union's contract proposal to make the unit's negotiated promotion procedures applicable to the filling of threshold supervisory positions outside the bargaining unit. The union contended that its proposal applied only to unit employees who were candidates for threshold supervisory positions and, accordingly, its proposal was negotiable since it had the right to negotiate promotion procedures for unit employees. The Council found the proposal not negotiable and held, inter alia, that since the proposal related to supervisory positions "...which are concerned with management responsibilities and the performance of management functions...(the proposal)...clearly does not relate to the personnel policies and practices affecting the bargaining unit which are encompassed within the bargaining obligations under Section 11(a)." 11/

Certainly the procedures used to promote bargaining unit employees to threshold supervisory positions has a greater affect and impact upon working condition of employees than the procedures used to alter how a supervisor selects

"Section 11(a) describes the limited areas which are subject to the bargaining obligation on the part of agencies and exclusive representatives. In my view, it is not intended to embrace every issue which is of issue to agencies and exclusive representatives and which indirectly may affect employees. Rather, Section 11(a) encompasses those matters which materially affect and have a substantial impact on, personnel policies, practices, and general working conditions." [Emphasis supplied.]

11/ In its decision the Council also noted that it was not holding that all proposals in any way related to filling of supervisory vacancies would be outside the obligation to bargain under Section 11(a), giving as an example, "proposals dealing with notification of unit employees eligible for consideration under agency regulations."

cases for performance review, as herein. 12/ Accordingly, if such promotion procedures are not negotiable, the procedures used in changing the technology of case selection for review must also be a matter about which an activity may refuse to negotiate without violating the Order.

However, at the New Orleans Branch Office the Appeals Officers' supervisor went beyond merely changing the existing system for selecting cases for review. Rather, as the evidence discloses, the Branch Officer interpreted the establishment of "trigger points" for review to mean that the "trigger points" in fact represented the periods of time for case handling which would be permissible. In his view, when Appeals Officers in that Branch exceeded those times, it presumptively indicated that an excessive amount of time was spent on that case. This interpretation changed the standards of acceptable case handling performance of Appeals Officers. Indeed, the New Orleans Branch Officer's misinterpretation of the Agency's directive resulted in a substantial number of derogatory memoranda dealing with inordinate case handling time being placed in Appeals Officers' "drop" files.

Accordingly, I conclude that the New Orleans Branch Officer changed the terms and conditions of employment for Appeals Officers without providing the Union with an opportunity to negotiate as to the implementation and impact of the change on adversely affected employees and thereby violated Sections 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order. 13/

I reject the contention that the abandonment in November 1976 of the new case review selection system and return to the prior discretionary system has rendered the matter moot

12/ For treatment of filling supervisory positions under the National Labor Relations Act, see generally KONO-TV-Mission Telecasting Corporation, 163 NLRB 1005. See also Wincharger Corporation, Subsidiary of Zenith Radio Corporation, 172 NLRB 83 which held that an employer was not obligated to give notice to or negotiate with a union about its decision to increase the number of supervisors the employer concluded was necessary to provide more effective supervision of its employees.

13/ Cf. National Labor Relations Board, 3 A/SLMR 88, A/SLMR No. 246; and Federal Aviation Administration, National Aviations Facilities Control Center, Atlantic City, New Jersey, 4 A/SLMR 647, A/SLMR No. 438, Case No. 32-3071(CA).

and the unfair labor practice allegation should therefore be dismissed. The "trigger point" system was in effect almost seven months and resulted in derogatory memoranda being placed in unit employees "drop" files at the New Orleans Branch Office. Performance evaluations are, in part, based upon such data and a suitable remedy is necessary to dissipate the effects of the unfair labor practice conduct. Accordingly, in these circumstances I do not conclude the complaint is moot as Respondent suggests.

I also reject Respondent's contention that Complainant failed to demand negotiations on the impact and implementation regarding the system that was put into effect on April 1, 1976. 14/ The Union's letter of March 23, supra, in effect demands negotiations on any change in the review procedure which did not violate the parties agreement. 15/ The Union, of course, was somewhat handicapped since information on the new system was provided them from the New Orleans Branch Officer whose interpretation and application of the change was different from that which the Activity intended. Indeed, the New Orleans Branch Officer refused to supply details of the system. 16/ The Activity's March 29, response to the March 23, letter denied any contract violation and claimed the elements of the plan were simply "not negotiable" and informed the Union that the new system would be effective April 1.

While a union's demand to negotiate on impact and implementation must be communicated in specific terms, 17/ in these circumstances, I find and conclude that the Union's demand to negotiate was sufficient to clearly apprise the Activity that the Union wanted to negotiate on any element of the change which was negotiable. Given the paucity of information and nature of the Branch Officer's interpretation

14/ Due to my prior findings and conclusions, it is only necessary to consider this argument as it may apply to the situation at the New Orleans Branch Office.

15/ The Union obviously recognized that violations of the agreement would be resolved through the parties negotiated grievance procedure, infra.

16/ Complainant urges that Respondent violated the order by refusing its request to provide information on the new system. However, neither the charge nor complaint allege such a violation nor do the circumstances herein indicate that such an allegation was encompassed in the complaint. Accordingly, no finding can be made on this matter.

17/ See Internal Revenue Service, National Office, A/SLMR No. 846.

of the changes, a demand of this nature should be expected. In my view, the initial demand broadly included a request to negotiate on matters of implementation and impact of the change. The Activity's refusal, in turn, broadly indicated that since the new procedure would be operative three days from the date of the letter, further communication on the matter would be futile. 18/

Turning now to Respondent's positions that the matter actually concerns a question of contract interpretation and the unfair labor practice complaint is barred by virtue of Section 19(d), I find no merit to either contention. From the initial step in this proceeding, the Union sought to keep separate its challenge to the Activity's action. Thus, as best the Union understood it, the new system involved the possible accumulation and use of statistics which was seen as a matter concerning the possible violation of Article 9, Section 4 of the agreement. However, the implementation of a new system of review was seen as a unilateral change in conditions of employment. As the record clearly reflects, the Union in these unfair labor practice proceedings is not challenging the change itself but the Activity's refusal to bargain on the implementation and impact of the change, notwithstanding whether or not the change in the system of case review used statistics contrary to Section 9, Article 4 of the agreement. Indeed, under existing case law, the Union could not challenge the suspected breach of Article 9 in an unfair labor practice proceeding unless a patent breach was found to have occurred. 19/ Further, there is neither contention nor evidence that the Union could have raised as a breach of contract the matter of the unilateral implementation and refusal to bargain on the adverse impact in changing the standards for assessing the utilization of time in case handling in the New Orleans Branch Office.

In sum, the subject matters of the grievance and the unfair labor practice complaint were separate and distinct and treated as such. Accordingly, in considering the Respondent's conduct regarding the change in the standards of acceptable case handling for Appeals Officers in the New Orleans Branch Office, I reject Respondent's contention that the matters giving rise to the unfair labor practice complaint constituted issues of contract interpretation and application of Section 19(d).

Recommendations

Having found that Respondent has engaged in conduct violative of Sections 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order through its failure and refusal to negotiate with Complainant with regard to the implementation and impact on employees adversely affected with regard to the changing of standards for evaluating timely case handling performance of Appeals Officers at the New Orleans Branch Office, I recommend that the Assistant Secretary adopt the order as hereinafter set forth which is designed to effectuate the policies of the Order.

As to all other allegations, I recommend the complaint be dismissed.

Order

Pursuant to Section 6(b) of Executive Order 11491, as amended, and Section 203.26(b) of the Regulations, the Assistant Secretary of Labor for Labor-Management Relations hereby orders that the Department of the Treasury, Internal Revenue Service, Southwest Region, Dallas, Texas, shall:

1. Cease and desist from:

(a) Changing standards for evaluating timely case handling performance of Appeals Officers at its New Orleans Branch Office without affording the National Treasury Employees Union Chapter 91, the exclusive representative, a reasonable opportunity to meet and confer, to the extent consonant with law and regulations on the procedures to be used in implementing the change and on the impact such change will have on employees adversely affected by the change.

(b) In any like or related manner interfering with, restraining or coercing employees in the exercise of their rights assured by Executive Order 11491, as amended.

2. Take the following affirmative action in order to effectuate the policies of Executive Order 11491, as amended:

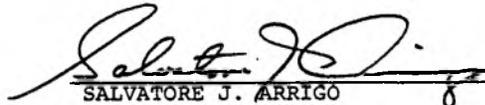

(a) Notify National Treasury Employees Union, Chapter 91, or any other exclusive representative of the employees, of any future decision to change standards for case handling procedure of Appeals Officers prior to its effectuation, and upon request, make available to such representative any information relevant to the change and

(b) Expunge from any personnel files of New Orleans Branch Office Appeals Officers any adverse evaluation of Appeals Officers' timely case handling performance where such evaluation was not based upon standards in effect prior to April 1, 1976, and expunge any adverse appraisal made based upon such adverse evaluation.

This Notice must remain posted for 60 consecutive days from the date of posting, and must not be altered, defaced, or covered by any other material.

If employees have any question concerning this Notice or compliance with any of its provisions, they communicate directly with the Regional Administrator for Labor-Management Services, Labor-Management Services Administration, United States Department of Labor, whose address is: 2200 Federal Office Building, 911 Walnut Street, Kansas City, Missouri 64106.

This case involved an unfair labor practice complaint filed by the National Treasury Employees Union, Chapter 27 (Complainant) alleging that the Respondent violated Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order by instituting and implementing a change in the level of review of advisory arbitration recommendations from the Regional Commissioner to the District Director without affording the Complainant proper notification of the change and an opportunity to negotiate. The Respondent took the position that it had not violated the Order as the change in the level of review had no impact on the working conditions of employees, and that the complaint was brought against the wrong party, the Cincinnati District Office.

The Administrative Law Judge found that both the Internal Revenue Service and its Cincinnati District Office were named as parties in the complaint and that the Complainant was not given notice of the decision to change the level of review by the Internal Revenue Service or its Cincinnati District Office. He concluded, and the Assistant Secretary concurred, that the Cincinnati District Office violated Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order by not timely notifying the Complainant of the decision to make the change in review level and by not meeting with it to negotiate on the impact and implementation of the change before it became effective. In this regard, he found that the change in the level of review had an impact and effect on employees represented by the Complainant. In reaching his decision the Administrative Law Judge noted that the specific issue presented by the Complainant at the hearing was whether Sections 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order were violated by the Respondent's failure to bargain with respect to the impact and implementation of the decision to change the level of review, rather than whether the Respondent's change in the level of review was violative of the Order. Therefore, neither the Administrative Law Judge nor the Assistant Secretary passed upon the question whether such a unilateral decision and change would itself constitute a violation of Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order.

Although the Administrative Law Judge found that the District Office committed the unfair labor practice herein, his recommended remedial order was directed, in part, against the Internal Revenue Service, as he concluded the only meaningful remedy available in the instant case would be against the parent organization which was ultimately responsible for the bargaining of its subordinate activity and which should be held accountable for the actions of its agents and subsidiaries.

The Assistant Secretary adopted the Administrative Law Judge's findings, conclusions, and recommendations and issued an appropriate remedial order for the violation found herein.

DECISION AND ORDER

On April 10, 1978, Administrative Law Judge Samuel A. Chaitovitz issued his Recommended Decision and Order in the above-entitled proceeding, finding that the Respondent had engaged in the unfair labor practices alleged in the complaint and recommending that it cease and desist therefrom and take certain affirmative actions as set forth in the attached Administrative Law Judge's Recommended Decision and Order. Thereafter, the Respondent filed exceptions and a supporting brief with respect to the Administrative Law Judge's Recommended Decision and Order.

The Assistant Secretary has reviewed the rulings of the Administrative Law Judge made at the hearing and finds that no prejudicial error was committed. The rulings are hereby affirmed. Upon consideration of the Administrative Law Judge's Recommended Decision and Order and the entire record in the subject case, including the Respondent's exceptions and supporting brief, 1/ I hereby adopt the Administrative Law Judge's findings, conclusions and recommendations. 2/

1/ The Respondent excepted to certain credibility findings made by the Administrative Law Judge. In Navy Exchange, U.S. Naval Air Station, Quonset Point, Rhode Island, 2 A/SLMR 377, A/SLMR No. 180 (1972), the Assistant Secretary held that as a matter of policy he would not overrule an Administrative Law Judge's resolution with respect to credibility unless the preponderance of all the relevant evidence established that such resolution clearly was incorrect. Based on a review of the record herein, I find no basis for reversing the Administrative Law Judge's credibility findings.

Accordingly, his Recommended Decision and Order, and my decision herein, do not pass on whether such unilateral conduct would be violative of the Order.

RECOMMENDED DECISION AND ORDER

Statement of the Case

Pursuant to a Notice of Hearing on Complaint issued on December 8, 1977 by the Regional Administrator for Labor-Management Service Administration, Chicago Region, a hearing was held before the undersigned in Washington, D.C.

This proceeding was initiated under Executive Order 11491, as amended, (herein called the Order), by the filing of a complaint by National Treasury Employees Union, NTEU Chapter No. 27 (herein called Complainant or NTEU) against Internal Revenue Service, Cincinnati District Office of the Treasury Department (herein called IRS Cincinnati District Office or Respondent). The complaint, which was filed on December 6, 1976, alleged that Respondent violated Sections 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order by instituting and implementing a change in an advisory arbitration procedure without first giving the Complainant notice of the intended change and an opportunity to bargain about the change.

All parties were represented at the hearing, were afforded full opportunity to be heard, to adduce evidence, and to examine as well as cross-examine witnesses. 1/ Thereafter the parties filed briefs which have been duly considered.

Upon the entire record herein, from my observation of the witnesses and their demeanor, and from all of the stipulation, testimony and evidence adduced at the hearing, I make the following Recommended Findings of Fact, Conclusions of Law and Order:

Findings of Fact

1. At all times material herein NTEU Chapter 27 was the exclusive collective bargaining representative of a unit composed of all professional and non-professional employees of the Cincinnati District of the Internal Revenue Service.

2. Prior to September 9, 1974 the Civil Service Regulations provided for appeals methods for employees suffering adverse actions. One such method was direct appeal to the Civil Service Commission. The second method was to appeal through the internal agency procedures.

3. The Internal Revenue Service regulations which existed prior to September 9, 1974 provided that a District Director's adverse action could be appealed to a hearing examiner who would issue an advisory opinion which would be reviewed by the Regional Commissioner. The regulations provided further that if the Regional Commissioner adopted the advisory decision or modified it in favor of the employee,

1/ An Affidavit of Charles Fergenbaum and an attachment to it have been jointly submitted by the parties. The Affidavit and attachment are hereby made a part of the record herein and are hereby marked as Joint Exhibit No. 3.

the decision was a final one within the agency. If the advisory opinion was rejected by the Regional Commissioner it would be referred to the Director of Personnel for the Internal Revenue Service.

4. In Multidistrict Agreements 1 and 2, the parties negotiated an arrangement whereby an impartial arbitrator mutually selected was substituted in the above described procedures for the hearing examiner. The arbitrator's award was also advisory and was treated in the same manner as had decisions rendered by hearing examiner; that it was reviewed by the Regional Commissioner.

5. Executive Order 11787 became effective on September 9, 1974. It abolished agency procedures for processing appeals from adverse actions. In implementing Executive Order 11787, the Civil Service Commission held that collective bargaining agreements containing advisory arbitration procedures would not be affected, except that such provisions could not be contained or continued in contracts negotiated after September 9, 1974. The Civil Service Commission also held that the 15 day time limit for appealing adverse actions to the Civil Service Commission would not be stayed for employees to appeal adverse actions to the Civil Service Commission after arbitration.

6. Multidistrict Agreement 2 was negotiated in August of 1974 and was within the meaning of the ruling of the Civil Service Commission as a contract negotiated before September 9, 1974.

7. On October 7, 1974 a meeting was held between NTEU and IRS representatives. NTEU was represented by its President Vincent Connery and its General Counsel Robert Tobias. IRS was represented by Chief of the Labor Relations Brandon Hastings and Chief of the IRS' Conduct and Appeals Section of the Labor Relations Branch, Personnel Division Lucille H. Smoot, as well as other IRS representatives. At the meeting the parties discussed how the IRS was going to implement the change in "oral reply" procedures of disciplinary actions. 2/ The NTEU was advised that under the new procedures the division chief would initiate the adverse action and the District Director would make the final decision. 3/ Mr. Tobias objected to these new "oral reply" procedures contending that they violated the spirit of the Civil Service Commission's regulations. At this meeting the parties did not discuss and the NTEU representatives were not advised of any new or proposed changes in the procedures for dealing with arbitrator's advisory opinions and they were not advised that an arbitrator's advisory opinion would now be reviewed by the District Director rather than the Regional Commissioner.

2/ Presumably the change was instituted to conform to new regulations issued by the Civil Service Commission that required that the person who initiated the adverse action be at a lower management level than the person who ultimately decided upon the action.

In arriving at the foregoing findings of fact with respect to the discussions that took place at the October 7, 1974 meeting, I credit the testimony of Robert Tobias rather than that of Lucille H. Smoot. I do this solely on the grounds that although both witnesses had gaps in their recollections, Mr. Tobias recollection of the conversations and occurrences that took place at the meeting seem to be clearer and more precise than Ms. Smoot's, whose recollections seemed somewhat less clear, less precise and more confused.

8. On February 7, 1975 District Director Dwight James took adverse action against Darrell Douglas, Sr., a member of the subject collective bargaining unit. NTEU invoked the advisory arbitration procedures.

9. The arbitrator's advisory opinion recommended that Mr. Douglas be reinstated. The advisory opinion was reviewed by Director James who rejected it and sustained the removal. The Regional Commissioner did not review or otherwise pass on the arbitrator's award.

Conclusions of Law

Respondent contends that the complaint in the subject case should be dismissed because it was brought against the wrong party. Respondent urges that the complaint was erroneously brought against the Cincinnati District Office of the IRS 4/ whereas the decision to change the level of 3/ Under the old procedures the District Director issued the letter of proposed adverse action, there was then an opportunity for an oral (or written) reply, and then the District Director would make the final decision as to whether the adverse action would be imposed.

4/ The Activity for which NTEU Local No. 27 was the collective bargaining representative.

review of an arbitrator's advisory opinion was made by the IRS national office. 5/ The foregoing analysis seems to ignore the fact that the Complainant, at the hearing, specifically stated that it was not contending that the Order was violated by the unilateral decision to change the level of review of an arbitrator's advisory opinion. Rather, NTEU is contending there was a failure to bargain, as required by the Order, with respect to the implementation and impact of the decision to change the level of review. Further there was no showing at the hearing that the Director of the District Office was without authority to bargain with NTEU Local No. 27 about the implementation and impact of the decision to change the level of review of an arbitrator's advisory opinion. Accordingly therefore, it is concluded that the complaint should not be dismissed because it named the wrong Respondent. 6/ Both parties agree that the unilateral decision by the IRS to change the level of review of an arbitrator's advisory opinion was not a violation of Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order and this issue was not submitted to the undersigned for his consideration. Accordingly the undersigned does not reach this issue. However, nothing in the decision should be construed as a conclusion by the undersigned as to whether or not such a unilateral decision and change would constitute a violation of Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order.

Respondent urges further that the complaint should be dismissed because there was no impact and there were no changes in working conditions as a result of the decision to change the level of review. Therefore Respondent had no obligation to give timely notice of the change or to bargain concerning the change's impact and implementation. This contention must be rejected however. Grievance and arbitration procedures have classically been considered working conditions and appropriate subjects for collective bargaining. This was clearly recognized in Section 13 of the Order which provides that collective bargaining agreements shall contain grievance and arbitration procedures. Accordingly it must follow that any unilateral change in existing grievance and arbitration procedures would necessarily have an impact on the working conditions of employees. The subject change necessarily changed how and by whom arbitrators' advisory opinions in adverse actions would be reviewed. Such a change affects the very basis of a kind of arbitration procedure and therefore affects a very fundamental working condition.

5/ There was no recognition of NTEU as collective bargaining representatives at this level although there was a history of multi-unit bargaining and agreements.

6/ The Complaint named the "Internal Revenue Service Cincinnati District Office" as the "Activity and/or Agency." It is further concluded that the complaint named both the IRS and its Cincinnati District Office. Respondent contends that by omitting the "and" in the complaint the NTEU was confining itself to naming only the District Office. This contention is rejected as it seems to place too much weight on form and too little on the substance of the case.

In light of the foregoing it is concluded that the change in the level of review of an arbitrator's advisory opinion had an impact and effect on employees represented by NTEU Local 27. Because the decision to change the level of review did have an impact and effect on employees represented by NTEU Local No. 27; the IRS Cincinnati District Office was obliged to give NTEU Local No. 27 notice of the decision to make the change and, upon request, to meet and bargain with NTEU Local No. 27 concerning the implementation and impact of the impending change.

Based on the foregoing findings of fact it is concluded that neither NTEU Local No. 27, nor any of its representatives at any level were notified by representatives of the IRS National Office or Cincinnati District Office of the decision to change the level of review of an arbitrator's advisory opinion prior to NTEU's learning of it when the arbitrator's advisory opinion in the Douglas matter was reviewed by the District Director. This can hardly be considered timely and appropriate notice of a change so as to permit the complainant an opportunity to bargain about the impact and implementation of the change before it becomes effective.

Accordingly it is concluded that IRS Cincinnati District Office violated Sections 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order by its failure to give NTEU Local No. 27 timely notice of the impending change.

Finally it is concluded that a status quo ante remedy is appropriate to cure the subject unfair labor practice. Apparently, due to the passage of time and the operation of Executive Order 11787, the parties no longer have advisory arbitration of adverse actions. A future undertaking to bargain about the impact and implementation of the change would therefore be meaningless.

In Department of the Navy, Pentagon, A/SLMR No. 924, the Assistant Secretary, although finding a violation of the Order based on a failure to bargain about the implementation a "contracting out" decision refrained from ordering status quo ante relief. In so deciding the Assistant Secretary balanced the competing interests of the parties and concluded that "the potential disruption of Respondent's operations that would be created by such an order outweighs the need for a status quo ante remedy in this matter." Department of Navy, Pentagon, supra, at page 5.

In the subject case the record fails to indicate any "potential disruption of the Respondent's operation" if a status quo ante remedy were applied in the subject case.

Accordingly, the only meaningful remedy in the subject case is to require, the IRS, with respect to the Douglas grievance, to rescind its changed policy and to require the Regional Commissioner to review the arbitrator's advisory opinion.

An argument could be made that since the District Office committed the unfair labor practice, the remedial order must run against that organization and not its parent. However this argument must be rejected where a subsidiary organization commits the unfair labor practice and the only meaningful remedy available would be against the parent organization. After all, under the Order it is the "Agency" that has the ultimate responsibility for bargaining with the collective bargaining representative and the District Office and its officials are agents of the parent IRS and the IRS must be held accountable and responsible for the actions of its agents and subsidiaries. To hold otherwise would be to "draw artificial distinctions between organizational levels of such agency management..." and would clearly violate the spirit and aims of the Order as interpreted by the Federal Labor Relations Council in Naval Air Rework Facility, Pensacola, Florida, et al A/SLMR No. 608, FLRC No. 76A-37 (May 4, 1977).

UNITED STATES DEPARTMENT OF LABOR
ASSISTANT SECRETARY FOR LABOR-MANAGEMENT RELATIONS
SUMMARY OF SECOND SUPPLEMENTAL DECISION
OF THE ASSISTANT SECRETARY
PURSUANT TO SECTION 6 OF EXECUTIVE ORDER 11491, AS AMENDED

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
PASSPORT OFFICE,
CHICAGO PASSPORT AGENCY,
CHICAGO, ILLINOIS
A/SLMR No. 1108

On August 11, 1976, the Assistant Secretary issued his Decision and Direction of Election in the above-captioned case finding that the petitioned for unit was appropriate for the purpose of exclusive recognition under the Order. Thereafter, on March 4, 1977, the Federal Labor Relations Council (Council), before determining whether to accept or deny the Activity's petition for review in the instant case, remanded the subject case to the Assistant Secretary for clarification in light of the principles enunciated by the Council in its consolidated DCASR decision.

On November 7, 1977, the Assistant Secretary issued a Supplemental Decision and Remand finding that the record did not provide an adequate basis upon which to make affirmative determinations regarding effective dealings and efficiency of agency operations as required by the Council. Accordingly, he remanded the case to the appropriate Regional Administrator for the purpose of reopening the record to secure additional evidence, including evidence regarding seven specific factors relating to effective dealings and efficiency of agency operations.

Under all of the circumstances of this case, including the rationale and finding contained in A/SLMR No. 697 with regard to the employees in the claimed unit sharing a clear and identifiable community of interest, the Assistant Secretary reaffirmed the previous finding that the petitioned for unit was appropriate for the purpose of exclusive recognition under the Order. In reaching this determination, the Assistant Secretary weighed what he considered to be valid considerations as to whether the proposed unit would promote effective dealings. In his view, the fact that personnel and labor relations policies are established at the Headquarters level is outweighed by the personnel authority given to, or effectively recommended by, the Agent-In-Charge (AIC) at the petitioned for Activity level unit. In this regard, it was noted that the AIC had been delegated substantial authority in matters concerning local working conditions and that in certain other matters, where specific personnel authority had not been delegated down to the Activity level, his personnel action recommendations concerning such matters had been adopted, with few exceptions, by Headquarters. Thus, the Assistant Secretary found that bargaining at the Activity level over matters of particular concern to employees at that level, including other personnel matters effectively recommended by the AIC, will promote effective dealings. In addition, the Assistant Secretary, noting that the concentration of negotiation expertise at the Headquarters level and the current lack of such expertise at the Activity level was not expected to change regardless of the type of unit found appropriate, found that when the need arises such expertise would be provided by the Headquarters to the Activity level and that such an arrangement may result in less overtime and cost to the Agency since the certification of activitywide units will alleviate the possible need to negotiate both a master and supplemental local agreements.

With regard to efficiency of agency operations, the evidence established that travel costs for the Agency's negotiating team could be less for the petitioned for unit than for a nationwide unit, no unusual labor relations training costs would be incurred, and additional labor relations staff would not be required. Moreover, the Agency has currently two other exclusively represented bargaining units and did not allege that such recognitions have failed to promote the efficiency of its operations.

Finally, the Assistant Secretary noted that the Activity and similarly situated offices are the only organizational level in the Passport Office below the National Office level and can be compared to regional offices in other agencies. In this regard, he stated that although the finding of a nationwide unit in all cases would result in reduced fragmentation, such a determination, based on reduced fragmentation alone, was, in his view, inappropriate and would not effectuate the purposes of the Order, where, as here, a bargaining unit of employees in an organizational entity immediately below the national level fully meets each of the three criteria of Section 10(b) and would be deemed appropriate.

Accordingly, the Assistant Secretary reaffirmed the decision in A/SLMR No. 697.

SECOND SUPPLEMENTAL DECISION

On August 11, 1976, the Assistant Secretary issued his Decision and Direction of Election in the above-captioned case in 6 A/SLMR 448, A/SLMR No. 697 (1976), finding that the petitioned for unit was appropriate for the purpose of exclusive recognition under the Order. 1/ Thereafter, on March 4, 1977, the Federal Labor Relations Council (Council), before determining whether to accept or deny the Activity's petition for review in the instant case, remanded the subject case to the Assistant Secretary for clarification in light of the principles enunciated by the Council in its consolidated Defense Supply Agency, Defense Contract Administration Services Region (DCASR) decision. 2/

1/ Pursuant to the Decision and Direction of Election in A/SLMR No. 697, a Certification of Representative was issued to the American Federation of Government Employees, AFL-CIO, Local 3671.

2/ Defense Supply Agency, Defense Contract Administration Services Region (DCASR), San Francisco, California, Defense Contract Administration Services District (DCASD), Salt Lake City, Utah, FLRC No. 75A-14; Defense Supply Agency, Defense Contract Administration Services Region, San Francisco, FLRC No. 75A-128; and Defense Supply Agency, Defense Contract Administration Services Region (DCASR), San Francisco, Defense Contract Administration Services District, (DCASD) Seattle, Washington, FLRC No. 76A-4.

Thereafter, on November 7, 1977, the Assistant Secretary issued a Supplemental Decision and Remand in A/SLMR No. 929 (1977), finding that the record did not provide an adequate basis upon which to make affirmative determinations regarding effective dealings and efficiency of agency operations as required by the Council. Accordingly, he remanded the case to the appropriate Regional Administrator for the purpose of reopening the record to secure additional evidence, including evidence regarding seven specific factors relating to effective dealings and efficiency of agency operations. A hearing subsequently was held before Hearing Officer B. W. Hogancamp. The Hearing Officer's rulings made at the hearing are free from prejudicial error and are hereby affirmed.

Upon the entire record in the subject case, including the facts developed at both hearings in this matter, and the briefs filed by the Activity and the American Federation of Government Employees, AFL-CIO, Local 3671, the Assistant Secretary finds:

The Department of State, hereinafter called Agency, has consistently asserted in the proceedings involved herein that the petitioned for unit is not appropriate for the purpose of exclusive recognition because it would not promote effective dealings and efficiency of agency operations. It contends that the only appropriate unit would include all eligible employees of the Agency. In the alternative, the Agency indicated that it would accept, as appropriate, a unit consisting of all eligible employees in the Passport Office of the Agency.

For the purpose of developing a complete record and one which would allow a careful and thorough analysis of evidentiary considerations regarding the effective dealings and efficiency of agency operations criteria, the Assistant Secretary, in his Supplemental Decision and Remand, indicated that evidence should be developed concerning, but not limited to, the below noted seven specific factors. The following evidence in this regard was received:

1. The past collective bargaining experience of the Activity and Agency.

There has been no history of bargaining within the Chicago Passport Agency, hereinafter called Activity; however, the record discloses that within the Agency there are two Civil Service employee bargaining units. One unit is located in the School of Language Studies of the Foreign Service Institute in the Washington, D.C., area, and consists of approximately 180 General Schedule (GS) excepted service language instructors. Two agreements have been negotiated for this unit since exclusive recognition was granted in 1971. The other unit is in the Publishing and Reproduction Branch of the Bureau of Administration, located in Washington, D.C., and consists of approximately 125 Wage Grade (WG) and GS employees. One agreement has been negotiated for this unit since exclusive recognition was granted in 1971.

2. The locus and scope of authority of the responsible Personnel Office administering personnel policies with regard to employees in the claimed unit.

The Agency's Bureau of Personnel establishes personnel policy for all employees of the Agency and has final administrative authority over personnel actions for Passport Office employees. At the Activity level, an Agent-In-Charge, hereinafter called AIC, implements personnel policies and makes recommendations on personnel actions which are forwarded to the Agency's Bureau of Personnel for approval. According to the Agency, if the unit sought were found to be appropriate for the purpose of exclusive recognition under the Order, no change in the delegation of authority in personnel matters is contemplated.

3. The limitations, if any, on the negotiation of matters of critical concern to employees in the claimed unit, and how these concerns differ from other employees of the Agency.

The record reveals that the Activity's AIC exercises discretionary authority in matters concerning such local working conditions as when employees have their work breaks and lunch periods, employees' starting and quitting times, scheduling employees' annual leave, and procedures for rotating the Duty Officer assignment. In other personnel matters, such as promotions, overtime, travel, awards, hiring at the GS-7 level and below, formal discipline, layoffs, training, and position descriptions, the Activity's AIC forwards his recommendation to the Bureau of Personnel for approval. Although final approval for personnel actions is with the Bureau of Personnel, the evidence establishes that since March 1976, of the approximately 50 personnel action recommendations forwarded by the Activity's AIC, all were adopted; and in the past nine years, 96 percent of such recommendations have been adopted.

4. The availability of personnel with expertise in labor relations matters at the level of the claimed unit in comparison to that of a more comprehensive unit.

Labor relations personnel, located in the Bureau of Personnel in Washington, D.C., are authorized to handle all labor relations matters for the Agency's Passport Office. The Agency indicates that no labor relations personnel would be assigned to the Activity if the unit sought were found to be appropriate. Further, the labor relations staff would not be increased if the petitioned for unit, or a nationwide unit, were found to be appropriate.

5. The level at which labor relations policy is set in the Activity and Agency, and the effectuation of Agency training in the implementation of negotiated agreements and grievance procedures covering employees in bargaining units as compared with the claimed unit and/or a more comprehensive unit.

Labor relations policy for the entire Passport Office is established by the Agency's Deputy Under-Secretary for State for Management. According to the Agency, the AIC of an Activity level Passport Office would receive labor relations training in implementing and administering a negotiated agreement regardless of whether the claimed unit, or a nationwide unit, were found to be appropriate. In this connection, the record reveals that during the past year the Activity's AIC has taken two labor relations courses provided by the Civil Service Commission.

6. Benefits to be derived from a unit structure which bears a relationship to the operational and organizational structure of the Agency.

A nationwide unit would result in a uniform policy nationally, and the potential for inconsistencies among the Activity level offices regarding local issues would be less in a unit structure which followed the centralized operational and organizational structure of the Agency. However, an Activity level unit could handle local personnel problems more expeditiously and possibly alleviate the need for supplemental local agreements which the parties could deem necessary if the nationwide unit were found to be the only appropriate unit.

7. Impact of the claimed unit on Agency operations in terms of cost, productivity and use of resources, as compared to the impact of a more comprehensive unit.

Agency costs involved in negotiating in the claimed unit could be less than those involved in negotiating in a nationwide unit urged by the Agency. In this regard, Headquarters labor relations personnel would travel to Chicago to negotiate an agreement for the claimed unit, whereas for a nationwide unit, the AICs of the Activity level offices might have to travel to Washington, D.C., as part of the Agency's negotiating team. In the case of a nationwide unit, additional travel by Agency personnel to the field might be necessary in order to negotiate local supplemental agreements to the national negotiated agreement. With respect to the costs of labor relations training, the AICs would receive such training regardless of which type of unit is found to be appropriate, as the record reveals that the Agency encourages the AICs to take such training as part of their management development.

Under all of the circumstances of this case, including the rationale and findings contained in A/SLMR No. 697 with regard to the employees in the claimed unit sharing a clear and identifiable community of interest, and having given equal weight to the three criteria set forth in Section 10(b) of the Order, I reaffirm the previous finding that the petitioned for unit is appropriate for the purpose of exclusive recognition under Executive Order 11491, as amended. In weighing what I consider to be valid considerations as to whether the proposed unit would promote effective dealings within the Agency, as indicated above, I have considered, among other things, the locus and scope of personnel authority, limitations on the negotiation of matters of critical concern to employees at the level of the petitioned for unit, the availability of negotiation expertise, experience of this Agency in other bargaining units, and the level at which labor relations policy is set in the Agency. In my view, the fact that personnel and labor relations policies are established at the Headquarters level is, in the particular circumstances of this case, outweighed by the personnel authority delegated to the AIC at the petitioned for Activity level unit as well as the evidence of the effectiveness of his recommendations in personnel matters. In this regard, it is noted that the AIC has been delegated substantial authority in matters concerning local working conditions, such as starting and quitting times, break and lunch periods, procedures for rotating Duty Officer assignments, and the scheduling of employee annual leave. Further, in certain other matters such as promotions, overtime, travel, awards, hiring at the GS-7 level and below, formal discipline, layoffs, training, and position descriptions, where specific personnel authority has not been delegated down to the Activity level, it appears clear from the record that, with few exceptions, all personnel action recommendations forwarded by the Activity's AIC concerning such matters are adopted by Headquarters. Thus, in weighing the locus of personnel and labor relations authority in the Agency against the scope of such authority exercised or effectively recommended at the AIC level, I find that, under the circumstances of this case, bargaining at the Activity level over the many matters of particular concern to employees at that level will promote effective dealings.

Of course, in reaching my determination herein, I am not unmindful of the concentration of negotiation expertise at the Headquarters level and the current lack of such expertise at the Activity level. The record reveals, however, that regardless of whether a nationwide or an activitywide bargaining unit is found appropriate, the distribution of labor negotiation expertise is not expected to change and, if necessary, on occasions when the need arises such expertise will be provided by the Headquarters to the Activity level. In addition, from record testimony, it appears that the procedure of providing labor negotiation expertise to the Activity level may, in fact, result in less overtime and cost to the Agency with the establishment of activitywide units since the certification of such units will alleviate the possible need to negotiate both a master and supplemental local agreements. Additionally, it appears as part of the ongoing Agency training program, regardless of the unit found appropriate, AICs are receiving, and will continue to receive, labor relations training.

With respect to efficiency of agency operations, the evidence establishes that if the petitioned for unit is found appropriate, the travel costs for the Agency's negotiating team could be less than for a nationwide unit, no unusual labor relations training costs would be incurred, and additional labor relations staff would not be required. Moreover, the Agency has currently two other exclusively represented bargaining units and does not allege that such recognitions have failed to promote the efficiency of its operations. Accordingly, based on a balanced consideration of the stated factors, I find that the petitioned for unit meets the three criteria of Section 10(b) of the Order in that the employees in the petitioned for unit share a clear and identifiable community of interest and that said unit will promote effective dealings and efficiency of agency operations.

Left to be considered, however, is whether the petitioned for activitywide unit would be consistent with the policy of the Order of preventing and reducing fragmentation. The Activity herein is at an organizational level immediately below the National Office of the Passport Office, and the AIC in each of the 13 local offices, including the Activity, reports directly to the Director of the Passport Office, located in Washington, D.C. In point of reference, the Activity and similarly situated offices are the only organizational level in the Passport Office below the National Office level and can be compared to regional offices in other agencies. Although the finding of a nationwide unit in all cases will result in reduced fragmentation, in my view, such a determination, based on reduced fragmentation alone, is inappropriate and would not effectuate the purposes of the Order, where, as here, a bargaining unit of employees in an organizational entity immediately below the national level fully meets each of the three criteria of Section 10(b) and would be deemed appropriate.

Accordingly, under these circumstances, having given equal weight to the three criteria in Section 10(b) of the Order, I reaffirm the decision in A/SLMR No. 697 and find that the following unit is appropriate for the purpose of exclusive recognition under Executive Order 11491, as amended:

All employees, including "temporary" and "seasonal" personnel, of the Department of State, Passport Office, Chicago Passport Agency, Chicago, Illinois, excluding management officials, professional employees, employees engaged in Federal personnel work in other than a purely clerical capacity, confidential employees, and supervisors as defined in the Order.

ASSISTANT SECRETARY FOR LABOR-MANAGEMENT RELATIONS
SUMMARY OF DECISION AND ORDER OF THE ASSISTANT SECRETARY
PURSUANT TO SECTION 6 OF EXECUTIVE ORDER 11491, AS AMENDED

DEPARTMENT OF HEALTH, EDUCATION AND WELFARE, REGION VIII REGIONAL OFFICE
A/SLMR No. 1109

This case involved an unfair labor practice complaint filed by the American Federation of Government Employees, Local 1802, AFL-CIO (Complainant) alleging that the Respondent violated Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order by refusing the Complainant access to the materials utilized by a ranking panel in its evaluation of candidates for several merit promotion positions. The Complainant sought the information in connection with the processing of a grievance by an employee who had not been selected. The Respondent did furnish some material in response to the Complainant's initial request, but asserted that any further disclosure was barred by the Freedom of Information Act and the Privacy Act.

The Administrative Law Judge concluded that the Respondent was obligated to provide the information sought herein, which he found to be relevant and necessary to the performance of the Complainant's representational functions, and that its failure to provide such information was violative of Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order. He further concluded that the documents initially supplied were of no value to the Complainant, and that the subsequent disclosure of additional information some eight months later did not constitute good faith compliance with the Executive Order.

The Assistant Secretary adopted the Administrative Law Judge's findings, conclusions and recommendations. In this regard, he noted particularly that the Federal Labor Relations Council (Council) has indicated that there are no statutory or regulatory prohibitions precluding disclosure of such material, in appropriate form, to an exclusive representative, and that a Federal Personnel Manual letter issued by the Civil Service Commission concerning such disclosure, among other things, instructed agencies to look to the Council's determination for guidance. The Assistant Secretary further noted that the Respondent's subsequent disclosure of additional information did not serve to cure the violation, particularly in view of the fact that the Respondent's failure to provide the information, in effect, precluded the Complainant from intelligently processing the grievance through the negotiated grievance/arbitration procedure. Accordingly, the Assistant Secretary ordered that the Respondent cease and desist from the violative conduct found herein, and that it take certain affirmative actions.

DECISION AND ORDER

On June 8, 1978, Administrative Law Judge Steven E. Halpern issued his Recommended Decision and Order in the above-entitled proceeding, finding that the Respondent had engaged in the unfair labor practices alleged in the complaint and recommending that it cease and desist therefrom and take certain affirmative actions as set forth in the attached Administrative Law Judge's Recommended Decision and Order. Thereafter, the Respondent filed exceptions and a supporting brief with respect to the Administrative Law Judge's Recommended Decision and Order.

The Assistant Secretary has reviewed the rulings of the Administrative Law Judge made at the hearing and finds that no prejudicial error was committed. The rulings are hereby affirmed. Upon consideration of the Administrative Law Judge's Recommended Decision and Order and the entire record in this case, including the exceptions and supporting brief filed by the Respondent, I hereby adopt the Administrative Law Judge's findings, conclusions and recommendations.

The Administrative Law Judge found, and I agree, that the Respondent violated Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order by failing to provide information which was necessary and relevant to the Complainant in the performance of the latter's representational functions in connection with the processing of a grievance concerning the exclusion of an employee from a promotion eligibility list. 1/ In reaching this conclusion, the Administrative Law Judge found that the materials which were initially furnished by the Respondent in response to the Complainant's request for the "promotion package" for the vacancy announcement were essentially of no value. He further found that the Complainant was entitled to additional information contained in the promotion package (which the Respondent refused to provide because of alleged statutory prohibitions) as such evaluation materials utilized in the course of the selection process are necessary and relevant for the processing of such a grievance as is at issue herein. I agree. 2/

In this connection, it is noted that in Department of Defense, State of New Jersey, 3 FLRC 284, FLRC No. 73A-59 (May 22, 1975), the Federal Labor Relations Council stated that:

"... applicable laws and regulations, including policies set forth in the Federal Personnel Manual, do not specifically preclude the Respondent from disclosing to the grievant (or his representative), in the context of a grievance proceeding, certain relevant and necessary information used by the evaluation panel in assessing the qualifications of the...candidates for appointment."

It is further noted that the Civil Service Commission has indicated in FPM Letter 711-126 3/, Section 4-Official Personnel Folder and Section 5-Performance Appraisals, that properly sanitized personnel forms and performance appraisals may be made available to an employee or his union representative, and advises agencies to look to FLRC No. 73A-59, cited above, for guidance on disclosure of other personnel records pertaining to the promotion process.

Under these circumstances, I find that the promotion package sought by the Complainant should have been supplied in appropriate form, and that the Respondent's failure to do so was violative of the Order.

1/ The Respondent did not except to the Administrative Law Judge's finding that Section 19(d) of the Order did not preclude consideration of this matter under the unfair labor practice procedures of the Order.

2/ See Department of the Navy, Long Beach Naval Shipyard, Long Beach, California, 6 A/SLMR 541, A/SLMR No. 728 (1976), and Department of the Treasury, Internal Revenue Service, Milwaukee District, Milwaukee, Wisconsin, A/SLMR No. 974 (1978)

3/ "Guidance for Agencies in Disclosing Information, Covered Under the Freedom of Information Act and the Privacy Act, to Labor Organizations Recognized Under Executive Order 11636 and 11491, as Amended" (December 30, 1976).

Moreover, I do not view the Respondent's subsequent disclosure of additional information at the hearing in this matter, and its indication that other materials would be forthcoming, as curing the violation found herein. Thus, in agreement with the Administrative Law Judge, I find that compliance with an exclusive representative's request for necessary and relevant information must occur in such a manner that the exclusive representative's representational rights under the Executive Order are not prejudiced. In my view, the Respondent's belated offer to provide the requested information to the Complainant did not serve to cure its violative conduct eight months earlier, which, in effect, had precluded the Complainant from intelligently pursuing the instant grievance through the parties' negotiated grievance/arbitration procedure. 4/

Accordingly, by refusing to provide, in a timely manner, the necessary and relevant information sought by the Complainant herein, I find that the Respondent violated Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order.

ORDER

Pursuant to Section 6(b) of Executive Order 11491, and Section 203.26(b) of the Regulations, the Assistant Secretary of Labor for Labor-Management Relations hereby orders that the Department of Health, Education and Welfare, Region VIII Regional Office, shall:

(b) In any like or related manner, interfering with, restraining, or coercing employees in the exercise of their rights assured by Executive Order 11491, as amended.

2. Take the following affirmative actions in order to effectuate the purposes and policies of Executive Order 11491, as amended:

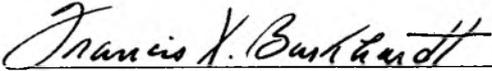

(a) Post at each of its facilities at which employees represented by the American Federation of Government Employees, Local 1802, AFL-CIO

RECOMMENDED DECISION AND ORDER

STATEMENT OF THE CASE

This proceeding under Executive Order 11491, as amended, was initiated by Complaint filed October 5, 1977, with an amended Complaint having been filed January 6, 1978. Pursuant to Notice of Hearing issued on January 30, 1978, by the Regional Administrator, United States Department of Labor, Labor-Management Services Administration, Kansas City Region, a hearing was held at Denver, Colorado, on March 1, 1978. Thereafter the parties filed supplemental materials and briefs; the record closed on April 27, 1978, upon receipt of the Respondent's brief.

Respondent is charged with having violated Section 19(a)(1) and (6). The factual basis on which the Complaint is premised is set forth therein as follows:

In order to process a grievance filed by a member of the bargaining unit, AFGE Local 1802 requested information regarding a promotion action. The information was necessary primarily to determine if a grievance actually existed. The name of the grievant is Willie McWashington. The Civil Service Commission issued FPM letter 711-126 Dec. 30, 1976, in which it authorized Agencies to process information to Exclusive Representatives as a routine user of information normally protected under the Privacy Act. Instead of processing the desired information under the routine user concept, management decided to process the information as a part of the Freedom of Information which does not provide the same information as would have been provided as a routine user. In fact, under the Freedom of Information act, the Union obtains very little information as it is designed only to protect the public's right to know. The routine user concept comes as a matter of right under E.O. 11491 as amended. The Union is estopped from pursuing the grievance to arbitration as it does not have sufficient information upon which to proceed.

The parties have been afforded full opportunity to be heard, to adduce evidence, to examine and cross-examine witnesses, to make oral argument and to file briefs. Based upon the evidence of record, having observed the witnesses and assessed their credibility and having considered the arguments of the parties, I make the within findings, conclusions and recommendation.

FINDINGS OF FACT

1. Complainant Union, has, and at all times material hereto had, exclusive recognition as representative of the bargaining unit of which the grievant hereinbelow referred to was a member.

2. In response to a Vacancy Announcement issued by Respondent, Mr. Willie McWashington, then a member of the bargaining unit, filed application for the position of Contact Representative, GS-962-4/5/6.

3. Following Respondent's review and evaluation of the qualifications of the applicants a "Best Qualified" list was prepared on which appeared the names of those applicants determined to be eligible for the seven existing vacancies; five names, not including Mr. McWashington's, appeared on the list.

4. Non-inclusion on said list being a grievable matter a grievance was duly filed, in which action Complainant Union represented Mr. McWashington.

5. Having been unsuccessful through the last step of the established grievance procedure prior to arbitration the union, by letter of July 18, 1977, (Ex. M-4) made the following request of Respondent:

In order for the grievant to make a rational decision whether to accept your response or pursue the grievance to arbitration, we hereby request the promotion package for Announcement No. 77-1, Contact Representative, GS-962-4/5/6. Promotion packages are available to the Union as a routine user per FPM Ltr, 711-126, dated December 31, 1976.

6. Respondent did not furnish the promotion package but instead referred the matter to its department of Public Affairs and on August 4, 1977, the Director of that department responded to the Union's request as follows: (Ex. M-2)

Your memo to the Acting Regional Director (dated July 18, 1977) regarding a grievance filed by Willie McWashington was referred to this office because the request falls under the provisions of the Freedom of Information Act (5 U.S.C. 552) and the Privacy Act, (5 U.S.C. 552a).

In your memo you requested "the promotion package for Announcement No. 77-1, Contact Representative, GS-952-4/5/6."

Records and documents bearing on your request are enclosed. We are withholding from you copies of complete SF-171s on individuals under the authority of 5 U.S.C. 552(b)(6) which permits agencies to withhold from the public "personnel and medical files and similar files the disclosure of which would constitute a clearly unwarranted invasion of personal privacy." Under the same exemption, certain deletions have been made from the records and documents being provided you. These include deletions of Social Security numbers, home addresses and telephone numbers, and (in some cases) other identifying information.

You have the right to appeal this determination within 30 days of your receipt of this letter (5 U.S.C. 552(a) and 45 CFR, Part 5, Subpart G.). Any appeal must be in writing and should be addressed to:

Assistant Secretary for Management and Budget
Department of Health, Education, and Welfare
200 Independence Avenue, S.W.
Washington, D.C. 20201

Any such appeal should follow the procedures outlined in Subpart G of the enclosed regulations. You should mark the envelope "Freedom of Information Appeal." (emphasis supplied)

7. Being dissatisfied with the information furnished, 1/ Complainant, in accordance with the foregoing

1/ Pursuant to a ruling made at hearing Complainant subsequently supplied some (but not all) of the materials initially furnished to it by Respondent pursuant to its original request for the promotion package. Said materials, consisting of 10 pages, together with Complainant's cover letter are received in evidence as Exhibit U-8.

Respondent has neither commented on these items nor supplemented them; accordingly I assume that they are representative of all the materials originally furnished to Complainant and I find that they are essentially of no value in determining whether or not Mr. McWashington was fairly rated in relation to the other applicants or whether his application was properly rated in relation to the evaluation criteria.

instructions, by letter of August 16, 1977, to the Assistant Secretary for Management and Budget, took the following action: (Ex. M-3)

SUBJECT: Freedom of Information Act Appeal

During the process of representing a grievant, by memorandum dated July 18, 1977 I requested under FPM Ltr 711-126 dated 12/21/76 the promotion package for Announcement No. 77-1, Contact Representative, GS-962-4/5/6, (7 vacancies). The FPM Ltr designates the Union as a "routine user" and states that "neither the language of the Act, nor its legislative history, establish that Congress intended to preclude disclosure to recognized labor organization of relevant and necessary information under the Federal Labor-Management Relations Program."

The Labor Relations Officer, on his own initiative, requested the subject promotion package under the FOIA. Subsequently, I received the following documents:

- Candidate Referral Notice (names deleted)
- Ranking Sheet (names deleted)
- Weight & Factor Sheet for each applicant (names deleted)
- Appraisal for each applicant (names and ratings (on some) deleted)
- 1st page of SF-171 for a few applicants (identifiable factors deleted)
- SSA-4100 for a few applicants (identifiable factors deleted)

The agency omitted form SF-171 under 5 U.S.C. 552 (b)(6) which according to them "permits agencies to withhold from the public 'personnel... files the disclosure of which would constitute a clearly unwarranted invasion of personal privacy'." (See copy of agency ltr attached and Federal Times article re Judge Gerhard Gesell's decision.) Also note that as the "loser's" representative I was denied the complete promotion package of the seven selectees.

The Union contends it is not the general public and that it was the intent of Congress to include promotion packages in the General Personnel Records System. To uphold this agency's interpretation of the FOIA would, in effect, deny to the Union an essential element to efforts of employees and their representatives to obtain justice in cases involving grievances and appeals.

Local 1802, AFGE, requests that the promotion package for Announcement No. 77-1, Contact Representative GS-962-4/5/6 be provided the Union to the fullest extent permitted by law.

8. Because of an apparent time limitation in proceeding to arbitration Complainant, on August 12, 1977, wrote the following to the Special Assistant to Respondent's Acting Regional Director: (Ex. U-2)

In view of the fact that there is no way I can determine whether there is valid grievance with the material that has been given to me in accordance with our request as a routine user under FPM Letter 711-126, I request an indefinite extension of time from receipt of the third-step decision within which to refer the subject grievance to arbitration.

The Union believes you have incorrectly applied the FOIA. We object very strenuously to your unilaterally invoking the FOIA, first, because it was not required since we are not in the category of the general public, and second, because it is not a part of FPM 711-126.

An FLRC decision which precedes FPM 711-126 states the Union has a right to see promotion packages under the Executive Order in order to process grievances. The Civil Service Commission has the right to determine who is a routine user. FPM 711-126 declares the Union to be a routine user under the Privacy Act. Since we are not in the category of the general public and the FOIA has nothing to do with FPM 711-126 rights under the Executive Order, your invocation of the FOIA denies us an essential element which is our right. We again ask for the promotion package as a routine user under FPM 711-126.

Because of the pending grievance, in order to protect the rights of the grievant, it is imperative that the Union receive the promotion package or written basis for its denial within two weeks.

9. By letter of August 18, 1977, Complainant's request for an extension of time was denied and Respondent's position that it was properly processing the request for information was reiterated: (Ex. U-3).

We find that our actions are consistent with our responsibilities under FOIA and the Privacy Act, and that the information released was in accordance with FPM Letter 711-126. As you are aware, you may appeal our decision in this matter under the provisions of the FOIA.

I cannot agree to any extension of the time limit for proceeding to arbitration on Mr. Mc Washington's grievance. We considered the grievance carefully at each level and we provided you information concerning the promotion package (in accord with our perception of FOIA requirements) 2/ in good faith. While I understood that you would like more information, we can only release what we believe to be appropriate under FOIA. 3/ Our contract provides for arbitration when the parties fail to resolve matters of this nature. It should be noted that the final decision (my memo of July 29, 1977) responded to the questions raised by the grievance. Mr. Mc Washington was concerned that specific portions of his experience, education, and training were overlooked. My personal inquiry determined that all three elements had been considered. The whole point in this matter is that the grievant is dissatisfied with the result of the panel's work and my determination. I have answered the questions about what was considered by the panel (as regards the grievant). Any further questions must be resolved through a review of our work in examining the questions raised and the responses provided. If you find these procedures wanting, you must proceed as you see fit.

3/ Emphasis supplied.

10. On August 23, 1977, the union filed a pre-complaint charge of an unfair labor practice based upon Respondent's failure to furnish the promotion package. In its October 19, 1977, reply thereto Respondent indicated that a HEW Headquarters decision on the Union's FOIA appeal "is expected very soon and we will abide by that decision." (Ex. U-4)

11. Not until March 1, 1978, at the hearing in this matter, was Complainant given any indication of the status of its FOIA "appeal". At that time counsel for Respondent advised that certain additional information would be released, and placed in the record as evidence thereof summaries of information apparently derived from the Standard Forms 171 of the five successful applicants. (Ex. M-4).

12. Not until March 14, 1978, was Complainant officially advised of the disposition of its August 16, 1977, FOIA "appeal" and of its right to appeal the agency's final action to the district court, (attachment 2 of Respondent's brief). It appears that Respondent now stands ready to furnish a substantial portion of the materials originally requested.

13. It further appears that the grievance filed on behalf of Mr. McWashington has long since been withdrawn because of his "departure" to accept employment with another Federal Agency.

CONCLUSIONS

The central issues herein arise out of Complainant Union's request for certain information to assist in its representation of a grievant and Respondent's failure to provide that information in view of privacy considerations.

The precepts controlling the resolution of the issues thus raised are evolved in a line of cases extending from major policy issue decisions of the Council in National Labor Relations Board and David A. Nixon, FLRC No. 73A-53 (October 31, 1974) and Department of Defense, State of New Jersey and National Army and Air Technicians Association, I.U.E., AFL-CIO, FLRC No. 73A-59 (May 22, 1975) through recent decisions of the Assistant Secretaries in Department of the Treasury, Internal Revenue Service, Milwaukee District, Milwaukee, Wisconsin, A/SLMR No. 974 (January 27, 1978) and Internal Revenue Service, Chicago District Office, A/SLMR No. 1004 (March 9, 1978).

In its current status the case law in the Federal sector requires activity management to provide an exclusive representative with information it seeks which is necessary and relevant for the performance of its representational functions; and evaluation materials utilized by the activity in the course of a selection process have been deemed necessary and relevant to the effective processing of a grievance which questions the selection process. The right to privacy of any individual whose records may thus be disclosed is considered satisfied by concealment of his/her identity and the removal from the records of any sensitive or damaging personal material - a so called "sanitizing" process.

Because of its possible applicability here, in view of the small number of individuals whose records are involved, I note that the Assistant Secretary has further found privacy considerations to be satisfied even when the identity of the individual cannot be concealed, so long as any sensitive or damaging personal material is omitted. In A/SLMR No. 1004, supra, the Assistant Secretary held as follows:

On July 29, 1976, Vacancy Announcement 76-79 was posted for a position as an Audit Accounting Aide, GS-4, in the Respondent's Waukegan, Illinois, facility. There were three applicants. Two were found to be highly qualified, and one of these two candidates, Ms. Bonita Howe, was selected. The Complainant requested the evaluation material considered by the ranking panel in the course of this selection. The request was made in connection with the Complainant's duty to represent the employees in the unit. The Respondent declined to supply the materials, as noted above, on the ground that since there were only two individuals involved, sanitization would not protect the privacy of the selected candidate. Subsequently, a grievance was filed by the Complainant on behalf of Ms. Fredericks pursuant to the parties' negotiated grievance procedure, the grievance was carried to the fourth step, and arbitration was then invoked.

In Department of the Treasury, Internal Revenue Service, Milwaukee, Wisconsin, A/SLMR No. 974 (1178), I found that an employee's right to privacy of his records must be balanced against the conflicting rights in each case. And where, as here, the conflicting rights are broad and involve the paramount public interest of an exclusive representative's right to adequately perform its representational functions, of having the Federal government operate within its merit promotion system equitably, and of encouraging the use of non-disruptive grievance procedures, I have determined that the mere identification of the subject of certain documents is not a violation of privacy so significant as to bar disclosure of the material and that the identified employee(s) would still have the right to have the documents sanitized so as to omit any sensitive or damaging personal material.

Under these circumstances, I conclude that the information sought herein, which I find to be necessary and relevant to the performance of the Complainant's representational function, should have been disclosed to the Complainant. Accordingly, by refusing to make available to the Complainant the evaluation material used in connection with the selection for promotion made pursuant to Vacancy Announcement 76-79, I find that the Respondent violated Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order.

FREEDOM OF INFORMATION ACT AND PRIVACY ACT

Much attention has been devoted by the parties to Freedom of Information Act and Privacy Act considerations.

Complainant contends that as a Union it is a "routine user" and therefore is entitled to the requested information under the Privacy Act. Respondent concedes that Complainant Union is a "routine user" under the Privacy Act but asserts that the information requested was not reachable under that Act since it was not contained in a "system of records" as contemplated therein; and contends on the contrary that the Freedom of Information Act alone is controlling, under which the requested records may be disclosed only if such would not result in a "clearly unwarranted invasion of privacy."

Notwithstanding the several contentions of the parties it is evident from the aforementioned decision that a resolution of the respective rights and obligations of the parties under said Acts is not determinative of the Unfair Labor Practice charged in this Executive Order proceeding. The decision of the Assistant Secretary in A/SLMR No. 1008, supra, was made upon a factual situation similar to the one in the instant case in the material particulars and must be viewed as having been decided under and subject to the various laws (regulations, et cetera) in existence at the time, bearing upon privacy considerations, which were likewise in existence at all material times in the instant case. Thus, in full contemplation of the implications of those various laws, the Assistant Secretary has in essence established that Complainant Union's right to information (relevant and necessary to its representation of a bargaining unit employee in a grievance proceeding) emanates from the Executive Order, and stands independent of rights arising under the Freedom of Information and Privacy Acts. Moreover, it is held that an activity which provides such information only pursuant to a FOIA request is in violation of the Executive Order. 5/

Insofar as other applicable regulations and laws, including the FOIA and Privacy Act, may have a prohibitory or restrictive effect, the activity in considering such must do so in a manner and within a time frame consistent with the Union's Executive Order status. Obviously in the case before me Respondent did not thus comport itself in that as a result of the procedures it employed in processing the request for information Complainant Union was foreclosed from effectively representing the grievant. The eight-month interval between Complainant's request for the records and the ultimate formal notification to the Union that (apparently) meaningful records would be furnished, patently is not reasonable; and, the ultimate determination to turn over the records to the Union, solely because the Freedom of Information Act required them to be furnished, is in denigration of Respondent's Executive Order rights.

FOIA COMPLIANCE

In addition to the materials originally supplied to Complainant under the provisions of the FOIA, Respondent now stands ready to produce additional materials it now concedes are disclosable under that Act.

5/ Department of the Treasury, Internal Revenue Service, Greenbars District Office, A/SLMR No. 1007.

Having reviewed a representative sampling of the data initially furnished I have found it to be of little if any use. Since I have been shown neither the entire promotion package requested by Complainant nor copies of all of the materials which Respondent now concedes must be supplied, I am unable to determine whether or not the latter constitute all of the materials to which Complainant is entitled under the Executive Order; nor is such determination required in this adjudication since the present disclosure of records, to whatever degree, some eight months after the request, is not timely and does not constitute good faith compliance with the Executive Order. This becomes most clear when viewed in the context that Complainant was time-barred from proceeding to arbitration from the third grievance step (for which purpose it required the requested records) and that Respondent refused to grant an extension of time pending final agency determination of Complainant's FOIA entitlement to records. Moreover, and of overriding significance, is that no disclosure whatsoever has been made or offered except under FOIA provisions; all Executive Order rights have been ignored. Certainly Complainant's request to be furnished with the information as a "routine user" constituted an assertion of its right to the information as a union generally, not only within the context of the Privacy Act but under the Executive Order as well, and no argument to the contrary has been made.

SECTION 19(d) bar-(grievance)

Respondent contends that Complainant is barred from pursuing this Unfair Labor Practice by section 19(d) of the Executive Order which in pertinent part provides that "Issues which can be raised under a grievance procedure may, in the discretion of the aggrieved party, be raised under that procedure or the complaint procedure under this section, but not under both procedures."

Respondent's failure to disclose the requested documents clearly was not the subject of the filed grievance. Complainant's request for the records made incidental to and in the course of a grievance proceeding does not bar it from raising the access issue in an unfair labor practice context. 6/

6/ Department of the Navy Long Beach Naval Shipyard, Long Beach, California, and American Federation of Technical Engineers, Local 174, A/SLMR No. 728. Internal Revenue Service and IRS, Atlanta District Office, A/SLMR No. 975.

Furthermore, Complainant having requested the records to assist in its determination of whether or not to proceed from grievance step 3 to arbitration, the grievance procedure, for all practical purposes, then ceased. Respondent having determined that it would deal with the request only under the Freedom of Information Act all further consideration of the request was made solely under the FOIA machinery. Respondent having caused the removal of the issue of Complainant's entitlement to the records from the grievance procedure to another forum cannot now be heard to assert this 19(d) defense.

SECTION 19(d) bar-(appeals procedure)

Respondent further contends that there was available, and that Complainant actually used, a FOIA appeals procedure 7/ in its attempt to secure the requested records, as a result of which it is barred from pursuing this Unfair Labor Practice action by that portion of section 19(d) which provides that "Issues which can properly be raised under an appeals procedure may not be raised under this section." For several reasons the defense fails.

First, it does not appear that the issue here presented, whether or not a violation of the Executive Order has taken place by Respondent's failure to produce the requested records, could properly have been raised under the FOIA appeals procedure. In any event Respondent, having asserted the defense, has not carried its burden of showing that such issue could properly have been raised. Stated from a slightly different perspective, Respondent having determined that the Union's only right to the requested records arose under the FOIA, (an act designed to give the public at large greater access to government records), denied the Union access to the requested records on the FOIA ground that their release would constitute an "unwarranted invasion of privacy" of 7/ Respondent does not appear to argue that Complainant is equally barred by an existing Privacy Act appeals procedure; such contention in any event would fail. Respondent at all times was adamant in its position that only the FOIA applied to the request; and, it expressly led Complainant to believe that the only avenue for appeal was under the FOIA. Under these circumstances I would estop Respondent from asserting any Privacy Act appeals procedure to constitute a 19(d) bar.

the individuals whose records were involved. Under Respondent's FOIA procedures that determination was appealable and the appeal was pursued. In no true sense did Complainant have the opportunity, in that "appeal", to litigate the issues of its right to have, and Respondent's obligation to supply, the data pursuant to the Executive Order.

Secondly, it is held as aforesaid that the furnishing of information to which a Union is entitled under the Executive Order, only pursuant to a FOIA request, is violative of the Executive Order. In my view, the interposition of an "appeal" which ultimately results in production of the requested data only pursuant to FOIA provisions, cannot alter that premise.

Question of Mootness

I find no merit in Respondent's contention that the grievant's subsequent acceptance of other Federal employment with the concomitant withdrawal of the grievance, moots the Unfair Labor Practice. I conclude on the contrary that such subsequent events do not vitiate its accountability for failure to give recognition to Complainant's status and the ULP action survives such subsequent events.

Under the circumstances, however, no useful purpose will be served by compelling Respondent presently to furnish the requested records and I shall not recommend to the Assistant Secretary that such affirmative action be required.

CONCLUSIONARY SUMMARY

In short, the treatment accorded the Union in regard to its request for information amounted to non-recognition of its representative status under the Executive Order. It is no defense to this Unfair Labor Practice action that there were laws of an ancillary nature which Respondent may have been bound to consider in connection with the Union's request, such consideration having been made by Respondent in a manner inconsistent with its Executive Order obligations and in derogation of Complainant's Executive Order rights.

Under these circumstances, I conclude that the information sought herein, being relevant and necessary to the performance of Complainant's representational function should have been disclosed to it. Respondent, having failed to make said information available to Complainant, stands in violation of Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order.

The Remedy

Having found that the Respondent has engaged in certain conduct prohibited by section 19(a)(1) and (6) of Executive Order 11491, as amended, I recommend that the Assistant Secretary adopt the order as hereinafter set forth which is designed to effectuate the policies of the Executive Order.

RECOMMENDED ORDER

(a) Refusing to permit the American Federation of Government Employees (AFGE) Local 1802, AFL-CIO, access to such documents and materials as are necessary and relevant to the American Federation of Government Employees Union's processing of a grievance regarding the selection process for any vacancy for which a Vacancy Announcement is posted.

(b) In any like or related manner, interfering with, restraining, or coercing employees in the exercise of their rights assured by Executive Order 11491, as amended.

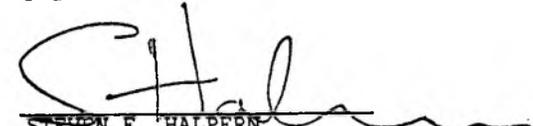

2. Take the following affirmative actions in order to effectuate the purposes and policies of Executive Order 11491, as amended:

(a) Upon request, permit the American Federation of Government Employees (AFGE) Local 1802, AFL-CIO, access to such documents and materials as are necessary and relevant to the American Federation of Government Employees Union's processing of a grievance regarding the selection process for any vacancy for which a Vacancy Announcement is posted.

PURSUANT TO SECTION 6 OF EXECUTIVE ORDER 11491, AS AMENDED

ARMY AND AIR FORCE EXCHANGE SERVICE, DEPARTMENTS OF THE

A/SLMR No. 1110

This case involved an unfair labor practice complaint filed by the American Federation of Government Employees, Local 1622, AFL-CIO (AFGE) alleging that the Respondent violated Section 19(a)(1) and (2) of the Order by discharging Ms. Alice Dunn because of her activities on behalf of the AFGE.

The Administrative Law Judge found that the Respondent had not violated Section 19(a)(1) and (2) of the Order. In this regard, he found that the Respondent discharged Ms. Dunn because it believed she had engaged in improper conduct in connection with her work in the Respondent's jewelry department and not because of her union activities. Furthermore, he found that the record failed to establish any union animus on the part of the Respondent or that Ms. Dunn was treated any differently than employees who had not been active on behalf of the Union. Under these circumstances, the Administrative Law Judge recommended that the complaint be dismissed in its entirety.

Noting particularly the absence of exceptions, the Assistant Secretary adopted the findings, conclusions and recommendations of the Administrative Law Judge and ordered that the complaint be dismissed.

DECISION AND ORDER

On August 1, 1978, Administrative Law Judge Samuel A. Chaitovitz issued his Recommended Decision and Order in the above-entitled proceeding, finding that the Respondent had not engaged in the unfair labor practices alleged in the complaint and recommending that the complaint be dismissed in its entirety. No exceptions were filed to the Administrative Law Judge's Recommended Decision and Order.

The Assistant Secretary has reviewed the rulings of the Administrative Law Judge made at the hearing and finds that no prejudicial error was committed. The rulings are hereby affirmed. Upon consideration of the Administrative Law Judge's Recommended Decision and Order and the entire record in this case, and noting particularly that no exceptions were filed, I hereby adopt the Administrative Law Judge's findings, conclusions and recommendations.

RECOMMENDED DECISION AND ORDER

Statement of the Case

Pursuant to a complaint filed on August 17, 1977 under Executive Order 11491, as amended (hereinafter called the Order) by American Federation of Government Employees, Local 1622 (hereinafter called the Union or Local 1622 AFGE) against the Army and Air Force Exchange, Fort George G. Meade, Maryland (hereinafter called the Exchange, Activity or Respondent) a Notice of Hearing on Complaint was issued by the United States Department of Labor Regional Administrator for Labor Management Services for the Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, Region on February 2, 1978.

Basically the complaint alleged that the Activity violated Sections 19(a)(1) and (2) of the Order by discharging Ms. Alice Dunn because of her activities on behalf of the Union.

A hearing was held before the undersigned in Fort George G. Meade, Maryland. Both parties were represented and were afforded a full opportunity to be heard, to adduce evidence, and to examine and cross-examine witnesses. Both parties were afforded an opportunity to argue orally and both parties briefs, which have been duly considered.

Upon the entire record in this case and from my observation of the witnesses and their demeanor, I make the following findings, conclusions and recommendations:

Findings of Fact

1. The Activity is a non-appropriated fund instrumentality of the United States Government and is basically a retail establishment. It is located on Fort George G. Meade and is part of the Washington Area Exchange.
2. On December 27, 1972 the Union was certified as the collective bargaining representative for a unit of certain employees of the Activity.
3. Alice Dunn was employed by the Activity on or about October 2, 1976 as a regular full time sales clerk and was, at all times material herein, a member of the collective bargaining unit represented by the Union.
4. Ms. Dunn was originally employed as a sales clerk in the ladies department but, by the end of 1976, was working as a sales clerk in the jewelry department.
5. As a sales clerk in the jewelry department Ms. Dunn's duties consisted, among other things, of selling, stocking, displaying and cleaning jewelry items ranging from inexpensive costume jewelry to real gold and diamond merchandise.

6. In February 1977 management changes were made at the Activity. Mr. Edward Robinson became the Exchange manager and as such he was responsible for entire operation of the Fort Meade Exchange, and Mr. Talley replaced Mrs. Witt as main store manager. Soon after taking over Mr. Robinson met with Mr. Joseph Smith, a security specialist from the Washington Area Office, concerning security problems.

7. In early April 1977 dishonesty was uncovered at a small cafeteria, Fiddler's Green. Nine individuals were involved, were turned over to the proper authorities, and, after making restitution, were permitted to resign.

8. At about the same time Mr. Smith indicated that there might be some security problem at the jewelry department.

9. During April 1977, the Activity was also undergoing a reevaluation and was apparently inquiring whether certain employees would voluntarily switch from lower graded full-time positions to high graded part-time positions. 1/ Ms. Dunn felt this was unwise and spoke to her fellow employees during breaks and lunch, in the exchange cafeteria and other non-work areas, trying to discourage them from voluntarily taking the part-time positions.

10. On or about April 19 representatives of the Union met with Activity representatives, including Exchange manager Robinson and store manager Talley and discussed the reorganization. During this conversation Union President Thomas J. Shoff advised the Activity representatives that he would be appointing a shop steward in the main store and that it would probably be Ms. Dunn.

11. At the Union meeting on or about April 21, 1977 Ms. Dunn formally became the Union steward. 2/ During this latter part of April, in addition to talking to other employees, she showed them a handwritten notice she had prepared which illustrated the alleged disadvantages to full-time employees if they voluntarily switched to part-time positions. Ms. Dunn posted the notice on a bulletin board at work.

1/ A restaffing study takes place every year.

2/ The prior shop steward had apparently been promoted in October 1976 and since then the position had remained vacant.

12. Mr. Kinslow, a management official, on at least one occasion observed Ms. Dunn engaging in the conduct described above in paragraphs 9 and 11.

13. Barbara Robinson was, at all times material, herein an Exchange detective. As part of her duties she had to perform a monthly inventory on "control critical items," including the jewelry department. Commencing in January 1977, while performing these inventories, she felt certain irregularities occurred with respect to the jewelry department which aroused her suspicion. These apparent irregularities recurred in February, March and April 1977.

14. Ms. Robinson also observed for an extended period of time what she felt were irregularities in Ms. Dunn's conduct. She noticed that Ms. Dunn placed certain merchandise aside on an "end cap," where it wasn't usually displayed, presumably so that Ms. Dunn could purchase all or some of such merchandise later. Ms. Robinson never observed Ms. Dunn buying the merchandise.

15. On April 29, 1977 Ms. Robinson states she observed Ms. Dunn place display sunglasses in her pocket and then, after being observed, later placed them on the display rack. Ms. Dunn states she had placed a number of pair of sunglasses in her pockets in order to carry them to display racks.

16. Later in early May Ms. Robinson again observed some conduct by Ms. Dunn which Ms. Robinson felt unusual, involving some sunglasses, and Ms. Robinson marked them. Later the glasses were gone and Ms. Dunn's purchase receipts indicated she bought a pair of sunglasses for $2.95. Ms. Robinson felt the glasses in question were much more expensive.

17. In light of these suspicions Activity management decided to bring in another detective from another exchange to conduct an undercover investigation. They brought in a Ms. Jean Kinsey from the Andrews Air Force Base exchange. Ms. Kinsey reported and started working on or about May 3rd or 4th 1977.

18. By letter dated May 5, 1977, which was also delivered that date, the Union formally advised the Activity of Ms. Dunn's appointment as Chief Steward for the Exchange.

19. On the morning of May 9, 1977 Detective Kinsey thought she observed Ms. Dunn place a pair of higher priced pearl earrings in a jewelry box that had contained a pair of lower priced onyx earrings ^{3/} and then set the pearl earrings aside for her husband to purchase.

20. Mr. Dunn, on May 9, 1977 purchased the mispriced pearl earrings and detective Kinsey caused Mr. and Ms. Dunn to be apprehended.

21. Mr. and Ms. Dunn were taken to the store offices and the military police were called. Ms. Dunn's locker was searched and the expensive pair of sunglasses described in paragraph 16 above was found in her purse.

22. Ms. Dunn was given an opportunity, if she admitted to her misconduct, to resign. She refused.

23. As a result of the foregoing the Activity issued a letter of Advanced Notice of Separation on May 16, 1977 and a final letter of separation was issued on June 6, 1977.

Conclusions of Law

The basic issue raised by this case is whether Ms. Dunn was fired from her position with the Activity, in violation of Sections 19(a)(1) and (2), of the Order because of her appointment as the Union's shop steward and because of her other activities on behalf of the Union.

The record establishes that during April 1977 Ms. Dunn actively campaigned among the employees urging them to refuse to voluntarily switch to higher graded but part-time positions and that the representatives of the Activity observed and was aware of this activity. Further, the Activity learned informally in April 1977 and formally on May 5, 1977 that Ms. Dunn had been appointed the Union's Chief Steward. Thus the record establishes that Ms. Dunn had engaged in various activity on behalf of the Union and that the Respondent was aware of this. Further, the fact that Ms. Dunn was discharged relatively soon after undertaking this activity on behalf of the Union, is suspicious and indicates that the discharge might somehow be related to her activity on behalf of the Union.

On the other hand it is noted that as a result of a change in management in February 1977 the Activity started to investigate security problems which had, at the time of ^{3/} The original price for the pearl earrings was $7.00 and the price for the onyx earrings was $5.75.

Ms. Dunn's discharge, already led to the resignation of a number of employees because they had engaged in improperly taking property. Further the jewelry department had been the object of concern by detective Robinson since February 1977 and she had observed conduct involving Ms. Dunn which made detective Robinson suspect Ms. Dunn had been engaged in dishonest conduct. As a result detective Kinsey was brought in and Ms. Dunn was apprehended because her husband purchased earrings after Ms. Dunn had apparently mispriced them.

In all these circumstances, it is concluded that the Activity discharged Ms. Dunn because it believed she had engaged in dishonest conduct and not because of Ms. Dunn's Union activity.

In reaching this conclusion I need not reach the issue of whether Ms. Dunn actually did engage in the misconduct alleged; rather it is concluded that the Activity had sufficient evidence available to it to reasonably conclude that Ms. Dunn had engaged in such misconduct and this was, in fact, the reason Ms. Dunn was terminated. ^{4/}

In so concluding it was noted that Ms. Dunn's misconduct involved a very small sum of money. However there was no showing that anyone else who engaged in similar misconduct was treated more leniently. On the contrary the record established that anyone whom the Activity had concluded had taken exchange property improperly was separated by discharge or resignation. Ms. Dunn was offered the opportunity of resigning.

Further in reaching the conclusion that the Activity discharged Ms. Dunn because of her alleged misconduct it was taken into consideration that the record fails to establish any conduct by the Activity to indicate Union animus on the Activity's part nor does it establish that Ms. Dunn was treated any differently than employees who had not been active on behalf of the Union. cf. Department of the Air Force, Offutt Air Force Base, A/SLMR No. 784; FLRC No. 77-A-22, (July 29, 1977), FLRC Report No. 132; and Veterans

^{4/} Accordingly, although evidence of a polygraph test was admitted into evidence at the hearing to establish that Ms. Dunn had not intentionally engaged in any misconduct, I need not reach the question of Ms. Dunn's actual guilt and therefore need not base any finding on the polygraph test.

August 31, 1978

Administration, North Chicago Veterans Hospital, North Chicago Illinois, A/SLMR No. 1024, FLRC No. 78-A-59, (July 12, 1978).

It is concluded that the Union failed to establish that Ms. Dunn was discharged because of her Union activity. The reason given by the Activity for Ms. Dunn's discharge was not a pretext; rather the record establishes that Ms. Dunn was in fact discharged because the Activity, based on the available evidence, reasonably concluded Ms. Dunn had engaged in dishonest acts.

Accordingly it is concluded that the Activity did not engage in conduct which violated Sections 19(a)(1) and (2) of the Order. cf. Department of the Air Force, Offutt Air Force Base, supra. and V.A., North Chicago Veterans Hospital, North Chicago, Illinois, supra.

Recommendation

Upon the basis of the foregoing findings and conclusions, I hereby recommend that the complaint against the Respondent be dismissed in its entirety.

SUMMARY OF DECISION AND ORDER OF THE ASSISTANT SECRETARY
PURSUANT TO SECTION 6 OF EXECUTIVE ORDER 11491, AS AMENDED

EQUAL EMPLOYMENT OPPORTUNITY COMMISSION, BOSTON DISTRICT OFFICE
A/SLMR No. 1111

This consolidated proceeding involved two unfair labor practice complaints filed by an individual, John J. Martin, Vice-President of Local 3555, American Federation of Government Employees, AFL-CIO (Complainant). The first complaint alleged that the Respondent violated Sections 19(a)(1) and (2) of the Order by imposing extraordinary reporting requirements and close scrutinization on the Complainant on March 9, 1977, and by admonishing him on March 10, March 22, and March 24, 1977, for not following the extraordinary reporting requirements. The second complaint alleged that the Respondent violated Sections 19(a)(1), (2) and (4) of the Order on July 25, 1977, by imposing on the Complainant an official disciplinary penalty of a hearing prior to a proposed notice of reprimand in retaliation for the Complainant carrying out his duties as Vice-President of AFGE Local 3555, and for having filed an unfair labor practice complaint.

The Administrative Law Judge concluded that the Respondent had not, in either case, violated the Order. In this regard, he found that the Complainant had not established by a preponderance of evidence that either extraordinary reporting requirements and close scrutinization were imposed upon the Complainant or that an official disciplinary penalty of a hearing had been imposed on the Complainant in retaliation for the Complainant having engaged in protected activity. Accordingly, he recommended that the complaints be dismissed in their entirety.

The Assistant Secretary adopted the findings, conclusions and recommendations of the Administrative Law Judge and ordered the complaints be dismissed.

DECISION AND ORDER

On July 20, 1978, Administrative Law Judge Garvin Lee Oliver issued his Recommended Decision and Order in the above-entitled consolidated proceeding, finding that the Respondent had not engaged in the unfair labor practices alleged in the complaints and recommending that the complaints be dismissed in their entirety. Thereafter, the Respondent filed timely exceptions to the Administrative Law Judge's Recommended Decision and Order. 1/

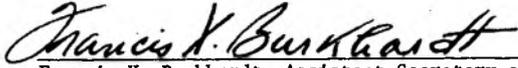

The Assistant Secretary has reviewed the rulings of the Administrative Law Judge made at the hearing and finds that no prejudicial error was committed. The rulings are hereby affirmed. Upon consideration of the Administrative Law Judge's Recommended Decision and Order and the entire record in the subject cases, including the Respondent's exceptions, I hereby adopt the Administrative Law Judge's findings, conclusions and recommendations. 2/

1/ The Complainant submitted untimely exceptions which have not been considered.

2/ On page 3 of his Recommended Decision and Order, the Administrative Law Judge inadvertently referred to Local 3555 of the American Federation of Government Employees, AFL-CIO, as the exclusive representative of the Respondent's employees, rather than the parent organization, the American Federation of Government Employees, AFL-CIO, which is the national exclusive representative. This inadvertent error is hereby corrected.

IT IS HEREBY ORDERED that the complaints in Case Nos. 31-11034(CA) and 31-11431(CA) be, and they hereby are, dismissed.

RECOMMENDED DECISION AND ORDER

Statement of the Case

This proceeding arose pursuant to Executive Order 11491, as amended. It was initiated by unfair labor practice complaints filed on July 18, 1977 (31-11034(CA)) and November 8, 1977 (31-11431(CA)) by John J. Martin, Vice-President, Local 3555, American Federation of Government Employees (hereinafter called the Complainant) against the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission, Boston District Office (hereinafter called the Respondent). (Asst. Sec. Ex., 1(B), 1(F)). The Regional Administrator consolidated the cases for hearing. (Asst. Sec. Ex. (1(H))).

The complaint in Case No. 31-11034 alleged, in substance, that Respondent violated Section 19(a)(1) and (2) of the Executive Order by imposing extraordinary reporting requirements and close scrutinization on Complainant on March 9, 1977 and by admonishing him on March 10, March 22, and March 24, 1977 for not following the extraordinary reporting requirements.

The complaint in Case No. 31-11431 alleged, in substance, that Respondent violated Section 19(a)(1), (2) and (4) of the Executive Order on July 25, 1977 by imposing on Complainant an official disciplinary penalty of a hearing prior to a proposed notice of reprimand in retaliation for Complainant carrying out the duties of Vice-President of Local 3555 and for having filed an unfair labor practice complaint.

The Respondent denied all charges.

Procedural Matters

Respondent contends that the Regional Administrator obtained a Statement from Complainant, but not from Respondent, and had "an appropriate" independent investigation been conducted pursuant to 29 C.F.R § 203.6, Case No. 31-11034(CA) would have been dismissed and would not have reached the hearing stage.

29 C.F.R. § 203.9 provides that a determination by the Regional Administrator to issue a notice of hearing shall not be subject to review by the Assistant Secretary. The scope of the independent investigation is also within the discretion of the Regional Administrator. Respondent could have brought to the Regional Administrator's attention any matter relevant to the complaint, or provided reasons why the independent investigation should be expanded if it was unable to obtain such information on its own behalf. 29 C.F.R. §§203.5, 203.6.

Respondent also contends that the incidents involved in Case no. 31-11034(CA) were part of a March 16, 1977 unfair labor practice charge which was settled on May 13, 1977, and should, therefore, be dismissed.

The record reflects that a March 16, 1977 unfair labor practice charge was withdrawn as part of a bilateral agreement reached between the Respondent and AFGE Local 3555 on May 13, 1977. (Asst. Sec. Ex. 1c(1) and (2)). See also Equal Employment Opportunity Commission, Boston District Office, Case No. 31-10989(CA), dismissal of complaint affirmed by Assistant Sec. on May 23, 1978.

However, the complaint in Case No. 31-11034 is based on a charge dated June 7, 1977. I find the evidence that the same incidents "were discussed at the meeting on May 13, 1977" (Tr. Vol. II, p. 30) insufficient to conclude that the matters raised in the June 7, 1977 charge are the same as those raised in the March 16, 1977 charge, and also insufficient to conclude that the matters raised in the June 7, 1977 charge and complaint in Case No. 31-11034(CA) are barred from consideration by the May 13, 1977 bilateral agreement.

Respondent contends that the incidents involved in Case No. 31-11034(CA) are also the subject of a separate unfair labor practice complaint in Case No. 31-10989(CA) and should, therefore, be dismissed. While a complainant may not simultaneously litigate the same issue, arising out of the same set of facts, in two different unfair labor practice proceedings before the same forum, Department of the Treasury, Internal Revenue Service, Brookhaven Service Center, A/SLMR No. 859, a comparison of the alleged basis for the complaint in Case No. 31-10989(CA) with that in the instant complaint in Case No. 31-11034(CA) reveals that the alleged facts constituting the unfair labor practice are different (Asst. Sec. Ex. 1B; Res. Ex. 17). In Brookhaven Service Center the facts constituting the alleged basis for the complaint were identical to those raised in a previous complaint.

A hearing was held in this matter before the undersigned in Boston, Massachusetts 1/. Both parties were afforded full opportunity to be heard, adduce relevant evidence, and to examine and cross-examine witnesses. Thereafter, the parties submitted briefs.

Upon the basis of the entire record, including my observation of the witnesses and their demeanor, the exhibits and other relevant evidence adduced at the hearing, and the briefs, I make the following findings of fact, conclusions and recommendations.

Findings of Fact

At all relevant times herein Local 3555, American Federation of Government Employees (AFGE) has been the exclusive representative of a unit of federal employees employed by the Respondent.

Complainant is an Equal Opportunity Specialist, GS-12, for Respondent. He has been assigned to the Boston District Office since November 1975. In June 1976 he was elected

1/ Respondent's unopposed motion to correct the transcript is granted. The transcript is corrected in accordance with Appendix A, attached hereto.

Vice-President of Local 3555, AFGE. His duties include presiding at union meetings, carrying out provisions of the collective bargaining agreement, and participating in labor-management meetings.

On September 12, 1975 Mr. Everett O. Ware, District Director, Boston District Office, Equal Employment Opportunity Commission, issued a standard operating procedures memorandum to all employees governing, among other things, office hours. The memorandum required employees to notify their supervisors immediately upon arriving in the morning, before departing at the close of business, and of any variation in the normal lunch period of 11:45 A.M. until 12:45 P.M. (Res. Ex. 2). It was the responsibility of office supervisors to enforce the policy. Enforcement varied somewhat depending upon the supervisor and the proximity of employees to their supervisor. If the employees worked close to the supervisor the formality of the reporting lessened and was casual, sometimes consisting of no more than a greeting at the beginning and close of the day. Complainant came under the supervision of Mrs. Betty R. Anderson, Deputy District Director, on March 9, 1977. Complainant's desk was in the rear of the office and was not close to Mrs. Anderson. Mrs. Anderson explained the standard office reporting procedure to Complainant and what was expected of him in his new position.

On March 10, 1977 Mrs. Anderson called Complainant into her office at 9:30 A.M., stated that he had not reported to her as required, and reiterated the office procedure to Complainant. Complainant commented that other employees, to his knowledge, were not required to report in this fashion. Mrs. Anderson had a similar conversation with Complainant on March 22, 1977 and requested the names of those employees who allegedly were not reporting as required.

On March 24, 1977 Complainant met with District Director Ware, Mrs. Anderson and Mr. Dool concerning Complainant's continuing inquiries about the reporting requirements and the allegations that other employees were not required to report in this manner. At the March 24, 1977 meeting Mr. Ware clarified what Complainant was expected to do in terms of the reporting requirement. Mr. Ware explained that the Complainant was expected to let his superior know that he was in the office in the morning; that he should let the supervisor know if he did not adhere to the normal lunch hour, but a time function record, which had to be filled out at the end of the day, would serve the function of determining whether he was there at the end of the day. Complainant and the shop steward, Ray Dool, refused to provide names of other individuals allegedly not adhering to the reporting procedure, except to claim that Mr. Dool was not required to report in this fashion. Based on Mrs. Anderson's testimony, I find that Mr. Dool did comply with the reporting requirement and that other employees under her supervision did so as well in the manner generally expected of all employees in the office. Following the March 24 meeting Mr. Ware reiterated to all supervisors that all employees should closely follow the previously established policy.

During the course of the March 24, 1977 meeting Mr. Ware explained to Complainant that he was not under any unusual reporting or surveillance requirements; that he had been given the benefit of the doubt on occasion; and on one particular occasion, on March 8, 1977, he had observed him sign out at 11:50 A.M. for a 3 P.M. meeting, but did not mention it at the time because he did not want Complainant to think he was being surveilled.

The Alleged July 25, 1977 Hearing

On July 20, 1977 Mr. Lloyd F. Randolph, Supervisory Equal Opportunity Specialist, discovered, upon receiving an inquiry, that a July 5, 1977 letter from an attorney, which had been mailed to Complainant, had not been referred by Complainant for further action. Mr. Randolph submitted a report to District Director Ware concerning the incident.

On July 22, 1977, Mr. Ware directed a memorandum to Complainant regarding the failure to follow up on the letter received from the attorney. Mr. Ware requested that Complainant ascertain the status of all letters relating to charges within his possession by the close of business on July 22, 1977. The request was made to Complainant at approximately 2:30 P.M. on July 22, 1977. Complainant presented a memorandum requesting an extension to answer Mr. Ware's memorandum because he did not receive it until late in the afternoon. The time was extended until July 25, 1977.

On July 25, 1977, Complainant gave Mr. Ware a memorandum with five letters attached that had been previously prepared by a clerk-typist who started annual leave on July 15, 1977. Since it appeared to Mr. Ware that the letters represented the sum total of Complainant's work, Mr. Ware requested a meeting to discuss the Complainant's work performance and the possibility of disciplinary action. Complainant, in turn, requested that the meeting be delayed until he could have a National Representative of AFGE in attendance. The meeting was scheduled for July 26, 1977, at 9:30 A.M.

On July 26, 1977, the meeting was conducted with Complainant, Walter Flaherty, AFGE Representative, Philip

J. O'Donnell, Vice President of AFGE, Mary M. Miller, Supervisory Equal Opportunity Specialist, Frank Ammons, Supervisory Equal Opportunity Specialist, and District Director Ware. Complainant requested that Ray Dool, a co-worker, be allowed to attend the meeting as one who was familiar with his work record. Mr. Ware refused this request as he wanted to hear directly from Complainant what he was doing.

No disciplinary action was taken as a result of the July 26, 1977 meeting. Mr. Ware concluded that Complainant did not have a clear understanding of his responsibilities at that time and was satisfied with Complainant's explanation concerning his work. As a result of the incident, Mr. Ware established a system of direct assignment of charges to the deferral coordinators so that management would have better control over the work flow.

The meeting was convened and held pursuant to Article 33, Section a, of the National Labor Agreement which provides:

The Employer agrees, when practical and administratively feasible, to informally discuss with the employee and, upon request, his/her representative, the basis for a proposed disciplinary action prior to its being reduced to a written proposal. (Res. Ex. 4).

Discussion, Conclusions, and Recommendations

In making the foregoing finding, I gave greater weight to the testimony of Respondent's witnesses, including District Director Ware and former Deputy District Director Anderson than to that of the Complainant and his witnesses. I found that Mr. Ware and Mrs. Anderson made every effort to be fair, complete, and accurate in recounting relevant events, and their testimony was forthright and convincing.

During the hearing Complainant raised various other incidents, including difficulty in obtaining administrative leave for the Toastmasters Club, a dispute concerning a visit by Norman Jackson, Complainant's work production appraisal and performance rating, and alleged violation of a May 13, 1977 bilateral agreement. Although incidents and events not specified in the complaint may not themselves be independently adjudicated under the Order, they may serve as background evidence to explain and illuminate the nature and character of the events specified as the actual basis for the complaint. Professional Air Traffic Controllers Organization, MEBA, AFL-CIO, A/SLMR No. 878 (1977). These events have been considered for this limited purpose; however, since a grievance is pending on Complainant's employee performance appraisal (Res. Ex. 27), an appeal to the Civil Service Commission is pending on Complainant's annual performance rating (Tr. Vol. 1, pp. 174-176) and related issues were specifically included as part of Case No. 31-10989(CA) (Res. Ex. 17), these events are not discussed here in detail. Suffice it to say that these incidents, when viewed in their totality, even including the additional and earlier incidents proffered at Tr. Vol. 1, p. 42-43, which were excluded at the hearing, do not in my view, provide a substantial and persuasive basis for finding that Respondent engaged in a pattern of conduct culminating in the events which constitute the gravamen of the complaints designed to deprive Complainant of rights guaranteed by the Executive Order.

Complainant has not established by a preponderance of evidence that extraordinary reporting requirements and close scrutinization were imposed upon him in violation of the Executive Order as alleged in the complaint. Moreover, Complainant has not established by a preponderance of evidence that an official disciplinary penalty of a hearing was imposed upon him in retaliation for having filed an unfair labor practice complaint. I conclude that such actions as were taken, requiring Complainant to adhere to standard reporting procedures and the convening of an informal discussion with Complainant and his representatives to discuss the basis for a proposed disciplinary action, were taken by the Respondent in the good faith belief that Complainant was violating the work rules, that such actions did not constitute disparate treatment and discrimination in reprisal for Complainant having exercised his rights under the Executive Order, and were not motivated, even in part, by anti-union animus.

Recommendation

Having found that Respondents have not engaged in conduct prohibited by Sections 19 (a) (1), (2), and (4) of the Executive Order, as amended, it is hereby recommended that the complaints herein be dismissed in their entirety.

ASSISTANT SECRETARY FOR LABOR-MANAGEMENT RELATIONS
SUMMARY OF DECISION AND ORDER OF THE ASSISTANT SECRETARY
PURSUANT TO SECTION 6 OF EXECUTIVE ORDER 11491, AS AMENDED

BUREAU OF ALCOHOL, TOBACCO, AND FIREARMS, MIDWEST REGION,
CHICAGO, ILLINOIS
A/SLMR No. 1112

This case involved an unfair labor practice complaint filed by the National Treasury Employees Union (NTEU) alleging that the Respondent violated Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order by its failure to notify the exclusive representative, and give it the opportunity to be represented at a meeting held by the Area Supervisor during which a management proposal with significant impact on employee terms and conditions of employment was discussed. The NTEU asserted that the meeting was a formal discussion within the meaning of Section 10(e) of the Order and, therefore, the Respondent's failure to give notice effectively denied the exclusive representative its right to be represented at such formal discussion.

The Administrative Law Judge concluded that the Respondent violated Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order. Thus, in his view, while the objective of the Area Supervisor was only to solicit suggestions and ideas from bargaining unit employees with respect to a management proposal, the proposal concerned personnel policies and practices and working conditions and discussing such matters with employees at a management initiated meeting without notifying the exclusive representative and giving it the opportunity to be represented at such a meeting violated the exclusive representative's Section 10(e) rights.

The Assistant Secretary essentially adopted the findings, conclusions and recommendations of the Administrative Law Judge. Accordingly, he ordered that the Respondent cease and desist from engaging in the conduct found violative of the Order and that it take certain affirmative actions.

DECISION AND ORDER

On June 9, 1978, Administrative Law Judge Randolph D. Mason issued his Recommended Decision and Order in the above entitled proceeding, finding that the Respondent had engaged in the unfair labor practices alleged in the complaint and recommending that it cease and desist therefrom and take certain affirmative actions as set forth in the attached Administrative Law Judge's Recommended Decision and Order. Thereafter, the Respondent filed exceptions, and the Complainant filed a response thereto, with respect to the Administrative Law Judge's Recommended Decision and Order.

The Assistant Secretary has reviewed the rulings of the Administrative Law Judge made at the hearing and finds that no prejudicial error was committed. The rulings are hereby affirmed. Upon consideration of the Administrative Law Judge's Recommended Decision and Order, 1/ I take administrative notice that the National Treasury Employees Union is the national exclusive representative of a Bureauwide unit of nonprofessional employees of the Department of the Treasury, Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco, and Firearms. Since the Midwest Region has not objected to its being named as the Respondent herein, I find that there has been no prejudice to either party by the Complainant identifying as the Respondent an administrative level of the Agency's organization not identical to its level of recognition.

and the entire record in the subject case, including the Respondent's exceptions and the Complainant's response thereto, I hereby adopt the Administrative Law Judge's findings, conclusions and recommendations. 3/

ORDER

Pursuant to Section 6(b) of Executive Order 11491, as amended, and Section 203.26(b) of the Regulations, the Assistant Secretary of Labor for Labor-Management Relations hereby orders that the Department of the Treasury, Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco, and Firearms, Midwest Region, shall:

1. Cease and desist from:

(a) Conducting formal discussions between management and employees concerning personnel policies and practices, or other matters affecting general working conditions of employees in the unit, without first notifying and affording the National Treasury Employees Union, the employees' exclusive representative, the opportunity to be represented at such discussions by its own chosen representative.

(b) In any like or related manner interfering with, restraining, or coercing its employees in the exercise of their rights assured by Executive Order 11491, as amended.

2. Take the following affirmative actions to effectuate the purposes and policies of Executive Order 11491, as amended:

(a) Notify the National Treasury Employees Union, and afford it the opportunity to be represented at formal discussions between management and employees concerning personnel policies and practices, or other matters affecting general working conditions of employees in the unit, by its own chosen representative.

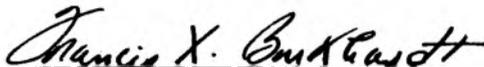

(b) Post at the facilities of the St. Louis Area Office 4/ copies of the attached notice marked "Appendix" on forms to be furnished by the Assistant Secretary of Labor-Management Relations. Upon receipt

3/ As I have adopted the Administrative Law Judge's findings that the disputed meeting on January 24th constituted a "formal discussion" within the meaning of Section 10(e) of the Order, I do not find it necessary to pass upon his alternative findings on pages 8 and 9 of his Recommended Decision and Order.

4/ Since an area official of the Respondent's St. Louis Area Office committed the violation found herein, I will limit the required posting to the St. Louis Area Office. Compare Department of the Treasury, Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms, Midwest Region, Chicago, Illinois, A/SLMR No. 1070 (1978), in which regional officials of the Midwest Region were directly involved in the unfair labor practices which occurred therein.

of such forms, they shall be signed by the Regional Regulatory Administrator, United States Department of the Treasury, Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco, and Firearms, Midwest Region, and they shall be posted and maintained by him for 60 consecutive days thereafter, in conspicuous places, including all places where notices to employees are customarily posted. The Regional Regulatory Administrator shall take reasonable steps to ensure that such notices are not altered, defaced, or covered by any other material.

was issued on January 11, 1978. This case was initiated by a complaint filed on September 12, 1977 by the National Treasury Employees Union and NTEU Chapter 94 (hereinafter the Union).

The issues presented are are follows:

- (1) Whether Respondent held a formal discussion with employees concerning personnel policies and practices, or other matters affecting general working conditions of employees, within the ambit of § 10(e) of the Executive Order; and
- (2) Whether respondent violated § 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order by failing to notify the Union of the above meeting and by soliciting certain recommendations from the employees at that meeting.

At the hearing, all parties were represented and were afforded full opportunity to be heard, adduce evidence, examine and cross-examine witnesses, and argue orally. Thereafter, both parties filed briefs. Upon the entire record in this case, from my observation of the witnesses and their demeanor, and from all of the testimony and evidence adduced at the hearing, I make the following findings, conclusions and recommendation.

Findings of Fact

NTEU Chapter 94 was the exclusive bargaining representative of the employees of the respondent Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco, and Firearms (ATF), Midwest Region, at all times revelant herein.

For many years Congress has required that operations on the premises of distilled spirits plants (DSP's) be conducted under the supervision of the Secretary of Treasury. The latter "shall assign such number of [ATF] officers to [DSP's] as he deems necessary to maintain supervision of the operations conducted on such premises." 26 U.S.C. § 5202(a) (1964). The proprietor of a DSP cannot even commence production operations until an ATF officer has been assigned to the premises. 26 U.S.C. § 5221(a) (1964). Although strict supervision of DSP's is generally required, the Secretary of the Treasury is authorized to conduct temporary pilot or experimental operations for the purpose of facilitating the development and testing of improved methods of governmental supervision. 26 U.S.C. § 5554 (1964).

On December 12, 1974, the Director of ATF established a Federal Advisory Committee on DSP supervision (hereinafter the

RECOMMENDED DECISION AND ORDER

Preliminary Statement

This proceeding was heard in St. Louis, Missouri, on February 14, 1978, and arises under Executive Order 11491, as amended. Pursuant to the Regulations of the Assistant Secretary of Labor for Labor-Management Relations (hereinafter called the Assistant Secretary), a Notice of Hearing on Complaint Committee). The Committee was formed to provide recommendations to the Director of ATF about methods to achieve an orderly transition from the "joint custody" concept of supervision of DSP's to a plan of more flexible supervision of such operations. Specifically, the Committee was to consider the means of implementing the planned elimination or relaxation of the following statutory requirements at DSP's:

1. Affixture of Government locks and seals;
2. Assignment of Government officers;
3. Joint Custody with respect to storage rooms or buildings in which distilled spirits are stored; and
4. Exercise of general Government supervision.

Membership on the Committee included representatives from the distilled spirits industry, the academic community, and Government Officials. On December 17, 1975 the Committee's charter was amended to expand its responsibilities to provide advice on the question of whether any change in the form of supervision at DSP's should be made.

The Committee subsequently agreed that its ATF members would examine the problems associated with implementing the elimination of joint custody and, with the assistance of the full committee, develop a manual or model to show how a system of supervision and control based on the elimination of joint custody could be implemented, and what the advantages and disadvantages of such a system would be for both industry and the Government. This paper was prepared under the title of "Proposal for Supervision and Control of DSP's Based on Elimination of the Joint Custody Concept of Supervision". This proposal was discussed during the committee meeting held on January 12, 1977.

The "proposal" recommended that the Director of ATF seek legislation which would amend those provisions of law which require the presence of a government officer on distilled spirits plant premises in order to perform certain duties. The amendment would allow government officers to perform these duties, but not require them to do so. The amendment would enable the government to change its method of supervision and control of DSP's from a system where government officers are regularly assigned to DSP's, to a more indirect and flexible system of supervision where the presence of a government officer is not regularly required on DSP premises.

The "proposal" further stated that implementation of the new concept of supervision would be on a gradual basis, with the number of ATF officers stationed at DSP's being gradually reduced over a period of four to five years. The frequency of visits by inspectors would vary with different DSP's. The implementation program would also include at least one "periodic pause." The purpose of these pauses, which would be several months to a year in duration, would be to allow operating conditions to stabilize so that developing program problems could be identified and adjustments could be made to the program.

Since the "proposal" was to be an integral part of the Committee's recommendation, the Committee attempted to work toward an agreement on its final form and content. However, the "proposal" contained certain additional details (not relevant to the instant proceeding) upon which an agreement could not be reached. Accordingly, the Committee attempted to work out a compromise proposal regarding those details. At the January 12, 1977 meeting, the Committee reached a tentative agreement resolving the questions that had been raised and affirming the fundamental proposals set forth above. The Committee chairman, Stephen E. Higgins, who was also the Assistant Director of ATF, agreed to prepare a draft report and recommendation for consideration by committee members at the next meeting scheduled for February 15, 1977.

On January 14, 1977, Assistant Director Higgins sent a telegram to all ATF Regional Regulatory Administrators. In the telegram, he indicated that Treasury had asked for the Committee's recommendation by March 1, 1977. The telegram brought the administrators up to date on the Committee's progress, and stated that the Committee had reached a tentative agreement endorsed by most of the Committee members. The Assistant Director stated that the tentative proposal was, with a few enumerated exceptions, essentially the same as the "proposal" previously referred to in these findings. It was noted that the original "proposal" had been forwarded to the administrators for their review a few months before the telegram. In its description of the Committee's present plan, the telegram specifically stated that ATF "would ultimately be relieved of the locking and supervision of bonded warehouses, responsibility of sealing, and most of the other supervision of proprietors' operations we are currently engaged in." The Assistant Director then requested that certain information be transmitted to him by February 7, 1977. The administrators were specifically asked to comment on the following:

Any significant problems or pitfalls for ATF you see in the proposal;

Any significant benefits other than those associated with manpower you see in the proposal; and

Your thoughts as to whether, and [if] the proposal is advantageous for ATF.

The Assistant Director then concluded the telegram with the following remarks:

I see this as an important proposal for ATF so I hope that in addition to seeking the advice of your most knowledgeable staff members, you will also give considerable personal thought to your response. While the information you are providing us should be kept strictly to those who have a "need to know," the tentative proposal itself may be discussed with employees at any level, and we encourage you to do so. However, in discussing it with employees, the following points should be stressed: [Emphasis supplied]

1. The proposal has only the tentative approval of most of the [Committee] members. We have scheduled another [Committee] meeting for 2/15/77, at which the Committee members will formally vote on the proposal;
2. If the proposal is adopted by the majority of the [Committee] members, the Director is completely free to recommend any course of action he wishes to Treasury. Treasury, likewise, has complete freedom as far as any legislation it may choose to propose. The Office of Management and Budget also has considerable say in what legislation Treasury proposes to Congress. And finally, of course, only Congress can change the joint custody laws; and
3. If legislation is ultimately enacted along the lines proposed, implementation in terms of the withdrawal of inspectors from DSP's would be gradual, probably over a period of about four years. It is ATF's intention that any inspector withdrawn from DSP's would be utilized in other ATF program areas.

The Regional Regulatory Administrator for the Midwest Region forwarded a copy of the above telegram to Harold Green, the Area Supervisor located in St. Louis, Missouri. Green had previously received, and was generally familiar with, the initial ATF "proposal" that was modified to some extent, as described in the above telegram. Green was responsible for supervising inspectors and plant officers engaged in the supervision of DSP's in eastern Missouri and southern Illinois.

On January 24, 1977, Green held a meeting with inspectors in his office. It was a regularly scheduled monthly meeting and about seven inspectors attended. The meeting was held in the inspectors' official work area.

During the course of the meeting, Green read the above telegram to the inspectors. Then he solicited the inspectors views and opinions regarding the current proposal to eliminate joint custody. Three or four employees responded with comments. Then Green asked Roy Legendre, the union steward, his opinion of the proposal. Legendre refused to answer but stated that he believed the discussion violated the Executive Order. At that point, Green terminated the discussion.

The respondent failed to notify the union and the employees that the topic of elimination of joint custody and the above telegram was to be discussed at the January 24 meeting. All of the inspectors attending the meeting were in the bargaining unit for which the union had exclusive recognition. Although one of the union's stewards was present during the meeting, he was not notified that this topic was to be discussed.

The meeting clearly constituted a formal discussion between management and employees concerning personnel policies and practices and other matters affecting general working conditions of employees in the unit. Clearly, the elimination of joint custody would result in a significant change in working conditions for the bargaining unit employees. For example, as the degree of supervision of DSP's decreased, inspectors would have to receive more assignments in areas such as firearms and explosives, and the amount of time spent at DSP's would significantly decrease. Hours of work and travel time would also change for inspectors. Plant officers, who formerly spent 100% of their time at DSP's, would have to be transferred to other types of ATF work.

Finally, it is noted that at the time of this meeting certain pilot projects were in effect in which the elimination of joint custody had been implemented. Some of these projects were in the Midwest Region of ATF; inspectors and plant officers in those areas had been removed because ATF had allowed certain DSP's to operate without ATF supervision.

Conclusions of Law

The first issue presented for decision is whether respondent violated Section 10(e) of the Order by failing to give the Union the opportunity to be represented at the January 24, 1977 meeting between the Area Supervisor and certain bargaining unit employees. § 10(e) states that when a labor organization has been accorded exclusive recognition, it is the exclusive representative of the employees in the unit and is entitled to act for and to negotiate agreements covering all employees in the unit. That section also states as follows:

The labor organization shall be given the opportunity to be represented at formal discussions between management and employees or employee representatives concerning grievances, personnel policies and practices, or other matters affecting general working conditions of employees in the unit.

I agree with the Complainant that the meeting in question constituted a "formal discussion" within the meaning of § 10(e). The meeting was called by the Area Supervisor, in part, for the purpose of soliciting the views of the inspectors regarding a matter which was of grave importance to them--the elimination of joint custody. It is clear that such elimination would result in significant changes in the working conditions of the employees in question. The inspectors were read a telegram written by the Assistant Director of ATF, who was also the chairman of a federal advisory committee regarding this subject. The telegram stated that the committee was about to recommend that legislation be enacted to eliminate joint custody and that this would be implemented over a period of about four years. The Assistant Director stated in the telegram that he considered this to be an "important proposal" and he encouraged the supervisors to discuss the proposal with the employees. After reading the telegram, the Area Supervisor asked the employees for their views on the entire proposal, which included the method of implementation.

Respondent argues that the topic of elimination of joint custody was not ripe for discussion and was not meaningful in view of the fact that Congress had not yet taken action on the matter. I disagree. In fact, the Respondent's Assistant Director felt that this was an opportune time to discuss this matter with the employees. The views of the employees would be transmitted by ATF management to the federal advisory committee to assist it in making its recommendation regarding both the decision to eliminate joint custody and the implementation of the new program. The employees' input at this early stage could ultimately have had a meaningful impact on their working conditions.

The discussion in question took place at a regularly scheduled meeting called by the Area Supervisor. In view of the manner in which this meeting was held, and the subject matter discussed, I am constrained to conclude and hold that the meeting constituted a "formal discussion" within the meaning of § 10(e) of the Order. Army Headquarters, U.S. Army Training Center, Infantry, Fort Jackson Laundry Facility, Fort Jackson, South Carolina, A/SLMR No. 242 (1973).

Respondent also argues that even if a formal discussion did take place, § 10(e) was not violated since a union steward was present at the meeting and had the opportunity to speak out on the issues raised. I must conclude that Respondent failed to give the union an opportunity to be represented at the meeting as required by § 10(e). The steward in question was called to the meeting in his capacity as an employee and was not given any advance notification of the topics to be discussed. In addition, the union has a right to choose its representative at § 10(e) formal discussions. Fort Jackson, supra. Management cannot usurp this right and deem the union to be represented by an employee who happened to be a steward.

I have concluded that the Respondent failed to give the union the opportunity to be represented at the formal discussion held on January 24, 1977. This is a right under § 10(e) that flows directly to the labor organization which has been accorded exclusive recognition. Fort Jackson, supra. Accordingly, the action taken by Respondent in this case violated § 19(a)(6) of the Order. In addition, I must also conclude that the Respondent's conduct, which effectively denied the right of unit employees to be represented by their exclusive representative, violated § 19(a)(1) of the Order. U.S. Department of the Army, Transportation Motor Pool, Fort Wainwright, Alaska, A/SLMR No. 278 (1973), 3 A/SLMR 290.

Finally, even if a "formal discussion" under § 10(e) had not been involved, agency management was still obligated to deal solely with its employees' exclusive representative in matters concerning the terms and conditions of their employment. Internal Revenue Service, Ogden Service Center, A/SLMR No. 944 (1977). In the instant case, Respondent's Area Supervisor bypassed the union and dealt directly with unit employees, soliciting their recommendations on matters relating to personnel policies and practices and general working conditions. The union was the exclusive bargaining representative regarding such matters. This bypassing of the Complainant NTEU Chapter 94 was in derogation of its rights as the exclusive representative of the unit employees, and tended to undermine its status as their exclusive representative. Accordingly, I find that the Respondent's conduct was violative of § 19(a)(6) and (1) of the Order even if the meeting had not constituted a "formal discussion" within the meaning of § 10(e). Internal Revenue Service, Ogden Service Center, A/SLMR No. 944 (1977).

Recommendation

Upon the basis of the foregoing findings of fact and conclusions of law and pursuant to section 6(b) of Executive Order 11491, as amended, and section 203.26(b) of the Rules and Regulations, I recommend that the Assistant Secretary of Labor for Labor-Management Relations adopt the following Order designed to effectuate the policies of Executive Order 11491, as amended.

Recommended Order

Pursuant to section 6(b) of Executive Order 11491, as amended and 203.26(b) of the Rules and Regulations, the Assistant Secretary of Labor for Labor-Management Relations hereby Orders that the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco, and Firearms, Midwest Region, shall:

1. Cease and desist from:
 - a. Conducting formal discussions between management and employees concerning personnel policies and practices, or other matters affecting general working conditions of employees in the unit without giving the National Treasury Employees Union, Chapter 94, the employees' exclusive representative, the opportunity to be represented at such discussions by its own chosen representative.
 - b. Dealing directly with and soliciting the views of employees concerning the elimination of joint custody when such employees are represented exclusively by National Treasury Employees Union, Chapter 94.
 - c. In any like or related manner interfering with, restraining, or coercing its employees in the exercise of rights guaranteed by Executive Order 11491, as amended.

2. Take the following affirmative action in order to effectuate the purposes and provisions of the Order:
 - a. Notify the National Treasury Employees Union, Chapter 94, of and give it the opportunity to be represented at formal discussions between management and employees or employee representatives concerning personnel policies and practices, or other matters affecting general working conditions of employees in the unit by its own chosen representative.
 - b. Post at its facilities copies of the attached Notice marked "Appendix" on forms to be furnished by the Assistant Secretary of Labor-Management Relations. Upon receipt of such forms, they shall be signed by the Regional Regulatory Administrator, United States Department of the Treasury, Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco, and Firearms, Midwest Region, and they shall be posted and maintained by him for 60 consecutive days thereafter, in conspicuous places, including all places where notices to employees are customarily posted. The Regional Regulatory Administrator shall take reasonable steps to ensure that such notices are not altered, defaced, or covered by any other material.
 - c. Pursuant to section 203.27 of the Regulations, notify the Assistant Secretary, in writing, within 30 days from the date of this Order as to what steps have been taken to comply herewith.

Case No 22-08528(CA)

This case involved an unfair labor practice complaint filed by Local 2578, American Federation of Government Employees, AFL-CIO (Complainant) alleging that the Respondent violated Section 19(a)(1) and (2) of the Order by addressing letters to union officials charging them with violations of security regulations, threatening them with disciplinary action, and forbidding the union president further entrance into the restricted area.

LOCAL 2578, AMERICAN FEDERATION

Complainant

The Assistant Secretary concluded, in agreement with the Administrative Law Judge, that dismissal of the instant complaint was warranted. He noted particularly that the Complainant's representatives were engaged in unprotected activity when they admittedly violated Agency security procedures and that the evidence failed to demonstrate that the Respondent had dealt with the Complainant's representatives based on anti-union considerations. Accordingly, he ordered that the complaint be dismissed in its entirety.

DECISION AND ORDER

On June 21, 1978, Administrative Law Judge Louis Scalzo issued his Recommended Decision in the above-entitled proceeding, finding that the Respondent had not engaged in the unfair labor practices alleged in the complaint and recommending that the complaint be dismissed in its entirety. Thereafter, the Complainant filed exceptions and a supporting brief with respect to the Administrative Law Judge's Recommended Decision and the Respondent filed an answering brief to the Complainant's exceptions.

The Assistant Secretary has reviewed the rulings of the Administrative Law Judge made at the hearing and finds that no prejudicial error was committed. Except as modified, 1/ the rulings are hereby affirmed. Upon 1/ Subsequent to the hearing in this matter, the Complainant transmitted certain documents to the Administrative Law Judge relating to unsuccessful attempts to reach a settlement herein. The Administrative Law Judge made the documents part of the record of this proceeding. I view the Administrative Law Judge's admission of such documents into evidence to have been improper. Thus, it has been held previously that in order to foster and afford an atmosphere conducive to the settlement of unfair labor practice allegations, matters raised in connection with settlement deliberations will not be admitted into evidence. See Directorate of Facility Engineers, Fort Richardson, Alaska, A/SLMR No. 946 (1977), and U.S. Department of Air Force, Norton Air Force Base, 3 A/SLMR 175, A/SLMR No. 261 (1973). Accordingly, in reaching a decision in the matter, I have not considered the documents relating to attempts at settlement herein.

consideration of the Administrative Law Judge's Recommended Decision and the entire record in this case, including the Complainant's exceptions and supporting brief and the Respondent's answering brief, I find, in agreement with the Administrative Law Judge, that further proceedings on the subject complaint are unwarranted. 2/ Thus, the Complainant's representatives were engaged in unprotected activity when they admittedly violated Agency security procedures. Therefore, in my view, the Respondent's issuance of letters advising them of the violation of security procedures and noting the possibility of discipline for such activity in the future was justified. Accordingly, and as the evidence failed to demonstrate that the Respondent dealt with the Complainant's representatives based on anti-union considerations, I find that the subject complaint should be dismissed in its entirety.

ORDER

IT IS HEREBY ORDERED that the complaint in Case No. 22-08528(CA) be, and it hereby is, dismissed.

2/ The Complainant excepted to certain credibility findings made by the Administrative Law Judge. In Navy Exchange, U.S. Naval Air Station, Quonset Point, Rhode Island, 2 A/SLMR 377, A/SLMR No. 180 (1972), it was held that as a matter of policy the Assistant Secretary would not overrule an Administrative Law Judge's resolution with respect to credibility unless the preponderance of all the relevant evidence established that such resolution clearly was incorrect. Based on a review of the record herein, I find no basis for reversing the Administrative Law Judge's credibility findings herein.

Administrative Law Judge

RECOMMENDED DECISION

Statement of the Case

This case arises under Executive Order 11491 as amended (hereinafter referred to as the Order). It was initiated by the filing of an unfair labor practice complaint on September 22, 1977, by Mr. Carmen R. Delle Donne, President of the Complainant labor organization, the exclusive representative of all non-supervisory professional and non-professional employees of Respondent's metropolitan Washington, D. C. facilities.

A hearing was held in Washington, D. C. on April 6 and 7, 1978. Following the hearing the Complainant initiated efforts to effect approval of a settlement agreement. Negotiations ensued but were not successful. Documents relating thereto were transmitted to the administrative law judge and are hereby made a part of the record. 1/

The Complaint alleges that the Respondent (herein also referred to as NARS) violated Sections 19(a)(1) and (2) of the Order by addressing letters dated March 9, 1977 to Mr. Delle Donne and Mr. Thomas Lipscomb, Vice President of Local 2578, charging both of the named Union officials with violation of NARS security regulations relating to the Washington National Records Center (WNRC) Building in Suitland, Maryland on March 3, 1977; threatening them both with disciplinary action; and by forbidding Mr. Delle Donne entrance into a restricted area of the WNRC building. The Complaint alleges further that the letters were excessively harsh, interfered with the performance of representational responsibilities of the named Union officials, held them both up to ridicule, made them a negative example in order to discourage union membership, and constituted disparate treatment based upon union affiliation.

1/ Letter dated April 20, 1978, together with enclosure, addressed to the administrative law judge by Mr. Carmen R. Delle Donne; undated Memorandum of Understanding; letter dated April 27, 1978 addressed to the administrative law judge by Mr. Delle Donne; letter dated April 28, 1978 together with enclosure addressed to the administrative law judge by Mr. Philip W. Spayd.

Findings of Fact

The allegations outlined may not be entirely understood without an awareness of details of information relating to Respondent's facilities and security regulations pertaining thereto. The Respondent's major facility is the main National Archives Building located at Seventh Street and Pennsylvania Avenue, N. W., in downtown Washington, D. C. Four components of the Respondent are located in the Washington National Records Center Building in Suitland, Maryland. They are the WNRC itself, the General Archives Division, the Records Declassification Division, and a Preservation Lab. The WNRC Building housing these components is a large two story structure the front of which is used for elements generally open to the public. These include office areas, a cafeteria, a public research room and a conference room.

The main portion of the building, to the rear of the public areas, is divided into storage modules designated as "stacks" or "vaults," each of which consists of one acre of storage space. There are ten of these storage modules on the first level and ten on the second level. The terms "stacks" or "vaults" are used interchangeably in the record; however, it clearly appeared that "vaults" are storage modules protected by additional security measures.

Of the twenty storage modules, those designated as one, two, and three, are classified as vaults. These are protected by additional doors, combination locks and special pass requirements because of the highly sensitive nature of documents stored.

Entrance to the storage module areas from segments of the building open to the public is protected by double doors on which is printed a sign carrying the notice, "Restricted Area, Badge or Escort Required." 2/ The double door entrance

2/ 41 C.F.R. 101-20.303 prohibits failure to comply with official signs of a prohibitory or directory nature, and 41 C.F.R. 101-20.314 prescribes a penalty of not more than $50.00 or imprisonment of not more than thirty days, or both for such conduct. Section 318(c) of Title 18 United States Code makes such conduct a petty offense.

mentioned is the only entrance leading into the restricted area from the front of the WNRC. Loading docks are located at the rear of the building, and entrance to the restricted storage modules may be gained through the loading dock sections; however, that area is not open to the public. Activity there is conducted under supervision, and entrance into the restricted storage module area from the rear of the building is controlled to preclude unauthorized entrance.

On March 3, 1977, the date in question, and thereafter, overall responsibility for the security of the WNRC was with Mr. Carlton L. Brown, the Director of the WNRC. In addition he had direct responsibility for sixteen of the twenty storage modules. Mr. Daniel T. Goggin, who was Mr. Lipscomb's supervisor, and Director of the General Archives Division, was assigned direct responsibility for three storage modules designated as stacks three, four and five. The March 9, 1977 letter to Mr. Delle Donne was signed by Mr. Brown and Mr. Goggin. The March 9, 1977 letter to Mr. Lipscomb was signed by Mr. Goggin.

The primary mission of the WNRC is to store records created by federal agencies in the metropolitan Washington, D.C. area and elsewhere. Records of approximately 257 federal agencies and bureaus are stored at the WNRC. These records include sensitive investigative reports relating to individuals employed by the agencies and bureaus storing such records. Other examples of records in this category include naval officer fitness for duty reports, World War II foreign national internment files, investigative reports of the Inspector General of the Department of the Army, Immigration and Naturalization Service files, and records relating to white slave traffic and bootlegging. Records in sixteen storage modules at the WNRC contain such agency and bureau files. Legal ownership of such records is in the agency creating the records. Such documents are not considered part of the permanent National Archives collection and are subject to the Privacy Act and stringent regulatory restrictions placed upon access to such records by the various governmental agencies storing the records with NARS.

For example, Respondent's Exhibit 1 indicates that access to Public Utility Regulation Branch records stored at the WNRC by the Securities and Exchange Commission is "limited to those persons whose official duties require such access." Similarly, Civil Service Commission personnel investigation records are protected by a rule that "all officials and employees are required to have an appropriate security clearance before they are allowed access to the files and records."

Classified documents and very sensitive top secret and secret national security information is stored in vaults. The papers of former President Richard Nixon are located within a vault storage module situated within the restricted area of the WNRC. In the General Archives Division segment of the WNRC a variety of records are permanently stored, including court records, military records and patent files.

There are established procedures and regulations governing entrance to the WNRC restricted area wherein the twenty storage modules are located. Entry is gained by inserting a color-coded card key identification pass into a slot. 3/ The card key triggers a mechanism which unlocks the double door entrance and permits entry into the restricted area. 4/ All employees whose duty station is located at the WNRC are issued the card key passes which authorize their admittance into the large restricted area, and must display these passes while working in the area.

3/ The color-coded card passes also reflect the level of security clearance assigned to employees authorized to enter the restricted area.

4/ A guard is stationed at a position adjacent to the double doors, but his function is to protect the building and its equipment, and not to police ingress and egress through the double doors.

Occasionally it is necessary for National Archives employees not stationed at the WNRC to perform work assignments at the WNRC Building. In such cases admittance to the restricted area embracing the twenty storage modules may be accomplished only after following specific procedures designed to limit temporary access to the area. The reason for access must be explained, and clearance to enter may be obtained only from an individual authorized to grant clearance. The employee must fill out and sign a register, and obtain a temporary visitor's pass (card key) which then may be retained for a limited period and used to open the double doors leading into the restricted area. 5/ There is no regulatory basis for waiving procedures so as to permit unlimited freedom of access to the restricted area by National Archives employees whose work assignments involve being in the restricted area. Temporary badges are issued based upon a need to enter the restricted area to perform some work assignment. Visitor badges are not issued routinely, and National Archives employees not assigned to the WNRC are assigned to work at the WNRC only infrequently.

Under certain limited conditions persons who are not General Services Administration employees, such as employees of other government agencies and researchers, may have access to records stored in the restricted area. As a rule such persons are not permitted to enter the restricted area of the building, but must perform their research relating to the records in a public research room located out of the restricted area. Such non-General Services Administration users may sometimes be granted permission to enter the restricted storage module area. This occurs when it is not feasible to carry large quantities of records to the research room. In such cases the person must first obtain permission to enter the restricted area from an authorized supervisor. A WNRC staff member is then designated to escort and monitor the person at all times while such person is in the restricted area.

5/ When a National Archives employee not assigned to the WNRC seeks to gain access to vault storage areas, additional clearance procedures are employed.

The regulations provide for tours of the restricted area when they have been approved by a unit head, and those on the tour are "in the continuous presence of the unit head or his designee." (Joint Exhibit 6). Such tours occur infrequently.

Under the provisions of NARS regulations, WNRC employees are responsible for challenging any person in the restricted area who either is not wearing a badge or is not accompanied by a WNRC escort wearing a badge. They must report suspected violations to supervisory authority. (Joint Exhibit 6, paragraph 4(b)). Further, any employee who uses or allows the use of his or her badge to admit an unauthorized person to the WNRC restricted area may be subjected to disciplinary action. (Joint Exhibit 6, paragraph 7(c)). WNRC employees are provided orientation concerning these responsibilities. (Respondent's Exhibit 4).

The record reflects a regulatory pattern designed to prevent unauthorized access to the restricted area of the WNRC, and even stricter security with respect to the vault storage modules. Only WNRC staff or those properly cleared or escorted are allowed to enter. This policy has been fashioned to protect the records and to preclude unauthorized access to the records stored at WNRC. It was established that records have, in the past, been stolen from the WNRC, and that a fire occurred there on May 26, 1976. Access to the restricted area is conditioned on a need to have access to WNRC records, or to perform some duty relating to the records. Although records of a very sensitive nature are located throughout the restricted area, such records are stored in vault storage modules in particular. Access to the restricted area would bring one within closer proximity to the vault storage modules.

Mr. Delle Donne is a professional archivist assigned to the main National Archives Building located in the District of Columbia. At no time did Mr. Delle Donne obtain authority to enter the restricted area of the WNRC. It was also established that he was not cleared to have access to classified records. His work on behalf of the National Archives is performed at the National Archives Building rather than the WNRC. Although it was brought out that he was temporarily assigned to work at the center in 1974 for a period of about three weeks; on the date of the alleged unfair labor practice Mr. Delle Donne was assigned work at the National Archives Building in the District of Columbia, and his duties as an archivist did not require him to be in the restricted area of the WNRC. On the other hand, Mr. Lipscomb was, on March 3, 1977, a member of the General Archives Division staff, and as a staff member had permanent access to the WNRC restricted area.

The record reflects no dispute concerning the facts relative to the security violations in question. Using his personal card pass key, Mr. Lipscomb opened the locked double door through which entrance to the restricted area is gained and permitted Mr. Delle Donne to enter to perform business related to his office in the Union. When questioned by his supervisor on March 3, 1977, Mr. Lipscomb admitted an awareness that he had no authority to permit Mr. Delle Donne's entrance into the restricted area of the WNRC, that Mr. Delle Donne obtained no authorization to enter, and further that Mr. Lipscomb had not obtained permission for Mr. Delle Donne to enter. Mr. Lipscomb also denied that he was officially escorting Mr. Delle Donne in the restricted area.

Mr. Delle Donne admitted key details regarding the unauthorized entrance in the following words:

...Tom Lipscomb and I tried to get into the stack areas at Washington National Records Center. There's a sign on the door that says 'restricted area, badge or escort required.'

He admitted that he obtained no visitor's card to be used as a key to enter, that he sought no permission to enter, and that he was in the restricted area for a period of about twenty minutes before exiting through the locked double doors used to gain entry. At the hearing Mr. Delle Donne reluctantly admitted that his entrance into the restricted area was violative of National Archives regulations. 6/

The record disclosed that Mr. Delle Donne was observed speaking to one Charles Schamel, a General Archives Division staff member, in the vicinity of stack #4, within the restricted area. Mr. Edward Hill, a General Archives Division supervisor and the individual who observed Mr. Delle Donne, reported Mr. Delle Donne's presence to Mr. Daniel T. Goggin, Director of the General Archives Division. Because the meeting occurred in a segment of the WNRC under Mr. Goggin's jurisdiction, and because it was standard procedure to investigate complaints to determine whether corrective action would be required, Mr. Goggin conducted an inquiry to ascertain whether any WNRC official in authority had authorized Mr. Delle Donne to enter the restricted area; and whether any employee had received permission to leave their job to meet with a Union representative. 7/ The incident described was admitted by Mr. Delle Donne, including his failure to obtain permission to meet with Charles Schamel.

6/ Mr. Delle Donne also admitted prior entrance into the restricted area in 1974 under circumstances apparently violative of security regulations. (Tr. 20-21, 58).

7/ According to the collective bargaining agreement, representational and consultation duties may be performed only in accordance with the terms of the agreement. Union representatives must obtain permission from an employee's supervisor before contacting such employee. (Joint Exhibit 5, Article IV, Section 3(b)). The brief filed on behalf of the Complainant appears to recognize that Mr. Delle Donne violated these rules by taking Schamel off the job. (Complainant's Brief at page 18).

Mr. Delle Donne testified that upon entering the building, he and Thomas Lipscomb walked directly to the rear of the building for the purpose of contacting one Ronald Diggs, supervisor of the WNRC Preservation Lab, in order to obtain permission to speak to Alan Johnson, an employee under Diggs' supervision; that they spoke with Diggs; obtained permission; and thereafter discussed with Alan Johnson, a matter involving the selection of members of a Joint Safety and Health Committee. 8/

Mr. Delle Donne stated that upon returning to the front of the WNRC building, he stopped to talk, chat and joke with a "number of employees" (Tr. 18). He described it as "merely idle talk." At another point he referred to a group of "five or so." (Tr. 59-60). It appeared that Mr. Delle Donne's conversation with Schamel occurred after the meeting with Alan Johnson, and at or about the time he was meeting with other employees, as Mr. Delle Donne acknowledged that he observed Mr. Hill passing while he was speaking to a group of employees in the General Archives Division section of the WNRC. Mr. Lipscomb accompanied Delle Donne throughout his stay in the restricted area except for a brief period on the way out of the building when Mr. Lipscomb left Mr. Delle Donne to visit his own office.

8/ The record disclosed that Mr. Diggs did not possess authority to grant Mr. Delle Donne permission to be in the restricted area. It should also be noted here that the status of Mr. Delle Donne and Mr. Lipscomb in the Union, together with Mr. Lipscomb's presence with Mr. Delle Donne, would have conveyed to WNRC employees the appearance of legitimacy to Mr. Delle Donne's visit.

As noted letters dated March 9, 1977 were addressed to Mr. Delle Donne and Mr. Lipscomb in connection with the March 3, 1977 episode. In the letter addressed to Mr. Delle Donne, Mr. Brown and Mr. Goggin admonished him with respect to violation of security regulations governing the WNRC restricted area and further informed him that he had failed to follow the terms of Article IV, Section 3(b) of the collective bargaining agreement when he met with Mr. Schamel without obtaining the permission of Mr. Schamel's supervisor. (Joint Exhibit 3). Mr. Delle Donne was also informed that he could not enter the restricted area to perform representational work, but that he would be provided with space in the public area of the WNRC Building if he needed to meet with employees who worked in the restricted area. In the concluding paragraph of the letter the importance of complying with security regulations was stressed and it was noted that future violations could result in disciplinary action. By way of explanation the letter closes with the following:

This step is being taken to protect the security of this building and the records entrusted to our care. It in no way is being taken to impede the work of the Union or to hamper the performance of authorized representational duties entrusted to the exclusive bargaining agent for the bargaining unit members.

Mr. Lipscomb's letter also contained an admonishment regarding the breach of security regulations in allowing Mr. Delle Donne to enter the restricted area and reminded him that he had no authority to allow admittance to the restricted area. He was informed that further violation could result in disciplinary action. A concluding paragraph similar to the language quoted above was also reflected in the letter addressed to Mr. Lipscomb.

Evidence introduced at the hearing clearly reflected that the purpose of both letters was to call attention to the violation of security procedures relating to the restricted area, and to remind both officials of the applicable security rules. No disciplinary action was intended by the Respondent and none was effected by the issuance of the letters. In this regard it should be noted that neither the letters nor their content were posted or otherwise disseminated by the Respondent. They were delivered personally to the recipients. The record indicates that special measures were taken to protect against disclosure to individuals other than those directly concerned with the matter.

It was also established that the exclusion of Mr. Delle Donne was based entirely upon the absence of an official reason or reasons for his presence in the restricted area, and not on his affiliation with the Union. That is, since his duties as an archivist in no way related to the WNRC, and since his presence there was necessarily based entirely upon his position as Union President, the Respondent concluded that he should not have been provided access into the WNRC restricted area. However, it became quite clear that the limitation imposed would not have been applicable in the event Mr. Delle Donne's duties had required his being in the WNRC restricted area. Evidence adduced indicated that in such cases he would have been assigned a temporary visitor's badge. The letter was addressed to him as one without actual duties to perform in the restricted area, and one whose only asserted justification for being there rested on his holding office as a Union Official. It was also clear that a suitable public area was offered to Mr. Delle Donne to be used for the purpose of conducting Union representational work at the WNRC.

The record reflected that since issuance of the letter, Mr. Delle Donne has been provided with a conference room at the WNRC to meet with bargaining unit employees, and that he has not been denied any opportunity to meet with them.

Complainant endeavored to establish that WNRC security regulations were not fairly enforced, and that Mr. Delle Donne and Mr. Lipscomb were subjected to disparate treatment because of their positions in the Union. However, a review of the record fails to show that the Union was made the victim of such discriminatory treatment.

It was established that responsible WNRC officials have, in the past, initiated corrective action upon learning of security violations by employees of other government agencies. Although there was no showing of violations by other employees of the National Archives, nor of instances wherein letters were issued to National Archives employees, Mr. Goggin and Mr. Brown testified that to their knowledge regulations were being enforced generally, and that NARS employees complied with the regulations. 9/ Illustrations of prompt enforcement against individuals not employed by NARS were described. A contention that retired WNRC employees were given liberal access to the WNRC restricted areas was not established. Moreover, an example of a specific denial of access was cited by Mr. Goggin. The record provides no basis for questioning the credibility of these two witnesses.

With respect to employees from the main NARS Building temporarily assigned to the WNRC, it was established that such personnel first were assigned temporary visitor's badges in accordance with security regulations. This mandatory requirement has been enforced. The unusual nature of such violations as occurred on March 3, 1977, was apparent, in the light of the absence of prior breaches of security regulations by National Archives employees.

9/ Respondent's Exhibit 4 reflects that as of January 1975, security regulations were tightened so as to preclude non-General Services Administration researchers access into the restricted area without an escort. A period of employee education was required to implement the new policy.

Similarly, an alleged pattern of security regulation violations by individuals gaining entrance to the restricted area from the loading dock was not established by the Complainant. Efforts to construe authorized tours of the area as a basis for a finding that Mr. Delle Donne and Mr. Lipscomb were not accorded similar privileges also failed, in that it was shown that such tours were conducted only infrequently, were authorized by security regulations, and were escorted at all times.

Efforts to show a basis for disparate treatment resulted in vague and non-specific assertions having no probative value. In this connection it is noted that the Complainant's case rests heavily upon the testimony of Mr. Delle Donne; however, his credibility must be questioned in important areas of concern. His testimony was unjustifiably evasive and vague with respect to the purpose and details of his visit to the restricted area of WNRC. Although employed as a professional archivist since 1966, and although aware of the warning sign at the entrance to the restricted area, he professed ignorance of rules relating to security designed to protect the restricted area.

At another point Mr. Delle Donne endeavored to leave the erroneous impression that a National Archives identification card, of a type possessed by all National Archives employees, was sufficient to authorize entrance into the WNRC restricted area. (Complainant's Exhibit 1). The record is clear that such identification did not provide a basis for entrance. From the record as a whole, and Mr. Delle Donne's own testimony, there was no plausible reason for his giving misleading testimony with respect to his National Archives identification card.

Under the terms of the collective bargaining agreement, "the Union may designate representatives whom Management will authorize to leave their duty stations during regular duty hours for reasonable periods of time to perform necessary Union representational and consultation duties..." (Joint Exhibit 6, Article IV, Section 3(a)). Under the terms of the agreement six representatives may be appointed to handle such work at the WNRC. There was no showing that Mr. Delle Donne was a representative within the meaning of Article IV Section 3(a). As noted the record disclosed that Thomas Lipscomb, Vice President of the Union, had access to the WNRC restricted area. It was brought out that two or three Union representatives worked in the WNRC restricted area, and that WNRC bargaining unit members had access to such representatives in the restricted area.

In accordance with the provisions of Section 12(a) of the Order, the agreement is also made subject to all existing published "GSA Policies and regulations in existence at the time the agreement was approved." The agreement was approved on November 6, 1972. Regulations limiting access to the WNRC restricted area in the manner herein outlined were promulgated at least as early as July 26, 1972. (Joint Exhibit 6).

Discussion and Conclusions

The general issue posed by the complaint is simply whether the letters issued to Mr. Delle Donne and Mr. Lipscomb, by the Respondent violated Sections 19(a)(1) and (2) of the Order. These sections provide that agency management shall not:

- (1) interfere with, restrain, or coerce employees in the exercise of the rights assured by this Order:
- (2) encourage or discourage membership in a labor organization by discrimination in regard to hiring, tenure, promotion, or other conditions of employment....

Section 203.15 of the Rules of the Assistant Secretary of Labor for Labor-Management Relations, 29 C.F.R. 203.15, provides that, "a complainant, in asserting a violation of the Order shall have the burden of proving the allegations of the complaint by a preponderance of the evidence." This burden has not been met.

The record demonstrates that Mr. Delle Donne's entrance into and presence in the WNRC restricted area, was violative of security regulations. Mr. Lipscomb's conduct in allowing entrance also constituted unauthorized admittance of Mr. Delle Donne, and thus was a violation of procedures established by security regulations. Facts relating to these infractions were admitted by Mr. Delle Donne and Mr. Lipscomb. It was also established that Mr. Delle Donne's meeting with Charles Schamel contravened Article IV, Section 3(b) of the collective bargaining agreement, in that Mr. Delle Donne had not obtained permission to meet with Mr. Schamel, nor was there any showing that Mr. Delle Donne's visit with employees, other than Alan Johnson, was authorized representational work. 10/

The Assistant Secretary has held that Union officers must obey rules and regulations, just as must all other employees. Department of the Air Force, Headquarters, 31st Combat Group (TAC), Homestead Air Force Base, Florida, A/SLMR No. 578; U.S. Department of the Navy, Portsmouth Naval Shipyard, A/SLMR No. 445. Moreover, there is no doubt that the Respondent had the authority to institute and enforce security procedures if such procedures were not enforced in 10/ It should be noted that Respondent questions Mr. Delle Donne's use of official time to meet with Alan Johnson. However, it appeared that had Mr. Delle Donne's entrance into the restricted area been legitimate, this element of Union business would have been legitimate.

a discriminatory manner. Department of the Navy, Puget Sound Naval Shipyard, Bremerton, Washington, A/SLMR No. 415; Directorate of Maintenance, Production Branch, Warner Robins Air Material Area, Robins Air Force Base, A/SLMR No. 374.

The attention of Mr. Delle Donne and Mr. Lipscomb was invited to established procedures designed to protect records stored at the WNRC. The possibility of discipline was called to their attention. This was entirely appropriate as regulations in effect provided for the initiation of disciplinary action in the case of breaches of security regulations. In fact such conduct could be construed as a petty offense under the provisions of 40 U.S.C. 318(c), 41 C.F.R. 101-20.303, and 41 C.F.R. 101-20.314. The regulatory pattern is clearly reflected in Joint Exhibit 6, and Respondent Exhibits 1, 2, 4 and 5.

In this case the conduct questioned was unusual in that violations of this specific type did not, in the ordinary course of events, occur at the WNRC. That is violation of security regulations by National Archives employees was not a problem. Compliance with security regulations, rather than non-compliance, was the pattern in such cases. However, the record did establish Respondent's insistence upon compliance by those in the WNRC, and a tightening of enforcement policy generally, long before the March 3, 1977 episode. There is no credible evidence to show that either Mr. Delle Donne or Mr. Lipscomb was made the victim of disparate treatment or that there was any relationship between their Union activity and Respondent's written insistence on compliance with security regulations. In fact, it appeared that the agency had no alternative, but to insist upon compliance with security regulations after learning of unauthorized admission of Mr. Delle Donne into the WNRC restricted area. There could be no legal justification for a security regulation exemption solely by reason of the fact that Mr. Delle Donne and Mr. Lipscomb did conduct Union business during a portion of the time when Mr. Delle Donne was in the restricted area without authorization.

Such a conclusion would have the effect of abrogating security procedures in situations where there is a need to perform representational duties. Security regulations in effect required that presence in the restricted area be related to a need to have official access to the restricted area. 11/

The Union was not denied access to the restricted area. In fact the collective bargaining agreement provided for six Union representatives to function at the WNRC. Evidence adduced reflected that individuals with the necessary clearance functioned as representatives in the restricted area, and Mr. Delle Donne was never denied access to bargaining unit employees in the public area of the WNRC. In fact Respondent established a procedure whereby a suitable meeting room would be made available to Mr. Delle Donne when prior arrangements had been made to meet with WNRC employees.

It cannot be successfully argued that the issuance of letters to convey Respondent's message regarding security violations was inappropriate. The record clearly establishes that the reason for the use of letters was not based on anti-Union animus, but rather to correct what appeared as a clear breach of security procedures by individuals who presumably should have been sensitive to the need for full compliance with such regulations. Although, there was evidence that warnings issued to others were oral in nature, 11/ Mr. Delle Donne positively acknowledged that he had no right to be in the vault areas for the purpose of performing representational work because he did not possess the proper security classification. However, he argued that he should have been allowed in to perform representational work in the general restricted areas of the WNRC. Since the principle underlying security regulations would be the same in both instances, it clearly appeared that he was referring to a distinction without a difference. His position in this regard is inconsistent, and further indicates the absence of a rationale to support Complainant's position.

it was also brought out that others receiving warnings were not National Archives employees, and further that the oral method of effecting future compliance was appropriate in the situations involved. In fact, corrective steps taken in situations involving other violators, were reported to the agencies concerned. Since this case involved National Archives employees, the issuance of letters does not seem unusual or discriminatory.

Although the letter addressed to Mr. Delle Donne informs him that he may not be allowed into the WNRC restricted area because of security violations, it is determined that this may not give rise to complaint because Mr. Delle Donne's duties were not in any way related to the WNRC restricted area. Credible evidence was introduced to the effect that the letter was in fact written to Mr. Delle Donne as one having no justifiable reason for being in the area, as was shown to be the case; and further that he would be allowed the same freedom of access enjoyed by Mr. Lipscomb and other Union representatives assigned WNRC security clearance should his duty station ever be located at the WNRC.

On the surface, the letter to Mr. Delle Donne seems to imply that had Mr. Delle Donne followed security procedures he would have been allowed entrance; however, a careful reading of the letter in the light of the entire record, reflects that Mr. Delle Donne and Mr. Lipscomb were being apprised of the nature of the security violations, that is unauthorized admission to and presence in the restricted area. The record provides no basis for the conclusion that the Respondent was penalizing Mr. Delle Donne by discontinuing an established practice of allowing Mr. Delle Donne to be in the area. On the contrary, proof introduced by the Respondent makes it clear that in the absence of factors clearly related to a need to have official access to the WNRC restricted area, Mr. Delle Donne could not have acquired the type of authority needed to enter the restricted area at the WNRC.

With respect to the threats of disciplinary action reflected in the two letters, it is noted that a pattern of case authority indicates that threats which do not constitute an infringement of rights under either the Order or the agreement between the parties; but rather as legitimate restriction of an employee to his work station during working hours, do not constitute violations of the Order. Long Beach Naval Shipyard, A/SLMR No. 352; Defense Supply Agency, Defense Contract Administration Services Region, Los Angeles, California, A/SLMR No. 633.

The record reflects that Mr. Delle Donne did not pursue procedures provided in the collective bargaining agreement in connection with his conversation with Mr. Schamel in the vicinity of Mr. Schamel's WNRC work area. The warning to Mr. Delle Donne in this regard was therefore appropriate, and well within the Respondent's prerogatives, as there was no justifiable reason for his meeting with Mr. Schamel. In this regard, his own testimony describes the conversation as involving talking, chatting, and joking with a number of employees. (Tr. 18). It is clear that there would be no basis for visits of this nature.

Based upon the foregoing it must be concluded that the issuance of the letters in question did not constitute violations of Section 19(a)(1) of the Order by interfering with, restraining or coercing either Mr. Delle Donne, Mr. Lipscomb or other bargaining unit members in the exercise of rights guaranteed by the Order. It is also concluded that issuance of the letters was not violative of Section 19(a)(2) in that the letters did not have the effect of discouraging membership in a labor organization by means of discrimination or otherwise.

RECOMMENDATION

Having found that Respondents have not engaged in conduct prohibited by Sections 19(a)(1) and (2) of the Order, it is hereby recommended that the complaint herein be dismissed in its entirety.

UNITED STATES DEPARTMENT OF LABOR
 ASSISTANT SECRETARY FOR LABOR-MANAGEMENT RELATIONS
 SUMMARY OF DECISION AND ORDER OF THE ASSISTANT SECRETARY
 PURSUANT TO SECTION 6 OF EXECUTIVE ORDER 11491, AS AMENDED

ENVIRONMENTAL PROTECTION AGENCY,
 ROBERT S. KERR ENVIRONMENTAL RESEARCH LABORATORY,
 ADA, OKLAHOMA
 A/SLMR No. 1114

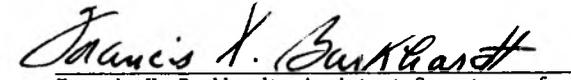

This case involved an unfair labor practice complaint filed by the American Federation of Government Employees, AFL-CIO, Local Union 2897 (Complainant) alleging that the Respondent violated Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order when it unilaterally changed from a past practice of assigning both chemists and technicians to certain projects.

The Administrative Law Judge concluded that the record failed to establish that the Respondent violated Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order. In this regard, he noted that management was under no obligation to negotiate about the decision itself, and that the Complainant so conceded. Moreover, the Administrative Law Judge found that the decision to assign only chemists to the projects involved and its impact and implementation, were inextricably bound together so as to provide no negotiable area. In addition, he found that as only chemists had been assigned in the past to process effluent samples in a similar project, there existed no change in past practice which would require bargaining on impact and implementation.

The Assistant Secretary concurred in the findings, conclusions and recommendation of the Administrative Law Judge. In this regard, he noted that as there was no change in the past practice, no obligation to bargain existed on the impact and implementation of such assignment. Accordingly, he ordered that the complaint be dismissed in its entirety.

IT IS HEREBY ORDERED that the complaint in Case No. 63-7564(CA) be, and it hereby is, dismissed.

DECISION AND ORDER

On July 7, 1978, Administrative Law Judge Steven E. Halpern issued his Recommended Decision and Order in the above-entitled proceeding, finding that the Respondent had not engaged in the unfair labor practices alleged in the complaint and recommending that the complaint be dismissed in its entirety. No exceptions were filed to the Administrative Law Judge's Recommended Decision and Order.

The Assistant Secretary has reviewed the rulings of the Administrative Law Judge made at the hearing and finds that no prejudicial error was committed. The rulings are hereby affirmed. Upon consideration of the Administrative Law Judge's Recommended Decision and Order, and the entire record in the subject case, and noting particularly the absence of exceptions, I hereby adopt the Administrative Law Judge's findings, conclusions and recommendation. Thus, in agreement with the Administrative Law Judge, I find that as there was no change in past practice with respect to utilizing only chemists to perform non-standardized laboratory procedures, no obligation to bargain existed on the impact and implementation of such assignment.

RECOMMENDED DECISION AND ORDER

Statement of the Case

This proceeding under Executive Order 11491, as amended, was initiated by complaint filed July 15, 1977, with an amended complaint having been filed March 1, 1978. Notice of Hearing was originally issued on March 17, 1978, by the Regional Administrator, United States Department of Labor, Labor-Management Services Administration, Kansas City Region.

Pursuant to supplemental notice a hearing was held at Ada, Oklahoma, on May 25, 1978. Thereafter the record closed on June 26, 1978, upon the receipt of the transcript at the undersigned's office in San Francisco, California.

Respondent is charged with having violated section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Executive Order. The factual basis on which the complaint is premised is set forth therein as follows:

On May 5, 1977 Mr. Marvin Wood, Assistant Director, of Robert S. Kerr Environmental Research Laboratory at Ada, Oklahoma, made a unilateral change of working conditions affecting employees in a bargaining unit without meeting and conferring with Local 2897 as required by Executive Order 11491 as amended. Specifically Mr. Wood changed from a practice of long standing whereby both technicians and chemists processed effluent samples at RSKRL to limiting the processing of said effluent samples to chemist (sic).

Complainant by letter brief of June 8, 1978, has withdrawn its contention that management was required to negotiate with it on the decision to utilize only chemists to perform the work at issue. The remaining basis for the complaint is stated as follows: "It still is the position of the Complainant that the local agency Activity was bound by the order to meet and confer as to the procedure to be used and impact of said decision prior to its implementation."

The parties have been afforded full opportunity to be heard, to adduce evidence, to examine and cross-examine witnesses, to make oral argument and to file briefs. Based upon the evidence of record, having observed the witnesses and assessed their credibility and having considered the arguments of the parties, I make the within findings, conclusions and recommendation.

Findings of Fact

I

Complainant Union has, and at all times material had, exclusive recognition as representative of the bargaining unit of which Respondent's physical science technicians are members.

II

Respondent Activity is an arm of the Environmental Protection Agency and is engaged principally in research on the treatment and control of waste water effluents (Tr. 101). In the course of its work it is required to analyze water samples, for which purpose it employs three Physical Science Technicians and four graduate Chemists. Both groups have expertise acquired through practical experience and training while the chemists additionally are possessed of a high degree of theoretical knowledge as a consequence of their academic background.

III

Both chemists and technicians perform the standardized non-experimental procedures involved in the analysis of samples in Respondent's routine work.

IV

Sporadically, Respondent is involved in special non-routine technical assistance projects. Such arise in situations where "almost without exception there is a need for the agency to meet some legal deadline to publish a regulation, to publish a manual, to promulgate numbers." (Tr. 92). During the period from 1969 to the special project here at issue, Respondent participated in two major special assistance projects, one in 1970 and the other in 1975-76. (As to a minor special project which apparently took place some time later in 1976, the knowledge of the witness who testified was limited and I make no findings thereon.)

In the 1970 special project, in which there was no experimental work, both chemists and technicians performed the tests and analyses. In the 1975-76 special project, both chemists and technicians performed the tests and analyses except as to certain experimental work "of a nature that chemists would normally be assigned" (Tr. 96, 97); the technicians did not participate in such experimental work (Tr. 107). For the performance of the latter management apparently went to the trouble and expense of importing additional chemists from an out of state facility; although no evidence was adduced on the question it is unlikely, considering the relatively small number of technicians and chemists employed by the Activity, that the presence of the outside chemists went unnoticed by Complainant.

V

In the fall of 1976, Respondent became aware that it would be assigned the "toxics special assistance project" out of which this case arises. In March 1977, the laboratory work, virtually all of which was overtime, began. Approximately two weeks prior thereto, Respondent made the decision that the actual tests and analyses required in the project would be performed only by chemists and that technicians would be excluded therefrom. Prior advice of neither the decision nor its implementation was given to Complainant.

VI

In approximately April or May 1977, pursuant to Complainant's request, a meeting was held with Respondent's Deputy Director, who was in charge of the toxics project and who was responsible for the aforesaid decision. Complainant's representative initially expressed concern that the technicians were receiving no overtime on the project. After explanation of the reason for management's decision, Complainant's concern turned to the merits and propriety of the decision itself.

VII

Management's decision that the actual tests and analyses be performed exclusively by chemists was premised on the following: the testing procedures were non-standardized and experimental (except for a percentage so small as to be considered de minimus); theoretical chemical knowledge not possessed by the technicians was considered a necessity because of the special nature of the samples (Tr. 82); the civil service classification standards for technicians were inconsistent with the skills required by the project (Tr. 67); it was considered likely that the individuals performing the testing would be required to give legal testimony and in view of their superior credentials it was preferred that such be given by the chemists.

VIII

No intent to deprive the technicians of overtime has been shown. On the contrary, as was pointed out in testimony, it would have been less expensive to complete the project if technicians had been utilized in the testing procedures, and certainly their assistance would have been beneficial to the overworked chemists. In fact, overtime work was available in non-testing aspects of the project. Such was approved by management and offered to all three technicians on several occasions; only one accepted and he worked a total of approximately 150 overtime hours.

Conclusions of Law

The original dispute in this matter comprehended management's obligation to negotiate both on its decision to utilize only chemists to perform the tests and analyses, and the implementation and impact (loss of overtime) of that decision.

The Decision

The parties' negotiated agreement provides that "Management officials of the employer retain the right, in accordance with applicable laws and regulations: to maintain the efficiency of the government operations entrusted to them; to determine the methods, means, and personnel by which such operations are to be conducted..." (Article 4 section 1.(5)). In dealing with "Matters Appropriate For Negotiation" the agreement expressly provides that management's "obligation to meet and confer does not include matters with respect to the numbers, types and grades of positions or employees assigned to a ... work project...." (Article 3, section 2). In dealing with the question of overtime the agreement provides "whenever overtime work is to be performed, it shall be made available to qualified employees on as equitable a basis as practicable and consistent with the employer's needs." (Article 15, section 3) (emphasis supplied).

Thus, there can be no doubt that under the parties' agreement the management decision at issue required no negotiations; and, Complainant now so concedes. Furthermore, it is well established by case law that the Executive Order requires no such negotiations. 1/

Impact and Implementation

Nevertheless, the procedures used by management in the implementation of such decision and the impact thereof on employees adversely affected remains negotiable. 2/

The area of negotiability, however, is circumscribed. Thus, while a proposal which deals with "procedures which 1/ Tidewater Virginia Federal Employees Metal Trades Council and Naval Public Works Center Norfolk, Virginia, FLRC No. 71A-56.

management would observe leading to the exercise of the retained management right" is negotiable, a proposal which "interfere(s) with the exercise of that right itself" is not. In short, "management's options in determining which personnel and the type of personnel who will conduct (its) operations" may not be constricted. 3/

Management in the instant case having made the determination that the assignment of only chemists to perform all phases of the testing procedures in the toxics project would best serve its mission, it was an incidental result that the technicians' overtime was limited. It seems clear that only if the technicians were permitted to participate in some phase of the testing procedures would additional overtime be available to them; it is that very participation against which management had decided.

Thus, in the circumstances of this case management's decision and the implementation thereof would appear to be inextricably bound together. The record, in any event, is devoid of any proposal which would not impose "limitations on which types of positions or employees will actually perform the duties involved" 4/, therefore, I perceive no negotiable area.

Accordingly, while I do not pass upon the propriety of management's decision to exclude the technicians (whose abilities, the record reveals, it holds in high esteem) from all but housekeeping aspects of the toxics project, I conclude that such decision was its right unilaterally to make and implement and I shall recommend that the complaint be dismissed.

Additional Considerations

Management's mid-contract obligation to negotiate upon implementation of a decision arises only when such brings about a "change in, or addition to, personnel policies and practices or matters affecting working conditions." 5/

4/ NAGE, Local R12-58 and McClellan Air Force Base, FLRC No. 75A-90.

5/ Executive Order, section 11(d).

The record reveals that it was management's practice, established in the prior technical assistance project, which occurred in 1975-6, to utilize chemists rather than technicians to perform work of an experimental nature. Management's decision in the toxics project was consistent with that practice.

In other circumstances it might well be argued that a policy is not established and a practice does not arise on the basis of what was done on one prior occasion. However, that only two prior major special assistance projects had been assigned to Respondent in the six or seven years preceding the toxics project magnifies in significance management's practices in conducting those projects, particularly in the crucial area of who is qualified to do its work.

I therefore conclude that prior to the toxics project a policy and practice of utilizing only chemists to perform non-standardized experimental testing had been established; that Respondent's decision in the toxics project merely continued that prior practice; and, accordingly, no duty to negotiate arose upon implementation of that decision. I further conclude that the technicians, at no prior time having had overtime work in connection with the performance of non-standardized and experimental procedures, cannot be said to have been subjected to a change in working conditions by their foreclosure from such in the toxics project.

Accordingly, in resolution of the issue of whether or not there was a change in or addition to personnel practices or policies affecting working conditions in connection with management's decision to utilize only chemists to perform non-standardized experimental techniques in the analyses of effluent samples, particularly in the context of the legal implications of the toxics project, I conclude that there was not.

Thus, even independent of my earlier conclusions, for the foregoing reasons I conclude that there was no obligation to negotiate and that there has been no violation of sections 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Executive Order.

Recommendation

I recommend to the Assistant Secretary that the complaint be dismissed in its entirety.

DECISION AND ORDER

This case involved two unfair labor practice complaints filed by the American Federation of Government Employees, Local 1931, AFL-CIO (Complainant) alleging that the Respondent violated Section 19(a)(1), (2) and (6) of the Order by failing to consult, confer, or negotiate prior to issuing a letter on February 24, 1977, which altered a past practice by limiting the amount of official time permitted the Complainant's President in the discharge of his representational responsibilities and by charging the President with annual leave for periods of time used in excess of the limitation. The Respondent argued, in part, that the February 24, 1977, letter was merely a reaffirmation of an existing policy and that the proper forum for resolving disputes over the amount of time considered reasonable under the terms of the parties' agreement was the grievance and arbitration procedure contained therein.

On May 22, 1978, Administrative Law Judge James J. Butler issued his Recommended Decision and Order in the above-entitled proceeding, finding that the Respondent had not engaged in the unfair labor practices alleged in the subject complaints and recommending that they be dismissed in their entirety. Thereafter, the Complainant filed exceptions with respect to the Administrative Law Judge's Recommended Decision and Order.

The Administrative Law Judge recommended dismissal of the complaints. He found that the Respondent's February 24, 1977, letter did not alter a past practice regarding the use of time but, rather, the change had been instituted earlier as a result of a 1974 Memorandum of Understanding between the parties. He further found no evidence to support the allegation regarding the charge to annual leave.

The Assistant Secretary has reviewed the rulings of the Administrative Law Judge made at the hearing and finds that no prejudicial error was committed. The rulings are hereby affirmed. Upon consideration of the Administrative Law Judge's Recommended Decision and Order and the entire record in these cases, including the Complainant's exceptions, I hereby adopt the Administrative Law Judge's findings, conclusions and recommendations, to the extent consistent herewith.

The Assistant Secretary concurred with the Administrative Law Judge's dismissal of the complaints, finding that the proper forum for the resolution of the dispute involved herein was the contractual grievance-arbitration procedure. In this regard, the Assistant Secretary noted that, essentially, the dispute involved differing and arguable interpretations of the reasonable time provision of the negotiated agreement, rather than a clear, unilateral breach of the agreement. Accordingly, and noting that it has been previously held that such matters are proper subjects for resolution under a contractual grievance-arbitration procedure, rather than through the unfair labor practice procedures of the Executive Order, the Assistant Secretary ordered that the complaints be dismissed.

The instant complaints allege, in effect, that the Respondent violated Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order by failing to consult, confer, or negotiate prior to issuing a letter on February 24, 1977, which unilaterally altered a past practice with respect to the amount of official time permitted the Complainant's President in the discharge of his representational responsibilities. They further allege that the Respondent violated Section 19(a)(1) and (2) of the Order by charging the Complainant's President with annual leave for periods of time used in excess of the specified limitation. The Respondent argued, among other things, that the February 24, 1977, letter was merely a reaffirmation of an existing policy, and that the proper forum for resolving disputes over the amount of time that is considered reasonable under the terms of the parties' negotiated agreement is the grievance and arbitration procedure contained therein. 1/

In reaching his conclusion, the Administrative Law Judge found that the parties' negotiated agreement provided for the use by the Complainant's president of a reasonable amount of official time to conduct union-management business. He further found, in essence, that subsequent to the execution of the negotiated agreement, on or about June 13, 1974, the parties altered their previous practice of allowing the Complainant's President official time for union-management business for up to 100 percent of his duty time by restricting the amount of official time available for such purpose to 25 percent of his duty time. Under these circumstances, the Administrative Law Judge found, in effect, that the Respondent's February 24, 1977, letter to the Complainant, restricting the amount of official time available to Complainant's President to 25 percent of his duty time, did not constitute a unilateral change in past practice in violation of its bargaining responsibilities under the Order, but rather, was concerned with a past practice dating

1/ The parties' agreement, which became effective on March 19, 1974, for a three-year period, provided, in pertinent part, as follows:

ARTICLE VI UNION REPRESENTATION AND CONDUCT OF BUSINESS

Section 7. Time off during the regular working hours, as may be necessary, will be authorized to permit the recognized Union Officers and stewards to properly and expeditiously discuss with employees grievances and appropriate matters directly related to work situations, and for attendance at meetings with the Employer. The Union agrees that it will guard against the use of excessive time whenever business of any nature is transacted during working hours, and that only that amount of time necessary to bring about a prompt disposition of the matter will be utilized.

Section 11. The Union representative (President or his duly authorized representative) will be allowed a reasonable time during regular working hours to properly pursue his official liaison duties with the Employer and to provide appropriate representation for employees.

ARTICLE XXIII GRIEVANCE PROCEDURE

Section 1. This Article provides a method for prompt and equitable settlement of grievances over the interpretation and application of the Agreement. It is agreed that this will be the exclusive procedure available to parties and employees for resolving such grievances. It may not cover any other matters, including matters for which statutory appeal procedures exist.

back to 1974. Consequently, the Administrative Law Judge further found the Respondent's action in charging the Complainant's President annual leave for time spent in excess of the 25 percent official time on union-management business was not violative of Section 19(a)(1) and (2) of the Order.

While I agree with the Administrative Law Judge's conclusion that dismissal of the instant complaint is warranted, I reach such conclusion for different reasons. Thus, the Complainant's allegation that the Respondent violated Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order is based upon an asserted breach of the parties' negotiated agreement. Its allegation of violation of Section 19(a)(1) and (2) is based upon the Respondent having charged the Complainant's President with annual leave for excessive time spent on union-management business. Essentially, what is involved herein are the conflicting contentions of the parties as to the proper interpretation of the provision of their negotiated agreement establishing "reasonable" official time for the Complainant's President or his duly authorized representative to engage in representational activities. In this context, I find that a resolution of the issues presented herein requires an interpretation of the parties' negotiated agreement in relation to the use of official time.

It has been previously held that where a matter involves differing and arguable interpretations of a negotiated agreement, as opposed to a clear, unilateral breach of the agreement, such a matter is a proper subject for resolution under a contractual grievance-arbitration procedure, rather than through the unfair labor practice procedures of the Executive Order. 2/ Accordingly, as I find the dispute herein to be a matter of contract interpretation, and as, in my view, the Respondent's conduct did not constitute a clear, unilateral breach of the agreement, I shall order that the complaints herein be dismissed.

ORDER

IT IS HEREBY ORDERED that the complaints in Case Nos. 70-5705(CA) and 70-5707(CA) be, and they hereby are, dismissed.

Background of Case

This case arises as a result of two consolidated complaints filed by Local 1931 of the American Federation of Government Employees, AFL-CIO (herein called "the union") alleging that Department of the Navy, Naval Weapons Station, Concord California (herein sometimes called "the activity") engaged in unfair labor practices in violation of section 19(a)(1), (2) and (6) of Executive Order 11491, as amended (herein called "the Order"), "by issuing letter (dated 24 February 1977) from Ordnance Officer, that changed a past policy and practice, without conferring and consulting."

The letter referred to in the complaint reads in its entirety as follows:

From: Ordnance Officer
 To: Mr. Wilfred J. Scott, Ordnance

Subj: Use of Official Time for Union Business

Ref: (a) Commanding Officer, WPNSTA Concord

1. It has been past practice aboard this Station, in accordance with reference (a), to allow the Union President approximately 25% of his time as "reasonable" under the provisions of the Basic Agreement for conduct of authorized union activities. It has come to my attention that you may be using excessive time for union business. While it is recognized that you have had need for this excessive time in regard to your transition to President of AFGE Local 1931, good management practice requires that a moratorium of 1 March 1977 be called on this excessive time usage.

2. It is therefore requested that commencing 1 March 1977 you limit your official time to 25% of your workweek or 10 hours. It is further requested that you follow the provisions of the Basic Agreement concerning checking out and checking in at your work area when you must be absent on authorized union business.

1. Reference (a) limited the amount of duty time during which you were authorized to conduct Union business to four and one-half hours per workday. Reference (b) charged the Station with an Unfair Labor Practice for failure or refusal to consult prior to the issuance of reference (a). While the test of reference (b) fails to cite sections of Executive Order 11491 which are alleged to have been violated, it is assumed that references to reference (b) provide such specifics.

2. Reference (c) forwarded a report of an impartial investigation and review by CDR A. R. Nash into a separate allegation of an Unfair Labor Practice by the Station. In it, the question of the reasonableness of the four and one-half hours per workday limitation was addressed. CDR Nash found that in light of arbitration rulings, and by comparisons of time authorized at other Naval activities in the Bay Area, the time limitation imposed on the Union President is reasonable.

3. The allegation of a violation of Section 11(a) of reference (d) is considered inappropriate to the subject charge in that Section 11(a) applies to the negotiation of agreements and not to an obligation to consult. Further, the Station has, and will continue to meet and confer in good faith on applicable matters, as evidenced by the bi-monthly Labor-Management meetings conducted by the Civilian Personnel Department and by my Union open-door policy.

4. The allegation of a violation of Section 19(a) of reference (d), assumed to mean 19(a)(6), is considered not founded in fact. On 13 November 1973 reference (e) provided you, as Union President, with additional time for a 90-day period to clear up the back log of Union-Management work and to train Union Representatives (Stewards) to handle grievances and appeals. (In addition, Management provided 96 man-hours of instruction to Union Stewards on the subject of employee representation at formal hearings.) The elimination of the backlog was intended to allow you to begin to perform the full scope of your assigned duties as a Fireman. At our 21 February 1974 meeting you indicated that progress had been made in training Union Officials and Stewards to handle most labor relations matters, but that a considerable backlog still existed. Accordingly, reference (f) was issued which extended the conditions of reference (e) to 1 April 1974. It further requested a reply in writing as to whether you considered the extension reasonable. Your reply, written one month later, concurred with the proposal cited in reference (f). At our meeting of 4 April 1974, you indicated that another extension of time was necessary to complete your training of Stewards and Union Officials. The extension was granted on 12 April 1974 by reference (h) and suggested a meeting on or about 1 May 1974 to discuss the amount of time to be spent on Union-Management business.

5. On 13 June 1974 Mr. Del Frerichs, then Civilian Personnel Officer, provided you with a copy, enclosure (1), for your review and comments. You responded that you would comment promptly. On 18 July 1974 when Mr. Frerichs requested your reply and comments, you stated that you were preparing a written reply which would claim that you should continue to have eight hours allowed time per day as established by "past practice." To date no such written reply is on record.

6. In light of the efforts enumerated in paragraphs 4 and 5 above, it is felt that Management allowed you a reasonable opportunity to comment on, or to provide input to, any subsequent action modifying the amount of duty time allowed for Union-Management business.

7. This correspondence is intended as this activity's final decision on the charge as alleged in reference (b).

J. G. DENHAM

Following the hearings held in this case, it was decided to withhold a formal decision on the merits of the complaint pending completion of negotiations on a new agreement wherein the question of the use of official time for union representational purposes had become a pivotal subject. As it now appears that the parties have reached an impasse in their negotiations there is no reason why this matter should not be decided without further delay.

Discussion, Preliminary Finding and Conclusions

Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order provide as follows:

Sec. 19. Unfair Labor practices. (a) Agency management shall not-

(1) interfere with, restrain, or coerce an employee in the exercise of the rights assured by this Order:

(2) encourage or discourage membership in a labor organization by discrimination in regard to hiring, tenure, promotion, or other conditions of employment;

(6) refuse to consult, confer, or negotiate with a labor organization as required by this Order.

The Federal Labor Relations Council (FLRC) recently had occasion to rule on the applicability of Section 19(a)(1) to the "right" of a local union president's use of official time for employee representational activities as permitted under the terms of the negotiated agreement between her union and the activity accused of an unfair labor practice. In that case, Department of the Air Force Base Procurement Office, Vandenberg Air Force Base, California, FLRC No. 75A-25 (November 19, 1976), Report No. 118, the Council concluded, in part, as follows:

Thus, in order for the Assistant Secretary to find a violation of section 19(a)(1), he must determine that a right assured by the Order is involved, and that agency management has interfered with, restrained, or coerced an employee in the exercise thereof. Where either element is absent, no violation of section 19(a)(1) can be established.

In the instant case, as previously stated, the Assistant Secretary found that the "right" in question concerned the local president's use of official time for employee representational activities as "permitted by the negotiated agreement." He found this right notwithstanding his further finding, with which we agree, that section 20 of the Order expressly prohibits the use of official time by employees to engage in the internal business of a union and that there is no inherent right under the Order for employees, in their capacity as union officials or representatives, to use official time for employee representational activities.

It is clear that the Order does not prohibit the parties from negotiating contractual provisions for the use of official time in contract administration and other representational activities, as they did in the instant case (n. 1, supra). Thus, as the Council explained in a policy statement in this regard:

... nothing in the Order prohibits an agency and a labor organization from negotiating provisions ... which provide for official time for union representatives to engage in contract administration and other representational activities which are of mutual interest to both the agency and labor organization and which relate to the labor-management relationship and not to "internal" union business. Examples of such representational and contract administration activities include the investigation and attempted informal resolution of employee grievances, participation in formal grievance resolution procedures, attending or preparing for meetings of committees on which both the union and management are represented and discussing problems in agreement administration with management officials.

However, the negotiation of such provisions into an agreement does not thereby convert a contractual right into a "right assured by this Order." And, contrary to the reasoning of the Assistant Secretary, "to deprive, or to threaten to deprive, employees or their representatives of the rights accorded them under a negotiated agreement" would not of itself "interfere with, restrain, or coerce employees in the exercise of the rights assured by section 1(a) of the Order." [Emphasis added.] Stated otherwise, the use of official time for employee representational activities, as recognized by the Assistant Secretary, is a contractual right, not a right guaranteed by the Order, and the threatened violation of that provision in the agreement as here found to have occurred is not thereby a violation of a section 1(a) right remediable under section 19(a)(1) of the Order. Accordingly, we must hold that the considerations relied upon by the Assistant Secretary in this case fail to support his finding of a 19(a)(1) violation.

This does not mean that to penalize or threaten to penalize employees for asserting or exercising rights accorded them under a negotiated agreement could not constitute a violation of section 19(a)(1) of the Order where, unlike here, the effect of such penalty or threat of penalty is to interfere with, restrain, or coerce such employees in the exercise of rights assured by the Order, e.g., the rights to form, join, or assist a labor organization. Cf. Department of the Navy, Puget Sound Naval Shipyard, Bremerton, Washington, A/SLMR No. 582, FLRC No. 76A-13 (July 27, 1976), Report No. 108.

Moreover, the Council's decision herein should not be construed as holding that no contractual violation may independently constitute an unfair labor practice. In fact, many acts by agency management and labor organizations can conceivably constitute separate violations of both the Order and negotiated agreements. Indeed, section 19(d) of the Order recognizes that certain acts by a party can constitute separate independent violations of both the Order and a negotiated agreement.

Finally, the Council's conclusion that the Assistant Secretary's 19(a)(1) finding in the instant case must be set aside clearly does not mean that the union is without recourse in this and similar situations. Rather, the relief for alleged violations of negotiated rights (such as involved herein) would be available through the negotiated grievance procedure, which section 13 of the Order requires the parties to include in their agreement. (Footnotes omitted).

The pertinent parts of the basic agreement between the parties in effect during the time in question here are found in Article VI, sections 7 and 11, and in Article XXIII, section 1 (Joint Exhibit No. 1, pages 8, 9 and 44). They provide as follows:

ARTICLE VI

Union Representation and Conduct of Business

Section 7. Time off during regular working hours, as may be necessary, will be authorized to permit the recognized Union Officers and stewards to properly and expeditiously discuss with employees grievances and appropriate matters directly related to work situations, and for attendance at meetings with the Employer. The Union agrees that it will guard against the use of excessive time whenever business of any nature is transacted during working hours, and that only that amount of time necessary to bring about a prompt disposition of the matter will be utilized.

Section 11. The Union representative (President or his duly authorized representative) will be allowed a reasonable time during regular working hours to properly pursue his official liaison duties with the Employer and to provide appropriate representation for employees.

ARTICLE XXIII GRIEVANCE PROCEDURE

Section 1. This Article provides a method for prompt and equitable settlement of grievances over the interpretation and application of the Agreement. It is agreed that this will be the exclusive procedure available to parties and employees for resolving such grievances. It may not cover any other matters, including matters for which statutory appeal procedures exist.

It should be expressly noted at this point, however, that the complaints filed on March 18, 1977, do not allege that any "right," whether assured by the Order or the basic agreement, to the use of official time for union representational activity has been infringed upon in any manner. In fact, the instant consolidated complaint in case no. 70-5705 (CA) affirmatively states that: "The union is not contesting what is reasonable time (for conduct of authorized union business), only that management (the activity) refused to confer or consult prior to changing past policy and practice." In addition, it should be noted that the union also takes the alternate and somewhat inconsistent position in its complaint that if it was the "policy" for the past union president to use approximately 25% of his official time "to conduct Labor Management business, it was never enforced."

The activity, on the other hand, declares that "past practice" aboard the station was the basis upon which it sought "to allow the Union President approximately 25% of his time as 'reasonable' under the provisions of the Basic Agreement for conduct of authorized union activities."

It is seen, therefore, that since each party insists on the compulsion of an alleged different past practice in support of their respective positions, a determination must be made whether one or the other practice actually prevailed as, quite obviously, both could not, in fact, co-exist at one and the same time.

Perhaps one of the best statements regarding the nature and effect of prior or past practices in labor controversies is found in Ford Motor Co. and U.A.W., Local 600, Decision of Arbitrator (Shulman), 1952, 19 LA 237, selected by the Labor Law group and published in Unit 8, Labor Relations and Social Problems (BNA 1972), at pages 203-212. Although this arbitration case was concerned with a question of work classification in the private sector, the following observations found on page 209 of the last work mentioned are germane to the instant inquiry:

A practice, whether or not fully stated in writing, may be the result of an agreement or mutual understanding. And in some industries there are contractual provisions requiring the continuance of unnamed practices in existence at the execution of the collective agreement. A practice thus based on mutual agreement may be subject to change only by mutual agreement. Its binding quality is due, however, not to the fact that it is past practice but rather to the agreement on which it is based.

But there are other practices which are not the result of joint determination at all. They may be mere happenstance, that is, methods that developed without design or deliberation. Or they may be choices by Management in the exercise of managerial discretion as to the convenient methods at the time. In such cases there is no thought of obligation or commitment for the future. Such practices are merely present ways, not prescribed ways, of doing things. The relevant item of significance is not the nature of the particular method but the managerial freedom with respect to it. Being the product of managerial determination in its permitted discretion such practices are, in the absence of contractual provision to the contrary, subject to change in the same discretion. The law and the policy of collective bargaining may well require that the employer inform the Union and that he be ready to discuss the matter with it on request. But there is no requirement of mutual agreement as a condition precedent to a change of a practice of this character.

With the above few check points in mind, we proceed to a consideration of the pertinent factual aspects of the matter at hand.

The union's president Wilfred J. Scott, who lodged the consolidated two complaints in this matter took office on January 10, 1977. Mr. Scott was only the second president the union had elected since its inception. From 1965 until December of 1976, Thomas Gedrich, a station firefighter, had enjoyed the office of president. During his tenure, Mr. Gedrich conducted his union's representational activities under three separate agreements, at least the last two of which provided that he be allowed "a reasonable time" during working hours to properly pursue his official liaison duties with the activity and to provide appropriate representation for employees. It must be clearly understood, however, that Gedrich, unlike his predecessor in office, worked a 24-hour shift consisting of 8 hours work, 8 hours standby and 8 hours sleep.

The record indicates that beginning June 1, 1973, several communications were interchanged and discussions were had between the activity's military and civilian personnel in authority and the then union president (Gedrich) on the subject of the union president's use of work or duty hours for union activity instead of his assigned fire fighting duties. (Respondent's Exhibits 1-5, transcript pp. 72-87). The record further shows that at sometime prior to June 13, 1974, an undated "Memorandum of Understanding" was prepared for or by John G. Denham, then the commanding officer of the activity, on the subject therein set forth. This instrument (Respondent's Exhibit No. 6) together with the handwritten notes set out thereon when offered and accepted without objection, reads as follows:

MEMORANDUM OF UNDERSTANDING

It is agreed and understood that in the interest of the Union and Management, a clarification of "reasonable amount of time" is needed and will be so defined as it pertains to the Office of President, AFGE Local 1931. Accordingly, the following is set forth --

-10-

"Reasonable amount of time" spent on Union-Management business is understood to mean no more than 25% of your 8 hour work period. It is also understood that this time will be utilized in processing of grievances, adverse actions, or other types of appeals or instances where Management-Union meetings are considered necessary.

Additional time on the second shift (Stand-by) may be utilized for other Union-Management business if it does not interfere with previously assigned work or unplanned emergency responses.

Further, it is mutually agreed that, as President of the Local, you are not excused from performing the full scope of firefighter duties which include, but are not limited to, responding to fire alarms, drills, inspections and other duties as assigned.

It is also to be understood that maximum use of stewards and other Union officials will be used to provide assistance in accomplishing the workload of the Local.

In the event that it is found that this Memorandum of Understanding is unworkable, either party may request a conference to discuss it.

A copy of the above set out "Memorandum of Understanding" was, as indicated on the copies introduced, given to Gedrich on June 13, 1974. According to Gedrich, he made an oral, but not a written response to the memorandum. Denham was unable to recall whether any response was made.

Although the record does not reflect the precise nature of Gedrich's oral response, it is reasonable to conclude from all of the evidence that Gedrich felt that the position taken by the activity and reflected in the memorandum furnished him, if implemented, was inconsistent with the "past practice" of the activity to allow him whatever time was necessary during working hours to conduct his union management business. What Gedrich failed or refused to recognize, however, was that it was this very past practice the activity was seeking to change for the reason that Gedrich had been, and was, in its reasoned opinion, devoting less time to his fire fighting duties than the security of the station required. The activity was, under its contractual agreement with the union, certainly not obligated to allow Gedrich all the official time he, in his sole opinion, deemed necessary to conduct what he felt was union representational activity. The mere fact that the activity in its permitted discretion allowed Gedrich broad latitude in the past with respect to his use of official time to engage in representational activities which it then felt were of mutual interest to both the union and the activity, did not, in itself; create some further right to use of official time for union representational business other than that provided for by the contract in effect between the parties. The right to use of time by union representatives for appropriate representative purposes during working hours being purely the product of a negotiated agreement to that effect, no conversion of that right into one protected by the Order may be accomplished by a "past practice," even when clearly established as such.

Now, as to the contention by the union that the policy of restricting the union's president's time spent on union-management business to no more than 25% of his 8-hour work period was never enforced; Gedrich finally admitted under recross-examination that he complied with the memorandum given him on June 13, 1974, and that the time he spent on union business declined accordingly. Further, it should be noted that Gedrich, from February 26, 1976, until succeeded in office on January 1977, conducted all the affairs of the president of the union while on sick leave for four months, and following that, while on full retirement. Quite obviously, the time Gedrich utilized in the conduct of union-management business during this latter period was unrestricted. The union president's full time activity on behalf of the union's business during this term, however, could hardly be called a "past practice" to which either party would thereafter be bound in any respect. Unhappily, this prosecution of union business by a full time representative under the terms of an agreement contemplating only a part time or working union representatives has, no doubt, given rise to the misconception reflected in the complaints and elsewhere, that the unrestricted use of time for union representational activity was established past practice.

Turning now to another source of confusion, the letter of G. C. Rhinebeck to Wilfred J. Scott dated February 24, 1977, the content and supposed impact of which is the primary basis for the instant charge by the union of an unfair labor practice on the part of the activity. Although this instrument was earlier set out, it bears repeating here with emphasis supplied not only because of its impact, but for the convenience of the reader.

Subj: Use of Official Time for Union Business.

1. It has been past practice aboard this Station, in accordance with reference (a), to allow the Union President approximately 25% of his time as "reasonable" under the provisions of the Basic Agreement for conduct of authorized union activities. It has come to my attention that you may be using excessive time for union business. While it is recognized that you have had need for this excessive time in regard to your transition to President of AFGE Local 1931, good management practice requires that a moratorium of 1 March 1977 be called on this excessive time usage.
2. It is therefore requested that commencing 1 March 1977 you limit your official time to 25% of your workweek or 10 hours. It is further requested that you follow the provisions of the Basic Agreement concerning checking out and checking in at your work area when you must be absent on authorized union business.

/s/
G. C. RHINEBECK

With the above at hand (Respondent's Exhibit No. 6), consider the following discourse between Wilfred Scott, acting at this time as counsel for the union, and Commander Rhinebeck, the author of the above letter and head of the activity's ordnance department:

Q In your memo dated 24th of February 1977, were there any latitude given for excuse time for the present union president?

A The letter dated 24 March was not the union president. It was for an ordnance worker. And there was no latitude. It said, requested that you hold time to 25 percent.

Q I'm speaking of the memo dated the 24th of February 1977.

A Yes.

Q It was adressed to who?

A To Mr. Wilfred Scott, Ordnance Worker, Ordnance Department, Weapons Station, Concord.

Q Okay. At that particular time did you know whether or not Mr. Wilfred Scott was union president?

A Yes, he was.

Q Okay. When you speak of representation times in terms of Wilfred Scott, are we speaking about Wilfred Scott or as the union president?

A I'm speaking about Wilfred Scott as an ordnance worker.

Q Not as the union president?

A No.

Q In other words, as Wilfred Scott, the past union president -- Wilfred Scott was limited to 25 percent of his official 40 hours but the union president was not? I am speaking of the 25 percent.

A The union president represents the entire unit of the Station. The appropriate person to restrict the union president is the commanding officer. I am only concerned with what happens within the Ordnance Department.

Q I see. In other words then, the union president was restricted to 25 percent of his time for conducting labor-management business in the Ordnance Department. Is this what your are telling me?

A I am telling you that that letter was written to Mr. Wilfred Scott not the union president, because I felt it was inappropriate for me, as one department on the Station, to direct the union president. But it was within my span of control to direct the employees of the Ordnance Department.

Q No, I am not talking about the Ordnance Department. I am speaking about the union president. Now what I am trying to find out is whether or not this 25 percent was place upon Wilfred Scott as an employee of the Ordnance Department --

A That's correct.

Q Not as the union president?

A I think it is inappropriate for me to try to direct the union president. He represents many departments not just my own.

Q In your memo, Cdr. Rhinebeck, it made reference to the basic agreement. Do you know any place in the basic agreement where the union president is restricted to 25 percent of his official time?

A In the basic agreement he is restricted to a reasonable amount, I believe.

Q Not 25 percent of his official time?

A (Nods no.)

Q Cdr. Rhinebeck, if Wilfred Scott, as an employee of the Ordnance Department, exceeded his 25 percent of his 40-hour work week for conducting appropriate labor-management business, was additional time granted to him?

A Not my intention.

Q If he needed additional time to conduct appropriate labor-management business, whom should the request go to?

A As an ordnance worker, it should have gone to this supervisor. If no satisfaction, through normal channels to me.

Q If Wilfred Scott wanted to use an additional 25 percent of his time to conduct business as the union president, then who should he go to?

A Through normal channels to me and, if it didn't get cleared at that level, he should have gone on to command.

Q Cdr. Rhinebeck, I'm still kind of confused reading this memo, because this memo speaks of the union president, and you told me that this was pertaining to Wilfred Scott. Now what I am trying to figure out is -- are we talking about one and the same person when we are speaking of the 25 percent?

A As far as I know, there is no way we can divide it. However, as far as my direction was going, it was to Mr. Scott as an individual. Now, as far as his position, he does hold a position which I have to recognize.

Q Cdr. Rhinebeck, can you read into the record -- and we are speaking about C-5, Complainant's Exhibit C-5. That is the 24th of February 1977 memo from Cdr. Rhinebeck, Ordnance Officer to Wilfred Scott, Ordnance Department, Union President. From where the first arrow is to the second.

A "To allow the union president approximately 25 percent of his time as reasonable under the provisions of the basic agreement for conduct of authorized union activities." Is that arrow to arrow?

Q Yes. Thank you. And this memo is speaking to the union president, am I correct?

A May I see the front line again? To allow the union president -- correct.

Q Cdr. Rhinebeck, do you know if the past union president was placed on annual leave or leave without pay when he exceeded his normal amount of duties that he was limited to?

-16-

A No, I do not know.

MR. SCOTT: I have no further questions.

JUDGE BUTLER: Mr. Wilson, do you wish to inquire of Cdr. Rhinebeck?

MR. WILSON: Your Honor, I had intended calling him as a witness on behalf of the Respondent. If I might take him on direct, now it will save some time, perhaps, and just ask a few basic questions.

JUDGE BUTLER: Proceed.

DIRECT EXAMINATION

BY MR. WILSON:

Q Cdr. Rhinebeck, as I understood your testimony, you indicated that you, prior to issuing the 24th of February 1977 letter to Mr. Scott, that you reviewed the past history at the Activity. Is this correct?

A Yes.

Q As I understand your testimony, you based your determination to limit or to place some kind of a limitation on Mr. Scott's time as union president on the R-9, which is a letter dated 29 January 1975 from the then commanding officer to the then president of the local, giving a response on an unfair labor practice charge. Is this correct?

A That's correct.

MR. WILSON: I have no further questions.

JUDGE BUTLER: Cdr. Rhinebeck, I am still a little confused about the memorandum of February 24th, 1977. Is it your testimony that this memorandum was directed to Mr. Scott as an employee of your unit, being the Ordnance Department, and not in his capacity as president of Local 1931?

-17-

WITNESS: Yes, sir. I grant it was a bit on the hazy side, but it was my intention that this letter be addressed to an employee of the Ordnance Department rather than to the union president. Again, as I have testified, because I do not control the entire station. I control the Ordnance Department. If it was unsatisfactory, it was my belief that he would probably file a grievance, which would then go to the station level and either reach into arbitration or be determined by the commanding officer that I was either in line or out line. And I would have, in that way, put the decision at higher levels.

JUDGE BUTLER: Then was it your understanding that if he did have some quarrel with the memorandum, that he would proceed in a grievance procedure as outlined in the basic agreement? In what capacity? As an employee of the Ordnance Department or as president of the union?

WITNESS: Either one. It did not matter.

After considering the record as a whole and taking into account evidence from which inferences conflicting with mine might reasonably be drawn, I am persuaded that the February 24, 1977, letter from Rhinebeck to Scott, the subject of the above testimony, was intended to limit Scott's representational activity on behalf of the union. That is to say, it was directed to Scott exclusively in his capacity as president of the union, not to Scott as simply an employee of the Ordnance Department of the activity. Why else would Scott be singled out? No precedent appears on the record pertaining to the specified maximum use of official time for union-management activity other than that fixed 25% limitation intended to be applicable to the president. More than that, the letter expressly makes reference to a letter of January 28, 1975, (Respondent's Exhibit No. 9, also set out above), which was directed to the then president of the union and by its terms and conditions, made applicable only to him in that capacity. It should also be noted that the above mentioned "Memorandum of Understanding" given to Gedrich as president of the union on June 13, 1974, and delivered with the letter of January 28, 1975, as an enclosure, specifically states that the clarification of "reasonable amount of time" contained therein "will be so defined as it pertains to the Office of President AFGE Local 1931." (Emphasis mine). I am most persuaded, however, by Rhinebeck's affirmative answer to the suggestive but nevertheless comprehensive question posed by the activity's counsel on direct examination, to wit:

Q As I understand your testimony, you based your determination to limit or to place some kind of a limitation on Mr. Scott's time as union president on the R-9, which is a letter dated 29 January 1975 from the then commanding officer to the then president of the local, giving a response on an unfair labor practice charge. Is this correct?

A That's correct.

However, as has been observed, Rhinebeck, while unsure as to his intentions in issuing the letter, was positive that he had no authority to direct Scott in his capacity as union president. This being so, the letter of February 24, 1977, was not an order at all; it was merely exhortation and entreaty. But, be that as it may, the letter of February 24, 1977, will be treated here as a valid directive to the extent it remotely repeats by reference thereto the "Memorandum of Understanding" heretofore mentioned and made a part of the letter of January 28, 1975, by enclosure therewith. As will be further demonstrated, it was this 1974 memorandum which brought about the change in past practice about which the union belatedly complains, not the letter of February 24, 1977. Of course, if the union had intended to say that management did not sit down with its president and explain how it thought the "Memorandum of Understanding" delivered to his predecessor in office on June 13, 1974, which contemplated both an 8-hour work shift and an 8-hour standby shift, could be translated into a meaningful and workable application to the new president who worked only a straight 8-hour shift, and thereby afford him some participation in the decision making process related to the continuing implementation of the memorandum, it would have been entirely correct. But even had this been the nature of a complaint, the failure of management to follow this procedure hardly constitutes an unfair labor practice under the terms of either the Order or the station agreement.

It should also be clearly pointed out, that the time limitation policy and practice came about, according to the commanding officer of the activity, not in an attempt to restrict the president's employee representational activity, although it would at times surely have had that effect, but to restrict the time he could be away from his required and essential duties as a fireman. Indeed, the memorandum itself and the letter of January 28, 1975, the reference of the letter of February 24, 1977, both reflect this fact. It is also to be observed that although the purpose of the memorandum directed to the past president of the union no longer exists, the invitation to request a conference contained therein should remain open so long as the memorandum is still in effect and the terms thereof are found to be unworkable. It should be kept in mind, however, that it is the past practice which the memorandum put in motion with which we are primarily concerned here, not the content of the memorandum itself nor the reasons behind its issuance. If, pursuant to the memorandum, it was the practice of the past president of the union to spend no more than 25% of his 8-hour work-period on union-management activity, and Gedrich finally admitted it was, the contention on the part of the union that the imposition of the same time limitation on Scott was a change in past policy and practice is without any substantial merit. To be sure, Scott's department head did not consult or confer with him prior to issuing the letter of February 24, 1977, but Rhinebeck, admittedly without the authority to do so, was only trying to continue, not change, the past policy and practice reflected in the January 28, 1975, letter referred to therein which, in turn was based upon the "Memorandum of Understanding" originally enclosed therewith.

Still later on March 9, 1977, the then acting commanding officer of the activity, F.C. Leisentritt, III, wrote Scott the following letter in response to the instant allegation of an unfair labor practice:

Subj: Alleged Unfair Labor Practice

Ref: (a) AFGE ULP #8 dtd 4 Mar 77
(b) AFGE ULP #1 dtd 28 Feb 77
(c) Basic Agreement of 19 Mar 74

1. This is to acknowledge receipt of reference (a) which alleges that Management failed to consult concerning the placing of certain limitations on the use of official time by the Union President.

2. In response to your allegation, I direct your attention to reference (b). This allegation comes under the purview of reference (c) and is a matter to be pursued under the provisions of Articles XXIII and XXIV of that document, and not under the auspices of an Unfair Labor Practice.

3. In view of this, Management is agreeable to waiving the preliminary steps of the grievance procedure and requesting an arbitration to determine if there has been a violation of the Basic Agreement as you contend. As in reference (b), this is my final decision on this matter.

Considering the nature of its complaints, the letter set out above correctly indicates the duly prescribed and most expeditious recourse open to the union in this situation. While it cannot be said that a cliché so inveterate as "reasonable time" is devoid of meaning altogether, the activity in aid of the safety of the station or, for that matter, any other legitimate reason, may still provide amplifying provisions when amplification is not inconsistent with the contractual agreement between the parties and, of course, the Order.

The record indicates that beginning some time prior to November 13, 1973, management made an effort to resolve the problem confronting it in connection of the division of Gedrich's time between union activities and his assigned duties as a fire fighter. The plan and purpose of management's proposals toward this end are reflected in the letters from Captain Denham to Gedrich dated November 13, 1973, February 22, 1974, and April 12, 1974, (Respondent's Exhibits Nos. 2, 3 and 5 respectively).

The letter of November 13, 1973, reads as follows:

From: Commanding Officer
To: Thomas Gedrich

Subj: Time to be Used for Union Management Activities

1. A recent meeting with you indicated that your present workload of Union Management business makes it difficult for you to perform the full scope of your assigned duties. I am sympathetic to your position and, after consideration, feel that perhaps a solution that is mutually acceptable can be worked out.

2. I would like to propose that you be allowed to use the next ninety (90) days to clear up the backlog of Union Management work and, also to train adequate Union representatives to assist you in presenting appeals and representing Union members, etc. I would also like to suggest that during this period your stewards be given additional training and indoctrination in order that problems may be handled at the lowest possible adequate level.

3. Also, it is proposed that during this 90-day period you continue to work the shifts and in the locations in the same manner that you are presently performing.

4. I am proposing the above approach with the sincere thought in mind that upon completion of the 90 days you will thereafter require less time to reasonably fulfill your Union Management responsibilities as Union President and you will be able to perform the normal scope of your duties in your position as a member of the station Fire Department.

5. At your earliest convenience please advise me whether you feel that this proposal is a reasonable solution. If your answer is affirmative, I intend to put it into effect immediately.

The above letter, it should be noted, contains the first of several invitations extended to Gedrich to respond to the proposal set forth therein. Later, on February 22, 1974, after a meeting between the two the previous day, Denham again wrote Gedrich expressing the wish to arrive at a clearer definition of what to consider as a reasonable amount of time to be spent on union-management business "that would be mutually agreeable." Denham once more stated that the main object in extending the time that Gedrich had indicated was necessary was to get a "reasonable balance" between the time spent on union-management business and the time spent as a fireman. On this particular occasion, Denham asked Gedrich for a written reply whether he considered the proposal set forth in the above letter dated November 13, 1974, and again in the instant letter of February 22, 1974, a reasonable one. On March 21, 1974, some four weeks after the last letter from Denham, Gedrich replied as follows (Respondent's Exhibit No. 4):

21 March 1974

Respectfully submitted,

Thomas Gedrich

I take the above reply to mean that Gedrich was fully aware of the content and purpose of both letters referred to therein and that he concurred with the latest proposal that the time to accomplish the results intended would be extended to April 1, 1974.

Thereafter, on April 12, 1974, in accordance with still another request from Gedrich during a meeting between the two, Denham extended the time for compliance with the aims of management and suggested that a meeting be held on May 1, 1974, "to discuss the amount of time to be spent on union-management business." It is not shown whether this proposed meeting took place, let alone what was actually discussed. It is apparent, however, that Gedrich, prior to the time the memorandum from Denham was placed in his hands on June 13, 1974, was afforded ample opportunity to participate in the decision making process involved in arriving at a fair determination of what, under the terms of the effective station agreement, ordinarily constitutes a "reasonable time" for the union president's representational activity during working hours. Thus, assuming that it was a past practice for the union's president to use whatever time he deemed necessary during his work period to engage in union-management business, this past practice, even if recognized and condoned, was intentionally and legitimately changed after management informed the union of its intentions to do so and invited its participation in the process. There is no requirement of mutual agreement as a condition precedent to a change of practice of this character. The Order only requires the activity to inform the union of the proposed change and be ready to discuss the matter or, if you will, consult and confer, upon request. It is plain, therefore, that not only has the union failed to show that the letter of February 24, 1977 instituted a change in past practice as charged, the activity has affirmatively demonstrated that the change in the past practice of allowing the union president whatever time he deemed necessary during working hours to pursue union-management business was made approximately two and one-half years earlier and only then, after allowing the union over six months to participate in the decision making process toward that end.

(In all fairness, and notwithstanding any of the above, I should state that I am convinced that Scott was not aware of the fact that Gedrich had complied with the memorandum handed him on June 13, 1974, until Gedrich finally admitted that he had done so at the hearing).

The only remaining question in this matter is whether the activity violated sections 19(a)(1), (2) and (6) of the Order when it charged the union's president annual leave for exceeding the time limitation imposed by Rhinebeck's letter of February 24, 1977. Beside the fact that the union's complaint in this respect is not adequately clear, there is no evidence in the record which even suggests the basis of such an allegation. It has been pointed out that Rhinebeck's letter, if it had any validity at all, was merely an urgent request that Scott, in his capacity as president of the union, follow in the future a past practice on the station. The letter created no new policy, it only sought to continue a past one. Therefore, since the record would support no more than mere observations on my part based on pure conjecture, I am precluded from engaging in any discussion whether, under certain circumstances, not shown to be present here, the involuntary forfeiture of annual leave could be inherently destructive of the right assured every employee, including presidents of unions, in Section 1(a) of the Order, to assist a labor organization freely and without fear of penalty or reprisal. It follows that it also becomes unnecessary for me to even attempt to determine under what circumstances is agency management entitled to utilize a disciplinary process to protect the mutually agreed to provisions of the collective bargaining contract, particularly the negotiated provisions which provide for official time for union representatives to engage in representational activities related to the labor-management relationship, from abuse or misuse by union representatives.

Recommendation

Having found that the activity did not engage in unfair labor practices in violation of section 19(a) (1), (2), or (6) of the Order as charged, I recommend that the consolidated complaints heretofore filed in this matter be dismissed in their entirety.

PURSUANT TO SECTION 6 OF EXECUTIVE ORDER 11491, AS AMENDED

SOCIAL SECURITY ADMINISTRATION, HEADQUARTERS BUREAUS AND OFFICES,
BALTIMORE, MARYLAND
A/SLMR No. 1116

This case involved an unfair labor practice complaint filed by the American Federation of Government Employees, Local 1923, AFL-CIO (Complainant) alleging that the Respondent violated Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order by unilaterally changing a policy with respect to overtime compensation of unit employees without affording the Complainant an opportunity to bargain on the procedures and impact of the change.

The Administrative Law Judge concluded that the Respondent had violated Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order. In this regard, he found that the Respondent changed a policy on overtime for unit employees and did so without giving the Complainant reasonable notification prior to the change and without giving it ample opportunity to meet and confer with respect to the procedures and impact of the change. Moreover, the Administrative Law Judge found that the subsequent conduct of the parties in negotiating a new agreement containing provisions covering overtime compensation during administrative closings in emergency situations did not render the violation herein moot or de minimus and he recommended the issuance of an appropriate remedial order.

The Assistant Secretary adopted the Administrative Law Judge's findings, conclusions, and recommendations and issued an appropriate remedial order for the violation found.

DECISION AND ORDER

On May 25, 1978, Administrative Law Judge Robert J. Feldman issued his Recommended Decision and Order in the above-entitled proceeding, finding that the Respondent had engaged in the unfair labor practices alleged in the complaint and recommending that it cease and desist therefrom and take certain affirmative actions as set forth in the attached Administrative Law Judge's Recommended Decision and Order. Thereafter, the Respondent filed exceptions to the Administrative Law Judge's Recommended Decision and Order.

The Assistant Secretary has reviewed the rulings of the Administrative Law Judge made at the hearing and finds that no prejudicial error was committed. The rulings are hereby affirmed. Upon consideration of the Administrative Law Judge's Recommended Decision and Order and the entire record in this case, including the Respondent's exceptions, I hereby adopt the Administrative Law Judge's findings, conclusions and recommendations. ^{1/}

In agreement with the Administrative Law Judge, I find that the Respondent violated Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order by failing to provide the Complainant with a timely opportunity to bargain on the impact and implementation of a change in policy, announced in the Respondent's memorandum of January 14, 1977, which concerned overtime compensation during periods of administrative closings occasioned by hazardous weather and other emergency situations. I also agree with the Administrative Law Judge's conclusion that the violation herein was not rendered "moot" by virtue of the parties' negotiation in the Spring of 1977 and their negotiated agreement of May 1977, which covered the subject of the management of overtime. Thus, while the new negotiated agreement contained provisions relating to overtime compensation during administrative closings in emergency situations, it did not, in my view, clearly and unequivocally waive the Complainant's right to bargain on the impact and implementation with respect to any change in such policy. Furthermore, I reject the Respondent's contention that its conduct herein was de minimus and that therefore, under the Federal Labor Relations Council's holding in Vandenberg Air Force Base, 4392nd Aerospace Support Group, Vandenberg Air Force Base, California, FLRC No. 74A-77, 3 FLRC 491 (1975) dismissal of the complaint was warranted. The Vandenberg case concerned whether a specific act by a party, which occurred in the context of the totality of bargaining conduct during the negotiation of a negotiated agreement, should be deemed violative of the Order. The instant case, on the other hand, concerns a unilateral change in an existing policy and the failure by the Respondent to provide the Complainant with a prior opportunity to bargain on the impact and implementation of such change, a matter which I view as factually distinguishable from the Vandenberg case.

ORDER

Pursuant to Section 6(b) of Executive Order 11491, as amended, and Section 203.26(b) of the Regulations, the Assistant Secretary of Labor for Labor-Management Relations hereby orders that the Social Security Administration, Headquarters Bureaus and Offices, shall:

1. Cease and desist from:

(a) Unilaterally instituting a new policy for the overtime compensation of employees represented exclusively by the American Federation of Government Employees, Local 1923, AFL-CIO, or any other exclusive representative, without first affording such representative an opportunity to meet and confer, to the extent consonant with law and regulations, concerning the impact and implementation of such policy.

(b) In any like or related manner interfering with, restraining, or coercing employees in the exercise of their rights assured by Executive Order 11491, as amended.

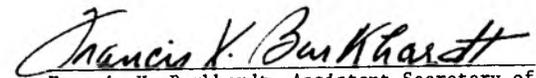

2. Take the following affirmative actions in order to effectuate the purposes and policies of Executive Order 11491, as amended:

(a) Notify the American Federation of Government Employees, Local 1923, AFL-CIO, or any other exclusive representative, of any decision to change its policy of overtime compensation prior to its effectuation, and, upon request, afford such representative the opportunity to meet and confer, to the extent consonant with law and regulations, on the procedures to be utilized in effectuating the decision and on the impact such decision will have on the employees adversely affected by such action.

(b) Post at the facilities of the Social Security Administration, Headquarters Bureaus and Offices, Baltimore, Maryland, copies of the attached notice marked "Appendix" on forms to be furnished by the Assistant Secretary of Labor for Labor-Management Relations. Upon receipt of such forms, they shall be signed by the Director, and shall be posted and maintained by him for 60 days thereafter, in conspicuous places, including all bulletin boards and other places where notices to employees are customarily posted. The Director shall take reasonable steps to insure that such notices are not altered, defaced, or covered by any other material.

including my observation of the witnesses and my judgment of their credibility, I make the following findings of fact, conclusions of law and recommendations.

Findings of Facts

1. At all times material herein Complainant was the exclusive bargaining representative for a unit consisting of Respondent's General Schedule and Wage Grade employees. Included in this unit are employees working in Respondent's Bureau of Disability Insurance.

2. The Bureau of Disability Insurance has instituted a flex time system of work hours on an experimental basis. Under this system, employees are permitted to vary their worktimes from the standard shift hours. In addition, the Bureau of Disability Insurance is the only Bureau in Respondent's central office complex which permits its employees to work overtime. The combination of these two factors results in employees occasionally working morning overtime - performing overtime work prior to the commencement of their standard shift.

3. Inclement weather and other hazardous conditions sometimes forces the administrative closing of buildings in which Disability Insurance Bureau offices are located. An agency directive issued on November 30, 1976, focused on the management of leave during these situations. Entitled "LEAVE FOR HAZARDOUS WEATHER AND OTHER EMERGENCY SITUATIONS," this directive had the effect of cancelling flex time for all regular employees when an announcement is made that an office will open late. Regular employees then revert to their prescribed fixed shift for that day. This directive was involved strictly with the management of leave during these periods and did not indicate how morning overtime was to be effected.

4. On January 14, 1977, Mr. Arthur P. Simermeyer, Assistant Bureau Director for Disability Operations, issued a memorandum to all Division Directors for Disability Operations. The memorandum dealt with the cancellation of flex time and overtime during administrative closings occasioned by hazardous weather and other emergency situations. Mr. Simermeyer testified that the memorandum was prompted by the Agency directive and employee questions and was designed to clarify Bureau policy in this respect. After explaining the effect of late openings on the use of flex time, the memorandum stated:

RECOMMENDED DECISION AND ORDER

This is an unfair labor practice proceeding in which a formal hearing of record was held pursuant to Executive Order 11491 as amended (hereafter referred to as "the Order") and 29 CFR Part 203.

Respondent is charged with violating Sections 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order by unilaterally changing a policy with respect to overtime compensation of unit employees without affording the exclusive bargaining representative an opportunity to meet, confer, or negotiate on the procedures or impact of this decision. Upon all the evidence adduced,

In any case, if an announcement is made that the building will open late, there can be no overtime work performed during the time the building has been declared closed. . . .

Employees who report to work during the period the office is closed, or who remain after the office is closed due to emergency situations, may not be required to work (except for "essential service employees") before the office officially opens or after it officially closes. These employees, as well as those employees providing essential services, who do work when the office is closed, either during their regular tour of duty or before, cannot receive extra compensation such as compensatory time, overtime, administrative leave at the end of the day, etc., for that work.

To assure that flex time employees were aware of these policies, the memorandum suggested that each employee should sign and date a statement to that effect. A sample statement was attached, which read in pertinent part: "No special compensation will be paid for any work performed before the official time at which the building was declared to be open."

5. The above-mentioned memorandum was issued and circulated without any prior notice to, or consultation or negotiation with, Complainant.

6. On January 21, 1977, a meeting was held between Mr. Simermeyer, the Division Directors, and some of Complainant's officers and stewards. Complainant's President, Mr. Harold D. Roof, was among those in attendance. The meeting's purpose was ostensibly to raise issues of mutual concern and to try to establish a better relationship between the parties, Mr. Roof and Mr. Simermeyer both being relatively new to their respective positions.

7. Several matters were discussed at this meeting, including Mr. Simermeyer's January 14 memorandum. Complainant's representatives were the first to raise this issue, indicating concern that management had not met and conferred with the Union prior to issuing the memorandum. They also indicated that the Union intended to file an Unfair Labor Practice charge based on this failure.

8. While Complainant's and Respondent's versions of management's response differ, I find that, at this meeting, management did not indicate a willingness to negotiate on the decision to cancel overtime or on the procedures or impact flowing therefrom. To the contrary, management took the position that the decision was a fait accompli: they indicated a willingness to "discuss" the decision, but not reconsider or rescind it.

9. As of the January 21 meeting with Union officials, management had not had occasion to apply the overtime restrictions enunciated in Mr. Simermeyer's memorandum to any employee. Indeed, from January 14, 1977, to the date of the hearing, no employee has been deprived of overtime as a result of the implementation of the memorandum-directed policy, since to date there have been no administrative closings.

10. During this period the parties were subject to a negotiated agreement which became effective on September 24, 1974. The agreement covers the management of leave and overtime in general, but it does not cover the specific situation addressed in the January 14 memorandum, i.e., the management of overtime during periods of administrative closings.

11. Complainant filed an unfair labor practice charge on March 8, 1977, alleging violations of Sections 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order stemming from Respondent's unilateral change in policy respecting overtime compensation for unit employees. Informal settlement efforts proved unavailing and on May 16, 1977, Complainant filed the complaint leading to the instant proceeding.

12. In May 1977, the parties began negotiations on a new agreement which ultimately went into effect on September 15, 1977. Unlike the previous agreement, the new agreement incorporated provisions dealing with the management of morning overtime during periods of late building openings. Article 10, Section 6 of this agreement states, in pertinent part:

6. An employee scheduled for overtime will be allowed to work and will be paid a minimum of two (2) hours overtime for Saturdays, Sundays, and holidays and one (1) hour for weekdays unless the building has been closed and the employees released before the end of the workday or a late opening is announced in accordance with 7, below.

7. When an announcement (that the office will open late) is made no later than 6:00 a.m. for previously scheduled morning overtime, the overtime for that morning is automatically cancelled. Failure to meet the 6:00 a.m. announcement deadline will result in the scheduled employees being allowed to work unless the building is declared uninhabitable by competent authority.

Conclusions of Law

Respondent contends that, since Mr. Simermeyer's statements in the January 14, 1977 memorandum constitute an arguable interpretation of the provisions of the parties' negotiated agreement, the appropriate remedy lies within the agreement's grievance machinery and not in an unfair labor practice proceeding. The specific problem addressed in the memorandum, however, is not covered by the agreement then in effect and therefore is not grievable under that contract. Furthermore, the issue in this case does not involve an alleged breach of this agreement, but rather an alleged failure to negotiate as required by the Order. Accordingly, I conclude that the issue raised in this dispute is properly cognizable in an unfair labor practice proceeding under Section 19(d) of the Order.

The extent of an Agency's bargaining obligation is outlined in Sections 11(a), 11(b) and 12(b) of the Order. Section 11(a) of the Order provides that an Agency must meet at reasonable times and confer in good faith with respect to personnel policies and practices and matters affecting working conditions of unit employees. Section 11(b) states that this obligation does not include matters in regard to the agency's mission; its organization; the number of employees and the numbers, types, and grades of positions or employees assigned to a unit work project or tour of duty; the technology of performing its work; or its internal security practices. Furthermore, under Sections 12(b)(1), (4), (5) and (6) of the Order, management is accorded the right to direct Agency employees; maintain the efficiency of the Government operations entrusted to them; to determine the methods, means and personnel by which such operations are conducted, and to take whatever actions necessary to carry out the agency's mission in situations of emergency.

Consistent with this bargaining scheme, it has been held that management is obliged to negotiate with respect to the assignment and management of overtime for unit employees. See Philadelphia Metal Trades Council, AFL-CIO and Philadelphia Naval Shipyard, Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, FLRC No. 72A-40, 1 FLRC 457(1973); Local Union No. 2219, International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers, AFL-CIO, and Department of the Army, Corps of Engineers, Little Rock, Arkansas, FLRC No. 71A-46, 1 FLRC 220 (1972). It follows, a fortiori, that management therefore has an obligation to meet and confer with respect to the procedures and impact of a decision to change an established scheme with respect to the allotment and management of overtime. This obligation requires management to afford the exclusive representative reasonable notification of the contemplated action and an ample opportunity to fully explore the matters involved prior to the agency's making the change. Department of the Treasury, Internal Revenue Service, Manhattan District, A/SLMR No. 841 (May 16, 1977); Department of the Navy, Naval Plant Representative Office, Baltimore, Maryland, A/SLMR No. 486. (Feb. 28, 1975); Federal Railroad Administration, A/SLMR No. 418 (July 31, 1974).

Here, it is undisputed that management's January 14, 1977 memorandum effected a change in the allocation and management of overtime compensation for unit employees. Prior to the issuance of this memorandum, employees in Respondent's Bureau of Disability Insurance would occasionally take morning overtime; afterwards, these employees were precluded from receiving such extra compensation on days of late building openings. Accordingly, Respondent was required to bargain with Complainant over the procedures and impact of this change. This it did not do. When confronted with its dereliction some seven days after its decision went into general circulation and effect, management evidenced a willingness to "discuss" the change, but not reconsider or rescind it. This clearly falls short of satisfying management's obligation under the Order. See Department of the Treasury, supra. Accordingly, I conclude that Respondent failed and refused to bargain with Complainant prior to the issuance of its decision changing the overtime compensation of unit employees during periods of administrative closings, contrary to the obligation imposed by the Order.

Notwithstanding such a finding, however, Respondent argues that its action was no more than a technical de minimus violation of the Order, which defect was promptly cured during negotiations leading to the adoption of a new General Agreement on September 15, 1977. In defense of this claim, Respondent notes: (1) no employee has ever had overtime cancelled due to the policy enunciated in the January 14 memorandum since to date there have been no administrative closings due to hazardous weather or other emergency situations, and (2) any bargaining violation was mooted when Respondent met and conferred with Complainant in the spring of 1977 during negotiations leading to an agreement covering the management of overtime in these situations.

The record indicates that Respondent's decision to cancel overtime was effective immediately upon issuance of the January 14 memorandum. Therefore Respondent's obligation to bargain commenced no later than this date. The fact that this decision had no immediate adverse consequences on unit employees is immaterial, since it effected an immediate change in employee working conditions, and therefore Respondent had a duty to negotiate on the impact and procedures of this change. Accordingly, Respondent's first argument must be rejected as without merit.

In support of its second contention, Respondent cites Vandenberg Air Force Base, 4392d Aerospace Support Group, FLRC 74A-77 (1975) and Assistant Secretary decisions in A/SLMR No. 851 and A/SLMR No. 860. However, Respondent's reliance on these decisions is misplaced. These cases all involve situations where management immediately or very shortly thereafter retreated from an improper position and rescinded the actions deemed violative of the Order. Here, Respondent's purported rectification of its failure to bargain occurred a full five months after the issuance of the decision which gave rise to this duty to bargain. Further, Respondent's bargaining on this point even at that time was only incidental to negotiations leading to adoption of a more general agreement. In these circumstances I cannot find that Respondent's conduct was de minimus; rather, Respondent engaged in a clear violation of Sections 19(a) (1) and (6) of the Order.

RECOMMENDATION

Having found that Respondent engaged in conduct violative of Sections 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order, I recommend that the Assistant Secretary adopt the order hereinafter set forth, which is designed to effectuate the policies of the Order.

RECOMMENDED ORDER

Pursuant to Section 6(b) of Executive Order 11491, as amended, and Section 203.26(b) of the Regulations, the Assistant Secretary of Labor for Labor-Management Relations hereby orders that the Social Security Administration, Headquarters Bureaus and Offices, shall:

A/SLMR No. 1117

This case involves a complaint filed jointly by Locals 1708 and 1737, National Federation of Federal Employees (Complainants) alleging, essentially, that the Respondent violated Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order by virtue of unilaterally changing the manner of wearing a utility uniform.

The Administrative Law Judge found that the Respondent violated Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order when it unilaterally issued a regulation which instituted a change in policy with respect to the manner of attire for civilian technicians. In this regard, he noted the previous finding of the Federal Labor Relations Council that the attire of civilian technicians while performing technician duties as opposed to military duties is a negotiable matter.

The Assistant Secretary adopted the findings, conclusions and recommendations of the Administrative Law Judge and ordered that the Respondent cease and desist from the conduct found violative and that it take certain affirmative actions.

DECISION AND ORDER

On July 17, 1978, Administrative Law Judge Burton S. Sternburg issued his Recommended Decision and Order in the above-entitled proceeding, finding that the Respondent had engaged in the unfair labor practices alleged in the complaint and recommending that it cease and desist therefrom and take certain affirmative actions as set forth in the attached Administrative Law Judge's Recommended Decision and Order. 1/

The Assistant Secretary has reviewed the rulings of the Administrative Law Judge made at the hearing and finds that no prejudicial error was committed. The rulings are hereby affirmed. Upon consideration of the Administrative Law Judge's Recommended Decision and Order and the entire record in the subject case, I hereby adopt the Administrative Law Judge's findings, conclusions and recommendations as modified herein.

1/ The Respondent filed untimely exceptions to the Administrative Law Judge's Recommended Decision and Order which have not been considered.

Pursuant to Section 6(b) of Executive Order 11491, as amended, and Section 203.26(b) of the Regulations, the Assistant Secretary of Labor for Labor-Management Relations hereby orders that the Louisiana Army National Guard shall:

1. Cease and desist from:

(a) Instituting a change in policy with respect to the manner of wearing the utility uniform by employees of the Louisiana Army National Guard without notifying Locals 1708 and 1737, National Federation of Federal Employees, the exclusive representatives of its employees, and affording such representatives the opportunity to meet and confer on the decision to effectuate such a change.

DECISION AND ORDER
Statement of the Case

Pursuant to a complaint filed on January 3, 1978, under Executive Order 11491, as amended, by Locals 1708 and 1737, National Federation of Federal Employees (hereinafter called NFFE or the Union), against The Adjutant General's Office, Louisiana Army National Guard (hereinafter called the Respondent or Activity), a Notice of Hearing on Complaint was issued by the Regional Administrator for the Kansas City, Missouri Region on March 24, 1978. The complaint alleges that the Respondent violated Sections 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Executive Order by virtue of its actions in unilaterally instituting and/or applying a regulation which required unit employees to change their mode of dress.

A hearing was held in the captioned matter on May 23, 1978, in New Orleans, Louisiana. All parties were afforded full opportunity to be heard, to examine and cross-examine witnesses, and to introduce evidence bearing on the issues involved herein.

Upon the basis of the entire record, including the stipulations of the parties and my observation of the witnesses and their demeanor, I make the following findings of fact, conclusions and recommendations.

Findings of Fact

NFFE Locals 1708 and 1737 have been accorded exclusive recognition as the representatives of various Louisiana Army National Guard technicians working in the warehouse, the organizational maintenance shop and the State maintenance shops.

For some twenty-five years the Louisiana Army National Guard technicians followed the practice of shedding their fatigue jackets and wearing only white tee shirts while working in the warehouse and maintenance shops during the warm weather months. 1/ The statements of three first line supervisors which were stipulated into the record makes it clear that the supervisors were aware of the aforementioned practice of wearing white tee shirts.

On June 20, 1977, the Adjutant General of the Louisiana Army National Guard, without any prior notice to the Union, issued a regulation entitled "Uniform and Insignia". Chapter 3, Field Work and Hospital Uniforms, of the aforementioned regulation reads in pertinent part as follows:

1/ The warm weather months could begin as early as March and continue as late as November.

Shirts may be removed and olive T-shirts worn when pulling details and working in areas such as motor pools and warehouses.

Subsequent to June 20, 1977, the civilian technicians were required to wear green tee shirts when they saw fit to remove their fatigue jackets because of the warm weather.

Despite a number of requests from the Union, the Respondent refused to meet and confer with the Union concerning that portion of the regulation dealing with the wearing of green tee shirts when fatigue jackets are removed. Although not clear from the record, it appears that Respondent's refusal to consult and confer also ran to the impact of the new regulation on unit personnel

Discussion and Conclusions

The parties stipulated that the issue presented for resolution "is whether the Louisiana Army National Guard is required to meet and confer on the wearing of a green or white tee shirt, under Executive Order 11491, Section 11(a), or on the impact of the issuance of such regulation".

The Agency takes the position "that the color of the tee shirt is non-negotiable, in that it goes to the essence of what constitutes a regulation uniform, and only the Agency may prescribe what does constitute a regulation uniform".

As noted above, the resolution of the instant controversy turns on the negotiability of the regulation concerning the uniform to be worn by the civilian technicians while working in the motor pools and warehouses. In a consolidated decision 2/ the Federal Labor Relations Council had an opportunity to consider the negotiability of various National Guard Regulations dealing with the wearing of uniforms by civilian technicians while performing their non-military duties. The Council concluded that the attire of civilian technicians while performing technician duties as opposed to military duties is a negotiable item. Accordingly, in view of the aforesaid Council decision, I find that the Respondent violated Sections 19(a)(1) and 19(a)(6) of the Executive Order when it unilaterally and without prior notice to the Union issued the regulation requiring the wearing of green tee shirts when fatigue jackets were removed during warm weather. 3/

Moreover, even assuming arguendo the non-negotiability of the regulation concerning the wearing of green tee shirts, Respondent was obligated, however, to bargain with the Union concerning the impact of the change on unit personnel. 4/

Recommendation

Having found that Respondent has engaged in certain conduct prohibited by Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of Executive Order 11491, as amended, I recommend that the Assistant Secretary adopt the following order designed to effectuate the purposes of Executive Order 11491.

ORDER

Pursuant to Section 6(b) of Executive Order 11491, as amended, and Section 203.26(b) of the Regulations, the Assistant Secretary of Labor for Labor-Management Relations hereby orders that the Louisiana Army National Guard should:

1. Cease and desist from:

(a) Instituting a change in policy with respect to the manner of wearing the utility uniform by employees of the Louisiana Army National Guard without notifying Locals 1708 and 1737, National Federation of Federal Employees, the exclusive representative of its employees, and affording such representative the opportunity to meet and confer on the decision to effectuate such a change.

UNITED STATES DEPARTMENT OF LABOR
ASSISTANT SECRETARY FOR LABOR-MANAGEMENT RELATIONS
SUMMARY OF DECISION AND ORDER OF THE ASSISTANT SECRETARY
PURSUANT TO SECTION 6 OF EXECUTIVE ORDER 11491, AS AMENDED

U.S. CUSTOMS SERVICE, REGION IV,
MIAMI, FLORIDA
A/SLMR No. 1118

This case involved an unfair labor practice complaint filed by the National Treasury Employees Union (NTEU) alleging that the Respondent violated Section 19(a)(1), (2), and (6) of the Order by transferring Customs Inspector Ken Brown for two weeks from the Dodge Island Seaport to the Miami International Airport; by soliciting written complaints concerning Brown's behavior as a Customs Inspector; by failing to afford Brown an opportunity to respond to said complaints; and by interrogating two union officers concerning their union activities.

The Administrative Law Judge concluded that the Respondent had violated Section 19(a)(1) and (2) of the Order. He found that, under all the circumstances, Inspector Brown's transfer was discriminatorily motivated. In regard to the Section 19(a)(6) allegation, the Administrative Law Judge found that in addition to the fact that there had been no clear policy in regard to the solicitation of written complaints or the granting of an opportunity to respond, there was no evidence of an intent on the part of the Respondent to establish a change from past practices in regard to Inspector Brown. With regard to the independent Section 19(a)(1) allegation, the Administrative Law Judge concluded that the remarks, taken in context, did not constitute coercive interrogation of the employees involved and, therefore, did not violate Section 19(a)(1) of the Order.

Noting particularly the absence of exceptions, the Assistant Secretary adopted the Administrative Law Judge's findings, conclusions and recommendations. Accordingly, he ordered the Respondent to cease and desist from engaging in the conduct found violative of the Order and to take certain affirmative actions. He also ordered that the portion of the complaint alleging a violation of Section 19(a)(6) of the Order and an independent violation of Section 19(a)(1) of the Order be dismissed.

DECISION AND ORDER

On July 14, 1978, Administrative Law Judge William Naimark issued his Recommended Decision and Order in the above-entitled proceeding, finding that the Respondent's two week transfer of an employee was discriminatorily motivated in violation of Section 19(a)(1) and (2) of the Order and recommending that it cease and desist from such conduct and take certain affirmative actions as set forth in the attached Administrative Law Judge's Recommended Decision and Order. The Administrative Law Judge also found that the Respondent had not violated Section 19(a)(6) of the Order and that certain other conduct was not violative of Section 19(a)(1) of the Order and recommended that those aspects of the complaint be dismissed. No exceptions were filed to the Administrative Law Judge's Recommended Decision and Order.

The Assistant Secretary has reviewed the rulings of the Administrative Law Judge made at the hearing and finds that no prejudicial error was committed. The rulings are hereby affirmed. Upon consideration of the Administrative Law Judge's Recommended Decision and Order and the entire record in the subject case, and noting particularly the absence of exceptions, I hereby adopt the Administrative Law Judge's findings, conclusions and recommendations.

ORDER

Pursuant to Section 6(b) of Executive Order 11491, as amended, and Section 203.26 of the Regulations, the Assistant Secretary of Labor for Labor-Management Relations hereby orders that the U.S. Customs Service, Region IV, Miami, Florida, shall:

1. Cease and desist from:

(a) Transferring, assigning, disciplining, or discriminating in any manner against Kenneth W. Brown in regard to hiring, tenure, promotion, or other conditions of employment in order to discourage membership in the National Treasury Employees Union, or any other labor organization.

(b) In any like or related manner interfering with, restraining, or coercing its employees in the exercise of their rights assured by Executive Order 11491, as amended.

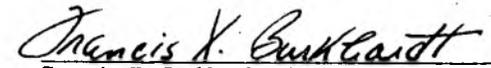

2. Take the following affirmative actions in order to effectuate the purposes and policies of the Order:

(a) Post at its facilities located in the Miami, Florida, area copies of the attached notice marked "Appendix" on forms to be furnished by the Assistant Secretary for Labor-Management Relations. Upon receipt of such forms, they shall be signed by the Regional Commissioner and shall be posted and maintained by him for 60 consecutive days thereafter, in conspicuous places, including all places where notices to employees are customarily posted. The Regional Commissioner shall take reasonable steps to insure that such notices are not altered, defaced, or covered by any other material.

(b) Pursuant to Section 203.27 of the Regulations, notify the Assistant Secretary, in writing, within 30 days from the date of this order as to what steps have been taken to comply herewith.

RECOMMENDED DECISION AND ORDER

Statement of the Case

Pursuant to a Notice of Hearing on Complaint issued on February 28, 1978 by the Regional Administrator for Labor-Management Services of the U.S. Department of Labor, Atlanta Region, a hearing was held before the undersigned in this case on April 20, 1978 at Miami, Florida.

This proceeding arises under Executive Order 11491, as amended (herein called the Order). An original complaint was filed on December 7, 1977 by National Treasury Employees Union (herein called the Complainant) against U.S. Customs Service, Region IV, (herein called the Respondent). A first amended complaint was filed on February 27, 1978. The amended complaint, upon which this proceeding is based, alleged that Respondent violated Sections 19(a)(1), (2) and (6) of the Order by: (a) interrogating employees as to their union activities; (b) transferring Inspector Ken Brown for two weeks from the seaport to the airport because of his union activities; (c) soliciting written complaints concerning Brown's behavior as a Customs Inspector, which was a unilateral change in practice; (d) failing and refusing to afford Brown an opportunity to respond to said complaints, which constituted a unilateral change in past practice. Respondent filed an answer to the complaint on January 23, 1978 denying that it had violated the Order. 1/

Both parties were afforded full opportunity to be heard, to adduce evidence, and to examine as well as cross-examine witnesses. Thereafter, briefs were filed by both parties which have been duly considered.

Upon the entire record herein, from my observation of the witnesses and their demeanor, and based on all the testimony and evidence adduced at the hearing, I make the following findings of fact, conclusions and recommendations:

Findings of Fact

1. At all times material herein the National Treasury Employees Union (NTEU) has been the exclusive bargaining representative for all unit employees, including inspectors, in the U.S. Customs Service attached to Region IV, Miami, Florida. This region covers the seaport at Dodge Island and the Miami International Airport. During such times NTEU Chapter 146 has represented the bargaining unit employees at the Dodge Island Seaport.

1/ At the hearing Respondent's counsel objected to any evidence re the alleged discriminatory transfer of Brown. He insisted that since Complainant agreed not to prosecute this aspect of the charge, the issue should not be litigated. His objection was overruled since the undersigned did not consider it proper to go behind the complaint which alleged such discrimination.

2. Kenneth W. Brown was hired as a Customs inspector by Respondent in 1972 and attached to the Miami airport. In 1975 he was detailed to the Dodge Island Seaport where he continued to serve as a permanent inspector until he was transferred for two weeks to the airport on April 18, 1977. Upon his return to the Seaport, 2/ Brown remained thereat until he was transferred as a customs inspector to Knoxville, Tennessee in the spring of 1977.

3. Brown became a member of NTEU in 1975. Since that time he served as vice-president of NTEU Chapter 146 and was active on its behalf. His activities included: participating in the contract negotiations between Complainant and Respondent, filing grievancies on behalf of employees and Chapter 146, and the filing of unfair labor practice complaints against Respondent.

4. In late February or early March 1977, Brown was assigned to inspect merchandise stored at the Withers Van Lines warehouse located in Miami, Florida. The goods to be inspected were in several large containers - 20' to 40' x 8' x 7' - which held furniture and household effects for various consignees. Some of the merchandise came from Jamaica - a high risk country since marijuana might be among these goods. Brown visited the warehouse, and in order to perform a thorough inspection he requested a dog and a dog handler. Two containers, each of which was completely filled with merchandise, were unloaded in part, but the slow process convinced Brown the examination wouldn't finish by noon of that particular day. Although the dog handler was satisfied that the pieces examined were clean, 3/ Brown requested that the warehousemen make an aisle into the containers in order to inspect all the pieces or effects. This was not done. Moreover, the warehousemen were on a 10:30 a.m. check and no progress had been made in the examination. Thus, Brown decided that the inspection be conducted at a later date when personnel would be available to perform the job thoroughly. He left the warehouse, the merchandise was reloaded onto the containers, and the examination was continued subsequently. As a result of this occurrence, each consignee was required to pay $30 for Brown's overtime devoted to this task.

2/ Record testimony reveals the employees considered and I find that the working conditions were better at the seaport, and an assignment thereat was deemed preferable to one at the airport.

3/ The term "clean" connotes the items did not contain forbidden material as marijuana, etc.

5. In March 1977 Brown went to inspect freight located at Ryder Truck Lines, Inc. He was given some papers, including a logbook of merchandise and directed to the dock area. The examination was completed, but Brown returned a week later on March 28, 1977 for further inspection. Upon being given the same documents, Brown objected to being required to hold on to these papers. He went downstairs but found nobody with whom to consult re the examination of the freight. Brown spoke to Robert J. Crumbley, office manager of Ryder Trucking, concerning the failure of that company to locate the shipment and have it ready for inspection. Moreover, Brown stated he couldn't wait around since he had other work to do. Accordingly he left the warehouse.

6. Companies such as Ryder Trucking receive "in bond" freight, which is merchandise received by them for storage and delivery after posting a sufficient bond to enable them to retain the goods without direct supervision by U.S. Customs. Upon receipt of the shipment, Ryder must notify the consignee and Customs that the merchandise is in its possession. When the consignee has made an entry of the shipment and storage, there is a scheduled examination by Customs within two or three days after its receives notification of the entry.

An inspector may have several examinations to conduct in a day. Record testimony reflects, and I find, that if the cargo is not ready and available for inspection when the Customs official arrives, the practice has been - in accordance with instructions - for the inspector to leave the premises and not delay the matter further.

7. In respect to the incidents at Ryder Trucking, the record indicates that shortly after Brown's last visit thereat Crumbley telephoned Paul Wyche who was a supervisory Customs inspector at Dodge Island. Crumbley related his dissatisfaction with Brown's conduct during his attendance at the Ryder warehouse. In respect to the incidents at Withers Van Lines, record facts show that a representative from this firm, "Chuck" Charles mentioned Brown's behavior to Harold Zagar, Chief Inspector at Dodge Island. Zagar in turn, related the complaints to James E. Townsend, Respondent's District Director, and the latter told Zagar to get both complaints in writing.

8. Supervisor Wyche, upon instruction from Zagar, telephoned Ryder Trucking representative Crumbley and asked him to reduce to writing his complaint about Brown's visit to that firm's warehouse. A written complaint dated March 30, 1977 was thus sent to Zagar from Crumbley. Upon being asked to submit in writing its complaint concerning Brown's activities at Withers Van Lines, the latter's representative, F.A. Brook, sent a letter dated April 1, 1977 to Respondent. 4/

9. The record reflects that no express or declared policy existed whereby complaints about the conduct of Customs inspectors were required to be in writing. While District Director Townsend testified he had told supervisors in the past that complaints of a serious nature should be in writing, Chief Inspector Wyche testified that complaints similar to those leveled against Brown were not usually required to be reduced to writing by a complainant. Record facts also reveal that Respondent had received written complaints in the past concerning inspectors who were called into the supervisor's office; that the matters were usually discussed with each inspector; and that no further action was taken in respect thereto.
