10. Brown, who had been on leave for several weeks, reported for duty at the seaport on April 18, 1977. He was called into the supervisor's office where supervisors Zagar and Dunham were present. Zagar handed Brown a letter from Townsend, with the written complaints from Ryder Trucking and Withers Van Lines attached thereto, and he remarked that the employee had "done it again" and was being transferred. Brown protested and some discussion ensued as to the merits of the complaints, whereupon Dunham told Brown to report to the airport and the latter then left the office.

11. The Townsend letter, which was addressed to Brown, informed him that the two recent complaints against him, in addition to an incident occurring between Brown and Belcher Oil 5/ employees on November 7, 1976, raised questions as to 4/ Both written complaints were substantially corroborative of Brown's version of the events which transpired at the two warehouses.

5/ While working at this firm's premises on Fisher Island, Brown was accused of threatening someone, throwing a flashlight at a Belcher Oil employee, and attacking the firm's dog. The matter was investigated but no action taken against him. Prior thereto, Brown filed a grievance based on management not allowing all inspectors to gauge and board oil tankers. He also charged one of the three inspectors thereat with a criminal offense, and the said inspector was removed from Fisher Island.

his ability to deal effectively and maintain good relations with the public at importers' premises. It further advised Brown that in view of the Ryder and Withers complaints, he was being reassigned to the Miami International Airport, effective April 18, 1977; that with the increase in supervision further incident of similar nature, which occurred when Brown was left alone, would be eliminated.

12. The record establishes, and I find, that other employees who had committed "offenses" similar to that engaged in by Brown, or had been the object of such complaints, either with Ryder Trucking, Withers Van Lines or other firms, were not transferred or reassigned as a result thereof.

13. Upon leaving Zagar's office, Brown notified Ronald Rizzo, President of Chapter 146, as to what had happened and asked him to intervene. Rizzo and Daniel Casale, Regional Vice Chairman for Complainant union, attempted to locate Regional Commission Bazemore. Casale telephoned for an appointment without success. Supervisor Wyche inquired what they were doing and Rizzo stated they were trying to see the Commission re Brown's transfer. Wyche asked them to come to his office and the union officials complied. Wyche remarked he was not certain he could spare the men even if they had arranged an appointment with the Commissioner. 6/ He asked the men where their priorities lay; that if they had a conflict with job and union responsibilities, which would take precedence. Casale replied that he saw no difference between the two functions. Rizzo stated that in respect to Brown's transfer the union duties took precedence.

14. Brown remained at the airport for two weeks when Respondent returned him to the seaport. Townsend testified he rescinded his decision upon receiving word that Commissioner Bazemore requested he do so.

15. On May 21, 1977 Casale spoke to Townsend re Brown's transfer to the airport. During the conversation Townsend commented he received a letter from Rizzo concerning Brown; that he was going to reply and acknowledge the existence of anti-union animus; that he had spoken to the supervisors, 6/ Since the record does not clearly establish otherwise, I find these events took place during working hours.

including Wyche, and couldn't understand why the latter said what he did; that Brown had made himself unpopular with his supervisors; that he was going to straighten "those people out," as he straightened out the former Chief Inspector who had a bad attitude toward blacks; that he changed the Chief Inspector's attitude toward blacks and he'll change "these guys" attitude toward unions. 7/

16. An investigative committee was formed to ascertain the details re the Ryder and Withers' incidents. It was composed of Zagar, Casale and Assistant Director Hengst. It issued a report on May 18, 1977 describing the incidents which occurred. Further, the employees at Withers and its agent Charles stated therein that the letter re Brown was written without solicitation. Neither Ryder nor Withers Van Lines objected to Brown's performing his inspection duties at these sites in the future.

Conclusions

In contending that Respondent has violated the Order herein, complaint alleges as follows: (1) the transfer of Inspector Brown on April 18, 1977 from the seaport to the airport was discriminatory and violative of Sections 19(a) (2) and (1); (2) comments made by Supervisor Wyche to Inspectors Rizzo and Casale, regarding priority between job and union responsibilities constituted interference, restraint, and coercion under 19(a)(1); (3) management unilaterally changed its past practice of not soliciting written complaints concerning inspectors, as well as providing them with an opportunity to respond to such complaints in violation of 19(a)(6) and (1) of the Order.

(1) It is axiomatic that an employer may transfer, or otherwise assign, employees within its agency without running afoul of the Order if such action is not based on the union activities of the employees. In the instant case Respondent urges that the transfer of Brown was not because of his protected activities as vice-president of NTEU Chapter 146, but was directly related to his conduct while conducting inspections at Ryder Trucking and Withers Van Lines in early 1977.

While not free from doubt, several factors persuade me that the transfer of Inspector Brown on April 18, 1977 from the seaport to the airport was bottomed on his activities on behalf of the local union.

7/ Townsend testified he was unaware of Brown's union affiliations.

Upon his assignment in 1975 to the Dodge Island seaport Brown became very active as a representative of the union. His zeal in filing grievances, negotiating contracts, and otherwise pursuing his union duties did not gain him favor with his supervisors. This is attested to by Director Townsend, along with the latter's admission to Casale that the supervisors maintained a hostile attitude toward unions. I consider it significant that, in the context of a discussion between the Director and Casale concerning Brown's conduct at the two inspection sites, Townsend conceded there was anti-union animus on the part of management. 8/ It is true that Townsend denies knowledge of this inspector's unionism. However, Brown's activities were so open and well known - as admitted by Wyche - that it is reasonable to impute knowledge as to his union activities during his tenure at the seaport. There is, therefore, sufficient evidence to demonstrate that management was well aware of Inspector Brown's participation in filing unfair labor practice complaints, negotiating with the employer as to conditions of employment, and representing, as a union official, the inspectors who had grievances concerning their working conditions. See Federal Aviation Administration, A/SLMR No. 704. Further, the remarks to Rizzo and Casale by Wyche concerning "priority" between union and job responsibilities, together with the admitted anti-unionism on the part of management, furnishes sufficient motivation to act discriminatorily toward this particular employee who was so active in union activities.

Note is taken that in other instances, where inspectors were the objects of complaints, the customary procedure resulted in said individuals being called in by management to explain the incidents. No such opportunity was afforded Brown on or before his transfer to the airport on April 18. Respondent accepted the version offered by both Ryder and 8/ In further support of anti-union animus, Complainant relies upon testimony of Rizzo and Pearson that management representative Ross stated that Rizzo's former difficulties with Respondent were due to his union activities. Since the "difficulties" adverted to were the subject of a prior case (42-3807) which was settled by the parties, I do not deem it proper to consider such testimony to establish anti-union motivation herein. Accordingly, such evidence is rejected.

Withers as to the occurrences, and it was prepared to discipline Brown without any consideration being given to his explanation of the events. 9/

Such conduct by the employer herein seems unreasonable under the circumstances, and precipitous treatment of this nature, together with other factors, may well give rise to an inference of illegal motivation. In Department of the Air Force, Offcutt Air Force Base, A/SLMR No. 784 the activity likewise failed to obtain the alleged discriminatee's version of events which management claimed caused her termination, and it also neglected to discuss these incidents with the employer before terminating her employment. These factors, together with the existence of anti-union animus, gave rise to a finding of illegal motivation.

Further, the case at bar discloses other actions by Respondent which resulted in disparate treatment being accorded Brown vis a vis other inspectors. Thus, it was not the usual practice, as testified to by supervisor Wyche, for management to contact the public and ask that oral complaints, theretofore made, be reduced to writing. While charges of a serious nature may have been the subject of a written complaint, even at the suggestion of management, the "solicitation" of such writings was not undertaken in similar situations. The record reflects, moreover, that other incidents involving misconduct by inspectors at Ryder or other firms did not prompt a reassignment to the airport or another location. Moreover, the complaining firms declared they had no objection to Brown's returning to their premises and conducting inspections. The failure to transfer a non-union official, who is employed by the activity, for having been the target of similar complaints by the same or other firms is significant. The disparate treatment accorded Brown herein, who was so active as a union representative on behalf of employees, is a factor suggestive of discrimination under the Order. Federal Aviation Administration, supra.

Based on the foregoing indicia, and the anti-union animus 10/ on the part of management, I am persuaded that the two week transfer of Brown on April 18, 1977 from 9/ Moreover, attempts by Respondent to advance the Belcher Oil incident as a further reason for reassigning Brown lend credence to pretextual conduct by management. This incident occurred a year earlier and the matter had been dropped.

10/ Such anti-union antipathy was found to exist toward a union official by this Respondent in A/SLMR No. 764.

the Dodge Island Seaport to the Miami International Airport was effected discriminating. Accordingly, I find Respondent has violated Sections 19(a)(2) and (1) of the Order by such transfer.

(2) In respect to the alleged violation by Respondent of 19(a)(1) as a result to Supervisor Wyche's remarks to Rizzo and Casale, I do not agree with Complainant that these statements were coercive or constituted interference under the Order. While these remarks might imply the existence of anti-union sentiment, they could well be referable to the use of time by the union agents for union versus non-union business. Taken in context, Wyche's questioning Rizzo and Casale as to priority between union and non-union business did not constitute coercive interrogation regarding union activities. Neither did the statement, per se, tend to manifest disdain for the union as the bargaining representative or denigrate the union in the eyes of the employees. No aspersions were cast upon the representative, nor did the supervisor vilify the union. Cf. Mare Island Naval Shipyard, Vallejo, California, A/SLMR No. 1026.

(3) Complainant contends that, in respect to Inspector Brown, Respondent unilaterally changed its past practices of permitting employees to respond to complaints against them, and that it solicited the complaints against Brown in contrast to its usual procedure in the past. These changes, it is urged, were unilateral in nature and constituted a by-passing of the union in violation of Section 19(a)(6) of the Order. I do not agree.

It has been established and reaffirmed that an employer may not unilaterally change conditions of employment without running afoul of 19(a)(6). Internal Revenue Service, Office of the Regional Commissioner, Western Region, A/SLMR No. 473; Social Security Administration, Bureau of Hearings and Appeals, A/SLMR No. 828. However, in the instant case I do not view Respondent's actions in respect to Inspector Brown as a change in working conditions or a unilateral attempt to alter past practices involving conditions of employment. The employer's conduct toward Brown constituted a failure to apply certain past practices when changes were leveled against its employees. While such omission may be an indication of discrimination, it falls short of a sweeping unilateral change in employment conditions. Apart from the fact that the non-solicitation of complaints, or the granting of an opportunity to inspectors to respond to complaints, was not an avowed practice, I am not convinced that Respondent intended to establish a new condition of employment and change its policies, practices and matters affecting working conditions. See Social Security Administration, Bureau of Hearings and Appeals, A/SLMR No. 979.

Moreover, and assuming arguendo that such conduct by Respondent in respect to the Ryder and Withers complaints be deemed a change in past practices and working conditions, I would conclude the action by management herein neither materially affected, nor had a substantial impact on personnel policies, and general working conditions. Under 11(a) of the Order it is necessary to establish that an employer's actions resulted in a substantial impact thereon. Department of Defense, Air National Guard, et. al, A/SLMR No. 738.

Accordingly, and in view of the foregoing, I conclude that Respondent did not violate 19(a)(6) and (1) by (a) its requesting Ryder and Withers to reduce their complaints against Brown to writing, (b) failing to afford Brown an opportunity to respond to the said complaints against him.

RECOMMENDATION

Having found that Respondent has engaged in certain conduct prohibited by Section 19(a)(1) and (2) of the Order, I recommend that the Assistant Secretary adopt the following order designed to effectuate the purposes of Executive Order 11491, as amended. 11/ In respect to the alleged violations of 19(a)(1) based on the statements by Supervisor Wyche, and the alleged violation of 19(a)(6) based on unilateral changes in personnel practices and working conditions, it is recommended that such allegations in the complaint be dismissed.

Recommended Order

Pursuant to Section 6(b) of Executive Order 11491, as amended, and Section 203.25 of the Regulations, the Assistant Secretary of Labor for Labor-Management Relations, hereby order that the U.S. Customs Service, Region IV, Miami, Florida, shall:

11/ Inasmuch as Respondent has reassigned Brown to the seaport, and there has been no loss of pay or other benefits sustained, the remedy herein is confined to a cease and desist order together with the posting of an appropriate notice.

Case No. 70-5468(CA)

NATIONAL TREASURY EMPLOYEES
UNION AND CHAPTER 97 (NTEU)

Complainant

This case involved an unfair labor practice complaint filed by the National Treasury Employees Union and NTEU Chapter 97 (Complainant) alleging that the Respondent violated Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order when it refused to allow the Complainant to examine the Respondent's investigatory file which formed the basis for its decision to terminate a probationary employee.

The Administrative Law Judge found that the Respondent violated Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order. He reasoned that Respondent's refusal to make the file available denied the Complainant access to relevant and necessary information essential to the performance of its representative function. In reaching this conclusion, the Administrative Law Judge found, among other things, that the meeting involved concerning the employee's dismissal, requested by the Complainant pursuant to the parties' negotiated agreement, was a formal discussion within the meaning of Section 10(e) of the Order.

With certain modifications in the Administrative Law Judge's theory of violation and in the proposed remedial order, the Assistant Secretary adopted the Administrative Law Judge's conclusion that the Respondent's conduct was violative of Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order.

DECISION AND ORDER

On May 25, 1978, Administrative Law Judge Ben H. Walley issued his Recommended Decision and Order in the above-entitled proceeding, finding that the Respondent had engaged in certain unfair labor practices and recommending that it cease and desist therefrom and take certain affirmative actions as set forth in the attached Administrative Law Judge's Recommended Decision and Order. Thereafter, the Respondent and Complainant filed exceptions and supporting briefs with respect to the Administrative Law Judge's Recommended Decision and Order. The Complainant subsequently filed an answering brief to the Respondent's exceptions.

The Assistant Secretary has reviewed the rulings of the Administrative Law Judge made at the hearing and finds that no prejudicial error was committed. The rulings are hereby affirmed. Upon consideration of the Administrative Law Judge's Recommended Decision and Order and the entire record in the subject case, including the parties' exceptions and supporting briefs and the answering brief filed by the Complainant, I hereby adopt the Administrative Law Judge's findings, conclusions and recommendations, only to the extent consistent herewith.

The complaint herein alleges that the Respondent violated Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order when it refused to allow the Complainant to examine the investigatory file which allegedly formed the basis for its decision to terminate a probationary employee.

The essential facts of the case are set forth, in detail, in the Administrative Law Judge's Recommended Decision and Order, and I shall repeat them only to the extent necessary.

By letter dated April 14, 1976, the Director of the Respondent Service Center informed a probationary employee of the Respondent's determination to terminate his employment. Among other things, the letter referred to an incident in which the employee was arrested in the company of an individual who was subsequently convicted of theft. The letter then noted that during a subsequent investigation of the incident by the Respondent, the manner in which he responded to some questions and his answers to other questions raised significant doubts as to his character and suitability. The letter indicated that the employee was to be separated because of his undesirable suitability characteristics and advised the employee of his rights under Civil Service rules. It also stated that pursuant to Article 30 of the negotiated agreement between Complainant and Respondent, the probationary employee could submit a written statement and/or request a meeting regarding his termination. 1/

Thereafter, the probationary employee involved designated a National Field Representative of the Complainant as his representative, indicated his desire to have a meeting with Respondent pursuant to Article 30, Section 1(c) of the negotiated agreement, and his representative made a written request for the investigatory file which formed the basis of the Respondent's decision to terminate the employee. The Respondent refused to make the file available. On April 30, 1976, a representative of the Respondent met with the probationary employee and his representative. The representative of the Respondent stated that he was there only to hear any mitigating circumstances presented by the employee, and then prepare a recommendation to the Director of the Respondent. During the meeting, the Respondent's representative discussed and answered certain questions relating to contents of the investigatory file, but insisted that he could not furnish the Complainant with a copy of the file.

The Respondent defended its refusal to make the file available to the Complainant's National Field Representative by asserting, among other things, that the Order does not grant the Complainant access to the file; a probationary employee has a narrow scope of rights, and the Order should not be construed so as to expand those rights; access to files on the termination of a probationary employee is not required by Section 10(e) of the Order; access to the files sought is not relevant and necessary, considering that the Complainant's role in an Article 30 hearing is merely to be present and the fact that the only matter to be considered at the meeting is the possible mitigation of the proposed punishment; any possible "right" of access to the file by the Complainant has been waived; 2/ the instant complaint is barred by Section 19(d) of the Order; and the remedy sought by the Complainant is too broad. On the other hand, the Complainant asserts, among other things, that the file is relevant and necessary for it in the performance of its responsibilities in the administration of the parties' negotiated agreement; it did not waive its right to the evidentiary file during negotiations leading to the negotiated agreement; and the complaint is not barred by Section 19(d) of the Order.

1/ Article 30, Section 1(c) of the negotiated agreement provides, in pertinent part: ". . . The Employer agrees to meet with an affected probationary employee upon request and/or accept a written statement from him/her relating to his/her termination, whether or not the employee is on the rolls. If the employee elects the written statement, it must be delivered to the Employer on or before the date of the meeting. If the affected employee elects to request a meeting or to submit a written statement the request for meeting or receipt of written statement must be within fifteen (15) days of the date of receipt of the notice. If a meeting is held, the employee may be accompanied by a local Chapter steward and/or a National Representative of the Union."

In concluding that the Respondent violated Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order, the Administrative Law Judge found that the Complainant had a duty on behalf of the unit employee involved to gather, prepare and submit all information that would be helpful in discharging its responsibilities. Thus, he reasoned, the Respondent's refusal to make the file available denied the Complainant access to relevant and necessary information essential to the performance of its representative function. In reaching this conclusion, the Administrative Law Judge found that there was no clear and unequivocal waiver by the Complainant of any right to information it had under the Order; that the meeting requested was a formal discussion within the meaning of Section 10(e) of the Order; and that Section 19(d) of the Order did not preclude the processing of the complaint since the employee was a probationary employee and, as such, the notice to terminate was not an adverse action from which he could appeal. The Administrative Law Judge also found that there was no prohibition in statute or regulation precluding the Respondent from furnishing the file to the Complainant. 3/

While I concur in the recommendation by the Administrative Law Judge that the Respondent's conduct was violative of Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order, I do so for different reasons.

Section 10(e) of the Order provides that a labor organization accorded exclusive recognition has the responsibility to represent the interests of all employees in the unit. 4/ It has previously been held

2/ In this regard, the Respondent contends that because the Complainant sought to include a clause in the negotiated agreement that delineated its "right" to the investigatory file, that any "right" to the investigatory file was waived by the Complainant when it agreed to the present wording of Article 30, which does not provide for such "right."

3/ The Respondent did not except to the Administrative Law Judge's finding that the subject complaint had been filed timely.

4/ Section 10(e) of the Executive Order provides: "When a labor organization has been accorded exclusive recognition, it is the exclusive representative of employees in the unit and is entitled to act for and to negotiate agreements covering all employees in the unit. It is responsible for representing the interests of all employees in that an exclusive representative cannot meet this responsibility if it is prevented from obtaining relevant and necessary information relating to its duty to administer its negotiated agreement, and to represent and counsel employees regarding the exercise of their rights under the Order and the negotiated agreement. 5/

In the instant case, the Respondent refused to make available to the Complainant the investigatory file which formed the basis of its decision to terminate a probationary employee because of "undesirable suitability characteristics". I find, in agreement with the Administrative Law Judge, that this ambiguous language contained in the Respondent's termination letter had the effect of making the investigatory file prima facie relevant and necessary to the exclusive representative if it were to understand the reasons for the Respondent's action, and to fulfill its representative function with regard to the probationary employee, as well as the administration of the parties' negotiated agreement. 6/

I also find, in agreement with the Administrative Law Judge, that the record does not establish a clear and unequivocal waiver by the Complainant of its right to the investigatory file. The Respondent contends that any right to the investigatory file was waived by the Complainant when it withdrew its original negotiation demand that such a right be delineated in the parties' agreement and accepted a clause which did not establish such a right. I disagree. It is well-established that in order to establish a waiver of a right granted under the Executive Order, such waiver must be clear and unmistakable, and that a waiver will not be found merely from the fact that an agreement omits specific reference to a right granted by the Executive Order, or that a labor organization has failed in negotiations to obtain protection with respect to certain of its rights granted by the Order. 7/ In my view, the Complainant's withdrawal of its original negotiation demand did not, standing alone, evidence a clear and unequivocal waiver in this regard.

4/ the unit without discrimination and without regard to labor organization membership. The labor organization shall be given the opportunity to be represented at formal discussions between management and employees or employee representatives concerning grievances, personnel policies and practices, or other matters affecting general working conditions of employees in the unit."

5/ See Department of Health, Education and Welfare, Social Security Administration, Kansas City Payment Center, Bureau of Retirement and Survivors Insurance, 4 A/SLMR 466, A/SLMR No. 411 (1974).

6/ As I view the exclusive representative's right of access to information to arise from its obligation to represent the interests of all unit employees, and not solely from its right to be represented at formal discussions between management and unit employees, I find it unnecessary to determine whether or not the meeting conducted pursuant to Article 30 of the parties' negotiated agreement constituted a formal discussion within the meaning of Section 10(c) of the Order.

Under all of these circumstances, I find that the Respondent, by its action in refusing the Complainant's request for information necessary and relevant for the latter to discharge its obligations to represent all employees in the exclusively recognized bargaining unit, improperly refused to negotiate with the Complainant in violation of Section 19(a) (1) and (6) of the Executive Order.

ORDER 8/

Pursuant to Section 6(b) of Executive Order 11491, as amended, and Section 203.26(b) of the Regulations, the Assistant Secretary of Labor for Labor-Management Relations hereby orders that the Department of the Treasury, Internal Revenue Service, Fresno Service Center, Fresno, California, shall:

1. Cease and desist from:

(a) Withholding or failing to provide, upon request by the National Treasury Employees Union and NTEU Chapter 97, any information, including investigatory files, in connection with representing probationary employees at meetings called to consider their proposed termination, which is relevant and necessary to enable the National Treasury Employees Union and NTEU Chapter 97 to discharge its obligation as the exclusive representative to represent effectively all employees in the exclusively recognized unit.

7/ Cf. NASA Kennedy Space Center, Kennedy Space Center, Florida, 2 A/SLMR 566, A/SLMR No. 223 (1972).

8/ In its exceptions, the Complainant seeks to modify the proposed remedial order of the Administrative Law Judge by providing for the reinstatement of the probationary employee, and for the holding of a new meeting pursuant to Article 30 of the parties' negotiated agreement. Based upon the entire record herein, I find insufficient evidence to support a finding that but for the refusal of the Respondent to furnish the investigatory file, the probationary employee would not have been discharged. Therefore, I do not find sufficient basis in the record to order the reinstatement of the probationary employee. However, it was noted that Article 30, Section 1(c) of the parties' negotiated agreement provides additionally that an affected probationary employee and his representative may meet with the Respondent "...whether or not the employee is on the rolls." Under these circumstances, I conclude that the Complainant is entitled to a new meeting, pursuant to Article 30, Section 1(c) of the parties' negotiated agreement, upon its request, subsequent to being given the information it seeks.

(b) In any like or related manner interfering with, restraining, or coercing its employees in the exercise of their rights assured by Executive Order 11491, as amended.

2. Take the following affirmative actions in order to effectuate the purposes and policies of Executive Order 11491, as amended:

(a) Upon request, make available to the National Treasury Employees Union and NTEU Chapter 97 all information, including the investigatory file, in connection with the separation of Richard Combs, a probationary employee, which is relevant and necessary to enable the National Treasury Employees Union and NTEU Chapter 97 to discharge its obligation to represent effectively all employees in the exclusively recognized unit.

(b) After receipt by the National Treasury Employees Union and NTEU Chapter 97 of the relevant and necessary information referred to in Section 2(a) above, upon request, meet with the National Treasury Employees Union and NTEU Chapter 97, pursuant to Article 30 of the parties' negotiated agreement, concerning the decision to separate Richard Combs.

(c) Post at its Fresno Service Center, Fresno, California, copies of the attached notice marked "Appendix" on forms to be furnished by the Assistant Secretary of Labor for Labor-Management Relations. Upon receipt of such forms, they shall be signed by the Director of the Fresno Service Center and they shall be posted and maintained by him for 60 consecutive days thereafter, in conspicuous places, including all places where notices to employees are customarily posted. The Director shall take reasonable steps to insure that such notices are not altered, defaced, or covered by any other material.

(d) Pursuant to Section 203.27 of the Regulations, notify the Assistant Secretary, in writing, within 30 days from the date of this order as to what steps have been taken to comply herewith.

RECOMMENDED DECISION AND ORDER

Statement of the Case

Pursuant to a complaint filed on September 23, 1976, by National Treasury Employees Union and NTEU Chapter 97, 209 Post Street, Suite 1112, San Francisco, California, 94108, hereafter referred to as Complainant, which Complaint was amended on March 3, 1977, and filed against Department of the Treasury, Internal Revenue Service, Fresno Service Center, P. O. Box 12866, Fresno, California, hereafter referred to as Respondent, a Notice of Hearing on said amended Complaint was issued by the Regional Administrator for Labor-Management Services Administration, San Francisco Region, San Francisco, California, for a hearing to be held in Fresno, California, on June 21, 1977.

Prior to the hearing, Respondent filed a Motion to Dismiss or Remand the Amended Complaint and on March 16, 1977, the Regional Administrator denied said Motion. An Order rescheduling the hearing was entered on July 18, 1977, and pursuant thereto a hearing was held on August 30, 1977, in Fresno, California.

The parties requested and were granted time within which to file briefs and post-hearing briefs were received and filed on November 30, 1977, and the entire record has been received and considered.

The Complaint was filed pursuant to the provisions of Executive Order 11491, as amended, hereafter referred to as the Order, and alleged a breach of section 19(a), subsections (1) and (6), as follows:

On April 14, 1976, Mr. Fredric F. Perdue, Director of the Fresno Service Center, speaking for Respondent wrote a letter to Mr. Richard Alan Combs, a Probationary Employee, terminating Mr. Combs' employment with the Center. Among other things, the letter contained the following:

In accordance with Part 315 of the Federal Personnel Manual, this is a notice of my decision to terminate your employment during your probationary period, effective April 30, 1976, for the reason set forth below:

There is sufficient belief that you possess undesirable suitability characteristics. On March 11, 1975, you were arrested in company of Charles Resner who was ultimately convicted of theft. On February 17, 1976, you were interviewed by representatives of the Inspection Service regarding the extent of your involvement both with Mr. Resner and with other thefts.

The manner in which you responded to some questions and your answers to other questions raise significant doubts as to your character and suitability.

My decision is to separate you from the Federal Service because of your undesirable suitability characteristics.

The letter further advised Mr. Combs of certain rights in the premises and how, when and where to assert them. One of such "rights", existing by virtue of the provisions of Article 30 of the Multi-Center Agreement (hereafter referred to as the Agreement) entered into between the parties hereto on July 18, 1975, provided that a meeting may be held and Mr. Combs "may be accompanied by a local Chapter steward and/or a National Representative of the Union."

Mr. Combs, by written instrument, designated Mr. Scott Schaefer, National Field Representative of Complainant, to represent him "concerning my termination procedures from I.R.S.", and Mr. Schaefer requested of Mr. Fredric Perdue a meeting pursuant to Article 30 to discuss the termination and Mr. Schaefer requested "the evidentiary file which formed the basis for your decision to terminate Mr. Richard Combs..." The "evidentiary file" was not made available and Complainant has charged a violation of section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order.

At the hearing held on August 30, 1977, the parties were afforded full opportunity to be heard, to offer, examine, and cross-examine witnesses and to introduce evidence considered relevant to their positions in the premises. After hearing the testimony of the witnesses and observing their demeanor, having reviewed the exhibits, post-hearing briefs filed herein, and based upon the entire record, I make the following findings of fact, conclusions and recommendations.

Findings of Fact

1. An agreement under the provisions of Executive Order 11491, as amended, was negotiated and entered into by and between the parties hereto (all heretofore identified) on July 18, 1975, and at all times material to the issues here involved was in full force and effect.

2. Richard Alan Combs, a Probationary Employee, was terminated within the probationary period pursuant to the provisions of FPM, Chapter 315, Subchapter 8-4.a. (1)-(4) and IRM 0315.1, (1)-(2). In addition, termination was effected in compliance with Article 30 of the Agreement. There is no question about the right to terminate nor the manner in which it was done, only the clarity of the reasons given therefor is questioned and that secondarily.

3. Prior to the effective date of the termination and within the specified time, Combs designated Scott Schaefer, a National Field Representative of the union, to represent him in matters "concerning my termination procedures from IRS" and Schaefer made written request of Respondent "for the evidentiary file which formed the basis for your decision to terminate Mr. Richard Combs...". Respondent refused to make the "file" available. As a result of this refusal, Complainant contends that it was denied access to information which would have, or most certainly may have, enabled it to assist Mr. Combs in formulating a written reply or an oral statement in full and/or satisfactory explanation of the stated basis for the termination. Thus, the primary question: was Respondent obligated to make available to Complainant the evidentiary file for the purpose of representing Mr. Combs, a probationary employee, in connection with his termination at a pre-dismissal meeting? And incidental to that question, did Complainant waive its right to the information requested when bargaining the parties negotiated agreement?

In denying the request for the evidentiary file, Respondent has asserted several grounds therefor. Some of the more cogent are: (1) The Order does not grant Complainant access to the "file"; (2) Combs, a probationary employee, had "a narrow scope of rights" and the Order should not be construed to interfere with such rights delineated by the Civil Service Commission; (3) access to "files" on termination of a probationer is not required by Section 10(e) of the Order; (4) access to those "files" is not relevant and necessary to Complainant's role as the exclusive representative; (5) if such a right exists under the Order, it has been waived; (6) the present dispute is one of contract interpretation, not an unfair labor practice; (7) the Complaint is barred by Section 19(d) of the Order; (8) the amended Complaint is untimely filed and should be dismissed; and (9) the remedy sought is too broad.

To support the request for the "file", Complainant asserts that the information is relevant and necessary in the administration of the agreement; that it (NTEU) did not waive its right to the evidentiary file; and that the Complaint is not barred by Section 19(d) of the Order.

Conclusions

For reasons hereinafter set out, I find and conclude that Complainant was entitled to the information contained in the evidentiary file and Respondent's refusal to furnish such information was violative of Sections 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Executive Order. Department of Defense, State of New Jersey, A/SLMR 323, FLRC No. 73A-59 (1975).

As stated above, Complainant was, at all times material to the questions under consideration, the exclusive representative of all unit employees, including Richard Allan Combs, a probationer, according to the provisions of Section 10(e) of the Order. In addition thereto, Complainant was responsible for representation of Combs pursuant to the provisions of Article 30 of the agreement negotiated and entered into by the parties hereto. It had been designated by Combs, in writing.

Despite the number of assertions made, the thrust of Respondent's denial is the fact that Combs was a probationary employee and as such he had what Respondent chose to describe as "a narrow scope of rights". It is true that a probationer has limited rights, as compared to a non-probationary employee, but that very fact demands that those rights be scrupulously protected. One of the "rights" recognized by Respondent is the action required by FPM Chapter 315, Subchapter 8-4. a.(3) 1/ and IRM

1/ (3) When separation action is based entirely on deficiencies in performance or conduct after entrance on duty, the probationer is notified in writing why he is being terminated and the effective date of the action. The information in the notice on why he is being terminated must, at a minimum, consist of the agency's conclusions on the inadequacies of his performance or conduct; it need not require complete and specific reasons as with career or career-conditional employees who have completed their probationary periods and have competitive

0315.1 (2). 2/ In addition, 5 C.F.R. § 315.804, requires notice as to why he is being terminated. 3/ All of these authorities speak of the "minimum" to be furnished to the probationer and the last sentence of Note 1 denies the probationer "a right of reply." Too, it is observed that the subsequent paragraph (4) of the FPM states that "although it is not required, it is good personnel practice to furnish every separated probationer with enough factual information ... about his ... conduct to make the agency's basis for the action clear". (Emphasis added).

Although the authorities cited did not grant Combs, the probationer, "a right of reply", Complainant was instrumental in negotiating the right to such a "reply" and in accordance with Article 30, Section 1-C. of the agreement 4/, Respondent was committed to meet with him

1/ (Continued) status. The employee is not given a right of reply. (Emphasis added).

2/ If after a full and fair tryout, it is apparent that an employee is unsuited for continued employment in the Service, he/she will be separated during the probationary period. Fifteen days' advance notice should be given prior to actual separation, except that the appointing officer may establish a lesser notice period if circumstances warrant such action. All notices of separation for disqualification will include sufficient information to inform the employee why the action is being taken. (Emphasis added).

3/ § 313.894 Termination of probationers for unsatisfactory performance or conduct.

When an agency decides to terminate an employee serving a probationary or trial period because his work performance or conduct during this period fails to demonstrate his fitness or his qualifications for continued employment, it shall terminate his services by notifying him in writing as to why he is being separated and the effective date of the action. The information in the notice as to why the employee is being terminated shall, as a minimum, consist of the agency's conclusions as to the inadequacies of his performance or conduct. (Emphasis added).

4/ The Employer agrees to meet with an affected probationary employee upon request and/or accept a written statement from him/her relating to his/her termination, whether or not the employee is on the rolls.

and receive (and consider) information and advise him of the results. 5/ But, it was because of this provision that Respondent asserts that Complainant has waived his right to the evidentiary file. 6/

Respondent contends that any "...right" to the "evidentiary file" was waived by Complainant because that "very right" had been requested in negotiating the agreement, had been refused by Respondent and was urged to impasse by Complainant but not accepted. Instead, upon offer by Respondent, the parties to the agreement accepted Article 30 aforesaid. Absent evidence to the contrary, and I find none, it appears and I so find that Article 30 is the product of negotiation and not a resolution of an impasse by the Federal Service Impasses Panel as provided by Section 17 of the Order.

I find the agreement of waiver advanced by Respondent to be untenable. The waiver of a right existing under the Order, an agreement, or one established by custom and use, must be clear and unequivocal. NASA, Kennedy Space Center, Florida, A/SLMR No. 223 (1972); Veterans Administration Center, Bath, New York, A/SLMR No. 335 (1974). This rule of law applies to an "existing" right. As stated by Respondent, the probationary employee had "a narrow scope of rights" and it is equally true that Complainant submitted to negotiation an elaborate process for elevating rights of "probationers" to 4/ (Continued) If the employee elects the written statement, it must be delivered to the Employer on or before the date of the meeting. If the affected employee elects to request a meeting or submit a written statement the request for meeting or receipt of written statement must be within fifteen (15) days of the date of receipt of the notice. If a meeting is held, the employee may be accompanied by a local Chapter steward and/or a National Representative of the Union.

5/ Although counsel for Respondent states in his brief that he (Combs) was advised of the results, I failed to observe any evidence to support the statement.

6/ A Multi-Center Agreement was entered into by the parties hereto on April 13, 1973, which contained no provisions dealing with probationary employees. Since the existing agreement contains an article on the subject, Respondent urges a waiver of a right to information on the reasons for termination.

that of a non-probationary employee. That effort failed but Complainant succeeded in obtaining Article 30, and particularly section 1-C of the agreement. Certainly, this did not constitute the "waiver" of a right because none existed. Instead, it created a "right" (a right of reply). Thus, a right was created where none existed to waive. It is incongruous to argue that the failure to obtain all that you seek constitutes a waiver of that which you did acquire.

Once the "right to reply" was obtained, the right to furnish any information reasonably considered that would explain his conduct and to mitigate, modify, or reverse the decision to terminate became absolute. Since Complainant was the exclusive representative of the probationer and had the responsibility under section 10(e) of the Order to represent his interest at the meeting provided, it has been concluded that "clearly, it (a labor organization) cannot meet this responsibility if it is prevented from obtaining relevant and necessary information in connection with the processing of grievances" (in this case the "evidentiary files" which formed the basis ...to terminate). Department of Defense, State of New Jersey, A/SLMR No. 323 (1973); Department of HEW, SSA, Kansas City Payment Center, Bureau of Retirement and Survivors Insurance, A/SLMR No. 411 (1974).

Respondent insists that Complainant was not authorized to participate in the meeting but only to be present and certainly it had no right to the evidentiary file. This argument is without merit. Clearly, Complainant had a right to be present and had a duty to represent the probationer under both section 10(e) of the Order and Article 30, section 1-C of the agreement. The meeting was a "formal discussion" within the meaning of section 10(e), and NASA, Johnson Space Center, FLRC No. 74A-95 (1975), cited by Respondent. This meeting had passed the stage of the "investigatory interview" claimed by Respondent and is clearly distinguishable from Internal Revenue Service, Washington, D. C., 2 FLRC 229 (No. 74A-23, 1974), and Social Security Administration, Great Lakes Programming Center, Chicago, Illinois, A/SLMR No. 804 (1977), both of which dealt with investigation of conduct "prior" to termination. The meeting in the instant case was after the fact. It was probationer's last chance to "meet ... and/or offer a written statement" in explanation or mitigation of his "manner" of response to certain questions that had been propounded by Revenue Inspection Service, a third party assertedly not responsible to Respondent. Then, Respondent was obligated to consider the submission (oral or written) and advise probationer (through Complainant) of the decision (which may have sustained or rescinded the prior decision to terminate). It is illogical to argue that this meeting was not a "formal discussion" within the meaning of section 10(e) of the Order. It meets every test laid down by the authorities cited by Respondent to support a position to the contrary.

Therefore, when Mr. Bennett, in his representative capacity, appeared to conduct the meeting it became his responsibility to receive and transmit to Mr. Perdue the information provided. Likewise, it became Complainant's representational duty to gather, prepare and submit (orally or in writing) any and all information considered by it to be helpful for consideration. Thus the refusal to make available the "evidentiary file" and force probationer to a reliance on impressions thrice removed (the "manner" of response) was a denial of a basic constitutional right to be faced by his accusers and a refusal to provide information that Complainant thought would or may be helpful in discharging its representational duties. Complainant cannot be expected to effectively exercise its rights or discharge its responsibilities if it is denied information necessary and relevant to intelligently act in such matters. To deprive Complainant of necessary and relevant information is to deprive Combs, a probationer, of effective representation. This is not in conformity with the purposes or policies of the Order.

The information contained in the "evidentiary file" may or may not be helpful and relevant to the cause of probationer. One thing for sure, it is not irrelevant per se. Only by examination can its relevancy be determined. Accordingly, the refusal of Respondent to make available all necessary and relevant information in its possession, barring any statute or regulation prohibiting disclosure, constitutes a violation of section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order, Department of HEW, SSA, Kansas City Pay Center, Bureau of Retirement and Survivors Insurance, A/SLMR No. 411 (1974); Department of Defense, State of New Jersey, A/SLMR No. 323 (1973); Department of the Treasury, IRS, Milwaukee District, A/SLMR No. 974 (1978).

Respondent argues with much force that the present dispute is not properly an unfair labor practice, that it is barred by section 19(d) of the Order, and as a violation of section 19(a)(6) was untimely filed. However, I am not persuaded. Combs was a probationary employee and, as such, the notice to terminate was not an adverse action from which he could appeal. The "reasons" for termination did not come within any of the grounds for appeal as set out in the statutes or the personnel manuals, i.e., "discrimination because of race, color, religion, sex, or national origin; or because of age..." Because of this, the Complaint could not be consolidated with an acceptable section 19(d) appeals procedure, but it does not foreclose him from filing an unfair labor practice. Veterans Administration, Veterans Benefits Office, A/SLMR No. 296 (1973). Too, I find the argument that the section 19(6) violation was untimely filed and should be dismissed not to be well taken for the reasons stated by the Regional Administrator in his ruling on the Motion to Dismiss (Assistant Secretary Exhibit 1(d)). Further elaboration on this question is considered unnecessary and would unduly add to the prolixity of these recommendations.

Finally, from several different approaches, Respondent claims disclosure of the information requested is prohibited by statutes, regulations and/or personnel manuals. I reject these arguments. In addition to the basic constitutional right of every individual to have made available to him, upon proper request, any and all information that would enhance his position properly pursued, unless barred by some specific law or regulation, 5 U.S.C., § 552, commonly referred to as the Freedom of Information Act, establishes a public policy that all agencies of government will generously make available to the public information under their contract. There are specific exemptions set out in this section, particularly section 552(b)(7), 7/ invoked by Respondent for its contentions. I do not find in this "exemption" the shield Respondent seeks. He argues that the "evidentiary file" was compiled by Revenue Inspection Service, over which it had no control for enforcement purposes and, as such, comes within the exemptions mentioned above. Again, I do not agree. Clearly, the "evidentiary file" was not compiled for law enforcement purposes but for administrative function, i.e., determining the "suitability" of a probationary employee, and did not come within the exemption claimed. Center for National Policy Review on Race and Urban Issues v. Weinberger, 1974, 502F.2d 370. The basic purpose of the statute is to promote disclosure of information, Charles River Park "A", Inc. v. Department of Housing and Urban Development, 1975, 519F.2d 935, and the exemptions are to be given a narrow construction. Washington Research Project, Inc. v. Department of Health, Education, and Welfare, 1974, 504 F.2d 238, 164 U.S. App. D.C. 169, certiorari denied 95 S.Ct. 1951, 421 U.S. 963, 44 L.Ed.2d 450. For these reasons I conclude that Respondent has no valid reason for withholding the "evidentiary file" requested.

Based upon the aforesaid findings and conclusions, I conclude that Respondent, by its refusal to make available to Complainant the "evidentiary file which formed the basis" for Respondent's decision to terminate Mr. Richard Combs," refused to consult, confer or negotiate with a labor organization as required by the Order and thereby violated section 19(a)(6) of the Order. I further conclude that by that same refusal, Respondent violated section 19(a)(1) of the Order because such refusal inherently interferes with, restrains and coerces unit employees, in the instant case probationers, in their right to have their exclusive representative act for and represent them and their interests in matters concerning personnel policies and practices as assured by section 10(e) of the Order.

Recommendations

Having found that Respondent has engaged in certain conduct prohibited by section 19(a)(1) and (6) of Executive Order 11491 as amended, I recommend that the Assistant Secretary adopt the following order designed to effectuate the policies of the Order.

RECOMMENDED ORDER

Pursuant to section 6(b) of Executive Order 11491, as amended, and section 203.26(b) of the regulations, the Assistant Secretary of Labor for Labor-Management Relations hereby orders that the Department of the Treasury, Internal Revenue Service, Fresno Service Center, Fresno, California, shall:

(b) Interfering with, restraining or coercing its employees by refusing to make available to National Treasury Employees Union and NTEU Chapter 97, the evidentiary file which formed the basis for the decision to terminate Mr. Richard Combs, a probationary employee, effective April 30, 1976.

2. Take the following affirmative action in order to effectuate the purposes and provision of the Executive Order:

(a) Upon request make available to National Treasury Employees Union and NTEU Chapter 97, San Francisco, California:

The evidentiary file which formed the basis for the decision to terminate Mr. Richard Combs, a probationary employee, effective April 30, 1976.

Upon receipt of such forms, they shall be signed by the Director and they shall be posted and maintained by him for sixty (60) consecutive days thereafter, in conspicuous places, including all places where notices to employees are customarily posted. The Director shall take reasonable steps to insure that such notices are not altered or defaced or covered by any other material.

UNITED STATES DEPARTMENT OF LABOR
ASSISTANT SECRETARY FOR LABOR-MANAGEMENT RELATIONS
SUMMARY OF DECISION AND ORDER OF THE ASSISTANT SECRETARY
PURSUANT TO SECTION 6 OF EXECUTIVE ORDER 11491, AS AMENDED

DEPARTMENT OF THE TREASURY, INTERNAL REVENUE SERVICE,
CHICAGO DISTRICT, CHICAGO, ILLINOIS
A/SLMR No. 1120

This case involved an unfair labor practice complaint filed by the National Treasury Employees (NTEU) and NTEU Chapter 10 (Complainants) alleging that the Respondent violated Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order by conducting three meetings with unit employees without providing the Complainants with an opportunity to be represented, as required by Section 10(e) of the Order. The Respondent argued that the meetings were training sessions and did not constitute formal discussions within the meaning of Section 10(e).

The Administrative Law Judge recommended that the complaint be dismissed in its entirety. In reaching this conclusion, he found that the meetings involved herein did not constitute formal discussions under Section 10(e) of the Order because they were essentially instructional in nature and were not attempts to bypass the Complainants and deal directly with unit employees. Further, he noted that even if these meetings were found to be Section 10(e) discussions and that the exclusive representative thus had the right to be represented at them, in two of the three, notification to the Complainants' representatives as employees and attendance by those representatives satisfied the requirements under the Order. With respect to the remaining meeting, he found that the evidence failed to support the Complainants' allegation that they were not afforded an opportunity to attend the meeting.

The Assistant Secretary agreed with the Administrative Law Judge's conclusion that the complaint should be dismissed. He agreed that two of the meetings were not formal discussions within the meaning of Section 10(e) of the Order, as they were called solely for an instructional purpose. In this connection, he found that questions from employees which arguably related to personnel policies and practices and matters affecting working conditions did not transform the meetings into formal discussions as the Respondent did not raise such issues, nor did it attempt to bypass the Complainants when questions were raised by unit employees, since the Respondent clearly indicated that it could not give any direct or conclusive response to those questions.

The Assistant Secretary also adopted the Administrative Law Judge's conclusion that the circumstances surrounding the third meeting likewise did not give rise to a violation of Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order. Contrary to the Administrative Law Judge, however, the Assistant Secretary found that this meeting was a formal discussion within the meaning of Section 10(e). Thus, in this meeting, as distinguished from the others, the Respondent raised issues which clearly involved personnel policies and practices and matters affecting working conditions of unit employees. However, under the particular circumstances, the Assistant Secretary found that the Complainants were not deprived of their Section 10(e) right to be represented at a formal discussion, as they had actual notice of and were represented at the meeting by the union steward who customarily attended such formal discussions. As a result, the Complainants suffered no detriment from their lack of formal notice.

Under these circumstances, the Assistant Secretary ordered that the complaint be dismissed in its entirety.

DECISION AND ORDER

On April 5, 1978, Administrative Law Judge Salvatore J. Arrigo issued his Recommended Decision and Order in the above-entitled proceeding, finding that the Respondent had not engaged in the unfair labor practices alleged in the complaint and recommending that the complaint be dismissed in its entirety. Thereafter, the Complainants filed exceptions and a supporting brief with respect to the Administrative Law Judge's Recommended Decision and Order and the Respondent filed a response to the Complainants' exceptions.

The Assistant Secretary has reviewed the rulings of the Administrative Law Judge made at the hearing and finds that no prejudicial error was committed. The rulings are hereby affirmed. Upon consideration of the Administrative Law Judge's Recommended Decision and Order and the entire record in the subject case, including the Complainants' exceptions and supporting brief and the Respondent's response thereto, I hereby adopt the Administrative Law Judge's findings, conclusions and recommendations, as modified herein.

This case arose as a result of a complaint filed by the National Treasury Employees Union (NTEU) and NTEU Chapter 10 alleging that the Respondent violated Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order by conducting three meetings with unit employees, on January 13, 14 and 18, 1977, without providing the Complainants with an opportunity to be represented, as required by Section 10(e) of the Order. 1/

The first of these meetings was called by the Respondent on January 13, 1977, to inform unit employees about revised disclosure provisions of the Tax Reform Act of 1977, and to discuss the prospective effect of these changes on employee liability for wrongful disclosure of taxpayer records. The meeting, held in the Audit Branch of the Respondent's Chicago District Office, consisted of a half-hour speech about the Tax Reform Act by Alternate Disclosure Officer Vince Killen, followed by an hour-long question-and-answer session. Among the issues raised by the unit employees were the scope of permissible disclosure, the possibility of legal representation by the Respondent in the event of taxpayer lawsuits for wrongful disclosure, the restrictions that conceivably could be placed on pre-litigation discovery in these lawsuits, the prospect of indemnification by the Respondent for fines assessed to employees for wrongful disclosure, and the kind of information that could be included in an employee's personnel folder as a result of wrongful disclosure. While Killen stated that he was unable to give conclusive answers to many of these questions, he indicated that employee records could reflect actions taken for wrongful disclosures. The record does not disclose whether the Complainants were given advance notice of this meeting or if any participant was an NTEU representative.

A second meeting on the disclosure policy revisions, substantially similar to the first, was held in the Respondent's Regional Training Facility in Skokie, Illinois, on January 18, 1977. This session, attended by approximately 150 bargaining unit employees, consisted of an hour-long presentation by District Disclosure Officer Fred Brody, followed by a period of approximately one-half hour during which Brody responded to written questions from the employees. As in the earlier meeting, employees were concerned about their rights and liabilities as prospective defendants in taxpayer suits for wrongful disclosure, and raised issues such as whether the Union would be permitted to represent them in these actions, whether Brody's assertion that the Respondent would represent them was contained in writing, whether they would be granted administrative leave to prepare defenses to suits, whether an employee would undergo a formal administrative investigation if accused of wrongful disclosures, and whether an employee counterclaim filed against a taxpayer-plaintiff would have any effect on a suit. Brody's answers were represented as the Respondent's interpretation of the various disclosure provisions and were similar to those given to employees at the Chicago District Office in the earlier presentation. It is conceded that the Complainants were not notified of this meeting, although the Complainant Chapter's Executive Vice President attended in his capacity as a Revenue Agent.

1/ Section 10(e) of the Order states, in pertinent part, that an exclusive representative "...shall be given the opportunity to be represented at formal discussions between management and employees... concerning grievances, personnel policies and practices, or other matters affecting general working conditions of employees in the unit."

The meeting of January 14, 1977, dealt with the general topic of "fraud awareness" and stressed the need for employee awareness of possible fraudulent concealment of income by taxpayers. The two-hour session was conducted at the Respondent's Chicago District Office by three of its officials. Attendance by bargaining unit employees in the Special Enforcement Groups was compulsory. In underscoring their position that "fraud awareness" was the Chicago District's greatest priority, the Respondent's spokesman told employees that their promotion evaluations would contain comments regarding the fraud cases that they had worked on, and that promotion ranking panels had been instructed to award extra points to agents working on fraud cases. Thereafter, approximately one-half hour was devoted to questions and answers between unit employees and the Respondent's representatives. The Complainants were not notified in advance of this meeting, although one of the attending employees was a union steward who customarily represented the Complainants at formal discussions between management and employees.

I agree with the Administrative Law Judge's conclusion that the meetings of January 13 and January 18, 1977, dealing with the revised disclosure provisions, did not constitute "formal discussions" within the meaning of Section 10(e) of the Order, as the evidence establishes that these meetings were called solely for an instructional purpose. In this connection, I find that questions from the audience which arguably related to personnel policies and practices and matters affecting working conditions did not transform the meetings into formal discussions; the Respondent did not raise such issues, nor did it attempt to bypass the Complainants when questions were raised by unit employees, since the Respondent clearly indicated that it could not give any direct or conclusive response to the employees' questions. 2/

Further, I agree with the Administrative Law Judge's conclusion that the circumstances surrounding the "fraud awareness" meeting likewise did not give rise to a violation of Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order, although I do so for different reasons. Contrary to the Administrative Law Judge, I find that this meeting was a formal discussion within the meaning of Section 10(e) because in this meeting, as distinguished from the other meetings discussed above, the Respondent raised the issues of personnel file entries and promotion evaluations, items which are clearly personnel policies and practices and matters affecting working conditions of unit employees. However, under the particular circumstances herein, I find that the Complainants were not deprived of their Section 10(e) right to be represented at a formal discussion, as they had actual notice of and were represented at the meeting. Thus, the evidence establishes that the union steward who customarily attended such formal discussions was, in fact, present at the meeting and had an opportunity to represent the Complainants during the discussion which ensued. 3/ As a result, I find that the Complainants suffered no detriment from the lack of formal notice.

Under these circumstances, I find that the Respondent's conduct herein was not violative of the Order. Accordingly, I shall order that the instant complaint be dismissed in its entirety.

RECOMMENDED DECISION AND ORDER

Preliminary Statement

This proceeding arises under the provisions of Executive Order 11491, as amended (hereinafter referred to as the Order). Pursuant to the Regulations of the Assistant Secretary of Labor for Labor-Management Relations (hereinafter referred to as the Assistant Secretary), a Notice of Hearing on Complaint issued on July 21, 1977 with reference to alleged violations of Sections 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order.

The Complaint, filed on May 23, 1977 by the National Treasury Employees Union (NTEU) and NTEU Chapter 10 (hereinafter referred to as the Union or Complainant) alleged that the Department of the Treasury, Internal Revenue Service, Chicago District, Chicago, Illinois (hereinafter referred to as the Activity or Respondent) violated the Order by its conducting three meetings with unit employees on January 13, 14 and 18, 1977 without providing the Union with an opportunity to attend as required by Section 10(e) of the Order. 1/

At the hearing held on September 7, 1977 the parties were represented by counsel and were afforded full opportunity to adduce evidence and call, examine and cross-examine witnesses and argue orally. Briefs were filed by both parties.

Upon the entire record in this matter, my observation of the witnesses and their demeanor and from my evaluation of all the evidence, I make the following:

Findings of Fact

At all times material herein the Union has been the exclusive collective bargaining representative of all professional and non-professional employees located in the Activity's Chicago District with the exception of various employees excluded under the Order.

On January 13, 1977 Alternate Disclosure Officer Vince Killen, on behalf of the Respondent, conducted a meeting with bargaining unit employees in Audit Branch 4 regarding the disclosure provisions of the Tax Reform Act of 1976 which became effective January 1, 1977. The new Act substantially revised the regulations dealing with employee disclosure of tax information. The meeting consisted of an approximately thirty-minute speech by Killen on the general subject of the revisions as interpreted by the Agency, including the ramifications of negligent disclosures by IRS employees. Approximately one hour was devoted to a question and answer session where the subjects discussed were permissible and negligent disclosure; legal representation of IRS employees by the Activity in the event of a suit by a taxpayer for violation of the disclosure laws; the Activity indemnifying employees for fines and penalties resulting from such suits; the role of union attorneys and private attorneys in such actions; and what information could be included in an employee's personnel file as a result of disclosure. Killen indicated that his statements represented the Activity's position on the matters which were discussed and if employees followed his instructions, they would not be penalized by the Activity.

1/ Section 10(e) provides, in relevant part, that an exclusive collective bargaining representative "...shall be given the opportunity to be represented at formal discussions between management and employees...concerning grievances, personnel policies and practices, or other matters affecting general working conditions of employees in the unit."

No evidence was offered as to whether or not the Union was given advance notification of this meeting or whether any participant was a Union representative.

A similar meeting was conducted at another location on January 18, 1977, with District Disclosure Officer Fred Brody representing management. Approximately 150 persons from the bargaining unit were in attendance at the meeting which was conducted via closed circuit television. The session consisted of an approximately one-hour presentation by Brody on the subject of disclosure rule changes in the Internal Revenue Code followed by an approximately one-half hour period during which time Brody responded to written question submitted by the audience. Among the topics discussed during this latter period was whether the Union would be permitted to represent employees accused of unlawful disclosure; whether Brody's assertion that the Internal Revenue Service would represent an employee accused of violating the disclosure provisions appeared in any written document; whether employees would be permitted to use administrative time to defend themselves if accused of disclosure violations; whether employees would be investigated by the Inspection division for alleged violations of the disclosure provision; and what the ramifications would be where an employee filed a counter-claim against a taxpayer who had accused him of unauthorized disclosure. Other questions submitted by the employees primarily related to and expanded on these five areas of interest.

The Activity did not provide the Union with notification of the meeting. However, Michael Peacher, the Union's Executive Vice-President and a Revenue Agent, was in attendance having been instructed by his supervisor to attend the meeting as a Revenue Agent along with other Agents.

The third meeting involved in this case occurred on January 14, 1977. This meeting was conducted by three managerial employees. Attendance at the meeting of bargaining unit employees of the Special Enforcement Groups was compulsory. The general subject of the meeting was "fraud awareness" where the importance of employee awareness of possible fraudulent concealment of unreported income by taxpayers was stressed. Statistics on the numbers of fraud cases found in the Chicago District were compared with other Districts and it was indicated that fraud awareness was the greatest priority in the Chicago District. Employees were informed that their promotion evaluations contain comments as to fraud cases which they had worked on (which is reflected in employee evaluation forms), and in addition, the employees were told that when considering employees for promotion, the ranking panel was instructed to award extra points to those agents who had worked on fraud cases. Also, in response to a question concerning a "rumor" of employee rotation in the Audit Division, management would neither confirm nor deny any specific plans for rotation but did advise employees that rotation was a possibility. Approximately one quarter of this two hour meeting was devoted to questions and answers between bargaining unit employees and management representatives.

The Union was not notified of the meeting. In any event, one employee who attended the meeting was the Union Steward for the groups.

Conclusions

The Union contends that the three meetings described above were formal discussions within the meaning of Section 10(e) of the Order and as such, the Activity violated the Order by conducting the discussions without providing the Union with formal notification of the meetings. 2/

On a number of occasions the Federal Labor Relations Council (the Council) has addressed the question of the applicability of Section 10(e) when considering situations where an employer communicates with unit employees to the exclusion of the exclusive representative. While deciding a case involving various management information-gathering meetings conducted at a facility 3/, the Council held that a information-gathering meeting conducted to evaluate the effectiveness of an agencywide program did not violate the Order and went on to state:

2/ The Union is not alleging that matters discussed in the meetings constituted changes in personnel policies, practices or other matters affecting general working conditions of unit employees.

"We must emphasize that our views, as expressed above, pertain only to information-gathering devices such as the meetings involved in this case. That is, they apply only in circumstances such as those mentioned above where management does not, in the course of information gathering: seek to make commitments or counterproposals regarding employee opinions or complaints solicited by means of such devices; indicate that the employees' comments on such matters might have an effect on the employees' status; deal with specific employee grievances or other matters cognizable under an existing agreement; or gather information regarding employee sentiments for the purpose of using it subsequently to persuade the union to abandon a position taken during negotiations regarding the personnel policies or practices concerned."

In a subsequent case dealing with an activity posting the contents of a letter it sent to a union president reflecting events which occurred at a meeting between the parties, the Council again spoke on the matter of permissible and prohibited communications and stated: 4/

"While the obligation to deal only with the exclusive representative over matters relating to the collective bargaining relationship is clear, this does not mean that all communication with unit employees over such matters is prohibited. Indeed, under certain circumstances agency management is obligated to engage in communications with bargaining unit employees regarding the collective bargaining relationship. For example, section 1(a) of the Order requires that "The head of each agency shall take the action required to assure that employees in the agency are apprised of their rights under this section ..." [Emphasis supplied.] In determining whether a communication is violative of the Order, it must be judged independently and a determination made as to whether that communication constitutes, for example, an attempt by agency management to deal or negotiate directly with unit employees or to threaten or promise benefits to employees. In reaching this determination, both the content of the communication and the circumstances surrounding it must be considered. More specifically, all communications between agency management and unit employees over matters relating to the collective bargaining relationship are not violative. Rather communications which, for example, amount to an attempt to bypass the exclusive representative and bargain directly with employees, or which urge employees to put pressure on the representative to take a certain course of action, or which threaten or promise benefits to employees are violative of the Order. To the extent that communication is permissible, it is immaterial whether such communication was previously agreed upon by the exclusive representative and the agency or activity concerning the latter's right to engage in such communication."

I find that the three meetings involved in this proceeding were essentially instructional in nature. Thus, the Activity utilized the meetings to communicate to unit employees its interpretation and policy with regard to the disclosure provisions of the new Tax Reform Act and convey to employees the importance of fraud awareness in carrying out their duties. The meetings consisted of setting forth the Activity's position on these matters and respond to questions in order to assure that its policy was clear in the minds of the employees. The discussions were not an attempt to bypass the Union and negotiate or deal with unit employees in order to obtain their agreement to change working conditions. The Activity did not solicit or entertain counterproposals or recommendations to change its policy nor did they enter into discussions with unit employees with a view to changing its position on these matters. 5/ Therefore, I find that the give and take which is normally associated with bargaining was not a part of the discussions involved herein.

Accordingly, in the circumstances of this case I conclude that the discussions with unit employees which occurred on January 13, 14 and 18, 1977 did not constitute "formal discussions" within the meaning of Section 10(e) of the Order. 6/

Assuming these meetings were found to be Section 10(e) discussions, I nevertheless conclude that, with regard to the meetings of January 14 and 18, 1977, notification of such meetings to Union representatives as employees and not in their capacity as Union officials satisfied any notice requirement under the Order. Thus, it has been held that formal notification to a union is not necessary where a union has actual knowledge of a matter and therefore, is not precluded from carrying out its representational responsibilities. 7/ Since a Union representative was invited to and indeed attended each of these meetings, I conclude that in the circumstances herein, the notice requirements under the Order have been satisfied.

As to the meeting of January 13, 1977, Complainant has offered no evidence to establish that the Activity failed to notify or invite the Union to that session. In these circumstances, I conclude that Complainant has failed to carry its burden of proof to support the allegation that the Union was not afforded an opportunity to attend this meeting.

SUMMARY OF DECISION AND ORDER OF THE ASSISTANT SECRETARY
PURSUANT TO SECTION 6 OF EXECUTIVE ORDER 11491, AS AMENDED

DEPARTMENT OF THE NAVY,
NAVAL TRAINING CENTER,
SAN DIEGO, CALIFORNIA
A/SLMR No. 1121

This case involved an unfair labor practice complaint filed by Lawrence E. Isom (Complainant) alleging that the Respondent had violated Section 19(a)(1) and (3) of the Order by allowing David Canfield, who it is contended is a supervisor, to remain as president of International Association of Firefighters, Local F-33, AFL-CIO (Party-in-Interest), the exclusive representative of the unit of nonsupervisory employees at the Respondent in which Canfield is included, thereby placing Canfield in a conflict of interest situation. The Respondent and the Party-in-Interest, on the other hand, contended that Canfield is not a supervisor within the meaning of Section 2(c) of the Order.

The Administrative Law Judge found that there was insufficient evidence to establish that Canfield is, in fact, a supervisor and he recommended that the complaint be dismissed in its entirety. The Assistant Secretary adopted the findings, conclusion and recommendations of the Administrative Law Judge and ordered that the complaint be dismissed.

DECISION AND ORDER

On June 27, 1978, Administrative Law Judge Henry B. Lasky issued his Recommended Decision and Order in the above-entitled proceeding, finding that the Respondent had not engaged in the unfair labor practices alleged in the complaint and recommending that the complaint be dismissed in its entirety. Thereafter, the Complainant filed exceptions and a supporting brief with respect to the Administrative Law Judge's Recommended Decision and Order and the Respondent filed an answering brief to the Complainant's exceptions.

The Assistant Secretary has reviewed the rulings of the Administrative Law Judge made at the hearing and finds that no prejudicial error was committed. The rulings are hereby affirmed. Upon consideration of the Administrative Law Judge's Recommended Decision and Order and the entire record in the subject case, including the Complainant's exceptions and supporting brief and the Respondent's answering brief, I hereby adopt the Administrative Law Judge's findings, 1/ conclusions 2/ and recommendations.

1/ On page 3 of his Recommended Decision and Order the Administrative Law Judge inadvertently quoted Section 6 "Informal Step," of Article XVII of the negotiated agreement between the Respondent and the Party-in-Interest, as containing the word "formally" in the first sentence instead of the word "informally." This inadvertent error is hereby corrected.

2/ In reaching my decision herein, I find it unnecessary to pass upon or adopt the Administrative Law Judge's conclusion on page 3 of his Recommended Decision and Order that the "...Complainant defies credulity with his denial that this proceeding was brought because of his inability to unseat David Canfield as president of the Union [Party-in-Interest] in an election."

filing of a complaint on August 2, 1977, by Lawrence E. Isom, individually (hereinafter called the Complainant) which alleged that the Naval Training Center, San Diego, California, of the Department of the Navy (hereinafter called the Respondent) violated sections 19(a)(1) and (3) of the Order when Respondent's alleged agent and representative David Canfield, shift supervisor, GS-7, was elected president of Local F-33 of the International Association of Firefighters (hereinafter called the Union) on or about April 14, 1977. Respondent denied that they violated the Order, and affirmatively alleged that Complainant lacked standing to bring this proceeding as he is not an employee of the Respondent.

At the hearing both parties were represented and the Union appeared and was represented as a party-in-interest. All parties were afforded full opportunity to be heard, to present evidence, and to examine and cross-examine the witnesses. Post-hearing briefs were allowed to be filed with a mail posting of no later than June 12, 1978, and the Complainant and Union filed briefs with the undersigned within the time required, which have been duly considered.

Upon the entire record herein, from my observation of the witnesses, and their demeanor, and from all the evidence presented at the hearing, I make the following findings, conclusions and recommendations.

The individual Complainant is a GS-5 firefighter employed by the North Island Naval Air Station for approximately two years. He is not now nor has he ever been an employee of the Naval Training Center in San Diego, California. It is contended that David Canfield, an employee of the Respondent, is a supervisor within the meaning of section 2(c) of the Order and Respondents' recognition of David Canfield as president of Local F-33 of the Union constitutes a violation of sections 19(a)(1) and (3) of the Order.

Since Complainant was never employed by Respondent, his testimony regarding David Canfield's duties as an alleged supervisor and the procedures and practices of the Naval Training Center are based entirely on alleged conversations of Complainant with friends and with the fire chief of Respondent. Complainant's allegations are substantially based on his experience at the North Island Naval Air Station which employs 105 fire fighters and has a chief, assistant chief (GS-10), crash captain (GS-8), and a supervisor (GS-6). The Respondent, in contrast, employs a total of 15, including a chief, two captains (GS-7), driver (GS-5) and fire fighters (GS-4).

David Canfield is one of the two captains (GS-7), at the Respondents' facility and is president of Local F-33 of the Union. The Respondents, the Union and Canfield contend that Canfield is not a "supervisor" under section 2(c) of the Order.

At all times material herein, Local F-33 of the International Association of Fire Fighters was the collective bargaining representative of all employees in the unit except, among others, "supervisors." Local F-33 of the International Association of Fire Fighters and the Naval Administrative Command were parties to the collective bargaining agreement.

Complainant ran for election as president of Local F-33 and was defeated for such office by David Canfield prior to his filing the complaint herein for unfair labor practices. Complainant acknowledges that although he never saw David Canfield in a conflict of interest situation, he wants him removed as president of the Union. However, Complainant defies credulity with his denial that this proceeding was brought because of his inability to unseat David Canfield as president of the Union in an election.

Complainant testified that David Canfield has the authority to transfer, recall, assign, direct, and adjust grievances and as a consequence is a "supervisor" as defined by the Order. A position description and promotional announcement were introduced in support of such contentions. A copy of the agreement between the Union and the Respondent containing Article XVII, section 6 was introduced which provides in part:

"An employee shall first take up his grievance formally with his immediate supervisor. The immediate supervisor will meet with the employee in an attempt to resolve the grievance. The employee may, upon request be represented by one union representative who shall be the appropriate steward. The supervisor must give his answer within five (5) working days. The union and the employer anticipate that most employee grievances will be settled at this informal level."

Complainant asserts that David Canfield is the immediate supervisor referred to in Article XVII, section 6 and therefore has authority to adjust grievances. It should be noted that the Complainant admits to being unaware of whether David Canfield exercises independent judgment in performing any of the alleged supervisory functions.

David Canfield testified and denied having any of the indicia of "supervisor" as defined by the Order with the exception of routine recall, direction or assignment pursuant to prescribed rules and regulations. He maintains that the performance of these functions do not involve the exercise of independent judgment. For example, the prescribed rules require four fire fighters on a truck, and consequently if an employee calls in sick, Captain Canfield is required to recall a man to work according to the rules in order to satisfy the requirements of the four fire fighters on the truck. There is no independent judgment involved. Canfield denied, emphatically, adjusting grievances pursuant to the agreement between the Union and the Activity.

Captain Canfield functions as a "team leader" rather than a "supervisor". He performs the same functions as the fire fighters, shares quarters with the fire fighters, does not have a separate office and his position is essentially due to his 22 years of experience as a fire fighter and his AS degree in fire fighting. He is comparable to a lead man in private industry. He does not participate in management of the department, does not meet with the Security Department on matters relating to either management of the fire fighters or on matters regarding personnel.

Common petty annoyances or "gripes" arising among the fire fighters are admittedly resolved by Captain Canfield but he does not adjust grievances within the meaning of the aforesaid quoted agreement. The adjustment of grievances is the function of the fire chief.

At times when the chief is not present Captain Canfield carries out the routine functions, pursuant to prescribed rules and regulations of the fire chief and does not exercise any independent judgment.

The testimony of David Canfield was substantially corroborated by the fire chief who considers Captain Canfield as a "work leader" within the chief's style of management of the department. The functions performed by Captain Canfield with reference to manning, assignment, discipline and direction are performed pursuant to preset instructions of the chief and do not involve independent judgment. The routinized instructions referred to are communicated by the chief pursuant to his guidelines, rules, regulations, or standard manuals. The chief acknowledged that Captain Canfield will perform the functions of the chief at a fire scene until the chief arrives. There is a conflict of testimony as to whether Captain Canfield adjusts grievances or has authority to adjust grievances pursuant to Article XVII section 6 of the agreement.

Representatives of the Activity and the Union testified that Captain Canfield does not perform the duties of a "supervisor" within the meaning of section 2(c) of the Order.

Discussion and Conclusions

The Complainant herein has standing to bring this proceeding pursuant to 29 C.F.R. § 203.1. The aforesaid regulation provides that a complaint that any activity, agency, or labor organization has engaged in any act prohibited under section 19 of the Order or has failed to take any action required by the Order, may be filed by an employee, an activity, agency, or a labor organization. The fact Complainant herein is not and never has been an employee of the Respondent is not fatal. Complainant is a federal employee and as a member of Local F-33 there is sufficient nexus between the alleged wrong and the Complainant. It has been held that the regulations did not contemplate proceedings such as this being instituted by someone with at most an academic interest, or perhaps even a mischievous interest, but there shall be some nexus between the alleged wrong and the Complainant. Internal Revenue Service, Chicago District, A/SLMR No. 279 (1973). As a federal employee and a member of the Union local, Complainant has sufficient "standing". To hold otherwise would be a denial of a union member's right to a hearing on the allegation that his union is controlled by management.

The thrust of the complaint here is that if David Canfield is in fact a "supervisor" within the meaning of the Order and is serving as president of the union local, it constitutes a violation of section 19(a)(1) which holds that agency management shall not interfere with, restrain, or coerce an employee in the exercise of the rights assured by the Order and section 19(a)(3) which provides that agency management shall not control a labor organization.

Section 2(c) defines "supervisor" as follows:

"'Supervisor' means an employee having authority, in the interest of an agency, to hire, transfer, suspend, lay off, recall, promote, discharge, assign, reward, or discipline other employees, or responsibility to direct them, or adjust their grievances, or effectively to recommend such action if in connection with the foregoing, the exercise of authority is not merely a routine or clerical nature but requires the use of independent judgment."

The purposes and intent of the Order as amended, are clearly stated in the Report and Recommendations of the Federal Labor Relations Council on the amendment of Executive Order 11491, as amended, January 1975.

"The Counsel agrees with the view expressed in the review that only genuine supervisory positions should be excluded from bargaining units. The Counsel wishes to note that the definition in the Order was designed to do this and contains a number of qualifications to this end. For example - 'in the interest of an agency', 'responsibly to direct [employees]', 'effectively to recommend', and 'exercise of authority ... not of a merely routine or clerical nature, but [requiring] the use of independent judgment' - are limitations which were designed to assure that persons determined to be supervisors would possess actual authority, as distinct from work leaders, and would be found to be in bonafide conflict of interest situations if not excluded from bargaining units. The Counsel believes that the continued careful application by the Assistant Secretary of these qualifications and the making of supervisory determinations will aid in identifying genuine supervisory positions."

It should be noted that originally the Order contained, as an indicia of supervisory status, the evaluation of the performance of other employees. Because of that included criterion persons who performed an evaluation function which had only a minimum effect on the employees being evaluated and had no other supervisory authority could be determined to be supervisors within the meaning of the Order. The Council did not believe that such persons should be deemed supervisors and as a consequence the criterion of the evaluating performance was deleted from the definition of "supervisor".

In addition, the Federal Labor Relations Council considering this amendment, acknowledged that it considered proposals that the definition "supervisor" in the Order be made uniform with the definition of the term used for other purposes such as position classifications. However, the Council rejected this proposal and concluded otherwise by stating that any advantage to be gained through uniformity were outweighed by the importance of having expert determinations made for the unique and special purposes of the Labor Relations Program. It is therefore clear, that the definition of the word "supervisor" as used in the Order is not synonymous or uniform with the term used for other purposes such as in position descriptions.

In view of the purposes and intent of the Federal Labor Relations Council, the evidence presented does not establish that Captain Canfield is a "supervisor" within the meaning of section 2(c) of the Order, because the record as a whole reflects that the functions enumerated in section 2(c) are either not performed, or if performed, are in the nature of a more experienced employee assisting less experienced employees, and the functions so performed are routine in nature and do not require the exercise of independent judgment. Arizona National Guard, Air National Guard, Sky Harbor Airport, FLRC No. 74A-78 (1975).

The leading cases on the subject indicate that the functions enumerated by section 2(c) of the Order are in the disjunctive and therefore the performance of any function in the manner provided will be sufficient for the determination of supervisory status. See U. S. Naval Weapons Center, China Lake, California, A/SLMR No. 128, FLRC No. 72A-11 (1973); Mare Island Naval Shipyard, Vallejo, California, A/SLMR No. 129, FLRC No. 72A-12 (1973). There is the qualification, however, that the supervisory functions must be performed in a manner requiring independent judgment. Subsequent to these decisions, the January 1975 Report and Recommendations of the Council clarified the intent, purpose, and meaning of section 2(c) of the Order. It is a well established rule of statutory construction that where a literal reading of words produces a result plainly at variance with the purposes sought to be accomplished by the statute, such purposes rather than the literal words are controlling. Department of the Air Force, McConnell Air Force Base, Kansas, A/SLMR No. 134, FLRC No. 72A-15 (1973).

In the case at bar, Captain Canfield did not have authority to hire, transfer, suspend, lay off, promote, discharge, or reward or discipline. Any exercise of the authority to recall, assign, direct or adjust grievances has been done on a routine basis according to prescribed rules and regulations and does not require the exercise of independent judgment. Federal Aviation Administration, National Capital Airports, A/SLMR No. 405 (1974).

The evidence establishes that Captain Canfield possesses more seniority and job experience than the other fire fighters but he performs essentially the same tasks as other fire fighters even though due to his experience, he is called upon to assist and direct the other fire fighters in the performance of their duties. Such is insufficient by itself to render him a supervisor within the meaning of section 2(c) of the Order. U. S. Army Waterways, Experiment Station, Vicksburg, Mississippi, A/SLMR No. 497 (1975); Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation, A/SLMR No. 459, FLRC No. 75A-39 (1975). The instances of Captain Canfield performing the function of the fire chief until the actual fire chief arrives, suggests that such function is based on Captain Canfield's experience, is routine, and is performed in his capacity as a "work leader" as contemplated by the Council.

Although the evidence is somewhat murky as to whether Captain Canfield adjusts grievances within section 2(c) of the Order and pursuant to Article XVII section 6 of the agreement, I do not find such evidence is a sufficient basis for supervisory determination. Captain Canfield acknowledges that he may adjust "gripes" which he defines as petty annoyances between the fire fighters while referring all grievances to the fire chief. Grievances are understood to be matters related to workers' rights and working conditions. The evidence in this regard is therefore insufficient to establish supervisory status as the processing of such "gripes" are only of petty routine matters and the adjustment of grievances as contemplated by section 2(c) of the Order are handled by the fire chief. See Mare Island Naval Shipyard, Vallejo, California, FLRC No. 72A-12 (1973). Any departure from the above routine procedures are isolated situations of infrequent occurrence and the Council has stated that the mere intermittent and infrequent possession or assignment of supervisory functions is not a sufficient basis for a supervisory determination. (See Report and Recommendations of Federal Labor Relations Council, January 1975).

Complainant, in his brief, attaches great importance to N.L.R.B. cases, but overlooks the qualifications of the term "supervisor" in the private sector. The section defining "supervisor" in the Labor-Management Relations Act was intended to apply to those having true managerial power with genuine management prerogatives as distinguished from straw bosses, lead man, and other minor supervisory employees. Ross Porta-Plant Inc. v. N.L.R.B., C.A. Texas 1968, 404 F. 2d 1180; U. S. Gypsum Co (1957) 118 N.L.R.B. 20. The Federal Labor Relations Council in its January 1975 report, as aforesaid, expressed the same intention for the public sector when it indicated "only genuine supervisory positions should be excluded from bargaining units."

In order to establish that a particular employee is a "supervisor", there must be evidence of actual supervisory authority visibly translated into tangible examples demonstrating the existence of such authority and internal memoranda and notices which constitute nothing more than naked designations of "paper power" are not sufficient to establish supervisory status. Oil, Chemical and Atomic Workers Intern. Union, AFL-CIO v. N.L.R.B., 1971, 445 F.2d 237 certiorari denied 92 S. Ct. 713.

Similarly, the position description, the promotion notice and the agreement between the Union and the Activity, introduced into evidence by the Complainant are nothing more than theoretical paper power attributed to Captain Canfield and are insufficient to establish supervisory status within the meaning of the Order.

In the private sector, in the field of labor relations, a supervisor must be part of management, International Union of United Brewery, Flour, Cereal, Soft Drink and Distillery Workers of America, AFL-CIO v. N.L.R.B. 1961, 298 F.2d 297, certiorari denied 82 S. Ct. 875. The same is true in the public sector, and it should be noted that Captain Canfield does not participate in management of the department in which he is a part, and does not meet with the security department regarding matters relating to management or with reference to personal matters. The evidence does not establish that he acts "in the interest of an agency" as required by section 2(c) of the Order.

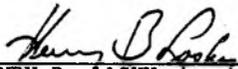

Based on the foregoing there is insufficient evidence in the record under 29 C.F.R. § 203.15 to establish that Captain Canfield is a supervisor, possessing actual authority as distinct from a work leader, who is in a bonafide conflict of interest situation if he were not excluded from the bargaining unit.

The record does not contain evidence that Respondent violated section 19(a)(1) and (3) of the Order.

Recommendation

I recommend that the complaint herein be dismissed in its entirety.

SUMMARY OF DECISION AND ORDER OF THE ASSISTANT SECRETARY
PURSUANT TO SECTION 6 OF EXECUTIVE ORDER 11491, AS AMENDED

DEPARTMENT OF THE AIR FORCE, McCLELLAN AIR FORCE BASE
A/SLMR No. 1122

This case involved an unfair labor practice complaint filed by the American Federation of Government Employees, Local 1857, AFL-CIO (Complainant) alleging, essentially, that the Respondent violated Section 19(a)(1) and (3) of the Order when Lloyd Hoskins, an "alternate supervisor," collected signatures on a petition directed to the Complainant requesting removal of the Complainant's steward. The complaint further alleged a violation of Section 19(a)(1) of the Order by the Respondent when Hoskins urged members to resign, and non-members to refrain from joining, the Complainant.

The Administrative Law Judge recommended that the complaint be dismissed in its entirety. In reaching this result, he noted that the instant dispute centers on whether Hoskins was a supervisor within the meaning of Section 2(c) of the Order at the time the aforementioned petition was circulated. He found that Hoskins was not, in fact, a supervisor within the meaning of Section 2(c) of the Order at the time of his circulating the petition directed against the Complainant's steward. Furthermore, he found no evidence to support the Complainant's contention that the Respondent permitted Hoskins to circulate the petition.

Noting particularly the absence of exceptions, the Assistant Secretary adopted the findings, conclusions and recommendation of the Administrative Law Judge and ordered that the complaint be dismissed.

RECOMMENDED DECISION AND ORDER

Pursuant to a Notice of Hearing on the complaint issued on May 23, 1978, by the Regional Administrator for Labor-Management Services Administration for the U. S. Department of Labor, San Francisco Region, a hearing was held on June 29, 1978, at McClellan Air Force Base, California.

This proceeding was initiated under Executive Order 11491, as amended (hereinafter called the Order) by the filing of a complaint on February 1, 1978, by American Federation of Government Employees, Local 1857 (hereinafter called the Complainant) which alleged that the Department of the Air Force, McClellan Air Force Base, California (hereinafter called the Respondent) violated section 19(a)(1) and (3) of the Order when Respondent's employee Lloyd Hoskins, alternate supervisor, collected signatures on a petition directed to American Federation of Government Employees requesting removal of the AFGE Shop Steward. It further alleged violation of section 19(a)(1) of the Order, by Respondent, when Lloyd Hoskins circulated a petition which assertedly urged members to resign from and non-members to refrain from joining American Federation of Government Employees, Local 1857. Respondent denied that they violated the Order.

The issues presented for determination at the hearing are: (1) whether Lloyd Hoskins, who was acting as alternate supervisor during the period that he collected signatures on a petition directed to AFGE requesting removal of the AFGE Shop Steward, was a supervisor within the criteria established in Executive Order 11491, as amended, and whether his actions were in violation of section 19(a)(1) and (3) of the Order; and, (2) whether Lloyd Hoskins' conduct in circulating a petition which assertedly urged members to resign from and non-members to refrain from joining AFGE Local 1857 was in violation of section 19(a)(1) of the Order.

At the hearing both parties were represented and were afforded full opportunity to be heard, to present evidence, and to examine and cross-examine the witnesses. Post-hearing briefs were allowed to be filed with the Office of Administrative Law Judges in San Francisco no later than July 28, 1978, and the Complainant and Respondent filed such briefs with the undersigned within the time required, which have been duly considered.

Upon the entire record herein, from my observation of the witnesses, and their demeanor, and from all the evidence presented at the hearing, I make the following findings, conclusions, and recommendations.

Findings of Fact

Lloyd P. Hoskins is employed as a painter, WG-9, in the aircraft paint shop at McClellan Air Force Base, California. There are approximately 20 employees in the paint shop who are all at the level of WG-9 with the exception of two employees in the category of WG-7. Karen Lansbury is also employed as a painter, WG-9, at the same shop and Ms. Lansbury was the Union Steward on or about November 30, 1977.

At all times material herein, Local 1857 of the American Federation of Government Employees was the exclusive bargaining representative of all employees in the unit.

Wilson L. Crum is the supervisor, bearing the title of Aircraft Painter Foreman, of the paint shop employing Mr. Hoskins and Ms. Lansbury. Foreman Crum testified that on November 30, 1977 and December 1, 1977, Mr. Hoskins was his designated alternate supervisor with the function of keeping the workflow going and he considered Mr. Hoskins more of a work leader rather than a true supervisor. The functioning of Mr. Hoskins as alternate supervisor occurred during absences of Mr. Crum and the evidence revealed that on November 30, 1977, Mr. Crum was in fact absent for the purposes of attending a school but he could not recall whether he was present or absent on December 1, 1977. Hoskins ceased being alternate supervisor approximately two and one-half months prior to the date of the hearing on June 29, 1978. According to Mr. Crum, Hoskins, in order to keep the workflow going, has the authority to assign and direct unit employees to particular jobs or to set aside regular work in order to accomplish rush jobs; however, such authority to assign and direct are routine in nature and the frequency of rush jobs in the paint shop are such as to be routine.

There is no apparent dispute that Mr. Crum is the supervisor within the meaning of section 2(c) of the Order. However, the evidence is clear that Mr. Hoskins, as the designated alternate supervisor in the absence of Mr. Crum, did not have the authority nor could he effectively recommend in the interest of the agency, to hire, transfer, suspend, layoff, recall, promote, discharge, reward, or discipline other employees, or adjust their grievances. Mr. Hoskins' authority to assign or direct other employees to painting assignments was of a routine nature not requiring the use of independent judgment.

Admittedly, Mr. Hoskins on November 30, 1977 and December 1, 1977, collected signatures on a petition dated November 30, 1977, addressed to the president of the Union requesting the removal of the Union Steward, Ms. Karen Lansbury. The petition signed by 33 persons included the signature of Lloyd P. Hoskins and expressed the intention that the signers of the petition who were Union members intended to resign from the Union if Ms. Karen Lansbury was not removed as the Union Steward, and further expressed the intention that those signing who were non-Union members would not join the Union so long as Ms. Karen Lansbury remained the Union Steward.

Mr. Hoskins, at the time he circulated the petition, took one hour annual leave and also admitted circulating the document while on lunch time or break time. His explanation for such activity was that he and other employees in the paint shop were upset with Ms. Lansbury as a fellow employee, and when he passed the petition he acted as a fellow employee and not in the interest of management. It should be noted that the petition of November 30, 1977, addressed to the Union set forth a number of reasons for the petition including the allegation that Ms. Lansbury keeps the paint shop in a constant state of turmoil, harasses other employees, is away from her job an excessive amount of time in the name of Union business and as a result of her activities the morale of the paint shop is quite low.

With reference to his status as alternate supervisor, Mr. Hoskins testified that other employees were aware and he advised them that he was alternate supervisor only and not a regular supervisor. He acknowledged he had authority to sign referral slips for employees who desired to go to the Union or dispensary but that such procedure was routine in nature and there was never an instance of anyone ever being denied a requested opportunity to go to the Union or to the dispensary. He referred to his position as "alternate supervisor" as one that had no authority as a supervisor and that he requested people to do work, in the absence of Mr. Crum, and that if any requests with reference to his assignments or directions were refused he would take the matter up with the regular supervisor. Apparently the dispute between Ms. Lansbury and Mr. Hoskins was not an isolated incident for there was a prior incident in which he had asked Ms. Lansbury to perform a certain job and she refused because he did not have the authority to make such direction or assignment. Although the evidence is somewhat murky in this regard, it appears that Ms. Lansbury, with the support of the Union, was sustained with reference to this prior incident.

Ms. Lansbury testified that Hoskins has all of the indicia of a supervisor enumerated in section 2(c) of the Order and the basis of her testimony was since Foreman Crum has such authority, Hoskins as his alternate had derivative authority as supervisor within the meaning of the Order. There is no evidence to support this conclusion. Ms. Lansbury acknowledged that she was never aware of Mr. Hoskins performing any of the indicia of authority under 2(c) of the Order with the exception of direction and assignment of jobs to other employees. Significantly, unlike Foreman Crum, Mr. Hoskins worked and performed the same job as all other employees in the paint shop even during the absence of Mr. Crum.

Discussion and Conclusions

The thrust of the complaint here is that if Lloyd Hoskins was in fact a "supervisor" within the meaning of the Order, then his collecting signatures on the petition directed to AGFE requesting removal of the AFGE Shop Steward constituted a violation of section 19(a)(1) and (3) of the Order by Respondent and that such circulation of the petition urging members to resign from and non-members to refrain from joining the Union was in violation of section 19(a)(1) of the Order by Respondent. Complainant further argues that even if Mr. Hoskins was not a supervisor, Respondent was nevertheless in violation of the aforesaid sections of the Order for the acts admittedly committed by Mr. Hoskins because the Respondent permitted his circulating the petition.

Complainant is seeking as a remedy, for the alleged unfair labor practices, the removal of Mr. Hoskins from his place of employment and that he be relocated by Respondent to someplace where he would be without authority to supervise other employees. The remedy sought herein strongly suggests that this proceeding is a manifestation of a continuing animosity between the Union Steward and Mr. Hoskins rather than an effort to stop an unfair labor practice of Respondent.

Significantly, in a letter dated April 10, 1978, the Complainant herein acknowledged that an "alternate supervisor," is an employee, not a "supervisor," who is selected for the purpose of insuring continuity of function. (Assistant Secretary Exhibit 1E, attachment 1.) Such admission, in conjunction with the requested remedy, tarnishes the motives of Complainant in this proceeding.

The contention of Complainant that Respondent was in violation of the Order because of its alleged permitting of Mr. Hoskins to circulate the petition in question is without merit as there is no evidence in support of such allegation.

Certainly if Mr. Hoskins was in fact a "supervisor" within the meaning of the Order then his activities in circulating the petition requesting the removal of the Shop Steward and urging members to resign from and non-members to refrain from joining Local 1857 constituted a violation of section 19(a)(1) and (3) of the Order. The contents of the petition were such that the circulation by agency management could constitute a violation of the prohibition against agency management interfering, restraining or coercing employees in their rights assured by the Order and would be an attempt to control a labor organization. However, Respondent did not commit such violations because Mr. Hoskins was not a part of agency management as he was not a supervisor within the meaning of the Order. Essentially the activities of Mr. Hoskins which are in question amount to an internal Union dispute for which the Respondent cannot be held accountable.

Section 2(c) defines "supervisor" as follows:

'Supervisor' means an employee having authority in the interest of an agency, to hire, transfer, suspend, layoff, recall, promote, discharge, assign, reward, or discipline other employees, or responsibility to direct them, or adjust their grievances, or effectively to recommend such action, if in connection with the foregoing the exercise of authority is not of a merely routine or clerical nature, but requires the use of independent judgment;

The purposes and intent of the Order as amended, are clearly stated in the Report and Recommendations of the Federal Labor Relations Council on the amendment of Executive Order 11491, as amended, January 1975.

The Council agrees with the view expressed in the review that only genuine supervisory positions should be excluded from bargaining units. The Council wishes to note that the definition in the Order was designed to do this and contains a number of qualifications to this end. For example-'in the interest of an agency,' 'responsibly to direct [employees],' 'effectively to recommend,' and 'exercise of authority ... not of a merely routine or clerical nature, but [requiring] the use of independent judgment' - are limitations which were designed to assure that persons determined to be supervisors would possess actual authority as distinct from work leaders, and would be found to be in bonafide conflict of interest situations if not excluded from bargaining units. The Council believes that the continued careful application by the Assistant Secretary of these qualifications and the making of supervisory determinations will aid in identifying genuine supervisory positions.

In view of the purposes and intent of the Federal Labor Relations Council, the evidence presented does not establish that Mr. Hoskins was a "supervisor" within the meaning of section 2(c) of the Order, because the record as a whole reflects that the functions enumerated in section 2(c) are either not performed, or if performed, were in the nature of a more experienced employee assisting less experienced employees and the functions so performed were routine in nature and did not require the exercise of independent judgment. Arizona National Guard, Air National Guard, Sky Harbor Airport, FLRC No. 74A-78 (1975); Department of Defense, National Guard Bureau, Texas Adjutant General's Dept., Austin, Texas, A/SLMR No. 524.

In the case at bar Mr. Hoskins when acting as "alternate supervisor" gave routine assignments and directions to fellow employees more as a work leader in order to keep the workflow going in the absence of the regular supervisor. Complainant has admitted this crucial fact.

Even in the private sector, the section defining "supervisor" in the Labor-Management Relations Act was intended to apply to those having true managerial power with genuine management prerogatives as distinguished from straw bosses, leadmen, and other minor supervisory employees. Ross Porta-Plant Inc. v. NLRB, C. A. Texas, 1968, 404 F.2d 1180; U. S. Gypsum Co. (1957), 118 NLRB 20. The Federal Labor Relations Council in its January 1975 report, as aforesaid, expressed the same intention for the public sector when it indicated "only genuine supervisory positions should be excluded from bargaining units."

There is a total lack of evidence that Mr. Hoskins participated in the management of the department of which he was a part. As alternate supervisor he did not have the indicia of authority under 2(c) of the Order nor was he even known to have attempted to exercise such authority, even by Ms. Lansbury, but to the contrary, he performed the same work as his fellow employees. I therefore find that Mr. Hoskins was not a supervisor within the meaning of section 2(c) of the Order at the time of his circulating the petition directed against the Union Steward and therefore the Respondent bears no responsibility for Mr. Hoskins' actions on November 30 and December 1, 1977, and was not in violation of the Order as charged.

Recommendation

September 13, 1978

In the absence of evidence that Respondent violated section 19(a)(1) and (3) of the Order, I recommend that the complaint herein be dismissed in its entirety.

This case involved an unfair labor practice complaint filed by the American Federation of Government Employees, Local 2000, AFL-CIO (Complainant) alleging that the Respondent violated Section 19(a)(1) of the Order by virtue of certain coercive and threatening remarks made to a union steward by the Respondent's Commissary Manager during a meeting concerning the steward's conduct of union business during duty hours.

The Administrative Law Judge found that the Respondent did not violate Section 19(a)(1) of the Order and recommended that the complaint be dismissed. In this regard, he found that the remarks made by the Commissary Manager dealt only with the Manager's demand that the steward strictly adhere to the requirements of the parties' negotiated agreement by obtaining permission to represent an employee from both the steward's own supervisor and the employee's supervisor. In connection with the Complainant's allegation that the Commissary Manager told the union steward that "breaktime" was official time and that she could not conduct union business during such time, the Administrative Law Judge, on the basis of credited testimony, concluded no such statement had been made.

Noting particularly the absence of exceptions, the Assistant Secretary adopted the findings, conclusions and recommendation of the Administrative Law Judge and ordered that the complaint be dismissed.

RECOMMENDED DECISION AND ORDER

Statement of the Case

This proceeding under Executive Order 11491, as amended (hereinafter also referred to as the "Order"), was initiated by a charge filed on April 5, 1977, and a Complaint, dated June 10, 1977, filed on June 17, 1977, which alleged violations of Sections 19(a)(1), (2), (6) and Section 10(e) of the Order (ALJ Exh. 1). By letter dated December 29, 1977, the Acting Regional Administrator dismissed those aspects of the Complaint which alleged violations of Sections 19(a)(2) and (6) and Section 10(e) of the Order (ALJ Exh. 3), and, no request for review having been filed, on February 17, 1978, the Regional Administrator issued a Notice of Hearing on the 19(a)(1) allegation of the Complaint (ALJ Exhs. 2 and 4), pursuant to which a hearing was duly held in Shreveport, Louisiana, on April 13, 1978, before the undersigned.

All parties were represented, were afforded full opportunity to be heard, to examine and cross-examine witnesses, and to present evidence and testimony on the issues involved. At the hearing, April 28, 1978, was fixed as the date for mailing briefs. The transcript and Exhibits were not received until May 4, 1978; but neither party requested an extension of time to file briefs and neither party filed a post-hearing brief. Upon the basis of the entire record, including my observation of the witnesses and their demeanor, I hereby make the following findings, conclusions and recommendation:

FINDINGS OF FACT

1. Marguerite P. Garrison, cashier and steward for Local 2000, on March 18, 1977, while on duty at her register was approached by Mr. John Moore who asked that Ms. Garrison, as union steward, meet with his (Moore's) supervisor about some difficulty Mr. Moore had within his section (warehouse). Ms. Garrison testified that she asked Mr. Moore if he had talked to his supervisor and whether Mr. Moore's supervisor knew he was going to talk to her (Ms. Garrison); that Mr. Moore told her "yes"; that she (Ms. Garrison) told Mr. Moore that she had a break coming up and would be off the register shortly and would get back to him after she had got permission to talk to him and to his supervisor. Ms. Garrison testified that when she signed out for her break at about 4:00 p.m., she went to the office of her immediate supervisor, Mrs. Short, and found that Mrs. Short had left for the day; that she then returned to the floor and contacted Ms. Ruble, who acted as floor supervisor in Mrs. Short's absence, and asked permission to meet with Mr. Moore and Mr. Moore's supervisor; that Ms. Ruble contacted Mr. Richard D. Jones, Commissary Manager, on the intercom and informed Ms. Garrison that she would have to contact Mr. Watson, Mr. Moore's supervisor, even though Mr. Moore had told Ms. Garrison he had already talked to Mr. Watson; that Ms. Ruble obtained Mr. Watson's telephone number; that she (Ms. Garrison) called Mr. Watson; and that she went to the warehouse and met with Messrs. Watson and Moore.

2. On March 19, 1978, when Ms. Garison reported for duty, Mr. Jones said he would like to talk to her in his office; that she asked Mr. Jones to shut the door, which he did; and a conversation then ensued in Mr. Jones' office during which Mrs. Short, who shared the office, was also present.

3. Ms. Garison testified that Mr. Jones told her that break time was official time and that she could not conduct union activities on break time; however, Ms. Garison admitted that: a) Mr. Jones told her she was having too many phone calls; and b) Mr. Jones

"stated in the meeting that -- the same thing that had been put forth in the letter [July 8, 1977, memorandum]" (Tr. 83).

4. When Mr. Jones was informed that an unfair labor practice charge had been filed, he prepared a memorandum, dated July 8, 1977, of the March 19, 1977, meeting. The memorandum stated, in part, as follows:

"1. ... I explained to Mrs. Garison that she was violating the base memorandum agreement by conducting a lot of her union duties during duty hours without first receiving permission from her supervisor, or the supervisor of the person she was representing.

"2. I also told Mrs. Garison that she was having to neglect our patrons on too many occasions by receiving too many phone calls during the day and visiting with other cashiers and talking to people approaching her with complaints when she was supposed to be operating a cash register.

"3. I explained that I appreciated and respected her extra duty as a union steward and wanted to work with her in any way I could to resolve complaints, but there was (sic) certain rules, and regulations that each of us would have to follow.

"4. I told Mrs. Garison that I could no longer condone infractions of the above items discussed." (Comp. Exh. 1)

5. Mr. Jones testified that on March 18, 1977, he had observed Mr. Moore talking to Ms. Garison at her register; that she had stopped operating her register and was reading notes handed to her by Mr. Moore; that some time prior to March 18, 1977, Mr. Moore had gone to another cashier and had asked that she get Ms. Garison off the register but he was not sure whether Ms. Garison had gone on that occasion; that he had observed on other occasions prior to March 18, 1977, that Ms. Garison had left her register and was seen talking to one or more cashiers while neglecting customers and that he had observed various incidents when Ms. Garison had left her register to take telephone calls. Mr. Jones further testified that because he had personally observed these incidents he called Ms. Garison into his office on March 19, 1977, and he testified that he told Ms. Garison she was conducting too much union business on government time without approval of supervisors; was receiving too many phone calls and leaving patrons standing in line while she was on the phone; that he would not condone her conducting union business on government time without permission from supervisors. Mr. Jones further testified that he told Ms. Garison that she must comply with the Memorandum Agreement (Jt. Exh. 1). Mr. Jones denied that he told Ms. Garison that she was not to do any union business at the Commissary; stated that he never told Ms. Garison he didn't want her to be the union steward; and stated that all he told her was that she must follow the written contract between Barksdale and the Union. Indeed, Mr. Jones testified that he told Ms. Garison that he was for her being union steward, and he would help her in any way he could, but that he would not condone her conducting union business on government time without permission from supervisors. Mr. Jones denied that he told Ms. Garison that she could not engage in union business on her break time.

6. Mrs. Short testified that Mr. Jones on March 19, 1977, told Ms. Garison that she was getting too many phone calls, that she could not conduct union business on government time without the approval of both supervisors; that he did respect her office as a union steward but there were rules to be followed. Mrs. Short testified that "breaks was not mentioned" in the conversation of March 19, 1977.

7. Mr. Jones testified that he did not raise his voice in the conversation with Ms. Garison on March 19, 1977; Mrs. Short agreed; Mr. Robertson, who was in the outer office, testified that he did not overhear the conversation in Mr. Jones's office on March 19, 1977; Mrs. Greta Witt testified that she was not able to hear the conversation between Mr. Jones and Ms. Garrison on March 19, 1977; and Ms. Helen Lewis testified that she recalled seeing Ms. Garrison in Mr. Jones' office but heard no conversation from the office.

8. Article V, Section 2, of the Memorandum of Agreement between Barksdale Air Force Base and Local 2000 provides in part, as follows:

"... Union stewards will request permission from their immediate supervisor when the stewards wish to leave their assigned duties for the purpose of performing duties listed in Section 3 of this Article, without loss of pay or leave. Permission will be granted in the absence of compelling circumstances preventing it. If circumstances prevent, the steward will be notified and will be told the earliest possible absence, not to exceed reasonable time limits. The steward will secure permission of the employee's supervisor in advance to arrange an appointment within a reasonable length of time. The steward and/or the employee will report to his respective supervisor upon returning to assigned duties." (Jt. Exh. 1).

Article VI, Section 3, which concerns the use of telephones by stewards, concludes with this sentence:

"... Steward will obtain permission from their supervisors before leaving their official duties for this purpose." (Jt. Exh. 1).

The Complaint asserted that:

"On or about 19 March 1977, Mr. Richard Jones, Commissary Store Manager, threatened, intimidated, restrained, and failed to recognize the duty (sic) appointed Union Steward, Mrs. Marguerite Garrison, by orally threatening her in his office in such manner as to allow her coworkers and members of the bargaining unit to harken to such threats." (ALJ Exh. 1).

The record fails to show that Mr. Jones on March 19, 1977, interfered with, restrained, or coerced Ms. Garrison in the exercise of any right assured by the Order. To be sure, Mr. Jones told Ms. Garrison that she could not conduct union business on government time without the approval of her supervisor and any employee's supervisor; but this is precisely what is provided for in the Memorandum Agreement of the parties and Mr. Jones' insistence that Ms. Garrison adhere to the terms of the collective bargaining agreement was not a violation of Section 19(a)(1) of the Order, where, as here, the record neither shows nor even suggests, that Ms. Garrison was ever denied permission by supervision pursuant to said agreement. It is also true that Mr. Jones told Ms. Garrison that she was receiving too many telephone calls and leaving patrons standing in line while she was on the telephone. Again, this was fully consistent with the Memorandum Agreement. Indeed, the Agreement would permit Respondent to insist on a steward obtaining permission from his or her supervisor before leaving their official duties to use a telephone, whereas, Mr. Jones simply told Ms. Garrison she was receiving too many telephone calls.

There is no basis whatever on the record for the allegation that Mr. Jones failed to recognize the duly appointed Union Steward. To the contrary, the record shows affirmatively that Mr. Jones told her that he respected her as being a union steward and would help her in any way he could, but that he would not condone her conducting union business on government time without permission from supervisors. I fully credit Mr. Jones' denial that he made any statement to Ms. Garrison that she could not conduct Union business on her break time, which was corroborated by the equally credible testimony of Mrs. Short. Ms. Garrison's testimony as to such statement was not convincing, especially as Ms. Garrison thereafter admitted that Mr. Jones "stated in the meeting that -- the same things that had been put forth in the letter [Memorandum of July 8, 1977, Comp. Exh. 1]."

It is probable that Ms. Garrison inferred a limitation on her use of her break time from the fact that Mr. Jones told her she could not conduct union business on government time without the approval of both supervisors, i.e., that she must "secure permission of the employee's supervisor" (Jt. Exh. 1, Article V, Section 2). In any event, Mr. Jones' denial that he told Ms. Garrison she could not conduct union business on her break time, which was fully corroborated by the testimony of Mrs. Short, is credited and Ms. Garrison's testimony to the contrary is not credited.

September 13, 1978

Finally, the record shows that the conversation between Ms. Garison and Mr. Jones was not overheard by employees present in the outer office.

The evidence thus falls short of sustaining the allegations of the Complaint by the burden of proof required by Section 203.15 of the Regulations. Indeed, the preponderance of the evidence is decidedly to the contrary.

RECOMMENDATION

SUMMARY OF DECISION AND ORDER OF THE ASSISTANT SECRETARY
PURSUANT TO SECTION 6 OF EXECUTIVE ORDER 11491, AS AMENDED

SOCIAL SECURITY ADMINISTRATION,
CINCINNATI DOWNTOWN DISTRICT OFFICE,
CINCINNATI, OHIO
A/SLMR No. 1124

This case involved an unfair labor practice complaint filed by National Federation of Federal Employees, Local 75 (NFFE) alleging that the Respondent violated Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order by unilaterally implementing a change in office food and drink policy without first entering into negotiations with the NFFE, and by effecting a rotation of employee work assignments without first entering into bargaining on impact with the NFFE to determine the best method by which such rotation should have been implemented.

The Administrative Law Judge determined that the Respondent did not violate Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order and recommended that the complaint be dismissed in its entirety. In this regard, he found, citing NASA, Kennedy Space Center, Kennedy Space Center, Florida, 2 A/SLMR 567, A/SLMR No. 223, (1972), that the Respondent had satisfied its obligation to negotiate with the NFFE to the extent required in each of the two situations involved herein.

The Assistant Secretary adopted the findings, conclusions and recommendation of the Administrative Law Judge and ordered that the complaint be dismissed in its entirety.

RECOMMENDED DECISION

Statement of the Case

This case arises under Executive Order 11491 as amended (hereinafter referred to as the Order). It was initiated by the filing of an unfair labor practice complaint on February 17, 1978 by Local 75, National Federation of Federal Employees (hereinafter referred to as the Complainant or Union), against the Cincinnati Downtown District Office,

Social Security Administration (hereinafter referred to as the Respondent, management or the District Office) charging the Respondent with violations of Sections 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order. 1/ The Complainant alleged that Mr. John T. Maidlow, District Manager of the District Office, unilaterally implemented a change in office food and drink policy on October 17, 1977, without first entering into negotiations with the Union, and further that on December 5, 1977, Mr. Maidlow effected a rotation of employee work assignments without first entering into impact bargaining with the Union to determine the best method by which such rotation should have been implemented.

The bargaining unit represented by the Union on the dates of the alleged unfair labor practices consisted of all non-supervisory full time employees in the Social Security Administration's Cincinnati Downtown District Office, Cincinnati North District Office, and the Peebles Corner Branch Office. These components were a segment of the Cincinnati Area, a larger organizational entity consisting of eighteen offices. In turn, the Cincinnati Area was a segment of the Social Security Administration's Chicago Region.

1. Food and Drink Policy Developed

On September 19, 1977 Mrs. Elizabeth Armstrong, Respondent's Assistant District Manager, met with Mrs. Catherine Campbell, the Complainant's Chief Union Representative in the District Office, and requested the views of the Union regarding formulation of a written food and drink policy. Mrs. Armstrong explained that District Office management felt that a change was necessary. 2/

1/ Both the Complaint and Notice of Hearing on Complaint reflect typographical errors in the designation of the subsections of Section 19(a) allegedly violated. At the hearing the parties stipulated that Sections 19(a)(1) and (6) should have been specified.

2/ The record reflected that the District Office had no clear policy relating to employee consumption of food and drink at work stations during business hours, and that employees were allowed to use their own judgment regarding the subject. However, it appeared that employees were not expected to consume food or drink while meeting the public. Employees were keeping food at their desks and were allowed to drink liquids during working hours.

During this meeting, which lasted fifteen to twenty minutes, the discussion related to whether food and drink should be allowed in the District Office during the work day. Mrs. Campbell left the meeting with the understanding that she would obtain the views of bargaining unit members in the District Office, and then, as the Union's Representative, would present the Union position to Mrs. Armstrong. Mrs. Campbell met with concerned employees and discussed the subject, and also solicited the views of employees by memorandum. Thereafter, the Union adopted the position that there was no need for a formal food and drink policy. However, the Union was willing to concede that if management really wanted a written policy, then the Union would agree to such, but would be in favor of a liberal policy providing for the allowance of food until the public entered, and on overtime, and one providing for the consumption of liquids all day. (Tr. 68).

On September 28, 1977, Mrs. Campbell conveyed the Union position to Mrs. Armstrong. They discussed the views of the Union and those of management on this date. Mrs. Armstrong advised that management would consider the matter further before deciding whether a written policy would be necessary.

On October 14, 1977, Mrs. Armstrong met again with Mrs. Campbell and delivered to her a memorandum dated October 17, 1977, setting forth a formal food and drink policy. (Joint Exhibit 1). In discussing the memorandum on October 14th, Mrs. Armstrong agreed to change the policy to accord with a suggestion made by Mrs. Campbell. 3/ Mrs. Armstrong arranged for the memorandum to be retyped to reflect the change proposed by Mrs. Campbell. The retyped version was then shown to Mrs. Campbell and she agreed that the change reflected her suggestion. Mrs. Campbell understood that the memorandum would be issued as modified. The memorandum as corrected was distributed on October 17, 1977. (Joint Exhibit 2). At no time prior to issuance of the policy on October 17, 1977 did Mrs. Campbell interpose a request to negotiate the food and drink policy issue.

On October 30, 1977 Mrs. Campbell discussed the food and drink policy with Mr. Charles Smith, President of the Local, upon Mr. Smith's return from a vacation. They considered possible procedures to employ to stop implementation of the policy. Mrs. Campbell's testimony established that the Union was aware that employees were not happy with the policy formulated.

3/ As proposed the policy prohibited the consumption of beverages after 8:45 a.m. The change permitted such consumption until the District Office opened to the public in the morning.

2. Unit Rotation Effected

The record disclosed that claims representatives performing in the District Office were required to rotate their job assignments at regular intervals in order to broaden their professional capabilities. Article 15, Section 15.14 of the collective bargaining agreement governing the labor relations of the parties provides the following relative to the subject:

... The Employer will consult with the Union prior to making any changes in permanent workload assignments.

Technical employees assigned to a specialized unit will be rotated out of that program specialization every nine (9) months unless a longer period of time is agreed to by the individual employee, or unless the rotation is not feasible due to existing guidelines.

No interviewing employees with less than one (1) year experience in their position will be assigned to specialized program areas for more than four (4) months, whenever possible. (Joint Exhibit 8).

On November 8, 1977, Mrs. Campbell raised the question of an anticipated rotation with Mr. Maidlow, the District Manager, at a monthly consultation meeting. ^{4/} Mrs. Campbell requested management's plans in this regard, and Mr. Maidlow replied that the Union would be consulted prior to implementation of the rotation. Mrs. Campbell then requested and received permission to submit suggestions in writing concerning the rotation of claims representatives. Mr. Maidlow agreed to the procedure, and Mrs. Campbell contacted each affected employee, prepared a list of their preferences, and delivered the list to Mr. Maidlow on November 10, 1977. She also provided him with written suggestions as to how the rotation should be accomplished. ^{5/}

The list provided Mr. Maidlow was given to Mrs. Armstrong, his assistant, with instructions to discuss the list further with the Union. On November 11, 1977, Mrs. Armstrong met with Mrs. Campbell and reviewed the list, and explained that of the eleven proposed rotations, management did not agree with four. The reasoning related to each was discussed with Mrs. Campbell ^{6/}

On November 11th management explained in detail their differences regarding the preferences reflected on the list supplied by Mrs. Campbell. All other preferences were granted. Mrs. Campbell was also informed that the District Office would no longer have a "System One Unit" which employees could be assigned to under the rotation policy. ^{7/} The "System One Unit" was not discussed further at that time, and it was brought out that no employee had expressed a preference for the unit.

Management began to finalize plans for the rotation after the November 11, 1977 discussion. On November 18, 1977 those affected by the rotation plan were notified of the decision discussed in detail on November 11, 1977. Up

^{5/} The record is unclear as to the exact methodology used during prior rotations. However, it appeared that at least in some earlier rotations, management formulated complete rotation plans, gave these to the Union to permit prior discussion with affected employees, and thereafter bargained concerning the implementation of the rotation assignments. In other cases volunteers were first requested by management. The rotation in question here involved initial consideration of assignments proposed by the Union in the first instance.

^{6/} One employee was new on the job, and his rotation preference was considered inadvisable because the work selected was technically the most complex. A second employee was being transferred and could not be rotated. A third employee who had made a preference for reassignment was considered essential to his current job due to a backlog and had agreed to stay on despite his preference for another unit. A fourth employee's preference was considered unacceptable because of insufficient experience.

^{7/} The unit, consisting of two employees who also had responsibilities in another unit, was responsible for computer coding, correcting and editing. The work of the unit was distributed among employees in two other units.

to this date the Union had not interposed any request to negotiate formally concerning any aspect of the unit rotation, and management declined a request made by Mrs. Campbell on this date, for additional time to discuss rotation assignments with employees before announcement of the assignments.

The rotation of employees was not implemented until December 5, 1977. 8/

3. Formal Request to Negotiate Concerning Food and Drink Policy and Unit Rotation Issue; Subsequent Meetings

By letter dated November 21, 1977, addressed to Mr. Maidlow by Mrs. Campbell, the Union filed a formal request to enter into negotiations concerning the office food and drink policy and the unit rotation issue. (Joint Exhibit 3). The request was based on Section 11(a) of the Order and the collective bargaining agreement in effect between the parties. The question of formal negotiations was not raised prior to receipt of the November 21, 1977 letter by management.

By letter dated November 22, 1977, Mr. Maidlow advised Mrs. Campbell that management had consulted with the Union on both subjects, but that he and Mrs. Armstrong would be willing to meet with her and Mr. Smith again. At a meeting held on November 29, 1977, attended by the four, the two management representatives expressed a desire to "consult" concerning the two subjects and sought the Union's views. The position of the Union concerning unit rotation was specifically requested, and management inquired concerning the nature of any problems encountered with regard to the food and drink policy implemented. On the other hand, the Union representatives insisted upon formal negotiations designed to produce an agreement, and refused to discuss the specifics of their position on either issue.

The parties met subsequently on two other occasions after the November 29, 1977 meeting but were unable to agree on procedure. Management offered to "consult" under the terms of the collective agreement and the Union refused insisting on what they perceived as a requirement to

"negotiate." (Joint Exhibits 5 and 6). By letter dated December 6, 1977, the Respondent was charged with violations of Sections 19(a)(1) and 19(a)(6) of the Order. 9/

4. Contentions of the Parties

As noted the Complaint alleges that Mr. Maidlow unilaterally implemented a change in District Office food and drink policy on October 17, 1977 without first entering into negotiations with Complainant, and further that Mr. Maidlow effected a rotation of employee work assignments without first entering into impact bargaining concerning the change in work assignments. In this regard counsel argues that the Union was not provided sufficient advance notice of the changes to afford a reasonable opportunity to consider and analyze, and that management did not enter into good faith bargaining on either of these issues.

The Respondent argues in defense that Mr. Maidlow, as Manager of the District Office, owed no obligation to bargain with the Union; that under the terms of the collective bargaining agreement, and in accordance with the bargaining relationship established between the parties, Respondent was only obligated to bargain with the Area Director; and further that the Complaint must be dismissed because it incorrectly identifies Mr. Maidlow as the individual who failed to enter into negotiations with the Union.

The Respondent also argues that the collective bargaining agreement only required management at the District Office level to "consult" with the Union on the two issues involved herein, and that there could have been no obligation on Mr. Maidlow's part to "negotiate" with the Union; that the Assistant Secretary should not consider this unfair labor practice complaint because it involves essentially differing interpretations of the collective bargaining agreement as distinguished from alleged actions which would constitute clear unilateral breaches of the agreement; that if there was in fact an obligation to bargain concerning the issues, such obligation was met by management; and lastly that the formulation of a formal food and drink policy was not such a change in personnel practice as to give rise to the obligation to bargain, but was merely a reaffirmation of an existing practice.

9/ After the filing of the charge letter and Complaint, the Respondent endeavored to invoke the grievance procedure in the collective bargaining agreement in an effort to resolve what it perceived as an issue involving interpretation and application of the provisions of the collective bargaining agreement. (Respondent's Exhibit 4, Complainant's Exhibit 1, and Respondent Exhibits 3 and 5).

Conclusions of Law

The contention that the Respondent is not obligated to bargain with the Union herein poses a threshold issue which should be addressed at the outset. In effect, Respondent is contending that the Union has no standing to require District Office management to negotiate over local matters. However, authorities cited by Respondent to support this argument are inapposite. The tenor of the collective bargaining agreement indicates clearly that the Union was granted the right to deal with District Office management concerning matters affecting working conditions appropriate for discussion at the District Office level. The following elements reflected in the collective bargaining agreement clearly indicate the rightness of this conclusion:

1. The Preamble of the agreement indicates that the term "Employer" is a term which embraces the Cincinnati Downtown District Office as a separate entity, and specifically provides "means for negotiations, consultation, discussions and adjustment of matters of mutual interest at the (District Office). ..." (Joint Exhibit 8 at 2).

2. The description of the bargaining unit is not tied exclusively to the Cincinnati Area of the Social Security Administration, but instead identifies separate entities as units comprising the bargaining unit, including the Cincinnati Downtown District Office. (Joint Exhibit 8 at 3).

3. The term "Employer" refers separately to the Department of Health, Education and Welfare, the Social Security Administration, the Cincinnati Downtown District Office, the Cincinnati North District Office, and branch offices relating to the two mentioned District Offices. (Joint Exhibit 8 at 5).

4. The term "Management" is defined in very general terms as "those employees of SSA with supervisory responsibility or who by virtue of their position make or effectively influence the making of management decisions significantly affecting the policies, programs, or personnel of the Cincinnati Metropolitan District or Branch Offices." (Joint Exhibit 8 at 5).

5. Throughout the collective bargaining agreement the terms "Employer" and "Management" are used in a manner indicative of an intent to refer separately to each Cincinnati Area District Office and each Branch Office therein, and obligations are imposed upon, or granted to each, as being entities embraced within the definition of these two terms.

6. The agreement contemplates negotiations and consultations with the Employer regarding conditions of employment which are within the discretion of the Employer. ..." (Joint Exhibit 8 at 8, emphasis added).^{10/}

The segments of the agreement cited are merely illustrative of a clear intent to impose a District Office bargaining responsibility. It should be noted also that Respondent alone dealt with the Union in connection with the issues involved here, that notification of changes made emanated from the District level of management, and further that labor-management relations between the parties to the agreement had been conducted at the District Office level for the most part. It must therefore be concluded that the Respondent was appropriately charged in this case.

^{10/} The phrase "within the discretion of the Employer" would necessarily include management decisions at the District Office level as well as other levels contemplated within the meaning of the term "Employer."

Respondent argues that the collective bargaining agreement imposes the obligation to negotiate only in situations wherein amendment of the collective bargaining agreement is sought by the union. It is argued further that proposed management changes in traditional practices, such as the food and drink policy or permanent workload assignments, such as unit rotations, create an obligation to consult with the Union; but do not impose the obligation to negotiate. (Joint Exhibit 8, Article 5, Section 5.3, and Article 15, Section 15.14).

In considering this question it must be observed that the January 1975 Report and Recommendations of the Federal Labor Relations Council on the Amendment of Executive Order 11491 as Amended equates the obligation to "consult" with the obligation to "negotiate." At pages 41-42 of the Report, the Council states:

Finally, we believe that the confusion that has developed over the apparent interchangeable use of the terms "consult," "meet and confer," and "negotiate" with respect to relationships between agencies and labor organizations in the Order should be eliminated. The parties to exclusive recognition have an obligation to "negotiate" rather than to "consult" on negotiable issues unless they mutually have agreed to limit this obligation in any way. In the Federal labor management relations program, "consultation" is required only as it pertains to the duty owed by agencies to labor organizations which have been accorded national consultation rights under Section 9 of the Order. ... (Emphasis added).

At an earlier point on page 41 of the Report the following is reflected about the obligation to negotiate:

However, the question is raised as to whether the Order requires, in addition, that a party must meet its obligation to negotiate prior to making changes in established personnel policies and practices and matters affecting working conditions during the term of an agreement.

The Assistant Secretary, when faced with this issue in a case concluded that the Order does require adequate notice and an opportunity to negotiate prior to changing established personnel policies and practices and matters affecting working conditions during the term of an existing agreement unless the issues thus raised are controlled by current contractual commitments, or a clear and unmistakable waiver is present. We believe that the Assistant Secretary's conclusion on this matter is correct and, therefore, no change in the Order is warranted in this regard. (Emphasis added).

A careful reading of the collective bargaining agreement in the light of the quoted statements from the Federal Labor Relations Council Report leads to the conclusion that the agreement does not limit negotiations to topics involved in the amendment process. At this point reference is again made to the Preamble of the collective bargaining agreement which indicates that the agreement provides "means for negotiations, consultation, discussions and adjustment of matters of mutual interest. ..." (Joint Exhibit 8 at 2, emphasis added).

Article 2 of the agreement defines the term "consultation" as merely an initial problem solving step contemplated by the parties. The definition provides:

b. Consultation: Consultation is communication and exchange of views. It shall occur as the need arises and before formulation and implementation of any policy or act affecting personnel policies and practices and other matters affecting working conditions. It shall be conducted in an atmosphere that will foster mutual respect. It is considered a part of the initial step used by either party to resolve a problem concerning the working environment. (Emphasis added).

Article 2 of the agreement also describes the terms "impasse" and "negotiation" in broad general terms indicative of an absence of intent to constrict the negotiation process to a limited subject area involving the amendment of the collective bargaining agreement. These definitions are as follows:

(d) Impasse: The inability of Employer and Union representatives to arrive at a mutually agreeable decision concerning negotiable matters through the negotiation process. (Emphasis added).

(e) Negotiation: Bargaining by representatives of the Employer and the Union on appropriate issues relating to terms of employment, working conditions which affect morale, and personnel policies and practices with a view of arriving at a formal written agreement.

A further indication of the intent to relate the duty to negotiate to the Order rather than a restricted contractual concept is provided in Article 5, Section 5.1 of the agreement. Section 5.1 provides:

5.1 Negotiation: Matters appropriate for negotiation and consultation between the parties are personnel policies and practices and other matters relating to the conditions of employment of employees in the unit that are within the Employer's jurisdiction. ... (Emphasis added).

District and branch managers are required to consult monthly with the Union on matters of appropriate concern to their respective levels. (Joint Exhibit 8, Article 5, Section 5.2(b)). In the light of the definition of the term "consultation," it is logical to conclude that the use of the word "consult" in the collective bargaining agreement was designed to require the parties to begin their relationship with the "initial step" of "communication and exchange of views," rather than formal negotiations. In fact, the agreement contemplates resolution of problems in the informal atmosphere suggested by the term "consultation." Resort to more formal negotiation procedures is contemplated only after this "initial step" is taken and only after it is determined that further negotiations are otherwise appropriate. A careful reading of the cited provisions of the collective bargaining agreement leaves a clear impression that use of the term "consult" in the agreement was not designed to limit rights granted to the Union under the Order. 11/ As noted, the Federal Relations Council has stated that such a restriction may occur only in cases where issues raised are "controlled by current contractual commitments, or a clear and unmistakable waiver is present." No evidence of either was presented here. The terms "consult" or "consultation" found in the agreement may not, in the light of authority mentioned, be construed as a limitation upon the Respondent's obligation to negotiate. NASA, Kennedy Space Center, Kennedy Space Center, Florida, A/SLMR 223.

It must be noted at this point that there is no merit to Respondent's contention that the matters presented herein involve only essentially differing interpretations of the collective bargaining agreement. The gravamen of the complaint does not involve merely a matter of contract interpretation. On the contrary, the allegations of the complaint raise issues involving rights accorded by the Order, and not rights established by the terms of the collective bargaining agreement. Since the complaint is grounded on allegations that rights established by the Order were denied to the Complainant, the issues raised were properly made the subject of an unfair labor practice charge. Department of the Treasury Internal Revenue Service, Fresno Service Center, A/SLMR No. 983; Norfolk Navy Shipyard, A/SLMR No. 708.

Preliminarily it is observed that there is no issue between the parties concerning the negotiability of the food and drink policy issue under the provisions of Section 11(a) of the Order. Also, it is quite clear that the implementation of a food and drink policy by memorandum was truly a change in an existing personnel practice and not just a reaffirmation of an existing practice. This conclusion is evidenced by the fact that up to the time of issuance of the policy, employees were, in large measure, permitted to use their own judgment in such matters, were previously allowed to keep food at their desks, and were not restricted if not dealing with the public. In fact, Mrs. Armstrong, the Assistant District Manager, admitted that a strict food and drink policy had fallen into disuse as a result of the use of overtime. 12/

However, despite all of the foregoing, the record discloses that the Union was provided sufficient notification of a proposed change in the food and drink policy to allow the Union opportunity to negotiate, and further that management did in fact negotiate with the Union concerning the change. The Union first heard of the proposed change on September 19, 1977, when the views of the Union were solicited. These views were supplied to management and discussed with management on September 28, 1977. On October 14, 1977, management met with the Union and made available management's version of the proposed change. A modification was suggested by the Union on this date and management agreed. The parties agreed to the proposed food and drink policy on October 14, 1977, and on October 17, 1977, it was implemented. The pattern of dealings outlined reflects that on October 14, 1977, the Union made no request for further negotiation, and that the parties after unlimited discussion, reached agreement concerning the proposed change. A review of the evidence relating to the conduct of the parties convinces that whatever Respondent may have said concerning the negotiability of the proposed food and drink policy, and however, the parties characterized their own conduct, what actually took place did in fact satisfy Respondent's obligation to negotiate. NASA, Kennedy Space Center, Kennedy Space Center, Florida, supra United States Department of the Treasury, Internal Revenue Service, Chicago District, A/SLMR No. 711, petition for review denied, FLRC No. 76-126 (February 15, 1977), Report No. 122; Office of Economic Opportunity, Region V, Chicago, Illinois, A/SLMR No. 251, Decision of Administrative Law Judge Goldberg at p.10).

12/ Evidence introduced did establish a limited prior restriction involving employees leaving the work area after 8:00 a.m. for the purpose of obtaining coffee and then returning to the work area with coffee.

Turning to the unit rotation effectuated by Respondent, it is noted that this issue involves only the questions of whether the Union was provided with sufficient advance notice of the proposed unit rotation, and whether the Union was provided sufficient opportunity to enter into impact bargaining on the proposed change.

The record reflects that Mrs. Campbell invited Mr. Maidlow's attention to the need for changes in unit assignments on November 8, 1977. On November 10, 1977 proposed assignments were submitted to management by the Union. ^{13/} In addition the Union made other suggestions concerning the proposed rotation. This procedure, requested by the Union, varied somewhat from prior practice in that Respondent allowed the union to propose a list of preferred rotation assignments in the first instance instead of waiting for the Respondent to develop a list of proposed assignments. ^{14/} In addition, the list of Union preferred assignments was discussed on November 11, 1977 by Mrs. Campbell and Mrs. Armstrong. At this meeting the position of management concerning the Union's list and method of implementing the unit rotation was made known to Mrs. Campbell. Finalization of the unit rotation commenced after the November 11th meeting, and on November 18, 1977, the unit rotation assignments discussed with the Union on November 11, 1977, were finalized. At no time during the November 11-17, 1977 period did the Union request further consideration of the issue. At the November 11, 1977 meeting, and thereafter through November 17, 1977, the Union interposed no objection to the position articulated by management regarding the means of implementing the unit rotation, and management provided unlimited discussion, and/or opportunity for discussion, of any differences which might have existed with respect to the position of management regarding the unit rotation.

Before concluding discussion of this point it must be observed that the unit rotation was not actually implemented until December 5, 1977, and that the Union was provided further opportunities to negotiate concerning the impact of unit rotation after the November 17, 1977 meeting, and before the December 5th implementation. Although the position of the Union was solicited at these later points, and although opportunity for discussion of differences was presented, the Union did not take advantage of either.

Under the particular circumstances presented it must be concluded that the Respondent fulfilled its obligation to bargain on the impact and implementation of its decision regarding the unit rotation before announcement of the decision on November 18, 1977, and before the Complainant requested bargaining on the impact and implementation of the decision. Social Security Administration Branch Office, Angleton, Texas, A/SLMR No. 982. Here again, reference must be made to Respondent's actual conduct with respect to the unit rotation effectuated, and not to the perceptions of the parties with respect to such conduct. What actually did take place between the parties in this regard satisfied the Respondent's obligation to negotiate concerning the impact of the unit rotation on the bargaining unit. SUMMARY OF DECISION AND ORDER OF THE ASSISTANT SECRETARY

At the hearing the Complainant interposed the argument that Respondent's implementation of the unit rotation involved the abolition of the "System One Unit" to which bargaining unit employees had previously been assigned in prior rotations, and that the Union did not become aware of this change until the November 18, 1977 meeting between Mrs. Campbell and Mrs. Armstrong. The record clearly established that this change was brought to the attention of the Union on November 11, 1977 by Mrs. Armstrong during her meeting with Mrs. Campbell. Moreover, the Union did not seek to rotate any employees into the unit abolished, and did not request negotiations concerning this issue although provided with opportunity to do so. More importantly, the Complaint herein challenges the unit rotation on the ground that management did not enter into impact bargaining to determine the best method by which unit rotation could be realized, and that management chose not to request volunteers for unit rotation. Neither the pre-Complaint charge nor the Complaint refer to the abolition of the "System One Unit" in specific terms. However, in light of the conclusion that Respondent fulfilled its obligation to bargain concerning this issue, it is unnecessary to decide whether consideration of the issue is barred by the provisions of 29 CFR § 203.3(a)(3).

RECOMMENDATION

Having found that Respondents have not engaged in conduct prohibited by Sections 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order, it is hereby recommended that the Complaint herein be dismissed in its entirety.

This case involved an unfair labor practice complaint filed by the National Treasury Employees Union and NTEU Chapter 099 (Complainants) alleging that the Respondents had violated Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order based on the conduct of the Acting Chief, Receipt and Control Branch, Brookhaven Service Center, in making a statement to an employee grievant and her representatives during a grievance meeting that the Complainants would not be given certain information with regard to the employee's qualifications for a job for which she had applied unless the grievance was dropped.

The Administrative Law Judge found that the Acting Branch Chief did not make the statements attributed to him in the complaint and recommended that the complaint be dismissed in its entirety. The Assistant Secretary adopted the Administrative Law Judge's findings, conclusions and recommendations and ordered that the complaint be dismissed in its entirety.

DECISION AND ORDER

On August 11, 1978, Administrative Law Judge Rhea M. Burrow issued his Recommended Decision and Order in the above-entitled proceeding, finding that the Respondents had not engaged in the unfair labor practices alleged in the complaint and recommending that the complaint be dismissed in its entirety. Thereafter, the Complainants filed exceptions and a supporting brief with respect to the Administrative Law Judge's Recommended Decision and Order, and the Respondents filed an answering brief with respect to the Complainants' exceptions.

The Assistant Secretary has reviewed the rulings of the Administrative Law Judge made at the hearing and finds that no prejudicial error was committed. The rulings are hereby affirmed. Upon consideration of the Administrative Law Judge's Recommended Decision and Order and the entire record in the subject case, including the Complainants' exceptions and supporting brief and Respondents' answering brief, I hereby adopt the Administrative Law Judge's findings, 1/ conclusions 2/ and recommendations.

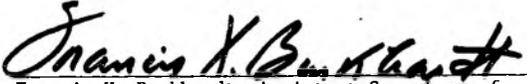

1/ The Complainants excepted to certain credibility findings made by the Administrative Law Judge. In Navy Exchange, U.S. Naval Air Station, Quonset Point, Rhode Island, 2 A/SLMR 377, A/SLMR No. 180 (1972), the Assistant Secretary held that as a matter of policy he would not overrule an Administrative Law Judge's resolution with respect to credibility unless the preponderance of all the relevant evidence established that such resolution clearly was incorrect. Based on a review of the record herein, I find no basis for reversing the Administrative Law Judge's credibility findings.

2/ During the hearing, the Complainants made a motion requesting official time for the appearance of Ken Hart, President of Complainant NTEU Chapter 099, as an "aid" to the Complainants' counsel at the hearing.

2/ The Administrative Law Judge granted the motion. However, on page 9 of his Recommended Decision and Order, upon the Respondents' motion for reconsideration, the Administrative Law Judge rescinded his ruling made at the hearing, predicating his action upon the Assistant Secretary's decisions in Social Security Administration, Bureau of Hearings and Appeals, A/SLMR No. 979 (1978), and Department of Health, Education and Welfare, Social Security Administration, Quality Assurance Field Staff, Northeastern Program Service Center, Flushing, New York, A/SLMR No. 1036 (1978), in which it was indicated that agencies are not obligated to make available on official time employees who act solely as union representatives. RECOMMENDED DECISION AND ORDER

Statement of the Case

This is an Unfair Labor Practice proceeding in which a formal hearing of record was held on May 18, 1978, in Holtsville, New York pursuant to Executive Order 11491, as amended, (hereinafter referred to as the Order).

In the complaint dated October 3, 1977, the Complainant alleged violations of Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order.

1. National Treasury Employees Union hereinafter referred to as NTEU appeared herein as representative of its local NTEU Chapter 099 which holds and held exclusive jurisdiction at all times material herein exclusive representative status of certain employee type units at the Department of Treasury, Internal Revenue Office located at Brookhaven Service Center, Holtsville, New York. Donna Belmonti is and was a member of a unit represented by NTEU Chapter 099.

2. A grievance was filed by Donna Belmonti, an employee key punch operator on February 28, 1977 alleging that she had not been given proper consideration for experience points due her by reason of her employment with the IRS Brookhaven Service Center. She was seeking a promotion pursuant to an announcement that there was a vacancy for the position of Senior Lead Clerk. The grievance was processed through her supervisor to Section Chief Timothy Costello who denied it at the second step on March 10, 1977. It was noted by Costello in a memorandum to Lenore Levinson, NTEU representative, on March 10, 1977 that Donna Belmonti had made the best qualified list; that pertinency of experience was given by the Personnel Department; and, that all regulations regarding certification had been followed.

^{1/} In the May 19, 1977 charge letter, Complainant alleged that Mr. Harvey stated "that he would investigate the matter further only if the grievance was dropped."

3. The denial of the grievance was appealed to the third step pursuant to Article 33, section 6 of the negotiated agreement. The Acting Chief of Receipt and Control Branch, King Harvey was the official responsible for handling the grievance at the third step.

4. There were two meetings held at the third step of the grievance between King Harvey representing management and Donna Belmonti and her designated representative, Judy Oslager and the union steward, Lenore Levinson. The same aforesaid persons were present at each meeting. At each meeting King Harvey and Judy Oslager carried on the conversation with Belmonti and Levinson making few, if any, remarks.

(a) The first meeting was held on the morning of March 29, 1977 and the particular information indicated by Oslager that she desired was why Donna Belmonti had not received the maximum of 25 points that could be assigned on the basis of her experience and length of service. King Harvey responded that he did not have the information and did not see where his branch was involved in relation to the multi center agreement since he had no jurisdiction over giving points. In any event, he indicated he would get the information desired from Personnel and get back to them.

(b) After checking with Personnel on the matter a second meeting with the same persons was held on April 19, 1977. It was noted that Donna Belmonti and several of the other applicants had been assigned 20 points for experience. Harvey explained the basis as to how the points were assigned by Personnel. 2/ Harvey advised the union representatives and Belmonti that based on the information received he did not feel the Branch was in violation of the negotiated agreement and therefore, his response

2/ In short, five points were assigned for every six months an employee applicant worked in a specific unit doing a specific job that related to the Vacancy. According to testimony there were at least three other employee applicants in the same situation as Donna Belmonti and a change in scores would have inured to all and caused no (continued on next page) in writing to the grievance at the third step would be that it is denied. A written denial was issued the same day.

(c) Thereafter during the course of the second meeting, Oslager attempted to persuade Harvey to waive the grievance to Personnel for decision at the third step but he declined to do so. He was then alleged to have further stated that he would investigate the matter further and supply the information only if the grievance was dropped. 3/

(d) The grievance was thereafter denied at the fourth step by one other than King Harvey and it was not appealed to the fifth step or otherwise arbitrated.

(e) The Complainant, NTEU Chapter 099, had previously been furnished the evaluative material and information it was seeking from Harvey before the second meeting on April 19, 1977.

(f) (1) I find that King Harvey had already advised Judy Oslager, Donna Belmonti and Lenore Levinson the disposition of Belmonti's grievance before the remarks attributed to him in the difference in evaluation results or selection of another person.

3/ On cross-examination Union steward Lenore Levinson testified:

"Q. When was it that Mrs. Harvey first made the statement that he would provide the information only if the Union dropped the grievance?

"A. He did it twice. I would say it was towards the middle of it and towards the end...

"Q. Mr. Harvey had already gotten some information for you from Personnel, right?

"A. He had indicated that if we weren't prepared to drop the grievance he was going to deny it because he did not feel his branch was in violation."

complaint are alleged to have been made. Thereafter, Harvey was under no obligation to investigate the matter further irrespective of whether Belmonti dropped her grievance.

(2) All business at the March 29 and April 19, 1977 meetings was transacted by Harvey with Union representative Oslager, in the presence of Belmonti and Union Steward Levinson. Belmonti testified that she did not say anything at the April 19, 1977 meeting nor was there any conversation directed to her. All matters discussed were between Harvey and Judy Oslager; there was no attempt by Harvey to encourage the grievant to bypass the union. The remarks were made in the context of resolving grievances at an early stage and were not disparaging to the Complainants.

(3) I find that the April 19, 1977 remarks attributed to Harvey in the complaint failed to depict the actual remarks and circumstances under which they were made and were taken out of context to the situation as it actually existed.

(g) Based on a credibility evaluation, I find the testimony of King Harvey to be that most accurate and worthy of belief in the matter. In this connection, the evidence clearly establishes, even by Complainant, that Harvey had stated early in the April 19, 1977 meeting that the Belmonti grievance was denied since his branch was not involved in assigning points for experience. Any further investigation by Harvey thereafter would have been personal and voluntary on his part irrespective of whether the grievance was dropped. He was under no obligation under the negotiated contract or the Order to take further action in the matter after denying the grievance at the third step and it is not disputed that he took no further action. 4/

4/ The time that the alleged remarks were made after denial of grievance is supported by Union Steward Levinson, the circumstances as to Harvey's action at and following the March 29, 1977 meeting to investigate why Belmonti was not assigned 25 points and to report his findings at a later meeting is undisputed; likewise, the evidence establishes Harvey denied the grievance at the third step before any remarks attributed to him in the complaint were made.

Discussion and Conclusions

The Complainants charge that the Respondent violated Section 19(a) (1) and (6) of the Order by its action in failing to provide the representative of the grievant information as to the number of points to which she was entitled for a Senior Lead Clerk Vacancy that had been announced only if the grievance was dropped.

Section 19(a) (1) and (6) of Executive Order 11491 provides that: "Agency management shall not - (1) interfere with, restrain, or coerce, an employee in the exercise of rights assured by this Order; or, ... (6) refuse to consult, confer, or negotiate with a labor organization as required by this Order."

There is no dispute that there was a meeting held on March 29, 1977 between Harvey and Union representative Oslager with grievant Belmonti and Union Steward Levinson also present. At that meeting Harvey explained that he did not see why his branch was involved since it did not assign points for experience to applicants seeking promotion to fill vacant jobs. Nevertheless, Harvey agreed to contact personnel and ascertain why Belmonti had been assigned 20 instead of 25 points on the basis of her experience and length of service. Harvey contacted personnel, secured the information and scheduled a second meeting.

The second meeting was held on April 19, 1977. Harvey reported that a number of the qualified applicants including Belmonti had enough years of service to qualify for the 25 points maximum but they had not been in a specific unit doing a specific job that would warrant credit for all periods. Even if credit were given, it would have to be allowed for all and would not alter or change the selection process. He again stated early in the meeting that his branch was in no way involved in assigning points for experience and Belmonti's grievance at the third step was denied.

Complainant Oslager was dissatisfied with Harvey's explanation and attempted to have him waive the grievance to Personnel. Harvey declined to do so. He was then requested to secure additional information from personnel and the remarks depicted in the complaint that he would "investigate the matter further and supply requested information only if the grievance was dropped," were attributed to him.

From the record it is clear that:

(1) Complainants ignored and failed to voluntarily reveal the circumstances relating to the first meeting between Harvey and Oslager, Belmonti and Levinson on March 29, 1977;

(2) that at the second meeting on April 19, 1977 Harvey met with Oslager, Belmonti, and Levinson as earlier promised and he explained the basis personnel utilized to assign points for experience and length of service; Harvey also denied Belmonti's third step grievance;

(3) Harvey fulfilled his voluntary undertaking to secure and report information regarding points assigned for length of service and experience applicable to Belmonti and others and denied Belmonti's third step grievance at the beginning of the April 19, 1977 meeting. He was not under any contractual or Executive Order obligation to secure and report on the matter but did complete his voluntary undertaking. Thereafter during the meeting, Complainants sought reconsideration and waiver to personnel, and, when he refused, alleged that he stated he would investigate the matter further and supply requested information only if the grievance was dropped.

Counsel for Complainants argue that Harvey's statement at the April 19, 1977 meeting is conduct that urges employees to by-pass the union and negotiated grievance procedures, and as such interferes with and restrains employees from exercising rights guaranteed by the Order.

I disagree. The facts in this case do not provide a reliable basis for such an assertion. In the first place, Harvey was under no obligation either before or after denying the third step grievance to investigate and provide the Union information available to them from personnel. The grievance had been appealed to his branch which had no involvement in assigning points for experience and his undertaking to secure for the union desired information was voluntary on his part. Second, Harvey's discourse at both the March 29 and April 19, 1977 meetings was with union representative Oslager in the presence of grievant Belmonti and Union Steward Levinson. Even Belmonti testified that she took no part in the conversations and the evidence does not directly or inferentially establish that Harvey urged Belmonti or any other employee to bypass the union and the negotiated grievance procedure. Third, Harvey processed the grievance to the fourth step where it was subsequently denied without an appeal. The record does not establish that management in any way refused to consult, confer, or negotiate with the union. Fourth, Complainant's position in this matter was intransigent and it refused to exchange information or otherwise engage in good faith efforts to informally resolve any misunderstandings. For example, Complainants were securing from personnel the evaluative analysis and background information that it was asking Harvey to procure and did not advise him that they had this information at the time of the April 19, 1977 meeting. Further, when the grievance was denied Complainants were reluctant to accept the decision. They asked him to reconsider or waive the grievance to Personnel. Harvey declined. He was still unaware that the union had gotten the information it had requested him to obtain on the premise it would take their representative a long time to procure. The NTEU Chapter 099 tactics were not entirely above board from a cooperative labor relations viewpoint. But disregarding tactics and assuming the remarks attributed to Harvey in the complaint to be true, which I do not, when considered in relation to the time and circumstances, under which they were made, neither the grievant or any employee was urged to bypass the union nor was the union disparaged, or any employee interfered with, restrained,, or prevented from exercising rights guaranteed by the Order.

In summary, it is concluded that:

(a) Harvey did not make the statements attributed to him in the complaint particularly in the context depicted.

(b) The record does not establish that King Harvey, either by his conduct or statements to bargaining union members interfered with, restrained, or coerced Donna Belmonti or any bargaining unit employees in the exercise of their rights assured by the Order.

(c) The record does not establish that the Respondents refused to consult, confer or negotiate with the Complainant labor organizations as required by the Order.

(d) The Complainants have not sustained their burden or proving by a preponderance of the evidence that the Respondents violated Section 19(a) (1) and (6) of the Order.

There were procedural motions by Respondent in the answer to complaint which were renewed at the May 18, 1978 hearing to dismiss the case against Complainant NTEU and Respondent Agency and Internal Revenue Service as separate party entities. The motion had not been referred to the Administrative Law Judge by the Regional Administrator. There was no proof offered in support of the motions. There does not appear to be a basis in the Order to draw artificial distinctions between levels of management to relieve them of responsibility for their acts. 5/ Under the circumstances I recommend denial of the above procedural motions to dismiss.

At the hearing on May 18, 1978, I granted Union Counsel's request that NTEU Chapter 099 President Ken Hart be permitted to serve as his advisor with authorized payment for attendance and usual emoluments. Based on Respondent's motion to reconsider my action of authorization predicated on the Assistant Secretary's decisions in Social Security Administration, Bureau of Hearings and Appeals, A/SLMR No. 979 (1978) adopting the Administrative Law Judges determination and Department of Health, Education and Welfare, A/SLMR No. 1036 (1978), holding that "...it has been established that agencies are not obligated to make available an official time employees who act solely as union representatives...", I am reconsidering the motion. Since Hart appeared solely as union representative and not as a witness, he is not shown to be entitled to pay for attendance and emoluments requested. Therefore, I hereby rescind my action directing payment for attending the hearing in the matter with emoluments.

Recommendation

It is my recommendation based on the foregoing findings and conclusions that the complaint herein be dismissed in its entirety.

 PURSUANT TO SECTION 6 OF EXECUTIVE ORDER 11491, AS AMENDED

 BUREAU OF INDIAN AFFAIRS, PHOENIX AREA OFFICE,

 A/SLMR No. 1126

This case involved an unfair labor practice complaint filed by the National Federation of Federal Employees, Local 520 (NFFE) alleging that the Respondent violated Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order by terminating the practice of transporting employees by government-owned vehicles between their homes and their place of work without affording the NFFE the opportunity to negotiate with regard to the decision itself, or its impact and implementation.

The Administrative Law Judge recommended that the complaint be dismissed in its entirety as it was barred by Section 19(d) of the Order from consideration. In addition, he concluded that he would have found a violation of Section 19(a)(1) and (6) based on the Respondent's failure to bargain regarding the impact and implementation of the termination of van transportation had not further proceedings been barred by Section 19(d) of the Order. He also concluded that, under the circumstances, the grievance was still viable under the negotiated grievance procedure.

The Assistant Secretary adopted the Administrative Law Judge's findings, conclusions, and recommendation that dismissal of the instant complaint was warranted based on Section 19(d) of the Order. In reaching his conclusion, he found it unnecessary to pass upon the Administrative Law Judge's conclusion with respect to the merits of the instant complaint or his conclusion regarding the viability of the grievance. Accordingly, the Assistant Secretary ordered that the complaint be dismissed in its entirety.

DECISION AND ORDER

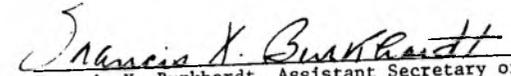

On June 30, 1978, Administrative Law Judge Steven E. Halpern issued his Recommended Decision and Order in the above-entitled proceeding, finding that the Respondent had not engaged in the unfair labor practices alleged in the complaint and recommending that the complaint be dismissed in its entirety. Thereafter, the Complainant filed exceptions and a supporting brief with respect to the Administrative Law Judge's Recommended Decision and Order.

The Assistant Secretary has reviewed the rulings of the Administrative Law Judge made at the hearing and finds that no prejudicial error was committed. The rulings are hereby affirmed. Upon consideration of the Administrative Law Judge's Recommended Decision and Order and the entire record in the subject case, including the exceptions and supporting brief filed by the Complainant, I hereby adopt the Administrative Law Judge's findings, conclusions and recommendation that further proceedings on the instant complaint are unwarranted. Thus, the evidence establishes that the issues raised by the instant complaint were previously raised and considered at several steps of the parties' negotiated grievance procedure. Under these circumstances, I agree with the Administrative Law Judge's conclusion that Section 19(d) of the Order precludes consideration of the issues involved under the unfair labor practice procedures of the Executive Order. 1/

1/ Compare Federal Aviation Administration, Muskegon Air Traffic Control Tower, 5 A/SLMR 457, A/SLMR No. 534 (1975), where, because the merits of an untimely filed grievance were not considered under a negotiated grievance procedure, it was held that Section 19(d) did not preclude consideration of the issues involved under the unfair labor practice procedures of the Executive Order. In view of the above disposition, I find it unnecessary to pass on either the Administrative Law Judge's conclusion with respect to the merits of the instant complaint or his conclusion regarding the viability of the grievance.

IT IS HEREBY ORDERED that the complaint in Case No. 72-7236(CA) be, and it hereby is, dismissed.

RECOMMENDED DECISION AND ORDER

Statement of the Case

This proceeding under Executive Order 11491, as amended was initiated by complaint filed November 7, 1977, with an amended complaint having been filed April 4, 1978. Notice of Hearing was initially issued on April 17, 1978, by the Regional Administrator, United States Department of Labor, Labor-Management Services Administration, San Francisco, Region; pursuant to a corrected notice the hearing was held at Phoenix, Arizona, on May 31, 1978. Thereafter, the parties filed briefs, upon the receipt of the last of which the record was duly closed on June 20, 1978.

In substance, Respondent is charged with having violated section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Executive Order in that it brought about a change in working conditions by causing to be terminated the practice of transporting employees, by government owned vehicles, between their homes and their place of work, without affording Complainant the opportunity to negotiate with regard to the decision itself, or its implementation and the impact thereof on adversely affected employees.

The parties have been afforded full opportunity to be heard, to adduce evidence, to examine and cross-examine witnesses, to make oral argument and to file briefs. Based upon the evidence of record, having observed the witnesses and assessed their credibility and having considered the arguments of the parties, I make the within findings, conclusions and recommendation.

Findings of Fact

1. Complainant, National Federation of Federal Employees, Local 520, has and at all times material hereto had exclusive recognition as representative of the bargaining unit at the Bureau of Indian Affairs, Papago Agency, Sells, Arizona, of which the employees hereinbelow referred to were members.
2. The Papago Agency is, in fact, an activity in the context of this proceeding and will be referred to herein simply as Papago.
3. Papago is subject to the direct supervision and control of Respondent Phoenix Area Office.
4. At all times material hereto there was in effect between Complainant Union and Papago as "employer" a collective bargaining agreement (Exhibit C-4) which provides in part as follows:

The parties to this agreement recognize and affirm that in the administration of all matters covered by the agreement, management officials and employees are governed by existing or future laws. (Article 3, section 1)

The employer agrees to consult with the union on proposed changes (in personnel policies and practices, or other matters affecting the general working conditions of employees in the units) at least ten (10) work days prior to the proposed effective date. The union will furnish any proposals or views to the employer not less than six (6) work days after notification. (Article 4, section 2)

When the employer believes that a matter is non-negotiable, it will consult with the union. The employer will advise the union, in writing, regarding the non-negotiability of any matter. The union has the right to proceed to the head of the agency and the Federal Labor Relations Council in accordance with section 11(c) of Executive Order 11491, as amended and the regulations of the Council. (Article 6, section 2)

Those privileges of employees which by custom, known past practice and tradition have become an integral part of their working conditions, shall not be abridged as a result of not being enumerated in this agreement. The above privileges must be legal, subject to authorization, and known and informally accepted by the employer. (Emphasis supplied) (Article 6, section 4)

5. On February 25, 1977, the Secretary of the Interior issued a memorandum (Exhibit R-1), which amounted to a department-wide directive to "eliminate all cases in which an employee is driven between his home and work in a government motor vehicle".

6. On March 4, 1977, the Acting Commissioner of Indian Affairs instructed all area directors that "motor vehicle assignments and usage at all levels should be reviewed and brought into compliance with the Secretary's clear objectives".

7. By memorandum of March 15, 1977, the Director of Respondent Phoenix Area Office advised the Superintendent of Papago to conduct a review of the utilization of government vehicles at Papago and to file a report thereon. Attention was directed to 43 IAM 2.9.2 - the Indian Affairs Manual Governing "Use and Restrictions Placed on Operation of Motor Vehicles" which provides inter alia that "pursuant to provisions of law, government-owned motor-propelled vehicles shall be used for official purposes only. 'Official purposes' shall not include the transportation of officers and employees between their domiciles and places of employment"

8. The "provisions of law" referred to in 43 IAM 2.9.2 are set forth in the Federal Statutes at 31 U.S.C. § 638a in pertinent part as follows:

(c) Unless otherwise specifically provided, no appropriation available for any department shall be expended--

(2) for the maintenance, operation, and repair of any Government-owned passenger motor vehicle not used exclusively for official purposes; and 'official purposes' shall not include the transportation of officers and employees between their domiciles and places of employment, ... Any officer or employee of the Government who willfully uses or authorizes the use of any Government-owned passenger motor vehicle ... or of any passenger motor vehicle ... leased by the Government, for other than official purposes or otherwise violates the provisions of this paragraph shall be suspended from duty by the head of the department concerned, without compensation, for not less than one month, and shall be suspended for a longer period or summarily removed from office if circumstances warrant....

9. By memorandum of March 30, 1977, the Acting Superintendent of Papago reported to the Phoenix Area Director the existence of transportation services for its employees, by government vehicles, from Casa Grande, Arizona to Papago's Santa Rosa Boarding Day School 1/ (Exhibit R-4):

John Ross, Jr., Education Specialist, GS-11, drives a 12 passenger van between Casa Grande, Arizona, and Santa Rosa Boarding and Day School. He transports himself and 11 other employees because adequate housing for employees is not available on the school's campus. Mr. Ross parks the vehicle at his home because no other place is authorized, adequately protected, or has been otherwise designated for such purposes.

Gloria Green, Teacher (Library Usage), GS-9, drives a 12 passenger van between Casa Grande,

1/ The round trip distance is approximately 100 miles over roads difficult to traverse.

Arizona, and Santa Rosa Boarding and Day School. She transports herself and 11 other employees because adequate housing for employees is not available on the school's campus. Miss Green parks the vehicle at her home because no other place is authorized, adequately protected, or has been otherwise designated for such purposes.

All of the employees transported above, meet the respective drivers at a central location in Casa Grande. None of them take vehicles to their homes.

Authority for use of these vehicle (sic) came from the Agency Superintendent through the Education Program Administrator during the 1975-76 school year. This was done because it was our understanding that we either provided such transportation to the isolated duty station or pay mileage.

...

This situation has existed for more than a year. It resulted from the expansion of the Santa Rosa Boarding and Day School staff, plant, and student enrollment. Housing units built as compared to the number planned in the school's new construction, do not meet the overall needs of the staff.

...

We have additional housing units planned at the school, but have not received constructive monies for them. Construction of these units are included in Phase III plans. However, these numbers may also be inadequate.

10. It is thus clear that two of the employees utilized the government vehicles for transportation from their domiciles to the place of employment and the remaining employees utilized said vehicles for transportation between their domiciles and the place of employment.

11. By memorandum of April 11, 1977, from the Area Property and Supply Officer the Assistant Area Director was advised that the use of government vans to transport employees from Casa Grande to the Santa Rosa Boarding and Day School constituted an illegal use of government vehicles (Exhibit R-6).

12. On Wednesday, April 12, 1977, Respondent's Acting Area Director issued a memorandum to the Superintendent of Papago in which was contained the following language (Exhibit R-7):

... you are directed to immediately cease in the transportation of the employees at Santa Rosa.... Please notify this office by telephone and follow up with a memorandum when use of the vehicle for employee transportation is terminated. (Emphasis supplied)

13. Said April 12 memorandum was received by the Papago Superintendent three days later on Friday, April 15, 1977.

In compliance with the memorandum a telephone call was placed on the day of its receipt from the Area Director's office to the Principal of the Santa Rosa School, in which advice apparently was given to discontinue the service forthwith. No provision was made to transport the affected employees back to Casa Grande at the completion of the school day.

The Principal of the Santa Rosa School hastily called a meeting of all affected employees advising them of the situation. The meeting took place in mid-afternoon; union officials, having learned of the situation, were in attendance at said meeting and thereafter prevailed upon the area office by telephone not to discontinue the service until the employees had been re-transported to Casa Grande at the end of that school day.

14. Complainant concedes that Papago was obliged to comply with the directive of its Area Office and in so doing performed a non-discretionary ministerial act; in any event, Papago has not been charged with an unfair labor practice.

15. No notice had been given to the union qua union prior to the discontinuance of the van service and, other than the aforementioned telephone conversation, no opportunity was afforded the union prior to the discontinuance to negotiate on any aspect of it; Area management has disclaimed any obligation to negotiate since.

16. By Monday, April 18, 1977, the next school day, all of the affected employees had entered into car pool arrangements as a means of reaching the school; and, car pools continue to the present time.

17. On April 28, 1978, Complainant union filed a grievance (Exhibit R-8) based upon the discontinuance of the transportation. In response to the grievance, management took the position that it had no obligation to negotiate with Complainant on the cessation of an unlawful practice (Exhibit R-9). 2/

18. The parties hereto, fully recognizing that said grievance was filed under the negotiated grievance procedure established in the collective bargaining agreement between Complainant union and Papago (not a party to this proceeding), nevertheless agree that had that procedure run its full course, through arbitration, both parties to this proceeding would have been bound by the decision of the arbitrator (Tr. 24-28, 40). In this connection the following colloquy transpired (Tr. 26-7):

JUDGE HALPERN: All right.

Could the potential arbitrator's award in that grievance, had it gone to arbitration, have bound the Area?

MR. MEADOWS: Yes.

JUDGE HALPERN: It could?

MR. MEADOWS: We would have abided by the arbitrator's decision, assuming there was no exception to law involved.

JUDGE HALPERN: Well, that isn't really what I asked.

Suppose you had objected. Suppose the arbitrator had written a decision and that it was attempting to bind the Area. Could the Area have defended against that on the ground that they were not a party to the negotiated agreement; therefore, they were not bound by anything that resulted from an arbitration under the negotiated grievance machinery --

2/ By letter of May 9, 1977, Complainant pursuant to the collective bargaining agreement and the Executive Order requested of the Department of the Interior that a determination

MR. MEADOWS: No, sir.

JUDGE HALPERN: -- as opposed to a grievance filed under Agency grievance procedure?

MR. MEADOWS: No, sir. Had an arbitrator issued a decision, it would have been binding upon all parties, yes.

JUDGE HALPERN: Do you have any contrary view of that, Mr. Englehart?

MR. ENGLEHART: No. I agree completely. It's our understanding that it was filed under the negotiated grievance procedure and that that negotiated grievance procedure had steps that went outside of the limited relationship of the Superintendent's Office to the Union.

JUDGE HALPERN: Then you both agree, and in essence I can consider it stipulated in this case, that the grievance filed in effect was a grievance against the Area as well as against Papago, and any determination made in that case by the arbitrator would have been binding on both?

MR. MEADOWS: Yes, it was a grievance filed on the same issue that's at hand today, that is, the termination of the government vehicles used by employees.

JUDGE HALPERN: Mr. Englehart?

MR. ENGLEHART: Yes, it's my understanding that what the grievance was about was the withdrawal of the van transportation, and that through the negotiated grievance procedure --

JUDGE HALPERN: Well, You don't have to tell me that. I have --

2/ (cont.) be made as to negotiability in connection with the discontinuance of the van service. As of the date of the hearing hereon, more than a year after the request, no such determination had been made; it is established that the May 9, 1977, letter was received.

MR. ENGLEHART: -- the parties had bound themselves to a determination, because they involved themselves in the consideration of that grievance as it went up prior to arbitration.

JUDGE HALPERN: And that includes the Area. When you say the parties, you mean the parties in this action?

MR. ENGLEHART: Yes. That includes the Area ...

19. Complainant concedes that the issues raised in this unfair labor practice proceeding are the same as had previously been raised in the grievance proceeding. As candidly stated by counsel for Complainant (Tr. 149-150):

MR. ENGLEHART: I think what we're talking about now is whether the 19, Section 19(d) bar applies, and I think in all honesty it must be acknowledged that the items that are in contest in this unfair labor practice are the same items that were in contest in the grievance procedure.

It's the Union's contention that the 19(d) bar does not apply, not because there was not an attempt to raise the same items, but because the Union was never able to get anywhere with that procedure. They made every good faith effort, and I think the record will show what was done, but --

JUDGE HALPERN: All right. I thank you for your clarification, Mr. Englehart.

20. Under the grievance machinery, it was required that the fifth stage grievance be submitted to the Commissioner of Indian Affairs for final decision within five workdays of receipt by Complainant of the fourth stage deciding official's decision. No time limit is specified for the Commissioner's decision. The record reflects (Exhibit R-11) that the fourth stage decision is dated May 18, 1977, and in the absence of evidence to the contrary I infer that it was mailed on that date; in the absence of evidence I decline to make a finding on the date it was received.

It was testified on behalf of Complainant, by the individual who did the mailing, that the fifth stage submission dated June 3, 1977 (Exhibit C-5) was mailed to the Commissioner of Indian Affairs on June 3, 1977. There is no registered or certified receipt to evidence such mailing; however, I credit the testimony and find said submission in fact was mailed on June 3, 1977. I further find and conclude that Respondent, not having raised the defense of untimely filing at any stage of this proceeding has waived such defense.

21. On August 31, 1977, in a letter to the Commissioner of Indian Affairs, the President of NFFE made reference to the grievance which he assumed was then pending before the Commissioner as a result of the June 3, 1977, transmittal (Exhibit R-13).

By responsive letter of September 19, 1977, advice was given that "the Bureau of Indian Affairs (BIA) is not in possession of a grievance from the employees of NFFE, Local 520." (Exhibit R-13) I credit that representation and find by inference that, as a result of unknown circumstances, the submission mailed on June 3, 1977, either was not received by the Commissioner's office or, having been received, thereafter became unavailable and unretrievable.

22. Complainant having concluded that the Commissioner's office was acting in bad faith, 3/ and on the assumption that the Bureau would assert a time bar if the Commissioner were then furnished with a copy of the June 3, 1977, fifth stage submission, elected to proceed no further in the grievance machinery. Instead, on October 4, 1977, it charged Respondent with an unfair labor practice "regarding the fact that on April 12, 1977, your office ordered that protected transportation be terminated without consultation or negotiation with this Local." (Exhibit R-14).

Conclusions of Law

Preliminary Conclusion

It is a threshold conclusion in this matter that the action of the Area Office, in directing the Activity to terminate the transportation service at issue, provides the basis for finding a violation by it of any part of section 19(a) of the Order, notwithstanding that Complainant was accorded exclusive recognition only at the Activity level. Naval Air Rework Facility, Pensacola, Florida and Secretary of the 3/ While asserted as a separate unfair labor practice in the original Complaint, failure of response to the fifth stage submission was withdrawn as the basis for an unfair labor practice by the amended Complaint.

The Merits

As applicable here it is prohibited by Federal Statute, 31 U.S.C. § 638a (c)(2), that departmental appropriations be expended for the operation of any government owned passenger motor vehicle for the transportation of employees between their domiciles and places of work.

Section 12(a) of the Executive Order, provides that in the administration of agreements between an agency and a labor organization officials and employees are governed by existing laws. Thus, the agreement to provide transportation (and the establishment of the practice thereof) the cessation of which is the gravamen of this action, being antedated by said statute, is subject to its prohibition. Therefore, upon discovery of the unlawful nature of the van transportation Respondent was obliged to cause its cessation; and it was entitled unilaterally to do so. 4/

That the established practice was unlawful however, did not relieve Respondent of its obligation to negotiate with Complainant regarding the impact upon the employees adversely affected by its discontinuance. 5/

It is true that to a minimal degree there were negotiations. These were limited, however, to amelioration of the immediate harsh effect of the discontinuance of the transportation, without prior notice, during a school day, which would have left the employees stranded at work with no practical means of returning to Casa Grande. Such can hardly be considered to have discharged Respondent's obligation to negotiate on the adverse impact of a service the holding out of which is shown by the record to have been a significant inducement at the time of hiring, and which thereby became a condition of the employment.

Although no advice of the discontinuance was given to the Union qua Union prior to the general announcement to the employees affected that the service had been discontinued, unquestionably, there was opportunity to give such prior advice. In this connection, it was or should have been apparent to the Area Director that the written memorandum of April 12 would not reach the Papago Superintendent for effectuation for several days; in fact it did not reach him until April 15. In the interim the Union could (and should) have been notified. Accordingly, I find non-meritorious any suggestion that the situation was akin to an emergency or was otherwise of such urgency as to have precluded Respondent from giving prior advice to the Union and affording it an opportunity to negotiate on the adverse impact of the cessation of the transportation and upon possible alternatives consistent both with law and Respondent's original commitment to provide transportation.

Having thus concluded that there was both a duty to negotiate implementation and impact and a time frame within which to do so, absent other considerations, I would find a violation of section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Executive Order and make an appropriate recommendation. 6/

There is however, a controlling jurisdictional issue, the resolution of which is dispositive of this matter.

Section 19(d) bar - Further Proceedings

Respondent Area Office asserts, and Complainant concedes, that all issues raised in this action have previously been raised in a grievance filed under the negotiated agreement between the Activity (Papago Agency) and Complainant Union. Complainant and Respondent Area Office as parties to this unfair labor practice action further agree that had the grievance machinery proceeded to completion the ultimate decision of the arbitrator would have been of binding force and effect not only on Complainant and the Activity but upon the Respondent herein as well.

Under such circumstances there can be little doubt of the applicability of section 19(d) of the Executive Order, which provides in pertinent part that "issues which can be raised under a grievance procedure may, in the discretion of the aggrieved party, be raised under that procedure or the complaint procedure under this section, but not under both procedures."

6/ A recommendation that the unlawful activity be reinstated would of course not be appropriate.

4/ Department of the Army Dugway Proving Ground, Dugway, Utah, A/SLMR No. 745.

5/ Ibid.

I do not conclude, as Complainant contends, that it was prevented from exhausting its grievance remedy, either by Respondent or its higher agency authority. As to the fate of the fifth stage grievance submission mailed by Complainant on June 3, 1977, upon the record before me I find it possible to conclude only that the circumstances as a result of which it failed to reach the Commissioner of Indian Affairs are unknown; and, that whatever happened to said submission the Commissioner in fact did not receive it and was therefore unable to act upon it.

I further conclude, however, that Complainant may not be held to have abandoned the grievance, notwithstanding that it has brought this unfair labor practice action. Upon receipt of advice that the Commissioner was not in possession of its submission, without a decision on which it could not proceed to invoke arbitration, Complainant in essence assumed bad faith, left the grievance in its then posture and undertook to pursue its unfair labor practice remedy. Complainant's cynicism was based in part upon the dilatory handling of its request for a negotiability determination, which request having been made by letter of May 9, 1977, had not yet been acted upon at the time it filed its charge letter of October 4, 1977. That circumstance, while not conclusive of how the fifth stage submission would have been processed had it been received, in my view provides sufficient justification for Complainant's further course of action so as to estop Respondent from asserting that Complainant has abandoned the grievance; and, I so hold. Furthermore, it appearing from the testimony that Complainant, at about the time it mailed the fifth stage submission to the Commissioner, placed a copy thereof in Respondent's possession, Respondent upon learning of the situation might well have displayed good faith by so informing the Commissioner and furnishing its copy to him.

Under these circumstances, I conclude that the grievance remains viable and is subject to reactivation upon Complainant's filing with the Commissioner of Indian Affairs a copy of its June 3, 1977, fifth stage grievance submission.

Recommendation

In view of the foregoing I recommend to the Assistant Secretary that the complaint be dismissed in its entirety.

Administrative Law Judge

UNITED STATES DEPARTMENT OF LABOR
 ASSISTANT SECRETARY FOR LABOR-MANAGEMENT RELATIONS
 SUMMARY OF DECISION AND REMAND OF THE ASSISTANT SECRETARY
 PURSUANT TO SECTION 6 OF EXECUTIVE ORDER 11491, AS AMENDED

DEPARTMENT OF HEALTH, EDUCATION AND WELFARE, SOCIAL SECURITY ADMINISTRATION, BUREAU OF HEARINGS AND APPEALS, REGION II,
 SAN JUAN, PUERTO RICO
 A/SLMR No. 1127

This proceeding arose upon the filing of an unfair labor practice complaint by the American Federation of Government Employees, AFL-CIO, Local 3534 (Complainant) alleging that the Respondent violated Section 19(a)(1) and (2) of the Order by its action of assigning on an annual performance evaluation an "R" rating (better than unsatisfactory but not as high as outstanding) to Violeta Crespo regarding her ability to get along with others instead of an "O" rating (outstanding) because of her activities as a shop steward on behalf of the Complainant during the period covered by the evaluation.

The Administrative Law Judge concluded that the complaint should be dismissed. He described the issue as being whether the appraisal "was motivated, at least in significant part," by Crespo's union activities. He then noted a conflict in testimony between the Respondent's Administrative Law Judge Buono (for whom Crespo works as a hearing assistant) and its Hearing Administrator Perez (Crespo's rater and supervisor). Buono testified that when he spoke to Perez about raising Crespo's rating concerning her ability to get along with others, among the reasons Perez gave for not doing so was that Crespo went to Goldman's (the Respondent's Administrative Law Judge In Charge) office too much, presumably on union matters. Perez denied making any such statement. However, the Administrative Law Judge determined that a credibility resolution was unnecessary as he found that, "Even if Perez made a statement susceptible to the interpretation Buono gave it, I have no doubt the view expressed did not play the slightest part in the appraisal given Crespo by Perez and Goldman."

In the Assistant Secretary's view, to establish a violation of Section 19(a)(2) of the Order, it is not necessary to establish that agency management had engaged in conduct effecting employee terms and conditions of employment based solely, or to a significant extent, on union considerations. Rather, the Complainant would have to demonstrate only that one of the reasons for agency management's conduct was based on the union activity of the employee or employees involved. He found, therefore, that a finding of fact with respect to whether or not Perez had indicated to Buono that Crespo's rating was based, in part, on her union activities could well be determinative of whether a violation of the Order had occurred.

Accordingly, the Assistant Secretary remanded the subject case to the Administrative Law Judge for the purpose of making the necessary finding of fact and preparing and submitting to the Assistant Secretary a Supplemental Recommended Decision and Order.

DECISION AND REMAND

On June 27, 1978, Administrative Law Judge Milton Kramer issued his Recommended Decision and Order in the above-entitled proceeding, finding that the Respondent had not engaged in the alleged unfair labor practices and recommending that the complaint be dismissed in its entirety. Thereafter, the Complainant filed exceptions and a supporting brief with respect to the Administrative Law Judge's Recommended Decision and Order and the Respondent filed an answering brief.

The Assistant Secretary has reviewed the rulings of the Administrative Law Judge made at the hearing and finds that no prejudicial error was committed. Except as provided below, the rulings are hereby affirmed. Upon consideration of the entire record in the subject case, including the Complainant's exceptions and supporting brief and the Respondent's answering brief, I hereby adopt the Administrative Law Judge's findings, conclusions and recommendation, only to the extent consistent herein.

The complaint in the instant case alleges that the Respondent violated Section 19(a)(1) and (2) of the Order by its action of assigning an "R" rating (better than unsatisfactory but not as high as outstanding) on an annual performance evaluation to Violeta Crespo regarding her ability to get along with others instead of an "O" rating (outstanding) because of her activities as a shop steward on behalf of the Complainant during the period covered by the evaluation.

The evidence establishes that Rafael Perez Guadalupe, the Respondent's Hearing Administrator and Crespo's supervisor, was the rater and that Solomon Goldman, the Respondent's Administrative Law Judge In Charge, was the reviewer of the disputed appraisal. During the critical period of the appraisal, Crespo was an active shop steward and the hearing assistant to the Respondent's Administrative Law Judge Rafael Buono-Petrilli. For the appraisal in question, Buono was asked to make an initial performance appraisal recommendation.

The Administrative Law Judge described the issue in the instant case as being whether the appraisal "was motivated, at least in significant part," by Crespo's union activities. He then noted a conflict in testimony between Buono and Perez. Buono testified that when he spoke to Perez about raising Crespo's rating concerning her ability to get along with others, "among the reasons Perez gave for not doing so was that Crespo went to Goldman's office too much, presumably on union matters." Perez denied making any such statement. The Administrative Law Judge determined that a credibility resolution in this regard was unnecessary as he found that, "Even if Perez made a statement susceptible to the interpretation Buono gave it, I have no doubt the view expressed did not play the slightest part in the appraisal given Crespo by Perez and Goldman."

Section 1(a) of the Order guarantees to each employee of the executive branch of the Federal government the right, freely and without fear of penalty or reprisal, to form, join, and assist a labor organization or to refrain from any such activity. Agency management's abridgment of these rights by discrimination in regard to hiring, tenure, promotion, or other conditions of employment is violative of Section 19(a)(2) and (1) of the Order.

To find a Section 19(a)(2) violation of the Order, the evidence must show that agency management has discriminatorily affected employee terms and conditions of employment based on union considerations. Further, such a violation will be found in "mixed motive" situations, i.e., where a legitimate basis for the management action exists, but where union considerations also are shown to have played a part.

Applying the foregoing principles to the instant case, if the evidence demonstrates that agency management's rating of Crespo was based on her union activity, in whole or in part, a violation of Section 19(a)(2) would be established. Thus, it would not be necessary for the Complainant to establish that agency management had acted solely, or to a significant extent, on the basis of union considerations. Rather, the Complainant would have to demonstrate only that one of the reasons for agency management's conduct was based on the union activity of Crespo.

As indicated above, the Administrative Law Judge in the subject case made no finding of fact with respect to whether or not Perez had indicated to Buono that Crespo's rating was based, in part, on her union activities. Under these circumstances, and in accordance with the principles outlined above, I find that such a finding may well be determinative of whether a violation occurred herein. Accordingly, I shall order that the subject case be remanded to the Administrative Law Judge for the purpose of making an appropriate resolution as to the statement in question.

ORDER

IT IS HEREBY ORDERED that this proceeding be, and it hereby is, remanded to the Administrative Law Judge for the purpose of making an appropriate finding of fact determined to be necessary in reaching a resolution of the subject complaint.

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED that, upon making the appropriate finding of fact, the Administrative Law Judge shall prepare and submit to the Assistant Secretary a Supplemental Recommended Decision and Order in accordance with Section 203.23 of the Assistant Secretary's Regulations.

RECOMMENDED DECISION AND ORDER

Statement of the Case

This case arises under Executive Order 11491 as amended.
It was initiated by a complaint dated September 2, 1977 and filed September 6, 1977 alleging a violation of Sections 19(a) (1) and (2) of the Executive Order. The violation was alleged to consist of assigning an "R" rating (satisfactory) to Violeta Crespo instead of an "O" rating (outstanding) because of her activities as a shop steward on behalf of the Complainant. Under date of September 19, 1977 the Respondent filed a response to the complaint denying the allegations of the complaint and making some affirmative allegations.

On March 8, 1978 the Acting Regional Administrator issued a Notice of Hearing for a hearing to be held on April 18, 1978 in Hato Rey, Puerto Rico. A hearing was held on April 18 and 19 in Hato Rey. Both parties were represented by counsel. They presented witnesses who were examined and cross-examined and offered exhibits which with one exception were received in evidence. Both parties made closing arguments and filed briefs.

Facts

Local 3534 was certified on July 12, 1974 as the exclusive representative of professional and non-professional employees (with certain exceptions) of the Respondent. Violeta Crespo was instrumental in organizing the Local and obtaining recognition. For three years she was the shop steward and in April 1977 was elected Vice-President in San Juan. The Respondent has employees in San Juan, ¹/_{Ponce}, and Mayaguez. The San Juan Vice-President is the chief executive of the Complainant with respect to the San Juan employees.

The Bureau of Hearings and Appeals in Puerto Rico has about twelve Administrative Law Judges. Solomon Goldman is the Administrative Law Judge in Charge. Rafael Perez Guadalupe is the Hearing Administrator. Each Judge has five employees under him. In order of rank they are an attorney-advisor, a hearing assistant, a secretary, and two hearing clerks. Mrs. Crespo is the hearing assistant to Judge Rafael Buono-Petrilli.

This case involves one item in Mrs. Crespo's performance appraisal for the year April 1, 1976 through March 31, 1977.

In making employee appraisals Perez is considered the Rater and Goldman the Reviewer. However, the ALJ is asked to make an initial recommendation. The appraisal has seven categories in which the employee is to be appraised with a letter. Judge Buono told Mrs. Crespo that he had recommended an "O" for her in category 6, "getting along with others". Perhaps he intended to do so but in fact he recommended an "A" for her in that category. "O" means outstanding and is an appropriate appraisal in all categories. "A" means "exceeds the requirements of the job" and is not an appropriate appraisal in category 6; in that category the only permitted appraisals are "B", or unsatisfactory, "O", and "R", better than unsatisfactory but not as high as outstanding.

1/ The offices are located in Hato Rey, a suburb of San Juan, and the employees there are referred to as the San Juan employees.

When Perez saw Buono's recommendation of an A in category 6 for Mrs. Crespo he knew that letter was not an appropriate appraisal in that category and that only B, R, or O could properly be used. Accordingly, in making his own performance appraisal of Mrs. Crespo he changed the A in category 6 to an R and otherwise agreed with Buono's recommendation. Goldman agreed with Perez. This left Mrs. Crespo's final appraisal with an R in category 6, 3 A's, and 3 O's.

Several employees had complained to Perez about Mrs. Crespo's conduct in performing the work and Mrs. Crespo had complained to Perez about several employees. Relations between Crespo and Sonia Detres, a clerk in Buono's unit, became so bad that Perez transferred Detres to another unit but then Crespo had difficulties with Detres' replacement. Overall, however, Crespo did get along well with people but Perez and Goldman did not consider her outstanding in that respect.

On the same day that Goldman and Perez made their final appraisal of Mrs. Crespo they recommended to their Regional Office in New York that Mrs. Crespo receive a grade promotion.

When Mrs. Crespo received her final appraisal she complained to Buono about her rating in category 6. Buono spoke to Perez and tried to persuade him to have Crespo's appraisal in category 6 changed to outstanding but Perez refused and pointed out that Buono himself had originally recommended her for an A in that category.

In the appraisals for the prior year the ALJ's were the raters and Goldman the reviewer. Crespo's ALJ that year was Judge Ana Rodriguez. She gave Crespo an overall appraisal of outstanding and Goldman concurred. The New York Regional Office called Judge Goldman and questioned the appraisal of Crespo and three others and asked him to justify them. Goldman could not do so. He lowered Crespo's appraisal in getting along with others over the objection of Judge Rodriguez. Crespo asked him to lower some other category to lower her overall rating, but Goldman refused. 2/

Discussion and Conclusion

The issue in this case is not whether the appraisal of Mrs. Crespo in category-6 was right or wrong, sound or unsound. It is whether it was motivated, at least in significant part, by her union activities. The evidence that it was so motivated scarcely exists. Buono testified that when he spoke to Perez about raising Crespo's appraisal in category 6, among the reasons Perez gave for not doing so was that Crespo went to Goldman's office too much, presumably on union matters. Perez categorically denied making any such statement. I have not made a finding on which of them testified falsely or was mistaken in his recollection because it is unnecessary to do so. Even if Perez made a statement susceptible to the interpretation Buono gave it, I have no doubt the view expressed did not play the slightest part in the appraisal given Crespo by Perez and Goldman.

It is plain from the testimony of Goldman and Perez, and the appraisal they gave Crespo, 3/ including the highly laudatory justification for the "O" ratings, that they considered her a valuable and valued employee, well above the average in qualification and performance. In three of the categories appraised they appraised her as outstanding. In three others they appraised her as in excess of job requirements. Only in category 6, getting along with others, they appraised her as neither unsatisfactory nor outstanding, the only other appraisals permitted under the regulations in that category. There was considerable evidence that there were some people with whom Mrs. Crespo did not "get along" at times, on occasion giving rise to consideration of reassignment of personnel.

2/ Most of the facts found in this paragraph are based on findings in Department of Health, Education and Welfare, Social Security Administration, Bureau of Hearings and Appeals, San Juan, Puerto Rico and American Federation of Government Employees, AFL-CIO, Local 3534, A/SLMR No. 861. The parties in that case and this one are the same and both cases involve the same category in the performance appraisal of the same person.

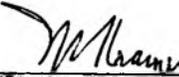

3/ Exh. C-3.

September 25, 1978

Since I have concluded that Mrs. Crespo's appraisal was not motivated even in part by considerations of her union activities, I must recommend that the complaint be dismissed.

RECOMMENDATION

The complaint should be dismissed.

A/SIMR No. 1128

This case involved an unfair labor practice complaint filed by the American Federation of Government Employees, AFL-CIO, Local 3400 (Complainant) alleging that the Respondent violated Section 19(a)(1) of the Order by refusing to process a grievance beyond Step 2 of the negotiated procedure pending the completion of a related Equal Employment Opportunity (EEO) proceeding.

The Administrative Law Judge found that the Respondent's decision to hold the grievance in abeyance was based upon a legitimate belief that Section 13(a) of the Order and the Respondent's published personnel instructions precluded the operation of the negotiated grievance/arbitration procedure while the EEO case was still pending. He found no evidence that the Respondent had intentionally frustrated the grievance/arbitration machinery, nor that it had otherwise acted in bad faith. He thus concluded that under these circumstances the Respondent had not violated Section 19(a)(1) of the Order.

The Assistant Secretary adopted the Administrative Law Judge's findings, conclusions and recommendation. In this regard, he noted particularly that at all times material the Respondent had indicated its willingness to proceed with the grievance once the EEO matter had been resolved. Accordingly, the Assistant Secretary ordered that the complaint be dismissed.

DECISION AND ORDER

On August 8, 1978, Administrative Law Judge Randolph D. Mason issued his Recommended Decision and Order in the above-entitled proceeding, finding that the Respondent had not engaged in the unfair labor practice alleged in the complaint and recommending that the complaint be dismissed in its entirety. Thereafter, the Complainant filed exceptions and a supporting brief with respect to the Administrative Law Judge's Recommended Decision and Order.

The Assistant Secretary has reviewed the rulings of the Administrative Law Judge made at the hearing and finds no prejudicial error was committed. The rulings are hereby affirmed. Upon consideration of the Administrative Law Judge's Recommended Decision and Order and the entire record in this case, including the exceptions and supporting brief filed by the Complainant, I hereby adopt the Administrative Law Judge's findings, conclusions and recommendation.

The Administrative Law Judge concluded that, under the circumstances of this case, the Respondent's refusal to process a grievance beyond Step 2 of the negotiated procedure, pending completion of a related Equal Employment Opportunity (EEO) proceeding, did not constitute a violation of Section 19(a)(1) of Executive Order 11491, as amended. I agree. In this regard, it is noted particularly that at all times material the Respondent had indicated its willingness to proceed with the grievance once the EEO matter had been resolved. Moreover, upon becoming aware that no further use of the EEO procedures was contemplated, the Respondent indicated its willingness to resume consideration of the matter under the negotiated grievance procedure, and to proceed to arbitration if the Complainant so desired.

Under these circumstances, I find that the Respondent's conduct herein was not violative of the Order. 1/ Accordingly, I shall order that the instant complaint be dismissed.

Before: RANDOLPH D. MASON
Administrative Law Judge

This proceeding was heard in Chicago, Illinois, on May 2, 1978, and arises under Executive Order 11491, as amended. Pursuant to the Regulations of the Assistant Secretary Of Labor For Labor-Management Relations (hereinafter called the Assistant Secretary), a Notice of Hearing on Complaint was issued on February 28, 1978. This case was initiated by a complaint filed on December 21, 1977, by the American Federation of Government Employees, Local 3400 (hereinafter the Union). The Union alleges that respondent engaged in dilatory tactics in the processing of a grievance and thereby violated §19(a)(1) of the Executive Order. 1/

At the hearing, all parties were represented and were afforded full opportunity to be heard, adduce evidence, examine and cross-examine witnesses, and argue orally. Following the hearing, a deposition was taken on May 25, 1978. The deposition was received in evidence on June 15, 1978, and marked for identification as Assistant Secretary's Exhibit No. 3. Thereafter, both parties filed briefs. Upon the entire record in this case, from my observation of the witnesses and their demeanor, and from all of the testimony and evidence adduced at the hearing, I make the following findings, conclusions and recommendation.

Findings of Fact

The American Federation of Government Employees, Local 3400, was the exclusive bargaining representative of certain employees of the respondent, Region V, Department of Health, Education and Welfare, in Chicago, Illinois, at all times relevant herein.

Article XXI of the parties' negotiated agreement sets forth a grievance and arbitration procedure. The negotiated grievance procedure replaced the agency grievance procedure with respect to all employees covered by the agreement. The negotiated procedure provided for three steps of review by management officials prior to arbitration. The third-step official was required to render a written decision within ten workdays after receipt of the grievance. Article XXI also provided, in pertinent part, as follows:

1/ The Union did not allege a violation of §19(a)(6).

Section F. If the Employer and the Union fail to settle any grievance processed in accordance with the procedure outlined above, the subject grievance shall, upon written request by the Employer or the Union, be referred to arbitration. Such written request must be submitted not later than ten (10) workdays following the receipt of the written decision at the third step.

Section J. All time limits and/or procedures set forth in this Article may be extended or waived by mutual consent of the parties.

During the summer of 1977, one of the respondent's employees (hereinafter referred to as the "grievant") requested approximately four months maternity leave beginning in September of 1977. She requested that the period preceding November 28, 1977, be comprised of about 176 hours of sick leave and 240 hours of leave without pay. The remainder of the requested period constituted 168 hours of annual leave from November 28 to December 27, 1977. Management refused to allow her to take more than 64 of the final 168 hours of annual leave.

On August 18, 1977, a Union steward filed a grievance pursuant to the negotiated agreement on behalf of the above grievant. The grievance objected to the above denial of 104 hours of annual leave, and disputed management's claim that the workload of the office necessitated denial of the leave in question. In this regard, it is noted that Article XVI of the negotiated agreement provides that requests for advance annual leave will ordinarily be approved unless the employer decides the productivity of the office would be unduly impaired.

Thereafter, the grievance was timely processed through the second step in accordance with the requirements set forth in the negotiated agreement. Management's second-step official also denied the requested leave due to the workload of the office.

In a memorandum dated September 8, 1977, the Union presented the grievance to an individual designated by respondent as the third-step management official. The memorandum was received by that official on September 9, 1977. Shortly before that, management ascertained for the first time that the grievant was also simultaneously seeking a remedy for the denial of the annual leave in question through the use of the Equal Employment Opportunity (EEO) procedures. In this regard, on August 22, 1977, the grievant had initiated the EEO process by having a conference with her EEO Counselor.

The EEO process arises out a federal statute which provides, in pertinent part, that all personnel actions affecting employees in certain federal executive agencies shall be made free from any discrimination based on race, color, religion, sex, or national origin. 42 USCA §2000(e)(16)(a) (1974 ed.). The statute then provides generally for "appropriate remedies" to effectuate the above policy. Applicable regulations require that the aggrieved party first consult with an EEO counselor. 5 CFR §713.213. That regulation also sets forth specific steps that the Counselor must take after his initial conference. He must make necessary inquiries and seek a solution to the matter on an informal basis. He also is required to keep certain records. In addition, he must conduct his final interview with the aggrieved person not later than 21 calendar days after the date on which the matter was called to his attention by the aggrieved person. If the final interview is not concluded within twenty-one days and the matter has not previously been resolved, the aggrieved person shall be informed in writing at that time of his right to file a complaint of discrimination. The regulation further provides that the notice shall inform the complainant of his right to file a complaint at any time after receipt of the notice up to fifteen calendar days after the final interview.

On or about September 8, 1977, the EEO Counselor held conferences, in accordance with the above regulation, with three of the grievant's supervisors, including the individual who had been named as the third-step official for purposes of the negotiated grievance procedure. Subsequently, on September 12, 1977, the EEO Counselor wrote the grievant the following letter:

This is to advise you that our final interview was completed today. Since I was unsuccessful in informally resolving your complaint..., you were advised by phone today that you may file a formal complaint with any of the officials listed on the Notice of Right to File a Discrimination Complaint.

The "notice" attached to the above letter instructed the grievant that she had fifteen calendar days within which to file a formal complaint. It further stated that the complaint could be filed in person or by mail at any one of six different locations. The first location listed was in Washington, D.C. Only one of the other locations listed was in Chicago, Illinois.

On September 16, 1977, the third stage official wrote the following letter to the grievant:

I am unable to consider your request for relief sought in the third stage grievance filed on September 8, 1977. The decision on the third stage is being deferred pending a resolution of the EEO complaint you recently filed covering this same issue. I will render a decision on the third stage grievance on receiving a notice of the final resolution of your EEO complaint.

The above official had been advised by the Division of Management and Administration and by the Assistant Regional Commissioner For Disability Insurance that the position taken in the above letter was appropriate. It appears that this decision was based, in part, upon section 713-1(H)(2) (appendix B) of the HEW Personnel instructions (SSA TN no. 128, 11/26/76), which states:

... A negotiated grievance procedure may not cover matters for which a statutory appeals procedure exists. Therefore, written allegations of discrimination made in connection with a grievance filed by any employee under a negotiated grievance procedure shall be terminated under that procedure and processed in accordance with [the agency EEO procedures].

... Written allegations of discrimination in connection with a grievance filed by an employee covered by [the agency grievance procedure] shall be referred for investigation and otherwise processed under [the EEO procedures] according to the following rules:

a. Acceptance of the discrimination allegation will automatically suspend related proceedings under [the agency grievance procedures]....

The September 16, 1977, letter from the third stage official was received by the grievant on September 20, 1977.

In a letter dated September 21, 1977, the Union president wrote to the respondent's Acting Principal Regional Official and requested that the grievant's case be referred to arbitration. He further stated as follows:

The Agency has refused to give a decision at the third step until a decision on the EEO complaint is rendered. Since regulations allow for employees to seek redress simultaneously through both Title VII and the negotiated agreement, the Union is invoking step four under the negotiated agreement.

On September 27, 1977, the third-step official wrote a letter to the Union steward who had been representing the grievant. He told the steward about the September 16 letter that he had written to the grievant and stated that "her grievance is being deferred pending final disposition of the EEO complaint she has filed." He then informed the steward that he was not the appropriate third stage official because he could not grant the relief requested by the grievant. He stated that he was forwarding the file to the appropriate third-stage official, the Assistant Regional Commissioner for Disability Insurance, for a reply under the negotiated grievance procedures.

The Assistant Regional Commissioner did not reply at that time because she was told by management's personnel officials that a reply was not necessary since the third-stage time period had expired and the request for arbitration had been filed. In any event, even if she had responded, she had been informed by the local EEO office that the EEO process was still continuing, and she would have taken the same position as the prior third-stage official.

On October 1, 1977, the above Union steward visited the grievant at her home and learned for the first time that no formal EEO complaint had been filed. This information was not communicated to management until October 17, 1977, when the pre-complaint charge was filed in the instant unfair labor practice proceeding.

Meanwhile the request for arbitration had been given to one of respondent's labor relations officers for appropriate response. Prior to making this response, this officer was informed by the local EEO office that the EEO case could still be pending, i.e. that the time for filing a formal EEO complaint had not yet expired and that there were seven places where a complaint could have been filed. This information, coupled with the Union's September 21 statement that the EEO procedure and the grievance could proceed "simultaneously," caused the labor relations officer to assume that the EEO case was still pending. With this belief, on October 5, 1977, the above officer responded to the Union president's September 21 request for arbitration. This response was signed by the appropriate management official. The response maintained management's position that the grievance and the EEO case could not proceed simultaneously. The respondent relied primarily on section 13(a) of the Executive Order which provides that a negotiated grievance procedure "may not cover matters for which a statutory appeal procedure exists." Respondent pointed out that any EEO case is subject to a statutory appeal procedure, and contended that the instant EEO case should take precedence over the operation of the grievance machinery because both cases involved the same factual questions. In this regard, both cases would require a thorough examination of management's reasons for denying the grievant's requested annual leave. Under the circumstances, respondent took the position that the arbitration request could be held in abeyance pending resolution of the EEO complaint.

On October 11, 1977, the Union's president wrote respondent a letter in which he requested the respondent to clarify it's position regarding the arbitrability of the grievant's case.

Prior to receiving management's reply 2/, on October 17, 1977, the Union's president filed the pre-complaint charge in the instant unfair labor practice proceeding. In this charge, the Union indicated to management for the first time that the grievant had decided not to file a formal EEO complaint.

2/ On October 21, respondent replied that the case would be arbitrable only if the grievant no longer contended that the denial of annual leave was due to discrimination.

Conclusions of Law

The primary issue presented for decision is whether respondent's refusal to process a grievance after the second step, and its subsequent refusal to proceed to arbitration, constituted a violation of section 19(a)(1) of the Executive Order. That section prohibits management from interfering with, restraining, or coercing an employee in the exercise of the rights assured by the Order. An employee has a protected right to properly utilize the negotiated grievance and arbitration machinery. See e.g. Army and Air Force Exchange Service, Dix-McGuire Consolidated Exchange, Fort Dix, New Jersey, A/SLMR No. 700. The essential question in this case is whether the respondent's actions were taken in good faith and were founded upon a legitimate belief that the grievant's pending EEO case precluded the simultaneous operation of the negotiated grievance and arbitration procedures.

The original grievance filed on August 18, 1977, objected to respondent's denial of a portion of the annual leave requested by the grievant. The basic contention of the grievant was that no legitimate reason existed for denying the leave in question. Respondent's position was that the productivity of the office would have been impaired if the leave had been granted. Shortly after filing her grievance, the grievant initiated an EEO proceeding as an additional means of obtaining the requested leave. The issue in the EEO case also focused upon management's reasons for denying the leave. The specific issue in the EEO proceeding was whether the denial was due to discrimination based on race, color, religion, sex, or national origin.

At the hearing, management officials testified that the decision to hold the grievance in abeyance (and subsequent refusal to proceed to arbitration) was based upon their belief that section 13(a) of the Order and respondent's published personnel instructions precluded the operation of these procedures while the related EEO case was still pending. I choose to credit this testimony. Section 13(a) of the Order provides, in part, that negotiated grievance procedures "may not cover matters for which a statutory appeal procedure exists." The same language is contained in the published personnel instructions upon which the respondent relied. Management contended that the grievance involved an inquiry into the reasons for denying annual leave and that the same inquiry would have to be made in the EEO case. The grievance alleges that there was no "legitimate" reason for the denial of leave; by invoking the EEO procedures, the grievant was simultaneously alleging that the denial was due to an illegitimate reason, i.e. discrimination proscribed by 42 USCA §2000(e)(16)(a) (1974 ed.).

On the other hand, the Union argues that the respondent should not have refused to process the above grievance or proceed to arbitration. It contends, inter alia, that the grievance did not cover a matter for which a statutory appeal procedure existed since no "formal" EEO complaint had been filed. In this regard, the grievant only employed the procedures involving an EEO counselor, which constitute a prerequisite to the filing of a formal complaint. The Union also argues that the discrimination issue could be separated from the grievance and be resolved by means of a simultaneous EEO proceeding.

I hold that it would be improper to resolve the grievability and arbitrability questions at this time. Section 13(d) of the Order states that questions that cannot be resolved by the parties as to whether or not a grievance is on a matter for which a statutory appeal procedure exists, shall be referred to the Assistant Secretary for decision. The Regulations of the Assistant Secretary provide a procedure for such determinations. 29 CFR §205.1 et seq.

After a careful review of the record, I have found no convincing evidence indicating any intentional frustration of the grievance and arbitration machinery or any evidence that respondent otherwise acted in bad faith. 3/ Under the circumstances, I must conclude that the respondent did not violate §19(a)(1) of the Order. 4/ Naval Air Rework Facility, Cherry Point, North Carolina A/SLMR No. 849; Department of the Army, U.S. Army Materiel Development and Readiness Command, A/SLMR No. 1025.

3/ The Union also argues that the reassignment of a new third-step management official constitutes a dilatory tactic; however, the Union had already requested arbitration and there is no evidence that management's action was taken for the purpose of delaying the proceedings.

4/ The Union did not allege a violation of §19(a)(6); however, the result in this case would not have been changed had it done so. Naval Air Rework Facility, A/SLMR No. 849.

Recommendation

Having concluded that the respondent did not violate Section 19(a)(1) of the Order, I hereby recommend that the complaint filed in this case be dismissed in its entirety.

This case involved an unfair labor practice complaint filed by the American Federation of Government Employees, AFL-CIO, Local 15 (Complainant) alleging that the Respondent violated Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order by instituting a new working condition, namely, the monitoring of Appeals Officers' conferences, without notifying the Complainant and negotiating with respect to such action.

The Administrative Law Judge found, among other things, that the monitoring of conferences constituted a continuation of an established practice, and thus the Respondent was under no obligation to negotiate with the Complainant on the matter. Accordingly, he recommended dismissal of the complaint.

Noting particularly the absence of exceptions, the Assistant Secretary adopted the findings, conclusions and recommendation of the Administrative Law Judge and ordered that the complaint be dismissed.

DECISION AND ORDER

On August 15, 1978, Administrative Law Judge Rhea M. RECOMMENDED DECISION AND ORDER

Statement of the Case

This is an unfair labor practice proceeding in which a formal hearing of record was held on May 31, 1978 in New York City, New York, pursuant to Executive Order 11491, as amended, (hereinafter referred to as the Order).

The Respondent in a complaint filed on April 22, 1977 was charged with violating Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order by instituting a new working condition, namely, monitoring employee Appeals Officers' Conferences without notifying the union and refusing to negotiate the Act of such monitoring. 1/

Upon the basis of the entire record, including the evidence adduced, the briefs submitted by the parties and my observation of the witnesses, I make the following findings, conclusions and recommendations.

Position of the Parties

The matter for consideration in this proceeding is the final decision of the Respondent refusing to bargain on the alleged monitoring practice of Appeals Officers' Conferences by management supervisors. In this connection Counsel for the Complainant, American Federation of Government Employees, AFL-CIO Local 15, (hereinafter referred to as the union), stated at the hearing "...that the Agency violated Sections 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order in that they refused to negotiate on the decision concerning monitoring of journeymen Appeals Officers' Conferences. We believe their refusal is improper and is properly a matter before the Assistant Secretary. The remedy that we seek is that they be directed to negotiate on this matter which we feel is within the personnel policies and practices that are fully negotiable under the Order..."

The Respondent urged that monitoring Appeals Officers' Conferences did not constitute a unilateral change in working conditions or change in personnel policies and practices as monitoring had been done periodically in the past and well before 1976; also, that utilization of supervisory observations of appellate conferences is within the privileged prerogative of management and management was not required to bargain on the issue under the Order.

1/ The parties stipulated at the hearing that impact and implementation of the subject decision by supervisors in the New York Appellate Office had been presented to the Federal Labor Relations Council and is not an issue with the instant hearing. The Council later issued a decision in the matter on July 7, 1978 (FLRC No. 78A-4) holding in part that the instant appeal, attempting to raise issues as to the negotiability of the disputed proposals under the Order, is prematurely filed and the conditions for Council review of such issues, as prescribed by section 1(c)(4) of the Order and section 2411.22 of the Council's rules (5 C.F.R. 2411.22) have not been met.

Findings of Fact

1. At all pertinent and material times herein, the Complainant was the exclusive representative of Appeals Officers employees and/or Conferees in the North-Atlantic Region, Internal Revenue Service, Department of the Treasury including offices located in New York City, Boston, Massachusetts, New Haven, Connecticut, and Long Island, New York.

2. Appeals officers serve in government GS grades of 12, 13 and 14. In the New York City office there is a Chief who is head of the office and five Associate Chiefs who each supervise a group of Appeals Officers in the GS grades indicated. The alleged violation in this proceeding relates to the New York City office.

3. The journeyman level for hiring GS-12 Appeals Officers was reduced from GS-13 about August 1976 when it was ascertained that there was a sufficient workload to establish a full working level at the GS-12 level. Prior to that time applicants were hired at GS-12, which was a developmental level clearly identified, and, they remained at this level until they qualified on-the-job for the GS-13 journeyman grade as an Appeals Officer and/or Conferee.

4. For a number of years both prior to and subsequent to 1976 there has been monitoring in the New York City office by certain Associate Chief supervisors, of appellate conferences held by newly hired Appeals Officers and/or Conferees with taxpayers and their representatives. Also, on occasions, both before and after 1976, such supervisors sat in on, or monitored appellate conferences, held by experienced journeymen officers in Grades 13 and 14.

5. In monitoring the appeal conferences between the Appeals Officers and/or Conferees and the taxpayer and his representative, the Associate Chief does not participate in any of the discussions. Among the duties emphasized in the position description for Appeals Officers in each grade 12, 13 and 14 are:

Conducts conferences and negotiations with taxpayers or their representatives in a dignified and orderly manner, with displayed impartiality. Negotiates settlement of cases on the basis of facts developed and applicable law and regulations, considering the hazards of litigation. Raises new issues when pertinent and material.

The monitoring of conferences over the years by Associate Chiefs, though infrequently used, has been considered by the Agency as an available evaluative tool and means of identifying Appeals Officers' training and development needs with regard to the performance of their work in conducting conferences. Performance evaluation is a fundamental supervisory responsibility to: (1) rate each employee in accordance with Service Performance Rating Plan; (2) to evaluate and recommend best qualified individuals for promotion; and (3) to identify employees in need of additional training.

6. The monitoring of Appeals Officers in the New York office was alleged to have become a continuing action on the part of the Respondent on or after September 8, 1976. The record establishes that the Complainant was aware of an earlier incident of monitoring in April 1976. Appeals Officers were generally afforded notice that a hearing would be monitored about 20 minutes to two hours before the session. At the hearing there was evidence of monitoring sessions of Appeals Officers by one or more Associate Chiefs in the New York office during 1974 and 1975 as well as later sessions in 1976 and 1977. Monitoring as early as 1970 was also reported.

7. From September 1976 through April 1978, 3,452 conferences were held by employee Appeals Officers in the New York City Appellate office and of that number 37 were observed or monitored by Associate Chiefs. The number of monitoring sessions prior to 1976 is not indicated by statistical compilation but credible testimony at the hearing referred to and establishes that there has been occasional monitoring of Appeals Officers' Conferences since at least 1970.

Discussion and Conclusions

During the term of an agreement between the Complainant union and the Respondent Activity, supervisors in the Activity's Appellate Division on various occasions attended and observed taxpayer conferences with Appeals Officers. The union expressed concern over such supervisory observation of its appeals officers during 1976 and alleged such observation constituted a change in practice and was negotiable. The activity urged that the practice was one that had always been available to a supervisor at the option of the Chief of each Appellate Office and the practice had been utilized sporadically in recent years in the New York office of the North-Atlantic Region; even if it were not a past practice by the activity, it was urged the matter was exempted from the activity's obligation to negotiate. The activity's refusal to negotiate with the union on the subject matter of the activity's right to have supervisors monitor Appeals Officers' Conference techniques was alleged to violate Section 19(a) (1) and (6) of the Order.

Section 19(a) (1) and (6) of the Order provides that "Agency management shall not (1) interfere with, restrain, or coerce an employee in the exercise of rights assured by this Order; and (6) refuse to consult, confer or negotiate with a labor organization as required by this Order.

Section 11(a) of the Order imposes upon an Agency the obligation to meet at reasonable times and confer in good faith with respect to personnel policies and practices and matters affecting working conditions of unit employees.

Section 11(b) of the Order, however, makes it clear that the obligation to meet and confer (imposed by Section 11(a)) does not include matters with respect to the mission of the Agency; its budget; its organization; the number of employees assigned an organizational unit, work project or tour of duty; the technology of performing its work; or, its internal security practices.

Under Section 12(b) of the Order management officials of the Agency retain the following rights, among others, in accordance with applicable laws and regulations:

- (1) to direct employees of the agency;
- (2) to hire, promote, transfer, assign, and retain employees within the Agency and to suspend, demote, discharge, or take other disciplinary action against employees;
- *****
- (4) to maintain the efficiency of the Government operations entrusted to them;
- (5) to determine the methods, means and personnel by which such operations are to be conducted.

It is evident in this proceeding that both before and after September 1976 the duties and obligations of unit employee Appeals Officers remained the same, standards of case handling performance including work assignments, methods and techniques utilized in conducting hearing conferences and work performance and the means utilized to accomplish daily tasks and case handling were likewise unaffected.

Section 11(a) of the Order describes the limited areas which are subject to the bargaining obligation on the part of agencies and exclusive representatives. The section has been interpreted to encompass those matters which materially affect and have a substantial impact on personnel policies, practices and general working conditions.

The record clearly establishes that certain Associate Chief supervisors have on occasions, at least since 1970, monitored both new and experienced Appeals Officers Conferences with taxpayers. I conclude that the Respondent was not obligated to negotiate with the Union concerning the observation and monitoring of Conferences of its Appeals Officers because such observations constituted continuation of a prior practice applicable to both new and experienced Appeals Officers. There was neither a new policy or change in policy by reason of supervisory monitoring by Associate Chiefs of their Appeals Officers in 1976 in the New York City office which requires the Respondent to negotiate with the Complainant union. The record does not establish that except for the New York City office, supervisory monitoring was done elsewhere in the region.

As heretofore expressed, the limited areas subject to the bargaining obligation under Section 11(a) of the Order encompass those matters which materially affect and have a substantial impact on personnel policies, practices and general working conditions. From the record, it might be inferred that there was some increase in number of individual monitoring sessions of Appeals Officers by supervisors commencing about September 1976 than previously, but, this had no discernible effect upon Appeals Officers working conditions; it affected only insofar as a term or condition of employment is concerned, supervisors, rather than Appeals Officers, who sat in on the monitoring sessions to observe and evaluate those assigned to them for supervision.

Decisions of the Assistant Secretary indicate that even though an agency is privileged to make unilateral decisions on the matters set forth Sections 11(b) and 12(b) of the Order, nevertheless, prior to changing a policy or working condition encompassed by these Sections an Agency must provide the exclusive representative an opportunity to negotiate the procedures observed in reaching the decision or implementing the action and the impact on adversely affected employees. 2/

I have previously held that the monitoring of new and experienced journeymen Appeals Officers hearing conferences during 1976 were not essentially different from those held since at least 1970. The principal objective of the Appellate Division is, generally, to administratively dispose of tax controversies in accordance with the law, on a basis which is fair and impartial to both the taxpayer and the government. Within this context, the Appellate tax conference has been utilized to resolve tax disputes and accomplish the mission of the Activity. The monitoring of Appeals Officers hearing-conferences by supervisory Associate Chiefs is concluded to be a right privileged to management under Sections 11(b) and 12(b) of the Order.

I further conclude that the Respondent did not interfere with, restrain, or coerce an employee in the exercise of rights assured by this Order; or, refuse to consult, confer or negotiate with a labor organization as required by the Order; and, that the Complainant has not sustained its burden of proving by a preponderance of the evidence that the Respondent violated the provisions of Sections 19(a) (1) and (6) of the Order. 3/

Recommendation

Having found from the record 4/ that the Respondent has not engaged in certain conduct prohibited by Sections 19(a) (1) and (6) of Executive Order 11491, as amended I recommend that the Secretary of Labor for Labor Management Relations enter an Order dismissing the Complaint herein in its entirety.

UNITED STATES DEPARTMENT OF LABOR
ASSISTANT SECRETARY FOR LABOR-MANAGEMENT RELATIONS
SUMMARY OF DECISION AND DIRECTION OF ELECTION OF THE ASSISTANT SECRETARY
PURSUANT TO SECTION 6 OF EXECUTIVE ORDER 11491, AS AMENDED

FEDERAL AVIATION ADMINISTRATION,
AIRWAY FACILITIES DIVISION, PACIFIC-ASIA REGION
A/SLMR No. 1130

This case involved a petition filed by the Professional Airways Systems Specialists (PASS) seeking an election in a unit of all employees of the Airway Facilities Division, Pacific-Asia Region. The Activity contended that the unit sought by the PASS is inappropriate under Section 10(b) of the Order as the employees do not share a community of interest separate and distinct from other Federal Aviation Administration (FAA) employees and that such unit would lead to fragmentation and would not promote effective dealings and efficiency of agency operations. It also contended that the only appropriate unit for the subject employees would be a nationwide unit. The Intervenor, American Federation of Government Employees, AFL-CIO, Local 2555 (AFGE), the current exclusive representative of the employees in the claimed unit, contended that the unit remained appropriate and that its relationship with the Activity was effective.

The Assistant Secretary found that the claimed nationwide unit was appropriate for the purpose of exclusive recognition. In this regard, he noted that the employees in such unit share a common mission, common overall supervision, generally similar job classifications and duties, and that they also enjoy uniform personnel policies and practices and labor relations policies established under authority delegated to the Regional Director of the FAA. He also found that such unit would promote effective dealings and efficiency of agency operations, particularly in view of the established bargaining history in the petitioned for unit.

Accordingly, the Assistant Secretary ordered an election in the nationwide unit found appropriate.

Case No. 73-958(RO)

DECISION AND DIRECTION OF ELECTION

Upon a petition duly filed under Section 6 of Executive Order 11491, as amended, a hearing was held before Hearing Officer Dale L. Bennett. The Hearing Officer's rulings made at the hearing are free from prejudicial error and are hereby affirmed.

Upon the entire record in this case the Assistant Secretary finds:

1. The labor organizations involved claim to represent certain employees of the Activity.
2. In its petition, the Petitioner, Professional Airways Systems Specialists, hereinafter called PASS, seeks an election in an existing unit of essentially all professional and nonprofessional employees employed in the Federal Aviation Administration's (FAA) Airway Facilities Division, Pacific-Asia Region, located in the Hawaiian Islands, Guam and American Samoa. The Activity contends that the unit sought is inappropriate under Section 10(b) of the Order as the employees involved do not share a community of interest separate and distinct from other Airway Facilities Division employees and that such a unit would not promote effective dealings and efficiency of agency operations. In this regard, the Activity argues that the only appropriate unit is a nationwide unit which would promote efficiency of agency operations and effective dealings. The Intervenor, the American Federation of Government Employees, AFL-CIO Local 2555, hereinafter called AFGE, which is the current exclusive representative of the employees in the claimed unit, contends that its unit remains appropriate and that its relationship with the Activity remains effective.

The mission of the FAA is to provide a safe and expeditious flow of aircraft in the nation's airspace system. To achieve this mission, the FAA has been organized into five major operating divisions among which is the Airway Facilities Division. The FAA is organized into a headquarters located at Washington, D.C., and 12 geographically defined regions among which is the Pacific-Asia Region. Each FAA Region is headed by a Regional Director and is divided into five major operating divisions, each headed by a chief who reports to his respective Regional Director. The mission of the Airway Facilities Division in the Pacific-Asia Region is to install and maintain the equipment and facilities of the FAA within that Region. To achieve this mission, the division is comprised of three branches, the Program, Planning and Evaluation Branch, the Engineering Establishment Branch, and the Maintenance Operations Branch which are located in the ten sectors of the Region.

The history of bargaining at the Activity reveals that the AFGE was certified on May 25, 1974, as the exclusive representative of a unit of all professional and nonprofessional employees employed in the Airway Facilities Division, Pacific-Asia Region, excluding employees engaged in Federal personnel work in other than a purely clerical capacity, management officials, guards, and supervisors as defined in the Order. At the hearing, the parties stipulated that the Activity and the AFGE entered into a one-year negotiated agreement in 1975 which agreement was annually renewable. ^{1/} On July 21, 1977, the PASS filed the instant petition for the employees in the existing unit exclusively represented by the AFGE.

The record reveals that there are approximately 255 employees in the petitioned for unit, the majority of whom are classified as Electronic Technicians, GS-0856 series. These employees are responsible for the installation and maintenance of all airways airspace system facilities within the geographic bounds of the Activity. The qualifications for such employees are established on a nationwide basis by the FAA and all employees engaged in such functions must be certified based upon the standardized qualifications. Further, the handbooks utilized by employees have been developed nationally by the FAA to provide uniformity in the maintenance of equipment. As a result, the job skills and duties of the employees in the sought unit are substantially similar to those similarly classified employees in other regions throughout the United States.

^{1/} On December 18, 1975, the Assistant Secretary issued his Decision and Direction of Elections in Federal Aviation Administration and Federal Aviation Administration, Eastern Region, 5 A/SLMR 776, A/SLMR No. 600 (1975), finding that either a nationwide, a region-wide or a sectorwide unit of Airway Facilities Division employees may be appropriate for the purpose of exclusive recognition under the Order. At the time of the filing of the petitions which resulted in the Decision and Direction of Elections in A/SLMR No. 600, employees in the petitioned for unit herein were included in the AFGE's exclusively recognized unit which was subject to the above-noted negotiated agreement. As the petitions were untimely filed with respect to the AFGE's unit, such unit was expressly excluded from the elections ordered in A/SLMR No. 600.

The parties stipulated that the FAA has a policy of delegating authority with regard to personnel and labor relations matters to the lowest possible level. The authority for such matters has been delegated to the Regional Director of the Pacific-Asia Region subject to FAA and Civil Service Commission guidelines. The area of consideration for promotions involving technicians is frequently determined by the number of qualified applicants available. Thus, while the area of consideration may be confined to an individual sector, it may also be regionwide or nationwide in scope. Consideration for reductions-in-force is generally regionwide, although it may be larger in the case of large scale reductions.

Based on the foregoing circumstances, I find that the petitioned for regionwide unit remains appropriate for the purpose of exclusive recognition within the meaning of Section 10(b) of the Order. Thus, I find that the unit sought herein continues to constitute a comprehensive grouping of employees who share a clear and identifiable community of interest. In this regard, as noted above, all employees of the Activity share in a common mission, common overall supervision, generally similar job classifications and duties, and they also enjoy uniform personnel and labor relations policies and practices established under authority delegated to the Regional Director of the Pacific-Asia Region. Further, noting that the petitioned for unit is coextensive with the regionwide unit represented by the AFGE since 1974, that there is no evidence of any change in its scope and character since its certification, and that there is an established bargaining history between the parties with respect to such unit, I find that the petitioned for unit will promote effective dealings and efficiency of agency operations.

Accordingly, I find that the following unit is appropriate for the purpose of exclusive recognition under Section 10(b) of Executive Order 11491, as amended:

All professional and nonprofessional employees employed in the Airway Facilities Division, Pacific-Asia Region, in the Hawaiian Islands, Guam and American Samoa; excluding employees engaged in Federal personnel work other than a purely clerical capacity, management officials, guards, and supervisors as defined in the Order.

As stated above, the unit found appropriate includes professional employees. However, the Assistant Secretary is prohibited by Section 10(b)(4) of the Order from including professional employees in a unit with nonprofessional employees unless a majority of the professional employees votes for inclusion in such a unit. Accordingly, the desires of the professional employees as to inclusion in a unit with nonprofessional employees must be ascertained. I shall, therefore, direct that separate elections be conducted in the following groups:

Voting Group (a): All professional employees of the Airway Facilities Division, Pacific-Asia Region, in the Hawaiian Islands, Guam and American Samoa; excluding all nonprofessional employees, management officials, employees engaged in Federal personnel work in other than a purely clerical capacity, guards, and supervisors as defined in the Order.

Voting Group (b): All nonprofessional employees of the Airway Facilities Division, Pacific-Asia Region, in the Hawaiian Islands, Guam and American Samoa; excluding all professional employees, management officials, employees engaged in Federal personnel work in other than a purely clerical capacity, guards, and supervisors as defined in the Order.

Employees in the nonprofessional voting group (b) will be polled whether they desire to be represented for the purpose of exclusive recognition by the Professional Airways Systems Specialists; the American Federation of Government Employees, AFL-CIO, Local 2555; or by neither of these labor organizations.

Employees in the professional voting group (a) will be asked two questions on their ballots: (1) whether or not they wish to be included with the nonprofessional employees for the purpose of exclusive recognition, and (2) whether they wish to be represented for the purpose of exclusive recognition by the Professional Airways Systems Specialists, the American Federation of Government Employees, AFL-CIO, Local 2555; or by neither of these labor organizations. In the event that a majority of the valid votes of voting group (a) are cast in favor of inclusion in the same unit as nonprofessional employees, the ballots of voting group (a) shall be combined with those of voting group (b).

Unless a majority of the valid votes of voting group (a) are cast for inclusion in the same unit as nonprofessional employees, they will be taken to have indicated their desire to constitute a separate unit, and an appropriate certification will be issued by the Area Administrator indicating whether the Professional Airways Systems Specialists; the American Federation of Government Employees, AFL-CIO, Local 2555; or neither of these labor organizations was selected by the professional employee unit.

The unit determination in the subject case is based, in part, then, upon the results of election among the professional employees. However, I will now make the following findings in regard to the appropriate unit:

1. If a majority of the professional employees does not vote for inclusion in the same unit as the nonprofessional employees, I find the following units appropriate for the purpose of exclusive recognition within the meaning of Section 10 of the Order:

(a) All professional employees of the Airway Facilities Division, Pacific-Asia Region, in the Hawaiian Islands, Guam and American Samoa; excluding all nonprofessional employees, management officials, employees engaged in Federal personnel work in other than a purely clerical capacity, guards, and supervisors as defined in the Order.

(b) All nonprofessional employees of the Airway Facilities Division, Pacific-Asia Region, in the Hawaiian Islands, Guam and American Samoa; excluding all professional employees, management officials, employees engaged in Federal personnel work in other than a purely clerical capacity, guards, and supervisors as defined in the Order.

2. If a majority of the professional employees votes for inclusion in the same unit as the nonprofessional employees, I find the following unit appropriate for the purpose of exclusive recognition within the meaning of Section 10 of the Order:

All professional and nonprofessional employees of the Airway Facilities Division, Pacific-Asia Region, in the Hawaiian Islands, Guam and American Samoa; excluding management officials, employees engaged in Federal personnel work in other than a purely clerical capacity, guards, and supervisors as defined in the Order.

DIRECTION OF ELECTION

An election by secret ballot shall be conducted among the employees in the unit found appropriate as soon as possible but not later than 60 days from the date below. The appropriate Area Administrator shall supervise the election, subject to the Assistant Secretary's Regulations. Eligible to vote are those in the unit who were employed during the payroll immediately preceding the date below including employees who did not work during that period because they were out ill, or on vacation, or on furlough, including those in the military service who appear in person at the polls. Ineligible to vote are employees who quit or who were discharged for cause since the designated payroll period and who have not been rehired or reinstated before the election date. Those eligible shall vote whether they desire to be represented for the purpose of exclusive recognition by the Professional Airways Systems Specialists; the American Federation of Government Employees, AFL-CIO, Local 2555; or neither.

SUMMARY OF DECISION AND ORDER OF THE ASSISTANT SECRETARY
PURSUANT TO SECTION 6 OF EXECUTIVE ORDER 11491, AS AMENDED

Francis X. Burkhardt, Assistant Secretary of Labor for Labor-Management Relations

VETERANS ADMINISTRATION
WASHINGTON, D.C.
A/SLMR No. 1131

This case involved an unfair labor practice complaint filed by the National Federation of Federal Employees (NFFE), Ind., Local Union 1631 (Complainant) alleging that the Respondent violated Section 19(a)(1) of the Order by certain of its statements made to Lena Hall, the Complainant's President, at meetings during which patient care was discussed. The Respondent contended that whatever statements were made must be considered in their context, i.e., meetings wherein Hall's disclosure of confidential patient information was questioned; that the disclosure of confidential information was improper and therefore unprotected activity; and that patient care as a retained management right is not a proper concern of the Complainant in the framework of personnel policies, practices or working conditions.

During 1976, nurses at the Veterans Administration Hospital in Amarillo, Texas, who are unit employees, became concerned about irregularities in patient care. On October 13, 1976, the NFFE's Local President discussed the matter with the Hospital Director and was advised an investigation would be conducted. On October 15, the Local President expressed the same concern with NFFE's National Office and forwarded a list of patients' names and diagnoses. On November 1, and again on November 4, representatives of the Veterans Administration held meetings with the Local President wherein the statements which are alleged to be violative of the Order were made.

Based upon credibility resolutions, the Administrative Law Judge found that certain statements were, in fact, made at the November 1 and 4 meetings, and that these statements had a restraining effect on the Local President's right to discuss patient care as it affected unit employees, a matter which he found to be a proper concern of the Complainant. He further found that certain remarks made at the November 4 meeting were violative of Section 19(a)(2) of the Order as they might tend to discourage membership in a labor organization.

In the Assistant Secretary's view, patient care can relate to the terms and conditions of unit employees, and to the extent that it does, intra-union communication with respect to such matters is a protected activity. In the instant case, however, the Assistant Secretary found the communication, which contained patients' names and diagnoses, to be confidential in nature and its disclosure by the Complainant to its National Office was, therefore, unprotected.

However, in the particular circumstances of this case, the Assistant Secretary found that the Respondent's statements to the effect that patient care was not a concern of the Complainant, and, that the nurses should not have sought the assistance of their exclusive representative, to be violative of Section 19(a)(1). In this regard, the Assistant Secretary noted, as did the Administrative Law Judge, that the Respondent made no attempt, in either of the meetings, to restrict its comments only to the alleged violations of the Privacy Act and other regulations concerning the confidentiality of patient records. Rather, the Respondent made broad, general remarks restricting the Complainant's legitimate concern with patient care, generally, which had a restraining effect on the exercise of rights guaranteed to the Complainant and to unit employees. Under these circumstances, the Assistant Secretary found that the Respondent violated Section 19(a)(1) of the Order. However, contrary to the Administrative Law Judge, the Assistant Secretary found no basis for a Section 19(a)(2) violation in this regard, as such allegation was beyond the scope of the instant complaint, and not properly before the Assistant Secretary.

Accordingly, the Assistant Secretary ordered the Respondent to cease and desist from the conduct found violative of the Order, and to take certain affirmative actions.

DECISION AND ORDER

On June 21, 1978, Administrative Law Judge Ben H. Walley issued his Recommended Decision and Order in the above-entitled proceeding, finding that the Respondent had engaged in certain unfair labor practices and recommending that it cease and desist therefrom, and take certain affirmative actions as set forth in the attached Administrative Law Judge's Recommended Decision and Order. Thereafter, the Respondent filed exceptions with respect to the Administrative Law Judge's Recommended Decision and Order.

The Assistant Secretary has reviewed the rulings of the Administrative Law Judge made at the hearing and finds that no prejudicial error was committed. The rulings are hereby affirmed. Upon consideration of the Administrative Law Judge's Recommended Decision and Order and the entire record in the subject case, including the Respondent's exceptions, I hereby adopt the Administrative Law Judge's findings, conclusions and recommendations, to the extent consistent herewith.

The Complainant, which represents a unit of nurses at the Veterans Administration Hospital in Amarillo, Texas, alleged that the Respondent violated Section 19(a)(1) of the Order by the statements made to Lena Hall, the Complainant's President, at meetings during which the topic of patient care was discussed. The Respondent took the position that not all of the statements which were alleged to have been made were actually made; that whatever statements were made must be considered in the context of the questioning of Hall regarding her improper and, therefore, unprotected disclosure of confidential patient information; and that patient care, as a retained management right, is not a proper concern of the Complainant within the framework of employee personnel policies, practices or working conditions.

The record reveals that during 1976, the nurses became concerned about irregularities in patient care. On October 13, 1976, Hall met with the Hospital Director to discuss the problem and was advised that an investigation would be conducted. Thereafter, on October 15, Hall sent a letter to the National Office of the National Federation of Federal Employees (NFFE) expressing the same concern with respect to patient care and enclosing a list of patients' names and diagnoses. On November 1, the Hospital's Personnel Officer called Hall to a meeting to ascertain whether she had disclosed patient information to the NFFE National Office, and, if so, to advise her that such disclosure was improper. He then made a comment to the effect that patient care was not a concern of the Complainant and that because the Complainant had engaged in unprotected activity, he would explore the possibility of filing an unfair labor practice complaint. He further added that there had possibly been a violation of the Privacy Act based upon the disclosure of confidential information.

Subsequently, on November 4, an investigator from the Respondent's central office spoke with Hall during the course of his investigation into the irregularities in patient care. The investigator questioned, among other things, why the nurses had not gone through proper agency channels in reporting such irregularities. The parties are in dispute as to certain other alleged remarks made at this meeting.

The Administrative Law Judge initially determined that patient care was a proper concern for both parties and that it could, in fact, have an adverse impact on the working conditions of unit employees. He then found that the Hospital Personnel Officer's statements made at the November 1 meeting were violative of Section 19(a)(1) of the Order, insofar as they restrained Hall in the exercise of her rights to discuss patient care as it affected the working conditions of unit employees. Similarly, and based upon his credibility resolution, he found that certain statements made at the November 4 meeting, which were essentially critical of the nurses for having sought the assistance of their exclusive representative, were not only violative of Section 19(a)(1), but also were violative of Section 19(a)(2) of the Order, on the basis that such statements might tend to discourage membership in a labor organization. ^{1/} Finally, the Administrative Law Judge declined to pass on the question whether the Complainant had improperly disclosed confidential patient information, as he determined such issue was not properly before him.

^{1/} The complaint herein, which was limited to a Section 19(a)(1) allegation, was originally dismissed by the Regional Administrator, but was subsequently remanded by the Assistant Secretary pursuant to a request for review of the Regional Administrator's dismissal action. On remand, the Regional Administrator, for the first time, raised the possibility of a Section 19(a)(2) violation. The Complainant sought to amend its complaint in this regard at the hearing and was so permitted by the Administrative Law Judge.

In agreement with the Administrative Law Judge, I find that matters concerning patient care can relate to the terms and conditions of employment of unit employees such as the nurses involved herein and to the extent that it does, patient care becomes a legitimate concern of the nurses' exclusive representative. Accordingly, intra-union communications with respect to such matters may constitute, in certain circumstances, a protected activity under the Order. In the instant case, however, I find that the information transmitted by the Complainant to its National Office was confidential in nature, and its disclosure was, therefore, not a protected activity. Thus, in my view, the information communicated herein by the Complainant's President went beyond the bounds of the legitimate concern of Complainant in divulging the confidential medical history of identified patients.

However, in the particular circumstances of this case, I find, in agreement with the Administrative Law Judge, that the statement made on November 1 by the Personnel Officer to Complainant's President, that patient care was not her concern, interfered with employee rights assured by the Order and was, therefore, independently violative of Section 19(a)(1) of the Order. Similarly, the statements found by the Administrative Law Judge to have been made by an Agency representative at the November 4 meeting, which were critical of the nurses for having sought the assistance of their exclusive representative, were also violative of Section 19(a)(1) of the Order. In so finding, I note, as did the Administrative Law Judge, that the Respondent's representatives made no attempt, in either of the meetings, to restrict their comments only to the alleged violations of the Privacy Act and other regulations covering confidentiality of patient records. Rather, its representatives made broad, general remarks restricting the Complainant's legitimate concern with patient care, which in my opinion had a restraining effect on the exercise of the Complainant's and unit employees' rights as guaranteed by the Order. Under these circumstances, I find that the Respondent's conduct violated Section 19(a)(1) of the Order. However, contrary to the Administrative Law Judge, I find no basis upon which to conclude that the Respondent's statements at the November 4 meeting were violative of Section 19(a)(2) of the Order as such allegation was beyond the scope of the complaint herein, and was not properly before the Assistant Secretary.

Recommended Decision and Order

This case arises under Executive Order 11491, as amended, and on January 7, 1977, Local 1631, National Federation of Federal Employees, Independent, 5118 Chisolm Trail, Amarillo, Texas 79109, hereafter referred to as Complainant, filed a Complaint against Veterans Administration, 810 Vermont Avenue, N.W., Washington, D.C., Thomas J. Fitzgerald, M.D., the person to contact, hereafter referred to as the Respondent, said Complaint alleging an unfair labor practice because of conduct alleged to be violative of Executive Order 11491, as amended, section 19(a), subsection (1), hereafter referred to as the Order.

The substance of the Complaint was Ms. Lena Hall, President of NFFE Local 1631, was called into conference by Mr. Kenneth Gossett, Personnel Officer at Amarillo VA Hospital, and was confronted with a "rumor" that she had contacted NFFE, National, requesting an investigation into "patient care" at the hospital; that "patient care" was none of her business and was not a protected right under the Executive Order; and that he, Mr. Gossett, felt it necessary to advise the Director to file an unfair labor practice against her.

In addition, and some four days later, Ms. Hall was contacted by a Dr. Hughes from VA Central Office and allegedly "began the conversation by stating that she had been very stupid to take the problem relating to patient care to the Union." He expressed the probability of a suit against VA for sending this information to the Union. (Background for the charge will be hereafter set out in the Findings of Fact).

The Area Administrator investigated the Complaint and filed his report with the Regional Administrator and on March 17, 1977, the Regional Administrator notified Counsel for Complainant that release of the information in question "is not an action protected by the Order" and dismissed the Complaint in its entirety (Asst. Sec. Ex. 6(a)(1)). Promptly, and on March 28, 1977, Counsel for Complainant appealed the dismissal Order to the Assistant Secretary for Labor-Management Relations (Asst. Sec. Ex. 6(a)(2)), and on September 2, 1977, the Assistant Secretary reversed the Regional Administrator's dismissal order.

Therefore, inasmuch as it appeared there was a reasonable basis for the Complaint and no satisfactory settlement of the difference between the parties could be found, on September 26, 1977, the Regional Administrator advised the parties that he was going to and did issue Notice of Hearing to be held in Amarillo, Texas, on November 2, 1977.

In referring this Complaint for hearing and disposition, the Office of the Regional Administrator, LMSA, Kansas City Region, requested evidence and testimony be adduced on the following issues:

1. Does the local union officer have the right to communicate with the parent organization concerning hospital care? Is this a protected activity assured under Section 1(a) of the Order?

2. Did the Agency's interference with the rights of the individual constitute an independent violation of Section 19(a)(1). Furthermore, if the interference took the form of discrimination against the local union officer in regard to hiring, tenure, promotion or other conditions of employment, would this not also constitute a violation of Section 19(a)(2).

Further, the parties were permitted to develop and offer any evidence relevant to the allegations contained in the Complaint.

Since the Regional Administrator raised the question as to a possible violation of section 19(a)(2) of the Order, Complainant did, at the beginning of the hearing, move to amend the Complaint to include a charge of violation of section 19(a)(2). For reasons hereafter set out in the Findings of Fact and Conclusions of Law, the motion was granted over objections duly made.

At the hearing held, the parties were afforded full opportunity to be heard, to offer, examine, and cross-examine witnesses and to introduce evidence considered relevant to the aforesaid issues and other issues considered by them to be relevant to their position in the premises. After hearing the testimony of the witnesses and observing their demeanor, having received the exhibits and the transcripts, having considered the post-hearing briefs filed herein, and based upon the entire record, I make the following findings of fact, conclusions and recommendations.

Findings of Fact

1. Inasmuch as there is evidence of record, via exhibits, that should not be further publicized, and especially since I conclude that much of that evidence is not relevant to the stated issues and specific identification of such evidence is not necessary to a resolution of the issues involved, I shall make only such general references as are considered necessary to support the conclusions drawn therefrom.

2. Although no evidence was offered, I find and conclude from a review of the total record and the actions and responses of the parties hereto, that at all times material to the issues here involved Local 1631 National Federation of Federal Employees, Independent, Amarillo, Texas, was the exclusive representative of the employees in the unit involved and had the responsibilities imposed upon it by section 10(e) of the Order; that Ms. Lena Hall, RN, the employee most directly involved, was President of Local 1631 which, although "...independent", was affiliated with the National Federation of Federal Employees.

3. Ms. Lena Hall, RN, and President of NFFE Local 1631, VA Hospital, Amarillo, and other nurses, all employees of the hospital, became concerned and discussed patient care and their ability to discharge their duties to the patients as they were affected by the scheduling of surgery at the hospital. A decision was made to assemble the specific information about incidents of which they were concerned and have Ms. Hall present it to Mr. Leon E. Edman, Director, VA Hospital, (hereafter Mr. Edman), for his information, investigation and action.

4. The information about some nineteen (19) patients, including name, diagnoses, treatment and results, was assembled, in writing, and on October 13, 1976, was presented to Mr. Edman by Ms. Hall and Mrs. Joan Houchin. He examined the material, realized the impact of the presentation and promised a full inquiry. Inasmuch as Dr. George Smith, Chief of Staff, was going to be out until October 21, and this fact was made known to them, Mr. Edman requested time and "I understood they agreed to let me" have the time. But, after their departure, Mr. Edman decided to "get on with it" and talk to Dr. Pastma, Chief of Medicine, who was acting Chief of Staff. Dr. Pastma desired to talk with Dr. Scott and Dr. Goding, each on the staff, which he did the following day. Once discussion had begun, concern arose and unrest became evident.

5. A couple of days after the information had been presented to Mr. Edman and he had begun his investigation (although he had requested of Ms. Hall time, implying that he would wait until Dr. Smith returned on October 21), a doctor friend (not otherwise identified for fear of reprisal) contacted Ms. Hall and she testified that he said "... that I was going to lose my job, to waste no time, to get someone down here from the central office." Whereupon, Ms. Hall, accepting advice from her friend, made contact with her national representative and further contacts by him resulted in advice to transmit to the National President of NFFE a request for help in the investigation. This request was made on October 15, 1976, (Comp. Ex. #2), and included a copy of the information furnished Mr. Edman two days earlier.

6. On October 20, 1976, Dr. Nathan T. Walkomir, President of NFFE, transmitted to the Veterans Administration the information received by him from Ms. Hall, which was acknowledged by Dr. John D. Chase, Chief Medical Director, on November 5, 1976, and he advised that further information would be furnished when the matter had been looked into (Comp. Ex. #3). During the time from transmittal to acknowledging receipt of the "information", the investigation was in progress.

7(a). On November 1, 1976, Mr. Kenneth Gossett, Personnel Officer, VA Hospital, Amarillo, Texas, (hereafter Mr. Gossett), asked Ms. Hall to come to his office, which she did. Since the testimony and exhibits reflect two views as to what transpired at this meeting which may be considered contradictory, I find it necessary to discuss them fully.

(b). Ms. Hall testified that when Mr. Gossett called her into the office, on November 1, 1976, he said he had heard rumors that I had taken this matter to National headquarters and when I confirmed it, he said "something to the effect that I think it's fair to tell you that I am going to advise Mr. Edman to file an Unfair Labor Practice against you ... that our actions were not protected under the Executive Order, that patient care was none of our business." (Tr. p. 123). At this juncture it is significant to observe that the "meeting" began by a claim of fairness in informing Ms. Hall that he (Mr. Gossett) intended to advise Mr. Edman "to file an unfair labor practice against you." Too, I observe that the record contains no evidence of any effort by Mr. Gossett, or Dr. Hughes (whose meeting will be hereafter discussed) to explain, discuss or attempt to distinguish the difference, if any, to Ms. Hall the acts and/or actions involved, i.e., the "contacts" actually made with the National President and/or the "information" transmitted to him. Substantially the same information appears in evidence as a memorandum in diary form prepared by Ms. Hall on December 18, 1976, and under daily entry of "Monday, November 1st." The entry concluded: "Mr. Gossett asked me to "forget what he had said and said that he had had a hard day." (Asst. Sec. Ex. II 3-A(1)). This exhibit was attached to and in support of the formal complaint filed herein on January 7, 1977. The testimony elicited from Ms. Hall at the hearing again asserted that the memorandum accurately reflected her memory of what transpired.

(c). Mr. Gossett, testifying on direct examination and in response to inquiry as to the purpose of his conference with Ms. Hall on November 1, 1976, said:

A. For two reasons, well, actually three; one is to confirm the rumor or the information that I had received that she had mailed the information given to Mr. Edman to her national office; secondly, was to advise her that in my opinion, that it was not a protected activity under the Executive Order to be involved in patient care. And in regard to this, I did mention to her that I would have to look at the Executive Order and look at the evidence, the information I received from her to see if there possibly had been a violation of the Executive Order. And thirdly, which she did not mention in her letter, I did mention to her the possibility of there could have been a violation of the Privacy Act. (Tr. pgs 244-45).

In further interrogation it was fully developed that Mr. Gossett was considering whether an unfair labor practice would be appropriate, and upon inquiry as to Ms. Hall's reaction, he said:

A. It was my impression that Miss Hall became -- it shocked her. She mentioned at that time I remember vividly that this would be contrary to what Mr. Edman had preached or his philosophy of labor relations and of trying to get along and cooperate with unions. It did upset her. I tried to get off the subject as soon as I could.

(d). The foregoing views have differences in specifics but not in substance. Ms. Hall says that Mr. Gossett said he was going to advise Mr. Edman to file an unfair labor practice against you. Mr. Gossett said he told her that he was going to look into it and see if there possibly had been a violation of the Order. Both agree that Mr. Gossett said that it (expressed concern about patient care) was not a protected activity under the Order. Ms. Hall recalls that Mr. Gossett said "that patient care was none of our business" and Mr. Gossett recalls having said, "in my opinion, that it was not a protected activity under the Executive Order to be involved in patient care." Mr. Gossett concluded by mentioning the possibility that she had violated the Privacy Act. This conclusion did not appear to impress Ms. Hall because she did not become aroused about this possibility until a subsequent meeting with another witness to be later discussed.

8(a). On November 4, 1977, Dr. Carl Wilson Hughes, Director of Surgery, Department of Medicine and Surgery, Veterans' Administration, Washington, D.C., (hereafter Dr. Hughes), while in the course of making an investigation of the conditions raised by the information transmitted to Veterans' Administration, 1/ contacted Ms. Hall, the hour being unknown but assumed to be about 3:00 p.m., and since the testimony and exhibits admit of two views as to what transpired at this confrontation, I find it necessary to discuss them fully.

(b). Ms. Hall testified that when she entered the room where Dr. Hughes was, (other occupants not of record)

"... one of the first thing he says to me was I hope you girls realize how stupid you are for taking this to a union, and the implication was that he didn't realize that it was our union, that we had the right to go to the union.

At that time, he mentioned the Privacy Act and chastised me for having violated the Privacy Act and said that we might get sued as a result of this. And I don't remember all of it." (Tr. p. 128).

She went on to say, "I was very -- I felt very threatened that suddenly it was of great magnitude", when informed about the Privacy Act. Basically, her testimony corroborated the memorandum documented on November 6, 1976, and compiled on November 18, 1976, and appearing as A/S Exhibit 4A.

1/ The purpose of the investigation being made by Dr. Hughes was not the "basis of the Complaint" filed herein. Rather, his investigation was into the "quality of patient care" that had been raised and identified by the "information" transmitted by Ms. Hall to the President of National Federation of Federal Employees and, by him, transmitted to Veterans Administration. It was the "nature" of this "information" that was the basis of the expressed concern for possibilities of violations of the Privacy Act and violations of statutes and regulations concerning confidentiality. This question is not properly before me and I shall not discuss it beyond the necessity to construct the setting within which the alleged remarks were made as the basis of the complaint filed.

(c). On November 9, 1976, Dr. Hughes prepared a memorandum to the Assistant Director and Chief Medical Director for Operations, reporting in detail the results of his investigation, which contained reference to his encounter with Ms. Hall only to the following extent:

When the nurse who signed the complaint as President of the Union was questioned, she stressed that her only interest was in good care, that she was medical nurse representing other nurses and that they were not trying to serve as a peer review group. When asked if she did not fear being in violation of the Privacy Act for sending patients names and diagnoses to a union, she stated that she did so on the advice of Union legal counsel. (A/S Ex. 15).

On direct examination as a witness for Respondent, Dr. Hughes denied making "any accusatory remarks" to Ms. Hall or about the union. He did, however, admit making inquiry as to why she had not gone through "professional channels" in dealing with "patient care" and expressed fear that going outside of channels would constitute a violation of the Privacy Act.

9. Based upon the testimony of Ms. Hall; Mr. Gosset and Dr. Hughes, having observed the demeanor of each of these witnesses, and having carefully examined the transcript and exhibits admitted, I find and conclude that the version given by Ms. Hall as to what acutally transpired at the meeting between her and Mr. Gossett on November 1, 1976, is more credible. I find and conclude that Ms. Hall had a right to and did understand Mr. Gossett to tell her he was going to advise Mr. Edman to file an unfair labor practice; that her actions were not protected by the Executive Order; and that "patient care" was none of her business. The remarks were accusatory, not explanatory of the problem. However, I do find and conclude that Mr. Gossett did advise Ms. Hall that there had possibly been a violation of the Privacy Act. Likewise, with reference to the meeting with Dr. Hughes on November 4, 1976, I find and conclude that the version given by Ms. Hall to be more credible. I find and conclude that Ms. Hall had a right to and did interpret Dr. Hughes' remarks to be critical of the "girls" in "taking this to the union" and questioning their right to do so; that a violation of the Privacy Act was involved; and some legal action may result. The remarks, in the context of the meeting, were more accusatory than explanatory. There was no effort to separate the subjects of the contact with National NFFE. The record is replete with references to possible violations of the Privacy Act and confidentiality. As a matter of fact, the principal thrust of Respondent's defense is possible violations of privacy and confidentiality and that NFFE Local 1631 had no business being concerned with patient care.

10. In the instant case, Complainant has used the term "patient care" to claim justification for the initial action taken herein, i.e., making written request of the Director for an investigation of "patient care" and subsequently thereto furnishing him a list of particular incidents, and making written request to the President, NFFE, for assistance in obtaining an investigation of "patient care", and transmitting to him a copy of the "list of particular incidents." It has been used by Respondent as a defense to the charge of an unfair labor practice, contending that "patient care" is a function reserved to management and is not an activity protected by Executive Order 11491; that it is not a concern for members of NFFE Local 1631. I cannot accept the contentions of either party to such a restricted use.

I have found no medical or legal definition of the term "patient care." I do not consider that bad. To the contrary, it suggests to me that it is two simple words, each having a common, easily understood and widely accepted meaning not made difficult or mystic by using them jointly. It is something that all parties involved can understand. While the term has not been legally or medically defined, each separate word has an acceptable, widely understood meaning.

"Patient" is defined in an ordinary desk dictionary to mean: one under medical treatment. See Brown v. Moore, 247 F.2d 711, 720. "Care" is defined in the same dictionary to mean: Protection; supervision; charge; in the care of a nurse. See Mansfield v. Hyde, 112 C.A. 2d 133, 245 F.2d 577, 581. "Patient care" is not exclusive. To the contrary it is all inclusive. Clearly, "patient care" is a proper concern for all the parties hereto, to be expressed within proper channels. 2/ The nurses had discussed "patient care" as it affected their duties to the patients and had jointly concluded that they should express that concern to Mr. Edmon, the Director, as they had an admitted right to do. Inasmuch as I find that "patient care" is a proper concern of all parties hereto, it clearly becomes a function that adversely affects working conditions if not given proper consideration by either or both parties.

Conclusions of Law

Those portions of section 19(a) of the Order which are pertinent to the issues raised herein provide that Agency management shall not (1) interfere with, restrain, or coerce an employee in the exercise of the rights as assured by the Order, or (2) encourage or discourage membership in a labor organization by discrimination in regard to hiring, tenure, promotion, or other conditions of employment.

Section 11(a) of the Order creates a mutual duty upon an agency and a union to negotiate in good faith in respect to personnel policies, practices and matters affecting working conditions so far as may be appropriate under applicable laws and regulations, including impact on employees as a result of "policies and practices" properly reserved unto management.

Section 11(b) provides that in prescribing regulations relating to personnel policies, practices and working conditions an agency shall have due regard for the obligation imposed by paragraph (a) of this section. In addition, section 12(a) establishes that any agreement between an agency and a labor organization is subject to existing or future laws and regulations, by published agency policies and regulations in existence at the time the agreement was approved.

However, assuming arguendo that "patient care" could be or has been reserved unto Respondent, it is well established that even as to excepted or reserved areas of management, there is an obligation to bargain regarding the implementing procedures which it employs in respect to these areas. United Air Force Electronics Systems Division (AFSC)-and-Local 975, National Federation of Federal Employees, A/SLMR No. 571; Department of Navy, Dallas Naval Air Station-and-American Federation of Government Employees Local Union 2427, AFL-CIO, A/SLMR No. 510. The requirement of negotiation as to the implementation and impact of personnel policies and practices and matters affecting working conditions relates only to changes therein. (Department of the Navy, Mare Island Naval Shipyard and Federal Employees Metal Trades Council, AFL-CIO, A/SLMR No. 736) or additions thereto. (Section 11(d) of the Order). Army and Air Force Exchange Service, Pacific Exchange System, A/SLMR No. 451; Federal Railroad Administration, A/SLMR No. 418.

In the instant case I have found and concluded that "patient care" was a matter of proper concern for all of the parties hereto; that if not given proper consideration by all parties hereto it would adversely affect working conditions; and that Ms. Hall, as an individual employee of the unit and a President of NFFE Local 1631, had every right under section 10(e) of the Order to make request of and have a meeting with Respondent for the purpose of discussing "patient care" and how it affected members of Local 1631. Such meetings as were held with Ms. Hall by both Mr. Gossett and Dr. Hughes were "formal meetings" within the meaning of section 10(e) of the Order, and NASA, Johnson Space Center, FLRC No. 74A-95 (1975), and the right of Ms. Hall to contact the National President of NFFE is too elementary to require the citation of any authority. 3/

Based upon the aforesaid findings of fact and conclusions of law, I find and conclude that Respondent by the manner in which the meeting by Mr. Gossett on November 1, 1976, and the manner in which Dr. Hughes on November 4, 1976, were conducted, did interfere with and restrain Ms. Hall, President of Local 1631, NFFE, in her rights and responsibilities to discuss "patient care" as it affected the working conditions of unit employees and their rights assured by the Order and was violative of section 19(a)(1) of the Order. I further find that the manner in which Dr. Hughes approached Ms. Hall and the remarks made would tend to discourage membership in a labor organization, implying that the desired results could only be obtained through "professional channels", and was violative of section 19(a)(2) of the Order. This conduct discourages the use of the bargaining procedures of labor-management relations assured by section 10(e) of the Order. Therefore, I find and conclude,

3/ I renew my efforts to avoid drawing any conclusions as to the propriety of transmitting the "information" alluded to in my caveat in note 1. This conclusion is limited to the right to make proper contact for help in representing the Local and its members at a meeting concerning working conditions as affected by "patient care."

within the facts of this case and conclusions of law set out above, that the answers to all of the questions identified as the "issues" in this case are in the affirmative.

Recommendations

Upon the basis of the foregoing findings of fact and conclusions of law and pursuant to section 6(b) of Executive Order 11491, as amended, and section 203.23 of the rules and regulations, I recommend that the Assistant Secretary of Labor for Labor-Management Relations adopt the following Order designed to effectuate the policies of Executive Order 11491, as amended.

(c). In any like manner, interfering with, restraining, or coercing its employees in the exercise of rights assured by Executive Order 11491, as amended.

The Director shall take reasonable steps to insure that such notices are not altered, defaced, or covered by any other material.

DECISION AND DIRECTION OF ELECTION

Upon a petition duly filed under Section 6 of Executive Order 11491, as amended, a hearing was held before Hearing Officer Paul W. Hall. The Hearing Officer's rulings made at the hearing are free from prejudicial error and are hereby affirmed.

Upon the entire record in this case, including a brief submitted by the Activity, the Assistant Secretary finds:

1. The labor organizations involved claim to represent certain employees of the Activity.
2. In its petition, the Petitioner, Professional Airways Systems Specialists, hereinafter called PASS, seeks an election in a unit of all nonprofessional "Class Act" (GS) and Wage Grade (WG) employees of the Federal Aviation Administration assigned to the Oklahoma City Airway Facilities Sector located at the Wiley Post Airport, Bethany, Oklahoma. The Activity contends that the unit sought is inappropriate under Section 10(b) of the Order as the employees involved do not share a community of interest separate and distinct from the other employees within the Southwest Region of the Federal Aviation Administration (FAA) and that such unit would lead to fragmentation and would not promote effective dealings and efficiency of agency operations. The Intervenor, Federal Aviation Science

This case involved a petition filed by the Professional Airways Systems Specialists (PASS) seeking an election in a unit of all unrepresented, nonprofessional employees of the Oklahoma City Airway Facilities Sector, Wiley Post Airport, Bethany, Oklahoma. The Activity contended that the unit sought is inappropriate under Section 10(b) of the Order as the employees involved do not share a community of interest separate and distinct from other Federal Aviation Administration employees and that such unit would lead to fragmentation and would not promote effective dealings and efficiency of agency operations. The Intervenor, the Federal Aviation Science and Technological Association, National Association of Government Employees (FASTA/NAGE) contended that the employees in the petitioned for unit should be included in the existing nationwide unit represented by the NAGE.

The Assistant Secretary found that the claimed unit was appropriate for the purpose of exclusive recognition. He concluded the claimed employees shared a clear and identifiable community of interest and that the unit would promote effective dealings and efficiency of agency operations. In this regard, he noted that the petitioned for unit was appropriate both as a sectorwide unit and also as a residual regionwide unit.

Accordingly, the Assistant Secretary ordered an election in the unit found appropriate, ordering that if the FASTA/NAGE were selected by the employees in the claimed unit, the unit would be added to the FASTA/NAGE's nationwide unit.

and Technological Association, National Association of Government Employees, hereinafter called FASTA/NAGE, takes the position that the proposed sector-wide unit is inappropriate and that the petitioned for employees should be included in the FASTA/NAGE's nationwide unit.

The mission of the FAA is to provide a safe and expeditious flow of aircraft in the national airspace system. The Southwest Region of the FAA is headed by a Regional Director. Under his jurisdiction is, among other components, the Southwest Region's Airway Facilities Division, which is composed of four branches: the Program and Planning Branch, the Environmental Engineering Branch, the Maintenance Operations Branch, and the Electronic Engineering Branch. The Division also contains 19 airway facilities sectors, of which the Activity is one, each headed by a Sector Manager who is responsible to the Division Chief. The mission of the Activity, and all airway facilities sectors, is to maintain and operate all national airspace system facilities within the sector, assuring that performance is within established tolerances of accuracy and meets operational requirements of availability and reliability, to maintain environmental support facilities and equipment, and to effectively manage available resources.

At the hearing, the parties stipulated as to the history of bargaining in the petitioned for unit. The stipulation indicates that on January 4, 1974, the International Association of Machinists and Aerospace Workers, Local 960, hereinafter called IAM, was certified as the exclusive representative of a unit consisting of all eligible nonsupervisory, non-professional GS and WG employees assigned to the Oklahoma City Airway Facilities Sector. Representatives of the IAM and the Activity met on March 20, 1975, to discuss ground rules to be used during the negotiation of an agreement. No further meetings were held by the parties as a decertification petition had been filed by a unit employee, which resulted in the IAM's decertification on June 17, 1975. On December 18, 1975, the Assistant Secretary issued a Decision and Direction of Elections in Federal Aviation Administration and Federal Aviation Administration, Eastern Region, 5 A/SLMR 776, A/SLMR No. 600 (1975), finding that a nationwide, regionwide, or sectorwide unit of Airway Facilities Division employees may be appropriate for the purpose of exclusive recognition under the Order. At the time of the filing of the petitions which resulted in the Decision and Direction of Elections in A/SLMR No. 600, the employees in the unit petitioned for herein were included in the IAM's exclusively recognized unit which was subject to a certification bar and, therefore, the employees in the claimed unit were expressly excluded from the units found appropriate in A/SLMR No. 600. 1/ Subsequently, on March 30, 1977,

1/ The record shows that since 1966, IAM Local 2266 has been the exclusive representative of a unit of similarly classified employees of the Tulsa Airway Facilities Sector, Tulsa, Oklahoma. That unit was also excluded from the units found appropriate in A/SLMR No. 600. The remaining 17 airway facilities sectors in the Southwest Region were included in one of the units found appropriate in A/SLMR No. 600 and were included in the unit certified as a result of the election ordered therein.

the PASS filed the instant petition.

The parties also stipulated that for the purpose of determining the appropriateness of the petitioned for unit, the Assistant Secretary should consider the facts as previously established in the hearing which led to the issuance of the decision in A/SLMR No. 600. Furthermore, the parties stipulated that personnel and labor relations policies issued at the national or regional levels of the FAA apply to employees in the petitioned for unit in the same manner as they apply to employees in the unit found appropriate by the Assistant Secretary in Department of Transportation, Federal Aviation Administration, O'Hare Airway Facility Sector, Chicago, Illinois, A/SLMR No. 927 (1977). Finally, the parties stipulated that the instant case is distinguishable from the above-cited A/SLMR No. 927, from Federal Aviation Administration, Oakland Airway Facilities Sector, Oakland, California, A/SLMR No. 1010, and from Federal Aviation Administration, Atlanta Airway Facilities Sector, Atlanta, Georgia, A/SLMR No. 1086, only by the instant unit's bargaining history, the Activity's internal organization and structure, and the FAA region in which the Activity is located.

The petitioned for unit is composed of approximately 54 employees of whom the majority are classified as Electronic Technicians, GS-0856 series. Such employees are responsible for the operation of equipment such as radar, nav aids, data processing, and communication systems so that the safety of air travel will not be compromised. The qualifications for such employees are established on a nationwide basis by the FAA, and all employees engaged in such functions must be certified based on these standardized qualifications. Further, the technical handbooks utilized by such employees have been developed nationally to provide uniformity in the maintenance of equipment nationally. The record also reflects that, consistent with the FAA policy of delegating authority with respect to personnel and labor relations matters to the lowest possible level, the authority for such matters has been delegated to the Regional Director, subject to FAA and Civil Service Commission guidelines.

As noted above, the Assistant Secretary has found that a nationwide, regionwide, or sectorwide unit of Airway Facilities Division employees may be appropriate for the purpose of exclusive recognition. Based on the foregoing circumstances, including the stipulations of the parties, I find that the unit sought herein contains employees who share a clear and identifiable community of interest. In this regard, all employees of the Activity share in a common mission, common overall supervision, generally similar job classifications and duties, and enjoy uniform personnel policies and practices and labor relations policies. I find also that such a unit will promote effective dealings and efficiency of agency operations and will prevent further fragmentation of units in the Sector and in the Region. Thus, as the employees in the other 18 sectors in the Southwest Region are included in the FASTA/NAGE's nationwide unit or in the IAM Local 2266's exclusively recognized unit at the Tulsa Airway Facility Sector, the petitioned for unit constitutes, not only an appropriate sectorwide unit, but also a regionwide residual unit of all unrepresented, nonprofessional employees of the Southwest Region's Airway Facilities Division.

Accordingly, I find that the following unit is appropriate for the purpose of exclusive recognition under Section 10(b) of Executive Order 11491, as amended:

September 28, 1978

All General Schedule and Wage Grade employees assigned to the Oklahoma City Airway Facilities Sector, Wiley Post Airport, Bethany, Oklahoma, excluding all professional employees, employees engaged in Federal Personnel work in other than a purely clerical capacity, management officials, guards, and supervisors as defined in Executive Order 11491, as amended.

SUMMARY OF DECISION AND ORDER
OF THE ASSISTANT SECRETARY
PURSUANT TO SECTION 6 OF EXECUTIVE ORDER 11491, AS AMENDED

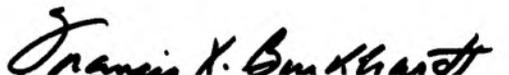

DEPARTMENT OF THE TREASURY,
INTERNAL REVENUE SERVICE
AND IRS MILWAUKEE DISTRICT
A/SLMR No. 1133

In view of the FASTA/NAGE's clear intention to have the unit found appropriate included within its existing nationwide unit, I find that the employees in such unit should be afforded the opportunity to choose whether or not they wish to become part of the existing nationwide unit represented by the FASTA/NAGE. Accordingly, if a majority of the employees in the unit found appropriate votes for FASTA/NAGE, they will be taken to have indicated their desire to be included in the existing nationwide unit represented by that labor organization and the appropriate Area Administrator will issue a certification to that effect. If, on the other hand, a majority of the employees votes for the PASS, they will be taken to have indicated their desire to be included in the separate sectorwide unit found appropriate and the appropriate Area Administrator will issue a certification to that effect.

DIRECTON OF ELECTION

An election by secret ballot shall be conducted among the employees in the unit found appropriate as soon as possible but not later than 60 days from the date below. The appropriate Area Administrator shall supervise the election, subject to the Assistant Secretary's Regulations. Eligible to vote are those in the unit who were employed during the payroll period immediately preceding the date below including employees who did not work during that period because they were out ill or on vacation or on furlough, including those in the military service who appear in person at the polls. Ineligible to vote are employees who quit or who were discharged for cause since the designated payroll period and who have not been rehired or reinstated before the election date. Those eligible shall vote whether they desire to be represented for the purpose of exclusive recognition by the Professional Airways Systems Specialists, the Federal Aviation Science and Technological Association, National Association of Government Employees or no labor organization.

Francis X. Burkhardt, Assistant Secretary of Labor for Labor-Management Relations

This case involved an unfair labor practice complaint filed by the National Treasury Employees Union (NTEU) and NTEU Chapter 1 (Complainants) alleging that the Respondents violated Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order by refusing to make available, except in an overly sanitized form, evaluation materials used in the selection process for a promotion action. The Complainants contended that the evaluation materials were sought in order for them to determine if there was an incipient grievance regarding the promotion action. The Respondents contended that the evaluation materials were sanitized in such a manner to prevent identification of the candidates and that the procedures used were fully consistent with Civil Service Commission Regulations. They further contended that the IRS National Office was not a proper party in the proceeding.

The Assistant Secretary found that the IRS National Office was a proper party in the proceeding. Further, noting that the Complainants sought the evaluation materials in connection with performance of their representational functions, he found that such materials were necessary and relevant. He noted that his in camera review of the candidates' performance appraisals indicated that the information deleted pertained primarily to the candidates' education, training, and awards, and that disclosure of such information was necessary and relevant to the Complainants in performing their representational functions in the circumstances of this case and would not constitute an unwarranted invasion of an employee's privacy. Therefore, the Assistant Secretary found that such information should have been disclosed to the Complainants.

The evidence established that the IRS Milwaukee District deleted the information from the performance appraisals in dispute in accordance with existing policies established by the IRS National Office. Accordingly, the Assistant Secretary found that the IRS National Office violated Section 19(a)(1) and (6) by prohibiting disclosure of certain information contained in the performance appraisals and that the IRS Milwaukee District did not violate Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order as it was engaging in a ministerial act in compliance with procedures directed by higher agency management.

Under these circumstances, the Assistant Secretary ordered appropriate remedial action by the IRS National Office for the Section 19(a)(1) and (6) violations and further ordered that those portions of the complaint alleging violations of Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order by the IRS Milwaukee District be dismissed.

DECISION AND ORDER

This matter is before the Assistant Secretary pursuant to Regional Administrator Kenneth M. Bazar's Order Transferring Case to the Assistant Secretary of Labor in accordance with the Assistant Secretary's Regulations.

Upon consideration of the entire record in the subject case, including the parties' stipulation of facts, accompanying exhibits, and briefs, the Assistant Secretary finds:

The complaint herein alleges, in essence, that the Respondents violated Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Executive Order by refusing to make available, except in an overly sanitized form, certain evaluation materials used in the selection process for a promotion action. The Complainants contend that the evaluation materials were sought by the Complainants' Chapter President in order for the exclusive representative to determine if there was an incipient grievance regarding the promotion action. The Respondents contend that the evaluation materials involved were sanitized in such manner to prevent identification of the individual candidates and that the procedures used were fully consistent with Civil Service Commission Regulations, particularly Federal Personnel Manual (FPM) Letter 711-126, in which, it argues, the Civil Service Commission termed a sanitized performance appraisal as one which is nonidentifiable. The Respondents further contend that the Respondent, Internal Revenue Service, hereinafter called IRS National Office, is not a proper party in the instant proceeding. ^{1/}

^{1/} In their "Motion to Cause Compliance with the Assistant Secretary's Regulations" which the Respondents filed with the Area Administrator subsequent to the filing of the instant complaint, as well

The undisputed facts, as stipulated by the parties, are as follows:

In January 1977, Training Announcement No. 77-3 was posted for six Revenue Agent Classroom Instructor vacancies in the IRS Milwaukee District. Of the 17 candidates rated eligible for these positions, 12 were found highly qualified, of whom 9 were determined best qualified. On February 16, 1977, six of the best qualified candidates were selected. Subsequently, on February 18, 1977, Mr. Lawrence Slavik, the President and Chief Steward of NTEU Chapter 1, made a verbal request to the Personnel Branch of the IRS Milwaukee District for all materials used by the ranking panel in connection with the subject training announcement. Thereafter, the Respondents provided Slavik with the following: (1) sanitized copies of the performance appraisals of the 17 eligible candidates, (2) unsanitized copies of the "Roster of Eligibles for Promotion and Promotion Certificate" and the "Internal Revenue Agent Classroom Instructor Criteria," and (3) a sanitized summary of the ranking panel's total scores for each of the 17 eligible candidates. 2/

On March 14, 1977, Slavik, in a letter to the Personnel Chief of the IRS Milwaukee District, renewed his request for all of the materials used by the ranking panel in connection with Training Announcement 77-3, stating that such materials were necessary for the Union in considering possible grievances concerning the promotion action. He further stated that not all of the requested materials had been supplied by the IRS Milwaukee District and that some of the materials which had been supplied were overly sanitized. As a result of this letter, on March 15, 1977, Slavik was given a sanitized copy of a work sheet listing the ranking panel's scores for each candidate in four categories. Finally, in a letter to Slavik dated March 23, 1977, the Personnel Chief of the IRS Milwaukee District stated that the Agency had supplied all the materials it could and still protect the identity of the 17 eligible candidates.

1/ as in their brief, it is contended, among other things, that the complaint should be dismissed against the IRS National Office because the latter was not named as a Respondent in the pre-complaint charge as required by Section 203.2(a) of the Assistant Secretary's Regulations and that the alleged violations of the Order herein involve only the Respondent, IRS Milwaukee District, hereinafter called IRS Milwaukee District. In this regard, the evidence establishes that the IRS National Office did not claim, at any stage of the proceedings herein, surprise or prejudice as a result of its not being specifically named in the pre-complaint charge or in the allegations contained therein or that at any stage of the proceeding it was not fully aware of the allegations against it. Thus, under the particular circumstances herein, I find that dismissal of the instant complaint against the IRS National Office based on procedural grounds is unwarranted.

2/ Unsanitized copies of the 17 performance appraisals were submitted to the Assistant Secretary for an in camera review.

FINDINGS AND CONCLUSIONS

As noted above, the Complainants sought the evaluation materials in connection with performance of their representational functions. In this regard, it has previously been held by the Federal Labor Relations Council that agency management must provide an exclusive representative with the information it seeks which is necessary and relevant for the performance of its representational functions, and that evaluation materials considered in the course of a promotion action, such as were involved herein, are necessary and relevant and must be provided to the exclusive representative, upon its request. 3/

The issue herein concerns the extent to which necessary and relevant materials can be sanitized and still provide the exclusive representative with the information necessary for the performance of its representational functions. 4/ In circumstances such as those which exist in the instant case, where the conflicting rights are broad and involve paramount public interests such as an exclusive representative's right to adequately perform its representational functions, having the Federal government operate within its merit promotional system equitably and encouraging the use of nondisruptive grievance procedures, it has been determined that the mere identification of an employee who is the subject of certain documents is not a violation of privacy so significant as to bar disclosure. 5/ My in camera review of the materials "sanitized" by the Respondents reveals that the information deleted pertains primarily to the candidates' education, training, and awards. 6/ In my opinion, such information was necessary and relevant to the Complainants in order to enable them to make an intelligent judgment as to whether or not a grievance should be filed over the promotion action involved herein. Further, in my view, the disclosing of the above noted information in unsanitized form relating primarily to the candidates' education, training and awards would not, under the circumstances of this case, constitute an unwarranted invasion of employee privacy and, therefore, would not be inconsistent with the FPM. Accordingly, to the extent that such information does not contain sensitive or damaging personal material, 7/ I find that the evaluation materials sought herein by the Complainants in connection with the personnel selections made pursuant to Training Announcement 77-3 should have been provided by the Respondents in unsanitized form and that the Respondents failure to do so violated Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order.

3/ Cf. Department of Defense, State of New Jersey, 3 FLRC 284, FLRC No. 73A-59 (1975).

4/ The Respondents contend that the Complainants could have obtained the deleted information directly from the subject candidates because each of the candidates had a copy of his respective performance appraisal and all were members of the bargaining unit represented by the Complainants. In my view, an exclusive representative is not obligated to obtain from alternative sources materials deemed to be necessary and relevant for the performance of its representational functions. See Department of the Treasury, Internal Revenue Service, Milwaukee District, Milwaukee, Wisconsin, A/SLMR No. 974 (1978).

5/ Cf. Internal Revenue Service, Chicago District Office, A/SLMR No. 1004 (1978), and Department of the Treasury, Internal Revenue Service, Milwaukee District, Milwaukee, Wisconsin, cited above. In the foregoing cases, it was found that the identified employees would still have the right to have the documents involved sanitized so as to omit any sensitive or damaging personal material.

The evidence herein establishes that the IRS Milwaukee District Office deleted the information from the performance appraisals in accordance with existing policies first established by the IRS National Office in a memorandum to all IRS Regional Personnel Officers dated August 29, 1975. In this regard, it has previously been held by the Federal Labor Relations Council that the acts and conduct of agency management, at a higher level of an agency's organization, may provide the basis for finding a violation of any part of Section 19(a) of the Order, but may not, standing alone, provide the basis for finding a separate violation by "agency management" at a lower organizational

6/ FPM Letter 711-126, dated December 30, 1976, relied upon by the Respondents in defending their actions herein, states, in pertinent part, that:

. . . the agency official must make a determination as to whether the requested disclosure about an individual will constitute a clearly unwarranted invasion of personal privacy. If the information pertains solely to the person(s)' government service (e.g., tenure, salary, grade, position title, work schedule, agency-sponsored training and awards received) it should be disclosed. If the information pertains to personal or sensitive matters (e.g., allegations of employee misconduct; training course grades; date of birth; marital status) its release may constitute an unwarranted invasion of privacy and therefore it should be released only with the written consent of the subject of the record.

7/ There was no contention that the information involved contained sensitive or damaging personal material.

level of the agency solely on the basis of its ministerial actions in implementing the directions from higher agency authority. 8/ Based on this rationale, I find that the IRS National Office violated Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order by, in effect, prohibiting disclosure of certain information contained in the performance appraisals used in connection with the personnel selections made pursuant to Training Announcement No. 77-3. Further, I find that the IRS Milwaukee District, in performing the ministerial act of deleting the information from the performance appraisals pursuant to procedures established by the IRS National Office, did not violate Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order.

In view of the foregoing, I shall order that, upon request, the information sought herein be made available to the Complainants, after removing therefrom any information of a sensitive or damaging personal nature and I shall dismiss the instant complaint insofar as it alleges a violation of the Order by the IRS Milwaukee District.

UNITED STATES DEPARTMENT OF LABOR
ASSISTANT SECRETARY FOR LABOR-MANAGEMENT RELATIONS
SUMMARY OF DECISION AND ORDER OF THE ASSISTANT SECRETARY
PURSUANT TO SECTION 6 OF EXECUTIVE ORDER 11491, AS AMENDED

SOCIAL SECURITY ADMINISTRATION, BUREAU OF HEARINGS AND APPEALS
A/SLMR No. 1134

This case involved an unfair labor practice complaint filed by the American Federation of Government Employees Local 3615, AFL-CIO (AFGE) alleging that the Respondent violated Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order by failing to notify and meet and confer with the AFGE concerning a decision made by the Respondent to temporarily suspend promotions from GS-12 to GS-13 for employees classified as Hearings and Appeals Analysts (Analysts).

The Administrative Law Judge concluded that the Respondent violated Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order by its failure to afford the AFGE timely notice and opportunity to bargain concerning the impact and implementation of the Respondent's July 28 determination to temporarily suspend the promotions of Analysts from GS-12 to GS-13. In addition, the Administrative Law Judge concluded with regard to the Respondent's September 7 determination by the Respondent's Director to continue the course of action decided on July 28, that the Respondent had fulfilled its obligations under the Order in giving timely notice to the AFGE and affording it the opportunity to bargain concerning the impact and implementation of such determination. Accordingly, he found that the Respondent's conduct with respect to the determination made by its Director was not violative of Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order.

Although the Assistant Secretary found, in agreement with the Administrative Law Judge, that the Respondent violated Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order, he reached such conclusion for different reasons. The Assistant Secretary rejected the Administrative Law Judge's finding that Respondent's actions on July 28 constituted the basis for finding a violation as such actions were not alleged in the pre-complaint charge or in the complaint and could not constitute the basis for finding a violation. The Assistant Secretary found that the Respondent, by its May 23, 1977, posting of a vacancy announcement for an Analyst position describing the promotion potential of such position to at least GS-12, in effect, decided, at least temporarily, to suspend promotions of Analysts to GS-13. Under these circumstances, the Assistant Secretary found that the Respondent, by failing to notify the AFGE, and afford it the opportunity to bargain concerning the impact and implementation of its decision in May 1977, to suspend the promotion of employees classified as Analysts from GS-12 to GS-13, violated Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order.

DECISION AND ORDER

On June 23, 1978, Administrative Law Judge Samuel A. Chaitovitz issued his Recommended Decision and Order in the above-entitled proceeding, finding that the Respondent had engaged in the unfair labor practices alleged in the complaint and recommending that it cease and desist therefrom and take certain affirmative actions as set forth in the attached Administrative Law Judge's Recommended Decision and Order. Thereafter both the Respondent and Complainant filed exceptions and supporting briefs to the Administrative Law Judge's Recommended Decision and Order.

The Assistant Secretary has reviewed the rulings of the Administrative Law Judge made at the hearing and finds that no prejudicial error was committed. The rulings are hereby affirmed. Upon consideration of the Administrative Law Judge's Recommended Decision and Order and the entire record in the subject case, including the parties' exceptions and supporting briefs, I hereby adopt the Administrative Law Judge's findings, conclusions and recommendations, only to the extent consistent herewith.

The instant complaint, filed by the American Federation of Government Employees, Local 3615, AFL-CIO (AFGE), alleges, in substance, that the Respondent violated Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order by failing to notify and meet and confer with the AFGE concerning a decision made by the Respondent to temporarily suspend promotions from GS-12 to GS-13 for employees classified as Hearings and Appeals Analysts (Analysts).

The AFGE was certified as the exclusive bargaining representative of a unit of the Respondent's nonprofessional employees on July 24, 1975. ^{1/} Included in the exclusively represented unit are Analysts classified as GS-301-9/11/12/13, who perform review functions, including decision writing, and other related duties involved in the adjudication of claims under the Social Security Act and its implementing regulations. Commencing in September 1975, routine position audits were undertaken by the Civil Service Commission (CSC) for a number of classifications within the Respondent, including the Analyst positions.

During a regularly scheduled labor-management meeting held in late May 1977, James Marshall, Vice President of AFGE Local 3615, raised a question with the management representatives about a vacancy announcement for an Analyst position which was posted on May 23, 1977, which stated that the position had a promotion potential of at least GS-12. Marshall noted that prior to that time the promotion potential in the Analyst classification was up to GS-13. The Respondent's representative, John L. Poore, Assistant Bureau Director for Administration, advised Marshall that although the classification studies were incomplete, they raised some problems as to the appropriateness of the existing grade level of the Analysts at GS-13.

As the AFGE was unable to obtain further information from the Respondent about the classification study, on June 1, 1977, pursuant to the Freedom of Information Act, it formally requested the material contained in the study. The requested material was furnished by the Respondent on June 9, 1977. By memorandum dated June 1, 1977, the AFGE asked Respondent's Director to meet and confer on the reclassification of GS-13 Analyst positions and the CSC study concerning reclassification. The Respondent replied by memorandum dated June 9, 1977, stating that it was unaware of the "CSC study concerning reclassification", and that consultation would commence when required by appropriate authorities. On July 5, 1977, the AFGE filed a pre-complaint charge, alleging that the Respondent had violated Sections 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order by failing to meet and confer on the preparation of the reclassification study and because the Respondent was implementing a moratorium on promotions to the GS-13 level.

Thereafter, on about July 28, 1977, the Respondent's Personnel Officer, Makoff, made an interim determination not to process any additional Analyst promotions from GS-12 to GS-13. In taking this action, he determined that the Analyst positions were no longer classifiable at the GS-13 level, and that further promotions of Analysts would be improper, and possibly illegal. However, the Respondent did not advise the AFGE of Makoff's July 28 determination and the record indicates that a number of such promotion requests were pending at that time.

On July 28, 1977, the Respondent replied to the July 5, 1977, pre-complaint charge, denying that there was any evidence to support the charge. Thereafter, on August 2, 1977, the AFGE filed the instant unfair labor practice complaint. On September 7, 1977, the Respondent's Director, Robert L. Trachtenberg, made a decision to continue the course of action initiated by Makoff on July 28. Accordingly, Trachtenberg decided to continue the freeze on promotions of Analysts from GS-12 to GS-13 until the Respondent had exhausted all opportunities for protecting the GS-13 Analyst classification. On September 9, 1977, the Respondent's representative met with AFGE representatives and advised them of the moratorium on promotions of Analysts to the GS-13 level, and further advised that the final classification decision would be made by the CSC, but that such decision would not be made in the near future. The AFGE requested, and the Respondent agreed, that a meeting be held with the affected GS-12 Analysts so that the employees could be supplied with the information directly. The meeting was held on September 23, 1977, and while the AFGE was invited, it declined to co-chair the meeting. Thereafter, in October, the AFGE requested a further meeting to discuss the various aspects of the Analyst problem, but, although the Respondent agreed, the evidence does not establish that such meeting was subsequently held.

The Administrative Law Judge concluded that the Respondent violated Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order by its failure to afford the AFGE timely notice and an opportunity to bargain concerning the impact and implementation of the Respondent's July 28 determination to temporarily suspend promotions of Analysts from GS-12 to GS-13. In this regard, he found that, although under Sections 11(b) and 12(b) of the Order the Respondent was under no obligation to bargain concerning its decision to impose a moratorium on promotions, it was nevertheless obliged under Section 11(a) of the Order to bargain concerning the impact and implementation of the decision. ^{2/} In addition, the Administrative Law Judge concluded, with regard to the Respondent's September 7 determination to continue the course of action initiated on July 28, that the Respondent had fulfilled its obligations under the Order by giving timely

^{2/} The Respondent contended that the instant complaint should be dismissed because the pre-complaint charge dated July 5, 1977, indicated that the moratorium was already in effect, whereas the evidence establishes that the earliest date upon which moratorium was declared was on July 28, 1977. In rejecting the Respondent's contention in this regard, the Administrative Law Judge reasoned that while the pre-complaint charge herein was filed prior to the July 28 determination by the Respondent, such determination could nevertheless constitute the basis for a finding of violation since it was within the scope of both the charge and complaint. Moreover, the Administrative Law Judge noted that the Respondent failed to notify the Complainant concerning the former's July 28 determination until the hearing herein, and opined that it would frustrate the purposes and policies of the Order to dismiss the instant complaint under these circumstances based on the failure of the charge and complaint to allege the precise date of the management decision to place a moratorium on promotions.

notice to the Complainant in this regard and affording it the opportunity to bargain concerning the impact and implementation of such determination. Accordingly, he found that the Respondent's conduct with respect to the determination made by Director Trachtenberg was not violative of Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order.

In its exceptions, the Respondent contends that the Administrative Law Judge erred in finding that its failure to notify and afford the AFGE an opportunity to bargain over the impact and implementation of its July 28 determination constituted a violation of the Order. In this regard, it made two points: First, noting the fact that the pre-complaint charge was filed prior to the determination, and the instant complaint alleged that the violation occurred on or before June 9, 1977, prior to the determination, the scope of both the charge and complaint herein was insufficient to encompass the July 28 determination within its allegations. Second, in any event, the July 28 determination was not a final decision and, thus, Section 11(a) obligations did not commence on such date. Additionally, the Respondent excepted to the Administrative Law Judge's recommended remedy contending that it was excessively broad as it would require the Respondent to negotiate on matters exempted from its obligation to bargain under the provisions of Sections 11(b) and 12(b).

The AFGE, on the other hand, excepts to the Administrative Law Judge's recommended remedy as too narrow, based on his failure to provide for status quo ante relief. In this regard, the AFGE argues that in view of the Respondent's history of committing unfair labor practices, and the fact that the Respondent, itself, contends that no final decision on the promotion of Analysts from GS-12 to GS-13 was reached until September 7, 1977, the Assistant Secretary should require the Respondent to consider for promotion those Analysts eligible for promotion to GS-13 prior to September 7, 1977.

While I agree with the Administrative Law Judge that the evidence herein supports a finding of violation of the Order by the Respondent, I reach such conclusion for different reasons. As indicated above, the pre-complaint charge in this matter was filed on July 5, 1977. It alleged improper conduct engaged in by the Respondent prior to such date as constituting the basis for a violation of the Order. The subsequently filed complaint in this matter alleged violative conduct by the Respondent which occurred on or before June 9, 1977. It has previously been held that while events not specified or encompassed within the allegations of a complaint may serve as background evidence to explain and illuminate the nature and character of the events specified as the actual basis for the complaint, such events may not, themselves, constitute the basis for a finding of violation. ^{3/} Under these circumstances, I disagree with the Administrative Law Judge's finding that the Respondent's actions on July 28 and its conduct on September 7, which were not alleged in the pre-complaint charge or the complaint as being violative of the Order, could constitute the basis for findings of violation of the Order.

However, I find that as early as May 23, 1977, when the Respondent posted a vacancy announcement for an Analyst position describing the promotion potential of such position to GS-12, the Respondent had, in effect, decided, at least tentatively, to suspend the promotions of Analysts to GS-13. In this regard, the evidence establishes that Analysts eligible for promotion to GS-13 subsequent to that date were not promoted to such grade level, and the subsequent actions by Personnel Officer Makoff and Director Trachtenberg, on July 28 and September 7, 1977, respectively, constituted a reaffirmation and continuation of this decision.

It is well established that an agency management is obligated to afford an exclusive representative prior notice and an opportunity to bargain concerning the implementing procedures and impact on adversely affected employees of a management decision, even though the subject matter of the decision is non-negotiable. 4/ The record herein is clear that the Respondent failed to notify the AFGE of its promotion suspension determination or afford it an opportunity to bargain concerning its impact and implementation until September 1977, despite the earlier inquiries by the AFGE concerning the Respondent's actions. I reject the Respondent's contentions that it was not obligated to notify or bargain with the AFGE because its determination was not "final." In this regard, I note that however the Respondent characterizes its determination, it was implemented, and its impact on certain bargaining unit employees was immediate (as early as May 23, 1977) and real.

Under all of the foregoing circumstances, therefore, I find that by failing to notify the AFGE, and afford it the opportunity to bargain concerning the impact and implementation of its decision in May 1977, to suspend the promotions of employees classified as Analysts GS-12 to GS-13 the Respondent violated Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order. 5/

5/ Under the particular circumstances of this case, and noting particularly the long period of time between the AFGE's first inquiry regarding this matter and the Respondent's conduct in September 1977, in notifying the AFGE of its actions, I do not find that the Respondent's subsequent conduct in this regard "cured" the original violation. Compare Vandenburg AFB, 4392d Aerospace Support Group, Vandenburg AFB, California, 3 FLRC 491, FLRC No. 74A-77 (1975).

Pursuant to Section 6(b) of Executive Order 11491, as amended, and Section 203.26(b) of the Regulations, the Assistant Secretary of Labor for Labor-Management Relations hereby orders that the Social Security Administration, Bureau of Hearings and Appeals, Arlington, Virginia, shall:

1. Cease and desist from:

a. Changing job grade classifications and imposing promotion moratoriums affecting employees exclusively represented by American Federation of Government Employees, Local 3615, AFL-CIO, without first notifying and affording such representative the opportunity to meet and confer, to the extent consonant with law and regulations, on the impact and implementation of such decisions.

b. In any like or related manner interfering with, restraining, or coercing employees in the exercise of their rights assured by Executive Order 11491, as amended.

2. Take the following affirmative actions in order to effectuate the purposes and policies of Executive Order 11491, as amended:

a. Notify American Federation of Government Employees, Local 3615, AFL-CIO, the exclusive representative of its employees, of any changes in job grade classifications and the imposition of promotion moratoriums regarding employees it represents exclusively, and, upon request, meet and confer, to the extent consonant with law and regulations, on the impact and implementation of such decisions.

b. Post at its facility in Arlington, Virginia, copies of the attached notice marked "Appendix" on forms to be furnished by the Assistant Secretary of Labor for Labor-Management Relations. Upon receipt of such forms they shall be signed by the Director of the Bureau of Hearings and Appeals, and shall be posted and maintained by him for 60 consecutive days thereafter, in conspicuous places, including all bulletin boards and other places where notices to employees are customarily posted. The Director shall take reasonable steps to insure that such notices are not altered, defaced, or covered by any other material.

6/ Contrary to the contention of the AFGE in its exceptions, I do not find it appropriate, in the circumstances of this case, to issue a remedial order which includes a status quo ante remedy. Cf. Department of the Interior, Bureau of Reclamation, Yuma Projects Office, Yuma, Arizona, 4 FLRC 484, FLRC No. 74A-52 (1976).

c. Pursuant to Section 203.27 of the Regulations, notify the Assistant Secretary, in writing, within 30 days from the date of this order as to what steps have been taken to comply herewith.

RECOMMENDED DECISION AND ORDER

Statement of the Case

Pursuant to a complaint filed on August 2, 1977 under Executive Order 11491, as amended, (hereinafter called the Order) by American Federation of Government Employees, Local 3615 (hereinafter called the Union of Local 3615 AFGE) against the Bureau of Hearings and Appeals of the Social Security Administration (hereinafter called the Activity or Respondent) a Notice of Hearing on Complaint was issued by the United States Department of Labor Regional Administrator for Labor Management Services for the Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, Region, on January 24, 1978.

Basically the Complainant alleged that the Activity violated Sections 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order by failing to notify and meet and confer with the Union concerning a decision made by Respondent with respect to reclassifying appeals analysts.

A hearing was held before the undersigned in Washington, D.C. All parties were represented and were afforded a full opportunity to be heard, to adduce evidence and to examine and cross-examine witnesses. Both parties were afforded an opportunity to argue orally and both parties filed briefs which have been duly considered.

Upon the entire record in this case, from my observation of the witnesses and their demeanor, and from all the testimony and evidence adduced at the hearing, I make the following findings, conclusions and recommendations:

Findings of Fact

1. The Union was certified as the exclusive collective bargaining representative in two units of Respondent's employees on July 24, 1975. One unit is composed of professional employees and consists of physicians and the other unit is composed of non-professional employees including Hearings and Appeals Analysts.

2. The Hearings and Appeals Analysts were in the GS-9, 11, 12 and 13 grades. Briefly, Hearings and Appeals Analysts perform review functions, including decision writing, remands, and other related duties involved in the adjudication of disabilities and other claims under the Social Security Act and regulations.

3. Commencing in September of 1975 routine position classification audits were undertaken for a number of positions within the Activity including the Hearings and Appeals Analyst position. The Union was aware of these audits.

4. During the labor-management meeting May of 1977 the Union asked about a vacancy announcement for a Hearings and Appeals Analyst which stated that the position had promotion potential to "at least GS-12." The Activity representative, John L. Poore, Assistant Bureau Director for Administration, advised the Union, apparently in very little detail, that although the classification studies were incomplete they raised some problems as to the appropriateness of the existing grade level of the analysts as a GS-13. The Union attempted, without success, to inquire further about the classification study.

5. On June 1, the Union filed a request pursuant to the Freedom of Information Act for the material contained in the classification study and the requested material was furnished by the Activity on or about June 9, 1977.

6. By memorandum dated June 1, 1977 the Union asked Respondent's Director to meet and confer on the "reclassification of GS-13 Analyst position" and the "CSC study concerning reclassification." Respondent replied by memorandum dated June 9, 1977 stating that it was unaware of the "CSC study concerning reclassification," and stating that consultation would commence when required by appropriate authorities.

7. The Union filed an unfair labor practice charge dated July 5, 1977 alleging that the Activity violated Sections 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order by failing to meet and confer on the preparation of the reclassification study and because the Activity was implementing a moratorium on promotions to the GS-13 level.

8. The Activity's Personnel Officer, Bryan Makoff, who had initial classification authority, made an interim determination on or about July 28, 1977 not to process any additional promotion requests from GS-12 to GS-13 for Hearings and Appeals Analyst position. He did this because he determined that the analyst positions was no longer classifiable at the GS-13 level and therefore further promotions of Hearings and Appeals Analysts would have been improper and probably even illegal. 1/

9. Respondent Activity did not advise AFGE Local 3615 of Personnel Officer Makoff's July 28 interim determination not to process any promotion requests for Hearings and Appeals Analysts from GS-12 to GS-13. A number of such promotion requests were pending at that time.

10. On September 7, 1977 Respondent's Director, Robert L. Trachtenberg, met with his staff and made the Activity final decision to accept the course of action recommended by Personnel Officer Makoff. Accordingly, Director Trachtenberg determined that the "freeze" on promotions of Hearings and Appeals Analysts from GS-12 and GS-13 would continue while the Activity looked into methods and changes for protecting the GS-13 classification. Personnel Director Makoff communicated this decision to the Activity's Director for Appeals Operations and returned the pending requests for promotions without action.

1/ Mr. Makoff's statement that it would have been illegal for him to promote someone into a job at a level that he had determined was non-classifiable at that level was not contradicted.

11. On September 9, 1977 the Activity representatives, including Mr. Makoff, met with Union representatives, including the Union Vice President James E. Marshall, and advised them of the moratorium on promotions to the GS-13 level and that the final classification decision ultimately would be made by the Civil Service Commission and that would take a very long time. Mr. Makoff also advised the Union representatives that the employees could file classification appeals if they felt they were performing at a higher level. The Union requested, and the Activity agreed, that a meeting be held with the affected GS-12 Hearings and Appeals Analysts so that the employees could be supplied with the information directly. The Union was invited but declined to co-chair the meeting. 2/

12. On October 3, 1977 the Union requested another meeting with the employees regarding the moratorium and it was arranged and held in late October 1977.

13. By memorandum dated October 3, 1977 the Union President, referring to the failure to promote GS-12 Analysts, requested, that Director Trachtenberg "meet ... on the above matter ... to attempt to reach some settlement on the many charges pending at various levels ..."

14. By memorandum dated October 5, 1977, the Activity's Chief of Labor-Management Relations, John Toner, responded to the Union's October 3 memorandum stating that designated Activity representatives would meet with the Union to discuss all aspects of the GS-12 and 13 analyst problems, including negotiations to settle the various charges. The record contains no evidence to indicate the Union made any subsequent requests to meet with the Activity representatives to discuss the impact and implementation, or any other aspect, of the moratorium on promotions of analysts to the GS-13 level.

15. By memorandum dated October 12, 1977 Director Trachtenberg recommended that his staff examine the problem to see if there was some method to establish that the position in question as classifiable at the GS-13 level. In that same memorandum Mr. Trachtenberg stated "... My only regret is that the Union chose, for whatever reasons to force the issue when it did..."

2/ The meeting was held on September 23, 1977.

16. By memorandum dated March 7, 1978 Director Trachtenberg advised the analysts that he had made a final decision at the Activity level that the analysts positions are not classifiable at the GS-13 level and that he was referring to the matter forwarded to the Office of Social Security Commissioner for review at that higher level.

Conclusions of Law

The Respondent urges that the instant complaint should be dismissed because the unfair labor practice charge in the subject case was dated July 5, 1977 and indicated that a moratorium on promotions was already in force whereas the record established that earliest date upon which a moratorium on analyst promotions was declared was on July 28, 1977. Thus, the Activity contends that because the complaint was not amended to specifically allege the July 28 date, this matter could not properly be decided in this case. In support of this position the Activity cites number of cases. 3/

The cited decisions are not really applicable to the subject case. In the subject case the complaint was filed on August 2, 1977 after the July 28, date and dealt with the Activity's classification decisions and their implementation and impact. No specific date was alleged as the date of any management decision. In any event, where, as here, the charge and complaint deal with a management decision, which was not communicated to the Union, and this failure of communication is an integral part of the alleged violation, it would not be reasonable to require that the charge or the complaint set forth the precise date of each decision. In the subject case the July 28 decision date ^{4/} was known only to the Activity's management and was not communicated to the Union. The first time Union was advised of this precise date was at the hearing. It would frustrate the very purposes of the Order to require that the case be dismissed because the charge and the complaint failed to set forth the precise date management arrived at a decision when management did not communicate that decision to the Union. It would permit the Activity to benefit by its own improper conduct. In the subject case, it was quite clear from the charge and complaint that the Union was protesting the failure to bargain about the impact and implementation of the determination that the analyst position could not support a GS-13 and that there would be a moratorium on promotions to that level. The parties all understood that was the matter that was in issue and that was what was fully litigated. Accordingly, it is concluded that the charge and complaint in the subject case were sufficiently precise to encompass the alleged failure to bargain concerning the impact and implementation of the July 28 decision and moratorium on promotions and the impact and implementation of any subsequent Activity decisions concerning whether the analyst position can support a GS-13 and whether there would be a moratorium on promotions to that level.

Sections 11(b) of the Order states that the agency need not meet and confer concerning the "number, types and grades of positions." Thus the classification study itself and the decision that the analyst position can not support a GS-13 are matters that are retained by management under Section 11(b) of the Order and, as such, are not bargainable. Further the decision to impose the moratorium on promotions is free from any bargaining obligations under Section 12(b) of the Order. cf. Department of HEW, SSA, Bureau of Hearings and Appeals Dallas, Texas, A/SLMR No. 816. Accordingly, there was no obligation, under the Order, to notify the Union and bargain it about the classification study itself, any decision that the analyst position could not be properly classified as a GS-13, or the moratorium on promotions.

However, once a decision was made that the analyst position was no longer classifiable at the GS-13 level, the Activity was obliged under Section 11(a) of the Order to give the Union timely notice of that decision and opportunity, upon request, to bargain about the impact and implementation of the decision. Department of HEW, SSA Bureau of Hearings and Appeals, A/SLMR No. 828; U.S.

^{4/} The September 7, 1977 decision by Director Trachtenberg, and the subsequent decisions were continuations of the same conduct.

Department of the Treasury Bureau of the Mint, Assay Office, A/SLMR No. 750; SSA BRSI, Northeast Program Center, A/SLMR No. 984.

In the subject case, Personnel Officer Makoff on July 28, 1977 determined that the analyst position was non-classifiable as a GS-13 and that there would be moratorium on promotions and that he would no longer approve requests for promotions of analysts from a GS-12 to GS-13. Although Makoff's decisions, both with respect to the non-classifiability of the analysts position and the moratorium on promotions, were not the Activity's final decisions, they had a very real and immediate impact on those GS-12 analysts who had already been recommended for promotion and on those who would have soon become eligible for promotion. When Mr. Makoff determined that the analysts position was not classifiable as a GS-13, and that he was required by law to impose a promotion moratorium, he was obligated under Section 11(a) of the Order to notify the Union of his decisions, because they had a very real and immediate affect on the employees in question.

Accordingly it is concluded that the Activity violated Sections 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order because Mr. Makoff did not give the Union any immediate and timely notice, as discussed above, of his determinations that the analyst position was not classifiable at the GS-13 level and that there would a moratorium on such promotions; by failing to give the required notice, the Union was denied an opportunity to bargain about the impact and implementation of Mr. Makoff's decisions.

With respect to the determinations by Mr. Trachtenberg on September 7, 1977 that the analyst position was not classifiable as a GS-13 and that the promotion moratorium would continue, it is concluded that the Union was promptly notified of these determinations on September 9, 1977 and was given an opportunity to request to bargain concerning their impact and implementation. The Union did not then request to so bargain; rather it requested that the Activity meet and explain the situation to the employees, and the Activity complied. ^{5/} By memorandum dated October 3, 1977 the Union requested to bargain, inter alia, about the moratorium and the Activity designated representatives to meet with the Union, but the Union did not follow up on its request. ^{6/}

^{5/} There is some issue as to whether one of such meetings might have constituted an unfair labor practice, but that will not be dealt with in this case because it is the subject of another unfair labor practice complaint.

^{6/} To some extent the October 3 memorandum also seemed to be attempting to set up meetings to discuss settlement of the subject case. To the extent settlement was the subject matter of this memorandum, it will not be considered in the case.

Thus with respect to the determinations made by Director Trachtenberg on September 7, the Union was given prompt and timely notice and the record fails to establish that the Activity refused to meet and bargain with the Union concerning the impact and implementation of these determinations. 7/ Accordingly, with respect to the determinations made by Director Trachtenberg it is concluded that the Activity did not violate Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order.

In the subject case it would not be appropriate to institute a status quo ante remedy because Mr. Makoff's July 28 decision with respect to the moratorium on promotions was required by law and it would not be appropriate to compel the Activity to take an illegal action. Further, the final Activity decisions with respect to both the classification and moratorium were made on September 7, and March 7, and the Union did have adequate notice and opportunity to bargain about the impact and implementation of such decisions. It would seem that a prospective remedy is sufficient.

Finally there was some litigation and discussion that the Activity attempted to blame the Union for the classification action and moratorium on promotions and that this violated Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order. Such allegations were nowhere set forth in either the charge or the complaint in the subject case and thus can not be appropriately dealt with this case.

Recommendation

Having found that Respondent violated Sections 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Executive Order 11491, it is recommended that the Assistant Secretary of Labor adopt the order as hereinafter set forth which is designed to effectuate the policies of Executive Order 11491.

Recommended Order

UNITED STATES DEPARTMENT OF LABOR
ASSISTANT SECRETARY FOR LABOR-MANAGEMENT RELATIONS
SUMMARY OF DECISION AND ORDER OF THE ASSISTANT SECRETARY
PURSUANT TO SECTION 6 OF EXECUTIVE ORDER 11491, AS AMENDED

U.S. CUSTOMS SERVICE AND HOUSTON REGION, U.S. CUSTOMS SERVICE
A/SLMR No. 1135

This case involved an unfair labor practice complaint filed by the National Treasury Employees Union (NTEU) and NTEU Chapter 143 (Complainant) alleging, in substance, that the Respondents violated Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order by failing to release to the Complainant all the material which was necessary and relevant to the Complainant's representation of certain employees of the Houston Region to whom notices of proposed suspension and/or discipline had been issued.

The Administrative Law Judge concluded, in effect, that the Respondent U.S. Customs Service violated Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order by improperly withholding from the Complainant material and information available to it during the formulation and preparation of notices of proposed suspension and/or discipline which were issued to the employees who had designated the Complainant as their representative upon receipt of the notices. In reaching this conclusion, the Administrative Law Judge found, in effect, that the material sought by the Complainant was necessary and relevant to the processing of the employees' appeals of their charges, and that, therefore, the material should have been released to the Complainant so as to permit it to properly perform its representational duties under the Order. The Administrative Law Judge further concluded that the Respondent properly withheld a transcript of a Grand Jury proceeding which had been released to it for certain limited purposes by a United States District Court Judge.

The Assistant Secretary agreed with the Administrative Law Judge that the Respondent U.S. Customs Service violated Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order by withholding material necessary and relevant to the performance of the Complainant's representational duties, and further, that it did not violate the Order by withholding the Grand Jury transcript. Thus, at the time the Complainant originally sought the material at issue herein, it indicated that it sought the material in order to "answer" the charges against the employees it represented. The Complainant was seeking the information which could have been used at that stage of the proceedings to determine what appeals, if any, might be filed on behalf of the employees it represented. One option would have been to file a grievance pursuant to the parties' negotiated grievance procedure.

The Assistant Secretary noted, in this regard, that it is well established that an exclusive representative is entitled to information necessary and relevant to determine whether or not to initiate a grievance. He found that, similarly, an exclusive representative is entitled to the information necessary and relevant to determine which appellate procedure, if any, to pursue in the course of representing unit employees. Thus, by failing to provide the necessary and relevant material with which the Complainant might have determined whether to file a grievance, and if so, which grievance procedure it might have invoked, the Assistant Secretary found that the Respondent U.S. Customs Service violated Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order.

However, in the particular circumstances herein, the Assistant Secretary found that the Respondent Houston Region had not violated Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order. Thus, he found that the Houston Region, insofar as it refused to release all of the necessary and relevant material sought by the Complainant, was acting in accordance with the directions of the Respondent Agency.

Accordingly, the Assistant Secretary ordered the Respondent U.S. Customs Service to institute appropriate remedial actions in this matter, and he dismissed the complaint insofar as it alleged a violation of the Order by Respondent Houston Region.

DECISION AND ORDER

On June 6, 1978, Administrative Law Judge Ben H. Walley issued his Recommended Decision and Order in the above-entitled proceeding, finding that the Respondent Agency had engaged in the unfair labor practices alleged in the complaint and recommending that it cease and desist therefrom and take certain affirmative action as set forth in the attached Administrative Law Judge's Recommended Decision and Order. Thereafter, both the Respondents and the Complainant filed exceptions and supporting briefs with respect to the Administrative Law Judge's Recommended Decision

1/ The Houston Region was added as a respondent herein by amendment to the complaint. The Respondents moved to dismiss the amendment, contending that the Houston Region was not served with a proper pre-complaint charge pursuant to Section 203.2(a) of the Assistant Secretary's Regulations. Under the particular circumstances herein, I adopt the Administrative Law Judge's conclusion that the Motion be denied, and find that the Houston Region was properly made a party in this matter. Thus, it was served with a copy of the original complaint which cited its involvement in the alleged violations of the Executive Order, and it did not object to its inclusion as a party in this matter pursuant to the amended complaint, although the Respondent Customs Service subsequently objected to the inclusion of the Houston Region in this proceeding. Further, the Notice of Hearing included the Houston Region as a party and no objection was made during the two-month period between the issuance of Notice of Hearing and the holding of the hearing. Finally, there is no contention that the Respondent Houston Region was prejudiced in this matter by surprise or was otherwise impeded in its preparation of an adequate defense. Accordingly, the Administrative Law Judge's denial of the Respondents' Motion to Dismiss is hereby affirmed.

and Order and the Complainant filed an answering brief with respect to the Respondents' exceptions.

The Assistant Secretary has reviewed the rulings of the Administrative Law Judge made at the hearing and finds that no prejudicial error was committed. The rulings are hereby affirmed. Upon consideration of the Administrative Law Judge's Recommended Decision and Order and the entire record in the subject case, including the parties' exceptions and briefs and the answering brief filed by the Complainant, I hereby adopt the Administrative Law Judge's findings, conclusions and recommendations, as modified herein.

The Administrative Law Judge concluded, in effect, that the Respondent U.S. Customs Service violated Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order by improperly withholding from the Complainant material and information available to it during the formulation and preparation of notices of proposed suspension and/or discipline which were issued to certain employees who had designated the Complainant as their representative upon receipt of the notices. In reaching this conclusion, the Administrative Law Judge found, in effect, that the material sought by the Complainant was necessary and relevant to the processing of the employees' appeals of their charges; and that therefore the material should have been released to the Complainant so as to permit it to properly perform its representational duties under the Order. 2/ The Administrative Law

2/ In so finding, the Administrative Law Judge, in effect, dismissed the Respondents' contention that they were precluded from releasing to the Complainant anything more than the material on which the notices were based and which was relied on to support the reasons in the notices, pursuant to applicable portions of the Federal Personnel Manual (FPM) regarding the appeal of proposed notices of suspension.

In this regard, Section 752.2-2 of the FPM provides, in part:

(2) ...the material on which the notice [of proposed adverse action] is based and which is relied on to support the reasons in that notice, including statements of witnesses, documents, and investigative reports or extracts therefrom, shall be assembled and made available to the employee for his/her review....

While the applicable portions of the FPM cited by the Respondents establish minimum standards as to what material must be released in the context of an appeal of a proposed adverse action, the FPM regulation, cited above, does not, on its face, preclude the release of additional material. In my view, therefore, the finding of violation herein does not present a conflict between the requirements established by the FPM and those regarding the release of documents under the requirements of the Executive Order.

Judge further concluded that the Respondent properly withheld a transcript of a Grand Jury proceeding which had been released to it for certain limited purposes by a United States District Court Judge.

I agree with the Administrative Law Judge that the Respondent U.S. Customs Service violated Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order by withholding certain material necessary and relevant to the performance of the Complainant's Section 10(e) duties, and further, that it did not violate the Order by withholding the Grand Jury transcript. 3/ Thus, at the time the Complainant originally sought the material at issue herein, it indicated that it sought the material in order to "answer" the charges against the employees it represented. The Complainant was seeking information which could have been used at that stage of the proceedings to determine what appeals, if any, might be filed on behalf of the employees it represented. One option would have been to file a grievance pursuant to the parties' negotiated grievance procedure. In this latter regard, it is well established that an exclusive representative is entitled to information necessary and relevant to determine whether or not to initiate a grievance. 4/ Similarly, an exclusive representative would be entitled to the information necessary and relevant to determine which appellate procedure, if any, to pursue in the course of representing unit employees. Thus, by failing to provide the necessary and relevant material with which the Complainant might determine whether to file a grievance, and if so, which grievance procedure it might invoke, I find that the Respondent U.S. Customs Service violated Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order.

However, in the particular circumstances herein, I do not find that the Respondent Houston Region violated Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order. Thus, the evidence establishes that the Houston Region, insofar as it refused to release all of the necessary and relevant material sought by the Complainant, was acting in accordance with the directions of the Respondent U.S. Customs Service. 5/

3/ The Administrative Law Judge found at p. 10 of his Recommended Decision and Order that the Complainant had recourse under the Privacy Act to the Grand Jury transcript. In my view, whether such recourse is available under the Privacy Act is not determinative as to whether material is necessary and relevant in the context of an exclusive bargaining relationship under the requirements of the Order. 1. Cease and desist from:

(a) Refusing to provide to the National Treasury Employees Union, Chapter 143, such documents and materials as are necessary and relevant to determine the manner in which to discharge its representational obligation to Henry D. Wade, Will Rojewsky, James Clinton, William Long, Lee Fraser, Alan Denué, Edward Hager, Ronald McGinty, Jose Vasquez, and James E. 2. Take the following affirmative actions in order to effectuate the purposes and policies of Executive Order 11491, as amended:

(a) Upon request, provide to the National Treasury Employees Union, Chapter 143, such documents and materials as are necessary and relevant to determine the manner in which to discharge its representational obligation to Henry D. (b) Post at its facilities in the Houston Region, U.S. Customs Service, copies of the attached notice marked "Appendix" on forms to be furnished by the Assistant Secretary of Labor for Labor-Management Relations. Upon receipt of such forms, they shall be signed by the Commissioner, U.S. Customs Service, and shall be posted and maintained by him for 60 consecutive days thereafter in conspicuous places, including all places where notices to employees are customarily posted. This conclusion was predicated upon the actions of the agency management at the higher level in initiating the conduct found violative of the Order, rather than upon the ministerial conduct of agency management at the level of recognition in implementing the higher level directive. Commissioner shall take steps to insure that such notices are not altered, defaced, or covered by any other material.

(c) Pursuant to Section 203.27 of the Regulations, notify the Assistant Secretary, in writing, within 30 days from the date of this order as to what steps have been taken to comply herewith.

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED that those portions of the complaint in Case No. 63-6852(CA) alleging violations of Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order by the Houston Region, U.S. Customs Service, be, and they hereby are, dismissed.

RECOMMENDED DECISION AND ORDER

Statement of the Case

On June 21, 1976, the National Treasury Employees Union, 1730 K Street, N.W., Suite 1101, Washington, D. C. 20005, and Local #168, #12 Sweetgum Lane, Destrehan, Louisiana 70047, hereafter referred to as Complainant, filed a Complaint against United States Customs Service, 1301 Constitution Avenue, Washington, D. C. 20229, J. Murry Martin, Director, Personnel Management Division, same address, as the person to contact, hereafter referred to as Respondents; said Complaint alleging an unfair labor practice because of conduct allegedly violative of Executive Order 11491, as amended, section 19(a), sub-sections (1) and (6), hereafter referred to as the Order.

On June 8, 1977, Complainant filed an "Amended Complaint against Agency," heretofore referred to as "Respondents," which "Amended Complaint" changed only the "name of Activity and/or Agency" as stated in paragraph 1 A of Form LMSA 61 (Rev. 4-75) to read: "United States Customs Service and Houston Region, United States Customs Service" (Asst. Sec. Ex. #1).

Pursuant to filing of the Complaint and the Amended Complaint as aforesaid, and upon failure to resolve the differences between the parties hereto, Notice of Hearing on said Amended Complaint was issued by the Regional Administrator for Labor-Management Services Administration, Kansas City Region, Kansas City, Missouri 64106, to be held in El Paso, Texas, on September 6, 1977. For good cause shown and on July 12, 1977, the Regional Administrator issued his Order Rescheduling Hearing in El Paso, Texas, on September 27, 1977.

Following the filing of the Amended Complaint aforesaid and on June 23, 1977, the Respondents filed objections to the Amended Complaint in which it moved that said Amended Complaint be dismissed for reasons therein stated (Exhibit J-26), which objections and Motion were received by the Regional Administrator, LMSA, on June 30, 1977. Due to the short notice to the Regional Administrator, and the fact that Complainant had not had an "opportunity to comment, and that the Motion involves major policy considerations," the Regional Administrator referred "said Motion to the Administrative Law Judge for ruling" (Asst. Sec. Ex. #2).

Respondent did not avail itself of the opportunity to make an "opening statement" at the beginning of the hearing.

Instead, counsel said: "... at this time I am just going to state that I am going to reserve my opening statement until the completion of the Complainant's case and the beginning of Respondent's case." Then, after Complainant had rested its case, the Motion to Dismiss was raised and argued. In addition, Respondent moves for a dismissal as against Customs Headquarters, and argues for dismissal on the grounds that the facts alleged as an unfair labor practice is covered by a statutory appeals procedure and, as such, is precluded by section 19(d) of the Order.

Inasmuch as it was considered that the merits of the respective motions should properly be measured by the facts of the case, rulings were reserved until the testimony could be heard, the exhibits examined and the transcripts reviewed. These motions were not further renewed at the conclusion of the hearing but have since been considered.

For reasons hereinafter set out and stated in the Findings of Fact and Conclusions of Law, the Motion to Dismiss the Amended Complaint because: (1) The Amended Complaint joins the Houston Region, United States Customs Service as an additional Respondent; (2) Customs Headquarters is improperly joined because the bargaining agreement (Ex. J-1) is between Regional Commissioner of Customs, Region VI, and Complainant and there is no collective bargaining relationship between Complainant and Customs Headquarters, with regard to Region VI employees; and, (3) The unfair labor practice therein charged is improper because the matters complained of can be addressed through a statutory appeals procedure and is prohibited by section 19(d) of the Order, should be and are all hereby denied.

Following the hearing and on October 18, 1977, Complainant mailed to the undersigned a Motion to Accept New Evidence into Record, which was received on October 21, 1977, before the transcripts were received, but marked and held for further information. The Motion urged a continuation of the hearing at which the "new evidence" would be offered, or in the alternative, the "new evidence" be accepted into the record by mail with copies to Respondent. On October 27, 1977, Respondent mailed its objections to the Motion, which were received on November 2, 1977, and "held for action." The objections of Respondent urged denial of the Motion and the "alternative" mentioned above. Complainant mailed a supplemental letter which was received on November 8, 1977, and all information has been considered.

For reasons hereinafter set out and stated in the Findings of Fact and Conclusions of Law, the Motion to Accept New Evidence into Record, together with its alternative, should be and is hereby denied.

With the preliminaries aside, the Complaint alleged a breach of section 19(a), sub-sections (1) and (6), of the Order as follows:

Roland Raymond, Assistant Commissioner of Customs, Office of Operations, Washington, D. C., acting upon authority delegated to him by V. D. Acree, Commissioner of Customs, and with assistance and advice of other staff personnel in Customs Headquarters, Washington, D. C., formulated proposed adverse action and disciplinary charges against Henry Wade and nine other named employees, all of whom were employees of U. S. Customs, El Paso, Texas, District and members of NTEU, Local Chapter 143, within the bargaining unit of Houston, Region VI, United States Customs, which unit was represented by Complainant.

Complainant made proper demand on Respondent(s) "for all papers, tapes, records, statements, memoranda, regulations and any other evidence whatsoever used or relied upon by the United States Customs Service in proposing disciplinary action against" Henry Wade and the nine other named employees.

Respondent(s) admittedly did not furnish to Complainants "all" the information requested, contending that it was only required to furnish copies of information it relied upon to formulate the proposed charges. It asserted several "reasons" for its refusal, each of which will be hereafter discussed. As a result of the refusal to furnish Complainant with the information it thought it needed to properly represent the unit members involved, the Complaint was filed.

In referring this Complaint for hearing and disposition, the Regional Administrator, LMSA, Kansas City Region, has requested evidence and testimony be adduced on the following issues:

Has U. S. Customs Service Region VI, Houston, Texas, acting as principal in an exclusive bargaining relation, designated the Deputy Commissioner of Customs, Washington, D. C. and/or Employee Relations Program Branch, U. S. Customs Service, Washington, D. C. to act as its agent in dealings with NTEU and NTEU, Chapter 143?

Has U. S. Customs Service, Washington, D. C. thereby become party to the bargaining relation and incurred the obligation to negotiate in good faith with NTEU and NTEU, Chapter 143 including the duty to supply upon request, information and documentation necessary to the discharge by NTEU of its Section 10(e) duty of fair representation?

Has U. S. Customs Service, Washington, D. C. failed or refused to negotiate in good faith where a bargaining obligation exists?

At the hearing held, the parties were afforded full opportunity to be heard, to offer, examine, and cross-examine witnesses and to introduce evidence considered relevant to the aforesaid issues and other issues considered by them to be relevant to their position in the premises. After hearing the testimony of the witnesses and observing their demeanor, having received the exhibits and the transcripts, having examined the post-hearing Motion to offer new evidence and the objections filed thereto, having considered the post-hearing briefs filed herein, and based upon the entire record, I make the following findings of fact, conclusions and recommendations.

Findings of Fact and Conclusions of Law

1. An agreement under the provisions of Executive Order 11491, as amended, was negotiated and entered into by and between National Customs Service Association, Region VI, and Regional Commissioner, Region VI, Bureau of Customs, on August 18, 1972, which was approved by the Commissioner of Customs on September 13, 1972 (Ex. J-1). By its own terms the agreement has been extended from time to time, and by proper notice from the Area Director, Dallas Area Office, LMSA, dated April 30, 1976, Complainant was certified as the exclusive representative of all employees, except those specifically excluded, in U. S. Customs Service, Region VI, Houston, Texas (Ex. J-27), and at all times material to the issues here involved said agreement was in full force and effect.

2. During the summer of 1975, Henry D. Wade and nine other employees of United States Customs, El Paso District, El Paso, Texas, and each a member of NTEU, Chapter 143, El Paso, Texas, were suspected of being involved in questionable conduct. An investigation was ordered and was made by an Audit and Inspection team with Internal Affairs. Because of the sensitivity of the issues involved, and on February 10, 1976, Commissioner of Customs, V. D. Acree, signed a memorandum delegating authority to Roland Raymond, Assistant Commissioner of Customs, Office of Operations, Washington, D. C., to "propose adverse action(s), as necessary," against twenty-four Customs employees in El Paso, Texas, including Henry D. Wade and nine other employees. 1/ Clearly, this was a change in "the line of authority," that no one questioned, and all management personnel acted accordingly.

3. Following delegation of authority to the Assistant Commissioner of Operations, and upon completion of the Field investigation by Internal Affairs, twenty-four (24) investigative reports concerning employees under investigation, and including "files" on Henry D. Wade and nine other employees, were received by Robert E. Abba, Employee Relations Chief, Employee Relations Program Branch, U. S. Customs, who was acting for and on behalf of the Assistant Commissioner for Operations, and with the assistance of other management personnel in Customs Headquarters and Region VI, prepared for and cleared with the Assistant Commissioner, Mr. Roland Raymond, charges and specifications for the disciplinary actions taken. Although the records do not reflect a transmittal of these charges and specifications to the affected employees through Houston Region VI, Mr. Abba testified that their preparation was coordinated with Houston Region and Personnel Form 52, was submitted to have a Form "50" cut at the Regional level (Houston Region VI). Therefore, I find and conclude that Houston Region VI was fully aware of and did participate in the preparation and processing of the charges and specifications contained in the disciplinary action(s) as directed by Customs Headquarters.

4. Knowing that an investigation had been made and that proposed disciplinary action had been proposed,

1/ "The purpose of this memorandum is to delegate authority to you to propose adverse action(s), as necessary, in the case of twenty-four Customs employees regarding incidents which occurred in El Paso, Texas.

This delegation is taken in that the line of authority in most cases is derived from this office to the Regional Commissioner. However, due to the sensitivity of the issues involved, it was determined that any action required would be proposed and decided at Headquarters.

This authority may not be redelegated."

Henry D. Wade and nine other employees, 2/ designated Complainant to represent them in all aspects of such proposals. Whereupon, Complainant did on or about February 20, 1976, make proper demand on United States Customs Service in Washington, D. C. and in the El Paso District for "all papers, tapes, records, statements, memorandum, regulations and any other evidence whatsoever used or relied upon ..., in preparing disciplinary action against the employees in question." (Ex. J-4) The "request" was acknowledged by Customs Headquarters and Complainant was advised that "... all material customs has relied upon to support the proposed disciplinary actions will be placed in adverse action files for each individual employee and forwarded to the District Director's Office, El Paso, Texas, where they will be made available for your review."

5. The employees in question did on March 15, 1976, receive the material alluded to above and after inventory concluded that the file(s) for each individual employee contained only a fraction of the material that was available

2/ "We the undersigned hereby designate the National Treasury Employees Union, Chapter 143, National Treasury Employees Union national office and Joseph A. Rose, National Employees Union counsel to represent us for all purposes what so ever in connection with terms and conditions of our employment and in the disciplinary actions brought against us individually and as a group.

We authorize these representatives to act fully in our behalf and as our agents in obtaining all information from any source what so ever that they in their sole discretion deem necessary to our defense."

to Respondent(s), was totally insufficient to meet the requests made, and was inadequate for the preparation of replies and a defense to the charges made. Respondent(s), speaking through Mr. Abba, testified that each individual file contained "all" the information "relied upon" to formulate the charges and specifications and repeated questioning elicited the same response. Specific inquiry developed the fact that there was other information available to him but justification for withholding it continued to be based on his assertions that it was not material relied upon to formulate the charges and specifications in the proposed disciplinary action; that all information furnished and contained in each file was in accordance with the applicable regulations (Ex. J-6). Another request was made by the President, NTEU Chapter 143, asking for "copies of all documents, hearing transcript, Internal Affairs reports and any other documents used to arrive at the proposed adverse action." (Ex. J-3) This request was further enlarged by counsel for Complainant on March 5, 1976, (Ex. J-7) and each request based their rights to the information on the Freedom of Information Act (5 U.S.C. § 552) and the Privacy Act of 1974 (5 U.S.C. § 552a).

6. Despite the fact Complainant repeatedly asserted that each file of each employee affected contained all the information relied upon in formulating the charges and specifications, it further asserted that the investigatory material requested was exempt from disclosure under the Freedom of Information Act (5 U.S.C. § 552(b)(7)(A) 3/

3/ " ... investigatory records compiled for law enforcement purposes, but only to the extent that the production of such records would (A) interfere with enforcement proceedings, (B) deprive a person of a right to a fair trial or an impartial adjudication, (C) constitute an unwarranted invasion of personal privacy, (D) disclose the identity of a confidential source and, in the case of a record compiled by a criminal law enforcement authority in the course of a criminal investigation, or by an agency conducting a lawful national security intelligence investigation, confidential information furnished only by the confidential source, (E) disclose investigative techniques and procedures, or (F) endanger the life or physical safety of law enforcement personnel." (Emphasis added)

and 31 C.F.R. § 1.2(c)(1)(vii)(A) as an investigatory record, and it had the further right to refuse under (d)(5) and (k)(2) of the Privacy Act of 1974 (5 U.S.C. § 552a (d)(5) 4/ and (k)(2)). I do not agree with these contentions. Clearly, the investigation was made and the records were compiled for the purpose of determining whether disciplinary action would be imposed according to FPM and CPM and the rules and regulations applicable thereto. It was not for law enforcement purposes. It was for "administrative purposes" and did not come within the exemptions claimed. "Center for National Policy Review on Race and Urban Issues v. Weinberger, 1974, 502 F.2d 370. The basic purpose of the statute is to promote disclosure of information, Charles River Park 'A', Inc. v. Department of Housing and Urban Development, 1975, 519 F.2d 935, and the exemptions are to be given a narrow construction. Washington Research Project, Inc. v. Department of Health, Education, and Welfare, 1974, 504 F.2d 238, 164 U.S. App. D.C. 169, certiorari denied 95 S.Ct. 1951, 421 U.S. 963, 44 L.Ed.2d 450." For the same reasons, I find and conclude that it cannot be withheld under a pretense that it was "compiled in reasonable anticipation of a civil action or proceeding." (See note "4").

7. Clearly, the record reflects that Respondents had "access to transcripts of testimony and exhibits, or copies thereof, introduced before the September, 1974 Federal Grand Jury" investigating the "questionable conduct" of the employees affected and being represented. This information was made available to Respondents by an Order of the United States District Judge having jurisdiction of the matter and for a limited purpose "in order to determine whether there are violations of ... regulations of the Customs Service ... which would warrant administrative proceedings or sanctions..." (Ex. J-40). Although Mr. Abba, the agent of Respondent who received and reviewed the "files" of each individual affected and who made recommendations of proposed charges and specifications to the Assistant Commissioner for Operations, testified that he did not receive the "Grand Jury" transcript or have access to it, which was a believable statement and which I do believe, I am not convinced that the file of each employee affected did not contain information which would, of necessity, be derivative from the "Grand Jury" transcript.

4/ "Nothing in this section shall allow an individual access to any information compiled in reasonable anticipation of a civil action or proceeding."

RECOMMENDED ORDER

Complainant has been quite persistent and insists that it needed access to the Grand Jury transcript to enable it to properly represent the unit members. The "need" is not the question, but its availability. Since Respondent had access to the Grand Jury transcript on orders of the United States District Judge who had control of it, and that access for the limited purpose stated, I find and conclude that it was properly withheld by Respondent(s). If Complainant felt a compelling need for such information, it had recourse under subsection (g)(1)(A) of the Privacy Act (5 U.S.C. § 552a (g)(1)(A)). For any other material and information received and reviewed by Respondent, I find and conclude that there was no valid reasons to deny Complainant reasonable access thereto.

8. The record is replete with evidence to establish the fact, and I so find and conclude, that United States Customs, Washington, D. C., by Commissioner's Memorandum of February 10, 1976, (Ex. J-1), took unto itself the sole authority to and responsibility for making investigation and compiling records, for receiving and reviewing them, for proposing and processing charges and specifications, if necessary, for disciplinary actions against the affected employees, and for the administration and review of any such disciplinary actions taken; that this action pre-exempted any authority or responsibility then existing in Houston Region VI, and in El Paso District, United States Customs, and that thereafter any actions taken or performed by either were ministerial only and they or either of them had no choice but to do so.

9. The normal "line of authority" and the proper level of exclusive recognition for bargaining relations under the agreement attached is between Complainant and Houston Region VI. However, it has been held that the acts and conduct of agency management at a higher level of an agency's organization may provide the basis for finding a violation of any part of a section 19(a) violation, Naval Air Rework Facility, Pensacola, Florida, FLRC No. 76A-37 (1977), and since I have heretofore found that there was material and information available and used in formulating the charges and specifications that were improperly withheld from Complainant, I find and conclude that Respondent engaged in conduct violative of sections 19(a)(1) and (6) of Executive Order 11491, as amended.

Recommendations

Therefore, I recommend that the Assistant Secretary adopt the following Order designed to effectuate the policies of Executive Order 11491, as amended.

Pursuant to section 6(b) of Executive Order 11491, as amended, and section 203.26(b) of the regulations, the Assistant Secretary of Labor for Labor-Management Relations hereby orders that United States Customs, Washington, D. C., shall:

1. Cease and desist from:

(a) Refusing to make available to Complainant, National Treasury Employees Union and NTEU Chapter 143, 6004 Isabella, El Paso, Texas, the material and information available to you, except the Grand Jury Transcript or the notes and memoranda extracted therefrom, and considered and examined by you in formulating, preparing and proposing disciplinary actions against unit member employees as follows:

Henry D. Wade
Will Rojewsky
James Clinton
William Long
Lee Fraser
Alan Denu
Edward Hager
Ronald McGinty
Jose Vasquez
James E. Putnoky

(b) Interfering with, restraining or coercing the employees by refusing to make available to National Treasury Employees Union and NTEU Chapter 143, the material and information available to you and considered and examined by you, except that excluded above, in formulating, preparing and proposing disciplinary actions against unit member employees named above.

2. Take the following affirmative action in order to effectuate the purposes and provision of the Executive Order:

(a) Upon request make available to National Treasury Employees Union and NTEU Chapter 143, El Paso, Texas:

The material and information available to you and considered and examined by you, except that excluded in paragraph 1(a) above, in formulating, preparing and proposing disciplinary actions against unit employees named above.

(b) Post at its offices in Houston Region VI, Houston, Texas, and El Paso District, El Paso, Texas, copies of the attached notice marked "Appendix" on forms to be furnished by the Assistant Secretary of Labor for Labor-Management Relations. Upon receipt of such forms, they shall be signed by the Commissioner of Customs and they shall be posted and maintained by him for sixty (60) consecutive days thereafter, in conspicuous places, including all places where notices to employees are customarily posted. The Commissioner shall take reasonable steps to insure that such notices are not altered or defaced or covered by any other material.

(c) Pursuant to section 203.27 of the regulations, notify the Assistant Secretary in writing within 20 days from the date of this Order as to what steps have been taken to comply therewith.

Under these circumstances, he concluded that such employees enjoy a clear and identifiable community of interest and that the unit will promote effective dealings and efficiency of agency operations.

UNITED STATES DEPARTMENT OF LABOR
ASSISTANT SECRETARY FOR LABOR-MANAGEMENT RELATIONS
SUMMARY OF DECISION, ORDER AND DIRECTION OF ELECTION
OF THE ASSISTANT SECRETARY
PURSUANT TO SECTION 6 OF EXECUTIVE ORDER 11491, AS AMENDED

U.S. DEPARTMENT OF ENERGY
A/SLMR No. 1136

This case involved three RA petitions filed by the U.S. Department of Energy (DOE), which was created by combining three independent agencies - the Federal Power Commission (FPC), the Federal Energy Administration (FEA), and the Energy Research and Development Administration (ERDA) - and various energy related functions of other agencies. Specifically, the DOE questioned the continued appropriateness of a nationwide unit of employees of the FPC represented by the American Federation of Government Employees, AFL-CIO, Local 421 (AFGE Local 421); a nationwide unit of FEA employees represented by the National Treasury Employees Union (NTEU); and a unit of Headquarters employees of the ERDA represented by the American Federation of Government Employees, AFL-CIO, Local 2195 (AFGE Local 2195). The DOE took the position that as a result of the reorganization these three units no longer remained appropriate. Instead, in its view, the following two units would be appropriate for the purpose of exclusive recognition: a unit of DOE Headquarters employees and a unit of employees of the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission (FERC), which was established as an independent regulatory commission within DOE and which DOE claimed to be the "successor" employer to the unit represented by AFGE Local 421.

The Assistant Secretary found that the FERC is the "successor" employer of the employees in the unit represented by AFGE Local 421. In this regard, he noted that the bargaining unit was transferred substantially intact to the FERC and that such unit is presently separate, identifiable, and encompasses a homogeneous grouping of employees. Further, he found that the appropriateness of the unit has remained unimpaired subsequent to the transfer and that no question concerning representation has been raised as to the representative status of AFGE Local 421.

With regard to the NTEU and the AFGE Local 2195 units, the Assistant Secretary found that the reorganization rendered these units inappropriate for the purpose of exclusive recognition under the Order. Thus, he found that the reorganization created a new organizational entity and affected a substantial change in the scope and character of both the NTEU and the AFGE Local 2195 units. He further found that the Headquarters employees of the DOE, excluding the FERC employees, constituted an appropriate unit as such employees share a common mission,

DECISION, ORDER AND DIRECTION OF ELECTION

Upon petitions duly filed under Section 6 of Executive Order 11491, as amended, a consolidated hearing was held before Hearing Officer Colleen Duffy Raap. The Hearing Officer's rulings made at the hearing are free from prejudicial error and are hereby affirmed.

Upon the entire record in the subject cases, including briefs submitted by the National Treasury Employees Union, hereinafter called NTEU, and the American Federation of Government Employees, AFL-CIO, Locals 2195 and 421, hereinafter called AFGE Local 2195 and AFGE Local 421, respectively, the Assistant Secretary finds:

The Department of Energy, hereinafter called Agency, filed the subject petitions seeking a determination by the Assistant Secretary with respect to the effect of a reorganization on the continued appropriateness of 3 of 37 existing exclusively recognized units. In essence, as a result of the reorganization, the Federal Power Commission (FPC), the Federal Energy Administration (FEA), and the Energy Research and Development Administration (ERDA) were disestablished and their missions, resources, and personnel were transferred to the Agency, along with certain organizational elements of the Department of the Interior, the Department of Commerce, the Department of the Navy, and the Interstate Commerce Commission. The Agency contends that the following exclusively recognized units are inappropriate due to the aforementioned reorganization:

- (1) In Case No. 22-08584(RA), a unit exclusively represented by AFGE Local 421, consisting of all General Schedule and prevailing rate employees, including professional employees, of the former FPC;
- (2) in Case No. 22-08582(RA), a unit exclusively represented by the NTEU, consisting of all professional and nonprofessional employees of the former FEA; and
- (3) in Case No. 22-08583(RA), a unit exclusively represented by AFGE Local 2195, consisting of all professional and nonprofessional Headquarters employees of the former ERDA with regular duty stations in the Washington, D.C. metropolitan area.

The Agency takes the position that, under present circumstances, only the following two units remain appropriate for the purpose of exclusive recognition: A nationwide unit of Federal Energy Regulatory Commission (FERC) employees, and a unit of all Headquarters employees of the Agency, excluding the FERC employees.

The labor organizations involved herein took conflicting positions regarding the appropriateness of the units involved. The AFGE asserts that the following three separate units of Agency employees are each appropriate for the purpose of exclusive recognition: (1) Headquarters and field employees of both the Economic Regulatory Administration (ERA) and the Energy Information Administration (EIA) and field employees of the Regional Representative; (2) Headquarters employees of the outlay programs (Conservation and Solar Applications, Defense Programs, Energy Technology, Environment, Office of Energy Research, and Resource Applications) and the administrative support functions (Administration, Controller, General Counsel, Inspector General, Intergovernmental and Institutional Relations, International Affairs, Policy and Evaluation, and Procurement); and (3) all FERC employees. In addition, the AFGE contends that the petition in Case No. 22-08584(RA), regarding AFGE Local 421's unit, was filed by an individual who lacked the legal authority to file such a petition, and it moved for its dismissal on this basis. The NTEU contends that the only appropriate unit consists of all Headquarters employees and all former FEA field employees or, in the alternative, the aforementioned unit, excluding all FERC employees.

BACKGROUND

The Agency was created by the Department of Energy Organization Act on August 4, 1977, and became an operating agency on October 1, 1977. It was established to assure a coordinated national energy policy by bringing together three independent agencies and various energy related functions of other agencies.

The mission of the FPC was the regulation of interstate natural gas and electricity. It was headed by a five member Commission, including a Chairman, with administrative control and support shared equally by the five Commissioners. The FPC was headquartered in Washington, D.C., with five field offices located in California, Georgia, Illinois, New York, and Texas. Reporting to the Commissioners, and located at the Headquarters, were the heads of 11 offices and 2 bureaus. The offices primarily contained administrative support functions and consisted of the following offices: Administrative Law Judges, Administrative Operations, Chief Accountant, Comptroller, General Counsel, Personnel Programs, Public Information, Policy Analysis, Regulatory Information Systems, Secretary, and Special Assistants. The Bureau of Power, which contained the field offices, and the Bureau of Natural Gas were primarily concerned with rate regulation, licensing, and electric and natural gas supplies.

The mission of the FEA was to conserve scarce energy supplies, to ensure the fair and efficient distribution of such supplies, to maintain reasonable consumer prices for such supplies, to promote the expansion of readily useable energy sources, and to assist in developing policies and plans to meet the nation's energy needs. It was headed by an Administrator who was assisted by two Deputy Administrators. There were six Assistant Administrators who were each responsible for one of the following offices: Conservation and Environment, Energy Information and Analysis, Energy Resource Development, International Energy Affairs, Regulatory Programs, and Strategic Petroleum Reserves. Two Associate Administrators were responsible for the Offices of Management, and Policy and Program Evaluation. The Offices of Communications and Public Affairs, Congressional Affairs, Intergovernmental Relations and Special Programs, and Private Grievances and Redress were each headed by a Director, and the Office of General Counsel was directed by a General Counsel. A variety of functions were performed at the field level of the FEA such as compliance and enforcement, fuels regulation, and exceptions and appeals. The field structure was comprised of ten regions each headed by a Regional Administrator who exercised authority over the various functions and reported to a Deputy Administrator.

The mission of the ERDA related to research and development with respect to various sources of energy. The ERDA was headed by an Administrator, headquartered in Washington, D.C., with eight operations offices located in California, Idaho, Illinois, Nevada, New Mexico, South Carolina, Tennessee, and Washington. Reporting to the Administrator were 10 Assistant Administrators, 7 Office Directors, and 8 Operations Office Managers. The Assistant Administrators headed the following functions: Administration; Conservation; Environment and Safety; Fossil Energy; Institutional Relations; International Affairs; National Security; Nuclear Energy; Planning, Analysis, and Evaluation; and Solar, Geothermal, and Advanced Energy Systems. The Office Directors were responsible for the following functions: Congressional Relations, Controller, Equal Opportunity, General Counsel, Internal Review, Programs Integration, and Public Affairs.

With respect to the bargaining history of the three units involved herein, AFGE Local 421 was certified on November 23, 1970, as the exclusive representative for a nationwide unit of FPC employees. The parties' most recent negotiated agreement became effective for a two year period on March 3, 1977. The NTEU was certified on April 19, 1976, as the exclusive representative for a nationwide unit of FEA employees. In anticipation of the reorganization which occurred herein and its impact on the master agreement negotiations then underway, on May 3, 1977, the NTEU and the FEA entered into a national interim agreement which was in effect until September 30, 1977. Finally, AFGE Local 2195 was certified on May 23, 1975, as the exclusive representative for a Headquarters unit of ERDA employees. Thereafter, the parties negotiated an agreement which became effective in October 1975, and provided for automatic renewal annually. The terms of this agreement were extended mutually until October 1978.

In addition to the above noted 3 bargaining units, which are involved in the instant petitions, there are 34 other bargaining units in the Agency, all of which were in existence prior to the reorganization. One of the 34 units includes certain employees at the Headquarters level of the Agency with the remaining 33 units consisting of employees in the Agency's field structure. ^{1/} The above mentioned employees represented at the Headquarters level of the Agency include 4 of 16 employees transferred from the Interstate Commerce Commission (ICC), who were in a unit of nonprofessional employees exclusively represented by the American Federation of Government Employees, AFL-CIO, Local 1779. 2/

As noted above, the Department of Energy became an operating agency on October 1, 1977. The Secretary of Energy is the chief officer of the Agency and is assisted by a Deputy Secretary and an Under Secretary. The FERC is a separate, independent entity within the Agency and is governed by five Commissioners. The Agency, apart from FERC, is comprised of 20 Headquarters components with offices located in approximately 11 buildings in the Washington, D.C. metropolitan area. Additionally, several of these Headquarters components contain field elements which are located in offices throughout the United States.

Eight Assistant Secretaries bear responsibility for the following program areas: Conservation and Solar Applications, which is concerned with conservation measures and commercialization programs related to solar energy; Defense Programs, which manages the defense programs and weapons complexes and reports directly to the Secretary on matters of national security; Energy Technology, which involves resource, supply and conversion research, and development and technology demonstration in all fields of energy; Environment, which assures the Agency's compliance with environmental laws and procedures, reviews and approves environmental impact statements prepared within the Agency, and monitors research and development programs regarding the impact of energy on the environment; Intergovernmental and Institutional Relations, which handles such "outreach" functions as Intergovernmental Relations, Congressional Affairs, Public Affairs, Extension, Education, Business, Labor, Consumer Affairs, and advisory committee management; International Affairs, which maintains responsibility for international energy policy; Policy and Evaluation, which handles policy planning analysis and evaluation, and assures that the Agency's policies and programs promote competition in the energy industry; and Resource Applications, which primarily concerns managing the major operational programs of energy production and supply, and the commercialization programs unrelated to conservation and solar technology.

Five Directors are responsible for the following offices: Administration, which involves personnel management, labor relations, organization and management studies, real property, and administrative services; Energy Research, which concerns physical and energy research and the training and financial assistance of such activities; Equal Opportunity; Hearings and Appeals; and Procurement and Contracts Management, which handles business agreements, procurement contracts, and contract management matters. 3/

There are two Administrations, the Economic Regulatory Administration (ERA) and the Energy Information Administration (EIA) within the Agency, each headed by an Administrator. The ERA is responsible for administering those major economic regulatory programs which are not within the purview of the FERC. The EIA has overall responsibility for energy data collection, and the analysis, reporting, forecasting, and dissemination of such data.

Other functions at the Headquarters level reporting to the Office of the Secretary are: Committees and Boards, which contains the functions of military liaison, patent compensation, and contract appeals; Controller, which handles budgetary and financial matters; Executive Secretariat, which assures proper coordination and follow-up in the Secretarial decision process and serves as an institutional memory; General Counsel, which provides legal services to the Agency's components; and Inspector General, which investigates and audits all activities of the Agency and the FERC.

The following seven Headquarters components also have a field structure consisting of organizational elements formerly in the ERDA, the FEA, and the Departments of Interior and Navy: Defense Programs, Economic Regulatory Administration, Energy Research, Energy Technology, Environment, Intergovernmental and Institutional Relations, and Resource Applications. Field elements of these components report either to an Assistant Secretary, an Administrator, or a Director who exercises authority over each particular program area.

There are contractor operated laboratories and facilities, staffed by non-Federal government employees, in the following five programs: Defense Programs, Energy Research, Energy Technology, Environment, and Resource Applications. While six Operations Offices administer the contracts in certain contractor operated facilities and report to the Under Secretary, they receive their day-to-day program direction from either the Assistant Secretaries of Energy Technology, Environment, and Resource Applications, or the Director of Energy Research. In addition, there are two other Operations Offices located in Defense Programs performing duties solely in that program area and reporting to the Assistant Secretary for Defense Programs.

The field structure of Intergovernmental and Institutional Relations consists of a single field element, the Technical Information Center located at Oak Ridge, Tennessee. Additionally, the ten Regional 3/ Subsequent to the reorganization, the Offices of Equal Opportunity and Hearings and Appeals were established as separate offices at the Headquarters level of the Agency.

Representatives receive day-to-day guidance and coordination from the Assistant Secretary for Intergovernmental and Institutional Relations. These Regional Representatives represent the Secretary of Energy in all regional activities of the Agency, assist in establishing Regional Energy Advisory Boards, and assure the effectiveness of the "outreach" programs.

The ERA field structure performs many of the same duties previously performed in the FEA's field structure, including the investigation and auditing of refineries and enterprises engaged in the reselling and retailing of petroleum products. These field elements receive program direction from, and report to, the ERA Headquarters, but receive administrative support from the Regional Representatives. Finally, there are a number of personnel in the field organizationally assigned to the EIA, the General Counsel, and the Inspector General. Personnel assigned to the General Counsel provide legal support and guidance to Agency field elements and receive their program direction from Headquarters. ^{4/}

THE EFFECT OF THE REORGANIZATION

Pursuant to the Agency's assertion in its RA petitions that three of its units are no longer appropriate as a result of the 1977 reorganization, I have examined the reorganization's effect upon each of the three units. With respect to the unit represented by AFGE Local 421, I find that as a result of the reorganization the FERC became the "successor" employer to the FPC. As to the units represented by the NTEU and AFGE Local 2195, I find that the reorganization resulted in a material alteration in their scope and character and their disappearance as recognizable appropriate units.

Specifically, I make the following findings with respect to the continued appropriateness of each of the three exclusively recognized units:

The AFGE Local 421 Unit (FPC)

The record reveals that, except for the administrative support and energy information functions involving approximately 225 employees, this unit was transferred essentially intact from the FPC to the FERC. In this regard, the administrative functions of the FPC were transferred to the respective Agency offices handling similar functions and the FPC's energy information functions were transferred to the EIA of the ^{4/} The record is unclear with respect to the functions performed by the field staff assigned to the EIA and the Inspector General.

Agency. ^{5/} In addition, the oil pipeline regulation function involving 16 ICC employees was added to the FERC. As a result of such transfers and the reorganization attendant to the creation of the FERC, the following changes in the organizational structure occurred: The Bureau of Power became the Office of Electric Power Regulation; the Bureau of Natural Gas was subsumed in the Office of Pipeline and Producer Regulation; and the Offices of Special Assistants, and Policy Analysis became the Offices of Opinions and Reviews, and Regulatory Analysis, respectively. In addition, a new Division of Planning and Evaluation, an Office of Enforcement, and a Division of Budget and Administrative Liaison were created.

The evidence establishes that unit employees essentially have remained at the same physical locations and perform the same job functions under the same working conditions and same immediate supervision as prior to the creation of the FERC. Further, all of the FERC employees, including those formerly with the ICC, are subject to the same personnel and labor relations policies established by the Chairman of the FERC.

Under the circumstances outlined above, I find that the FERC is the "successor" employer with respect to the unit represented by AFGE Local 421. ^{6/} Thus, the record reflects that the bargaining unit exclusively represented by AFGE Local 421 was transferred substantially intact to the FERC and that such unit is presently separate, identifiable, and encompasses a homogeneous grouping of employees. Further, having applied the three criteria established in Section 10(b) of Executive Order 11491, as amended, I find that the appropriateness of the AFGE Local 421 unit remains unimpaired subsequent to its transfer to the FERC. Thus, as noted above, the unit was transferred intact with the unit employees remaining essentially at the same locations and performing the same job functions, under the same working conditions and same immediate supervision as prior to the transfer. Consequently, I find that employees in the unit continue to enjoy a clear and identifiable community of interest

^{5/} Subsequent to the reorganization, a "Common Support Agreement" between the FERC and the Agency, dated February 2, 1978, was consummated which provided that certain administrative support services such as contracting and procurement, recruiting and personnel administration, payroll, automated data processing, management information systems, property management, facility maintenance, and equal employment opportunity could be provided by the Agency without jeopardizing the programmatic independence of the FERC.

^{6/} See Defense Supply Agency, Defense Property Disposal Office, Aberdeen Proving Ground, Aberdeen, Maryland, 3 FLRC 787, FLRC No. 74A-22 (1975).

separate and distinct from other employees of the Agency. 7/ Further, as all FERC employees are subject to the same personnel and labor relations policies, I find that such unit will promote effective dealings and efficiency of agency operations.

Accordingly, and noting that no question concerning representation has been raised as to the representative status of AFGE Local 421, I find the FERC to be the "successor" employer of the employees in the AFGE Local 421 unit and, as such, is obligated to accord AFGE Local 421 recognition as the exclusive representative of employees in such unit. Therefore, I shall dismiss the petition in Case No. 22-08584(RA). 8/

The NTEU Unit (FEA) and The AFGE Local 2195 Unit (ERDA)

As a result of the reorganization, the FEA and the ERDA were disestablished and the employees in these two units were reassigned, according to similar functions performed, to newly designated components within the Agency with the result that the employees now work as one unit with a common mission. The NTEU unit employees are scattered throughout the Agency with approximately 2,183 unit employees (58 percent) assigned to 17 of 20 Headquarters components with the majority of these employees located in the following components: Conservation and Solar Applications, ERA, EIA, General Counsel, and Resource Applications. The remainder of the unit, approximately 1,595 employees (42 percent), are assigned to field elements of the following components: ERA, Energy Technology, and Resource Applications.

The regulatory and enforcement functions, previously performed under the FEA, continue to be performed in the Agency. However, the enforcement function is now split into separate Offices of Special Counsel, and Enforcement. Each has its own reporting structure at the field level and reports ultimately to the Administrator of the ERA. 9/ In addition, the hearings and appeals function, previously located at the field level, 7/ With respect to the 16 employees who were transferred from the ICC, including the 4 employees who were exclusively represented in a unit while at the ICC, as they share a community of interest with the FERC employees, and their inclusion in the AFGE Local 421 unit will promote effective dealings and efficiency of agency operations and eliminate the possibility of unit fragmentation, I find that they have accreted into the AFGE Local 421 unit.

8/ In view of the determination herein that the AFGE Local 421 unit remains appropriate, I find it unnecessary to pass upon the AFGE's motion to dismiss the RA petition in Case No. 22-08584(RA) on the basis that it was filed by an individual who lacked authority to file such a petition.

9/ The Office of Special Counsel is divided into three districts all of which report to a Director of Field Operations located in Dallas, Texas, who, in turn, reports to the Deputy Special Counsel for Compliance in ERA Headquarters.

is now a separate function at the Headquarters level reporting to the Office of the Secretary. While the network of ten regions continues to exist for most functions, the position of Regional Administrator was abolished and replaced with Regional Representatives who perform similar administrative and support functions, but do not exercise programmatic authority over the enforcement and regulatory functions.

With regard to AFGE Local 2195 unit employees, the record reveals that such employees are also scattered throughout the Agency with approximately 3,602 unit employees assigned to 17 of 20 Headquarters components. The majority of these employees are located in the following components: Administration, Defense Programs, Energy Technology, Environment, and Procurement and Contracts Management.

In addition to combining similar functions, the reorganization also precipitated interplay, interdependence, and interaction among the Headquarters components of the Agency. In this regard, the record reveals that administrative staff support is provided to all Headquarters components and that all research and development activities of the Agency are monitored by two Headquarters coordinating councils. In addition, as noted above, the FEA and the ERDA were disestablished and the unit employees involved were physically and/or administratively transferred to various components within the Agency where they were commingled with each other and with other employees transferred to the Agency. As a consequence, former FEA and ERDA employees now work with each other at the Headquarters level in integrated operations and share a common mission, common supervision, generally similar job functions, working conditions, and are subject to the same personnel and labor relations policies which are centrally established and administered by the Agency's Director of Administration.

Under these circumstances, I find that the reorganization herein created a new organizational entity and affected a substantial change in both the scope and character of each of the two exclusively recognized units previously located in the FEA and the ERDA and represented by the NTEU and AFGE Local 2195, respectively. Accordingly, I find that the reorganization rendered these exclusively recognized units inappropriate for the purpose of exclusive recognition under the Order. 10/

With respect to what unit would be appropriate for the purpose of exclusive recognition pursuant to the Agency's RA petitions in Case Nos. 22-08582(RA) and 22-08583(RA), I find that a unit consisting of Headquarters employees of the Agency, excluding FERC employees, would meet the unit criteria contained in Section 10(b) of the Order. Thus, as noted above, these Headquarters employees share a common mission, common supervision, engage in integrated work functions, and enjoy common personnel and labor relations policies. Under these circumstances, I find that such employees enjoy a clear and identifiable community of interest. Moreover, I find that such a unit will promote effective dealings and efficiency of agency operations. In this regard, it is noted that all employees are subject to the same personnel and labor relations policies, which are centrally established and administered, and that such a unit, which embraces all eligible Headquarters employees of the Agency, will eliminate the possibility of unit fragmentation. In reaching this determination, I reject the contention by the NTEU and AFGE Local 2195 that certain field employees of the Agency should be included in the same unit with the Agency's Headquarters employees, inasmuch as the evidence is insufficient to establish that the existing relationships between Headquarters employees and such field employees warrant the latter's inclusion in a unit of Headquarters employees.

Accordingly, I find that the following employees constitute a unit appropriate for the purpose of exclusive recognition under Executive Order 11491, as amended: 11/

All professional and nonprofessional employees of the Department of Energy Headquarters employed in the Washington, D.C. metropolitan area, excluding Federal Energy Regulatory Commission employees, confidential employees, employees engaged in Federal personnel work in other than a purely clerical capacity, management officials, and supervisors as defined in the Order.

As noted above, the unit found appropriate includes professional employees. However, the Assistant Secretary is prohibited by Section 10(b)(4) of the Order from including professional employees in any unit with nonprofessional employees unless a majority of the professional employees votes for inclusion in such unit. Accordingly, the desires of the professional employees must be ascertained. I shall, therefore, direct separate elections in the following groups:

Voting group (a): All professional employees of the Department of Energy Headquarters employed in the Washington, D.C. metropolitan area, excluding professional employees of the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission, all nonprofessional

11/ In the absence of any record evidence as to whether or not the NTEU or AFGE Local 2195 desire to appear on the ballot in this matter, they will be placed on the ballot because they have properly intervened herein. If either or both do not wish to appear on the ballot in the matter, they should so advise the appropriate Area Administrator within 10 days of the date of this decision.

employees, confidential employees, employees engaged in Federal personnel work in other than a purely clerical capacity, management officials, and supervisors as defined in the Order.

Voting Group (b): All nonprofessional employees of the Department of Energy Headquarters employed in the Washington, D.C. metropolitan area, excluding nonprofessional employees of the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission, all professional employees, confidential employees, employees engaged in Federal personnel work in other than a purely clerical capacity, management officials, and supervisors as defined in the Order.

The employees in nonprofessional voting group (b) will be polled whether they desire to be represented by AFGE Local 2195, the NTEU, or neither.

The employees in professional voting group (a) will be asked two questions on their ballots: (1) whether or not they wish to be included with the nonprofessional employees for the purpose of exclusive recognition, and (2) whether they wish to be represented for the purpose of exclusive recognition by AFGE Local 2195, the NTEU, or neither. In the event that a majority of the valid votes of voting group (a) is cast in favor of inclusion in the same unit as the nonprofessional employees, the ballots of voting group (a) shall be combined with those of voting group (b).

Unless a majority of the valid votes of voting group (a) is cast for inclusion in the same unit as the nonprofessional employees, they will be taken to have indicated their desire to constitute a separate unit, and an appropriate certification will be issued indicating whether AFGE Local 2195, the NTEU, or neither was selected by the professional employee unit.

The unit determination in the subject case is based, in part, then, upon the results of the election among the professional employees. However, I will now make the following findings in regard to the appropriate unit:

1. If a majority of the professional employees votes for inclusion in the same unit as the nonprofessional employees, I find that the following employees constitute a unit appropriate for the purpose of exclusive recognition within the meaning of Section 10 of the Order:

All professional and nonprofessional employees of the Department of Energy Headquarters employed in the Washington, D.C. metropolitan area, excluding employees of the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission, confidential employees, employees engaged in Federal personnel work in other than a purely clerical capacity, management officials, and supervisors as defined in the Order.

2. If a majority of the professional employees does not vote for inclusion in the same unit as the nonprofessional employees, I find that the following two groups of employees constitute separate units appropriate for the purpose of exclusive recognition within the meaning of Section 10 of the Order:

(a) All professional employees of the Department of Energy Headquarters employed in the Washington, D.C. metropolitan area, excluding professional employees of the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission, all nonprofessional employees, confidential employees, employees engaged in Federal personnel work in other than a purely clerical capacity, management officials, and supervisors as defined in the Order.

(b) All nonprofessional employees of the Department of Energy Headquarters employed in the Washington, D.C. metropolitan area, excluding nonprofessional employees of the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission, all professional employees, confidential employees, employees engaged in Federal personnel work in other than a purely clerical capacity, management officials, and supervisors as defined in the Order.

DIRECTION OF ELECTION

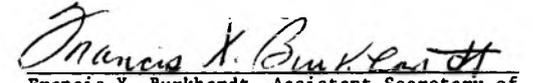

An election by secret ballot shall be conducted among employees in the unit found appropriate as early as possible, but not later than 60 days from the date below. The appropriate Area Administrator shall supervise the election subject to the Assistant Secretary's Regulations. Eligible to vote are those in the unit who were employed during the payroll period immediately preceding the date below, including employees who did not work during that period because they were out ill, or on vacation, or on furlough, including those in the military service who appear in person at the polls. Ineligible to vote are employees who quit or were discharged for cause since the designated payroll period and who have not been rehired or reinstated before the election date. Those eligible shall vote whether they wish to be represented for the purpose of exclusive recognition by the American Federation of Government Employees, AFL-CIO, Local 2195; the National Treasury Employees Union; or neither.

Case Nos. 37-01926(CA) and
37-01952(CA)

This consolidated proceeding involved two unfair labor practice complaints filed by American Federation of Government Employees, AFL-CIO, Local 2408 (AFGE) alleging that the Respondent violated Section 19(a)(1) and (2) by failing to promote Juan R. Bruno Hance in order to discourage his union activities.

AMERICAN FEDERATION OF GOVERNMENT
EMPLOYEES, AFL-CIO, LOCAL 2408

Complainant

The Administrative Law Judge concluded that the Respondent did not violate Section 19(a)(1) and (2) of the Order and recommended that the complaints be dismissed in their entirety. In this regard, he found that, although the record indicated that Juan R. Bruno Hance was active in the AFGE, it failed to establish that he was not selected for promotion to a new job based on his union activities.

DECISION AND ORDER

On August 1, 1978, Administrative Law Judge Milton Kramer issued his Recommended Decision and Order in the above-entitled consolidated proceeding, finding that the Respondent had not engaged in the unfair labor practices alleged in the complaints and recommending that the complaints be dismissed in their entirety. Thereafter, the Complainant filed exceptions and a supporting brief with respect to the Administrative Law Judge's Recommended Decision and Order.

The Assistant Secretary adopted the findings, conclusions, and recommendations of the Administrative Law Judge and ordered that the complaints be dismissed.

The Assistant Secretary has reviewed the rulings of the Administrative Law Judge made at the hearing and finds that no prejudicial error was committed. The rulings are hereby affirmed. Upon consideration of the Administrative Law Judge's Recommended Decision and Order and the entire record in the subject cases, 1/ including the Complainant's exceptions and brief, I hereby adopt the Administrative Law Judge's findings, conclusions, and recommendations.

1/ As the Respondent failed to request permission to file a reply brief to the Complainant's exceptions in this matter, its reply brief was not considered in reaching a determination herein.

RECOMMENDED DECISION AND ORDER

Statement of the Case

These cases arise under Executive Order 11491 as amended. Case No. 37-1926 was initiated by a complaint dated September 26, 1977, filed September 28, 1977 alleging a violation of Sections 19(a)(1) and (2) of the Executive Order. The violation was alleged to consist of the Respondent failing to promote Juan R. Bruno Hance on or about May 5, 1977 to discourage his active union activities. By an amended complaint dated September 28, 1977 and filed October 26, 1977 the Complainant made the same allegations and added that the Respondent again on or about August 10, 1977 failed to promote Mr. Bruno Hance to discourage his active union activities. By response dated October 27, 1977 the Respondent denied both sets of allegations. Case No. 37-1952 was initiated by a complaint dated November 14, 1977 and filed November 18, 1977 alleging that Mr. Bruno Hance again, on or about October 5, 1977 was treated discriminatorily and again was not promoted because of his union activities. By response dated November 28, 1977 the Respondent denied the allegations of that complaint; it alleged that the action of October 5, 1977 was not a failure to promote but a failure to reassign Mr. Hance to a position for which he had applied but that the reasons for not reassigning him were unrelated to his union activities.

On March 9, 1978 the Acting Regional Administrator issued a Notice of Hearing in Case No. 37-1926 for a hearing to be held April 20, 1978 in Hato Rey, Puerto Rico. On March 22, 1978 he issued an Order Consolidating Cases in which he consolidated the two cases for hearing on April 20, 1978 in Hato Rey, Puerto Rico. Hearings were held on that day in that City. Both parties were represented by counsel. They presented witnesses who were examined and cross-examined and offered exhibits which were received in evidence. Both parties made closing arguments and filed briefs.

FACTS

The Complainant is the recognized exclusive representative of a unit of Respondent's employees and has been such representative at least since 1970. Juan R. Bruno Hance (hereinafter, as during most of the hearing, "Bruno") was employed by the Respondent in 1970 and became a member of the Complainant the same year. From the inception of his membership he took an active part in union affairs and was appointed Chief Steward by the President of Local 2408. For a period from sometime in 1976 to March 1977 he was also President of the Local; on the latter date he resigned the Presidency but continued as Senior Steward.

From May 1975 to April 1, 1978 (three weeks before the hearing in this case) the Director of the Respondent was John Fears. On April 1, 1978 he became Director of a larger and more prestigious facility in Chicago. While Director in San Juan he took little part in labor-management relations, delegating most of his responsibility in that area to the Chief of Personnel, Gilbert R. Gonzales.

The procedures in merit promotion are covered in part by the collective agreement between the parties. The section or service of the Respondent that has a vacancy it desires to fill notifies the Personnel Office which prepares and posts a vacancy announcement. The names of those who apply and are found to have the essential qualifications are referred to a promotion panel. The panel consists of three members: one selected by the service that has the vacancy to be filled, one selected by the union, and the third selected by the Personnel Office. The panel ranks the applicants according to prescribed standards, the most important of which is the applicant's performance evaluation in his current job no matter how unrelated to the job to be filled. The panel certifies the names of the applicants with the five highest scores to the selecting official, usually the chief of the service with the vacancy to be filled. He interviews each of the five, reviews their personnel folders, and makes a selection. He is not bound to base his selection on the scores given by the promotion panel and is free to choose any of the five highest regardless of their relative ranking by the promotion panel.

The record contains evidence of three vacancies for which Bruno applied, was rated by the promotion panel among the top five applicants, and was not selected for the vacancy, in addition to the three mentioned in the complaints. Before reviewing them it should be noted that Bruno's entire employment with the Respondent has been as a nursing assistant. He was first employed as a GS-3. He applied for a promotion to GS-4 and was selected, and then applied for a promotion to GS-5 and was selected. All the vacancies for which he applied and was not selected although ranked among the top five applicants were in a service other than the one in which he was employed.

In October 1976 there were two vacancies of veterans representative on campus. The selecting official was Jose Lopez, the Assistance Officer. The scores of the names certified by the promotion panel were very close. Six names were certified. The scores of the third, fourth, and fifth names (including Bruno) were 116, the first and second were a fraction of a point higher, and the sixth a fraction of a point lower. Bruno's name was listed fourth. The first three names were already employed in Lopez' service and the first two were eligible for preferential consideration for some undisclosed reason. The first two already held counselling positions. Lopez selected them.

A month later Lopez had a vacancy for veterans benefits counsellor. He was given the same roster as for the previous vacancies with the first two names deleted. Bruno's name was second although he had the same score as the first name. The first name already worked for Lopez and he considered her an outstanding employee. Also, he thought fluency in the English language important in that position. Mrs. Quintana, the first name, was completely bi-lingual in English and Spanish, having been born in New York. Bruno testified through an interpreter. Lopez selected Quintana.

All three whom Lopez selected were known to him and he was familiar with their work. He also knew Bruno because he still retained his union membership and generally went to the union meetings. There was no evidence, none at all, that his selections were influenced by Bruno's union activities.

The other three positions are the subjects of the complaints. The selecting official for all three was Jose M. Pizarro, Chief of Medical Administration Service. In April 1977 he had a vacancy in the position of Medical Administration Specialist (Assistant Chief, Ward Administration Section). Bruno's name was second on the list prepared by the promotion panel. He and the person ranked first were not in Medical Administration Service, and the other three were already employed in that Service. Pizarro interviewed all five and selected Alma Iris Jiminez, who was ranked fourth. She had worked as a trainee for such position for six months in the Bronx, and had been working in the Medical Administration Service for eight years in various positions dealing with ward secretaries. Pizarro thought she had done an excellent job in the positions she held and her supervisor had twice obtained quality increases for her.

In August 1977 Pizarro had a vacancy in a newly created position of Medical Administration Assistant. Of the five names referred to Pizarro, Bruno was ranked first but he was the only one of the five who was not already employed in Medical Administration Service. The vacant position was described variously as that of an ombudsman or jack of all trades whose principal function was to improve relations with patients and the public and who should be familiar with various facets of the Respondent's operations. Pizarro selected Hilda Rios, who was ranked second. She had 30 years of Government service, the last ten in various positions in medical administration. She had received one quality increase.

The following month there was a vacancy in the position of Lead File Clerk. The vacancy was posted and Bruno applied for it. He was not ranked by the promotion panel because if selected it would not have been a promotion for him; the vacant position was in the same grade as the position Bruno already held with the same possibilities of increases. However, his name (and three others) were referred, along with the five who were ranked, for "reassignment consideration". 1/ Pizarro selected the person ranked third. He was already a file clerk in the Medical Administration Service with demonstrated ability.

Evidence of union animus on the part of Pizarro is meager, ambivalent at most, and highly conjectural. He remains a member of the union but is inactive. Blanca Custodio once worked in his Service, from 1970 to 1974 when she was the successful applicant for a promotion to the Pharmacy Service. That Service was in the same building. She was not elected to union office but acted as secretary to the Board of Directors of Local 2408 beginning in 1974. Sometime in 1976 Pizarro saw a union notice on the bulletin board on stationery indicating she was on the Board of Directors. Shortly thereafter he met Ms. Custodio in the hall and commented that he had not known she was on the Board of Directors. (In fact she was not but was the Board's non-elected secretary, but she did not correct him.) Pizarro had rarely spoken to her before, although she had worked for him some years earlier. In 1977 she applied for the vacant position of Medical Administration Specialist, discussed above, for which Bruno also applied. Ms. Custodio was ranked first by the promotion panel, but Pizarro selected Ms. Jiminez for the reasons given above in discussing the non-selection of Bruno for that position and the fact that Ms. Custodio had not worked in the Administration Service for four or five years and was not as familiar as Ms. Jiminez with current procedures and operations. But Ms. Custodio ascribed her non-selection to Pizarro believing she was a member of the Board of Directors. I find that that circumstance was not to any degree a factor in her non-selection.

The Complainant made an effort to show that Fears, the Director of the Respondent at the time here involved, harbored anti-union animus. They did this by showing that on one occasion Fears sarcastically referred to Bruno as "Dr. Bruno". Fears did address Bruno in that manner on one occasion with intended sarcasm when Bruno expressed some views on medical procedures at the hospital which Fears believed only a physician was qualified to express. On another occasion he asked Bruno whether he was a cripple because he never took up a labor-management relations matter with a management representative without the assistance of another union official.

1/ Exh. R-17.

It is unnecessary to decide whether these incidents show anti-union animus on the part of Fears because the evidence is uncontradicted, and I find, that he had no part in the promotion decisions involved in or referred to in these cases. Were it necessary to decide whether the record shows anti-union animus in Fears, I would find it does not.

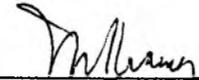

DISCUSSION and CONCLUSIONS

The complaints allege that Bruno was discriminatorily not promoted on three occasions to discourage his union activities. The evidence does show that on the first occasion complained of someone rated lower than Bruno by the promotion panel was selected by the selecting official who selected from the five top ranked applicants a well qualified applicant already employed in his Service. On the second occasion Bruno was ranked first but Pizarro, the selecting official, selected the one ranked second by the panel. She was well qualified and again was already employed in the Service headed by Pizarro. The third alleged occasion did not involve a promotion. Bruno applied for a vacancy in a position in the same grade he already had and with the same potential. Thus he was not ranked by the panel which ranked applicants only for promotion but he was certified to the same selecting official as eligible for appointment to the vacancy by re-assignment. Again Pizarro selected a qualified applicant already in his service.

The record shows also that Bruno was quite active in the union primarily as Chief Steward. But it does not show that he was not selected on the three occasions for that reason. Bruno was the top ranked applicant only once. The rankings by the promotion panel are not binding and the selecting official is free to select any of the top five names for any reason not prohibited. The reasons given by Pizarro for selecting the applicants he did were all legitimate. In addition, the record indicates strongly that he, and Lopez on other occasions not mentioned in the complaints, had a pronounced tendency to select for promotion to vacancies applicants already in their respective Services, applicants whom they already knew and were personally familiar with the quality of their work. That may or may not be a violation of some Veterans Administration regulation or the Federal Personnel Manual or some other regulation or precept. But even if it is such a violation, I find nothing in Executive Order 11491 as amended, that is violated, the only kind of violations with which we can here be concerned.

RECOMMENDATION

The complaints should be dismissed.

A/SLMR No. 1138

This proceeding arose upon the filing of an unfair labor practice complaint by the American Federation of Government Employees, Local 2367, AFL-CIO (Complainant) alleging that the Respondent violated Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order. A hearing was held on the issue of whether the Respondent changed the area of consideration for promotions without affording the Complainant an opportunity to bargain over the impact and implementation of such change.

The Administrative Law Judge concluded that the complaint should be dismissed. In reaching this conclusion, he found that the Complainant had failed to make a timely request to negotiate on the impact or implementation of the decision to change the area of consideration for promotions.

Noting particularly the absence of exceptions, the Assistant Secretary adopted the findings, conclusions and recommendation of the Administrative Law Judge and ordered that the complaint be dismissed in its entirety.

RECOMMENDED DECISION AND ORDER

This case arose pursuant to Executive Order 11491, as amended, as a result of an unfair labor practice complaint filed on December 1, 1976 by the American Federation of Government Employees, Local 2367, AFL-CIO (Complainant or Union) against the Department of the Army, U.S. Military Academy, West Point, New York (Respondent). The complaint alleged, in substance, that the Respondent violated Section 19(A)(1) and (6) of the Order by unilaterally changing the area of consideration, the area in which an intensive search is made for eligible candidates for promotion, in the case of a position for automotive and mobile equipment foreman. (Asst. Sec. Ex. 1B).

On May 2, 1977 the Regional Administrator dismissed the complaint, concluding that a reasonable basis for the complaint had not been established in that the Respondent was not obligated under the Order to negotiate with the Complainant concerning the widening of the area of consideration for the supervisory position. (Asst. Sec. Ex. 1C). The Complainant requested review of the Regional Administrator's decision, and on November 2, 1977, the Assistant Secretary of Labor reversed, finding that a reasonable basis had been established for the allegation that the Respondent violated Section 19(a)(1) and (6) by changing the area of consideration for promotions without affording the Complainant an opportunity to bargain over the impact and implementation of such change. (Asst. Sec. Ex. 1E).

A hearing was held on this issue designated by the Assistant Secretary ^{1/} before the undersigned at West Point, New York. ^{2/} Both parties were afforded full opportunity to be heard, adduce evidence, examine and cross-examine witnesses, and present argument and briefs.

Upon the basis of the entire record, including my observation of the witnesses and their demeanor, the exhibits and other relevant evidence adduced at the hearing, I make the following findings of fact, conclusions and recommendations.

^{1/} Complainant contended that the issue of whether the Respondent was obligated under Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order to meet and confer on the decision to change the area of consideration was also open for determination. This position was rejected on the basis of the Assistant Secretary's specific November 2, 1977 ruling; however, Complainant was allowed to proffer evidence relevant to its position (Tr. 6-8; 15). Cf. Social Security Administration, Bureau of Hearings and Appeals, A/SLMR No. 1040 (May 11, 1978).

^{2/} The official transcript is hereby corrected in accordance with Appendix A, attached hereto.

Findings of Fact

The Complainant is the exclusive representative of two separate bargaining units of employees, one at the United States Military Academy, West Point, New York, the Respondent, and the other at Readiness Group Stewart, Newburg, New York. At all times pertinent to the complaint, the Complainant and Respondent have been parties to a collective bargaining agreement covering the unit of employees at the United States Military Academy.

Until April 1976, personnel services for Readiness Group Stewart employees were provided by the Civilian Personnel Division of the Respondent. Beginning in April 1976, Fort Devens assumed the responsibility of providing personnel services to the Readiness Group Stewart employees. Because of this change, Readiness Group Stewart employees were removed from Area I for merit promotion purposes and became part of Area II. Area I is defined in the Respondent's Civilian Personnel Merit Placement and Promotion Plan (USMA Regulation 690-10) as "All activities serviced by the Civilian Personnel Division, USMA, plus applicants from the Department of the Army (voluntary applicants)." Joint Ex. 2, p.9). The effect of this change on Readiness Group Stewart employees is that they are no longer recruited automatically for position vacancies at West Point, but they may voluntarily file applications, prior to the posting of a particular vacancy, indicating interest in such positions.

On May 31, 1976 Respondent posted Position Vacancy Notice No. 749-A for an automotive and mobile equipment inspector foreman, WS-5801-11 in the maintenance division. It specified that the area of consideration for the vacancy was Area I.

On approximately June 3, 1976, Mr. Charles Furca, acting chief of recruitment and placement for Respondent, received information (1) that employees at Readiness Group Stewart had not been officially notified that their personnel services were provided by Fort Devens and were, therefore, no longer considered to be in Area I for promotion purposes, and (2) that a complaint had been received which contended that it was unfair that Readiness Group Stewart employees who had not been notified could not apply for the WS-11 vacancy. Mr. Furca researched and discussed the matter with other personnel employees and concluded that he should recommend to Mr. Reimero, civilian personnel officer, that the area of consideration for the position be extended to Area II.

Mr. Mortimer D. ("Danny") O'Shea, Secretary-Treasurer of Complainant and also shop steward of the maintenance division, was in the civilian personnel office on other business at about this same time on June 3, 1976. Mr. Furca called Mr. O'Shea over and advised him of the proposed recommendation.

Mary Arnold, president of Complainant union, was on sick leave at the time the conversation occurred. Mr. Robert Theroux, executive vice president and acting president, was at Readiness Group Stewart. The daily working relationship between the Complainant and Respondent had been, and was, very satisfactory at the time, and business discussions were generally conducted informally face-to-face or over the telephone. It was the general practice for management to notify the Union of labor-management matters through any one of the three elected officials, including Mr. O'Shea, the Secretary-Treasurer.

Upon being advised of Mr. Furca's proposed recommendation to extend the area of consideration for the foreman position to Area II, Readiness Group Stewart, Mr. O'Shea first voiced his personal disagreement with the decision, as he was an applicant for the position. He then stated that there were more than enough applicants from Area I, the Academy maintenance division. Mr. O'Shea also stated that if the area were extended and Mr. Vito Maiorana, Department Chief, made the selection, then there was a good possibility that Mr. Long, of Area II, would be selected, due to their long friendship and close working relationship. Mr. O'Shea said he would canvass the maintenance shop as to the number of men applying for the position.

After Mr. O'Shea left, Mr. Furca called Colonel Cooper, Chief of Maintenance, where the vacancy existed, and advised him of the proposed recommendation. Colonel Cooper recommended against the extension of the vacancy to Area II. Later in the afternoon of June 3, 1976 or early June 4, 1976, Mr. O'Shea telephoned Mr. Furca to advise him that there were ten or eleven applicants from the maintenance shop and personnel "was opening a can of worms" by extending the areas, because of the possibility of pre-selection. Mr.

Furca replied that he was still going to recommend extension, and that he felt very strongly that selection would be made from within the maintenance shop due to the maintenance shop's opposition to the extension; however, he could not guarantee this. Mr. O'Shea indicated he would not pursue the matter further, but stated that if Mr. Long were selected for the position, a grievance would be filed based on pre-selection. He indicated no other disagreement with the decision. Mr. O'Shea made a similar statement to Mr. Mariano concerning the filing of a grievance if Mr. Long should be selected as a result of the change.

During Mr. O'Shea's conversations with Mr. Furca on June 3 and 4, 1976, he did not at any time request Respondent to meet and confer with Complainant on the decision to widen the area of consideration, or to bargain with Complainant concerning the impact and implementation of such change, nor was additional time requested in order for the Union to study the proposed change.

On or about June 7, 1976, an amended Position Vacancy Notice was posted. Area II was added to the area of consideration. Shortly after the posting, Mr. O'Shea telephoned Mr. Theroux, acting president of Complainant, to advise him of the posting and of his conversations with Mr. Furca. Mr. O'Shea indicated to Mr. Theroux that the odds of anyone in Area II being selected for the job were pretty narrow, so "why generate something that wasn't necessary." (Tr. 30).

The selection for the position was made on August 4, 1976 when Mr. Long of Area II was chosen. On August 27, 1976 Complainant filed its unfair labor practice charge with Respondent and requested that the position not be filled until the dispute was resolved. (Joint Ex. 6).

In order to correct a procedural deficiency relating to the length of time the second notice was posted, an amended notice was posted in November 1976 for the proscribed length of time. No new applicants filed and the selection remained unchanged. Respondent investigated the charge of pre-selection in August 1976, and it found no evidence of pre-selection.

Discussion, Conclusions, and Recommendation

Notwithstanding the fact that a particular management decision is non-negotiable, agency or activity management is required under the Order to afford the exclusive representative timely notice of its decision and, upon request, meet and confer on the procedures management intends to use in implementing the decision involved and on the impact of such decision on adversely affected employees. New Mexico Air National Guard, A/SLMR No. 362; Pennsylvania Army National Guard, A/SLMR No. 475.

The record establishes that the Respondent notified Mr. Mortimer D. O'Shea, Secretary-Treasurer of Complainant, concerning the forthcoming change in the area of consideration for the supervisory vacancy on June 3, 1976. Complainant and Mr. O'Shea contend that he received and acted on this information only on a personal basis, as an applicant for the position, or, at most, strictly as a shop steward. In view of general practice which was established, that Respondent notified the Union of labor-management matters through any one of its top three officers, I conclude that notice to Mr. O'Shea constituted proper notice to the Union. Mr. O'Shea's subsequent discussion with the Union's acting president concerning what action, if any, the Union should take, also demonstrates that Mr. O'Shea received and acted on the information in accordance with the general practice and as a Union officer.

Where management has notified the union of a forthcoming change, it is incumbent upon the union to avail itself of this opportunity and request either to meet and confer, or be granted more time to consider the proposed change. Department of the Navy, Portsmouth Naval Shipyard, A/SLMR No. 508 (1975).

The record establishes that the Complainant was made aware of the action to be taken on June 3, 1976, prior to its implementation, but did not request to meet and confer, or indicate that it had insufficient time. When the change was implemented on June 7, 1976, the Union again made no attempt to seek negotiations with respect to impact or implementation, deciding "why generate something that wasn't necessary." It was not until over two months later, on August 27, 1976, and after the selection for the position was made, that the Union filed its unfair labor practice charge, alleging a unilateral change by management in the area of consideration for the supervisory position.

October 18, 1978

Accordingly, in my view, Complainant failed to make a timely request for negotiation on the impact or implementation of the decision, and Respondent did not violate Section 19(a)(1a) and (6) of the Order in the circumstances of this case. Recommendation

It is hereby recommended that the complaint be dismissed in its entirety.

UNITED STATES DEPARTMENT OF LABOR
ASSISTANT SECRETARY FOR LABOR-MANAGEMENT RELATIONS
SUMMARY OF DECISION AND ORDER OF THE ASSISTANT SECRETARY
PURSUANT TO SECTION 6 OF EXECUTIVE ORDER 11491, AS AMENDED

GENERAL SERVICES ADMINISTRATION, REGION 5, CHICAGO, ILLINOIS
A/SLMR No. 1139

This case involved an unfair labor practice complaint filed by Local 1300, National Federation of Federal Employees (Complainant) alleging that the Respondent violated Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order by refusing to process a grievance, properly filed by an employee under Article 13 of the parties' negotiated grievance procedure, seeking to have certain items changed on her performance rating and potential for promotion assessment. The Complainant also alleged that the Respondent failed to meet and confer with it on the question of the appropriate procedure to be used when it refused to process the employee's grievance.

The Administrative Law Judge concluded, and the Assistant Secretary concurred, that the Respondent violated Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order. In the instant case, the Respondent denied the employee's grievance at Steps 1 and 2 of the negotiated grievance procedure. Thereafter, the employee appealed the Step 2 decision to Step 3 of the negotiated procedure, at which Step the negotiated grievance procedure required the Respondent's Regional Commissioner to make a decision on the grievance. No decision was issued by the Regional Commissioner as required by Step 3 of the grievance procedure, but, rather, the grievance was returned to the employee outside the grievance procedure by the Chief of the Employee Relations Branch who stated that the grievance was inappropriate for processing under the negotiated procedure.

The Administrative Law Judge found that the Respondent's unilateral act of refusing to process the grievance at Step 3 of the grievance procedure not only contravened the terms of the negotiated agreement but also precluded the Complainant from proceeding to additional steps in the grievance procedure, including arbitration. Accordingly, he found the Respondent in violation of Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order.

Noting particularly the absence of exceptions, the Assistant Secretary adopted the Administrative Law Judge's findings, conclusions, and recommendations and issued an appropriate remedial order for the violation found herein.

DECISION AND ORDER

On August 14, 1978, Administrative Law Judge William B. Devaney issued his Recommended Decision and Order in the above-entitled proceeding, finding that the Respondent had engaged in the unfair labor practices alleged in the complaint and recommending that it cease and desist therefrom and take certain affirmative actions as set forth in the attached Administrative Law Judge's Recommended Decision and Order. No exceptions were filed to the Administrative Law Judge's Recommended Decision and Order.

The Assistant Secretary has reviewed the rulings of the Administrative Law Judge made at the hearing and finds that no prejudicial error was committed. The rulings are hereby affirmed. Upon consideration of the Administrative Law Judge's Recommended Decision and Order and the entire record in the subject case, and noting particularly that no exceptions were filed, I hereby adopt the Administrative Law Judge's findings, conclusions and recommendations.

In finding that the Respondent violated Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order by refusing to process a grievance under the negotiated grievance procedure, the Administrative Law Judge noted and relied on certain decisions of the Assistant Secretary in which the factual situations on which the decisions were based arose prior to the 1971 amendments to Executive Order 11491. Section 13(d) of the amended Order now provides, in part, that the parties may submit to the Assistant Secretary questions of grievability and arbitrability arising under a negotiated grievance procedure. 1/ It is noted that in cases arising since the 1971 amendments to the Order, the Assistant Secretary has found that, absent bad faith or an intentional frustration of the grievance and arbitration procedures in a negotiated agreement, the question of whether or not a matter is grievable or arbitrable under a negotiated agreement would be more appropriately dealt with by seeking a grievability or arbitrability determination pursuant to Section 13(d) of the Order, rather than by utilizing the unfair labor practice provisions of the Order. 2/

1/ Section 13(d) of Executive Order 11491, as amended, now provides, in pertinent part, that:

(d)---questions as to whether or not a grievance is on a matter subject to the grievance procedure in an existing agreement, or is subject to arbitration under that agreement, may by agreement of the parties be submitted to arbitration or may be referred to the Assistant Secretary for decision.

However, in the instant case, the Administrative Law Judge found that the Respondent, after making decisions at Steps 1 and 2 of the grievance procedure, unilaterally refused to process and make a determination on the grievance at Step 3 when its Regional Commissioner, the official designated in Step 3 of the parties' negotiated agreement, refused to make a decision on the grievance. 3/ He found further, and I concur, that the refusal to process the grievance contravened the terms of the negotiated agreement and precluded the Complainant from proceeding to the additional steps in the grievance procedure, including arbitration. In this context, I find that the instant case involves, in effect, a unilateral refusal by the Respondent to process a grievance, rather than a rejection of the grievance based on a determination of nongrievability.

Under these circumstances, I agree with the Administrative Law Judge that the Respondent violated Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order by unilaterally breaching the terms of the parties' negotiated grievance procedure, and I shall issue an appropriate remedial order for the violation found herein.

ORDER

Pursuant to Section 6(b) of Executive Order 11491, as amended, and Section 203.26(b) of the Regulations, the Assistant Secretary of Labor for Labor-Management Relations hereby orders that the General Services Administration, Region 5, Chicago, Illinois, shall:

1. Cease and desist from:

(a) Breaching the terms of the negotiated grievance procedure by refusing to render a decision at a prescribed step in the negotiated grievance procedure set forth in the negotiated agreement, effective July 14, 1975, with Local 1300, National Federation of Federal Employees.

(b) In any like or related manner, interfering with, restraining, or coercing its employees in the exercise of rights assured by Executive Order 11491, as amended.

2/ See e.g. Department of the Army, U.S. Army Materiel Development and Readiness Command, A/SLMR No. 1025 (1978), and Naval Air Rework Facility, Cherry Point, North Carolina, 7 A/SLMR 472, A/SLMR No. 849 (1977).

3/ As indicated above, the Respondent did not except to this finding.

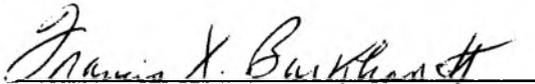

2. Take the following affirmative actions in order to effectuate the purposes and policies of Executive Order 11491, as amended:

(a) Upon request, proceed to Step 3 and succeeding steps, if necessary, of the negotiated grievance procedure set forth in the negotiated agreement, effective July 14, 1975, on the grievance of March 31, 1977, which sought to change one or more of the factor ratings on an employee performance rating.

(b) Post at its Chicago, Illinois, facility copies of the attached notice marked "Appendix" on forms to be furnished by the Assistant Secretary of Labor for Labor-Management Relations. Upon receipt of such forms, they shall be signed by the Regional Administrator and they shall be posted and maintained by him for 60 consecutive days thereafter, in conspicuous places, including all places where notices to employees are customarily posted. The Regional Administrator shall take reasonable steps to insure that such notices are not altered, defaced, or covered by any other material.

RECOMMENDED DECISION AND ORDER

Statement of the Case

This proceeding under Executive Order 11491, as amended, (hereinafter also referred to as the "Order"), was initiated by a charge filed on, or about, October 28, 1977, a complaint filed January 27, 1978 (Asst. Sec. Exh. 1) and an amended complaint, also filed on January 27, 1978 (Asst. Sec. Exh. 2), alleging violations of Sections 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order.

Notice of Hearing issued on March 13, 1978 (Asst. Sec. Exh. 3), pursuant to which a hearing was duly held on May 24, 1978, in Chicago, Illinois. Both parties were represented by counsel, were afforded full opportunity to be heard, to examine and cross-examine witnesses, and to present evidence and testimony on the issues involved. Timely briefs were filed by each party and have been carefully considered. Upon the basis of the entire record, including my observation of the witnesses and their demeanor, I hereby make the following findings, conclusions and recommendation:

FINDINGS

The operative facts are not in dispute and are as follows:

1. Ms. Shirley C. Stroud was a realty specialist, GS-12; she was a member of Local 1300 and a steward for Local 1300.

2. On March 16, 1977, an Employee Performance Rating and Assessment Relevant to Promotion Potential, GSA Form 389, was made for Ms. Stroud. This form was signed by the reviewing officer on March 17, 1977, and Ms. Stroud acknowledged receipt "under protest" on March 30, 1977. The Form consists of two parts: Section I - "Employee Performance Rating" and Section II - "Assessment of Abilities and Traits Relevant to Promotion Potential".

Section I has six factors on which Ms. Stroud, a non-supervisor, was rated only on the first four. There were five possible ratings "Inadequate", "Marginal", "Fully Meets Requirements", "Exceeds Requirements", and "Exceptional". The middle three are designated as "Satisfactory". On Factor 1, "Quantity", Ms. Stroud was rated "Fully Meets Requirements"; on Factor 2, "Quality", Ms. Stroud was rated "Fully Meets Requirements"; on Factor 3, "Cooperativeness", Ms. Stroud was rated "Marginal"; and on Factor 4, "Dependability", Ms. Stroud was rated "Fully Meets Requirements". Her overall performance rating was "satisfactory" (possible overall performance rating possibilities: "unsatisfactory", "satisfactory" and "outstanding").

Section II has eleven factors. On one, Factor 8, "Communicating Orally", Ms. Stroud was rated "Superior"; on three, Factor 1, "Judgment", Factor 5, "Learning Capacity" and Factor 9, "Communicating in Writing", Ms. Stroud was rated "Above Average"; on six, Factor 2, "Problem Solving", Factor 3, "Initiative", Factor 4, "Following through on Assignments", Factor 6, "Adaptability", Factor 7, "Planning and Organization", and Factor 10, "Creativity", Ms. Stroud was rated "Average"; and on one, Factor 11, "Leadership", Ms. Stroud was rated "Less than Average".

3. On March 31, 1977, Ms. Stroud filed a grievance under the parties' negotiated agreement (Jt. Exh. 1). Appendix E to the negotiated agreement, Section B, entitled "Matters excluded from coverage under Article 13, but covered by GSA or CSC procedure", under "Performance Appraisal" refers to Section 12, Chapter 2, Employee Appraisal System and Promotion Plan, OADP 3630.1A, which was made part of the record herein as Joint Exhibit 2.

Section 12b. of Joint Exhibit 2 specifically provides:

"12. Grievances concerning performance ratings

b. An employee may seek a change in one or more of the factor ratings ... if it is contended that one or more of the factor ratings assigned is in violation of a negotiated agreement covering a labor unit of which the employee is a member, through the negotiated grievance system." (Jt. Exh. 2, p. 17) Emphasis supplied.)

4. Ms. Stroud, in her grievance, asserted that her performance appraisal for the period ending February 28, 1977, was inaccurate and had not been prepared in accordance with applicable guidelines and standards; that her affiliation with a labor organization had been cited as a factor by her supervisor; and that Section 6 [Jt. Exh. 1, Sec. 6.1] of the general agreement provided that employees may freely associate with such an organization without reprisal.

The relief prayed for by Ms. Stroud in her grievance was that the appraisal, based on the work actually performed, be revised as follows:

Section I - Items 1 through 4 to "Exceptional"
Section II - Items 1 through 7 to "Superior"
 Items 9 through 11 to "Superior"

5. Ms. Stroud's grievance requested no change of her Overall Performance Rating under Section I.

6. On April 1, 1977, Supervisor Jerry Cohen, Ms. Stroud's rating official, denied Ms. Stroud's grievance at Step 1 of the negotiated grievance procedure. Mr. Cohen's denial addressed the contentions asserted by Ms. Stroud.

7. On April 4, 1977, Ms. Stroud appealed the decision to the Second Step of the negotiated procedure and on April 18, 1977, Mr. Dennis J. Keilman, Director, Space Management Division, denied the grievance because:

"... I have concluded that the grievance procedure may not be used to have an overall rating of satisfactory changed."

As noted in Paragraph 5 above, Ms. Stroud's grievance did not request any change of her Overall Performance Rating. Moreover, the Overall Performance Rating was part of Section I and Ms. Stroud's grievance pertained to both Section I and Section II.

It is true, as Mr. Keilman stated in his denial of the grievance at Step 2, that Section 12a. of Joint Exhibit 2, provides:

"a. An employee may not use the GSA grievance system or a negotiated grievance system to have his overall rating of unsatisfactory or satisfactory changed. The procedures described in par. 11 are the only appropriate procedures for seeking such changes."

Although not referred to by Mr. Keilman, Appendix 2-B, Paragraph 10, of Joint Exhibit 2 provides, in part, that:

"An employee who receives an exceptional rating for each factor must be given an overall rating of outstanding; an outstanding rating may not be given if one or more factors are rated less than exceptional."

See, also, Paragraph 7 of Joint Exhibit 2 entitled "Appraising Outstanding performance."

8. On April 19, 1977, Ms. Stroud wrote Mr. Keilman and stated, in relevant part:

"On April 18, 1977 I received what appears to be your adjudication at Step 2 of the grievance I have filed to compel a correction of certain specific items in the performance appraisal prepared by Mr. Jerry V. Cohen ... your opinion, since it does not treat the issues in the least, is as a minimum elusive and for this reason is wholly unacceptable.

"I have written merely to clarify the relief that will be required i.e., the correction of the specific items cited in the grievance. No change in the overall rating is sought as a part of this action.

"Now if, in view of this fact, you would desire to revise your opinion and speak to the issues, please let me have your revision not later than April 20, 1977. Otherwise, the opinion as submitted will be considered final." (Emphasis in original.)

9. Mr. Keilman did not respond to Ms. Stroud's letter of April 19, and on April 21, 1977, Ms. Stroud appealed to Step 3 of the negotiated procedure. Step 3 provides, in part, as follows:

"The Regional Commissioner shall issue his decision, in writing, within ten (10) working days after receipt of the comments, the appeal, or the meeting, whichever is later. ..."

If not satisfied with the decision of the Regional Commissioner, Step 4 provides for a request for further consideration by the Regional Administrator; the Regional Administrator "shall render his decision in writing within ten (10) working days"; and if dissatisfied with the Regional Administrator's decision,

"... the Union may request arbitration ..." (Jt. Exh. 1, Art. 13, Sec. 13.3, Step 4.)

10. No decision was ever issued by the Regional Commissioner, as required by Step 3 of the negotiated procedure. To the contrary, Mr. E.A. Clark, Chief, Employee Relations Branch, by letter dated April 29, 1977, returned Ms. Stroud's grievance of March 31, 1977. Noting that, as the relief sought would, if granted, change each rating to "Exceptional" and that such a change would automatically require that your present overall rating become "outstanding", Mr. Clark concluded that:

"I must, therefore, as the technical expert in the grievance procedure for Region 5, return your grievance as being inappropriate for processing under the negotiated procedure."

11. By letter dated April 30, 1977, Ms. Stroud wrote Mr. Clark and, inter alia, stated:

"If management will persist in its efforts to avoid its responsibility for adjudication of grievances, I shall have no alternative but to file a ULP."

12. By letter dated May 5, 1977, addressed to Regional Commissioner W.B. Morrison, Ms. Stroud "returned" her grievance of March 31, 1977, but "in an effort to facilitate the disposal, have revised the 'Relief of Adjustment'" so that Item 3 of Section I would have been revised to "Exceeds Requirement" rather than to "Exceptional".

13. Mr. Clark, by letter dated May 10, 1977, returned Ms. Stroud's "new grievance dated May 5, 1977" as untimely.

14. Section 13.2 of the General Agreement provides, in part, as follows:

"If any matters grieved are not subject to this procedure, it shall be mutually decided which of the procedure(s) available applies." (Jt. Exh. 1, Sec. 13.2, p. 21)

Mr. Robert J. Gorman, President of Local 1300, testified that, although he was fully aware of Ms. Stroud's grievance of March 31, 1977, and had met with Respondent about the grievance after it was filed, he had never asked to meet with Respondent's Employee Labor and Relations Branch to discuss "which procedure shall be used to make a mutual decision which procedure available applies." (Tr. 43-44).

15. Ms. Stroud was no longer employed by Respondent at the time of the hearing.

CONCLUSIONS

It is perfectly clear from the Agreement of the parties, from Respondent's Employee Appraisal System and Merit Promotion Plan (Jt. Exhs. 1 and 2), and from the undisputed testimony of President Gorman that one or more of the rating factors may be grieved under the parties' negotiated grievance procedure. Nor is there any question that: a) Ms. Stroud timely filed a grievance under the negotiated grievance procedure on March 31, 1977; b) that her rating supervisor, Mr. Cohen, on April 1, 1977, denied her grievance; c) that on April 4, 1977, Ms. Stroud appealed Mr. Cohen's Step One decision to Step Two of the negotiated grievance procedure; and d) that on April 8, 1977, Mr. Keilman, without reaching the merits, denied the grievance at Step Two because he had "concluded that the grievance procedure may not be used to have an overall rating of satisfactory changed."

Not professing to be an expert, Paragraph 7 of Joint Exhibit 2, entitled "Appraising Outstanding performance" nevertheless, would appear to preclude an outstanding rating where the rating official, Mr. Cohen in this instance, has not rated the employee outstanding. Thus, Paragraph 7c provides "To support a rating of outstanding, the rating official must prepare a written statement that (1) describes the performance requirement for each significant aspect of the job, (2) describes how the employee has exceeded the performance requirements for each aspect, and (3) states why the performance in each factor is considered to be so exceptional as to deserve special commendation." Paragraph 7 d. provides "If the reviewing official concurs with the the outstanding rating, it shall become official if the reviewing official is at the office head level ... [or] the rating shall be forwarded to that level for final approval ..."

Respondent's position that, because the relief requested, if granted in full, would have required a change of Ms. Stroud's overall rating from satisfactory to outstanding and that the negotiated grievance system may not be used to have an employee's overall rating of satisfactory changed, would have been an arguable construction of the Agreement and the incorporated Employee Appraisal System prior to the decision of the rating official at Step One of the negotiated grievance procedure, and whether it was, or was not, an arguable construction, i.e., a bona fide construction made in good faith, at Step Two, compare Aerospace Guidance and Metrology Center, Newark Air Force Station, Newark, Ohio, A/SLMR No. 677, 6 A/SLMR 362 (1976); Department of Army Watervliet Arsenal Watervliet, New York, A/SLMR No. 624, 6 A/SLMR 128 (1976), is not material here as a party may make absurd and erroneous decisions as well as wise and correct decisions. The objective of the negotiated grievance procedure was to provide a means for the resolution of disputes concerning the interpretation or application of the parties' agreement. Mr. Keilman's decision at Step Two may have been right or it may have been wrong; but whether it was right or wrong, his decision, without more, was not an unfair labor practice as it was, pursuant to the negotiated procedure, subject to review through the succeeding steps of the negotiated grievance procedure and, ultimately, to impartial arbitration. Ms. Stroud, on April 21, 1977, timely appealed to Step Three of the negotiated grievance procedure. The Regional Commissioner failed and refused to render a decision at Step Three, as the negotiated agreement required, and Respondent on April 29, 1977, by its Chief, Employee Relations Branch, returned Ms. Stroud's grievance asserting that it was "inappropriate for processing under the negotiated procedure." Respondent's unilateral action in refusing to process the grievance to Step Three, and subsequent steps of the negotiated grievance procedure, and the return of the grievance on April 29, 1977, contravened the agreed upon terms of its negotiated agreement. Not only did Respondent's action foreclose review of the Step Two decision at Steps Three and Four, but, because decision of the Regional Commissioner, at Step Three, and of the Regional Administrator, at Step Four, were necessary preconditions to arbitration, Respondent precluded impartial arbitration provided for by the negotiated agreement. In Veterans Administration Hospital, Charleston, South Carolina, A/SLMR No. 87, 1 A/SLMR 401 (1971), where management had failed and refused to comply with the negotiated grievance procedure, the Assistant Secretary stated:

"In the circumstances of this case, I do not view Respondent's contention that its conduct as to these grievances based on a 'good faith' belief that there was no need for further processing of the grievances, is controlling or conclusive. I have stated that,

'... in the processing of grievances pursuant to a negotiated grievance procedure, good faith is not demonstrated where ... an activity informs its exclusive representative that a grievance has been decided not on the basis of the undertakings of the grievance procedure, but on the activity's own personal judgments.' [United States Army School Training Center, Fort McCellan, Alabama, A/SLMR No. 42, I A/SLMR 226, 229 (1971)].

The foregoing statement would similarly be applicable to an agency or activity which unilaterally determines whether there is need for complying with a request for a grievance meeting which is made pursuant to a negotiated grievance procedure. Quite obviously, granting such privilege to management could render useless the establishment of bilateral grievance and arbitration machinery.

* * * *

"... I view the Respondent's conduct ... to have the inherent effect of interfering with the rights of employees to utilize the grievance procedure negotiated by their exclusive representative.

"Accordingly, ... I find that the Respondent interfered with the Section 1(a) rights of employees in violation of Section 19(a)(1) of the Order. ..." (1 A/SLMR at 404-405)

In Long Beach Naval Shipyard, A/SLMR No. 154, 2 A/SLMR 240 (1971), where the Respondent had unilaterally cancelled a scheduled arbitration hearing, the Hearing Examiner had concluded that Respondent did not violate the Order by its unilateral action; however, the Assistant Secretary rejected the Hearing Examiner's conclusions and recommendations in this respect and in finding a violation of Sections 19(a)(1) and (6) stated:

"... In my view, such an arbitration provision constitutes an invaluable tool for promoting labor relations harmony in the Federal Service. If such arrangement are to be effective, however, they must be honored by the parties to the fullest extent possible. Thus, where an arbitration clause in the negotiated agreement permits either party to seek arbitration, to permit either party to the agreement to determine the question of arbitrability unilaterally would, in effect, 'render useless the establishment of bilateral grievance and arbitration machinery.'

"In the circumstances here, I find that the Respondent's conduct constituted an improper refusal to consult, confer, or negotiate with the Complainant. Thus, as noted above, the Respondent admittedly did not confer with or even notify the Complainant ... prior to its unilateral cancellation of such proceeding. Instead, after agreeing under the parties' negotiated agreement to submit the matter to arbitration ... Respondent, based on its own judgment and without consultation with the Complainant, chose to cancel the arbitration hearing. ...

"In all the circumstances, therefore, I find Respondent's conduct herein to be in derogation of its obligation to consult, confer, or negotiate and therefore violative of Section 19(a)(6) of the Executive Order. Furthermore, I find that Respondent's conduct constitutes a violation of Section 19(a)(1) of the Executive Order ... where an activity engage in a course of conduct which has the effect of evidencing to employees that it can act unilaterally with respect to negotiated terms and conditions of employment without regard to their exclusive representative, I find that the rights of employees established under Section 1(a) of the Order have been interfered with in violation of Section 19(a)(1) of the Order." (2 A/SLMR at 242-243).

In Puget Sound Naval Shipyard, Department of the Navy, Bremerton, Washington, A/SLMR No. 332, 3 A/SLMR 648 (1973), the Respondent refused to process a grievance to the third step of the negotiated grievance procedure asserting that the matter was not subject to the grievance procedure because it constituted a job grading appeal which must be resolved under CSC's Job Grading Appeals System. There, as here, the grievance was returned "as a matter not appropriate for further processing as a grievance." The Administrative Law Judge's finding that Respondent thereby violated Sections 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order was adopted by the Assistant Secretary. In concluding that Respondent's unilateral conduct violated Sections 19(a)(1) and (6) the Administrative Law Judge stated:

"... Respondent's refusal to process the grievances herein was based, in large measure, on its unilateral interpretation of the contract and its unilateral determination as to what is grievable (and inferentially arbitrable) under the contract. However, the negotiated agreement does not accord Respondent this broad privilege.

"The Assistant Secretary has previously held, in circumstances similar to those herein, that an agency's unilateral determination of what is arbitrable under a negotiated agreement constitutes a unilateral modification of substantial terms of a contract and thereby violates Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order. The rationale for this holding is equally applicable where an agency unilaterally determines that a dispute is not grievable under a negotiated agreement. Accordingly, I conclude that Respondent's unilateral determination that under the terms of the negotiated agreement the grievances herein were not proper for further processing into the 3rd step of the grievance procedure or advisory arbitration violated Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order." (3 A/SLMR at 659).

See, also, Norfolk Naval Shipyard, A/SLMR No. 290, 3 A/SLMR 389 (1973); Office of Economic Opportunity, Region V, Chicago, Illinois, A/SLMR No. 334, 3 A/SLMR 669, 671 (1973).

I therefore conclude that Respondent's unilateral determination that, under the terms of the negotiated agreement, the grievance herein was not proper for further processing to the Third and Fourth Steps of the negotiated grievance procedure and to arbitration, as provided for by the agreement, violated Sections 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order. Here, unlike the situation in U.S. Department of Defense, Department of the Army, U.S. Army Adjutant General, Publication Center, St. Louis, Missouri, A/SLMR No. 455, 4 A/SLMR 800 (1974), there was no provision of the negotiated agreement which clearly removed the grievance herein from the procedures of the negotiated grievance procedure. To the contrary, the incorporated provisions of Respondent's Employee Appraisal System specifically provided that an employee may seek a change "in one or more of the factor ratings" through the negotiated grievance system. The grievance sought a change "in one or more of the factor ratings"; the grievance did not seek any change of Ms. Stroud's overall rating of satisfactory. After the rating official's decision, on the merits at Step One, in which he rejected the grievance and adhered to his original determination as to each of the factor ratings, the decision at Step Two, that "the grievance procedure may not be used to have an overall rating of satisfactory changed which was premised on the assumption that the relief prayed would be granted in full and, therefore, the grievance was, in effect, an attempt to use the negotiated grievance system to have an overall rating changed, was of doubtful good faith in view of the decision of the rating official at Step One and the requirements for an outstanding rating; but in any event Mr. Kielman's decision was, at best, an arguable construction as to which there was a differing arguable construction. Thus, standing alone, the decision at Step Two was not an unfair labor practice and the validity of that decision was, pursuant to the negotiated grievance procedure, to be resolved through the negotiated procedure. But when Respondent refused to process the grievance to Step Three, a timely appeal having been taken to Step Three in accordance with the negotiated grievance procedure, and Respondent returned the grievance, Respondent, on the basis of its own unilateral interpretation of the contract and its own unilateral determination as to what is grievable, and inferentially arbitrable, under the contract, thereby unilaterally modified substantial terms of its collective bargaining agreement with Complainant and thereby violated Sections 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order.

Moreover, the grievance of March 31, 1977, had related to Section II of the Appraisal, i.e., "Assessment of Abilities and Traits Relevant to Promotion Potential", which had nothing to do with Ms. Stroud's overall performance rating which was part of Section I. As to its unilateral determination to refuse to process this portion of the grievance, Respondent's sole response has been to ignore it. While it would appear that this action alone would constitute a violation of Sections 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order, in view of my conclusion above, I find it unnecessary to decide whether Respondent's unilateral determination to refuse to process this portion of the grievance was also a violation of the Order. In like manner, I find it unnecessary, in view of my conclusion above, to treat other contentions raised by Complainant.

Neither the 19(a)(1) nor the 19(a)(6) violation has been rendered moot by the fact that Ms. Stroud is not currently employed by Respondent. The 19(a)(6) violation was a refusal to consult, confer, or negotiate with Complainant Chapter 91, the duly recognized exclusive representative. The 19(a)(1) violation as to Ms. Stroud occurred while she was an employee of Respondent; but, equally important, because Respondent's course of conduct has had the effect of evidencing to all employees of Respondent that it can act unilaterally with respect to negotiated terms and conditions of employment without regard to their exclusive representative, the rights of all unit employees, established under Section 1(a) of the Order, were interfered with in violation of Section 19(a)(1) of the Order, not merely the rights of the individual grievant, Ms. Stroud. Accordingly, the 19(a)(1) violation has not become moot.

RECOMMENDED ORDER

Pursuant to Section 6(b) of Executive Order 11491, as amended, and Section 203.26(b) of the Regulations, the Assistant Secretary of Labor for Labor-Management Relations hereby orders that the General Services Administration, Region 5, Chicago, Illinois, shall:

b. Interfering with, restraining, or coercing its employees by unilaterally determining the grievability of grievances seeking a change in one or more of the factor ratings of Employee Performance Ratings pursuant to its negotiated agreement, effective July 14, 1975, covering Local 1300, National Federation of Federal Employees.

c. In any like or related manner, interfering with, restraining, or coercing its employees in the exercise of rights assured by Executive Order 11491, as amended.

2. Take the following affirmative actions in order to effectuate the purposes and provisions of the Executive Order:

a. Upon request, proceed to Step 3, of the negotiated grievance procedure, set forth in the negotiated agreement effective July 14, 1975, on the grievance of March 31, 1977, which sought to change one or more of the factor ratings on an Employee Performance Rating. If this matter is unresolved at Step 3, thereafter, upon request, proceed to Step 4 and to arbitration, as provided in the negotiated agreement effective July 14, 1975.

b. Post at its Chicago, Illinois, Facility copies of the attached notice marked "Appendix" on forms to be furnished by the Assistant Secretary of Labor for Labor-Management Relations. Case No. 22-08522(CA)

AMERICAN FEDERATION OF GOVERNMENT
EMPLOYEES, LOCAL 1733, AFL-CIO

Complainant

This case involved an unfair labor practice complaint filed by the American Federation of Government Employees, Local 1733, AFL-CIO (Complainant) alleging that the Respondent violated Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order by engaging in a mass transfer of officers from the Respondent's Tactical Unit to a non-tactical unit, on a non-seniority basis, in disregard of the parties' oral agreement.

DECISION AND ORDER

The Administrative Law Judge found that the Respondent had not violated Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order. In this regard, he found that the parties' oral agreement to use seniority as a basis for transferring Federal Protective Officers from one unit to another did not apply to the Tactical Unit and that transfers to and from this special unit were to be based on performance. Accordingly, he recommended that the complaint be dismissed in its entirety.

On August 16, 1978, Administrative Law Judge Robert G. Mahony issued his Recommended Decision in the above-entitled proceeding, finding that the Respondent had not engaged in the unfair labor practices alleged in the complaint and recommending that the complaint be dismissed in its entirety. 1/

The Assistant Secretary adopted the findings, conclusions and recommendation of the Administrative Law Judge and ordered that the complaint be dismissed.

The Assistant Secretary has reviewed the rulings of the Administrative Law Judge made at the hearing and finds that no prejudicial error was committed. The rulings are hereby affirmed. Upon consideration of the Administrative Law Judge's Recommended Decision and the entire record in the subject case, I hereby adopt the Administrative Law Judge's findings, conclusions and recommendation.

ORDER

IT IS HEREBY ORDERED that the complaint in Case No. 22-08522(CA) be, and it hereby is, dismissed.

The Activity answered the complaint denying that any agreement was breached because any agreement regarding the reassignment of officers did not apply to the tactical unit. The Activity further contends that any alleged violation in the assignment procedures would be a violation of the negotiated agreement and should be negotiated under the negotiated grievance procedure, rather than through Unfair Labor Practice procedures. The Activity further requests that the complaint be dismissed.

Issue

This dispute centers on whether this oral agreement or understanding applies to the tactical unit of the Federal Protective Service. The union maintains that the agreement applies; management asserts that it does not.

Discussion

The genesis of the complaint was the transfer of seven Federal Protective Service Officers from the Tactical Unit to the Department of Agriculture on July 12, 1977. 2/ This transfer allegedly violated an oral understanding between the union and management that transfers would be first on a voluntary basis, and then on a last-in-first out seniority basis.

The Tactical Unit is comprised of male and female officers and is used primarily for special circumstances such as demonstrations or disturbances or other situations where the routine Federal Protective Service details do not provide sufficient manpower or other requirements. Unit members may be required to work long hours on any shift and to assume responsibilities not found in a routine zone assignment. Assignment to the Tactical Unit is generally regarded by the Officers to be a choice assignment.

2 The names of the transferred officers are contained in a letter with attachment dated May 30, 1978, which was submitted, at the request of the Administrative Law Judge, after the hearing. It is admitted into evidence as Claimant's exhibit 1. The exhibit states that if seniority was used as a criteria in reassignment five of the seven officers would have remained with the Tactical Unit. The record indicates that there were several discussions between union and management representatives during 1975 and 1976 on the issue of transfers in general.

RECOMMENDED DECISION

This proceeding arises under the provisions of Executive Order 11491, as amended (hereinafter referred to as the Order). Pursuant to the Regulations of the Assistant Secretary of Labor for Labor-Management Relations (hereinafter referred to as the Assistant Secretary), a Notice of Hearing on Complaint, as amended, was issued on April 4, 1978, with reference to alleged violations of Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order 1/.

The Complaint was filed on September 9, 1977 by the A.F.G.E., Local 1733. The amended complaint was filed on January 30, 1978. The Complaint, as amended, alleges that the Management and Enforcement Branch, Federal Protective Service Division violated an alleged oral agreement with Local 1733 by engaging in a mass transfer of officers from the Federal Protective Service Tactical Unit to a non-tactical unit, on a non-seniority basis.

1/ 19(a) states: Agency management shall not -

- (1) interfere with, restrain, or coerce an employee in the exercise of the rights assured by this Order;
- (6) refuse to consult, confer, or negotiate with a labor organization as required by this Order.

The threshold question, and the one on which this case be decided, is whether the oral agreement or understanding applied to the Tactical Unit transfers.

Mr. James H. Maddock, Chief, Operations Branch, Federal Protective Service, testified, as did several union witnesses, that union and management did, in fact, discuss the issue of transfers and reassignments. Maddock verbally agreed to attempt to reassign by seniority if there were no overriding consideration, such as security clearances. Maddock testified however, that this agreement would not apply to the Tactical Unit because of the unique character of its assignments. Maddock asserted that this agreement was restricted to those officers who served in zones. The union witnesses who participated in the discussions felt that it also applied to the Tactical Unit.

Chief Maddock testified that in February or March 1977, due to a lessening of the work for the Tactical Unit, he decided to reduce the number of people assigned to it, and put them back in zones.

At his instruction, the Tactical Unit Commander prepared a list of possible transfers. It was from this list that officers were selected to go to the Department of Agriculture when the Federal Protective Service replaced private security guards.

Chief Maddock testified that he was told by Captain Carter, the Tactical Unit Commander that the individuals on the list were those that the Unit Commander "would like to ship out first, if he had to reduce." the criterion for the selection as Chief Maddock understood it was their performance in the Tactical Unit. Chief Maddock's view on why officers were removed from the Tactical Unit was essentially corroborated by a union witness, officer William Finney.

Officer Finney testified:

"In the past, when transfers were made from our particular unit, it was usually used as a disciplinary action to one that did something wrong in that unit.

"Then, they would actually transfer them back the zone where I went, you know. But other than that, they don't usually have any transfers.

"There wasn't any transfers unless they were taking disciplinary action against someone, you know."

Jerome A. Kaplan, a building management specialist testified that he participated as a management representative in several meetings with the union when the subject of "mass" transfers or reassignments was brought up.

Kaplan testified that Chief Maddock would try to accommodate transfers based on seniority if there were no overriding considerations. He was emphatic, however, that this understanding did not apply to the Tactical Unit.

He stated:

Q. Would this (Maddock's agreement to try to use seniority as a basis for transfer) apply also with respect to reassignments in the Tactical Unit?

A. No, not at all. Not TAC, or what we call the SEU Unit.

They were elitist units, as such, and that flexibility of reassignments in and out of that is definitely required and always used to a great extent.

Q. Is your recollection that TAC & SEU were specifically excluded from this?

A. That's right. We were talking primarily concerning the zones. ^{3/}

Findings of Fact

This evidence in this case establishes that:

(1) The union and management from time to time during 1975 and 1976 discussed the issue of the "mass" transfer of Federal Protective Officers from the units and the criteria that should be considered in making such a transfer.

(2) Management agreed to seek volunteers for transfers and then to use seniority on a last-in-first-out basis.

^{3/} Zones are generally geographic assignment areas, such as the Pentagon.

- (3) This arrangement only applied to Federal Protection Officers working in zones.
- (4) Because of the unique and demanding requirements placed upon the Tactical Unit and other special units, this oral agreement would not apply to them. Transfers to and from these special units would be based on performance

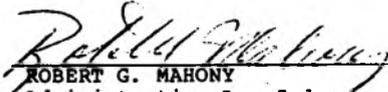

Conclusions of Law

From the foregoing, I conclude that:

- (1) The Activity did not interfere with, restrain, or coerce an employee in the exercise of the rights assured by this order;
- (2) The Activity did not refuse to consult, confer or negotiate with a labor organization as required by this Order.
- (3) The Complainant has not sustained its burden of proving by a preponderance of the evidence that the Respondent violated the provisions of Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order.

Recommendation

Upon the basis of the above findings, conclusions and the entire record, I recommend to the Assistant Secretary that the complaint in Case No. 22-08522(CA) be dismissed in its entirety.

 PURSUANT TO SECTION 6 OF EXECUTIVE ORDER 11491, AS AMENDED

DEPARTMENT OF TRANSPORTATION,
 FEDERAL AVIATION ADMINISTRATION,
 ALASKAN REGION,
 ANCHORAGE, ALASKA
 A/SLMR No. 1141

This case involved an unfair labor practice complaint filed by the American Federation of Government Employees, Local 3028, AFL-CIO (Complainant) alleging that the Respondent violated Section 19(a)(1) and (3) of the Order by its failure to remove posted literature of a labor organization which was not in equivalent status with the Complainant.

In addition to the Complainant's unit at the Respondent's facility, certain of the Respondent's employees were represented exclusively by the Professional Air Traffic Controllers Organization, Pacific Region (PATCO). The Respondent and the PATCO were parties to a negotiated agreement which gave the PATCO the use of bulletin boards and provided that the Respondent would not remove any material posted thereon. Between March and July 1977, several of the Complainant's unit employees noticed literature of the Professional Airways Systems Specialists (PASS), a rival labor organization, posted on the PATCO bulletin boards. The Respondent and the Complainant stipulated that the PASS was not in an equivalent status with the Complainant.

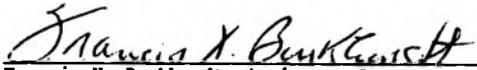

The Administrative Law Judge concluded that the Respondent's conduct was not violative of the Order. In this regard, he noted that the Respondent had taken no affirmative action which was beneficial to the PASS, that the Complainant could have posted counter literature on its bulletin boards, and that because the PASS literature was posted on the PATCO bulletin boards, rather than on the Respondent's bulletin boards, this constituted a sufficient safeguard against the possibility of employees perceiving either the Respondent's support for or opposition to the Complainant. He further noted that the Respondent was contractually prohibited from removing material posted on the PATCO bulletin boards.

The Assistant Secretary adopted the findings, conclusions and recommendation of the Administrative Law Judge and ordered that the complaint be dismissed.

RECOMMENDED DECISION AND ORDER

Statement of the Case

This proceeding under Executive Order 11491, as amended, was initiated by ~~complaint filed November 2, 1977.~~ An amended complaint filed March 15, 1978, was modified by letter of March 17, 1978, whereby an allegation of a section 19(a)(5) violation was withdrawn. Notice of hearing was issued on March 28, 1978, by the Regional Administrator, United States Department of Labor, Labor-Management Services Administration, San Francisco Region, pursuant to which a hearing was held at Anchorage, Alaska, on May 16, 1978. Thereafter, the parties filed briefs, upon the receipt of the last of which (PATCO's post-hearing reply brief) 1/ the record duly closed on July 31, 1978.

The basis for the complaint, in which Respondent is charged with violation of section 19(a)(1) and (3) of the Executive Order, is set forth therein as follows:

"Bulletin boards in air traffic facilities assigned to PATCO units are carrying solicitations for membership in an organization of Airway Facility employees called 'PASS'. The bulletin boards are in areas common to air traffic and airway facility employees. AFGE is the exclusive representative for airway facility employees in the Alaska region. The material on the boards is intended to discourage AFGE membership, gives assistance to an unrecognized organization and refuses proper recognition to the recognized organization...." (Typographical errors corrected)

The parties have been afforded full opportunity to be heard, to adduce evidence, to examine and cross-examine witnesses, to make oral argument and to file briefs.^{2/} Based upon the evidence of record, having observed the witnesses and assessed their credibility and

1/ In the absence of any objection I grant the Motion for Leave to File said brief.

2/ I accept Complainants' brief which was not filed until July 14, 1978.

having considered the arguments of the parties, I make the within findings, ^{3/} conclusions and recommendation.

FINDINGS AND CONCLUSIONS

Preliminary Findings And Conclusions

I

AFGE Local 3028 is the exclusive representative of all employees under the supervision of the Chief, Airway Facilities Division, Alaskan Region, Federal Aviation Administration. (This unit includes technicians at the Anchorage Air Route Traffic Control Center located at Elmendorf Air Force Base, and technicians at the Elmendorf Radar Approach Control Tower).

II

PATCO is the exclusive representative of all air traffic control specialists, GS-2152 series, including flow controllers, area specialists, data systems specialists, planning and procedures specialists, and military liaison and security specialists employed at air traffic control towers, air traffic control centers and combined-station-towers.

III

The aforesaid units do not overlap.

IV

The following collective bargaining agreements are material: Agreement between AFGE Local 3028 and the Airway Facilities Division, Alaskan Region, dated May 1977, which is still in effect ... Agreement between the Professional Air Traffic Controllers Organization affiliated with Marine Engineers Beneficial Association, AFL-CIO and the Federal Aviation Administration Department of Transportation dated July 1975, which was in effect when ULP Case No. 71-4515 (CA) was brought.

V

The Professional Airway Systems Specialists (PASS) enjoys no exclusive recognition for FAA employees at the ^{3/} Items I through VIII are based upon stipulations (Joint Exhibit No. 1; TR. 16).

Anchorage ARTCC, located at Elmendorf Air Force Base, or for any other FAA employees within the Alaskan Region of FAA, nor does it have equivalent status with any AFGE or PATCO labor organization within the Alaskan Region.

VI

The materials ^{4/}, the posting of which are at issue herein, were posted upon bulletin boards designated as PATCO union bulletin boards within the Anchorage ARTCC and RAPCON, located at Elmendorf Air Force Base, Alaska. These bulletin boards are the property of the FAA and are described in Article 9 of the aforementioned collective bargaining agreement between FAA and PATCO. The bulletin boards are in areas frequented by AFGE bargaining unit members.

VII

Respondent has never directed PATCO to remove said posted materials.

VIII

Posting of the materials at issue by Respondent on its bulletin boards would constitute a violation of the Order.

IX

The materials posted in April or May 1978, ^{5/} are not the subject matter of the complaint filed herein, the complaint having preceded the posting.

X

PASS is a labor organization which, according to the posted materials (Union Exhibit No. 1), is an autonomous union sponsored by PATCO and intended to be a PATCO affiliate. PASS is competitive with Complainant in regard to representation of FAA's technicians.

XI

Respondent contends that it is precluded from removing the subject materials from PATCO's bulletin boards by ^{4/} Joint Exhibit 1 at C, D and E; Union Exhibit 1.

^{5/} Joint Exhibit 1 at F and G.

Article 9, Section 1 of the FAA-PATCO collective bargaining agreement:

The Employer shall provide bulletin board space for the posting of Union material at air traffic facilities within the unit. This shall apply even if none of the employees at the facility are members of the Union. At facilities where space is adequate for separate bulletin boards, the Union shall be granted a separate bulletin board. There shall be no restriction on the content of publications or announcements placed on the Union's bulletin boards by the Union. Posted materials will not be removed by the Employer. The Parties recognize that the posting of scurrilous and inflammatory material is prohibited. Materials shall be posted during non-work time.

The parties at the hearing presented no factual evidence bearing upon the intent and purpose of said article although the necessity for such was indicated by the Regional Administrator, in his March 28, 1978, pre-hearing letter. The lone witness called at the hearing was Complainant local's President; the parties to the contract at issue presented no witnesses. Afforded the opportunity at a post-hearing conference conducted by telephone on June 27, 1978, all concerned declined to present further evidence; although the question is dealt with on brief, such does not constitute factual evidence.

The contractual language therefore must speak for itself. Thus, the subject materials appearing to be neither inflammatory nor scurrilous I conclude that Article 9, Section 1 constitutes an agreement that they may not be removed by Respondent.

The ultimate conclusion reached hereinbelow in any event renders moot the apparent issue raised by such contractual provision, namely whether or not an activity may by third party contract divest itself of an Executive Order duty owed to the exclusive representative of its employees.

Additional Findings And Conclusions

The thrust of Complainant Union's charge against the Activity is that it was under a duty to censor materials posted by PATCO on PATCO's bulletin boards. Specifically it is alleged that Respondent stands in violation of section 19(a)(1) and (3) of the Order because it failed to remove from PATCO's bulletin boards material of PASS, a union not in equivalent status with Complainant, which material constituted a solicitation for membership in PASS, was intended to discourage membership in Complainant union, gave assistance to an unrecognized labor organization and constituted a refusal to give proper recognition to Complainant as incumbent exclusive representative.

Any resolution of the issues thus generated must be considered circumscribed by the Federal Labor Relations Council's recent decision in Department of the Air Force, Grissom Air Force Base, and Local 1434, National Federation of Federal Employees and Local 3254 American Federation of Government Employees, AFL-CIO, A/SLMR No. 852, FLRC No. 77A-77 (May 2, 1978). The Grissom decision constitutes a major policy determination as to the interpretation and application of section 19(a)(3) (and section 19(a)(1)) of the Executive Order.

In Grissom the instrumentality in which the objected to publication (a Union advertisement) was made was a weekly unofficial newspaper published by a private publisher under contract with the Air Force Activity.

The news content, headlines, editorials, captions and pictures published in the newspaper all were furnished by the Activity. The editor of the newspaper was an airman detailed by the Activity for such duty. Copies of the newspaper were available free of charge to base personnel at various locations on the base.

The sole source of revenue of the publisher of the newspaper was derived from the sale of advertisements. Pursuant to the contract with the Activity certain types of advertisements were not permissible for publication including those in conflict with the principles of the Air Force character guidance program; those from "off limits" establishments; those of a political nature; those which were unlawful, detrimental to discipline, undermined loyalty or were otherwise contrary to the best interests of the Activity, the Air Force and the United States. In case of disagreement over advertising content the contract provides that the Activity's base commander "shall have the final authority for determination." The Activity, through said airman-editor, who had seen the objected to advertisement in galley proof form, must be considered to have had prior knowledge of the content of said advertisement and made no effort to prevent its publication. Although the advertisement did not make specific reference to the incumbent union it promoted membership in the advertising union.

In accordance with the contract the edition of the newspaper in which the disputed advertisement appeared contained the following statement:

"The Contact is an unofficial newspaper published weekly in the interest of personnel at Grissom AFB of the Strategic Air Command, it is published by James Bannon, an individual, in no way connected with the Air Force. Opinions expressed by publishers and writers are their own and are not to be considered an official expression by the Department of the Air Force. The appearance of advertisements, including supplements and inserts, in this publication does not constitute an endorsement by the Department of the Air Force of products or services advertised. Everything advertised in this publication must be made available for purchase, use or patronage without regard to race, creed, color, national origin or sex of the purchaser, user or patron. A confirmed violation of this policy of equal opportunities by an advertiser will result in the refusal to print advertising from that source."

In both Grissom and this case the Activity provided the vehicle for the disputed publication; in Grissom the newspaper, and in this case the PATCO bulletin board. In both cases the publication of the disputed material was made on the premises of the Activity; in Grissom by newspaper distributed on the base, evidently with the Activity's knowledge and consent and, in this case, by posting on PATCO's bulletin board, with the Activity's knowledge only after the posting. In Grissom a representative of the Activity had advance notice of the publication and the Activity had apparent contractual authority to prevent it, whereas in this case the Activity had no advance notice of the materials to be posted and was prohibited by contract from removing the materials once posted.

In the circumstances of Grissom the Activity was considered to have taken "no affirmative action in any manner beneficial" to the non-incumbent union; nor, under that reasoning, has the Activity in this case taken any such affirmative action.

In Grissom, if it had desired to do so, the incumbent Union could have published a counter advertisement; there is no evidence in this case that AFGE would not have been provided with its own bulletin board space 6/ upon which to post counter materials, if such had been requested.

In Grissom the publication of the material was "totally free from any hint of management endorsement" and there was no evidence of any other "conduct by agency management which might be perceived by employees as an indication of support "for the non-incumbent union or opposition to the exclusive representative." I find that since the materials at issue here were posted on PATCO bulletin boards and not on Activity bulletin boards there was sufficient safeguard against the possibility that they would "be perceived by employees as an indication of (management's) support for 'Pass' or (management's) opposition to" AFGE.

The Council in Grissom framed the major policy issue to be determined as follows:

"the question is whether the Assistant Secretary's finding of a 19(a)(3) violation is consistent with the purposes of the Order or, to state it alternatively, whether a finding that the activity violated section 19(a)(3) of the Order by permitting the publication of an advertisement by the AFGE in a newspaper which it controls is consistent with the purposes of the Order."

In concluding that it was not the Council delineated the purpose of section 19(a)(3):

"the proscription in section 19(a)(3), namely that agency management shall not sponsor, control or otherwise assist a labor organization, was an adoption of the identical wording of section 3.2(a)(3) of the Code of Fair Labor Practices, the antecedent of the current 19(a)(3) provision. (3 CFR 1959-63, Comp. at 852.) Section 19(a)(3) was clearly intended, as was stated with regard to the Code provision, to prevent agency management from dominating or controlling a labor organization by 6/ The pertinent contract between AFGE and FAA at Article XIX, Section 2 provides only that "Union use of Employer bulletin boards shall be in accordance with the established procedures set forth in FAA Order 7710, 7B.

contributing financial or other support to it and to preserve the independence of such organizations from agency manipulation. In the Council's view, this proscription was not intended to reach the conduct of agency management such as is at issue in the circumstances of the instant case."

In disposing of the "services and facilities" aspect of section 19(a)(3) the Council stated:

"Section 19(a)(3) provides that agency management shall not sponsor, control or otherwise assist a labor organization. The remaining language contained in the section is a proviso to the otherwise absolute ban. That is, an agency may furnish customary and routine services and facilities when consistent with the best interests of the agency, its employees, and the organization, and when the services and facilities are furnished, if requested, on an impartial basis to organizations having equivalent status. In view of our conclusion herein that agency management has not sponsored, controlled or otherwise assisted AFGE in the circumstances of the case, it is unnecessary to apply the proviso permitting the furnishing of customary and routine services and facilities, under described conditions, to organizations having equivalent status."

In ultimate conclusionary remarks it was stated that:

"In the Council's opinion, the proscription that agency management shall not sponsor, control or otherwise assist a labor organization was not intended to cover such circumstances as here involved. That is, a finding of a 19(a)(3) violation based merely on the failure to prevent the publication of the subject advertisement by AFGE is inconsistent with the purposes of the Order."

"Similarly, such conduct plainly does not constitute interference with, restraint or coercion of an employee in the exercise of the rights assured by the Order in violation of section 19(a)(1)."

The Activity's conduct herein rises to no greater level than "failure to prevent the publication" of the posted materials by declining to remove them from PATCO's bulletin board and accordingly falls within the purview of Grissom.

In the final analysis it is the doctrine of Grissom that the purpose of Section 19(a)(3) is to preserve the independence of labor organizations free of management domination or control.

The record before me does not establish that Respondent has engaged in any conduct which may be considered to be in defeat of that purpose. Accordingly, it is concluded that no violation of either Section 19(a)(3) or Section 19(a)(1) has occurred.

RECOMMENDATION

I recommend to the Assistant Secretary that the complaint be dismissed in its entirety.

UNITED STATES DEPARTMENT OF LABOR

SUMMARY OF DECISION AND ORDER OF THE ASSISTANT SECRETARY
PURSUANT TO SECTION 6 OF EXECUTIVE ORDER 11491, AS AMENDED

DEPARTMENT OF THE TREASURY,
INTERNAL REVENUE SERVICE,
AUSTIN SERVICE CENTER,
AUSTIN, TEXAS
A/SIMR No. 1142

This case involved an unfair labor practice complaint filed by the National Treasury Employees Union and NTEU Chapter 72 (Complainant) alleging that the Respondent violated Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order by unilaterally converting the status of three reassigned GS-6 Work Leaders from temporary to permanent without notifying the Complainant and affording it the opportunity to bargain over the impact and implementation of such change. The subject reassignments were made permanent after the Respondent had notified the Complainant and certain interested employees about the decision to temporarily reassign three GS-6 Tax Examiners to Work Leader positions for the 1977 tax season, and to fill the same positions competitively for the 1978 tax season. The Respondent contended, among other things, that making such reassignment is a reserved management right under Section 12(b) of the Order, that no request to bargain was ever made by the Complainant, and that, in any event, the Complainant waived its right to bargain over such matters in negotiating the current negotiated agreement.

The Administrative Law Judge found that the Respondent violated Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order by unilaterally making the reassignments permanent without first notifying the Complainant and affording it an opportunity to bargain over the impact of the change. In this regard, he noted that the Work Leader positions were filled competitively for the 1976 tax season.

In adopting the Administrative Law Judge's findings, conclusions and recommendations, the Assistant Secretary noted that a request to bargain over the impact and implementation of a management decision is not necessary to establish a violation of the Order where, as here, management unilaterally made changes in personnel policies, practices or matters affecting working conditions without prior notice to the exclusive representative. Thus, he found that the Respondent was obligated to notify the Complainant and afford it an opportunity to bargain on matters relating to the implementation of the decision to permanently reassign employees to the subject Work Leader positions, whether or not an appropriate request to bargain was made by the Complainant. The Assistant Secretary further found insufficient evidence to establish that the Complainant clearly and unmistakably waived its right under the Order to bargain on the impact and implementation of the Respondent's decision. Accordingly, he ordered that the Respondent cease and desist from the conduct found violative of the Order and take certain affirmative actions.

DECISION AND ORDER

On June 15, 1978, Administrative Law Judge Ben H. Walley issued his Recommended Decision and Order in the above-entitled proceeding, finding that the Respondent had engaged in the unfair labor practices alleged in the complaint and recommending that it cease and desist therefrom and take certain affirmative actions as set forth in the attached Administrative Law Judge's Recommended Decision and Order. Thereafter, both the Respondent and the Complainant filed exceptions and supporting briefs with respect to the Administrative Law Judge's Recommended Decision and Order. 1/

The Assistant Secretary has reviewed the rulings of the Administrative Law Judge made at the hearing and finds that no prejudicial error was committed. The rulings are hereby affirmed. Upon consideration of the Administrative Law Judge's Recommended Decision and Order, and the entire record in the subject case, including the exceptions and

1/ Both the Complainant and the Respondent were permitted to file answering briefs to each other's exceptions. However, as the Complainant's answering brief was received untimely, it has not been considered herein. Subsequently, the Complainant moved for permission to file "a cross-answer" to the Respondent's answering brief. The motion is hereby denied.

briefs filed by the parties, I hereby adopt the Administrative Law Judge's findings, 2/ conclusions 3/ and recommendations, only to the extent consistent herewith.

In essence, the Administrative Law Judge found that the Respondent violated Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order by unilaterally making three temporary reassignments permanent without first notifying the Complainant and affording it an opportunity to bargain over the impact of this change in policy. In this regard, he noted that the reassignments were made permanent after the Respondent had notified the Complainant and certain interested employees about its decision to temporarily reassign three GS-6 Tax Examiners to GS-6 Work Leader positions for the 1977 tax season and to fill the same positions competitively for the 1978 tax season, in the same manner they had been filled for the 1976 season.

2/ In its exceptions, the Respondent contended that the Administrative Law Judge's finding that it informed GS-5 and GS-6 level employees at a meeting on January 14, 1977, that the Work Leader positions for the 1977 season only would be filled by the temporary reassignment of the GS-6 Tax Examiners "from another section" is not supported by the evidence presented at the hearing. Upon review of the record, I find that the evidence establishes that the Respondent informed employees at the January 14, 1977, meeting that the Work Leader positions would be filled by the temporary reassignment of GS-6 Tax Examiners in the Error Correction Section, and not by GS-6 Tax Examiners from another section as the Administrative Law Judge inadvertently determined.

3/ The Respondent excepted to the Administrative Law Judge's finding that the Complainant made a proper request to bargain over the impact and implementation of its decision to make the temporary reassignments permanent. While such a request is necessary when an exclusive representative has been afforded prior notice of proposed changes in personnel policies, practices or matters affecting working conditions, where, as here, agency management has unilaterally made changes in these areas without prior notice to the exclusive representative, in my view, it is not necessary for such representative to request bargaining after the fact to establish a violation of the Order. Consequently, whether or not an appropriate request to bargain was made herein was not considered to be determinative with respect to whether a violation occurred herein. Cf. Department of the Treasury, Internal Revenue Service, Jacksonville District, 7 A/SLMR 1038, A/SLMR No. 953 (1977).

In its exceptions, Respondent excepts to the Administrative Law Judge's failure to address its contention that the Complainant, during negotiations for the current collective bargaining agreement, waived its right to notification and bargaining over the impact and implementation of the decision to make the temporary reassignments permanent. The record reveals, in this connection, that during contract negotiations the Complainant submitted a proposal which would have required most vacancies, including reassignments, to be filled competitively. The Respondent rejected the proposal, asserting that it was too expensive and moreover, that it was a management right which could not be relinquished. Subsequently, the Complainant offered contract language that, among other things, excluded lateral reassignments from competitive action where a reassignment occurred prior to the decision and announcement to fill the position involved competitively. Thereafter, Article 6, Section 2B.5. of the parties' negotiated agreement was agreed upon without comment. 4/ The Respondent argues that the Complainant's silence in light of the Respondent's rationale for rejecting the previous proposal indicated that the Complainant had waived its right to notification and negotiation over the subject reassignments.

It is well established that in order to find a waiver of a right granted under the Order, such waiver must be clear and unmistakable. Thus, a waiver will not be found merely from the fact that an agreement omits specific reference to a right granted by the Order or that a party has failed in negotiations to obtain protection with respect to certain of its rights granted by the Order. 5/ As indicated above, Article 6, Section 2B.5. of the parties' negotiated agreement reflects the parties' views as to when a position can be filled by lateral reassignment without competition. In my opinion, however, it does not clearly restrict or limit the Complainant's right to notification and the opportunity to meet and confer with respect to the impact and implementation of lateral reassignments. Under these circumstances, therefore, I find that Article 6, Section 2B.5. does not establish a clear and unmistakable waiver of the Complainant's right to notification and the opportunity to bargain over the impact and implementation of a management decision in this regard.

4/ Article 6, Section 2B.5. states:

B. Exceptions to the coverage of this Article will be as follows:

5. Filling a position by a lateral reassignment prior to a determination and an announcement by the Employer that the vacancy will be filled by a competitive action under the terms of this Article. (If a position has been posted as a vacancy to be filled by competitive action, the Employer may fill the vacancy without competition only if unforeseen circumstances of an extraordinary nature become known to the Employer, subsequent to the time a vacancy is announced and prior to the selection.)

Accordingly, I find that, by changing the classification of employees reassigned as Work Leaders from temporary to permanent without first notifying the Complainant and affording it an opportunity to bargain over the impact and implementation of such change, the Respondent violated Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order.

ORDER 6/

Pursuant to Section 6(b) of Executive Order 11491, as amended, and Section 203.26(b) of the Regulations, the Assistant Secretary of Labor for Labor-Management Relations hereby orders that the Department of the Treasury, Internal Revenue Service, Austin Service Center, Austin, Texas, shall:

1. Cease and desist from:

(a) Instituting a change in reassignment policy with respect to employees represented exclusively by the National Treasury Employees Union and NTEU Chapter 72, or any other exclusive representative of its employees, without affording such representative the opportunity to meet and confer, to the extent consonant with law and regulations, on the procedures which management will observe in implementing such change and on the impact the change will have on adversely affected unit employees.

6/ In its exceptions, the Complainant contended that the Administrative Law Judge erred in finding only that the Respondent was obligated to bargain over the impact of the permanent reassignments. Thus, the Complainant argued that the Administrative Law Judge should have found that the Respondent was also obligated to bargain over the procedures utilized in implementing the decision to make such reassignments permanent. I agree. Thus, as indicated above, I find that the Respondent was required to bargain over the implementation, as well as the impact, of the permanent reassignments involved herein. Accordingly, I shall modify the remedial order consistent with such finding. The Complainant also excepted to the Administrative Law Judge's failure to order the Respondent to make whole any employee adversely affected by the Respondent's improper conduct. In this regard, it is well established in the Federal sector that in order to make a valid back pay award, it is not only necessary to find that an employee has been adversely affected by an improper action, but also that "but for" the improper action, the employee would not have suffered a loss or reduction in pay, allowances, or differentials. See Mare Island Shipyard and Mare Island Navy Yard Metal Trades Council, AFL-CIO, 4 FLRC 143, FLRC No. 74A-64 (1976). In my view, the evidence adduced in this case does not establish that any employees suffered a loss or reduction in pay, allowances, or differentials which he or she would not have suffered "but for" the Respondent's improper conduct. Under the circumstances, therefore, I find that a "make whole" remedy is unwarranted.

(b) In any like or related manner interfering with, restraining, or coercing its employees in the exercise of their rights assured by Executive Order 11491, as amended.

2. Take the following affirmative actions in order to effectuate the purposes and policies of Executive Order 11491, as amended:

(a) Upon request, meet and confer with the National Treasury Employees Union and NTEU Chapter 72, to the extent consonant with law and regulations, concerning the procedures which management observed in reaching the decision as to who was subject to the permanent reassignments announced in January 1977, and the impact the reassignments had on adversely affected employees in the exclusively recognized unit. Any agreement reached by the parties shall be promptly effectuated, including, if consistent with such agreement, the return of any reassigned employees to their prior positions.

(b) Post at its Austin Service Center copies of the attached notice marked "Appendix" on forms to be furnished by the Assistant Secretary of Labor for Labor-Management Relations. Upon receipt of such forms, they shall be signed by the Director of the Austin Service Center, and shall be posted and maintained by him for 60 consecutive days thereafter, in conspicuous places, including all bulletin boards and other places where notices to employees are customarily posted. The Director shall take reasonable steps to insure that such notices are not altered, defaced, or covered by any other material.

(c) Pursuant to Section 203.27 of the Regulations, notify the Assistant Secretary, in writing, within 30 days from the date of this order as to what steps have been taken to comply herewith.

RECOMMENDED DECISION AND ORDER

Statement of The Case

On May 27, 1977, National Treasury Employees Union, 1730 K Street, N.W., Suite 1101, Washington, D.C. 20006, and Chapter No. 72, Austin, Texas 78752, hereafter referred to as Complainant, filed a complaint against Treasury-Internal Revenue Service, Billy Brown, Director, Personnel Division, 1111 Constitution Avenue, N.W., Washington, D.C. 20224, and IRS Austin Service Center, Austin, Texas 78752, hereafter referred to as Respondent, said complaint alleging an unfair labor practice because of conduct allegedly violative of Executive Order 11491, as amended, Section 19(a) subsections (1) and (6), hereafter referred to as the Order.

Upon failing to resolve the differences between the parties growing out of the allegedly violative conduct and filing of the complaint, the Regional Administrator issued Notice of Hearing to be held in Austin, Texas, on October 26, 1977.

In referring this complaint for hearing and disposition, the Office of the Regional Administrator, LMSA, Kansas City Region, requested evidence and testimony be adduced on the following issues:

1. To what extent, if any, was the Respondent obligated under the Order to negotiate with the Complainant concerning the change from temporary work leader to permanent work leader of the three GS-592-6 tax examiners in the Error Correction Section: If so, did it fail to do so in violation of Section 19(a)(6) of the Order.

2. Further, can the Respondent's activities be construed as interference with the rights assured employees by Section (1)(a) of the Order and therefore in violation of Section 19(a)(1) of the Order?

Further, the parties were permitted to develop and offer any evidence relevant to the allegations contained in the complaint.

On May 27, 1977, as aforesaid, the complaint herein was filed. (ALJ Exh. D). Pursuant to the provisions of 29 C.F.R. § 203.5(a)(2), and on June 20, 1977, Respondent filed its response thereto (Res. Exh. 2), urging a dismissal because it fails to "raise even a reasonable belief that the Order has been violated." On July 15, 1977, Complainant filed a Reply to the Response of Respondent to the complaint (Res. Exh. 3). On August 4, 1977, Respondent filed a protest to the consideration of the Reply filed by Complainant (Res. Exh. 1), insisting that without the "reply" Complainant has not "raised a doubt" as to an unfair labor complaint, and the complaint should, therefore, be dismissed. Nevertheless, on September 6, 1977, the Office of the Regional Administrator observed that; "Inasmuch as it appears there is a reasonable basis for the complaint ... Notice of Hearing" is being issued.

At the outset of the hearing, Respondent renewed its efforts, by Motion ore tenus, to have the complaint dismissed. For reasons hereafter set out in the Findings of Fact and Conclusions of Law, the Motion was denied.

At the hearing held, the parties were afforded full opportunity to be heard, to offer, examine, and cross-examine witnesses and to introduce evidence considered relevant to the aforesaid issues and other issues considered by them to be relevant to their position in the premises. After hearing the testimony of the witnesses and observing their demeanor, having received the exhibits and the transcripts, having considered the post-hearing briefs filed herein, and based upon the entire record, I make the following findings of fact, conclusions and recommendations.

Findings of Fact

1. An agreement was negotiated and entered into on July 18, 1975, between the parties hereto under the provisions of Executive Order 11491, as amended, (Res. Exh. 9), and at all times material to the issues here involved said agreement was in full force and effect.

2. At the beginning of the hearing, the parties hereto agreed to certain facts, which I accept, and entered them into the record, by stipulations, as follows:

(a) At all times relevant to the complaint, National Treasury Employees Union, Chapter No. 72, was the recognized exclusive representative for bargaining unit employees at the Austin Service Center.

(b) A work unit at the Austin Service Center is the Input Perfection Branch, and a section of this branch is the Error Correction Section.

(c) As of January 1977, four positions of "Work Leader" or "Senior Tax Examiner" were within the Error Correction Section, Night Shift; of these four, three had for the 1976 tax season, been temporary positions, i.e., they endured only for a single tax season and hence were not filled with permanent incumbents who went into the positions every recurring tax season.

(d) The normal tax season starts around January and lasts until May or June. This is the period during which the Error Correction, Night Shift, was and normally is in operation.

(e) For the 1976 tax season, three of the four work leader positions in the Error Correction Section, Night Shift, were filled by temporary promotions using competitive procedures, and the fourth had been previously filled with a permanent incumbent.

(f) On January 14, 1977, or thereabouts, Respondent announced to Bargaining Unit employees in the Error Correction Section that for the coming tax season only the Work Leader positions would not be filled by temporary promotions, but rather by temporary reassignment of Grade-6 Tax Examiners from the Error Correction, Night Shift.

(g) The union had been notified of the decision to fill the positions by temporary reassignment at the Grade GS-6 level and did not request bargaining.

(h) At the same time Respondent announced for the 1978 tax season the Work Leader positions in the Night Shift of Error Correction would be filled competitively.

(i) Only Grade GS-6 employees of The Error Correction, Night Shift, were considered for the temporary reassignments to Work Leader.

(j) Sometime during mid to late January, 1977, Respondent reassigned three Grade-6 Tax Examiners of the Error Correction Night Shift into the positions of temporary non-recurring Work Leaders for the 1977 tax season.

(k) Subsequently, later in January of 1977, Respondent converted the three temporary, non-recurring, Work Leaders to permanent Recurring Work Leaders. The grade level continued at GS-6. The union was not given advance notification.

(l) The actions referred to in stipulation number (k) was effectuated and the three work leaders were so informed directly by management.

(m) The union, after learning by rumor on or about February 1, 1977, of the action referred to in stipulation number (k), charged the Respondent with an unfair labor practice on February 22, 1977. In the charge, the Complainant did not assert a right to negotiate the basic management action referred to in stipulation number (k). It did assert the right to be notified so that it could negotiate the impact and implementation of that action.

3. In addition to the stipulated facts set out above, the records reflect and I find that the "work leader" positions, although temporary, were available to and filled from GS-5 and GS-6 grade employees, competitively, for the 1976 season, and both GS-5 and GS-6 level employees were invited to and did attend the meeting on January 14, 1977, at which time they were informed that the "work leader" positions for the 1977 season only would be filled by temporary reassignment of GS-6 Tax Examiners from another section. Also, the records reflect and I so find that the decision to convert these "temporary reassignments" to "permanent reassignments" was made on or about January 24, 1977; that this decision was not directed by Civil Service, by personnel manuals, nor any other higher authority, but was wholly of management; that this conversion from "temporary" to "permanent" status effectively removed from all other interested GS-6 and GS-5 level employees the chance to compete for a temporary promotion as "work leader," which is obviously helpful to, if not necessary for progression in the civil service. Clearly, this was a matter of concern to all interested employees and Complainant had a responsibility therein.

4. Proper request was made to negotiate the "impact" of the action but Respondent refused, contending that the action was (1) non-negotiable, and (2) that there was no "impact." Neither of these contentions are tenable.

Conclusions of Law

Exception has been taken to the complaint filed by Motion to Dismiss, ore tenus, because it is alleged that the Area Director had no reasonable basis for referral without consideration of a "reply" filed by Complainant to the "response" made by Respondent pursuant to Section 203.5(a)(2) of the Rules and Regulations promulgated pursuant to the Order (E.O. 11491, as amended, Section 6(d)).

Section 203.6 of the aforesaid Rules and Regulations requires the Area Director to "conduct such independent investigation of the complaint as he deems necessary." Also, it authorizes the parties to request such investigation as circumstances may dictate. Once the investigation has been made and its results made known to the Assistant Regional Director he may take such action as the information supports. If, in the opinion of the Regional Administrator, a reasonable basis for the complaint exists and no settlement is reached, a Notice of Hearing may be issued. If the Notice is issued, the decision to "issue a Notice of Hearing shall not be subject to review by the Assistant Secretary." (29 C.F.R., Chapter II, § 203.9). For this reason, the Motion to Dismiss is denied.

Those portions of Section 19(a) of the Order which are pertinent to the issues raised herein provide that Agency management shall not (1) interfere with, restrain, or coerce an employee in the exercise of the rights as assured by the Order, or (6) refuse to consult, confer, or negotiate with a labor organization as required by this Order.

Section 11(a) of the Order creates a mutual duty upon an agency and a union to negotiate in good faith in respect to personnel policies, practices and matters affecting working conditions so far as may be appropriate under applicable laws and regulations, including "impact" caused by implementation of "policies and practices" duly made and put into effect.

Section 11(b) provides that in prescribing regulations relating to personnel policies, practices and working conditions an agency shall have due regard for the obligation imposed by paragraph (a) of this section. In addition, Section 12(a) establishes that any agreement between an agency and a labor organization is subject to existing or future laws and regulations, by published agency policies and regulations in existence at the time the agreement was approved. Under Section 12(b) management officials retain the right in accordance with applicable law and regulation "... (2) to hire, promote, transfer, assign, and retain employees in positions within the agency, and to suspend, demote, discharge, or take other disciplinary action against employees;"

However, it is well established that even as to accepted or reserved areas of management, there is an obligation to bargain regarding the implementing procedures which it employs in respect to these areas. United Air Force Electronics Systems Division (AFSC)-and-Local 975, National Federation of Federal Employees, A/SLMR No. 571; Department of Navy, Dallas Naval Air Station-and-American Federation of Government Employees Local Union-2427, AFL-CIO, A/SLMR No. 510. However, the requirement of negotiation as to the implementation and impact of personnel policies and practices and matters affecting working conditions relates only to changes therein.

(Department of the Navy, Mare Island Naval Shipyard and Federal Employees Metal Trades Council, AFL-CIO, A/SLMR No. 736) or additions thereto. (Section 11(d) of the Order). Army and Air Force Exchange Service, Pacific Exchange System, Hawaii Regional Exchange, A/SLMR No. 451; Federal Railroad Administration, A/SLMR No. 418.

In the instant case, it is uncontradicted that the Respondent had selected "work leaders" for the 1976 season, competitively, from eligible GS-6 and GS-5 employees, and gave them "temporary promotions" as such. It is equally clear that Respondent intended to follow the same methods for the 1977 season, and in early January conducted a series of training classes in preparation therefor. But, on January 14, 1977, Respondent announced that the "work leader" positions for the coming season only (1977) would be filled by "temporary reassignment" of GS-6 Tax Examiners, which it had a "reserved right" to do. Subsequently, however, Respondent converted the "temporary reassignment" (promotion) into a "permanent reassignment", without notice to Complainant, and this constituted a change in "personnel policies and practices" affecting employees not retained by management. Therefore, the failure to meet and negotiate with Complainant on the "impact" of this unilateral action constituted a violation of Section 19(a)(6) and, derivatively, a violation of Section 19(a)(1) of the Order. LABOR RELATIONS BOARD, REGION 29

This case involved an unfair labor practice complaint filed by the National Labor Relations Board Union (Ind.), Local 29 (Complainant) alleging that the Respondent violated Section 19(a)(1) of the Order by the interrogation of a union officer regarding his reasons for signing a letter sent by the Complainant to the General Counsel of the Respondent.

The Administrative Law Judge concluded that the Respondent violated Section 19(a)(1) of the Order by virtue of its supervisor's interrogation of a union officer, an employee of the Respondent, regarding his reasons for signing a letter to the Respondent's National Office, an act which the Administrative Law Judge found to be protected union activity under the Order. It was noted that the letter was sent under the Complainant's letterhead and the employee signed it in his capacity as a officer of the Complainant.

The Assistant Secretary adopted the findings, conclusions and recommendation of the Administrative Law Judge noting that, under the circumstances of this case, the interrogation could reasonably be construed by the employee to reflect an intention by the Respondent to discourage him from engaging in protected union activity. Accordingly, he ordered that the Respondent Region 29 cease and desist from engaging in the conduct found violative of the Order and that it take certain affirmative actions.

On July 28, 1978, Administrative Law Judge Burton S. The complaint alleges that the Respondent violated Section 19(a)(1) of the Executive Order by virtue of a supervisor's action in interrogating a union officer concerning his participation in a letter sent by the Union to the General Counsel of the Respondent.

A hearing was held in the captioned matter on May 16, 1978, in New York, New York. All parties were afforded full opportunity to be heard, to examine and cross-examine witnesses, and to introduce evidence bearing on the issues involved herein. 1/

Upon the basis of the entire record, including my observation of the witnesses and their demeanor, I make the following findings of fact, conclusions and recommendations.

Findings of Fact

On or about January 27, 1977, the Union, which is the exclusive representative of both the professional and non-professional employees in the New York office of the Respondent, held a meeting for purposes of discussing the impending promotion of Mrs. Beatrice Kornbluh to the position of Supervisory Attorney in Region 29. 2/ Following the meeting the Union sent a letter dated February 1, 1977, to the General Counsel of the Respondent, Mr. John Irving, requesting that the promotion of Mrs. Kornbluh be delayed pending further

1/ During the course of the hearing, Counsel for the Respondent attempted to submit evidence concerning discussions between the Respondent and Union representatives occurring subsequent to the filing of the charge. Inasmuch as the undersigned deemed the discussions to constitute and/or be related to settlement efforts Respondent was not allowed to submit same. In his post hearing brief, Counsel for Respondent requests reopening of the hearing for the submission of such evidence in the event that I should find in favor of the Complainant on the basis of the current record. Although, as evidenced infra, I have found merit in the complaint, I still adhere to my original decision on the post charge discussions and, accordingly, hereby deny Respondent's request to reopen the record.

2/ During the middle of January 1977, Regional Director Kaynard had announced to the staff that he was recommending to Washington that acting supervisory attorney Kornbluh and two other individuals be promoted to permanent supervisory positions.

DECISION AND ORDER

Statement of the Case

Pursuant to a complaint filed on May 12, 1977, under Executive Order 11491, as amended, by Local 29, National Labor Relations Board Union, (Ind.), (hereinafter called the Union or Complainant), against the National Labor Relations Board and its General Counsel and National Labor Relations Board, Region 29, (hereinafter called the Respondent or Activity), a Notice of Hearing on Complaint was issued by the Acting Regional Administrator for New York, N.Y. Region on March 20, 1978.

evaluation. 3/ In support of its request, the Union alleged, among other things, in the letter that:

....Mrs. Kornbluh is unqualified to hold a supervisory position, in that during the periods of time in which she has acted in the capacity of Acting Supervisor, she has been offensive, demeaning, and abusive to professionals and clericals under her supervision. She has also, over the years expressed opinions of prejudice against field examiners and professionals. . . .

....In connection with field examiners, we understand that she has advocated and urged others to support measures to prevent field examiners from being considered for supervisory positions, including that of Assistant to the Regional Director. She has consistently maintained, in discussions with field attorneys, that field examiners are not qualified professional employees, and that they perform inferior work.

On or about February 1, 1977, Mr. Appell, Union president, engaged in separate conversations with Regional Director Kaynard and Assistant General Counsel Silverman concerning the appointment of Mrs. Kornbluh as a permanent supervisor. Both Mr. Kaynard and Mr. Silverman informed Mr. Appell that nothing could be done since the appointment had already been made. 4/

On Friday, February 4, 1977, Regional Director Kaynard gave Mrs. Kornbluh a copy of the February 1st letter sent by the Union. According to Mrs. Kornbluh, she inadvertently left the letter in the office and did not have an opportunity to read it over the weekend. On February 7 or 8, 1977, Mrs. Kornbluh informed Regional Director Kaynard that she had misplaced her copy of the letter and asked for, and received, another copy of the letter which she apparently proceeded

3/ The letter was signed individually by the members of Local 29's Executive Committee, consisting of four officers and two chairpersons. Steven Goodman signed the letter in his capacity as Treasurer and Stephen Appell signed as President.

4/ Respondent stipulated that Mrs. Kornbluh was officially appointed to the position of permanent supervisor effective January 30 or 31, 1977.

to read for the first time.

On February 8, 1977, Union Treasurer Goodman, who was employed by Respondent as a field examiner, stopped at the water fountain located outside the door to Mrs. Kornbluh's office. Upon subsequently entering Mrs. Kornbluh's office, Mr. Goodman was informed by Mrs. Kornbluh, who at the time was holding a copy of the Union's February 1st letter to the General Counsel, that she was hurt and surprised and then asked if he had seen a television program about Joseph McCarthy that had been on the Sunday before. Upon receiving a negative reply from Mr. Goodman, Mrs. Kornbluh then asked Mr. Goodman why he had signed the letter. Mr. Goodman replied that it was something voted by the union membership and that he had signed it because the union membership had voted to have the letter signed by the Union's executive committee of which he was a member. Thereafter a discussion was had between Mr. Goodman and Mrs. Kornbluh with respect to why Mrs. Kornbluh had a reputation for disliking field examiners. Mr. Goodman, who acknowledged during the conversation that he had always enjoyed a good working relationship with Mrs. Kornbluh, made it clear that he had signed the letter not as a personal thing but rather as a member of the executive committee pursuant to a vote of the union membership.

In support of the position set forth in its opening statement that a broad cease and desist order is the proper remedy for the alleged coercive interrogation of Mr. Goodman, the Union presented evidence of (1) a discussion occurring on January 13, 1977, between Union President Appell and Regional Attorney Richman, and (2) a conversation occurring on March 3, 1977, between Mrs. Kornbluh and field attorney Weinrich wherein a second illegal interrogation allegedly occurred. 5/

With regard to the January 13, 1977, incident involving Mr. Appell and Mr. Richman the record reveals that Mr. Appell in his capacity as president of the Union approached Mr. Richman for purposes of discussing the reprimand of a clerical employee for arriving late. During the course of the conversation Mr. Appell accused Mr. Richman of arriving later than the employee on many days and indicated that the Union would monitor Mr. Richman's arrival times. Mr. Richman retorted that if he was monitored he in turn would

5/ Neither of the two events were alleged as violations of the Executive Order in the outstanding complaint. The evidence submitted by the Union with regard to the conversation between Mrs. Kornbluh and Mr. Weinrich consisted of the (continued on next page) monitor Mr. Appell.

On March 3, 1977, approximately three weeks after the incident involving Mr. Goodman, Mrs. Kornbluh called Mr. Weinrich, who was employed as a field examiner by Respondent, into her office. Mrs. Kornbluh stated that since it was Mr. Weinrich's last day of employment it would not constitute a violation of Section 8(a)(1) of the National Labor Relations Act to interrogate him. 6/ Mrs. Kornbluh asked Mr. Weinrich what was all the business about her becoming a supervisor and if Mr. Weinrich did not like her or had a problem with her supervision why did he not come talk to her personally. Mrs. Kornbluh asked for specifics and also inquired why Mr. Weinrich's wife, who was also an employee of the Respondent, did not speak to her.

Discussion and Conclusions

The Assistant Secretary has made it clear that the interrogation of an employee by a member of the supervisory staff of an activity concerning the employee's union affiliation or activity is violative of Section 19(a)(1) of the Executive Order. United States Air Force, Vandenberg Air Force Base, A/SLMR No. 786; Federal Energy Administration, A/SLMR No. 541; Office of Economic Opportunity, A/SLMR No. 477; Vandenberg Air Force Base, A/SLMR No. 383.

In the instant case, Mrs. Kornbluh asked Mr. Goodman the reasons for his action in affixing his signature to the February 1, 1977, letter to the General Counsel of the National Labor Relations Board. Inasmuch as the letter was sent under the Union letterhead and signed by Mr. Goodman in his capacity as Union Treasurer and a member of the Union's Executive Committee, I find that the interrogation concerned Mr. Goodman's union activity and was accordingly in violation of Section 19(a)(1) of the Order.

verbatim notes of a telephone conversation between Field Attorney Edelman and Mr. Weinrich. Mr. Weinrich, who is now affiliated with a labor law firm which has a considerable practice before the NLRB refused to testify.

6/ Mr. Weinrich was scheduled to leave the National Labor Relations Board and commence employment with a private concern the next day.

Contrary to the contention of Respondent's counsel in his post hearing brief, I find that it is unnecessary to establish that the interrogation was accompanied by a threat, open or veiled, which could interfere or coerce an employee in the exercise of the rights assured by Section 1(a) of the Order. The mere interrogation of an employee concerning his union related activities tends to discourage such activities since the employee would always be faced with the distasteful possibility of having to justify or explain his actions at a future date to management.

In reaching the conclusion that the interrogation was violative of Section 19(a)(1) of the Order I am not unmindful of the fact that the person interrogated was a union officer who was one of the signatories to the union sponsored letter. However, in the absence of any evidence of a prior delegation to Mrs. Kornbluh from either the Regional Director or the General Counsel authorizing Mrs. Kornbluh to speak on behalf of Respondent with respect to the subject matter of the union sponsored letter, the interrogation is not privileged.

Having found that the Respondent has violated Section 19(a)(1) of Executive Order 11491, as amended, I recommend that the Assistant Secretary adopt the following order: 7/

Recommended Order

Pursuant to Section 6(b) of Executive Order 11491, as amended, and Section 203.25(a) of the Regulations, the Assistant Secretary of Labor for Labor-Management Relations hereby orders that the National Labor Relations Board, Region 29, shall

1. Cease and desist from

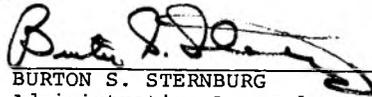

(a) Interrogating employees concerning their membership in, or activities on behalf of the National Labor Relations Board Union (Ind.) Local 29, or any other labor organization.

7/ After reviewing the record as a whole, including the circumstances surrounding the discussions of January 1, and March 3, 1977, involving Mr. Appell and Weinrich, respectively, as well as the content of same, and the character of the Agency's past history in the field of employer-employee relations, I am of the opinion, contrary to the contention of Complainant, that a broad cease and desist order is inappropriate.

2. Take the following affirmative actions in order to effectuate the purposes and provisions of Executive Order 11491, as amended.

(a) Post in the office of Region 29, New York, New York, copies of the attached Notice marked "Appendix" on forms to be furnished by the Assistant Secretary of Labor for Labor Management Relations. Upon receipt of such forms, they shall be signed by the Regional Director of Region 29 and shall be posted and maintained by the Regional Director for 60 consecutive days thereafter, in conspicuous places including all bulletin boards and other places where notices to Regional personnel are customarily posted. The Regional Director shall take reasonable steps to insure that such notices are not altered, defaced, or covered by any other material.

DECISION AND ORDER

This case involved an unfair labor practice complaint filed by the National Treasury Employees Union (NTEU) and NTEU Chapter 91 alleging that the Respondent violated Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order by its failure to give adequate notice and bargain about the impact and implementation of a temporary word processing study conducted in the Respondent's New Orleans Appellate Branch Office.

On July 25, 1978, Administrative Law Judge Garvin Lee Oliver issued his Recommended Decision and Order in the above-entitled proceeding, finding that the Respondent had engaged in the unfair labor practices alleged in the complaint and recommending that it cease and desist therefrom and take certain affirmative actions as set forth in the attached Administrative Law Judge's Recommended Decision and Order. Thereafter, the Respondent filed exceptions and a supporting brief with respect to the Administrative Law Judge's Recommended Decision and Order.

The Administrative Law Judge concluded that the Respondent violated Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order by failing to negotiate over the implementation and impact of the study. In reaching this conclusion, he found that the Respondent failed to notify the NTEU of the word processing study in time to afford it an opportunity to fully explore the matters involved, to request bargaining, and to negotiate prior to management's implementation of the study. The Administrative Law Judge noted that there was no showing of an emergency demanding the study's immediate implementation, and that the conversations concerning the study prior to its implementation could not be construed as a substitute for impact and implementation bargaining. Accordingly, he concluded that the Respondent's refusal to bargain on the impact and implementation of the word processing study in the New Orleans Appellate Branch Office constituted a violation of Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order.

The Assistant Secretary has reviewed the rulings of the Administrative Law Judge made at the hearing and finds that no prejudicial error was committed. The rulings are hereby affirmed. Upon consideration of the Administrative Law Judge's Recommended Decision and Order and the entire record in the subject case, including the Respondent's exceptions and supporting brief, I hereby adopt the Administrative Law Judge's findings, conclusions and recommendations.

The Assistant Secretary adopted the findings, conclusions and recommendations of the Administrative Law Judge. Accordingly, he ordered that the Respondent cease and desist from engaging in the conduct found violative of the Order and that it take certain affirmative actions.

ORDER

Pursuant to Section 6(b) of Executive Order 11491, as amended, and Section 203.26(b) of the Regulations, the Assistant Secretary of Labor for Labor-Management Relations hereby orders that the Internal Revenue Service, Southwest Region, Dallas, Texas, shall:

1. Cease and desist from:

(a) Instituting a word processing study in the New Orleans Appellate Branch Office involving employees exclusively represented by the National Treasury Employees Union, Chapter 91, without first notifying the National Treasury Employees Union, Chapter 91, and affording such representative the opportunity to meet and confer, to the extent consonant with law and regulations, on the procedures which management will observe in effectuating such study, and on the impact of such study on adversely affected employees.

(b) In any like or related manner interfering with, restraining, or coercing employees in the exercise of their rights assured by Executive Order 11491, as amended.

2. Take the following affirmative actions in order to effectuate the purposes and policies of Executive Order 11491, as amended:

(a) Upon request by the National Treasury Employees Union, Chapter 91, meet and confer, to the extent consonant with law and regulations, on the procedures used in implementing any word processing studies involving employees exclusively represented by the National Treasury Employees Union, Chapter 91, and on the impact of such studies on adversely affected employees.

(b) Post at all Department of Treasury, Internal Revenue Service, Southwest Region, facilities and installations 1/ copies of the attached notice marked "Appendix" on forms to be furnished by the Assistant Secretary of Labor for Labor-Management Relations. Upon receipt of such forms, they shall be signed by the Regional Commissioner of the Southwest Region and shall be posted and maintained by him for 60 consecutive days thereafter, in conspicuous places, including all bulletin boards and other places where notices to employees are customarily posted. The Regional Commissioner shall take reasonable steps to insure that such notices are not altered, defaced, or covered by any other material.

1/ The Respondent excepted to the Administrative Law Judge's recommendation that the remedial notice required herein be posted at all facilities and installations of the Southwest Region of the Respondent, arguing that the events which led to the instant unfair labor practice complaint occurred only within the New Orleans Appellate Branch Office. Under the circumstances of this case, including the fact that the unit of exclusive recognition includes all of the employees of the Southwest Region, and that the Regional Office of the Respondent took an active role in rejecting the Complainant's bargaining request herein, I find that the Administrative Law Judge's recommendation with respect to the posting of the remedial notice is appropriate and, therefore, it is hereby adopted. Cf. Department of the Treasury, Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco, and Firearms, Midwest Region, Chicago, Illinois, A/SLMR No. 1070 (1978).

(c) Pursuant to Section 203.27 of the Regulations, notify the Assistant Secretary, in writing, within 30 days from the date of this order as to what steps have been taken to comply herewith.

Dated, Washington, D. C.
October 20, 1978

Francis X. Burkhardt, Assistant Secretary of Labor for Labor-Management Relations

The complaint alleged, in substance, that the Respondent violated Sections 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Executive Order by unilaterally implementing a word processing study in the New Orleans appellate office without notifying the Union or giving the Union an opportunity to bargain with respect to the impact and implementation of this study.

A hearing was held in this matter before the undersigned in New Orleans, Louisiana. Both parties were represented by counsel and afforded full opportunity to be heard, to adduce evidence, and to examine and cross-examine witnesses. Post-hearing briefs have been received from both parties and given due consideration.

Based on the entire record herein, including my observation of the witnesses and their demeanor, the exhibits and other relevant evidence adduced at the hearing, and the briefs, I make the following findings of fact, conclusions of law, and recommendations.

Findings of Fact

Complainant is the exclusive bargaining representative for a unit comprised of federal employees working in the IRS' Southwest Regional Office and each of the Region's five Appellate Branch Offices. Respondent is one of seven IRS Regional Offices and has branch offices in Dallas, Houston, Oklahoma City, Denver, and New Orleans. As of February 1977, the New Orleans Appellate Branch Office employed ten Appeals Officers and four Appellate Aides. Appeals Officers are high grade (GS-13 and -14), quasi-judicial officials who recommend whether disputed tax cases should be settled by the IRS. Appellate Aides are analogous to secretaries for the Appeals Officers: each Aide handles telephone calls and types correspondence and decision for two or three Appeals Officers. Both Appeals Officers and Appellate Aides are included within the bargaining unit represented by Complainant.

On June 9, 1975 the General Services Administration issued Federal Property Management Regulations Amendment B-26 which amended 41 CFR Part 101-11 by adding a new subpart 101-11.9. Among other things, the new subpart required federal agencies to review existing and proposed word processing systems to determine cost-effectiveness. Pursuant to this mandate word processing studies were conducted in Respondent's Houston and Dallas branch offices in February and March 1976. The purpose of these studies was to determine the cost-effectiveness of existing automatic word processing systems. This study lasted four weeks; however, due to inaccuracies in the data accumulated, a second study was necessary. This study was conducted in the same branch offices in November and December 1976.

On February 3, 1977, Mr. George Fritz, Executive Assistant, ARC-Appellate, sent a memo to Mr. Robert J. McCoy, Chief of the New Orleans Appellate Branch Office, announcing that a word processing study would be conducted in that office February 14 to March 25. The Dallas and Houston studies had demonstrated that automatic systems were cost-effective; the New Orleans study was being conducted to determine if the use of automatic equipment could be cost-effective in one of the smaller branch offices.

On February 8, 1977, Mr. McCoy notified Mr. J.M. Pilie that a word processing study would be conducted at the New Orleans office beginning February 14. Mr. Pilie is an Appeals Officer in the New Orleans office and also President of NTEU Chapter 91. Mr. McCoy gave Mr. Pilie a copy of Mr. Fritz' memorandum and other information concerning the study. Mr. Pilie raised two questions regarding the need for the study and the Appeals Officers' role therein but at this time did not formally demand to negotiate. The other employees at the New Orleans office were officially notified of the study the following day.

On February 11, 1977, Mr. Fritz telephoned Mr. Pilie regarding the two questions he had raised to Mr. McCoy. Mr. Pilie's questions were discussed as well as his concern over the amount of additional time the study would require and the adequacy of employee instructions. At no time during this conversation did the Union specifically request to negotiate the study's impact and implementation; however, Mr. Pilie did ask that the study be delayed a week in order for the Union to better evaluate its position. Mr. Fritz refused to delay the study, and on February 14, 1977, the study was implemented.

Mr. Pilie wrote a letter to Mr. Walter T. Coppinger, Regional Commissioner for the Southwest Region, on February 15, 1977, formally demanding to negotiate the impact and implementation of the New Orleans word processing study. In this letter the Union also requested the immediate cessation of the study and its postponement pending the outcome of negotiation. Mr. Pilie's demand to negotiate was refused by Roy J. Ellis, Chief, Regional Personnel Branch for the Southwest Region. In a letter to Mr. Pilie dated February 25, 1977, Mr. Ellis took the position that the study effected no change in policies, practices or other matters affecting the general working conditions of unit employees. Accordingly he informed Mr. Pilie that management intended to proceed with the study. In a letter to Mr. Coppinger dated March 14, 1977, the Union formally charged Respondent with violations of Sections 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order. Subsequent failure to resolve this matter led to initiation of the instant proceeding.

As implemented in the New Orleans Branch Office, the word processing study required Appellate Officers to fill out a form called the "Originator's Log" for each document submitted for typing. On these forms officers were required to note the date, the document type, the actual preparation time (in minutes), the number of typed pages, and whether the document was handwritten or typed. Appellate Aides were required to fill out a much more detailed form (called the "Typist's Log") naming the originator, the document type, the date the original was typed, the number of handwritten pages or minutes on tape, the number of pages typed and the typing time (in minutes), the total number of revisions and the actual revision typing time (in minutes), the total number of times typed, and the number of pages in final. A separate log was kept for each week of the six-week study.

At the hearing Mr. Pilie testified that he received many complaints from unit employees concerning the study's implementation and continued to receive complaints during the study's entire six-week duration. For one thing, it is undisputed that management at this time was attempting to reduce the amount of time spent processing cases. Appellate Officers and Aides were concerned that the time spent on the study would increase case time and adversely affect performance evaluations. In actuality the study did not significantly increase or delay the time spent processing cases, and the study's results did not affect the work performance ratings of unit employees.

The record indicates that the study's impact on the daily work patterns of Appeals Officers was not as great as that on Appellate Aides. Appeals Officers previously were required to fill out a Monthly Report wherein they noted the number of hours they devoted to each case. The study's requirements were similar, except that forms had to be compiled each week and recordkeeping had to be more precise.

Because case time had to be computed in minutes rather than hours, testimony indicated Appeals Officers performed their activities "in a little more structured manner" than previously. The study's recordkeeping requirements took the most time; actual time spent filling out weekly logs was small.

The study was more disruptive of the work patterns of Appellate Aides. In addition to having a much more detailed form to fill out, Aides performed a greater variety of functions than Appeals Officers. There were more disruptions in their work and strict study accuracy required that each interruption be noted. Testimony indicated that the effect of these changes was demoralizing on unit employees. While there was no change in the substantive work or weekly work hours of employees, the record indicates the study occasioned a definite and substantial impact on the means by which this work was accomplished.

Discussion, Conclusions and Recommendations 1/

Under Section 11(a) of the Order an Activity is required to meet at reasonable times and confer in good faith with respect to personnel policies, practices, and matters affecting working conditions of unit employees. However, Section 11(b) states that this bargaining obligation does not apply with respect to matters affecting the technology of performing its work. Further, under Sections 12(b)(1), (4) and (5), management retains the exclusive right to direct Agency employees; to maintain the efficiency of the Government operations entrusted to them; and to determine the methods, means, and personnel by which these operations are to be conducted. Therefore, since the study conducted in the New Orleans Appellate Branch Office was designed to determine the efficiency of that office's word processing systems, I conclude that the decision to implement this study was a valid exercise of reserved management rights and, as such, non-negotiable under the Order.

Notwithstanding the fact that a particular management decision is non-negotiable, the Agency or Activity is required to bargain with respect to the impact and implementation of this decision, providing such bargaining does not unreasonably interfere with the exercise of the right itself. Tidewater Virginia Federal Employees Metal Trades

1/ Both parties submitted motions to correct the transcript herein. Those motions are hereby granted, and the transcript shall be corrected as set forth in Appendix A, attached hereto.

Council and Naval Public Works Center, Norfolk, Virginia, FLRC No. 71A-56, 1 FLRC 431 (1973). This means that management must notify the exclusive representative in sufficient time to afford it an ample opportunity to explore fully the matters involved, and to request bargaining, and to bargain prior to management's implementation of the decision. Department of the Treasury, IRS, Manhattan District, A/SLMR No. 841; Federal Railroad Administration, A/SLMR No. 418; U.S. Department of Navy, Bureau of Medicine and Surgery, Great Lakes Naval Hospital, Illinois, A/SLMR No. 289.

The facts belie the existence of any such adequate opportunity in the instant case. Thus, the record indicates that the Union was informed on Tuesday, February 8, that a study was going to be implemented in New Orleans the following Monday. This time frame is similar to that in IRS, Manhattan District, supra, wherein it was stated:

"by advising the Union on June 27 of a change which was to become effective some 4 or 5 days later, the Activity did not give the Union adequate notice and time to permit the Union to consider the change, the procedures for its implementation and its possible and probable impact and to request to bargain and to bargain about the implementation procedures and impact." ALJ's decision at 8.

In the instant case the Union's president had an opportunity to raise several preliminary questions which were then discussed with management during a telephone conversation on Friday. However the Union still felt it needed more time to intelligently determine if negotiations were, in fact, necessary. More time was needed to examine the study's impact and to discuss the study with unit employees.

Complainant's concerns were expressed to management in the form of a request for a week's delay. This request was flatly rejected. The record indicates no emergency demanding the study's immediate implementation; no evidence that a delay would somehow damage the study's results. To the contrary, management's action was predicated solely on the mistaken belief that it was under no duty to negotiate with Complainant on this issue.

Respondent contends it has not violated its obligations under the Order because no bargaining demand was ever made; the study had no substantial impact on unit employees; Mr. Pilie's conversations with management during the week of February 7-11 constituted impact and implementation bargaining; and the Union's failure to request bargaining with respect to prior word processing studies relieved management of any obligation to bargain with respect to this study.

With respect to Respondent's first contention, it must be noted that the Union first requested a delay and then formally submitted a bargaining request on the first day after the initial implementation of the study, and only a week after being informed of the decision to implement. Whether a bargaining request is timely depends on the facts and circumstances of the particular case. SSA, Branch Office, Angleton, Texas, A/SLMR No. 982. Jacksonville District, IRS, Jacksonville, Florida, A/SLMR No. 893. Here, the Union made it clear prior to the study's initiation that they needed more time to determine if negotiations were, in fact, necessary. This fact, coupled with the shortness of the notice to the Union in general, lead me to conclude that Complainant's formal bargaining request was timely made in the circumstances of this case.

Respondent next contends that the study had no substantial impact on unit employees. However the evidence is undisputed that for six weeks employees were required to keep precise and detailed records of the time spent processing manuscripts. Study accuracy required that all interruptions be noted so that only actual processing time was recorded. Similarly precise records were never before required in the New Orleans branch office. Testimony indicated that the study substantially disrupted the daily work patterns of office personnel. In these circumstances, I conclude that the change in working conditions as a result of the study's implementation was sufficiently great to give rise to a duty to bargain over this impact. See, e.g. GSA, Region 2, A/SLMR No. 916; IRS, Manhattan District, supra; Department of the Treasury, IRS, Philadelphia Service Center, A/SLMR No. 771.

Next, I conclude that Mr. Pilie's conversations with management during the week of February 7-11 cannot be construed as a substitute for impact and implementation bargaining. The only substantive discussions between union and management prior to the study's implementation occurred in connection with Mr. Fritz's phone call on February 11. However during this conversation Mr. Pilie made it clear that the Union needed more time to investigate potential topics for negotiation. To conclude that management exhausted its bargaining obligation with this phone call would permit management to unilaterally circumscribe the issues subject to negotiation. Accordingly, I conclude that Respondent's third contention is also without merit.

Finally, Respondent contends that Complainant's failure to request bargaining with respect to prior studies in the Houston and Dallas branch offices absolves management of any bargaining obligation it might have had with respect to the instant study. However, a right to bargain granted pursuant to the Order need not be exercised at every opportunity: it exists unless explicitly waived by the parties. The Assistant Secretary has been reluctant to find a waiver unless the evidence is clear and unmistakable. See U.S. Army Finance and Accounting Center, Fort Benjamin Harrison, Indianapolis, Indiana, A/SLMR No. 651; United States Department of the Navy, Naval Ordnance Station, Louisville, Kentucky, A/SLMR No. 400. In the circumstances of the present case, I conclude that Complainant's failure to request bargaining in connection with the Houston and Dallas studies did not constitute a clear and unmistakable waiver of its right to request bargaining in connection with a study in New Orleans.

Accordingly, I conclude that Respondent's refusal to bargain on the impact and implementation of a word processing study in the New Orleans Appellate Branch Office constituted a violation of its obligations under Section 19(a)(6) of the Order. Further, such refusal necessarily tends to interfere with restrain, or coerce employees in the exercise of rights assured by the Order, in violation of Section 19(a)(1) of the Order.

Recommendations

Upon the basis of the aforementioned findings, conclusions, and the entire record, I recommend that the Assistant Secretary adopt the following Order:

SUMMARY OF DECISION AND ORDER OF THE ASSISTANT SECRETARY
PURSUANT TO SECTION 6 OF EXECUTIVE ORDER 11491, AS AMENDED

DEPARTMENT OF HEALTH, EDUCATION AND WELFARE, OFFICE OF THE SECRETARY, OFFICE FOR CIVIL RIGHTS
A/SLMR No. 1145

This case involved an unfair labor practice complaint filed by the American Federation of Government Employees, AFL-CIO, Local 41 (AFGE) alleging, in substance, that the Respondent violated Section 19(a)(1) of the Order by failing to provide the AFGE's representative with an opportunity to participate in a meeting dealing with an office reorganization and personnel reassignment. The AFGE contended that the meeting involved was a formal discussion within the meaning of Section 10(e) of the Order, and that the union representative was attempting to represent unit employees when he was improperly silenced by the Respondent. The Respondent, on the other hand, maintained that any requirement imposed by Section 10(e) was met when it invited the union representative to attend the meeting and allowed other union members to speak in the course thereof. It also argued that even if its conduct constituted a technical violation of the Order, such violation was remedied when it issued a written apology to the union representative and distributed copies of the apology to all unit employees.

The Assistant Secretary concluded that the Respondent's conduct was violative of the Order. In reaching this conclusion, he found that because the meeting in question concerned personnel policies and practices, or other matters affecting the general working conditions of unit employees, it constituted a formal discussion within the meaning of Section 10(e) of the Order at which the AFGE had a right to be represented. In this regard, the Assistant Secretary found that the Respondent's treatment of the AFGE's representative disparaged the AFGE and thereby had a dual effect on unit employees. Thus, in his view, such conduct tended to restrain employees from exercising their right to act as representatives of a labor organization and present their views to management. Further, with knowledge that their Vice President had been told by the Respondent not to express himself on their behalf, employees in the bargaining unit reasonably would tend to believe that management viewed their exclusive representative with disdain and the employees thereby would be discouraged from exercising their rights under Section 1(a) of the Order. Finally, the Assistant Secretary found that, under the circumstances of this case, the written apology to the union representative and unit employees, delivered some three weeks after the violation, did not cure or mitigate the Respondent's failure to meet its obligation under Section 10(e), particularly where, as here, the Respondent did not concede that its conduct was violative of the Executive Order.

Accordingly, the Assistant Secretary issued an appropriate remedial order.

DECISION AND ORDER

This matter is before the Assistant Secretary pursuant to Regional Administrator Hilary M. Sheply's Order Transferring Case to the Assistant Secretary of Labor in accordance with Sections 203.5(b), 203.7(a)(4) and 206.5(a) of the Assistant Secretary's Regulations.

Upon consideration of the entire record in the subject case, including the parties' stipulation of facts and accompanying exhibits, and the brief filed by the Respondent, the Assistant Secretary finds:

The amended complaint herein alleges, in substance, that the Department of Health, Education and Welfare, Office of the Secretary, Office for Civil Rights, hereinafter called Respondent, violated Section 19(a)(1) of the Order 1/ by failing to provide a representative of the American Federation of Government Employees, AFL-CIO, Local 41, hereinafter called AFGE, with an opportunity to participate in a meeting dealing with an office reorganization and personnel reassignment. The AFGE contends that this meeting constituted a formal discussion within the meaning of Section 10(e) of the Order, 2/ and that the union representative was attempting to represent unit employees when he was improperly silenced by the Respondent. The Respondent, on the other hand, maintains that any requirement imposed by Section 10(e) was met when it invited the union representative to attend the meeting and allowed other union members to speak in the course thereof. It also argues that even if its conduct constituted a technical violation of the Order, such violation was remedied when it issued a written apology to the union representative and distributed copies of the apology to all unit employees.

1/ Prior to transferring this matter to the Assistant Secretary, the Regional Administrator issued a Notice of Hearing which inadvertently indicated that an alleged violation of Section 19(a)(6) of the Order was still outstanding and at issue in this case. However, the Section 19(a)(6) violation alleged in the amended complaint was based on facts unrelated to those stipulated by the parties herein and was dismissed by the Regional Administrator at an earlier stage in these proceedings. The Regional Administrator's inadvertence is hereby corrected.

The undisputed facts, as stipulated by the parties, are essentially as follows:

On January 24, 1973, the AFGE gained recognition as the exclusive representative of a unit of all nonprofessional General Schedule and Wage Grade employees of the Office of the Secretary, Department of Health, Education and Welfare, located in the Washington, D.C. Metropolitan Area. The Office for Civil Rights (OCR) is a part of the Office of the Secretary. A negotiated agreement between the parties became effective on June 24, 1977.

On September 15, 1977, a memorandum was distributed by the Respondent to all OCR employees calling for an employee meeting on September 19, 1977, to announce implementation of an OCR reorganization. Joseph E. Cook, Jr., AFGE Local 41 Vice President and Chief Negotiator for the AFGE in the OCR reorganization negotiations, was orally invited to attend the meeting as the official representative of the union.

At the September 19, 1977, meeting, OCR Director David Tatel made opening remarks and discussed the general reorganization. He then solicited questions from the assembled employees. A number of employees asked questions covering a range of subjects related to the reorganization. Among them were two employees who had served on the AFGE's negotiating team, and at least one individual who specifically identified herself with AFGE Local 41.

During this question and answer period, Cook was called upon and, after identifying himself as the Local 41 Vice President, proceeded to ask a question concerning the reorganization. Tatel interrupted him, stating that this was a meeting of OCR employees and not a union meeting, and that he would discuss the matter with him later. Cook responded by asserting that he had been invited to the meeting as a representative of employees under the Executive Order and that he had a right to speak. Tatel ignored him and proceeded to call on other employees.

On September 20, 1977, the AFGE filed an unfair labor practice charge with respect to this incident.

2/ Section 10(e) states, in pertinent part, that an exclusive collective bargaining representative "...shall be given the opportunity to be represented at formal discussions between management and employees or employee representatives concerning grievances, personnel policies and practices, or other matters affecting general working conditions of employees in the unit."

On October 11, 1977, Cook and two other AFGE representatives met with Tatel and OCR Executive Officer Walker to discuss the charge. At that time, Tatel stated that, in his opinion, there had been no violation of union rights under the Executive Order. However, he presented Cook with a copy of a memorandum dated October 11, 1977, in which he apologized for not allowing Cook to speak at the September 19 meeting. The memorandum had been distributed earlier to all OCR employees through the internal mail system.

FINDINGS AND CONCLUSIONS

Under the particular circumstances of this case, I conclude that the Respondent's conduct in failing to provide the AFGE's representative with an opportunity to participate in the meeting at issue interfered with, restrained, or coerced employees in the exercise of their rights assured by the Order in violation of Section 19(a)(1). In reaching this conclusion, I find that because the meeting concerned personnel policies and practices, or other matters affecting the general working conditions of unit employees, it constituted a formal discussion within the meaning of Section 10(e) of the Order at which the AFGE had a right to be represented. In this context, I find that the Respondent's treatment of the AFGE's representative disparaged the AFGE and thereby had a dual effect on unit employees. Thus, in my view, such conduct by the Respondent tended to restrain employees, such as Cook, from exercising their right to act as representatives of a labor organization and present their views to management. 3/ Further, with knowledge that their Vice President had been told by management not to express himself on their behalf, employees in the bargaining unit reasonably would tend to believe that management viewed their exclusive representative with disdain, and thereby would be discouraged from exercising their rights granted under Section 1(a) of the Order. 4/ Finally, I find that, under the circumstances of this case, the written apology to the union representative and unit employees, delivered some three weeks after the violation, did not cure or mitigate the Respondent's failure to meet its obligation

Compare Department of the Treasury, Internal Revenue Service and IRS Chicago District, Chicago, Illinois, A/SLMR No. 987 (1978), which was considered factually distinguishable since there the Respondent limited the union representative's participation only in that his remarks were clearly extraneous to the subject matter of the meeting involved and the evidence did not reflect that he was prevented from either representing the employee's interests or stating the union's position regarding the subject matter of the meeting.

ORDER

Pursuant to Section 6(b) of Executive Order 11491, as amended, and Section 203.26(b) of the Regulations, the Assistant Secretary of Labor for Labor-Management Relations hereby orders that the Department of Health, Education and Welfare, Office of the Secretary, Office for Civil Rights, shall:

1. Cease and desist from:

(a) Interfering with, restraining, or coercing employees in the exercise of their rights assured by the Order by failing to afford the American Federation of Government Employees, AFL-CIO, Local 41, the employees' exclusive representative, the opportunity to be represented at formal discussions between management and employees or employee representatives concerning personnel policies and practices, or other matters affecting general working conditions of employees in the unit.

(b) In any like or related manner interfering with, restraining, or coercing employees in the exercise of their rights assured by Executive Order 11491, as amended.

2. Take the following affirmative actions in order to effectuate the purposes and policies of the Executive Order:

(a) Post at its facility at the Department of Health, Education and Welfare, Office of the Secretary, Office for Civil Rights, copies of the attached notice marked "Appendix" on forms to be furnished by the Assistant Secretary of Labor for Labor-Management Relations. Upon receipt of such forms, they shall be signed by the Director, Office for Civil Rights and shall be posted and maintained by him for 60 consecutive days thereafter in conspicuous places, including all bulletin boards and other places where notices to employees are customarily posted. The Director shall take reasonable steps to insure that said notices are not altered, defaced or covered by any other material.

5/ Compare Department of the Navy, Norfolk Naval Shipyard, Portsmouth, Virginia, A/SLMR No. 967 (1978), where the complaint was dismissed partly as a result of the Respondent's "swift and effective action" with regard to a personnel evaluation to remedy all possibility of prejudice to the offended employee and to foreclose any repetition of the violative conduct in the future.

(b) Pursuant to Section 203.27 of the Regulations, notify the Assistant Secretary, in writing, within 30 days from the date of this order as to what steps have been taken to comply herewith.

Case No. 72-6513(RO)

This case involved a challenged ballot which was sufficient to affect the results of a runoff election in a unit of nonprofessional employees of the Activity. The issue involved was whether or not a Community Health Educator was a professional employee within the meaning of the Executive Order.

NAVAJO NATION INDIAN HEALTH CARE EMPLOYEES,

DECISION ON CHALLENGED BALLOT

Contrary to the Administrative Law Judge, the Assistant Secretary concluded that the employee was a professional employee within the meaning of the Order. In this regard, he noted, among other things, that the employee involved presents lectures on health care subjects to Navajo and Hopi Indians and in performing such work she travels to clinics where she provides instruction and answers questions. He noted also that the employee receives no daily supervision and that she is able to provide suitable information on health care to the Indian people because of her specialized education and unique cultural background. Additionally, she consistently exercises discretion and independent judgment in the performance of her work.

On August 22, 1978, Administrative Law Judge Steven E. Halpern issued his Recommended Decision and Order in the above-entitled proceeding, ^{1/} recommending that the challenge to the ballot of Rosemary Goldtooth be overruled and that her ballot be opened and counted. Thereafter, the Petitioner filed exceptions and supporting briefs with respect to the Administrative Law Judge's Recommended Decision and Order.

Under these circumstances, the Assistant Secretary ordered that the challenged ballot not be opened and counted and that the appropriate Regional Administrator cause an appropriate certification to be issued.

The Assistant Secretary has reviewed the rulings of the Administrative Law Judge made at the hearing and finds that no prejudicial error was committed. The rulings are hereby affirmed. Upon consideration of the Administrative Law Judge's Recommended Decision and Order and the entire record in this case, including the exceptions and supporting briefs by the Petitioner, I hereby adopt the Administrative Law Judge's findings, conclusions, and recommendations, only to the extent consistent herewith.

The Administrative Law Judge concluded that Rosemary Goldtooth was not a professional employee within the meaning of the Order and recommended that the challenged ballot of Mrs. Goldtooth be opened and counted. I disagree.

^{1/} At the hearing, the Navajo Tribe, Window Rock, Arizona, was, without objection, permitted to intervene as Amicus Curiae in this matter.

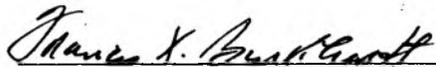

Under the particular circumstances of this case, I find that Mrs. Goldtooth is a professional employee within the meaning of the Order. Thus, the record shows that at the time of the election in this matter Mrs. Goldtooth was a Community Health Educator and that her work entails presenting lectures on health care subjects to Navajo and Hopi Indians at various Public Health Service clinics. In performing her work, Goldtooth travels to the clinics where she conducts lectures, provides instruction and answers questions. In the preparation and performance of this work Goldtooth receives no daily supervision. In this regard, she decides what complex medical concerns should be relayed to appropriate Public Health Service personnel. The record indicates that she is able to provide suitable information on health care needs to the Indian people because of her specialized educational training and unique cultural background. In addition to providing health care information, Goldtooth serves as a cross cultural advisor and liaison to Public Health Service officials and assists in orientation programs and in service training activities where she makes presentations to employees, again utilizing her specialized educational training in a manner consistent with the cultural needs of the Indian people.

Under these circumstances, and as the evidence establishes that Mrs. Goldtooth's work is of an intellectual and unique nature, requiring the consistent exercise of discretion and independent judgment, I find that she is a professional employee within the meaning of the Order. Therefore, I shall order that her ballot not be opened and counted.

ORDER

IT IS HEREBY ORDERED that the challenge to the ballot of Rosemary Goldtooth be sustained and that her ballot not be opened and counted in the above-entitled proceeding. I hereby direct that Case No. 72-6513(RO) be returned to the appropriate Regional Administrator who is directed to cause an appropriate certification to be issued.

RECOMMENDED DECISION AND ORDER

Procedural History

This proceeding under Executive Order 11491, as amended, arises as the result of a challenged ballot cast in a runoff election conducted under the supervision of the Area Administrator, Los Angeles, California, on September 1, 1977.

The Regional Administrator, United States Department of Labor, Labor-Management Services Administration, San Francisco Region, on December 29, 1977, issued his Report and Findings on Challenged Ballots in which he determined there to be a relevant issue of fact concerning the challenged ballot. From said Report it appeared that issues existed with regard to: the professional/non-professional status of the individual whose ballot was challenged; denial of opportunity to Petitioner to solicit the vote of said employee; estoppel of the Activity from asserting the non-professional status of said employee as a result of an eligibility agreement allegedly entered into between Petitioner and the Activity.

Intervention of Amicus Curiae

At the hearing the Navajo Tribe moved for leave to intervene, asserting inter alia a material interest in the question of the professional vs. non-professional status of the Navajo Indian whose ballot was challenged.

Counsel for Petitioner, made no objection to the intervention. Counsel for the Activity in raising no objection stated the following:

Your Honor, the Activity, we do not object at this time. The Activity feels that if the representative of the Navajo Nation could put light on an issue material here, that it would welcome it.

From the character of remarks of counsel for the Union and of the Navajo Nation, it would appear to the Activity at this time that their intent is to introduce into the record matters that go beyond the issue that's before the Court. If it happens that such takes place, the Activity would like to reserve the right to object on that ground at a later time.

Accordingly, in the absence of any objection and there appearing to be at least a colorable interest I allowed the intervention of the Navajo Tribe as Amicus. In so doing I stated to its counsel inter alia (Tr. p. 8):

THE COURT: You understand, do you not, ... that the issue in this case is a determination of whether or not Mrs. Goldtooth's ballot should or should not be counted? ...

There are peripheral matters which will go into the determination of that issue, but that is the issue with which I am confronted. Now, to the extent that you are able and intend to participate with regard to the resolution of that issue, I will permit the intervention, but apparently there are matters beyond that with which you are concerned, if I understand correctly what it is you have already said to me.

As to the extent that those concerns, which are certainly perfectly legitimate concerns, go beyond the scope of this hearing, it would not be appropriate for me to receive that sort of evidence in this case.

Notwithstanding the foregoing comments and repeated rulings in accordance therewith Petitioner and Amicus, displaying a community of interest, persisted in pursuing issues not relevant to this matter and I am constrained to observe that the record is unduly burdened thereby. I shall give no further emphasis to such irrelevant issues by any discussion herein, and accordingly my findings and conclusions are limited to the issues outlined above and such ancillary matters as are required to be resolved in the determination of said issues.

Motion To Produce Records

Petitioner at the hearing moved to require the Activity to produce the personnel records of the employee whose challenged ballot is at issue herein. At no time prior thereto had Petitioner so moved; nor, at any time had Petitioner sought to obtain said records through established agency procedures or otherwise. Under the circumstances I ruled that the motion was untimely made.

Petitioner some eight weeks post-hearing filed a written motion to compel the production of said records. Notwithstanding its untimeliness, upon Petitioner's continuing representation that said records were crucial to its case, I entertained the motion. Through a series of Orders issued in consideration of the employee's privacy rights I reviewed the records in camera and directed their sanitization; by Order of June 7, 1978, I caused to be served upon the employee a copy of her records as sanitized, so as to afford her the opportunity to take appropriate legal action to prevent their disclosure; and, by said Order directed that said records be served upon the parties on July 3, 1978, in the absence of such action on her part. No such action having been taken, pursuant to the June 7 Order disclosure of the sanitized records was automatically made on July 3, all parties being given until July 24, to comment or otherwise act.

By letter dated June 30, and received in my office on July 3, Petitioner, not yet having received the records it had so vigorously demanded, waived any further comment or action thereon other than to request that I consider them. No comment having been made by the Activity or Amicus, the record duly closed on July 24, 1978.

The parties have been afforded full opportunity to be heard, to adduce evidence, to examine and cross-examine witnesses, to make oral argument and to file briefs 1/. Based upon the evidence of record, having observed the witnesses and assessed their credibility and having considered the arguments of the parties, I make the within Findings, Conclusions and Recommendation.

Findings and Conclusions

I

The Activity--the Tuba City Service Unit--is one of eight service units under the administrative control of the Navajo Area Indian Health Service, DHEW, headquartered at Window Rock, Arizona. The mission of said Service is to provide direct and indirect health care to Navajo Indians and to other eligible Indians within the area.

II

On August 4, 1977 (herein referred to as the original election), a representation election was held at the 1/ Briefs were filed by Petitioner and by the Activity. Although Amicus requested and was granted an extension of time within which to file a brief, none has been forthcoming.

Activity, in which those employees of the Activity as of the pay period ending July 16, 1977, were eligible to vote. The further conditions of the election were as follows:

Voting Group (a): All General Schedule and Wage Grade professional employees of the Tuba City Service Unit, Navajo Area Indian Health Service, Tuba City, Arizona, excluding all nonprofessional employees, temporary, part-time, and intermittent employees, employees engaged in Federal personnel work in other than a purely clerical capacity, management officials, and supervisors as defined in the Order.

Voting Group (b): All General Schedule and Wage Grade nonprofessional employees of the Tuba City Service Unit, Navajo Area Indian Health Service, Tuba City, Arizona, excluding all professional employees, temporary, part-time, and intermittent employees, employees engaged in Federal personnel work in other than a purely clerical capacity, management officials, and supervisors as defined in the Order.

The employees in the nonprofessional voting group (b) will be polled whether they desire to be represented by the NFFE, the Laborers or neither.

The employees in the professional voting group (a) will be asked two questions on their ballot: (1) whether or not they wish to be included with the nonprofessional employees for the purpose of exclusive recognition; and (2) whether they wish to be represented for the purpose of exclusive recognition by the NFFE, the Laborers, or neither. In the event that a majority of the valid votes of voting group (a) is cast in favor of inclusion in the same unit as nonprofessional employees, the ballots of voting group (a) shall be combined with those of voting group (b).

Unless a majority of the valid votes of voting group (a) is cast for inclusion in the same unit as nonprofessional employees, they will be taken to have indicated their desire to constitute a separate unit, and an appropriate certification will be issued by the appropriate Area Administrator indicating whether the NFFE, the Laborers or no labor organization was selected by the professional employee unit. An appropriate certification will be issued also, after counting the ballots cast in voting group (b), indicating whether the NFFE, the Laborers, or no labor organization was selected as the exclusive representative of the nonprofessional unit.

III

In said election the professional employees voted both against inclusion with the nonprofessional employees and against exclusive recognition. As to the non-professional employees a runoff election was required and was duly conducted on September 1, 1977.

IV

In the runoff election (in which the non-professional ballot of employee Rosemary Goldtooth was challenged) the following described individuals who, as in the original election, were employees of the Activity as of the payroll period ending on July 16, 1977, were eligible to vote:

All General Schedule and Wage Grade nonprofessional employees of the Tuba City Service Unit, Navajo Area Indian Health Service, Tuba City, Arizona, excluding all professional employees; temporary, part-time, and intermittent employees who are employed for 90 days or less; employees engaged in Federal personnel work in other than a purely clerical capacity; management officials, and supervisors as defined in the Order.

The voting list as prepared by the Activity for the original election listed Rosemary Goldtooth as a professional employee. However, on the day of that election, shortly before the polls opened, a representative of the Activity advised Hugo Rossiter, the Department of Labor Compliance Officer who supervised the election, that the voting list was in error and that Rosemary Goldtooth "should be included in the non-professional list" (Tr. 597); Rossiter thereupon informed Petitioner's representatives "across the room" that: "Hey, you guys, I am changing Rosemary Goldtooth to the nonprofessionals. Is there any agreement?" 2/ (Tr. 598). Apparently present "across the room" among others, were: Frank Gillis, International Representative for the Laborers International Union of North America, representing Local Union 1376 as organizer and negotiator; Frank Gillis, Jr., employed by and representing the Navajo Nation Health Care Employees Local No. 1376 as business manager; and, Petitioner's election observer Joann Seger.

Mr. Rossiter did not appear as a witness nor did Ms. Seger. Neither Frank Gillis, nor Frank Gillis, Jr., recall Mr. Rossiter's "across the room" remarks directed to the Union's representatives. According to the testimony of Frank Gillis, Jr., however, Ms. Seger admittedly heard said remarks (Tr. 598, 601). Further, according to Mr. Gillis, Jr.'s testimony, she heard no response from any Union representative nor did she make any response. In the absence of a satisfactory explanation of why Ms. Seger heard Mr. Rossiter's remarks but the Gillis', who apparently were similarly situated in the room did not, I reject their testimony in that regard.

The Union, through its representatives then present, having been advised of Mr. Rossiter's intention to change Mrs. Goldtooth's status on the voting list, and no objection having been voiced, Mr. Rossiter proceeded to make the change by inscribing beside Mrs. Goldtooth's name on the list the letters "NP" (Non-Professional). Accordingly, presumably with the knowledge of Petitioner's observers, Mrs. Goldtooth cast a non-professional ballot. No challenge was made thereto nor did Petitioner file an objection to the election.

Thus, not only does the record not establish the existence of the "binding eligibility agreement" as to Rosemary Goldtooth's status which Petitioner has contended estoppes the Activity from asserting her non-professional status but, on the contrary, it establishes that she was listed as and voted as a non-professional in the original election with the knowledge and acquiescence of Petitioner acting through its election observers and other representatives.

The record further reveals that there was no change in Mrs. Goldtooth's job duties between elections and she

2/ The quoted statement came into the record as hearsay testimony. There is no guarantee that it is precise. Speculatively the word "agreement" could have been "disagreement."

remained in the same status for voting purposes in the runoff as in the original election. Section 202.21(b) of the Rules and Regulations of the Assistant Secretary speaks to this situation in providing that "Employees who were eligible to vote in the original election and who also are in an eligible category on the date of the runoff election shall be eligible to vote in the runoff election."

VI

The voting list utilized in the runoff election was a copy of the voting list as originally prepared for the first election, or was derived therefrom, and did not reflect the correction of Rosemary Goldtooth's status as made on the voting list actually used at the polls in the first election. The Area Administrator's election official at the runoff election was not the same individual who had presided over the original election; and, noting that Rosemary Goldtooth appeared on the voting list as a professional he appropriately challenged the non-professional ballot cast by her.

VII

In the runoff election, 68 votes were cast for Petitioner and 67 votes were cast against exclusive recognition, the impounded challenged ballot thus being sufficient to affect the results of the election; Petitioner and Amicus support the challenge.

VIII

In its brief Petitioner asserts that it was "not aware until well after the runoff election was completed that Rosemary Goldtooth's status had been changed from professional to non-professional by the Activity and the Area Administrator's agent at the polls for the first election" and argues that it "justifiably presumed that Mrs. Goldtooth voted as a professional in the first election, that she continued in that status and that she was ineligible to vote in the runoff." The premise underlying such contention, of course, (since Petitioner relies on the herein rejected testimony of the Gillis' that they were not aware at the original election of the change made on the voting list) is that Petitioner is not bound by the knowledge and acts of its official election observers. Noting the importance attached to the function of election observers by the Assistant Secretary 3/ I would reject the premise and along with it the argument, even if I had not found that Petitioner's other representatives, were aware of the change at the time it was made.

Noting further that the uncorrected list utilized at the runoff election was not furnished until shortly before the runoff election and that almost a month intervened between the original and runoff elections, during which period Petitioner had the opportunity to campaign for Rosemary Goldtooth's non-professional vote, I find and conclude, contrary to Petitioner's contention, that it was not deprived of the opportunity to solicit her vote.

IX

The prime substantive issue here presented is the professional vs. non-professional status for unit/voting purposes of Rosemary Goldtooth, who at all times was a Community Health Educator GS-1702 series. The Civil Service Commission's Qualification Standards for said series (Ex. M-23) describes employees performing therein as non-professionals; and, the Activity considers her to be a non-professional employee.

That such is not determinative of the issue, however, is made clear by the Assistant Secretary in Department of Interior, Bureau of Land Management, Riverside District and Land Office and National Federation of Federal Employees, Local 119, A/SLMR No. 170.

The Civil Service Commission has the responsibility under the Classification Act for the classification of positions. However, neither the Study Committee's Report and Recommendations nor the Order indicate that the Civil Service Commission's classification of a position as 'professional' would be determinative for labor relations purposes under the provisions of Executive Order 11491. Similarly, there is no indication that an agency's characterization of a position as 'professional' would be determinative under the Order.

The criteria for determining whether or not an employee is a "professional" employee within the meaning of the Executive Order for the purpose of unit placement were delineated by the Assistant Secretary in the aforesaid case as follows:

(A) Any employee engaged in the performance of work; (1) requiring knowledge of an advanced type in a field of science or learning customarily acquired by a prolonged course of specialized intellectual instruction and study in an institution of higher learning or a hospital, as distinguished from knowledge acquired by a general academic education, or from an apprenticeship, or from training in the performance of routine mental, manual, or physical processes; (2) requiring the consistent exercise of discretion and judgment in its performance; (3) which is predominately intellectual and varied in character (as opposed to routine mental, manual, mechanical or physical work); and (4) which is of such a character that the output produced or the result accomplished cannot be standardized in relation to a given period of time; or

(B) Any employee who has completed the courses of specialized intellectual instruction and study described in clause (A) above and is performing related work under the direction or guidance of a professional person to qualify himself to become a professional employee as defined in clause (A) above.

The record reveals the following: Mrs. Goldtooth is a Navajo Indian; she is fluent in both the English and Navajo languages and such is a requirement of her job; evidently she has been bilingual since childhood; she has a thorough understanding of the Navajo culture; in the course of her work she renders services principally to Navajos on a Navajo reservation. Approximately 60 percent of the Navajos with whom she deals are women and 40 percent are men; the fact that she is a Navajo woman facilitates her work with Navajo women "but for me to talk to a (Navajo) male it would be a little awkward for me" (Tr. 102). There is no specific academic requirement for her job. She has a high school education and has worked for the public health service since 1958 (Tr. 139). She first worked for one year as a dental assistant; she then worked as a nursing assistant before becoming an Education Technician in 1960. At that time, under a pilot project involving the University of North Carolina and the University of California, the position of Health Educator was being established and she was given one year of on-the-job training into that position. Included in that training were "very basic" courses in anatomy and physiology (Tr. 141). Over the years she has also had several additional short courses including upward mobility training (5 days); a health education skills training course (15 days) ^{4/}; EEO training (3 days); and, EEO counseling (3 days).

According to her testimony her duties in general include the following: She demonstrates the preparation of infant formula at the obstetrics and maternity ward in hospital; the demonstration follows an outline, formulated by the Area nutritionist, which she follows step by step; included also is a discussion of the method of feeding babies and the various types of formula available; she does not cover material not included in the outline; if questions come up that are not on the outline, "then I get someone who is professional to answer the questions; a doctor or a nurse" (Tr. 70).

In connection with the care of newborn children, she advises of the existence of available clinic facilities and encourages the mothers to bring their children to such facilities; she advises that immunizations should be had, but does not herself perform such nor does she determine what immunizations or other shots should be administered.

In connection with the Activity's outpatient field clinics, she presents "some kind of health education to the people in the waiting room ... that would be films, slide presentations, charts, or health pamphlets and I've also done formula demonstrations to the mothers in the waiting room." In connection with such, she conducts a discussion and question and answer session. Normally, the determination of what visual aids and other reading materials are to be utilized is not made by her. She is responsible for setting up displays of various kinds in hospital; with regard to who makes the determination as to the contents of the displays she stated, "we are coordinated from our health education office; we can make suggestions or supply material if needed, but the departments have come up with their own ideas."

^{4/} Designed for health education technicians or beginning community health educators with minimum experience.

She acts as liaison between the Navajo tribe and the service unit for which she works and on occasion, discusses health matters with tribal officials. She is also a non-voting member of the hospital board. Additionally, she is a member of the EEO council but does not perform any counseling services. She is a member of the hospital Employees Training Committee which "helps employees to obtain training that they want, and there are some criteria that the training committee has set up for this ... the service unit director has the overall say" as to what training shall be provided and to whom.

As to the position description in effect at the time of the elections she testified that she was not in fact performing all of the duties set forth therein; thus, while said position description may accurately have reflected her actual duties in 1975 when it first became effective a number of those duties were not her responsibility at the time in question, such having been assumed beginning in 1976, by Barbara Ledder who at that time became her immediate supervisor.

Ms. Ledder's testimony, which I find credible, depicts Mrs. Goldtooth as a most valuable employee who provides basic health information in the general manner described by the latter in her testimony, which I also find credible. Mrs. Goldtooth's activities are scheduled by Mrs. Ledder (Tr. 226). The programs she presents are pre-planned for her. She provides essential cultural insights as a result of which modifications in program information sometimes are made although she has neither the authority nor the discretion to make any modifications in any program in which she performs (Tr. 232).

Additional credible testimony was given by Thomas K. Welty, M.D., who being Director of the Service Unit to which Mrs. Goldtooth is attached as well as her former first line supervisor, has knowledge of her duties:

A. Could you please tell us what you know directly of Rosemary's work, with special emphasis on what she has done over the past couple of years?

- 12 -

A. Okay. Well, specifically at the time of the election in question and the year preceding, in order to keep it consistent with what has been presented in this hearing, the main duties that Mrs. Goldtooth has performed during that period have included performing formula demonstrations to the obstetric patients in the hospital, and in addition to the demonstrations, reviewing the principals of infant nutrition and advising the mothers to maintain the health of their child by bringing them back for well baby checkups and immunizations.

The format for this particular presentation was developed by the Area Nutrition Department and has pretty much remained the same for the past several years, with some minor modifications.

Her duties also included going out to the field clinics and showing audio-visual presentations, in both English -- some of them were in English and some in Navajo, and those that were in English, she did interpret for the people in the audience, which were made up of the patients and the families, and their families, waiting to be seen in the clinics.

If there were questions raised by the audience that Mrs. Goldtooth couldn't answer, she would ask the physicians or the nurses who were in attendance at the clinic.

She has served as a Tribal liaison the last several years. In that capacity she has functioned as the acting secretary of the Health Board and she has interpreted on occasion in the meetings of the Health Board.

She also has volunteered her services to serve on several community groups, including the Citizens, the CCS group, which was mentioned as a group that's trying to get an extended care facility in to Tuba City, the Title IV Indian Education Committee.

Q. Dr. Welty, not to interrupt you, but strictly speaking are these parts of her employment or something that she has done voluntarily?

- 13 -

A. These are things that she has been personally interested in and has volunteered to participate on these committees on her own.

Q. Did you appoint her to these committees?

A. No, she came to be a member on these through her own interests and we granted her administrative leave to attend these functions.

Q. Anything else that you would care to add?

A. I think those are the main points, the main things that she was doing at that time.

Q. Okay. Dr. Welty, could you try to tell the Court in your own judgment, and based on your own direct experience, what degree of independent judgment and authority and discretion Rosemary has exercised in the main during these past several years?

A. Most of her activities have been outlined for her, especially for instance the formula demonstration. She has followed the outline and she now is very familiar with this outline and doesn't really need to refer to it on a day to day basis, but she did utilize this outline that was developed for her to do her teaching on the postpartum women in the Obstetrics Unit.

The films and the other health education materials that she utilizes in the field clinics were provided to her by the Area Nutrition -- or, excuse me, the Area Health Education Department or through other means. So that she was presenting the audio-visual presentations in the clinic and was interpreting the content into Navajo, and in that way she was I think somewhat dependent upon the presentations as they were, and if there were questions that did come up, as I mentioned, that were beyond her knowledge, she would very regularly ask for assistance in answering these questions that were posed to her by the audience. (Tr. 149-152)

XI

I find and conclude that in the performance of her work Mrs. Goldtooth utilizes attributes possessed as a result of her heritage and upbringing, namely an understanding of the Navajo culture and language, in conjunction with knowledge and skills of a basic rather than an advanced nature, acquired through a combination of on-the-job training, experience and academic work of an unadvanced level.

Mrs. Goldtooth is principally a conduit for the transmission of basic health information. Her work requires intelligence, but is not predominately intellectual in character. While it is likely that accommodations must be made to conform to the level of comprehension of the different individuals with whom she deals, her work largely is accomplished through pre-arranged and pre-planned demonstrations the content of which she does not have the discretion to vary; and, such discretion and judgment as she exercises is not in the application of any body of knowledge of an advanced type.

Thus, in consideration of all of the evidence bearing upon the work performed by Mrs. Goldtooth at the relevant time, as well as her education and training as reflected by the testimony and her personnel records, I conclude that she is a non-professional employee for unit/voting purposes. Certainly she is a most valuable and valued employee, she is not however, under the Assistant Secretary's criteria a professional employee.

XII

In the determination of her professional vs. non-professional status, Petitioner and Amicus have vigorously argued that it is of virtually pre-emptive significance that Mrs. Goldtooth is a Navajo who is fluent in both Navajo and English, has a full understanding of the Navajo culture and principally renders her services to Navajos on a Navajo reservation.

I have considered said factors both as criteria additional to those delineated in A/SLMR No. 170 and as a contextual framework within which to apply the A/SLMR No. 170 criteria and am unable to conclude from either approach that Mrs. Goldtooth, for unit/voting purposes, is other than a non-professional employee; although her Navajo cultured attributes are essential to the performance of her work, they do not constitute her a "professional" employee.

Placing the emphasis somewhat differently it is argued that even though she may not be a professional by the Assistant Secretary's criteria, whether Rosemary Goldtooth is a professional or a non-professional should be measured by Navajo standards rather than by non-Indian standards, and that what she does "is professional in terms of the Navajo nation, in terms of the needs of the Navajo peoples' health, mental and physical." (Tr. 103)

I do not find in the record evidence sufficient to support a factual finding either as to what the Navajo criteria/standards for professionalism are 5/ or whether, if there be such, Mrs. Goldtooth meets those standards. 6/ Accordingly, it is unnecessary to reach the question of the relevance or materiality of such considerations in this proceeding.

Finally, I conclude that neither the Indian Preference Act nor any other law or case cited by Petitioner or Amicus require that Mrs. Goldtooth be considered a professional employee.

RECOMMENDATION

On the entire record I recommend to the Assistant Secretary:

1. That the challenge to the ballot of Rosemary Goldtooth be overruled.
2. That it be directed that the ballot of Rosemary Goldtooth be opened and counted at a time and place to be determined by the appropriate Regional Administrator.
3. That it be directed that the Regional Administrator shall have a Revised Tally of ballots served upon the

SUMMARY OF DECISION AND ORDER OF THE ASSISTANT SECRETARY
PURSUANT TO SECTION 6 OF EXECUTIVE ORDER 11491, AS AMENDED

SUPERVISOR OF SHIPBUILDING CONVERSION AND REPAIR,
UNITED STATES NAVY, GROTON, CONNECTICUT
A/SLMR No. 1147

This case involved an unfair labor practice complaint filed by the American Federation of Government Employees, Local 2105, AFL-CIO (Complainant) alleging, in essence, that the Respondent violated Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order by refusing to negotiate procedures for implementing a management decision to shut down the Activity on the day after Thanksgiving and to direct the use of annual leave on that day. The Complainant alleged that this action was in violation of the parties' negotiated agreement and thereby was a violation of Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order. The Respondent denied any violation, contending that although the Complainant objected to the shutdown, it neither sought negotiations nor presented any proposal on the procedures for implementing the decision.

The Administrative Law Judge found that the Complainant, although notified of the Respondent's decision, made no specific proposal, and did not request to bargain concerning the procedures, implementation or impact of the decision until after the unfair labor practice charge had been filed. He, therefore, recommended that the complaint be dismissed in its entirety.

Noting particularly the absence of exceptions, the Assistant Secretary adopted the findings, conclusions and recommendation of the Administrative Law Judge and ordered that the complaint be dismissed. Thus, the Assistant Secretary concluded that in the absence of an appropriate and timely request to bargain by the Complainant, dismissal of the subject complaint was warranted.

DECISION AND ORDER

On August 8, 1978, Administrative Law Judge Robert J. Feldman issued his Recommended Decision in the above-entitled proceeding, finding that the Respondent had not engaged in the unfair labor practices alleged in the complaint and recommending that the complaint be dismissed in its entirety. No exceptions were filed to the Administrative Law Judge's Recommended Decision.

The Assistant Secretary has reviewed the rulings of the Administrative Law Judge made at the hearing and finds that no prejudicial error was committed. The rulings are hereby affirmed. Upon consideration of the Administrative Law Judge's Recommended Decision and the entire record in this case, and noting particularly that no exceptions were filed, I hereby adopt the Administrative Law Judge's findings, conclusions and recommendation. Thus, as found by the Administrative Law Judge, the evidence herein establishes that, upon being notified by the Respondent of the latter's decision to shut down its facility on the day after Thanksgiving and to direct the use of annual leave on that day, the Complainant requested negotiation of the decision on forced leave but made no request to bargain with respect to the procedures, implementation, or impact of the decision until after it filed its unfair labor practice charge. In the absence of an appropriate and timely request to bargain in this regard, I agree with the Administrative Law Judge's conclusion that dismissal of the subject complaint is warranted.

ORDER

IT IS HEREBY ORDERED that the complaint in Case No. 31-10802(CA) be, and it hereby is, dismissed.

RECOMMENDED DECISION

This is an unfair labor practice proceeding in which a formal hearing of record was held pursuant to Executive Order 11491 as amended (hereinafter referred to as "the Order") and 29 CFR Part 203.

Statement of the Case

The Complainant charges Respondent with violations of Sections 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order. In essence, it is alleged that on October 22, 1976, the Respondent by its

Commanding Officer, issued a memorandum authorizing supervisors to direct the use of annual leave on Friday, November 26, 1976 (the day after Thanksgiving); that such action constituted forced leave; that such action was taken without prior negotiation with a duly designated representative of the union; and that Respondent's unilateral action violated Article XX of the negotiated agreement between the parties, as well as Sections 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order.

In its answer, Respondent alleges in substance that on October 21, 1976, its appropriate representative met with an authorized designee of the union president and informed him that in view of the fact that Electric Boat (the government contractor whose work Respondent oversees) would be closed on the Friday after Thanksgiving, it would be uneconomical for Respondent to remain operational, and employees would accordingly be required to take annual leave; that a copy of the proposed memorandum announcing the shutdown was then shown to the union designee; that following the issuance of the memorandum the next day, the union objected to the shutdown, but at no time offered any proposals or sought negotiation on procedures or implementation, or on the impact on the employees affected; and that prior to November 26, 1976, four meetings were held with the union in attempt to resolve the dispute without success.

Findings of Fact

At all relevant times, Complainant was the exclusive bargaining representative of Respondent's graded employees. A negotiated agreement was approved on June 7, 1976 and is still in effect.

As required by Section 12 of the Order the following provisions thereof are incorporated in the negotiated agreement and set forth in Article III of such agreement:

Rights and Obligations of the Employee.

Section 1. It is agreed that Management Officials of the Employer retain the rights in accordance with Executive Order 11491, as amended, and applicable laws and regulations and Article VI of this agreement.

* * * *

c. To relieve employees from duties because of lack of work or other legitimate reason;

Article XX of the agreement reads as follows:

Forced or Curtailed Leave

Section 1. It is recognized that the nature of the Employer's mission is such that it may be necessary for the Employer in accordance with the regulations, at times to curtail the use of leave and at times to require it to be taken. When the above actions affect a number of employees, the Employer agrees to negotiate the procedure with the Union.

2. In cases of curtailed leave, leave periods will be assigned or rescheduled on the basis of individual seniority and leave balance for each group of employees reporting to a single supervisor.

On October 21, 1976, Messrs. Bianco and Poliks, Respondent's Civilian Personnel Officer and Labor-Management Relations Specialist respectively, met with Mr. Sorkin, Complainant's Treasurer. The president of the union was then in the hospital and had theretofore advised Mr. Poliks that Mr. Sorkin would fill in for her during her absence. Mr. Poliks had contacted Mr. Sorkin as a representative of the union on one or two other matters. At the meeting in question, Mr. Bianco informed Mr. Sorkin of the directive to close down the activity on the Friday following Thanksgiving and delivered a copy thereof to him. Mr. Sorkin initialed a route sheet indicating his receipt of the directive, but there was no discussion of its contents at that time.

On the following day, October 22, the directive above referred to was issued. Its contents follow:

1. Thanksgiving Day, 25 November 1976, is a legal holiday and will be observed as a non-workday by all SUPSHIP employees.
2. In as much as EBDIV will be closed on Thursday and Friday, 25 and 26 November 1976, SUPSHIP operation on these days would be uneconomical. Accordingly, supervisors are authorized to direct the use of annual leave on Friday, 26 November 1976. Employees not having annual leave credits available for use, will be advanced annual leave upon request.

3. In accordance with reference (a) and by this memorandum, employees are furnished advance notice regarding the closing of this Command on 26 November 1976 and of the requirement to use annual leave on said day.

The union's chief negotiator, Mr. Guimond, was not notified of the meeting of October 21 and did not attend. He learned of the directive on October 22, when it was circulated. From October 25 to and including October 27, he spoke to Mr. Poliks several times in an effort to obtain rescission or modification of the directive. He requested negotiation of the decision on forced leave, pointing out that for November 11, Veterans Day, which was also a holiday at Electric Boat, the Command put out a notice permitting liberal leave, rather than forced leave. Mr. Poliks informed him that the decision was not negotiable.

Mr. Guimond made no specific proposal with respect to procedures or implementation of the decision nor as to its impact on employees. The union made no request to discuss or negotiate procedures, implementation or impact until after the unfair labor practice charge (dated October 27, 1976) had been filed.

At the hearing, Mr. Guimond testified that in his discussion with Mr. Poliks, among the things he (Guimond on behalf of the union) wanted to discuss were what we would do if a person had no leave - could he be advanced leave? That contingency, of course, was expressly provided for in the directive of October 22 and there could be no doubt as to how it was to be taken care of. Assuming that the witness had read the directive at the time of his discussion, it would not be unreasonable to infer that the question he recited was a mere afterthought, carelessly interjected as an example of a procedural matter that might have been appropriate for negotiation had it been requested. I am persuaded no such request was made.

By reason of an emergency situation that developed shortly before Thanksgiving, five employees worked on Friday, November 26.

Conclusions of Law

It is clear that the decision to shut down on the day after Thanksgiving was a reserved right of agency management under Section 12(b)(3) of the Order, as well as Article III of the negotiated agreement, and therefore no consultation or negotiation with the union with respect thereto was required. It is well established, however, that agency management is obligated to bargain concerning the implementing procedures and impact on adversely affected employees of such a management decision even though the subject matter of the decision is non-negotiable under Section 12(b). See Tidewater Virginia Federal Employees Metal Trades Council and Naval Public Works Center, Norfolk, Virginia, FLRC No. 71 A-56; Bureau of the Mint, U.S. Department of the Treasury, 6 A/SLMR 640, 641 (No. 750); Directorate of Facilities Engineers, Fort Richardson, Alaska, A/SLMR No. 946.

Upon closely parallel facts, it has been expressly held that no violation of Section 19(a)(1) or (6) results from a unilateral decision to shut down an activity during Thanksgiving and Christmas where the union did not at any time request to bargain about the procedures involved and the impact of the decision. Department of the Navy, Marine Corps Supply Center, Barstow, California, A/SLMR No. 692.

With respect to the allegation that the provisions of the directive for forced leave violated Article XX of the negotiated agreement, I conclude that the terms of the agreement are not so clear that it can be said that a violation occurred. Although a breach of contract can also be a violation of the Order if flagrant and persistent, I conclude that if the facts be deemed to constitute a breach of Article XX of the agreement, any such breach is not of a flagrant and persistent type that might amount to a violation of the Order.

Since no negotiations took place at the meeting of October 21 (which consisted of nothing more than the giving of prior notification to the union of the proposed action), and since there is no evidence that Respondent subsequently refused to meet with the chief negotiator, I conclude that there was no violation of the Order or the agreement in giving such notification, in the absence of the president, to a union officer who had been authorized to act on her behalf.

Upon all the evidence adduced, it is concluded that the record fails to establish that the Respondent violated Sections 19(a)(1) or 19(a)(6) of the Order.

RECOMMENDATION

In view of the foregoing, it is recommended that the complaint be dismissed in all its entirety.

SUMMARY OF DECISION AND ORDER CLARIFYING UNIT
OF THE ASSISTANT SECRETARY
PURSUANT TO SECTION 6 OF EXECUTIVE ORDER 11491, AS AMENDED

U.S. CUSTOMS SERVICE,
OFFICE OF REGULATIONS AND RULINGS
A/SLMR No. 1148

This case involved a petition for clarification of unit (CU) filed by the U.S. Customs Service, Office of Regulations and Rulings (Activity-Petitioner) seeking to clarify whether two senior staff attorneys in its Freedom of Information and Privacy Branch should be excluded from the exclusively recognized unit represented by the National Treasury Employees Union, Chapter 101 (NTEU). The Activity-Petitioner asserted that in order to eliminate the inherent conflict of interest which occurs when unit employees in the Freedom of Information and Privacy Branch process requests for information filed by the NTEU, two senior staff attorneys should be excluded from the unit and then assigned to process all NTEU requests under either the Freedom of Information Act (FOIA) or the Privacy Act. The NTEU contended essentially that there was no basis under the Executive Order for such exclusions.

The Assistant Secretary concluded that the senior attorney responsible for processing FOIA requests was a representative of management within the meaning of Section 2(f) of the Order. In this regard, the record revealed that FOIA requests made by the NTEU usually deal with personnel information and grievance processing, both of which, in the Assistant Secretary's view, are "matters relating to the implementation of the agency labor-management relations program" as defined in Section 2(f). Further, it was noted that the NTEU had made a considerable number of FOIA requests in the past and that there is nothing in the record to indicate that the volume of such requests will decrease in the future. Thus, in the Assistant Secretary's view, the conflict of interest present herein was neither speculative nor de minimus. Therefore, the senior attorney responsible for FOIA requests was excluded from the unit.

The Assistant Secretary further determined that there was no basis for the exclusion of the attorney specializing in Privacy Act requests. In this regard, he found that any conflict of interest with respect to the work of this employee was purely speculative in nature, as there was no evidence that the NTEU had made any Privacy Act requests in the past.

Accordingly, the Assistant Secretary ordered that the unit be clarified consistent with his findings.

DECISION AND ORDER CLARIFYING UNIT

Upon a petition duly filed under Section 6 of Executive Order 11491, as amended, a hearing was held before Hearing Officer Bridget Sisson. The Hearing Officer's rulings made at the hearing are free from prejudicial error and are hereby affirmed.

Upon the entire record in this case, including briefs filed by both parties, the Assistant Secretary finds:

The U.S. Customs Service, Office of Regulations and Rulings, hereinafter called the Activity-Petitioner, filed a petition for clarification of unit (CU) seeking to clarify whether two senior staff attorneys in its Freedom of Information and Privacy Branch should be excluded from the exclusively recognized unit represented by the National Treasury Employees Union, Chapter 101, hereinafter called NTEU. Essentially, the Activity-Petitioner asserts that in order to eliminate the inherent conflict of interest which occurs when unit employees in the Freedom of Information and Privacy Branch process requests for information filed by the NTEU, two senior staff attorneys should be excluded from the unit so that they may be assigned to process NTEU requests under the Freedom of Information Act (FOIA) 1/ and the Privacy Act. 2/ The NTEU contends that there is no basis under the Executive Order for such exclusions.

2/ Privacy Act of 1974, 5 U.S.C. § 552a.

The NTEU was certified as the exclusive representative for all professional employees in the U.S. Customs Service, Office of Regulations and Rulings, on April 22, 1974. 3/ The Activity-Petitioner, located in Washington, D. C., is composed of several divisions, including the Entry Procedures and Penalties Division of which the Freedom of Information and Privacy Branch is a part.

Seven attorneys are assigned to the Freedom of Information and Privacy Branch. Four of them are classified as "permanent" staff members, and three serve on a rotating basis with other attorneys in the division. Attorneys in this particular Branch are responsible for processing all requests filed with the Activity-Petitioner under either the FOIA or the Privacy Act. Of the seven staff attorneys, one attorney specializes primarily in Privacy Act matters, while the others work exclusively on FOIA requests.

The record indicates that more than 900 FOIA requests were received by the Activity-Petitioner during the first six months of 1978. During this period, 22 of the requests were from the NTEU, approximately the same number filed by that labor organization during the entire previous two years. Presently, staff attorneys, all of whom are within the bargaining unit represented by the NTEU, routinely handle such NTEU requests. Occasionally, however, requests of a particularly sensitive nature may be referred by the Branch Chief to the General Counsel of the Customs Service for disposition. There is no evidence that the NTEU has made any requests under the Privacy Act to date.

Doris Robinson, Attorney (Customs), GS-905-14

Robinson is the Branch's general expert on rules and regulations and is the senior staff attorney assigned to FOIA requests. Among her other duties, she devotes a substantial part of her time to answering telephone requests for advice and information on FOIA matters and, as a result of her acknowledged expertise in the area, has become responsible for FOIA case assignments to other attorneys in the Branch. If Robinson is excluded from the unit, the Activity-Petitioner states that she alone will be assigned to process FOIA requests made by the employees' exclusive representative.

Under the particular circumstances of this case, I conclude that Doris Robinson is a representative of management within the meaning of Section 2(f) of the Order. In this regard, the record reveals that FOIA requests made by the NTEU deal with personnel information and grievance processing, both of which in my view are "matters relating to the implementation of the agency labor-management relations program" as defined in Section 2(f).

3/ The certified unit is described as "all professional employees in the United States Department of the Treasury, United States Customs Service, Office of Regulations and Rulings, excluding all non-professional employees, employees engaged in Federal personnel work in other than a purely clerical capacity, management officials and supervisors and guards as defined in the Order."

November 17, 1978

Further, I note that the NTEU has made a considerable number of FOIA requests in the past, and there is nothing in the record to indicate that the volume of such requests is likely to decrease in the future. Thus, the conflict of interest present herein is neither speculative ^{4/} nor de minimus. ^{5/} Therefore, and noting particularly the Activity-Petitioner's position that she alone among attorneys in the Branch will be assigned to process all FOIA requests made by the NTEU in the future, I conclude that Doris Robinson should be excluded from the unit and I will order that the unit be clarified accordingly. ^{6/}

William Lawlor, Attorney (Customs), GS-905-14

Currently, Lawlor is the only Branch attorney handling Privacy Act requests, and presumably his exclusion from the unit would leave him free to handle NTEU requests under the Privacy Act without risking a potential conflict. However, as noted above, there is no evidence that the NTEU has made any Privacy Act requests to date. Thus, in my view, any conflict of interest with respect to Lawlor's work is purely speculative in nature. Consequently, under the circumstances herein, I conclude that there is no basis for Lawlor's exclusion from the bargaining unit under Section 2(f) of the Order. I further find that there is insufficient basis to support Lawlor's exclusion from the unit as a management official, confidential employee, or an employee engaged in Federal personnel work in other than a purely clerical capacity.

ORDER

IT IS HEREBY ORDERED that the unit sought to be clarified herein, for which the National Treasury Employees Union, Chapter 101, was certified on April 22, 1974, be, and it hereby is, clarified by excluding from the unit Doris Robinson, Attorney (Customs), GS-905-14, and including in the unit William Lawlor, Attorney (Customs), GS-905-14.

SUMMARY OF DECISION AND ORDER OF THE ASSISTANT SECRETARY
PURSUANT TO SECTION 6 OF EXECUTIVE ORDER 11491, AS AMENDED

NATIONAL LABOR RELATIONS BOARD
A/SLMR No. 1149

This case involved an unfair labor practice complaint filed by the National Labor Relations Board Union (Complainant) alleging that the Respondent violated Section 19(a)(1) and (6) by failing to timely approve and implement a local supplemental agreement.

The Administrative Law Judge concluded that the Respondent did not violate Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order and recommended that the complaint be dismissed in its entirety. In this regard, he found that the Respondent did not violate the Order when its General Counsel withheld approval of a local supplemental agreement on the basis that certain of its provisions were inconsistent with the national agreement between the Complainant and the Respondent, as well as, in certain instances, inconsistent with Section 11(b) and/or 12(b) of the Order.

In agreeing with the Administrative Law Judge that dismissal of the instant complaint was warranted, the Assistant Secretary noted particularly that the Complainant, after the supplemental agreement failed to gain the approval of the Respondent's General Counsel, never sought a determination under the procedures of the controlling agreement but, rather, immediately instituted the instant unfair labor practice proceeding.

DECISION AND ORDER

On September 7, 1978, Administrative Law Judge William Naimark issued his Recommended Decision and Order in the above-entitled proceeding, finding that the Respondent had not engaged in the unfair labor practices alleged in the complaint and recommending that the complaint be dismissed in its entirety. 1/

The Assistant Secretary has reviewed the rulings of the Administrative Law Judge made at the hearing and finds that no prejudicial error was committed. The rulings are hereby affirmed. Upon consideration of the Administrative Law Judge's Recommended Decision and Order and the entire record in the subject case, I hereby adopt the Administrative Law Judge's findings, conclusions and recommendations.

The Administrative Law Judge found, and I agree, that the Respondent did not violate the Order when its General Counsel withheld approval of a local supplemental agreement on the basis that certain of its provisions were inconsistent with the national agreement between the Complainant and the Respondent, as well as, in certain instances, inconsistent with Section 11(b) and/or 12(b) of the Order. In this regard, it is noted that the Federal Labor Relations Council (Council) held in National Labor Relations Board Union, Local 6 and National Labor Relations Board, Region 6, Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania, FLRC No. 77A-109 (1977), that where a negotiability dispute involves both Section 11(c)(1) and 11(c)(4) matters, 2/ the parties should first resolve the issue relating to the interpretation of a controlling agreement through the procedures provided in Section 11(c)(1) before seeking a determination of negotiability from the Council under Section 11(c)(4) of the Order. In the instant case, the Complainant, after the supplemental agreement failed to gain the approval of the Respondent's General Counsel, never sought a determination under the procedures of the controlling agreement but, rather, immediately instituted the instant unfair labor practice proceeding. Further, it is not alleged, nor is there any evidence, that the Respondent would have refused to comply with the procedures set forth in Section 11(c) of the Order.

Under these circumstances, as the Respondent's refusal to approve the supplemental local agreement without certain modifications did not reflect an improper refusal to bargain with the Complainant, but reflected only a reasonable disagreement with respect to the interpretation of a controlling agreement, and as the Complainant did not utilize the procedures available for resolving the issues involved, I find that the Respondent's conduct herein was not in violation of Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order.

RECOMMENDED DECISION AND ORDER

Statement of the Case

Pursuant to a Notice of Hearing on Complaint issued on May 9, 1978 by the Regional Administrator, Labor-Management Services Administration, U.S. Department of Labor, Philadelphia Region, a hearing was held before the undersigned on June 14, 1978 at Los Angeles, California.

This proceeding was initiated under Executive Order 11491, as amended (herein called the Order). A complaint was filed on June 14, 1977 by the National Labor Relations Board Union (herein called Complainant) against the National Labor Relations Board (herein called the Respondent). It alleged, in substance, that Respondent violated Sections 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order by refusing to approve and implement a local supplemental agreement between Respondent's Region 21 and Complainant's Local 21 within 45 days as required by Section 15 of the Order.

Respondent filed a response to the Complaint on July 20, 1977. It denied the commission of any unfair labor practice and affirmatively asserted several defenses.

On March 23, 1978 the Regional Administrator dismissed the allegations in the complaint pertaining to Respondent's failure to implement the local supplemental agreement within 45 days. Absent appeal to the Assistant Secretary in accordance with Section 203.8(c) of the regulations, 1/ this dismissal is binding in the proceedings herein. 2/ Accordingly, the sole issue left for determination is whether Respondent violated Sections 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order by refusing to approve and implement this local supplemental agreement.

Both parties were represented at the hearing and afforded full opportunity to be heard, to adduce evidence, and to examine and cross-examine witnesses. Thereafter, both parties filed briefs which have been duly considered. 3/

1. At all times material herein Complainant has been the certified and exclusive bargaining representative for a unit of professional employees located in Respondent's regional, subregional, and resident offices. Representation is accorded at the local level through various local unions including, inter alia, Local 21, Complainant's representative in Region 21.

2. From December 9, 1974 to August 22, 1976 Complainant and Respondent were parties to a collective bargaining agreement covering the aforesaid unit of employees. On

1/ 29 CFR §203.8(c).

2/ See Social Security Administration, Bureau of Hearings and Appeals, A/SLMR No. 1040 (May 11, 1978); National Archives and Records Service, A/SLMR No. 965 (Jan. 11, 1978).

3/ In his brief Respondent moved to correct the transcript in respect to certain errors contained therein. The motion is granted and the transcript is deemed corrected as set forth in the attachment herein marked "Appendix".

April 1, 1977 the parties executed a new agreement, effective through December 31, 1979. Both agreements contain provisions authorizing the negotiation of local supplemental agreements between local unions and Regional Directors, subject to certain specified conditions.

3. Pursuant to this authority negotiations began between Local 21 and Region 21. Principal spokesmen were, respectively, Paul D. Flemm, President of Local 21, and Wilford W. Johansen, Regional Director for Region 21. Ground rules approved March 9, 1976 provided, inter alia, that agreement was subject to approval by the General Counsel and the Executive Committee of the National Union per Article XVII, Section 2 of the National Agreement.

4. Negotiations culminated in a local supplemental agreement on June 4, 1976. The agreement provided that it would be effective upon the signatures of the parties and approval by the General Counsel and the Executive Committee of the Union. Copies of the agreement were sent to the General Counsel and National Union during the last week of June 1976.

5. Robert Droker, Complainant's President, received a copy of the agreement on June 29, 1976. Mr. Droker made two deletions, approved the rest, and returned the agreement to Paul Flemm. The deletions involved the last sentence of the first paragraph of Article VI (Regional Office Personnel File) and the whole of Article IX (Local Supplemental Transportation).

6. Mr. Johansen was advised of the Executive Committee's approval by Mr. Flemm. At this time, Mr. Johansen was invited to sign the agreement. He refused, stating that he wished to wait until the agreement had received the General Counsel's approval as well.

7. By letter dated October 8, 1976 the General Counsel informed Mr. Johansen that he would not approve the agreement unless certain modifications and changes were made as specified therein. However, the letter contained assurances that upon the agreement's resubmission with the modifications and/or deletions specified therein, it would be approved.

The General Counsel stated his reasons for withholding approval of the local supplemental agreement as follows:

"Article II of the Supplementary Agreement, inter alia, would permit employees, under certain circumstances, to choose to work under an 'informal system of compensatory time off which will require no formal accounting of time spent, or prior approval to work such overtime . . .' Inasmuch as this provision does not specifically describe the methods and/or procedures under which said informal system will operate, approval of this aspect of the Supplementary Agreement pursuant to Article XVII of the National Agreement must be withheld.

Article III of the Supplementary Agreement deals with the selection and assignment of bilingual agents to assist other agents in the processing of cases. In my view, while the procedure outlined herein represents a sound approach to the problem suggested, this Article is beyond the permissible scope of bargaining as it would restrict management's rights, retained under Section 11(b) and 12(b) of Executive Order 11491 as amended and Article III of the National Agreement. Therefore, it must be disapproved.

The first unnumbered paragraph of Article VI of the Supplementary Agreement modifies Article VI, Section 3, and Article XIV, Section 2, of the National Agreement to the extent that it requires notification to employees prior to use of any adverse comments, criticisms or materials. Since the National Agreement does not require such prior notification, this proposed requirement constitutes a modification of the National Agreement and cannot be approved.

The first unnumbered paragraph of Article VI of the Supplementary Agreement also precludes management, absent prior notification, from using any adverse comments, criticisms or materials 'as a basis for action unfavorable to the employee or for denying the affected employee a promotion.' As written, this provision places a restriction on the evaluation of employees not provided for in Article VI of the National Agreement and is inconsistent with Section 12(b)(2) of Executive Order 11491 and Article III of the National Agreement.

The first unnumbered paragraph in Article VI of the Supplementary Agreement which concludes with a provision that 'promotions are granted on the basis of merit only,' is approved with the understanding that it was meant to be consistent with the criteria for promotion as set forth in Article VI of the National Agreement.

Although I have been advised that the second unnumbered paragraph of Article VI of the Supplementary Agreement was intended to remove the subject of editing and rewriting of legal drafts from the requirements contained in the first unnumbered paragraph of Article VI, it would appear that this paragraph is also subject to the interpretation that the subject of editing and rewriting of legal drafts was to be removed from the evaluation process. Inasmuch as the meaning and intent of this paragraph is somewhat unclear and as the latter interpretation may be in conflict with the provisions of Article VI of the National Agreement, it must be disapproved." 4/

8. After learning of the General Counsel's rejection of the agreement, Local 21 did not seek to resume negotiations. Instead, Complainant charged Respondent with violating Sections 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order by refusing to approve and implement the agreement. Efforts to resolve this dispute were unavailing, and on June 14, 1977 the instant complaint was issued.

9. The local supplemental agreement was never signed by the designated signatories thereto nor implemented in Region 21.

Conclusions of Law

Section 15 of the Order provides, in pertinent part:

"An agreement with a labor organization as the exclusive representative of employees in a unit is subject to the approval of the head of the agency or an official designated by him. An agreement shall be approved. . . if it conforms to applicable law, the Order, 4/ The General Counsel also disapproved Article IX. However Complainant does not contest the validity of this action in light of the Executive Committee's deletion of this same article.

existing published agency policies and regulations (unless the agency has granted an exception to a policy or regulation) and regulations of other appropriate authorities. . . . A local agreement subject to a national or other controlling agreement at a higher level shall be approved under the procedures of the controlling agreement, or, if none, under agency regulations."

Pursuant to this authority and Article XVII of the National Agreement, the General Counsel reviewed the local supplemental agreement negotiated between Complainant's Local 21 and Respondent's 21, approving some provisions but disapproving others. Complainant attacks this action in the instant unfair labor practice proceeding, claiming that the disapprovals were erroneous, unreasonable and done in bad faith.

The Order contemplates that the merits of an agency head's negotiability determinations be determined under the procedures set forth in Section 11(c). 5/ Furthermore, the Section 11(c) states:

"(c) If, in connection with negotiations, an issue develops as to whether a proposal is contrary to law, regulation, controlling agreement, or this Order and therefore not negotiable, it shall be resolved as follows:

(1) An issue which involves interpretation of a controlling agreement at a higher agency level is resolved under the procedures of the controlling agreement, or, if none, under agency regulations;

(2) An issue other than as described in subparagraph (1) of this paragraph which arises at a local level may be referred by either party to the head of the agency for determination;

(3) An agency head's determination as to the interpretation of the agency's regulations with respect to a proposal is final; procedures set forth in this section apply equally to disputes arising in connection with an agency head's Section 15 review as those in connection with other negotiations. 6/

In Ruling of the Assistant Secretary, No. 26, 1 A/SLMR 618 (March 18, 1971), the Assistant Secretary explained:

"the intent of Section 19(a) (6) is to provide a labor organization an opportunity to file a complaint when it believes that management has been arbitrary or in error in excluding a matter from negotiation which has already been determined to be negotiable through the procedures set forth in Section 11(c) of the Order." [Emphasis in original]

Therefore, since I conclude that Section 11(c) of the Order provides the exclusive procedure for determining negotiability disputes, 7/ and "[t]he unfair labor practice provisions of the Order are not part of these procedures," 8/ the instant complaint must be dismissed insofar as it requests a review of the merits of the General Counsel's negotiability determinations.

5/ [Cont'd]

- (4) A labor organization may appeal to the Council for a decision when -
 - (i) it disagrees with an agency head's determination that a proposal would violate applicable law, regulation of appropriate authority outside the agency, or this Order. "

8/ Air National Guard Bureau, supra.

This is not to say that failure to approve or implement a local agreement can never amount to an unfair labor practice. 9/ An agency head's authority to review such agreements is quite limited and the agency may not withhold approval simply because it is dissatisfied with the nature of the agreement reached. 10/ Failure to approve a provision on grounds other than those specifically authorized in Section 15 of the Order may be challenged as an unfair labor practice. 11/ However, where the grounds of disapproval are appropriate under Section 15, and not so baseless as to undermine the bargaining process itself or constitute an exercise of bad faith, disapproval constitutes a valid exercise of Section 15 authority.

An analysis of the General Counsel's conclusions indicates that he has confined his review to those factors specifically enumerated in Section 15 of the Order. In essence, the General Counsel's objections were based on perceived conflicts between agreement provisions and provisions of the National Agreement and the Executive Order. Furthermore, his conclusions are not so baseless or arbitrary as to interfere with subsequent good faith negotiations. Finally, the General Counsel's review indicates a singular absence of bad faith. In National Archives and Record Service, A/SLMR No. 965 (Jan. 11, 1978), the Assistant Secretary declined to find bad faith where the Union chose not to contest management's negotiability decisions other than by a broad assertion that management was wrong. Here, the General Counsel indicated a willingness to approve the agreement subject to certain specified conditions. The reasons for his disapproval were delineated with sufficient specificity to permit Complainant either to negotiate new provisions or to challenge the disapproval under the procedures provided in Section 11(c) of the Order. 12/ This Complainant did not do. Instead, reacting to a perceived "take it or leave it" attitude on the part of the General Counsel, it chose to initiate the instant proceeding. Because I find that the General Counsel's rejection of the local supplemental agreement was not so arbitrary as to constitute bad faith, but instead, was a valid exercise of Section 15 authority, I conclude that the failure to approve or implement this agreement was not violative of Sections 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order.

RECOMMENDATION

On the basis of my conclusion that Respondent has engaged in no conduct violative of Sections 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order, the undersigned recommends that the complaint herein be dismissed in its entirety.

SUMMARY OF DECISION AND ORDER OF THE ASSISTANT SECRETARY
PURSUANT TO SECTION 6 OF EXECUTIVE ORDER 11491, AS AMENDED

DEPARTMENT OF HEALTH, EDUCATION
AND WELFARE, SOCIAL SECURITY ADMINISTRATION, BRSI, NORTHEASTERN PROGRAM SERVICE CENTER
A/SLMR No. 1150

This case involved an unfair labor practice complaint filed by the American Federation of Government Employees, AFL-CIO, Local 1760 (Complainant) alleging that the Respondent violated Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order by refusing to permit a representative of the Complainant to attend an April 21, 1977, meeting which constituted a formal discussion within the meaning of Section 10(e) of the Order, and by refusing to negotiate with the Complainant over the procedures to be followed in connection with a proposed shifting of cases from one office component to another, as well as over the adverse impact of such a change on the bargaining unit employees.

The Administrative Law Judge concluded that the Respondent violated Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order. In this regard, he found that the April 21, 1977, meeting was a formal discussion between management and employees concerning personnel policies and practices within the meaning of Section 10(e) of the Order and that the Respondent refused to permit the Complainant to be represented at the meeting by a representative of its own choice. Furthermore, he concluded that the Respondent had failed to comply with its obligation to negotiate and bargain in good faith with the Complainant concerning the procedures that were utilized in effectuating its decision to transfer cases and about the impact of the decision on adversely affected employees.

The Assistant Secretary adopted the Administrative Law Judge's findings, conclusions, and recommendation and issued an appropriate remedial order for the violations found.

RECOMMENDED DECISION AND ORDER

Statement of the Case

Pursuant to a Notice of Hearing on Complaint issued on March 28, 1978 by the Acting Regional Administrator for Labor-Management Services Administration, U.S. Department of Labor, New York Region, a hearing was held before the undersigned at New York, New York.

This proceeding was initiated under Executive Order 11491, as amended (herein called the Order). A complaint was filed on April 18, 1977 by American Federation of Government Employees, AFL-CIO, Local 1760 (herein called Complainant) against Department of Health, Education, and Welfare, Social Security Administration, BRSI, Northeastern Program Service Center (herein called Respondent). It alleged, in substance, that Respondent violated Sections 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order by refusing to permit a representative of Complainant to attend a meeting on or about April 21, 1977, and by refusing to negotiate with Complainant over the procedures to be followed in connection with a proposed shifting of cases from one office component to another, as well as over the adverse impact of such a change on the bargaining unit employees.

Respondent contended (a) there was no obligation to meet and confer with the local union over conditions of employment; (b) the April 21 meeting was not a formal meeting within the meaning of Section 10(e) of the Order; (c) Complainant was represented at the April 21 meeting and (d) the shifting of cases had no substantial impact on employees in the bargaining unit. The alleged violations of the Order were denied.

Both parties were represented at the hearing, were afforded full opportunity to be heard, to adduce evidence and to examine as well as cross-examine witnesses. Thereafter, briefs were filed which have been duly considered.

Upon the entire record in this case, from my observation of the witnesses and their demeanor, and from all of the testimony and evidence adduced at the hearing, I make the following findings, conclusions and recommendations:

1. The Bureau of Retirement and Survivor's Insurance has six program service centers located throughout the United States - one in each of six major cities. The one involved herein is the Northeastern Program Service Center. These centers review claims prepared by district offices, adjudicate and determine entitlements, and certify benefits for beneficiaries to the Treasury Department.

1/ Findings of Fact paragraphs 1 through 8, although established in the record herein, are quoted from Judge Naimark's Decision, as affirmed by the Assistant Secretary in Department of Health, Education and Welfare, SSA, BRSI, Northeastern Program Center, A/SLMR No. 1101.

2. The National Council of Social Security Payment Center Locals, American Federation of Government Employees, AFL-CIO (herein called the Council) is composed of six local unions representing unit employees in each service center.

3. By letter dated February 27, 1969 J. F. Griner, National President of American Federation of Government Employees, AFL-CIO, notified the Commission of Social Security Administration that recognition will be granted to the national AFGE rather than the Council, and that the national office of AFGE is the bargaining agent for the Council.

4. By letter dated June 10, 1969 Hugh F. McKenna, Director of BRSI, advised Griner that the national office of AFGE, AFL-CIO (Council of Social Security Payment Center Locals) was granted exclusive recognition for a unit of all non-supervisory employees at the Payment Centers.

5. The Bureau and AFGE have been parties to collective bargaining agreements since 1971. The most recent written agreement was effective by its terms on March 15, 1974 for a period of two years. It was subsequently extended and continues in effect at the present time.

6. The aforesaid written agreement identifies the exclusive bargaining representative of the unit employees of the Program Centers as the national office of the American Federation of Government Employees, AFL-CIO (National Council of Social Security Payment Center Locals), hereinafter referred to as the Council.

7. (a) Article 2, Section (a) of the aforesaid agreement provides, in substance, that representatives of the Bureau and Council shall meet semi-annually to confer and consult with respect to personnel policies and practices or other matters affecting working conditions.

(b) Article 2, Section (c) of the aforesaid agreement provides, in substance, that labor-management meetings in the Program Center to confer on local personnel policies, practices, and general working conditions shall be held monthly unless deferred by mutual consent.

(c) Article 2, Section (e) of the said agreement provides, in substance, that (1) the Bureau will consult with the Council on matters re personnel policies, practices and working conditions (2) the Program Center will consult with its respective Local on matters within the authority of the Regional Representatives re personnel policies, practices and working conditions.

(d) Article 30 of the aforesaid agreement provides for the negotiation of supplemental agreements at each installation (Program Center) between the Center and the Local thereat. All local supplemental agreements are deemed part of the master agreement. Provision is also made in Section (d) of this Article for the establishment of ground rules to govern negotiations.

8. Under date of March 5, 1973, McKenna sent the Council a copy of the Bureau's Instruction (SSA-BRSI Instruction 711-1) pertaining to the labor-managements relations policy of the Bureau. Under the heading, "Purpose," it is stated therein that the individual Payment Center locals are representatives of AFGE (NCSSPCL) in the respective payment centers, and, as such, the Bureau consults and negotiate with them on appropriate local matters. 2/

9. On April 21, 1977 at 9:00 a.m. module manager Telford Hewitt held a meeting with Claims Authorizers in Module 25. Seven of the eight Module 25 Claims Authorizers were present at the meeting including Local 1760 Steward Arthur Mills. Mr. Mills asked Mr. Hewitt for a union representative to be present at the meeting. Mr. Hewitt advised Mr. Mills that the meeting was not a formal meeting and that Mr. Mills, who was also a Claims Authorizer, was enough union representation. Mr. Mills attended the meeting and took notes.

10. At the meeting Mr. Hewitt advised the Claims Authorizers of Respondent's decision to transfer cases which represented 1/3 of the Claims Authorizer backlog from Module 25 to Module 27.

11. Local 1760 Vice President Ritamarie Stone telephoned Mr. Hewitt after the meeting. In reply to Ms. Stone's questioning, Mr. Hewitt advised her that he did not permit Ms. Stone to attend the meeting because Mr. Mills the Local 1760 shop steward was present and that the union, thus, was represented at the meeting.

2/ Under the heading "Bureau Relationships with the Union" the instruction, though declaring that the union's right to be consulted applies to the same subject that are negotiable, draws a definitive distinction between negotiation and consultation.

12. Ms. Stone then telephoned Process Branch Manager Irving Feiner, identified herself as the union Vice President, and asked him if he had made the decision to transfer the cases from Module 25 to Module 27. Mr. Feiner replied that he had. Ms. Stone advised Mr. Feiner that this decision would have an adverse impact on the employees and that he should have notified the union and should meet and confer with the union. Mr. Feiner advised Ms. Stone that there was no obligation to meet and confer on the transfer of cases, only on the transfer of people. Ms. Stone advised Mr. Feiner that she felt the Activity was obliged to meet and confer with Local 1760 about how the shift of cases would be accomplished and the adverse effects of such a shift of cases. Mr. Feiner reiterated his refusal to meet and confer about the procedures for affecting the shift of cases and any adverse impact upon employees that might flow from the shifting of cases.

13. The subject shift of about 1/3 of the cases from Module 25 to Module 27 was accomplished.

14. After the shift of cases the Claiming Authorizers in Module 25 still had a full range of cases to work on.

Conclusions of Law

1. Respondent contends that it has no obligation to bargain or "to meet and confer" with Local 1760 concerning unilateral changes in working condition or about the procedures for implementing such changes and their impact. In Department of Health, Education and Welfare, SSA, BRSI, Northeastern Program Center, A/SLMR No. 1101, Administrative Law Judge Naimark, dealing with the same parties and exactly the same issue, concluded, after a full and perceptive analysis, that the Respondent herein is obliged to negotiate and bargain with Complainant herein concerning local issues or changes in working conditions. Judge Naimark was affirmed by the Assistant Secretary and therefore I am bound by the finding and conclusion that Respondent is obliged to negotiate and bargain with the Complainant about local issues, including changes in working conditions and the impact and implementation of such changes. 3/

2. Respondent contends that, in any event, the shifting of cases did not raise any obligation to bargain because it did not involve the transfer of people. In considering this matter it must be noted that no contention has been made that the Complainant had any right to bargain about the basic decision to shift 1/3 of the cases from Module 25 to Module 27. Rather, Complainant urges that it had a right to timely notice of the decision to shift cases and an opportunity to bargain concerning the procedures to be used in accomplishing the shift and, more importantly, the impact such a shift will have on the unit employees it represents, who work in Module 25. The Activity's arbitrary contention that, with respect to impact and implementation, it need bargain only about a decision to shift or transfer people and not cases must be rejected. The test is whether the decision in question may have an adverse impact on represented employees, and if so, to give the union an opportunity to bargain about the implementation and impact of the decision.

3/ Even if for some reason I were not bound by such finding and conclusion, I would adopt Judge Naimark's analysis and reasoning and would reach the very same conclusion.

In the subject instance the Complainant was reasonable in concluding that the transfer of 1/3 Module 25's cases to Module 27 might have an adverse impact on the employees of Module 25 and that therefore, as the collective bargaining representative of these employees, it should have an opportunity to bargain about the procedures for implementing this transfer of cases and the impact of the decision. The Respondent argues that, in fact, no adverse impact was established and therefore there should be no obligation to bargain about impact. Such an approach would frustrate the purposes of the Order. The collective bargaining representative must have an opportunity, before a change is effected, to meet and confer about the procedures for implementing the change and to bargain about any possible adverse impact of the change. Part of these negotiations might be to ascertain whether there will in fact be any adverse impact.

Accordingly it is concluded that Respondent was obligated to meet and confer on the procedures to be utilized in effectuating its decision to transfer cases, which, in my view, effected a change in employee terms and conditions of employment, and on the impact of its decision on adversely affected employees. Department of Health Education and Welfare, Social Security Administration BRSI, Northeastern Program Service Center, A/SLMR No. 984 at Page 2.

3. With respect to the April 21 meeting at which the decision to transfer cases was announced, it is concluded that this meeting was a "formal discussion" between management and employees concerning personnel policies and practices within the meaning of Section 10(e) of the Order and, accordingly, the Complainant had a right to be represented by a representative of its own choice. Absent a showing of some unusual circumstances establishing that the representative Complainant had chosen was not an acceptable representative, it would seem again to go contrary to the aims and purposes of the Order to permit the Respondent to decide who shall represent the Complainant. The Respondent introduced no evidence of any such unusual circumstances. Accordingly it is concluded that the Respondent violated Sections 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order by refusing to permit the Complainant to be represented at the April 21 meeting by a representative of Complainant's choice.

4. It is concluded that Respondent did not comply with its obligation to bargain in good faith and therefore violated Sections 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order when, after Ms. Stone specifically requested to meet and confer, Complainant refused to bargain with the Union about the procedures to be utilized in effectuating its decision to transfer cases and about the impact of the decision on adversely affected employees. Department of Health, Education and Welfare, SSA, BRSI, Northeastern Program Service Center, A/SLMR No. 984.

Recommendation

Having found that Respondent has engaged in certain conduct which is violative of Sections 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order, I recommend that the Assistant Secretary adopt the following order designed to effectuate the purposes of Executive Order 11491, as amended.

ORDER

Pursuant to Section 6(b) of Executive Order 11491, as amended, and Section 203.26(b) of the Regulations, the Assistant Secretary of Labor for Labor-Management Relations hereby orders that the Department of Health, Education and Welfare, Social Security Administration, BRSI, Northeastern Program Service Center shall:

(b) Permit American Federation of Government Employees, AFL-CIO, Local 1760 to be represented at formal discussions between management and employees involving personnel policies and practices.

YUMA, ARIZONA
A/SLMR No. 1151

This case involved a representation petition filed by the National Federation of Federal Employees, Local 1487 (NFFE) seeking a unit of Wage Board employees in the trades and crafts employed by the Yuma Projects Office, Bureau of Reclamation, Department of Interior, excluding employees assigned to the dredging operation, management officials, employees engaged in Federal personnel work in other than a purely clerical capacity, and supervisors as defined in Executive Order 11491, as amended. The Intervenor, International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers, Local 640, AFL-CIO (IBEW), has exclusive recognition at the Project level for all Wage Board employees at the Yuma Projects Office, except those employees assigned to the dredging operation who are represented exclusively by the NFFE.

At the hearing, the parties stipulated as to an appropriate unit. Based upon the stipulation of the parties and the evidence developed at the hearing, the Assistant Secretary found that the unit sought was appropriate. The only issue in dispute among the parties concerned the eligibility of employees in the job category of Foreman II to be included in the unit. The Assistant Secretary concluded that the Foreman II positions are supervisory positions within the meaning of Section 2(c) of the Executive Order.

The IBEW contended that Section 24 of the Order preserves the eligibility of the Foreman II position for inclusion in the unit, in that, although supervisors, Foreman II incumbents historically have been included in the IBEW's unit by negotiated agreement. The Activity, on the other hand, contended that Section 24 of the Order does not preserve mixed units of supervisory and nonsupervisory employees. The Assistant Secretary noted particularly a history of representation by the IBEW of the employees at issue in a mixed unit, their coverage under a succession of lawful agreements since the late 1940's, and the fact that historically the IBEW has represented similar employees in private industry. He concluded that the IBEW's unit herein, containing both supervisory and non-supervisory employees, continues to be viable pursuant to Section 24 of the Order. Additionally, the Assistant Secretary concluded that the NFFE was not eligible to represent Foreman II employees in the petitioned for unit, since there was no evidence that the NFFE historically or traditionally has represented supervisors such as those at issue in private industry

Nor is there evidence that the NFFE held exclusive recognition for units of such supervisors in any agency on the effective date of Executive Order 11491.

In view of the foregoing, the Assistant Secretary found that the NFFE's petition, in effect, constituted an appropriate attempt to sever a unit of nonsupervisory employees from the existing mixed unit. He noted that the question concerning representation raised by the instant petition, therefore, did not concern whether all of the employees in the existing unit wish to continue to be represented by their current exclusive representative in the currently recognized unit, but rather, whether a majority of the nonsupervisory employees in the unit found appropriate, which constituted a portion of the exclusively recognized unit, wish to be represented separately by the NFFE. In effect, no question concerning representation existed with respect to that portion of the mixed unit consisting of supervisors who will continue to be represented by the IBEW irrespective of the outcome of the election. Consequently, in the event that a majority of those voting in the election choose the IBEW as their representative, the existing mixed unit and the representation thereof will continue. Conversely, the Assistant Secretary noted that if a majority of the voting nonsupervisory employees choose the NFFE as their exclusive representative, such employees will be severed from the existing mixed unit and the NFFE will be certified as their exclusive representative.

Accordingly, the Assistant Secretary directed that an election be conducted in the petitioned for unit.

DECISION AND DIRECTION OF ELECTION

Upon a petition duly filed under Section 6 of Executive Order 11491, as amended, a hearing was held before Hearing Officer David Ofria. The Hearing Officer's rulings made at the hearing are free from prejudicial error and are hereby affirmed.

Upon the entire record in this case, including briefs filed by the Activity, the Petitioner, National Federation of Federal Employees, Local 1487, hereinafter called NFFE, and the Intervenor, International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers, Local 640, AFL-CIO, hereinafter called IBEW, the Assistant Secretary finds:

1. The labor organizations involved claim to represent certain employees of the Activity.
2. In its amended petition, the NFFE seeks an election in a unit of all Wage Board employees in the trades and crafts employed by the Yuma Projects Office, Bureau of Reclamation, Department of Interior, excluding employees assigned to the dredging operation, management officials, employees engaged in Federal personnel work in other than a purely clerical capacity, and supervisors as defined in Executive Order 11491, as amended.

The IBEW has exclusive recognition at the Project level for Wage Board employees at the Yuma Projects Office. The record indicates that presently 59 of the 70 employees in the IBEW's unit are assigned to the Activity's Maintenance Branch which is composed of seven sections and organizationally is part of the Activity's Water and Land Operations Division. The Office of Project Manager directs the Water and Land Operations Division, which has responsibility for the operation and maintenance of the Yuma and the Gila Projects and the river levee work. All sections of the Maintenance Branch are included in the IBEW's unit, except for the Dredging Maintenance Section whose employees currently are exclusively represented by the NFFE. The remainder of the employees represented in the IBEW unit are assigned to the Activity's Imperial Dam Division and to its Office of Supply and Service. The Imperial Dam Division is responsible for operation and minor maintenance of the Imperial Diversion Dam, the Laguna Diversion Dam and the Central Wash Pumping Plant.

At the hearing, the parties stipulated that an appropriate unit would include all Wage Board employees in the trade and crafts employed by the Yuma Projects Office, Bureau of Reclamation, Department of Interior, who are eligible for exclusive representation under Executive Order 11491, as amended, excluding employees assigned to the dredging operation, management officials, employees engaged in Federal personnel work in other than a purely clerical capacity, and supervisors not eligible for representation under Executive Order 11491, as amended. In this regard, the parties agree that the employees involved share a community of interest, and that the unit will promote effective dealings and efficiency of agency operations. The record bears out these conclusions. Thus, employees in the claimed unit have similar working conditions, are subject to the same work rules, have their wage rates established by similar methods, have a separate and distinct area of competition for reductions in force, and share a separate and distinct promotional procedure, as well as common supervision and hours of work. Also, there is evidence of interchange of employees within the existing unit.

In support of the assertion that the claimed unit will promote effective dealings, the record shows that the unit has existed substantially intact since the mid-1940's and has been covered by negotiated agreements since that time. The locus and scope of authority for collective bargaining exists and has always existed at the Project level.

Underlying the conclusion that the unit will promote the efficiency of agency operations, I note that the unit presently corresponds to the organizational and operational structure of the Agency at the Project level, and that the parties agreed that the impact of the present unit structure has been consistent with agency operations in terms of cost, productivity and the use of resources.

Accordingly, based upon the stipulation of the parties and the evidence developed at the hearing, I find that the unit sought is appropriate for the purpose of exclusive representation. 1/

The only issue raised herein among the parties concerns the eligibility of employees in the job category of Foreman II. The parties stipulated, and the record supports, that the Foreman II positions are supervisory positions within the meaning of Section 2(c) of the Order. 2/ Thus, the incumbents independently assign and direct employees working under them in the performance of their duties, they evaluate the employees' completed assignments, and they effectively recommend the scheduling of leave and the hiring of employees. The Foreman II incumbents also may adjust grievances at the first step of the negotiated grievance procedure and complete performance evaluations of the employees working under them. Based on these factors, I conclude that the employees classified as Foreman II are supervisors within the meaning of Section 2(c) of the Order.

The IBEW contends that Section 24 of the Order 3/ preserves the eligibility of the Foreman II position for inclusion in the unit, in that, although supervisory, the Foreman II position has been historically included in the IBEW's unit by negotiated agreement. The Activity, on the other hand, contends that Section 24 of the Order does not preserve mixed units of supervisory and nonsupervisory employees.

At the hearing, the parties stipulated that the contractual relationship between the IBEW and the Activity began in the late 1940's when the IBEW's predecessor, the Colorado River Power Trades Council, of which the IBEW was a part, was recognized as the employees' exclusive representative by the Activity's predecessor, the Yuma and Park-Davis Projects. Since

1/ The parties stipulated that there is no bar to an election in this matter.

2/ Section 2(c) of the Order provides that, " 'Supervisor' means an employee having authority, in the interest of an agency, to hire, transfer, suspend, lay off, recall, promote, discharge, assign, reward, or discipline other employees, or responsibility to direct them, or adjust their grievances, or effectively to recommend such action, if in connection with the foregoing the exercise of authority is not of a merely routine or clerical nature, but requires the use of independent judgment."

3/ Section 24 of the Order provides that the Executive Order does not preclude -

(1) the renewal or continuation of a lawful agreement between an agency and a representative of its employees entered into before the effective date of Executive Order No. 10988 (January 17, 1962); or

(2) the renewal, continuation, or initial according of recognition for units of management officials or supervisors represented by labor organizations which historically or traditionally represent the management officials or supervisors in private industry and which hold exclusive recognition for units of such officials or supervisors in any agency on the date of this Order.

that time, the Foreman II position has been included by negotiated agreement in the IBEW's unit. It is noted also that in private industry the IBEW represents operation and maintenance employees who either are classified as Foreman II, or perform functions similar to those of Foreman II, and that such employees are included in units of nonsupervisory employees.

Under the foregoing circumstances, and noting particularly the history of representation by the IBEW of the employees at issue in a mixed unit, their coverage under a succession of lawful agreements since the late 1940's, and the fact that historically the IBEW has represented similar employees in private industry, I find that the IBEW's unit herein, containing both supervisory and nonsupervisory employees, continues to be viable pursuant to Section 24 of the Order. 4/

There is no evidence that the NFFE historically or traditionally has represented supervisors such as those at issue herein in private industry. Nor is there evidence that the NFFE held exclusive recognition for units of such supervisors in any agency on the effective date of Executive Order 11491. 5/ Accordingly, I conclude that the NFFE is not eligible to represent Foreman II employees in the petitioned for unit.

In view of the foregoing, I find that the NFFE's petition, in effect, constitutes an appropriate attempt to sever a unit of nonsupervisory employees from the existing mixed unit. 6/ The question concerning representation raised by the instant petition, therefore, does not concern whether all the employees in the existing mixed unit wish to continue to be represented by their current exclusive representative in the currently recognized unit, but rather, whether a majority of the nonsupervisory employees in the unit found appropriate below, which constitutes a portion of the exclusively recognized unit, wish to be represented separately by the NFFE. In effect, no question concerning representation exists with respect to that portion of the existing mixed unit consisting of supervisors who will continue to be represented exclusively by the IBEW irrespective of the outcome of the election in this matter. Consequently, in the event that a majority of those voting in the election choose the IBEW, the incumbent labor organization, as their representative, the existing mixed unit and the representation thereof will continue. 7/

4/ See the Federal Labor Relations Council's Interpretation of the Order, FLRC No. 78P-2 (August 9, 1978).

5/ The NFFE does not represent employees classified as Foreman II in its dredging operations unit at the Activity.

6/ Cf. Treasury Department, United States Mint, Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, 1 A/SLMR 236, A/SLMR No. 45 (1971).

Conversely, if a majority of the voting nonsupervisory employees choose the NFFE as their exclusive representative, such employees will be severed from the existing mixed unit and the NFFE will be certified as their exclusive representative.

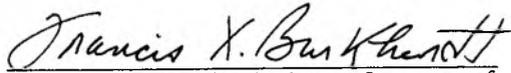

Accordingly, I find that the following unit is appropriate for the purpose of exclusive recognition under Section 10(b) of Executive Order 11491, as amended:

All Wage Board employees in the trades and crafts employed by the Yuma Projects Office, Bureau of Reclamation, Department of Interior, excluding employees assigned to the dredging operation, management officials, employees engaged in Federal personnel work in other than a purely clerical capacity, and supervisors as defined in the Order.

DIRECTION OF ELECTION

An election by secret ballot shall be conducted among the employees in the unit found appropriate as soon as possible but not later than 60 days from the date below. The appropriate Area Administrator shall supervise the election, subject to the Assistant Secretary's Regulations. Eligible to vote are those in the unit who were employed during the payroll period immediately preceding the date below including employees who did not work during that period because they were out ill, or on vacation, or on furlough, including those in the military service who appear in person at the polls. Ineligible to vote are employees who quit or who have not been rehired or reinstated before the election date. Those eligible shall vote whether they desire to be represented for the purpose of exclusive recognition by the National Federation of Federal Employees, Local 1487; the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers, Local 640, AFL-CIO; or neither.

ASSISTANT SECRETARY OF LABOR-MANAGEMENT RELATIONS
SUMMARY OF DECISION AND ORDER OF THE ASSISTANT SECRETARY
PURSUANT TO SECTION 6 OF EXECUTIVE ORDER 11491, AS AMENDED

UNITED STATES AIR FORCE
A/SLMR No. 1152

This case involved an unfair labor practice complaint filed by the National Federation of Federal Employees (NFFE) alleging that the Respondent violated Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order when it failed to supply certain information sought by the NFFE with respect to a proposed reorganization effected within the Air Training Command and when it failed to give appropriate notice to the NFFE of the proposed reorganization based on the obligation imposed by Section 9(b) of the Order under which the NFFE has been granted national consultation rights by the Respondent.

The Administrative Law Judge concluded that as the reorganization was effected by the Air Training Command under its independent authority to do so, there was insufficient basis for a finding of a violation of Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order predicated upon a failure of the Respondent to accord the NFFE rights imposed by Section 9(b) of the Order. In this regard, the Administrative Law Judge noted that the evidence was insufficient to indicate that the Air Training Command was acting as an agent for the Respondent when it effected the reorganization. In addition, he concluded that assuming arguendo there had been a Section 9(b) obligation, the Respondent, in fact, accorded timely notice of the reorganization and an opportunity to submit meaningful comments thereon to the NFFE. With respect to the alleged failure to supply requested information, the Administrative Law Judge concluded based on credited testimony that all information that was available to the Respondent at the time of the request was in fact supplied. Under all the circumstances, he recommended dismissal of this aspect of the unfair labor practice complaint.

The Assistant Secretary adopted the Administrative Law Judge's findings, conclusions, and recommendation that the complaint be dismissed. In reaching this conclusion, he found it unnecessary to pass upon the Administrative Law Judge's conclusion that, had there been a Section 9(b) obligation, the Respondent by its actions had not deprived the Complainant of any of its national consultation rights. Accordingly, the Assistant Secretary ordered that the complaint be dismissed in its entirety.

DECISION AND ORDER

On September 19, 1978, Administrative Law Judge Burton S. Sternburg issued his Recommended Decision and Order in the above-entitled proceeding, finding that the Respondent had not engaged in the unfair labor practices alleged in the complaint and recommending that the complaint be dismissed in its entirety. Thereafter, the Respondent and the Complainant filed exceptions and supporting briefs with respect to the Administrative Law Judge's Recommended Decision and Order, and the Respondent filed a brief in opposition to the Complainant's exceptions.

The Assistant Secretary has reviewed the rulings of the Administrative Law Judge made at the hearing and finds that no prejudicial error was committed. The rulings are hereby affirmed. Upon consideration of the Administrative Law Judge's Recommended Decision and Order and the entire record in the subject case, including the exceptions and supporting briefs filed by the parties and the brief in opposition to the Complainant's exceptions filed by the Respondent, I hereby adopt the Administrative Law Judge's findings, conclusions and recommendation. Thus, the evidence establishes that the Air Training Command is not an agency or a primary national subdivision of an agency within the meaning of the Executive Order and Part 2412 of the Federal Labor Relations Council's Rules and Regulations. 1/ Nor does the evidence establish that the Air Training Command was acting as an agent for an agency or a primary national subdivision of an agency when it carried out the reorganization involved herein. Accordingly, in agreement with the Administrative Law Judge, I find that there was no obligation under Section 9(b) of the Order for the Respondent to accord the Complainant timely notice or the opportunity to submit comments with respect to the proposal of the Air Training Command to reorganize. 2/

2/ As I have adopted the Administrative Law Judge's conclusion that the Respondent was under no obligation to consult with the Complainant regarding the reorganization in question, I find it unnecessary to pass on his further conclusion that the Respondent had, in fact, accorded timely notice of the reorganization to the Complainant and an opportunity to submit meaningful comments thereon.

DECISION AND ORDER

Statement of the Case

Pursuant to a complaint filed on December 5, 1977, under Executive Order 11491, as amended, by the National Federation of Federal Employees, (hereinafter called the Complainant or NFFE), against the United States Air Force (hereinafter called the Agency or Respondent), a Notice of Hearing on Complaint was issued by the Regional Administrator on May 17, 1978.

The Complaint alleges, in substance, that the Respondent violated Sections 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Executive Order by virtue of its actions in failing to (1) supply, upon request, information necessary to NFFE for intelligent bargaining and (2) to give appropriate prior notice of, and allow comments on, a proposed reorganization within the Air Training Command to NFFE which holds national consultation rights.

A hearing was held in the captioned matter on August 1, 1978, in Washington, D.C. All parties were afforded full opportunity to be heard, to examine and cross-examine witnesses, and to introduce evidence bearing on the issues involved herein.

Upon the basis of the entire record, including my observation of the witnesses and their demeanor, I make the following findings of fact, conclusions and recommendations.

Findings of Fact

Various Locals of NFFE, the Complainant herein, hold exclusive recognition at a number of individual training units of the Air Training Command (ATC) of the Department of the Air Force. Specifically, NFFE Local 943 represents employees at Keesler Air Force Base, Biloxi, Mississippi; NFFE Local 779 represents employees at Sheppard Air Force Base, Wichita Falls, Texas; NFFE Local 493 represents employees at Chanute Air Force Base, Rantoul, Illinois; and NFFE Local 1497 represents employees at Lowry Air Force Base, Denver, Colorado.

NFFE was granted national consultation rights by the Department of the Air Force, the Respondent herein, on June 4, 1971.

The Air Training Command is a major air command within the Department of the Air Force and is responsible, among other things, for all the technical training conducted in the Air Force. According to the uncontradicted testimony of Major Easton, Chief of the Organization Branch, as well as Air Force Regulation 26-2, ATC is a major command, which has complete authority to reorganize the structure of its training skills without any prior consultation with, or permission from, representatives of the Department of the Air Force with which NFFE holds national consultation rights. The record further establishes that the decision to reorganize various elements within the ATC was made by General Roberts, the commander of the ATC, without any prior consultation or other input by representatives from Air Force headquarters.

On June 13, 1977; pursuant to a request by NFFE, a meeting was held between Air Force Headquarters personnel and various representatives from NFFE. NFFE had requested the meeting for purposes discussing a program known as "Hasty Chief" which dealt with a possible revision in the methods and time involved in certain training programs. Additionally, NFFE was concerned about rumors regarding the hiring of a Colonel Cadou for purposes of conducting a study with respect to a reorganization within the Air Training Command.

Following a discussion of the "Hasty Chief" program, NFFE raised a number of questions concerning the hiring of Colonel Cadou and what his specific duties were to be. Representatives of the Respondent informed NFFE that Cadou had been hired to do a study with respect to a reorganization within ATC but that they had no other specific information or details. In response to a request from NFFE, Respondent's representatives assured NFFE that they would supply all information on the reorganization, including a copy of the Cadou report which was due in July, as soon as it became available.

In early July, 1977, the Cadou Report was completed and submitted to the Air Training Command. Thereafter, copies of the Cadou Report were sent to the commanders of the five technical training centers affected by the report for comment thereon. According to the letter accompanying the report, the comments were to be submitted to General Roberts, Commander of the Air Training Command by July 20th, 1977. The letter made it clear that the reorganization contained in the Cadou Report was a "proposed reorganization". Following receipt of comments from the respective commanders of the five technical training centers, General Roberts notified the center commanders on August 10, 1977, that he had decided to proceed with the reorganization and that the effective date would be January 1, 1978. Although noting in his August 10th message that "some further ATC internal work" had to be done before the reorganization was made a matter of public information, the center commanders were given authority to "begin phasing into the new organization as conditions permit". On August 16, 1977, ATC requested its representatives at each of the centers to determine what manpower changes would be necessary to implement the reorganization.

On August 19, 1977, the Office of the Secretary of the Air Force formally announced the reorganization to both NFFE and the Congress of the United States. According to the record, it is customary and routine procedure for the Office of the Secretary of the Air Force to make such announcements in order to insure that all interested persons such as NFFE and the Congress receive the information before the general public.

Pursuant to a request from NFFE, a meeting was held on August 29, 1977 between representatives of NFFE and the Air Force. During the course of the meeting Air Force representatives gave an exhaustive briefing on the Cadou Report and its recommended reorganization. The briefing explained the possible impact and manner of implementation. Additionally, Respondent's representatives willingly answered all questions propounded by NFFE personnel. NFFE was further informed at this meeting that there would be at least three opportunities in the future for NFFE personnel to submit their views on the reorganization before the reorganization was in fact implemented. At the conclusion of the meeting, the NFFE president demanded that the reorganization be immediately cancelled 1/. Although at least two NFFE representatives had copies of the Cadou Report in their possession during the meeting, NFFE requested that they be given copies of the Cadou Report. NFFE formally received copies of the Cadou Report on September 16, 1977. On September 29, 1977, NFFE filed its precomplaint charge which is the basis of the instant action. 2/

With respect to the allegation concerning the failure to supply information, the only evidence offered in support thereof consisted of the undetailed testimony of Ms. Exley. Thus, Ms. Exley testified that following the June 13th meeting she continually asked for information pertaining to the reorganization. According to Ms. Exley, no information was forthcoming until August 19th when NFFE was informed by letter of the reorganization. Prior thereto she was always informed that the unspecified requested information was not in existence. Respondent's witnesses, whom I credit, denied the receipt of any request for information (other than the Cadou Report) prior to the August 29th meeting. They also deny that any statistics or other information concerning the reorganization were compiled prior to completion of the Cadou Report. With respect to the Cadou Report the

1/ By letter dated September 2, 1978, Colonel Herring, Chief, Training Programs Division, informed NFFE President Pierce that the Air Force was going to proceed with the reorganization and invited NFFE's views with regard to impact and implementation. The letter also set forth the times when the civilian personnel officers at the various centers were scheduled to meet to discuss implementation of the reorganization so that NFFE could submit further comments etc.

2/ NFFE made it clear during the hearing that the instant complaint was based solely on events occurring between June 13 and September 29, 1977.

record indicates that NFFE representatives were in possession of same prior to the August 29th meeting and that such representatives asked many informed questions during the meeting concerning the report.

Discussion and Conclusions

NFFE, relying primarily on the Assistant Secretary's decisions in Secretary of the Navy, Department of the Navy, Pentagon, A/SLMR No. 924, and Department of the Navy, Office of Civilian Personnel, A/SLMR No. 1012, contends that the Respondent violated Sections 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Executive Order by virtue of its actions in not giving NFFE, which holds national consultation rights, timely notice of the proposed reorganization and an opportunity to submit comments, etc. on the impact and implementation of the reorganization as required by Section 9(b) of the Executive Order.

Respondent, on the other hand, takes the position that it was under no obligation to give notice and/or consult with NFFE since the reorganization was not effected by the Air Force, the Respondent herein, but rather by the Air Training Command, an independent organizational entity below the agency or primary national subdivision level. Respondent cites in support of its position National Weather Service, A/SLMR No. 847, and would distinguish Department of Navy, A/SLMR No. 1012 on the ground that the record is barren of any evidence indicating that the Air Training Command was acting as an agent of, or upon direction from, the Air Force which had accorded NFFE national consultation rights.

As alternative defenses, Respondent argues that it was not obligated to consult with NFFE since the reorganization did not constitute a "substantive change in personnel policies" and was in any event a matter on which the Air Force would not be required to meet and confer even if NFFE was entitled to exclusive recognition. Respondent further argues that inasmuch as it was under no obligation to consult with NFFE concerning the decision to reorganize it was also under no obligation supply any information bearing on the reorganization, such as the Cadou Study, manpower figures etc. Consistent with the foregoing position, Respondent questions the validity of the Assistant Secretary's decision in Department of Navy, A/SLMR No. 924, wherein it was found that irrespective of the fact that the change there involved concerned a reserved management right, the Agency was still obligated to consult with respect to impact and implementation. Finally, Respondent takes the position that, in any event, Complainant was given appropriate notice of the reorganization and allowed to consult with agency management on the reorganization and present its views in writing thereon.

A review of the respective positions of the parties set forth above makes it clear that resolution of the instant dispute turns upon the relationship between the Air Training Command and the Air Force, the Respondent herein. If the Air Training Command was acting as agent of, or under direction from, the Air Force in connection with the reorganization here involved, then NFFE, which enjoyed national consultation rights with the Air Force, was entitled to timely notice of the reorganization and an opportunity to submit meaningful comment thereon. Department of the Navy, A/SLMR No. 1012. If, on the other hand, the decision to reorganize was made independently by the Air Training Command without any input whatsoever from the Air Force then the duties and obligations arising under NFFE's national consultation rights would not come into play. Cf. National Weather Service, A/SLMR No. 847.

Based upon the credited testimony of Major Easton as well as a reading of Air Force Regulation 26-2 I find that the Air Training Command is a major operational component of the Air Force possessing the authority to independently effect a reorganization among its subordinate units. I further find that record supports the conclusion that the reorganization which underlies the instant controversy was effected without any input whatsoever from the Department of the Air Force. In this connection, I attach no significance to the fact that the reorganization was first announced by the Department of the Air Force. Thus, I note that it was customary and routine procedure to have all major changes in the organizational structure of any major command announced by Department of the Air Force in order to insure that the Congress, as well as other interested parties, were informed prior to the general public.

Under the circumstances, and particularly in view of the absence of any probative evidence indicating that the Air Training Command was acting as an agent of the United States Air Force when it effected the reorganization, I find that an insufficient basis exists for a 19(a)(1) and (6) finding predicated upon the alleged failure of the United States Air Force to accord NFFE the rights set forth in Section 9(b) of the Executive Order.

Moreover, and assuming arguendo a contrary conclusion I further find that NFFE was indeed accorded timely notice of the reorganization and an opportunity to submit meaningful comments thereon. Thus, I note that NFFE was notified of the reorganization only 9 days after the final decision to proceed with the reorganization was made and some four months prior to its effective date. 3/ Additionally, it is noted that the Air Force on a number of occasions within the period August 19-September 2 solicited NFFE's input and comments and made it clear that a final determination with respect to implementation had not been made. Accordingly, I find that NFFE was not deprived of any of its national consultation rights in violation of Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order. 4/

Lastly, based upon the record as a whole as well as my credibility determinations, I find that NFFE has failed to establish that the Respondent failed to timely supply upon request any information necessary for intelligent bargaining.

Recommendation

That the complaint be dismissed.

3/ With regard to the decision to reorganize, I find, contrary to the contention of Respondent, that the reorganization did constitute "a substantive change in personnel policies". Cf. Dept. of Navy, Office of Civilian Personnel, A/SLMR No. 1012. I further find that such decision is a reserved management right within the meaning of Section 9(b) and that Respondent was only obligated to allow NFFE a reasonable opportunity to consult in person on the reorganization. Cf. International Association of Firefighters and Griffiss Air Force Base, FLRC No. 71A-30, April 19, 1973 wherein a reorganization was deemed to fall within the exclusionary language of Section 11(b) of the Order.

4/ In reaching this conclusion I find the Assistant Secretary's decisions in Secretary of the Navy, Department of the Navy, Pentagon, A/SLMR No. 924 and Department of the Navy, Office of Civilian Personnel, A/SLMR No. 1012, to be distinguishable in that notice of the proposed changes there involved were never given and/or given at a time when the changes were already a fait accompli, which is not the case herein.

SUMMARY OF DECISION AND ORDER OF THE ASSISTANT SECRETARY
PURSUANT TO SECTION 6 OF EXECUTIVE ORDER 11491, AS AMENDED

INTERNAL REVENUE SERVICE, SOUTHWEST REGION, APPELLATE BRANCH OFFICE, NEW ORLEANS, LOUISIANA
A/SLMR No. 1153

This case involved an unfair labor practice complaint filed by the National Treasury Employees Union (NTEU) and its Chapter 91, alleging that the Respondent violated Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order by unilaterally changing the past practice of allowing Chapter 91 the use of Activity typewriters during non-duty time.

The Administrative Law Judge, noting that the issue in the subject case was raised previously in U.S. Department of the Treasury, Internal Revenue Service, New Orleans District, New Orleans, Louisiana, A/SLMR No. 1034, found that the Respondent had violated Section 19(a)(1) and (6) by unilaterally terminating the past practice of allowing Chapter 91 the use of the Respondent's typewriters in connection with labor-management correspondence prepared during non-duty time. In this regard, he found that there had been a past practice of allowing the use of the Respondent's typewriters for non-IRS activities, including their use by Chapter 91, and that the Respondent had knowledge of that practice.

The Assistant Secretary adopted the Administrative Law Judge's findings, conclusions and recommendation and issued an appropriate remedial order.

DECISION AND ORDER

On August 10, 1978, Administrative Law Judge William B. Devaney issued his Recommended Decision and Order in the above-entitled proceeding, finding that the Respondent had engaged in the unfair labor practices alleged in the complaint and recommending that it cease and desist therefrom and take certain affirmative actions as set forth in the attached Administrative Law Judge's Recommended Decision and Order. Thereafter, the Respondent filed exceptions and a supporting brief with respect to the Administrative Law Judge's Recommended Decision and Order.

The Assistant Secretary has reviewed the rulings of the Administrative Law Judge made at the hearing and finds that no prejudicial error was committed. The rulings are hereby affirmed. Upon consideration of the Administrative Law Judge's Recommended Decision and Order and the entire record in the subject case, including the Respondent's exceptions and supporting brief, I hereby adopt the Administrative Law Judge's findings, 1/ conclusions and recommendation.

1/ On pages 5, 7 and 11 of his Recommended Decision and Order, the Administrative Law Judge inadvertently spelled the name "Landeche" as "Landerche". In footnote 3 on page 13 of his Recommended Decision and Order, the Administrative Law Judge inadvertently stated that a witness, Ms. Lillian Stanton, had "testified that she had taken an hour of annual leave" to type a letter for the union, although the record indicates that, in fact, she testified that she "would have taken an hour of annual leave." These inadvertencies are hereby corrected.

The Administrative Law Judge determined that the evidence established that the Respondent had an established practice of allowing the use of its typewriters for non-tax work, such as retirement parties, softball rosters, the United Fund, as well as by the Complainant, NTEU Chapter 91, for labor-management matters. He also found that the Respondent had knowledge of the Complainant's use of the typewriters.

I agree that the record supports the Administrative Law Judge's finding concerning past practice, noting particularly the un rebutted testimony of Ms. Elvira Burch who testified that her supervisor, Ms. Sharon Landeche, had specific knowledge of her use of the Respondent's typewriters for union-related matters. 2/ Consequently, in agreement with the Administrative Law Judge, I conclude that the Respondent's unilateral termination of the past practice with respect to the Complainant's use of the Respondent's typewriters for labor-management matters during non-duty time was in derogation of its bargaining obligation under the Executive Order in violation of Section 19(a)(1) and (6).

ORDER

Pursuant to Section 6(b) of Executive Order 11491, as amended, and Section 203.26 of the Regulations, the Assistant Secretary of Labor for Labor-Management Relations hereby orders that the Internal Revenue Service, Southwest Region, Appellate Branch Office, New Orleans, Louisiana, shall:

1. Cease and desist from:

(a) Unilaterally altering or changing the established past practice of allowing the National Treasury Employees Union, Chapter 91, the exclusive representative of its employees, the use of Activity typewriters for union business relating to labor-management correspondence incidental to Chapter 91's representational obligations, and consonant with the provisions of Section 20 of Executive Order 11491, as amended, and the regulations of appropriate authorities, without first bargaining in good faith with the National Treasury Employees Union, Chapter 91.

(b) In any like or related manner interfering with, restraining, or coercing employees in the exercise of their rights assured by Executive

2/ In view of Ms. Burch's un rebutted testimony, I find it unnecessary to adopt the Administrative Law Judge's finding of an adverse inference on page 7 of his Recommended Decision and Order in regard to the Respondent's failure to call Ms. Landeche as a witness in this matter.

Order 11491, as amended.

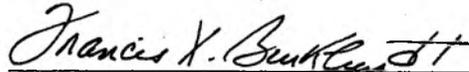

2. Take the following affirmative actions in order to effectuate the purposes and policies of the Order:

(a) Withdraw the oral instruction of Branch Chief R.J. McCoy of February 8, 1977, and his written confirmation of February 16, 1977, that "government production equipment (including typewriters), are not to be used in connection with Union business. This includes non-working hours."

(b) Post at its facility copies of the attached notice marked "Appendix" on forms to be furnished by the Assistant Secretary of Labor for Labor-Management Relations. Upon receipt of such forms they shall be signed by the Branch Chief, Internal Revenue Service, Southwest Region, Appellate Branch Office, New Orleans, Louisiana, and shall be posted and maintained by him for 60 consecutive days thereafter, in conspicuous places, including all bulletin boards and other places where notices to all employees are customarily posted. The Branch Chief shall take reasonable steps to insure that such notices are not altered, defaced, or covered by any other material.

(c) Pursuant to Section 203.27 of the Regulations, notify the Assistant Secretary, in writing, within 30 days from the date of this order as to what steps have been taken to comply herewith.

Statement of the Case

This proceeding under Executive Order 11491, as amended (hereinafter also referred to as the "Order"), was initiated by a charge filed on, or about, June 7, 1977, and a complaint, dated September 23, 1977, filed on September 26, 1977 (Asst. Sec. Exh. 1) which alleged violations of Sections 19(a) (1) and (6) of the Order by Respondent's unilateral instruction, given orally on February 8, 1977, and reduced to writing on February 16, 1977, that:

"... government production equipment (including typewriters), are not to be used in connection with Union business. This includes non-working hours." (Comp. Exh. 1)

Complainant asserts that this instruction unilaterally altered or changed the established past practice whereby officers and stewards of Complainant used Respondent's typewriters and the assistance of certain employees of Respondent for the purpose of typing letters, memoranda and other communications.

Notice of Hearing issued December 22, 1977, for a hearing on March 7, 1978, pursuant to which a hearing was duly held before the undersigned on March 7 and 8, 1978, in New Orleans, Louisiana. All parties were represented by counsel, were afforded full opportunity to be heard, to examine and cross-examine witnesses, and to introduce evidence bearing on the issues involved herein. At the close of the hearing, April 8, 1978, was fixed as the date for the filing of briefs, which date, pursuant to the joint motion of the parties and for good cause shown, was subsequently extended to May 26, 1978. Complainant's Brief, mailed May 24, 1978, was received May 26, 1978, and Complainant's corrected Brief, mailed May 31, 1978, was received June 2, 1978; Respondent's Brief, mailed May 26, 1978, was received May 31, 1978. Complainant's corrected Brief deletes the word "non" on page 2, line 21 before the word "union" and the corrected brief is hereby accepted as Complainant's original brief was timely filed. The extremely helpful briefs have been carefully considered.

Upon the basis of the entire record, including my observation of the witnesses and their demeanor, I make the following findings, conclusions and recommendations:

New Orleans District, New Orleans, Louisiana, A/SLMR No. 1034 (1978), and the determination of such legal issues as to the effect of Section 204 of Executive Order 11222 and Department of the Treasury's Minimum Standards to Conduct, Section 0.735-50(31 C.F.R. § 0.735-50 (1970)), under identical circumstances as are presented here is fully controlling in the present case. Indeed, the issue and only issue, to be determined in this case is the essentially factual issue as to whether the use of Respondent's typewriters in the Appellate Branch Office for union business had become an established term and condition of employment. If so, then the decision in A/SLMR No. 1034, supra, is fully dispositive, with recognition, as the Assistant Secretary noted in A/SLMR No. 1034 that:

"Section 20 of Executive Order 11491, as amended, states that the solicitation of membership or dues, and other internal business of a labor organization, shall be conducted during the non-duty hours of the employees concerned. The remedial order issued herein, therefore, is limited to only those past practices which would not be inconsistent with Section 20. Clarification of what is permitted and prohibited by Section 20 is contained in FPM Letter 711-120 (October 14, 1976) and the policy of the Federal Labor Relations Council set forth in Matter of GAO No. B-156287, FLRC No. 75F-1, 3 FLRC 875 (1976)." U.S. Department of the Treasury, Internal Revenue Service, New Orleans, Louisiana, A/SLMR No. 1034, n. 1 (1978)

FINDINGS AND CONCLUSIONS

1. Organization

The New Orleans Branch Office of the Assistant Regional Commissioner (Appellate), Southwest Region, Internal Revenue Service, is one of five branch offices under the supervision of the Assistant Regional Commissioner (Appellate), Mr. Douglas Moore. The other branch offices within the Southwest Region are located in Dallas, Houston, Oklahoma City and Denver. The Assistant Regional Commissioner (Appellate) is one of six Assistant Regional Commissioners under the supervision of the Regional Commissioner for the Southwest Region of the Internal Revenue Service. The Southwest Region is one of seven geographic regions of the Internal Revenue Service.

Complainant, Chapter 91 of National Treasury Employees Union, is the exclusive representative for collective bargaining for professional and non-professional employees who comprise the bargaining unit within the Southwest Regional Office. Complainant and Respondent were, at the time of the incidents giving rise to the complaint, parties to a multi-regional collective bargaining agreement entitled Multi-Regional Agreement I (hereinafter MRA-I). Complainant became the exclusive bargaining representative for collective bargaining about March 1, 1975, and at that time became a party to MRA I.

Notwithstanding that Complainant represents a bargaining unit which is region wide, the incidents which gave rise to the complaint relate exclusively to the New Orleans Branch Office. The New Orleans Appellate Branch Office has about twenty employees and two responsible supervisors, the Branch Chief and the supervisory secretary.

The District Office, which was involved in A/SLMR No. 1034, supra, is represented by NTEU Chapter 6. The District Office is headed by a District Director and the District Office is subject to a Multi-District Agreement.

2. The Practice of Using Government Typewriters for Union Business In the Appellate Branch Office.

With full recognition that nearly all Appellate Branch employees have come directly from the District Office and that some appellate employees, including the present Branch Chief, Mr. Robert McCoy, have switched back and forth several times between the Appellate Branch Office and the District Office, I accord no weight to the practice of the District Office vis-a-vis use of typewriters for union business and look entirely to the practice, if any, in the Appellate Branch Office.

At the outset, it should be noted that the record reflects without possible doubt extensive use of government typewriters for non-tax work, ranging from lists of names and addresses for Christmas parties and social functions, softball rosters, volleyball rosters, personal letters, retirement parties, the Flower Fund, and the United Fund. Indeed, Mr. Howard Watkins, Chief of the Appellate Branch Office from December, 1974, until November 1976, testified:

"Q. Did you approve that use?

"A. Oh, yes. I believe I participated in that. (Tr. 297)

* * * *

"A. I don't think that anybody came to me to ask me to approve them, as such. Actually, I was involved in it, and it was just understood that they could use the typewriters for that purpose." (Tr. 298).

Mr. Hilton T. Ponthier has worked for the Internal Revenue Service since February 14, 1960, having been employed initially as an Internal Revenue Agent in the District Office. In 1966, Mr. Ponthier moved to the Appellate Branch; in 1968, he returned to the District Office; and on either February 17, or 18, 1974, he returned to the Appellate Branch Office. On October 1, 1973, Mr. Ponthier was elected Vice President of NTEU Chapter 6, New Orleans District, which is the exclusive representative for the District Office. When Mr. Ponthier returned to the Appellate Branch Office in February, 1974, he continued to serve as Vice President of Chapter 6 and his duties included preparation of editorial comments for a Chapter 6 Newsletter, which comments were typed in the Appellate Branch Office; planning and coordinating, a Quad District Conference, sponsored by NTEU, which was held in May or June, 1974, in New Orleans, which required considerable typing. Mr. Ponthier testified that Mr. William A. Berry, at that time Chief of the Appellate Branch Office: a) had encouraged him to return to the Appellate Branch with full knowledge of his responsibilities as vice president of Chapter 6; b) was told by Mr. Ponthier of his (Ponthier's) union responsibilities, including the Quad District Conference; and c) was in Mr. Ponthier's office and saw him working on the Quad District Conference but expressed no opposition.

Ms. Elveria Burch, now employed by HEW in Hammon, Louisiana, was employed by the Internal Revenue Service from December, 1964, through July, 1977, and in the Appellate Branch Office from 1972 until July, 1977. She testified that while in the Appellate Office she typed union material when she had time to do so, although such work was not required and was not a condition of her employment; that sometimes it was done on breaks, before work, or after work. Ms. Burch further testified that "if we didn't have anything to do, we would use the typewriters, not only to do union business, but for personal business". She stated that she had typed letters to NTEU Headquarters, to NTEU attorneys; that her supervisor Ms. Sharon Landerche was told of the Union typing.

Ms. Lillian Stanton has been employed by the Internal Revenue Service for approximately 25 years. She came to the Appellate Branch in 1973 as an auditor and later became an appellate conferee; is a member of Chapter 91 and has been Secretary of Chapter 91 and a steward for Chapter 91, since March or April, 1975. She testified that she typed union material fairly frequently, which she stated meant one to three times per week, on a typewriter in her office while in the old building (F. Edward Hebert Building) and since the Appellate Branch has been in the new building (Hale Boggs Building) she has used a typewriter adjacent to her cubicle; that she typed union matters before work in the morning, during her lunch break, or after work; that she had union letterhead paper in her desk; and that she had seen Ms. Barton, Ms. Burch, Ms. Lacey and Ms. Mary Thomas typing union material. Ms. Stanton testified that, for the most part, she typed union letters to management, but sometimes to other stewards or vice presidents, usually for President Pilie but on occasion from herself as Secretary or as Chief Steward; letters to NTEU National Office; and minutes of Union meetings. I have given careful consideration to Respondent's assertion that Ms. Stanton's testimony should be rejected because she had given an affidavit to the effect that "Typewriters have not been used for the purpose of typing matters which are wholly internal union business, such as election ballots" whereas she admitted on cross-examination that she had typed union minutes. She may have been in error when she made this statement in her affidavit or, equally probable, she may have viewed "wholly internal union business" as essentially limited to "such as election ballots". In any event, I found Ms. Stanton to have been a most forthright and truthful witness and therefore fully credit her testimony. Moreover, there is no inconsistency in her testimony that she typed union material on Respondent's typewriters on her own time and whether such union business concerned, to some degree, internal union business, however that might be defined, is not material as to whether there was, or was not, a practice of using Respondent's typewriters for union business.

Mr. J. Maurice Pilie has been employed by the Internal Revenue Service for about 31 years, the last 20 years in the Appellate Branch Office. He was first Acting President of Chapter 91 and was then elected President of Chapter 91. Mr. Pilie testified that when he had union correspondence to be typed he would take the draft, along with union letterhead stationery and an NTEU envelope, to one of the secretaries and ask that she type it; if he took the draft to Ms. Stanton he did not supply union stationery because she kept her own supply in her desk. The matter would not always be typed immediately and Mr. Pilie would leave the draft and union letterhead lying uncovered on the secretary's desk. After the letter had been typed on union letterhead it would remain on the secretary's desk until Mr. Pilie picked it up. Complainant's Exhibit 9-1 through 9-75 are representative examples of the correspondence involved, the overwhelming majority of which were directed to IRS management officials. Much of the correspondence directed to management officials bore a signature stamp which is a government stamp used by the Internal Revenue Service and retained in the possession of Respondent's secretaries who placed the imprint on the correspondence.

Mr. Pilie testified that, although he had not seen her do so, he believed that Ms. Landerche, supervisory secretary, had typed union correspondence on union letterhead. Certainly, Ms. Burch testified that Ms. Landerche was told by her that if she, Ms. Landerche, did not have anything for her, Ms. Burch, to do she was going to type a described letter for Mr. Pilie or for Mr. Ponthier, and, although Ms. Landerche was present in the courtroom during the hearing, she was not called as a witness. Accordingly, I do draw the inference that had Ms. Landerche been called as a witness she would have admitted that she was aware that union correspondence was been typed on Respondent's typewriters.

Mr. Howard L. Watkins, now Senior Appeals Officer, Miami Appellate Office, was Chief of the New Orleans Appellate Branch Office, having been selected in December, 1974, and reported for duty in February, 1975, until November, 1976. He testified, in part, as follows:

"Q. ... were you aware of any typing being done by NTEU, Chapter 91, its officers, or its members, pertaining to union business, other than Respondent's Exhibits No. 4? 1/

1/ Respondent's Exhibit No. 4 is a memorandum on IRS stationery; was addressed to "All Concerned"; was from Chief, Appellate Office, Mr. Watkins, and President, NTEU Chapter 91, Mr. Pilie; was the result of discussions between Messrs. Watson and Pilie; concerned "Extension of Time for Filing Grievance"; and was, to Mr. Watson's knowledge typed on an IRS typewriter. Indeed, Mr. Watson testified that he probably asked Maurice [Pilie] to have his [Mr. Pilie's] aide type it.

"A. No, I can't say that I was actually aware that it was being done, but I don't believe I would really have concerned myself with it ... Since in my judgment, communications -- written communications flowing both from management to union officials and vice versa should be considered in the interest of the employer, and probably that's what I considered it, so I never concerned myself with it, because I don't recall it ever coming up, in fact, or even questioning it."

"Q. During this period, other than this one document [Res. Exh. 4] ... were you aware of any other document being typed by NTEU --

* * * *

"A. No, I was not.

"Q. No [o]ther documents?

"A. No, but I might add that this is my philosophy then, and it's still my philosophy, that communications between the two, I think would be beneficial for the well being of the employees, and, also, in a more efficient IRS operation.

* * * *

"A. -- overtly aware, no, but I -- based on my own philosophy in this regard, I can see how it could possibly be interpreted that I made no objection to it." (Tr. 286-287)

"Q. (By Mr. Self) If someone had asked your permission to do so, would you have remembered it?

"A. No, I -- well, I may have, or may not have. I don't -- I can't recall now of having ever specifically authorized it, but it -- if it had been asked, and I felt it was in the interest of both labor and management relations, the well being of employees, more efficient operation, I would have approved it, I'm sure.

* * * *

"A. And, I do recall that Maurice was receiving quite a number of calls from the ARC, Appellate, Southwest Region, Paul Williams, but he would run things by Maurice that dealt with changes -- at least, possible changes in personnel policies, or procedures, or what-have-you, and would ask his opinion, and Maurice would sometimes come up and talk with me about that.

* * * *

"A. And, I'm sure that also Maurice communicated by phone, which was fine with me. ...

* * * *

"A. Well, its communication. I'm just trying to see. He could easily interpret that to mean that using the typewriters in non-duty hours would also be permissible, but I cannot recall, now, any specific time when I gave him, you know, carte blanche authority to use -- use typewriters, but, like I say, I wasn't really concerned with -- with that question." (Tr. 289-290)

Mr. Watkins made it clear that he recalled no instance when he had observed that IRS typewriters were being used to type on NTEU stationery; but he testified that:

"... if I had seen it, I wouldn't have felt there was any impropriety." (Tr. 292) provided only that: a) it was during off-duty time; and b) it pertained to communications between management and union.

Mr. Watkins, after discussion with Paul Williams, authorized Ms. Stanton's having a typewriter in her office. Mr. Watson was aware that Ms. Stanton frequently stayed after hours. When asked if he had approved her use of that typewriter for union business, he stated:

"THE WITNESS: I don't recall. I don't -- I'm not saying that it -- that it wasn't done. All I can say is that I don't recall; and, because of the way I viewed the union -- ... this union communication, it could have been asked, and I approved it without it being of any real significance to me, because I would have felt it was in the interest of the employer, and it could have happened." (Tr. 295)

* * * *

"Q. -- during this period?

"Did she ever tell you that she was going to be typing union business when staying late?

"A. I don't recall that ever coming up. I'm not saying it didn't, because, like I say, if she had, it wouldn't -- it wouldn't have registered with me. It would have been fine with me, and I think she -- she knew that." (Tr. 301)

Mr. Watkins also cited an example where Mr. Roy Ellis, a labor-management specialist on the staff of the Regional Commissioner, had sent minutes of a labor-management meeting to Mr. Pilie for review and comment and that he [Mr. Watkins] had seen Mr. Pilie's typed response, as to which Mr. Watkins stated:

"A. ... I think he knew that he had tacit approval for something of that matter to get it type[d].

"Q. Did you ever give tacit approval?

"A. Well, just sort of my own philosophy, and I'm sure my philosophy came through to the people in the office as to how I viewed -- how I viewed our relationship, management's and labor's relationship, and I can certainly see how he could maybe deduce from that that the area, the limited area, that I have expounded on, that it would be permissible, --

* * * *

"A. -- after off-duty hours."
(Tr. 296-297).

The record shows that even before Chapter 91 became the exclusive representative for the Appellate Branch there had existed a practice in the Appellate Branch Office of using IRS typewriters for union business, which practice was known to Mr. Berry, then Chief of the Appellate Branch Office; that such practice continued after Mr. Watkins became Branch Chief; that Mr. Watkins specifically knew that union officials were communicating, by FTS and by written responses typed on IRS typewriters, to management inquiries; that Mr. Watkins, although he did not recall ever being asked to authorize the off-duty use of IRS typewriters for union business relating to labor-management relations, would have authorized such use; and that Mr. Watkins believed that Ms. Stanton knew that off-duty use of IRS typewriters for labor-management matters would have been fine with him.

Of course, if Mr. Watkins had clearly articulated his "tacit" authorization to the union, which he did not, it would be true that such "authorization" had been violated, inter alia, by: use of IRS typewriters during duty hours; typing of minutes of union meetins; typing of union editorials; but that is not the issue here. Rather, the issue is whether there was a practice of using IRS typewriters for union business which was known to Respondent. Clearly, the record shows that there was. First, there is no doubt whatever as to the existence of the practice. Second, the record shows affirmatively that Ms. Landerche, supervisory secretary, was told of union typing. Ms. Landerche, although present during the hearing, was not called as a witness and there was no denial of this testimony. Moreover, there was also testimony that Ms. Landerche had, as a supervisory secretary, personally typed union matters before February, 1977, or that either she did or she was completely aware that aides she supervised were doing it.

Third, Mr. Watkins testified that he was aware that Mr. Pilie communicated with IRS officials, both by FTS and by written correspondence, as a union official in response to management inquiries. He stated that Mr. Pilie knew that he had tacit approval for the use of IRS typewriters for such purpose, i.e., union communications, to management in connection with labor-management relations. Mr. Watkins further testified that, while he did not recall that Ms. Stanton ever told him she was going to be typing union business when she stayed late,

"it would have been fine with me, and I think she -- she knew that."

When Mr. Watkins began receiving, from management, copies of some union-management correspondence, the inference is inescapable that, pursuant to his tacit approval, he was made aware, further, of the use of IRS typewriters for the typing of union correspondence to IRS management.

I am aware that both Mr. Pilie and Mr. Ponthier served on various occasions as Acting Branch Chief. Although their knowledge of the use of IRS typewriters for union business is beyond doubt, I would have strong reservations as to whether the knowledge of persons merely acting as Branch Chief could, or would, standing alone, constitute knowledge by Respondent of the practice. However, as Respondent had knowledge of the practice wholly independent of the imputed knowledge of its Acting Branch Chiefs, the knowledge of the practice through Messrs. Ponthier and Pilie, as Acting Branch Chief, further shows knowledge by Respondent of the practice.

Fourth, the Appellate Branch Office was a small office and, as the record shows, the practice of having union correspondence typed by IRS personnel on IRS typewriters was open, extensive and was participated in by most, if not all, aides including Ms. Burch, Ms. Lacey, Ms. Thomas and Ms. Barton; union letterhead stationery was regularly furnished with each draft, except to Ms. Stanton who kept a supply of union stationery in her desk; and Mr. Pilie's name stamp, which belonged to IRS and was retained by IRS secretaries, was routinely stamped on courtesy copies of correspondence. Although an open and notorious practice, even when extending over a substantial period, might not, standing alone, constitute actual knowledge to Respondent of the existence of the practice, where, as here, the record shows that Respondent had knowledge of the practice through Mr. Berry, Mr. Watkins and Ms. Landeche, the open and notorious practice itself constitutes further notice to Respondent of the existence of the practice.

Mr. McCoy, previously Chief of the Conference Staff in the District Office, became Branch Chief of the Appellate Office in December, 1976, succeeding Mr. Watkins. Mr. McCoy testified that he was aware of the practice of using IRS typewriters for union business in the District Office, but stated that he was wholly unaware of any such practice in the Appellate Branch Office; however, on February 8, 1977, he called Mr. Pilie to his office and told him:

"I don't know whether he's using the typewriters for union business and I'm not accusing him, but if he is, he shouldn't be using them..." (Tr. 334)

Mr. McCoy stated that he "noticed the district was having trouble with the use of typewriters by the union"; that the Appellate Branch was "having problems with unauthorized use of FTS by union officials"; and that he "had received correspondence around the end of January" that looked like it had been typed on an IRS typewriter. The letter in question was dated January 27, 1977 (Comp. Exh. 9, No. 74). ^{2/} Because it appeared to have been typed with a carbon ribbon and because the type looked like Respondent's, Mr. McCoy had his secretary look at it and she told Mr. McCoy that she had seen Ms. Stanton, an appeals officer, sitting at a secretary's desk typing. ^{3/} Mr. Pilie, on February 8, 1977, and again on February 15, 1977, requested that Mr. McCoy reduce his oral instruction to writing which Mr. McCoy subsequently did on February 16, 1977. The memorandum issued by Mr. McCoy on February 16, 1977, stated:

^{2/} Complainant in its Brief, pp. 16-17, places this letter, and related events, on or about February 27, 1977. I find this to be in error as the Exhibit is dated January 27, 1977, and all testimony purports to relate to the FTS matter involving Mr. Byrnes.

^{3/} Although Ms. Stanton had, indeed, typed the letter of January 27, 1977, on an IRS typewriter, she testified that she had taken an hour of annual leave to do so; that on the occasion she had been seen typing at Ms. Barton's desk she had actually been correcting a supporting tax statement; and that when Mr. McCoy spoke to her about the matter his only stated objection had been whether she had been typing union business during duty hours, not whether she had been using an IRS typewriter. When she assured Mr. McCoy that she had not been typing union business during duty hours that ended Mr. McCoy's inquiry.

"As per your request of February 15, 1977, I am reducing to writing my February 8, 1977 reminder to you that government production equipment (including typewriters), are not to be used in connection with Union business. This includes non-working hours." (Comp. Exh. 1)

Mr. McCoy's use of the words "reminder" and "production" (which he asserted at the hearing should have been "reproduction") presumably was an effort, albeit obtuse, to relate this instruction to a discussion in a Labor Management meeting held on June 6, 1975, at which Mr. Roy Ellis had stated:

"... the Union Contract does not provide for use of FTS or reproduction facilities of the Service by Union officials ... After discussion of these points, it was recommended that individuals who needed to use the FTS to communicate between offices regarding contract matters should clear these calls with their supervisors. By doing so, all individuals will be aware the call is official and has been cleared." (Comp. Exh. 2)

The testimony does not demonstrate that Mr. McCoy made any reference to "production equipment" in his discussion with Mr. Pilie on February 8, 1977. To the contrary, Mr. McCoy testified, in effect, that I don't know whether you are using IRS typewriters for union business but if you are you shouldn't be using them. But even if he had referred, in some manner to the Labor-Management Relations Committee meeting of June 6, 1975, the meaning, or effect, of such reference would be ambiguous, at best, as to the use of typewriters.

More directly, Mr. McCoy on February 28, 1977, justified his prohibition on the use of IRS typewriters for union business by reference to Handbook of Employee Responsibilities and Conduct, IRM 0735.1 (Comp. Exh. 3) and thereafter Respondent relied on E.O. 11222 (Res. Exh. 2) and specifically Section 204 thereof which provides:

"An employee shall not use Federal property of any kind for other than officially approved activities. He must protect and conserve all Federal property, including equipment and supplies, entrusted or issued to him." (Res. Exh. 2, E.O. 11222, as amended, Section 204)

This provision is carried forward in the Minimum Standard of Conduct for Department of Treasury employees as Section 0. 735-50, 31 C.F.R. § 0.735-50 (Res. Exh. 3). The record establishes: a) that Respondent's supervisory secretary was informed that union correspondence was to be typed on IRS typewriters, indeed, that the supervisory secretary, if she did not personally type such correspondence, at least she knew that aides were doing so; b) that Branch Chief Watkins knew that union responses to management inquiries had been typed on IRS typewriters and further, that Mr. Watkins had given tacit approval for the use of IRS typewriters, in off-duty hours, for union-management correspondence.

Obviously, E.O. 11222 does not prohibit the use of Federal property for officially approved activities. As Judge Sternburg aptly stated in the District case:

"It is further well established that the use of agency facilities and equipment by a union is a privilege and not a right; once granted however, such privilege becomes, in effect, an established term and condition of employment which may not thereafter be unilaterally changed." U.S. Department of the Treasury, Internal Revenue Service New Orleans District, New Orleans, Louisiana, Case No. 64-3612(CA) (1977), aff'd, A/SLMR No. 1034 (1978).

Respondent, having knowingly permitted the use of its typewriters for certain union business, permitted such practice to ripen into a term and condition of employment which it was not at liberty to unilaterally withdraw as Mr. McCoy did, orally, on February 8, 1977, and in writing on February 16, 1977. Such action by Branch Chief McCoy on February 8 and 16, 1977, without any prior negotiation or consultation with the Union, whereby the use of Respondent's typewriters for union business at any time was prohibited, violated Section 19(a)(6) of the Order and, derivatively, violated 19(a)(1) of the Order.

As noted earlier, the use of IRS typewriters for union business specifically known by Mr. Watkins and fully condoned by him had related to responses to management inquiries and and Mr. Watkins' tacit approval of the use of IRS typewriters had been limited to : a) non-duty time; and b) labor-management correspondence. Accordingly, for reasons well stated by the Assistant Secretary in A/SLMR No. 1034, the remedial order issued herein will be limited to only those past practices which would not be inconsistent with Section 20 of the Order as clarified by FPM Letter 711-120 (October 14, 1976), and by Matter of GAO No. B-156287, FLRC No. 75P-1, 3 FLRC 875 (1976).

Various other contentions of Respondent, including 12(b) of the Order, were considered and rejected in the New Orleans District case, supra, and such determinations are fully determinative here. Indeed, as stated at the outset, the single controlling issue for determination in this case was, and is, whether a practice, known to Respondent, of using government typewriters for union business existed in the Appellate Branch Office. Having found that such practice did exist in the Appellate Branch Office; that Respondent knew of the practice; and that Respondent had given tacit approval to the practice, the decision in the New Orleans District case, supra, is controlling.

RECOMMENDED ORDER

Pursuant to Section 6(b) of Executive Order 11491, as amended, and Section 203.26(b) of the Regulations, the Assistant Secretary of Labor for Labor-Management Relations hereby orders that the Internal Revenue Service, Southwest Region, Appellate Branch Office, New Orleans, Louisiana, shall:

b) In any like or related manner interfering with, restraining, or coercing employees in the exercise of their rights assured by Executive Order 11491, as amended.

2. Take the following affirmative action in order to effectuate the purpose and policies of the Order:

a) Withdraw the oral instruction of Branch Chief R.J. McCoy of February 8, 1977, and his written confirmation of February 16, 1977, that "government production equipment (including typewriters), are not to be used in connection with Union business. This includes non-working hours."

b) Post at its facility copies of the attached notice marked "Appendix" on forms to be furnished by the Assistant Secretary of Labor for Labor-Management Relations. Upon receipt of such forms they shall be signed by the Branch Chief, Internal Revenue Service, Southwest Region, Appellate Branch Office, New Orleans, Louisiana, and shall be posted and maintained by him for 60 consecutive days thereafter, in conspicuous places, including all bulletin boards and other places where notices to all employees are customarily posted. The Branch Chief, Appellate Branch Office, shall take reasonable steps to insure that such notices are not altered, defaced, or covered by any other material.

c) Pursuant to Section 203.27 of the Regulations, notify the Assistant Secretary in writing within 30 days from the date of this Order as to what steps have been taken to comply herewith.

SUPPLEMENTAL DECISION AND ORDER

On June 27, 1978, Administrative Law Judge Milton Kramer issued his Recommended Decision and Order in the above-entitled proceeding, finding that the Respondent had not engaged in the alleged unfair labor practices and recommending dismissal of the complaint in its entirety. Thereafter, on September 22, 1978, the Assistant Secretary issued a Decision and Remand in A/SLMR No. 1127 remanding the case to the Administrative Law Judge for the purpose of making an appropriate finding of fact determined to be necessary in reaching a resolution of the subject complaint. On October 27, 1978, the Administrative Law Judge issued his Supplemental Recommended Decision and Order, in which he found that the alleged statement by Perez had not been made. Thereafter, the Complainant filed exceptions to the Administrative Law Judge's Supplemental Recommended Decision and Order.

In view of the Administrative Law Judge's above-noted finding of fact, I conclude that the evidence herein is insufficient to establish that the Respondent's conduct in this matter was based, in whole or in part, on the union activity of the alleged discriminatee. 1/ Accordingly, I shall order that the complaint be dismissed in its entirety.

SUPPLEMENTAL RECOMMENDED DECISION AND ORDER

On June 27, 1978 I issued my Recommended Decision and Order recommending that the complaint be dismissed. The complaint had alleged that Violeta Crespo, in one of the seven categories in her annual performance evaluation, had received a "satisfactory" (R) in the category of "getting along with others" (category 6) instead of an "outstanding" (O) rating in that category because of her activities as a union steward.

In my Discussion I stated that the issue was whether Crespo's rating in category 6 "was motivated, at least in significant part, by her union activities."

Buono, the Administrative Law Judge for whom Crespo worked, had testified that when he spoke to Perez (the Hearing Administrator and Crespo's official supervisor and rater) about raising Crespo's rating in category 6 from R to O, that among the reasons Perez gave for not doing so was that Crespo went too much to the office of Goldman, the Administrative Law Judge in Charge, presumably on union matters. Perez categorically denied making any such statement. I then stated that I need not resolve that conflict because even if Perez made a statement susceptible to the interpretation Buono gave it "I have no doubt the view expressed did not play the slightest part in the appraisal given Crespo by Perez". In the concluding sentence of my Discussion I stated that since I had concluded that Crespo's appraisal was not motivated even in part by consideration of her union activities I would recommend that the complaint be dismissed.

On September 22, 1978 the Assistant Secretary remanded the case to me "for the purpose of making an appropriate finding of fact determined to be necessary in reaching a resolution" of the complaint.

In his discussion preceding his Order, the Assistant Secretary said that if Crespo's rating was based even in part on union considerations, even where there was a legitimate basis for the management action, a violation of Section 19(a)(2) of the Executive Order would be found. That is, "it would not be necessary ... to establish that agency management had acted ... to a significant extent on the basis of union considerations. ... [but] only that one of the reasons ... was based on union activity. ..."

Since I had already found that even if Perez made the statement attributed to him by Buono such view "did not play the slightest part in the appraisal given Crespo by Perez" and that "Crespo's appraisal was not motivated even in part by considerations of her union activities", the remand Order cannot mean that I should make a finding on whether "one of the reasons for agency management's conduct was based on the union activity of Crespo", as indicated in the last sentence of the last full paragraph of page 2 of the Assistant Secretary's decision. I had already found that it had not played "the slightest part". Rather it must mean that I should make a finding, not whether union consideration in fact played any part in the rating but whether Perez indicated to Buono that the rating was based in part on union activities.

I find he did not. This is not to say that Buono deliberately lied. But he was at least confused about a number of things pertaining to Crespo's rating.

Buono, although he did not rate Crespo, recommended to Perez what rating Perez should give Crespo in the several categories. The instructions on making the ratings provided that in some categories an "A" rating, or "exceeds the requirements of the job", is permitted, but not in category 6. In that category the only permitted ratings are "B" (unsatisfactory), "R" (satisfactory), and "O" (outstanding). Yet Buono recommended an "A" for Crespo in category 6, a rating not permitted in that category. Yet he told Crespo he had recommended an "O" for her in that category. Also, he tried to persuade Perez to give Crespo an "O" in category 6 although he himself had not recommended her for a rating that high; he must have been confused also about the ambit of an "R" rating in category 6 which covers all gradations between unsatisfactory and outstanding. Tr. 126.

December 8, 1978

Perez did not appear to be confused about anything. It may be that at some time in some context unrelated to Crespo's performance appraisal he commented to Buono that Crespo appeared to go to Goldman's office rather often just as he might have commented about any other attribute of Crespo such as her clothes or coiffure. If he did it was at some other time and unrelated to Crespo's performance appraisal, but Buono in his confusion may have related the two. This is speculation. I do not find that such an incident occurred. But I do not believe that either Buono or Perez testified knowingly untruthfully (although we know Buono had untruthfully told Crespo that he had recommended an "O" for her in category 6). Or perhaps he was confused about that also. See Tr. 126.

I repeat my original recommendation that the complaint be dismissed.

UNITED STATES DEPARTMENT OF LABOR
ASSISTANT SECRETARY FOR LABOR-MANAGEMENT-RELATIONS
SUMMARY OF DECISION AND ORDER OF THE ASSISTANT SECRETARY
PURSUANT TO SECTION 6 OF EXECUTIVE ORDER 11491, AS AMENDED

PENNSYLVANIA ARMY AND AIR NATIONAL GUARD
A/SLMR No. 1155

This case involved an unfair labor practice complaint filed by the Association of Civilian Technicians (Complainant) alleging that the Respondent violated Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order by refusing to negotiate with respect to the clarification and implementation of a provision of the parties' negotiated agreement dealing with the posting of job vacancy announcements. The Complainant maintained that during contract negotiations the parties had agreed to conduct such further negotiations after the contract became effective.

The Administrative Law Judge recommended that the complaint be dismissed in its entirety. In this regard, he found that there was no agreement to negotiate with respect to the job announcements provisions, as there was nothing in the negotiated agreement or elsewhere to suggest that further clarification or revision of the provision was contemplated by the parties. In addition, he found that the Complainant's allegation that the Respondent failed to furnish certain information regarding geographical areas of consideration was not encompassed in the complaint, that the Complainant already had the requested material, and that the complaint was moot because the contract involved had expired and the parties were about to commence negotiations on a new agreement.

The Assistant Secretary adopted the Administrative Law Judge's findings, conclusions and recommendation that dismissal of the instant complaint was warranted because there was no agreement between the parties to negotiate with respect to the provision at issue. In reaching his conclusion, he found it unnecessary to pass upon the Administrative Law Judge's findings relating to the scope and mootness of the complaint. Accordingly, the Assistant Secretary ordered that the complaint be dismissed in its entirety.

DECISION AND ORDER

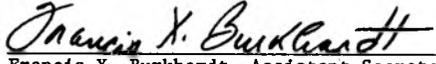

On September 15, 1978, Administrative Law Judge William A. Gershuny issued his Recommended Decision and Order in the above-entitled proceeding, finding that the Respondent had not engaged in the unfair labor practices alleged in the complaint and recommending that the complaint be dismissed in its entirety. Thereafter, the Complainant filed exceptions and a supporting brief with respect to the Administrative Law Judge's Recommended Decision and Order.

The Assistant Secretary has reviewed the rulings of the Administrative Law Judge made at the hearing and finds that no prejudicial error was committed. The rulings are hereby affirmed. Upon consideration of the entire record in the subject case, including the Complainant's exceptions and supporting brief, I hereby adopt the Administrative Law Judge's findings, conclusions and recommendations, as modified herein. 1/

1/ The Administrative Law Judge found, and I agree, that the Respondent did not improperly refuse to furnish certain requested information to the Complainant as the evidence established that the latter already had the requested material. Under these circumstances, it was considered unnecessary to pass upon the Administrative Law Judge's finding that the instant complaint was not broad enough in scope to encompass the allegation of an improper refusal by the Respondent to furnish certain requested information. Nor was it considered necessary to pass upon his finding that the controversy herein was moot since the agreement involved expired and the parties were about to commence negotiations on a new agreement.

IT IS HEREBY ORDERED that the complaint in Case No. 20-06674(CA) be, and it hereby is, dismissed.

RECOMMENDED DECISION AND ORDER

The Activity, by complaint dated March 29, 1978, is charged with a refusal to negotiate a "clarification and implementation" of a labor contract provision relating to geographical areas of consideration in filling certain civilian technician positions, in violation of Sections 19(a)(1) and (6) of Executive Order 11491, as amended. It is charged that, during contract negotiations, the parties agreed to conduct such further negotiations after the contract became effective.

I

Section 20.1 of the contract provides for a two year term, effective May 7, 1976, but contains no provision for its extension during negotiations on a new contract. Thus, at the time of the August 31, 1978 hearing, the contract already had expired. Section 20.2 provides for re-opening of the contract by mutual consent.

The sole contract provision involved in the alleged agreement to renegotiate is Section 5.3(b)(1) of Article V, MERIT PROMOTION:

"(b)Excepted Positions

(1) The initial announcements for positions which provide for job progression or promotional opportunities for currently assigned Technicians will be limited to the minimum installation or geographical area of consideration as presently designated by TAGPA the Activity."

Negotiations relative to this provision were conducted on October 25 and 26, 1974. Complainant's Assistant Chief Negotiator, Mr. Owsinski, present at both sessions, testified that the parties agreed to accept the current practice as to designation of geographical areas of consideration and that the Association assumed it could re-open the contract during "the mid-term contract re-opener" to renegotiate this provision. Nether the official notes taken by the Association during negotiations nor the notes taken by individual Association representatives reflect any agreement to renegotiate or "re-open". Nevertheless, Mr. Owsinski recalls that the Activity negotiator stated, "We can work this out." The testimony of two other Association representatives, present on at least one of the sessions, was essentially identical to that of Mr. Owsinski, except that Mr. Ruby conceded that other Activity assurances were reflected in the Association's notes. Another Association negotiator, Mr. Flynn, was subpoenaed by the Association, but did not appear. His unsworn statement, in letter form, to a Labor Department compliance officer was not admitted in evidence.

By letter of counsel dated November 5, 1977, the Association first requested that negotiations for the revision of Section 5.3(b)(1) be commenced. The letter makes no reference to a 1974 agreement during contract negotiations and, the Association concedes, was intended as a request to re-open under Section 20.2. The request was rejected.

Six months after the contract became effective, two provisions were amended, one of which was Section 5.5, Evaluating and Ranking Candidates. Mr. Owsinski testified that while those renegotiations were the result of a similar agreement during original contract negotiations, they did not deal with the subject of geographical areas of consideration under Section 5.3(b)(1).

Finally, considerable Association testimony was received to the effect that the Activity agreed, during negotiations, to later provide the Association with information as to how areas of consideration were determined. Like the alleged agreement to renegotiate, this agreement is not reflected in the Association's notes. Disputed testimony was received that several oral requests were made for such information shortly after the contract became effective and that, out of frustration, the Association counsel was requested to make a written request for the information. No such letter was offered in evidence and the only correspondence in the record makes no reference to an agreement to provide information or a prior oral request. The Activity's Personnel Officer, Colonel Niles, testified that the criteria for determining geographical areas of consideration under the contract are contained in personnel documents available at all facilities to all civilian personnel. When recalled to the stand by the Court, Mr. Owsinski conceded that the Association already had such data. He stated that the Association was seeking a document concerning such areas which he recalls seeing posted prior to the time civilian technicians were made federal employees. Colonel Niles testified such a document never existed and that Mr. Owsinski previously had been so informed.

II

For a number of reasons, I find no agreement to negotiate the clarification and implementation of Section 5.3(b)(1) of the contract. First, the contract language does not suggest that further clarification or revision was contemplated by the parties. If that had been their intent, the provision would have contained language, like that in Section 5.5 which was later amended, reflecting an agreement for further negotiation. Second, the Association's own notes of the negotiating sessions reflect no such agreement. That omission alone strongly suggests the absence of an agreement. Also suggestive of no agreement is the fact that the Association's December, 1977 request for negotiations makes no mention of an earlier agreement. The record thus points to the inescapable conclusion that members of the Association's negotiating team present at the two relevant sessions settled on contract language with the "hope" that the Activity later would agree, under Section 20.2, to re-open negotiations. This expectancy falls far short of supporting a charge of "agreement".

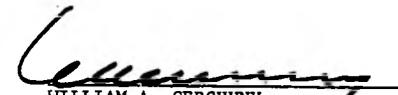

Further I find the Association's charge of a refusal to furnish the criteria used by the Activity to determine the geographical areas of consideration is not encompassed in the complaint charging a refusal to negotiate. The find that the complaint, drafted by counsel, was based on the Activity's negative response to the December, 1977 demand for negotiations and was not intended to charge a failure or refusal to furnish information. If counsel, an experienced labor law attorney, had intended the latter, he would have specifically charged a failure to provide information necessary for bargaining (or grievance-handling). In any event, I find that the Association already had available to it all criteria used by the Activity in determining areas of consideration. In this respect, the Association's witnesses were lacking in candor. It was not until the Court recalled Mr. Owsinski, after the Activity rested, that the Association acknowledged it already had the requested material.

Finally, I find the contract to have expired and the parties about to commence negotiations on a new contract. Thus, the controversy is moot in the sense that no effective relief, even if otherwise warranted, could be afforded.

RECOMMENDATION

It is recommended that the Complaint be dismissed.

DECISION AND ORDER

On September 25, 1978, Administrative Law Judge Alfred Lindeman issued his Recommended Decision and Order in the above-entitled proceeding, finding that the Respondent had engaged in conduct which was violative of Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order and recommending that it cease and desist therefrom and take certain affirmative actions as set forth in the attached Administrative Law Judge's Recommended Decision and Order. The Administrative Law Judge also found that the Respondent's conduct was not violative of Section 19(a)(2) of the Order and recommended that that aspect of the complaint be dismissed. No exceptions were filed to the Administrative Law Judge's Recommended Decision and Order.

The Assistant Secretary has reviewed the rulings of the Administrative Law Judge made at the hearing and finds that no prejudicial error was committed. The rulings are hereby affirmed. Upon consideration of the Administrative Law Judge's Recommended Decision and Order and the entire record in the subject case, and noting particularly the absence of exceptions, I hereby adopt the Administrative Law Judge's findings, conclusions and recommendations.

ORDER

Pursuant to Section 6(b) of Executive Order 11491, as amended, and Section 203.26 of the Regulations, the Assistant Secretary of Labor for Labor-Management Relations hereby orders that the Department of Health, Education, and Welfare, Region IX, San Francisco, California, shall:

1. Cease and desist from:

(a) Conducting formal discussions concerning grievances, personnel policies and practices, or other matters affecting general

This case involved an unfair labor practice complaint filed by the American Federation of Government Employees, Local 3159, AFL-CIO (Complainant) alleging that the Respondent violated Section 19(a)(1), (2) and (6) of the Order by denying union representation to a probationary employee at a meeting called for the sole purpose of terminating his employment. Further, the Complainant alleged that the termination was based, in whole or in part, upon union animus.

The Administrative Law Judge concluded that the Respondent had violated Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order. He found that, under all the circumstances, since the meeting called by the Respondent was for the purpose of notifying the probationary employee of his termination such meeting was a formal discussion within the ambit of Section 10(e) of the Order and that the Complainant should have been notified of its opportunity to be represented. In regard to the Section 19(a)(2) allegation, the Administrative Law Judge found that the evidence failed to establish that the probationary employee's termination was discriminatorily motivated and that it reflected, in fact, that the termination was based upon his unsatisfactory work performance.

Noting particularly the absence of exceptions, the Assistant Secretary adopted the Administrative Law Judge's findings, conclusions and recommendations. Accordingly, he ordered the Respondent to cease and desist from engaging in the conduct found violative of the Order and to take certain affirmative actions. He also ordered that the portion of the complaint alleging a violation of Section 19(a)(2) of the Order be dismissed.

(b) In any like or related manner interfering with, restraining, or coercing employees in the exercise of their rights assured by Executive Order 11491, as amended.

2. Take the following affirmative actions in order to effectuate the purposes and policies of the Executive Order:

(a) Notify the American Federation of Government Employees, Local 3159, AFL-CIO, of, and give it the opportunity to be represented at, formal discussions concerning grievances, personnel policies and practices, or other matters affecting general working conditions of employees in the unit.

(b) Post at its facility located in the San Francisco, California, area copies of the attached notice marked "Appendix" on forms to be furnished by the Assistant Secretary for Labor-Management Relations. Upon receipt of such forms, they shall be signed by the Regional Director and shall be posted and maintained by him for 60 consecutive days thereafter in conspicuous places, including all places where notices to employees are customarily posted. The Regional Director shall take reasonable steps to insure that such notices are not altered, defaced, or covered by any other material.

(c) Pursuant to Section 203.27 of the Regulations, notify the Assistant Secretary, in writing, within 30 days from the date of this order as to what steps have been taken to comply herewith.

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED that the complaint, insofar as it alleges a violation of Section 19(a)(2) of the Order, be, and it hereby is, dismissed.

Pursuant to a Notice of Hearing on Complaint, dated August 1, 1978, a hearing was held in San Francisco, California, on August 16 and 17, 1978, at which both parties were afforded full opportunity to be heard, to adduce evidence, to call, examine and cross-examine witnesses and to make oral arguments. Post-hearing briefing, as requested by the parties, has been fully considered. Findings of Fact Leslie Edge was employed in the Office of Education on February 14, 1977 (Tr. 79) */ as a Clerk-Dictating Machine Transcriber, GS-316-4 (Cx. 14). The Complainant Union at all times material had exclusive recognition as representative of the bargaining unit of which Edge was a member; the Union negotiated and entered into a collective bargaining agreement with the Activity herein, effective December 16, 1975 (Ax. 1). During his seven months employment, Edge was not a member of the Complainant Union.

Edge worked as a clerk in the Control Central unit of the Administration and Management Division of the Office of Education. He was first placed under the supervision of Pat Becket, a grants specialist. She trained him by giving him verbal instructions and by referring him to an office manual. She found a series of problems with his performance, including his failure to follow instructions and difficulty getting along with co-workers, and in June of 1977, she recommended to Ned Bynner, her superior, that Edge be terminated; failing

Statement of the Case

This proceeding arises under Executive Order 11491, as amended (hereafter the "Executive Order"), pursuant to a Complaint filed October 17, 1977, and an Amended Complaint dated July 10, 1978, wherein Complainant, Local that, she asked to be relieved as Edge's supervisor (Tr. 113-119, 146). Edge's next supervisor was Alicia Marquez. She also found his work performance and attendance unsatisfactory (Tr. 166-7).

On July 5, 1977, Edge was involved in what was later to be referred to as "The Daly City Incident." In the early morning hours, while off duty, Edge received a parking ticket. Then, by his own sworn testimony, he telephoned the police department, identified himself as a Federal Government Grants Management Specialist, and threatened to prevent Daly City from receiving any more Office of Education grants unless his ticket was rescinded (Tr. 51-2, 567). The conversation was tape-recorded by the police department, and the next day Edge acknowledged his conduct to Ned Bynner (Cx. 19). According to Edge, Bynner told Edge "Don't worry Les, we will take care of it" (Tr. 54). Further, according to Edge, on July 21, 1977, there was a meeting with Edge, his then immediate supervisor Alicia Marquez, and the Assistant Regional Commissioner, John Thorslev, at which Thorslev told Edge he would probably just get a reprimand (Tr. 55). Between the time of that meeting and August 19, 1977, Marquez and two HEW personnel office representatives, James Duffy and Wanda Littlejohn, each expressed the opinion that Edge be terminated as a result of said incident (Tr. 173, 190, 194, 210). After Littlejohn expressed her recommendation that Edge be terminated immediately to Bynner on August 18, 1977, Bynner said he was going to discuss it with his superior, Thorslev, who was on vacation at the time (Tr. 283-4).

Contemporaneously with the foregoing events, since April of 1977 Edge had been requesting a performance evaluation in order that he could use it to apply for another job. At first he had been told he could not get an evaluation for a year (Tr. 40; see also Cx. 9). But after he made a written demand of Bynner, dated August 17, 1977, asking for an evaluation "by Friday at the latest" (Cx. 4), Bynner and Becket met with him on Thursday, August 18, 1977, and gave him a performance evaluation. Edge did not like the evaluation, including the fact that his earlier supervisor, Becket, had acted as his rater rather than Marquez (who was on leave at the time), and he indicated he would appeal the appraisal or take some legal action (Tr. 43). He proceeded to speak with personnel officers Littlejohn (later the same day) and Duffy (in the morning of August 19) (Tr. 46). They gave him information and forms regarding the filing of a grievance under the collective bargaining agreement and the names of the Complainant Union's officials (Tr. 211-213).

Based on a composite of the record I find that Edge attempted to see the Regional Director on August 17 about his difficulty obtaining the appraisal (Ax. 9, page 2) and indicated his intent to do so again in order to "fight his performance evaluation" after receiving the August 18 appraisal (Cx. 12, page 2; Ax. 5, page 1; Tr. 10, 47). The Regional Director's Office apprised Duffy of the attempt, and Duffy informed Bynner and Becket. Bynner then made an appointment for them to see the Regional Commissioner, Duon Bjerke, about Edge on August 19 (Ax. 5; Tr. 143-5, 153-4).

At a meeting at 2:00 p.m. on August 19, 1977, attended by Regional Commissioner Bjerke, Bynner, Becket and another employee, Hodge, it was decided that Edge should be terminated "right away" (Ax. 5, page 1; Cx. 3; Tr. 155). The termination letter was prepared with the assistance of Duffy in personnel, signed by Bynner (for Thorslev), and at 4:10 p.m. Edge was called into Thorslev's office. He was handed the letter in the presence of Bynner, Becket and Hodge (Cx. 5; Ax. 5; Tr. 50, 250). There were no discussions about the contents of the letter. Edge opened it but didn't read it until after he left. Edge was asked to turn in his HEW identification and office key, which he did. The meeting lasted about three minutes. No notice or opportunity had been afforded for Edge to have a union representative present on this occasion.

Subsequently, after meeting with Edge, Complainant Union's president, Mr. Ian McLean, telephoned Bynner, to discuss the Edge matter. According to Mr. McLean's testimony, Bynner said Edge's superiors originally were going to issue a reprimand concerning the Daly City episode until Edge "threatened to appeal his appraisal or fight his appraisal, take it to the R.D., ... that this was seen by management as the last straw with Mr. Edge, and they decided that they would just terminate him inasmuch as he was in a probationary period" (Tr. 10-11). Mr. McLean also stated that Bynner said "The basis for the termination was essentially the 'tape'" (Cx. 1). ^{1/} Following these discussions the formal charges and Complaint were filed in this matter, and after some interim decisions by the Regional Administrator the Notice of Hearing was ultimately issued (see Assistant Secretary's Exhibits la-h).

^{1/} Bynner, no longer a government employee, was not called as a witness, and neither party offered into evidence his sworn statement given to the Department of Labor Compliance Officer who investigated the matter.

Conclusions

I

Under the facts of this case, I conclude that the failure to afford probationary employee Edge the opportunity to have a union representative present when he was handed his termination letter on August 19, 1977, and the failure to afford the Complainant Union the opportunity to be present at that meeting when the employee was given his notice of termination were in violation of sections 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Executive Order, but not in violation of section 19(a)(2).

Violation of Sections 19(a)(1) and (6)

Respondent has violated sections 19(a)(1) 2/ and (6) 3/ of the Executive Order by denying Edge and the union their respective rights protected under section 10(e) of the Executive Order 4/, and Article IV, section H 5/ of the collective bargaining agreement between the parties (Ax. 1). On their face, these provisions afford the opportunity for union representation when two requirements are met: (1) the discussion or meeting must be "formal," and (2) the subject matter of the discussion or meeting must concern "grievances, personnel policies and practices, or other matters affecting general working conditions."

2/ Section 19. Unfair Labor Practices: "(a) Agency management shall not - (1) interfere with, restrain, or coerce an employee in the exercise of the rights assured by this Order."

3/ Section 19. Unfair Labor Practices: "(a) Agency management shall not - (6) refuse to consult, confer, or negotiate with a labor organization as required by this Order."

4/ Section 10(e): "... When a labor organization has been accorded exclusive recognition ... the labor organization shall be given the opportunity to be represented at formal discussions between management and employees or employee representatives concerning grievances, personnel policies and practices, or other matters affecting general working conditions of employees in the unit." (underlining added).

5/ Section H: "The Union has a right to be represented at formal meetings between the Employer and employees concerning the adjustment of individual employee grievances, personnel policies and practices, or other matters affecting general working conditions." (underlining added).

These criteria have been applied to "termination" meetings or discussions in Department of Defense, U.S. Navy, Norfolk Naval Shipyard, A/SLMR No. 908 (1977), where the Assistant Secretary found meetings called by management for the purpose of notifying four probationary employees of their terminations were "formal discussions." The Assistant Secretary also held: "Such meetings not only substantially affected personnel policies as they related to the specific employees' job security, but they also substantially affect personnel policies and practices as they pertain to other employees in the bargaining unit."

Respondent contends that this case should be distinguished from Norfolk because the delivery of Edge's termination letter on August 19, 1977, should be viewed as a substitute for postal delivery and, thus, not a "meeting" where substantive reasons for the termination are discussed and the employee is given an opportunity to reply or explain.

I am not persuaded that the policies intended to be advanced by the Executive Order (e.g., "the well-being of employees and efficient administration of the Government") would be served by relegating the event when an employee receives notice of termination to a "non-formal" occasion through the application of a hyper-technical analogy to postal delivery. To be sure, Respondent was acting within its rights when it prepared the termination letter according to the provisions of the Federal Personnel Manual section concerning "Separation of Probationers" (Cx. 18), and delivered it in accordance with its normal practice (Tr. 251-3). But having elected to call a meeting to deliver said letter rather than use the U.S. mails, Respondent created an occasion where a discussion could reasonably be anticipated even though the termination decision had been made and reduced to writing. In fact, Ms. Becket, one of Edge's supervisors who was present at both the meeting with Bjerke and the later meeting when the letter was handed to Edge, testified that had Edge wanted to discuss the letter, they were prepared to do so (Tr. 157). Thus, I conclude the first requirement of section 10(e) of the Executive Order and Article IV, section H, was satisfied in this case.

Further, I find the second requirement was satisfied because the "termination letter meeting" not only directly concerned Edge's personnel status but it also had potential relevance to other employees in the bargaining unit; it involved management's policy and procedures regarding the termination of probationary employees. Department of Defense, U.S. Navy, Norfolk Naval Shipyard, supra.

If the right to be afforded the opportunity of representation at a termination meeting exists, as I conclude it does, both the employee 6/ and the union possess the derivative right to be notified of the opportunity to exercise such right a reasonable period in advance of said meeting. Without such notification by the Activity, which knows the subject matter of the meeting, neither the unprepared employee nor the unaware union can be expected to request the exercise of their rights to representation. Accordingly, Respondent's failure to give such notification constituted both an actionable restraint upon the employee under section 19(a)(1) of the Executive Order and a refusal to consult and confer with the union under section 19(a)(6).

Having found the foregoing violation, however, it must be noted that the Respondent had no basis for knowing its delivery of Edge's termination letter at a "meeting" rather than by mail would trigger the requirements that I now conclude exist. That is, the collective bargaining agreement does not cover procedures for notifying probationary employees of termination, and the Respondent did follow the steps prescribed in the Federal Personnel Manual for notifying the probationer in writing. Accordingly, absent a finding that the termination itself was a reprisal for the employee's exercise of protected rights, I do not believe the fact that the letter was delivered in person and without the opportunity for union representation is a valid basis for ordering reinstatement as the remedy. See Department of Defense, U.S. Navy, Norfolk Naval Shipyard, supra (violation based on denial of employee's request for representation at termination meeting did not warrant reinstatement); Department of Health, Education & Welfare, Public Health Service, Indian Health Service, Phoenix Indian Medical Center, A/SLMR No. 798 (1977) (procedural errors and deficiencies in separation procedure were held not a violation of the Executive Order).

No Violation of Section 19(a)(2)

I conclude section 19(a)(2) 7/ of the Executive Order was not violated in this case because there is no

6/ As the Federal Labor Relations Council stated with respect to section 10(e) in FLRC No. 75 P-2, "while this right ... inures to the union ... the employee involved likewise is vested with a derivative or companion right to insist that the agency fulfill its express obligation..." Statement on Major Policy Issue, No. 116, December 2, 1976.

7/ Section 19. Unfair Labor Practices: "(a) Agency management shall not - (2) encourage or discourage membership in evidence that the termination notification procedure followed with Edge was motivated in whole or in part by union animus. Edge was not a member of the union, his supervisors had no knowledge whatsoever regarding his union affiliation or sympathies, and there was no mention of the union in any of the deliberations or discussions with or concerning Edge. Although the Complainant presented evidence regarding certain alleged actions Respondent took against three other union member employees who had filed EEO complaints, there was no showing that the treatment of Edge was in any way discriminatory or related to "membership in a labor organization." 8/ Social Security Administration, Great Lakes Program Center, Chicago, Illinois, A/SLMR No. 804 (1977). Instead, I find Respondent's motivation for dealing with Edge in the manner it did was the desire to act as swiftly as his probationary status would allow, and it did so by adhering to the Federal Personnel Manual (Cx. 18). Department of Health, Education & Welfare, Public Health Service, Indian Health Service, Phoenix Indian Medical Center, supra; Department of the Navy Norfolk Naval Shipyard, A/SLMR No. 548 (1975).

I conclude there was no violation of sections 19(a)(1), (2) or (6) of the Executive Order resulting from the decision to terminate probationary employee Edge.

Under the regulations, 29 C.F.R. § 203.15, Complainant has the burden of proving the allegations contained in its Complaint and Amended Complaint by a "preponderance of the evidence." Complainant's contention that Edge was fired because of his threat to pursue his protected rights "to grieve" his performance evaluation is based on two types of evidence. First is the testimony of Complainant president's conversation with Bynner, i.e., that Edge going to the Regional Director was "the last straw". Second is the circumstantial chronology of events, namely, that as of the time of the "performance evaluation meeting" on August 18, there was no mention of termination, but after obtaining knowledge of Edge's intent to go to the Regional Director, Respondent terminated him the next day. Upon analysis of the entire record in this case, however, I find that this evidence

7/ (Continued) a labor organization by discrimination in regard to hiring, tenure, promotion, or other conditions of employment."

8/ Nor did the Complaint or Amended Complaint allege any discrimination based on Edge's union status.

only establishes there was a definite nexus between Edge's intention to go to the Regional Director concerning his performance evaluation and the decision to arrange a meeting with Bjerke. The preponderance of the evidence does not indicate that the decision to terminate Edge was based on his efforts to exercise his rights to appeal his performance evaluation.

The facts of this case are to be distinguished from Veterans Administration, North Chicago Veterans Hospital, North Chicago, Illinois, A/SLMR No. 1024 (1978), where the termination of an employee was overturned as a violation of the Executive Order based upon findings that the termination was not for valid reasons but was in fact a reprisal for the employee's union activities. That is not the situation here. This record is replete with evidence that Respondent had a valid reason for terminating Edge based on his off-duty threat to a police officer to foreclose future federal grants to Daly City unless Edge's parking ticket was destroyed. 9/ If anything, Edge, a probationary employee, had been accorded deferential treatment by his supervisors who avoided giving him a negative evaluation as long as possible (Cx. 9), even though they had had occasions to admonish him about his excessive use of leave (Ax. 7; Tr. 169), criticize his performance (Ax. 3) and been informed of what was perceived as a serious episode of misconduct concerning his federal government employment (Cx. 19; Ax. 8).

I find the fact that no mention was made of termination on August 18, and yet termination was effectuated on August 19, is attributable to the decision-making vacuum caused by Thorslev's (Bynner's superior) absence from the office. That is, in Thorslev's absence, Bynner had been unable to make the recommended decision regarding Edge's misconduct with the Daly City police and was awaiting Thorslev's return to work (Tr. 207, 210; Ax. 10, page 2). The intervening performance evaluation led to the development that Edge was "taking it to Regional Director," and, indeed, that information was "the last straw" for Bynner that precipitated the meeting with Regional Commissioner Bjerke. However, the decision to hold the meeting with Bjerke about Edge, though it was causally related to Edge's efforts to go to the Regional Director, was not an independent violation of any protected rights under the Executive Order or the parties' collective bargaining agreement absent a showing that the action was taken as a reprisal for Edge going to the Regional Director. In fact the Activity had its own protected right and responsibility under Executive Order section 12(b) to reach a decision as to what disciplinary action, if any, it would take concerning the Daly City incident.

9/ Although Complainant may argue that the transcript of the taped conversation does not clearly support a conclusion of wrongdoing, Edge's own testimony and that of his supervisors who heard the tape leave no doubt about the intent and effect of Edge's threat both in Edge's mind and the minds of his superiors. (Tr. 51-2, 56, 172-3, 190, 193-4, 282-3, 300, 304).

I credit the live testimony of those parties involved in recommending, arranging or attending the meeting in question to the effect that the purpose of the meeting was to prepare Bjerke for a call from the Regional Director. Ms. Becket testified about the events leading to the meeting as follows:

... Mr. Bynner received a call from personnel and they informed him that Mr. Edge was going to the Regional Director to discuss his evaluation and at this point, Mr. Bynner then decided that because the Regional Director would be contacting the Regional Commissioner [Bjerke], it was now important that we should appraise [sic] him of the difficulties we were having. So he asked for a meeting with Mr. Bjerke and that is how it occurred. (Tr. 143-4).

Mr. Duffy, the personnel officer who informed Bynner of Edge's efforts to see the Regional Director, testified:

I told him [Bynner] we were at the stage now where Mr. Thorslev was not there and since the regional director's office and I felt the regional commissioner [Bjerke] had to become involved....

I thought it was appropriate for him [Bynner] now to sit down and talk to Mr. Bjerke and give him everything that occurred since early June or early July, and how did he see the matter. My recommendation was the same recommendation it was two and a half weeks ago, that Mr. Edge be terminated. That was all I was saying for the reasons I had given two and a half weeks earlier. (Tr. 241-2; see also Ax. 9, page 2).

Thus, I find the evidence of Bynner's comments to Mr. McLean and the evidence of the timing of the meeting do not support a conclusion that Respondent violated the Executive Order. Instead, I find the evidence establishes that for Bynner, the supervisor without clear authority to make a decision in Thorslev's absence, Edge's actions in going to the Regional Director were "the last straw" in terms of causing the meeting, but Complainant has not shown that the meeting was intended to sanction Edge for the exercise of any protected activities.

Having found that the decision to hold the meeting with Bjerke concerning the month-long developments regarding Edge, though causally related to Edge's announced intention to go to the Regional Director, was not made as a reprisal, I have closely reviewed the record evidence regarding the substance of the meeting itself to determine whether the decision to terminate was a reprisal against Edge's exercise of protected rights. Ms. Becket, the only person of those who attended the meeting to actually testify at the hearing, stated:

We discussed the troubles that we had been having and he [Bjerke] asked us questions about his [Edge's] performance and about the Daly City incident. Then he asked was he such a good employee that he was worth all of this trouble and we agreed that we did not think that he was and then Mr. Bjerke said, "Then, fire him" and Mr. Bynner said, "Today?" and he said, "Yes, if you're going to do it, you should do it today" and so we went back and I believe Mrs. Hodge prepared the letter working with personnel. (Tr. 155).

In her signed statement given to the Department of Labor compliance officer Ms. Becket stated:

Mr. Bynner, Ms. Hodge and I did in fact meet with Mr. Bjerke and informed him of all the problems regarding Mr. Edge. When we informed him of the incident with the Daly City Police Department, Mr. Bjerke indicated that that incident standing alone was serious enough to terminate Mr. Edge. Mr. Bjerke asked us if Mr. Edge was really such a good employee that we were willing to put up with all the problems we had described to him. We indicated that he was not very good. Mr. Bjerke informed us that we should terminate Mr. Edge right away. (Ax. 5; Tr. 125).

The signed statement of Bjerke, who was not called to testify by either party, was introduced into evidence. It contains the following relevant assertions:

As I recall the August 19 meeting, either Fran [Hodge], Ned [Bynner], or Pat [Becket] mentioned to me that John Thorslev was on vacation, but that they had spoken to him regarding the problem they were bringing to my attention. They indicated that a probationary employee in their office, Leslie Edge, had had a number of problems and that they mentioned that Mr. Edge had had a problem with the Daly City Police Department. As I recall, they described the incident to me. Additionally, they described problems Mr. Edge had had regarding his work habits and his relationships with his supervisors. After they described these problems to me and expressed their recommendation that he not be continued in service, I indicated that if they had made a thorough and complete analysis and had concluded that the appropriate action was to termination [sic] Mr. Edge, they should initiate the action. The action was signed by Ned Bynner. It was my impression during the meeting that to terminate Mr. Edge, the action required was of an unpleasant nature to all of the people involved.

I do not recall any mention of the fact that Mr. Edge had been given his performance appraisal and had indicated that he intended to appeal the appraisal. I do not recall any mention of any appeal or grievance whatsoever. I also do not recall any mention of the fact that Mr. Edge had attempted to see the Regional Director and that the purpose of the meeting with me was to put me on notice regarding the problems with Mr. Edge so that I would be able to respond should the Regional Director contact me. (Cx. 3).

Although I credit Ms. Becket's contrary recollection regarding the last paragraph quoted from Bjerke's statement (Tr. 160), I conclude that the preponderance of the evidence is that the decision to terminate was based on the numerous, previously pending misconduct recommendations stemming from the "Daly City Incident" and the less-than-satisfactory performance assessments of Edge's supervisors; it was not a reprisal or a pretext for denying Edge any protected rights to grieve or appeal his performance evaluation. 10/ See Department of Transportation, Federal Aviation Administration, William P. Hobby Aircraft Traffic Control Tower (TRACAB), Houston, Texas, A/SLMR No. 1039 (1978); Veterans Administration, Biloxi VA Center, Biloxi, Mississippi, A/SLMR No. 450 (1974).

In retrospect, it is observed that Respondent may not have acted wisely in unnecessarily assuming the risks it did in effecting the termination so close in time to Edge's activities vis-a-vis the Regional Director, and in failing to allow opportunity for union representation at the time the decision was made, notwithstanding the fact it was acting within its rights in both respects. I reject Complainant's contention (Cx. 12), however, that the chronological juxtaposition of Edge's activities to appeal his performance evaluation and his termination will have a "chilling effect" on other employees who might be inclined to exercise their rights to appeal performance evaluations. There need be no such chilling effect on other employees who have not engaged in misconduct that is by itself a valid basis for disciplinary action.

The last issue for determination on the facts of this case is whether the decision to terminate Edge and/or the procedure followed in giving him notification constituted a patent breach of certain portions of the parties' collective bargaining agreement, in violation of sections 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Executive Order. I conclude that neither the Respondent's actions in deciding to terminate nor the notification procedure employed was a clear or unilateral breach of the collective bargaining agreement.

10/ Even though Edge was terminated before he perfected the filing of his performance evaluation grievance, it would seem the pre-filing indicia of Edge's intent on August 18 and 19, 1977, would be sufficient to maintain his grievance rights for the limited purpose of seeking modification, if warranted, of the performance evaluation form for future use in seeking other employment. See Department of the Treasury, IRS, Chicago District, Request for Review, No. 968 (1977), FLRC No. 77A-111 (1978). See also Tr. 274-6.

The collective bargaining agreement of the parties (Ax. 1) contains provisions concerning the union's rights and obligations to represent employees and to be present at "formal meetings" between the employer and employees (Article IV, sections B and H); employees' rights to representation during "adverse-action proceedings" and during grievance procedures (Article IV, sections D and K; Article XV, section F); the employer's responsibilities during disciplinary actions (Article XV, sections A, C, F and K) and grievance procedures (Article XXI); and the proper procedures to be followed in connection with employee position classification (Article VIII, sections A, C, E, H) and performance evaluation appraisals (Article IX, sections A, B, C and D). Complainant has failed to show that Respondent was not at all times herein relevant to the handling of employee Edge following procedures which Respondent's personnel in good faith believed to be the proper steps involving a probationary employee.

First, it must be noted that the collective bargaining agreement does not in any of the foregoing provisions refer to the term "probationary employees." Thus, it is ambiguous whether the parties intended any distinction between probationary and permanent employees in terms of the application of the agreement. Further, the evidence of record is that the personnel individuals who dealt with Edge cooperated in his efforts to obtain a performance evaluation, gave him the names of union officials to contact (by one account even before he received his evaluation), and followed what they genuinely perceived to be the applicable regulations in connection with the preparation and delivery of the termination letter (Tr. 213, 253, 255, 259, 267-8, 270-1; Cx. 18; Ax. 10, page 1).

Complainant has introduced evidence that Edge may have been performing duties not precisely contained in his official position description as a Clerk-Dictating Machine Transcriber (Cx. 14) and that the persons acting as his supervisors were not literally classified as supervisory personnel themselves. There has been no evidence presented, however, that any of Edge's superiors knew they were running afoul of any of the collective bargaining agreement provisions dealing with position descriptions and performance evaluations, or that Edge or any union representative had voiced any objection to his duties, supervisors, or position description. Moreover, I note that in my view Edge's duties as a "clerk in Control Central" were not significantly outside his position description, and he had been fully instructed as to his duties by the persons acting as his supervisors.

In any event, the issue of whether an employee may perform tasks in part outside his position description and be supervised by persons not specifically classified as supervisory personnel is not before me as an alleged unfair labor practice (see Assistant Secretary Exhibits 1a and b). Such issue should be resolved by the parties under the terms of their collective bargaining agreement, Article XXI, section B. See Report No. 49, Decisions and Reports on Rulings of the Assistant Secretary of Labor for Labor-Management Relations, Vol. 2, p. 639 (February 15, 1972).

In view of the foregoing, I do not find the requisite flagrant breach of contract that would constitute an unfair labor practice.

Recommendation

Accordingly, on the basis of the foregoing findings and conclusions, I hereby recommend that the Assistant Secretary adopt the following Order designed to effectuate the policies of Executive Order 11491, as amended:

RECOMMENDED ORDER

Pursuant to section 6(b) of Executive Order 11491, as amended, and section 203.26(b) of the regulations, the Assistant Secretary of Labor for Labor-Management Relations hereby orders that the Department of Health, Education and Welfare, Region IX, San Francisco, California, shall:

PURSUANT TO SECTION 6 OF EXECUTIVE ORDER 11491, AS AMENDED

U.S. CUSTOMS SERVICE, REGION IV,
MIAMI, FLORIDA
A/SLMR No. 1157

This case involved an unfair labor practice complaint filed by the National Treasury Employees Union (Complainant) alleging that the Respondent violated Section 19(a)(1) and (2) of the Order when it extended a 90-day warning notice connected with a performance appraisal. The Complainant alleged the extension was in reprisal for seeking union assistance in processing a grievance filed over the original warning notice.

The Administrative Law Judge recommended that the complaint be dismissed. Thus, he found no evidence that the extension was imposed based on the filing of the grievance, or on other discriminatory considerations.

The Assistant Secretary adopted the recommendation that the complaint be dismissed, noting that the evidence failed to establish that the Respondent's conduct was discriminatorily motivated. Accordingly, he ordered that the complaint be dismissed in its entirety.

DECISION AND ORDER

On September 20, 1978, Administrative Law Judge Milton Kramer issued his Recommended Decision and Order in the above-entitled proceeding, finding that the Respondent had not engaged in the unfair labor practices alleged in the complaint and recommending that the complaint be dismissed in its entirety. Thereafter, the Complainant filed exceptions and a supporting brief with respect to the Administrative Law Judge's Recommended Decision and Order.

The Assistant Secretary has reviewed the rulings of the Administrative Law Judge made at the hearing and finds that no prejudicial error was committed. The rulings are hereby affirmed. Upon consideration of the Administrative Law Judge's Recommended Decision and Order and the entire record in the subject case, including the Complainant's exceptions and supporting brief, I hereby adopt the Administrative Law Judge's findings, conclusions and recommendation. Thus, I agree that there is insufficient evidence to establish that the Respondent's conduct herein was discriminatorily motivated.

RECOMMENDED DECISION AND ORDER

Statement of the Case

This case arises under Executive Order 11491 as amended. It was initiated by a complaint dated February 2, 1978 and filed February 6, 1978 alleging a violation of Sections 19(a) (1) and (2) of the Executive Order. By response dated February 24, 1978 the Respondent denied the material allegations of the complaint.

On April 28, 1978 the Regional Administrator issued a Notice of Hearing for a hearing to be held on July 13, 1978 in Miami, Florida. A hearing was held on that day in that City. Both parties were represented by counsel. Both parties presented witnesses who were examined and cross-examined and offered exhibits which were received in evidence. Both parties made closing arguments and filed timely briefs.

Facts

The Complainant is and at all relevant times was the certified and recognized exclusive representative of a unit of Respondent's employees containing about 800 of Region IV's approximately 2,000 employees. Region IV includes six Districts including a District in Miami, Florida.

David Vogt is an employee of the Respondent represented by the Complainant and a member of its Chapter 146. He has been an employee of the Respondent's Miami District since 1971 and since 1975 has been a Customs Air Officer.

Edward H. Ragan is a Supervisory Customs Air Officer and Vogt's supervisor. He has been employed by Respondent since 1971 in various capacities. He has been a Supervisory Customs Air Officer since October 1976 and for three years before that he was a Customs Air Officer. He became a member of Complainant's Chapter 137 ^{1/} about the time it was organized in 1975 and authorized a checkoff of his dues. After he became a supervisor he was no longer in the unit and no longer covered by a checkoff but continued his membership in Chapter 137 until he was dropped for non-payment of dues in March 1978.

On July 22, 1977 Ragan gave Vogt his annual performance appraisal dated June 30, 1977. The appraisal was based on fourteen aspects of performance, with a number from 1 to 5 being given in each aspect, with 1 being the lowest and 5 the highest performance in each aspect. Appraisals were as outstanding, satisfactory, unsatisfactory, or "rating postponed". An average of 3 was required for a "satisfactory" rating. Ragan rated Vogt as 3 in eight factors, 2 in five factors, and 1 in one factor, the factor of "attitude". ^{2/} The Federal Personnel Manual provides that before a rating of unsatisfactory is given to an employee because he does not meet standards in one or more critical areas, he must be given at least 90 days to raise work performance to a satisfactory level. "If the warning is not issued 90 days before a rating is due, the rating may be postponed until the employee has had at least 90 days to improve performance."

The appraisal Ragan gave Vogt was "rating postponed - see attached 90-day warning notice". The warning notice was in considerable detail (nine single spaced legal size pages) 3/ emphasizing (three pages on the one factor of "attitude") Vogt's hostile attitude toward Ragan and failure to work harmoniously with others. On the appraisal itself the Reviewing Officer noted that he had personally observed Vogt's hostile attitude toward Ragan and had not observed any effort to change such conduct.

When Vogt was given his performance appraisal and 90-day warning notice by Ragan on July 22, 1977, he made no comment either on the appraisal form or to Ragan but called Ronald J. Rizzo, the President of Chapter 146 of which Vogt was a member. Rizzo and Vogt met the next day and decided to present an informal grievance to Ragan on the performance appraisal. The informal grievance on the performance appraisal was presented to Ragan on August 1, 1977, and supplemented on August 4, 1977 with Rizzo representing Vogt but Ragan made no change in his appraisal or ratings. 5/

On August 20, 1977 Rizzo presented a formal grievance on behalf of Vogt to the Regional Commissioner of the Customs Service. 6/ The Regional Commissioner appointed a Grievance Examiner to investigate and report his findings on the grievance. The Examiner held hearings or interviews with Vogt (represented by Rizzo and an NTEU attorney) and about sixteen other employees in the Miami District. His discussion with Vogt and his representatives lasted about five hours. Summaries were made of the hearings or interviews. The Grievance Examiner made findings and reported them to the Regional Commissioner, with copies to Vogt and Ragan. Vogt prepared comments on the Examiner's findings and sent them to the NTEU attorney who added a letter and sent them to the Grievance Examiner for inclusion in the grievance proceeding.

The formal grievance was rejected by the Regional Commissioner. The record does not show when this occurred but it indicates, 7/ and I find, it was sometime after October 20, 3/ Exhibit C-8, Sec. 1-8(c).

1977. During the pendency of the grievance and of the 90-day warning, Vogt received from Ragan a 60-day notice dated September 7, 1977 proposing to deny a within-grade increase because Ragan thought Vogt's level of performance made it impossible for Ragan to recommend the increase "at this time". 8/

During the investigation of the formal grievance by the Grievance Examiner he had hearings with or interviewed about seventeen of Vogt's fellow employees. Some of them, including the other Customs Air Officers in Ragan's unit, acquired the impression that Vogt was a conduit to the section on Internal Affairs (security) of the District, reporting to them on infractions of regulations, such as using government cars for private purposes, and this caused resentment in Ragan's unit.

During the 90-day warning period Vogt talked with Ragan several times to discuss his progress, and each time was told that there was improvement. The fifth such meeting was on October 20, 1977, the last day of the 90-day period. During that period Vogt and Ragan had worked on the same days about 30 times and because of the nature of their work Vogt was under the direct supervision of Ragan about half the days they both worked. Vogt had spent a large portion of this time working on his grievance. This was not objected to or criticized but it did reduce the quantity of official duties performed by Vogt and Ragan's opportunity to observe Vogt's performance of his duties.

On that day, October 20, Ragan told Vogt that although Vogt's attitude had improved his work performance would have been better had he not spent as much time as he did on his grievance, that Ragan had had insufficient time to observe and evaluate Vogt's performance, and that he was extending Vogt's 90-day warning period 30 days to give Ragan a better opportunity to re-evaluate Vogt. The 30-day extension was confirmed in writing the same day. 9/

It was that 30-day extension of the 90-day warning that is contended to have constituted an unfair labor practice in violation of Sections 19(a)(1) and (2) of the Executive Order. The Complainant contends that it was a violation of 8/ Attachment (e) to Exhibit R-1.

9/ Attachment b to Exhibit R-1.

Section 19(a)(1) because Ragan said to Vogt at the end of the 90 days that his production would have been better had he not spent so much time "with the union" in working on his grievance, thereby interfering with his right to utilize the assistance of his recognized representative and imposing a penalty for having filed a grievance. The Complainant contends also that it was a violation of Section 19(a)(2) because discriminatory in that others who had 90-day warnings did not have the warning period extended and that the discrimination was motivated by anti-union animus.

The record does not show that anyone in the Miami District of Region IV other than Vogt had ever received a 90-day warning. In the two years preceding the hearing there had been eight 90-day warning letters, including Vogt's, in the Region; of those eight, four, including Vogt's, had 30-day extensions. The circumstances concerning the other seven 90-day warnings are not indicated.

At the expiration of the 30-day extension of Vogt's warning, Ragan gave him a satisfactory rating and recommended his within-grade increase which he was given.

Discussion and Conclusions

I have not found that Ragan said the 30-day extension was made because Vogt had spent so much time "with the union" in processing the grievance. On the basis of the record I could not make such a finding or find that Ragan said or implied anything that would tend to discourage Vogt's working with the union. There is no evidence and I do not find that the 30-day extension was imposed because of the filing of the grievance. There was thus no violation of Section 19(a)(1) for two reasons.

First, the factual foundation for the Complainant's contention of such a violation was not established. And second, even if the 30-day extension was imposed in reprisal for filing the grievance, it is stipulated that the grievance was filed under an agency-prescribed grievance procedure and not under a negotiated procedure. 10/ Thus even if the extension had been in reprisal for Vogt filing his grievance, it would not have been a violation of Section 19(a)(1). See Office of Economic Opportunity, Region V and Michael Bottigliero and Local 2816, A.F.G.E., A/SLMR No. 50-5999, 3 A/SLMR 699, 670-71 (December 4, 1973). This is not to say it would not have been wrong and perhaps remediable somewhere. It is to say it would not have been a violation of Executive Order 11491 as amended.

Nor was there a violation of Section 19(a)(2). There was no showing of discriminatory treatment of Vogt. So far as the record shows, he was the only employee in the Miami District who ever received a 90-day warning, so extending it for 30 days was not treating him differently than others in the District who had received 90-day warnings. And he was one of four in the Region who had received 30-day extensions out of eight in the Region who had received 90-day warnings in the two years preceding the hearing. The circumstances of the other seven cases are not known, so it cannot be said Vogt was treated differently than others similarly situated.

Nor was there a showing of anti-union animus on the part of Ragan. On the contrary, he had been a member of the union before he became a supervisor and remained a dues-paying member for a year and a half after he became a supervisor and was no longer a member of a unit represented by the union.

The Complainant cites other decisions of the Assistant Secretary or an Administrative Law Judge to show that others in Region IV have been found to harbor an anti-union animus. But it is the animus of Ragan that is pertinent here. Attributing anti-union animus to Ragan solely on the basis that a couple of other supervisors in Region IV in other cases have been found to have such an attitude is carrying guilt by association too far if carrying it anywhere is not carrying it too far. Furthermore, in the other cases the victim of the improper animus was a union official and activist. The record here does not indicate that Vogt was anything more than a member who sought the union's assistance in presenting a grievance, not an activist in the union cause. I cannot and do not conclude that the 30-day extension of Vogt's warning was motivated by his union membership or union assistance in presenting his grievance.

RECOMMENDATION

The complaint should be dismissed.

Case Nos. 30-07855(CA) and
30-07868(CA)

This matter involved two unfair labor practice complaints filed by the American Federation of Government Employees, AFL-CIO, Local 1760, (Complainant) alleging that the Respondent violated Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order by its failure to negotiate with the Complainant concerning the impact and implementation of two employee details.

AMERICAN FEDERATION OF GOVERNMENT
EMPLOYEES, AFL-CIO, LOCAL 1760

Complainant

In both cases, the Administrative Law Judge rejected the Respondent's contentions that the Complainant was not the exclusive representative of the employees involved, and that the issues herein involved arguable interpretations of the negotiated agreement between the parties.

DECISION AND ORDER

The Administrative Law Judge concluded in one case that there was no violation of Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order, because the rotation of technical assistants to different modules on March 30, 1977, caused no "real" change in the working conditions, duties, or responsibilities of the affected employees, and resulted in no substantial impact upon the affected employees. Noting particularly the absence of exceptions therein, the Assistant Secretary adopted the findings, conclusions and recommendations of the Administrative Law Judge in this regard and he ordered that the complaint be dismissed.

On August 23, 1978, Administrative Law Judge William Naimark issued his Recommended Decision and Order in the subject cases, finding that the Respondent had not engaged in the unfair labor practices alleged in the complaint in Case No. 30-07855(CA) and recommending that the complaint in that case be dismissed in its entirety. No exceptions in this regard were filed with respect to the Administrative Law Judge's Recommended Decision and Order. The Administrative Law Judge found further that the Respondent had engaged in the unfair labor practices alleged in the complaint in Case No. 30-07868(CA) and recommended that it cease and desist therefrom and take certain affirmative action as set forth in the attached Administrative Law Judge's Recommended Decision and Order. Thereafter, the Respondent filed exceptions and a supporting brief with respect to the Administrative Law Judge's Recommended Decision and Order in Case No. 30-07868(CA), and the Complainant filed an answering brief thereto.

In the second matter, the Assistant Secretary agreed with the Administrative Law Judge's conclusion that the Respondent violated Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order by failing to fulfill its obligation to afford the Complainant notice and an opportunity to meet and confer on the procedures to be utilized in effectuating its decision to assign a task force of claims authorizers to clear up a backlog of screening work in a unit other than their own, and on the impact of its decision on adversely affected employees. In so doing, it was noted that the establishment of a task force for this purpose constituted a change in the Respondent's past practice affecting the working conditions of unit employees. Accordingly, the Assistant Secretary ordered that the Respondent cease and desist from engaging in the conduct found violative of the Order and that it take certain affirmative actions.

The Assistant Secretary has reviewed the rulings of the Administrative Law Judge made at the hearing and finds that no prejudicial error was committed. The rulings are hereby affirmed. Upon consideration of the Administrative Law Judge's Recommended Decision and Order and the entire record in these cases, including the Respondent's exceptions and the Complainant's answering brief in Case No. 30-07868(CA), and noting particularly the absence of exceptions in Case No. 30-07855(CA), I hereby adopt the Administrative Law Judge's findings, conclusions and recommendations, as modified herein.

I concur with the Administrative Law Judge's finding, in Case No. 30-07868(CA), that the establishment of a task force, which necessitated the assignment of claims authorizers to perform screening in a different work area, constituted a change in the Respondent's past practice affecting the working conditions of unit employees. Under these circumstances, the Respondent was obligated under the Order to afford the Complainant notice and an opportunity to meet and confer on the procedures to be utilized in effectuating its decision to assign a task force of claims authorizers to clear up the backlog of screening work in a unit other than their own, and on the impact of its decision on adversely affected employees. By failing to fulfill these obligations under the Order, I find, in agreement with the Administrative Law Judge, that the Respondent violated Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order.

ORDER

Pursuant to Section 6(b) of Executive Order 11491, as amended, and Section 203.26(b) of the Regulations, the Assistant Secretary of Labor for Labor-Management Relations hereby orders that the Department of Health, Education and Welfare, Social Security Administration, BRSI, Northeastern Program Center shall:

1. Cease and desist from:

(a) Assigning employees represented exclusively by the National Office, American Federation of Government Employees, AFL-CIO (National Council of Social Security Payment Center Locals) to a task force to perform screening work outside their permanent work unit without first notifying the American Federation of Government Employees, AFL-CIO, Local 1760, the authorized representative of the exclusively recognized labor organization, and affording it the opportunity to meet and confer, to the extent consonant with law and regulations, on the procedures which management will observe in implementing such task force, and on the impact such task force will have on adversely affected employees in the exclusively recognized unit.

(b) In any like or related manner interfering with, restraining, or coercing its employees in the exercise of their rights assured by Executive Order 11491, as amended.

2. Take the following affirmative actions in order to effectuate the purposes and policies of Executive Order 11491, as amended:

(a) Notify the American Federation of Government Employees, AFL-CIO, Local 1760, the authorized representative of the National Office, American Federation of Government Employees, AFL-CIO (National Council of Social Security Payment Center Locals), the employees' exclusive bargaining representative, of any intended assignment of employees to a task force to perform screening work outside their permanent work unit and, upon request, meet and confer, to the extent consonant with law and regulations, on the procedures which management will observe in implementing such detail or assignment, and on the impact such detail or assignment will have on adversely affected employees in the exclusively recognized unit.

(b) Post at its facility at the Northeastern Program Service Center copies of the attached notice marked "Appendix" on forms to be furnished by the Assistant Secretary of Labor for Labor-Management Relations. Upon receipt of such forms, they shall be signed by the Director of the Northeastern Program Service Center and shall be posted and maintained by him for 60 consecutive days thereafter in conspicuous places, including all bulletin boards and other places where notices to employees are customarily posted. The Director shall take reasonable steps to insure that such notices are not altered, defaced, or covered by any other material.

(c) Pursuant to Section 203.27 of the Regulations, notify the Assistant Secretary, in writing, within 30 days from the date of this order as to what steps have been taken to comply herewith.

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED that the complaint in Case No. 30-07855(CA) be, and it hereby is, dismissed.

RECOMMENDED DECISION AND ORDER

Statement of the Cases

Pursuant to a Notice of Hearing on Complaint issued on April 4, 1978 by the Acting Regional Administrator for Labor-Management Services Administration, U.S. Department of Labor, New York Region, a hearing was held before the undersigned on May 18, 1978 at New York, New York.

This proceeding arose under Executive Order 11491, as amended (herein called the Order). A complaint was filed in Case No. 30-07855 on July 8, 1977 by American Federation of Government Employees, Local 1760 (herein called Complainant) against Department of Health, Education and Welfare, Social Security Administration, Bureau of Retirement and Survivors Insurance, Northeastern Program Service Center, (herein called Respondent). It alleged that on March 30, 1977 Respondent refused to meet and confer with Complainant re the procedures to be followed, as well as the adverse impact, in respect to a detailing of bargaining unit members Grace Kaufman, Bernard Zapkin and Seymour Epstein -all in violation of Sections 19(a) (1) and (6) of the Order.

Respondent filed a response to the aforesaid complaint on July 22, 1977 denying it violated the Order. It averred that no change was made in policies or working condition, and that protection was afforded Respondent as to such action under Section 12(b) of the Order.

A complaint was filed by the aforesaid Complainant in Case No. 30-07868 on July 18, 1977 against the aforementioned Respondent. It alleged a refusal by Respondent on April 20, 1977 to meet and confer with Complainant in respect to the detailing of a task force of claims authorizers from Section 1 to 3 with respect to procedures to be followed and adverse impact upon those detailed and bargaining unit members - all in violation of Sections 19(a) (1) and (6) of the Order.

Respondent filed a response to said complaint in Case No. 30-07868 on August 9, 1977 denying the commission of any unfair labor practices. It averred that it was not required, under the contract, to meet and confer but merely to consult with Complainant; that its actions were a management right under 12(b) of the Order; and that it had no obligation to consult since there was no change in working conditions or substantial impact wrought herein.

By an order issued on April 4, 1978 the aforementioned cases, 30-07855 and 30-07868, were consolidated.

Both Complainant and Respondent were represented at the hearing, were afforded full opportunity to be heard, to adduce evidence and to examine as well as cross-examine witnesses. Thereafter, briefs were filed which have been duly considered.

Upon the entire record in this case, from my observation of the witnesses and their demeanor, and from all of the testimony and evidence adduced at the hearing, I make the following findings, conclusions and recommendations:

Case No. 30-07855(CA)

1. At all times since about 1969 Complainant has represented the non-supervisory employees of Respondent's Northeastern Program Center.
 2. A collective bargaining agreement, effective on March 15, 1974, was executed by the National Office, American Federation of Government Employees, AFL-CIO and various locals, including Complainant, and the Bureau of Retirement and Survivors Insurance (BRSI) of Social Security Administration, covering the unit of non-supervisory employees of Respondent's Program Center and other service centers of BRSI. The said agreement continues in effect. 1/
 3. Respondent employs about 2500 employees who comprise two process branches and a separate facility at College Point. There are 7 operating sections which are organized into 6 modules, 2/ except that Section 6 has 4 modules and Section 7 (College Point) has 7 modules. There are 41 modules containing approximately 48-50 employees. Each section had a manager who was responsible for overall supervision thereof.
 4. About 6 or 7 claims authorizers work in each module, and these individuals handle claims for benefits reviewed by this branch. There are a limited number (4) of claims authorizers Technical Assistant (TA's) who provide advice for, and guidance to, claims authorizers. The TA's, who have more than one module to handle, audit work of the authorizers in accordance with a quality improvement plan, hold meetings and discuss cases with the authorizers, render advice, and review memos as well as transmittal letters.
- 1/ These findings are based on the facts and conclusions found in Case No. 30-7725, (June 8, 1978), which involved the same parties as the present proceeding. Moreover, judicial notice is taken of the terms of the master agreement between the Bureau and National AFGE which are recited in the prior case.
- 2/ A module is a mini-payment center which handles cases from their inception to conclusion.

5. In October, 1976 Respondent's operations changed from the branch concept to the quasi-module set up. Under the traditions branch arrangement a TA was assigned to audit an adjoining section. Rotations of TA's occurred among the 3 sections and the practice was to notify the Union of the rotations. Under the module arrangement as well as prior thereto TA's did a 3 day audit on every claims authorizer.
 6. In March, 1977 Respondent decided to rotate the TA's under its module system. On March 30, 1977 Isodore Gross, process section manager at the time, told Bruce Friedman, Treasurer of Complainant, that he planned to rotate TA's Grace Kaufman, Bernard Zapkin and Seymour Epstein who were in Section 1. At that time Kaufman sat in module 2, but was responsible for units 1 and 2; Epstein sat in module 4, but was responsible for units 3 and 4; Zapkin sat in module 6, and was responsible for units 5 and 6; and Richard Vail, the remaining technical assistant, was utilized as a floater to fill in wherever needed during absences of the others. The purpose behind the plan to rotate the TA's, as explained by Gross, was to enable claims authorizers to have their work reviewed by different TA's and thus obtain different and unbiased evaluations.
 7. Upon being informed by Gross as to the proposed detail 3/ of the 3 named TA's, Friedman stated that Respondent must meet and confer re the change as well as the impact of the proposal. Gross replied it was not necessary; that he was, however, informing the union of the planned assignment. Thereafter, Friedman asked both Alvin Brown, Gross' supervisor, and Julian Bergman, labor relations representative, to meet and confer re the rotation. In each instance the request was denied. 4/
 8. On March 30, 1977 Respondent moved the Technical assistants as proposed. Epstein went to modules 5 and 6; Kaufman was assigned to module 4; and Zapkin moved to module 1 and 2. In respect to their functions, record testimony
- 3/ The Federal Personnel refers to a "detail" as being a temporary assignment to a different position and duties. Hence Respondent designates the assignment herein as a "rotation".
4. Respondent has always taken the position that it did and stands ready to, "consult" with the Complainant re the rotation; that such term connotes its willingness to listen to the union's objection or suggestion, but would not "bargain" concerning these assignments.

reflects there was no change in the TA's principal functions, they audited the work of the same number of, but different, claims authorizers. Moreover, the hours and other working conditions, including benefits, remained the same. While Gross continued to be the rating officer for these TA's, the latter were evaluated by, and responsible to, different managers in the module to which they were assigned. Although the TA's auditing tasks did not change, managers differed in their method of operations. Thus, they varied in the particular records required to be kept by TA's and the information to be included therein. The rotation or assignment lasted until February 1978.

Conclusions

While there is little, if any, factual dispute herein, the parties are in sharp disagreement as to whether Respondent violated the Order.

Complainant insists that management was required to meet and confer with it re the impact and implementation of its decision 5/ to rotate or "detail" the 3 technical assistants, and that its failure to do so was violative of 19(a)(1) and (6). Respondent insists it's refusal to bargain over the impact and procedures in rotating the TA's was not violative of the Order. It makes 3 principal contentions in support thereof: (1) since the master agreement was made between the Bureau and National AFGE, as the bargaining representative, Complainant local is not a proper party to bring this proceeding; and further, no obligation exists to negotiate with Local 1760 since it was neither granted exclusive recognition nor designated as agent by such representative; (2) the issue involves an arguable interpretation and application of the master agreement, and thus, as enunciated in Report 49, the matter herein cannot be the subject of an unfair labor practice but should be decided under the agreement; (3) no change in practice resulted from Respondent's conduct, and the transfer of TA's had no substantial impact upon the employees which required it to meet and confer thereon.

(1) In respect to Respondent's position that it was not obligated to bargain, as distinguished from consult, with Complainant since the local union is not the exclusive representative, I reject this contention for the same reasons

5/ Complainant concedes that under Section 11(b) and 12(b) of the Order, Respondent was under no obligation to meet and confer in respect to the decision to transfer the technical assistants to a different module.

expressed by me in Case No. 30-7725 involving the same parties. Moreover, as indicated in Department of Health, Education and Welfare, Social Security Administration, BRSI, Northeastern Program Service Center, A/SLMR No. 984, Complainant herein was entitled to act for the National AFGE and call upon Respondent to meet and confer in the proper instance regarding matters affecting the unit employees at this program center.

(2) Neither do I accept the argument that the matter herein should be dismissed under the doctrine that issues involving arguable interpretations of contract are not properly the subject of unfair labor practice proceedings. Cases of that nature have been dismissed where the grievance of the complaint is a breach of contract which concerns an arguable interpretation and application of a contract. 6/ In the case at bar the basis for the alleged unfair labor practice lies in the action taken apart from the contract, Complainant union does not contend that such action was a breach of contract giving rise to differing interpretation thereof but a violation of the Respondent's obligation under the Order. While it is true that one must look to the agreement to consider such an obligation - and rights may flow therefrom - I do not deem the grievance of this complaint to deal with breach of contract. Hence, I find the cases cited by Respondent in that regard to be inapposite.

(3) While management retains certain rights under Section 12(b) of the Order and thus is not obliged to bargain concerning its decisions in that regard, it may well be required to meet and confer re the impact and implementation of that decision. See Directorate of Facility Engineers, Fort Richardson, Alaska, A/SLMR No. 946. However, the Assistant Secretary has also held that unless such decision results in a substantial impact on the personnel policies, practices and general working conditions of unit employees, no such obligation will be imposed upon the employer. Department of the Navy, Naval Communication Area, Master Station, Eastpac, Honolulu, A/SLMR No. 1035. Moreover, where the subject of the complaint was an established past practice and did not constitute a change in working conditions, management is not obligated to meet and confer thereon. Department of the Navy, Mare Island, Naval Shipyard, Vallejo, California, A/SLMR No. 736.

6/ See American Federation of Government Employees, AFL-CIO, National Office, A/SLMR No. 809; Aerospace Guidance and Meteorology Center, Newark Air Force Station, Newark, Ohio, A/SLMR No. 677.

In the case at bar I am not convinced that the rotational system of TA's constituted a real change in their duties or resulted in a substantial impact upon bargaining unit employees. Thus, record facts show that the technical assistants in the past, and prior to March 30, 1977, audited the claims authorizers and did so in different sections. It was also an established practice to rotate the TA's among the sections. Although the Respondent structured its center by setting up modules and the TA's rotate among these units, I do not perceive this structural modification to have resulted in any significant changes in the working conditions of these employees. They continued to audit the same class of employees, i.e. claims authorizers, and no change was effected in the hours, wages, benefits or working condition of the technical assistants. The fact that the latter individuals reported to a different manager in the unit is scarcely significant, particularly since their rating officer remained the same individual.

The rationale enunciated in Department of Treasury, Internal Revenue Service, Brookhaven Service Center, A/SLMR No. 814, has applicability herein. In the cited case the activity issued a new standard position description (SPD) for control clerks. The SPD was the same as the old one except it made mention of duties involving integrated data retrieval system (IDRS) which duties the control clerks had performed prior to the SPD modification. It was held by the Assistant Secretary that no duty to bargain re the impact and implementation of this new SPD since the control clerks had performed such IDRS functions previously and no change was effected in the terms and condition of employment.

In Department of Health, Education and Welfare, Social Security Administration, BRSI, Northeastern Program Service Center, A/SLMR No. 984, it was concluded that a transfer of claims cases to the claims authorizers effected a change in employee terms and conditions of employment and impacted the employees in the unit. But that matter dealt with the nature and amount of work performed by the claims authorizers - to whom the cases were transferred - and the transfer of such cases might conceivably determine volume or type of work performed by the claim examiner. In the case at bar the rotation of TA's caused no change in the amount of their work, nor did it involve a difference in the auditing functions of these employees. 7/

7/ Cf. Case No. 7725(CA), Recommended Decision and Order issued June 8, 1978. This case, which involved a transfer of employees to work in a different area on special reports, is somewhat dissimilar from the present proceeding. [Cont'd on next page]

Accordingly, I am persuaded that the rotation of technical assistants to different modules on March 30, 1977 was not a sufficient change in the past practice of Respondent's; that no "real" change was effected by this rotational move in the working conditions of these employees or in their duties or responsibilities; and that such reassignment to other modules resulted in no substantial impact upon the bargaining unit employees. Therefore, I find no violation of 19(a)(1) and (6) by virtue thereof on the part of Respondent.

Recommendation

Having found that Respondent did not violate Sections 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order, I hereby recommend that the complaint in Case No. 7855(CA) be dismissed in its entirety.

Case No. 30-7868(CA)

1. At all times since about 1969 Complainant has represented the non-supervisory employees of Respondent's Northeastern Program Center.
2. A collective bargaining agreement, effective on March 15, 1974, was executed by the National Office, American Federation of Government Employees, AFL-CIO and various locals, including Complainant, and the Bureau of Retirement and Survivors Insurance (BRSI) of Social Security Administration, covering the unit of non-supervisory employees of Respondent's Program Center and other service centers of BRSI. The said agreement continues in effect. 8/
3. Respondent employs about 2500 employees who comprise two process branches and a separate facility at College Point. There are 7 operating sections which are organized

In Case No.30-7725(CA), where the same parties are concerned, the detail affected the members selected since the hours were changed as to one employee and overtime was an issue therein. Moreover, the rotational system or detail had not been a usual practice in the past.

8/ These findings are based on the facts and conclusions found in Case No. 30-7725, (June 8, 1978), which involved the same parties as the present proceeding. Moreover, judicial notice is taken of the terms of the master agreement between the Bureau and National AFGE which are recited in the prior case.

into 6 modules, 9/ except that Section 6 has 4 modules and Section 7 (College Point) has 7 modules. There are 41 modules containing approximately 48-50 employees. Each section had a manager who was responsible for overall supervision thereof.

4. Prior to April 20, 1977, Vivian Frey, process branch manager, branch 1, decided to assign several claims authorizers from Section 1 to Section 3 in said branch to perform screening functions. Claims authorizers process cases involving, inter alia, awards to beneficiaries. Her decision was prompted by the fact that the workload in Section 1, module 1, was very light whereas it was very heavy in Section 3. The assignment of the claims authorizers to Section 3 to screen cases would thereby reduce the time that beneficiaries must wait for receipt of their awards.

5. The screening process involves a summary review of many cases - 50 or 60 - to determine the complexity of the matters. If the case can be processed quickly - 10 minutes or less - the claims authorizers will handle it; otherwise it will be put aside and handled by someone for an in-depth review and processed accordingly. The screening of cases is an ongoing process. It may be an integral part of the claims authorizers duties, since in some modules (terminal digits) the authorizer must screen his own work each day.

6. Prior to modularization of the Center screening was performed in a unit by several people selected for this purpose whenever the work was heavy. Record facts show that in 1972 management set up a task force to handle over 500 cases; that it met with the local union which gave it ideas for selecting the forums assigned thereto; and that some changes were made by the activity by virtue thereof.

7. On April 20, 1977 Helen Grossman, manager of Section 1, unit 1, held a meeting of the employees. She announced that a detail would be formed of several claims authorizers to be assigned to Section 3 to screen cases and reduce the backlog thereat. Bruce Friedman, treasurer of Complainant asked Grossman whom she consulted from the union, and the manager replied she had not talked to the union in this regard. At the suggestion of the manager, Friedman spoke to Frey re management's meeting and conferring concerning the detail, and the latter informed the unions official she was told by Julian Bergman, Respondent's labor relations representative, it was not a matter about which the activity was required to meet and confer.

9/ A module is a mini-payment center which handles cases from their inception to conclusion.

8. Three claims authorizers were then assigned from Section 1 to Section 3 to perform the screening and ease the workload in the latter section. They were assigned for a period of 1-10 work days. Those chosen were required to possess technical knowledge so as to solve problems that might arise, but they don't necessarily perform the full range of the claims authorizer job while screening cases.

9. Present policy calls for rotating the screeners who are assigned for this detail. Record facts do show, however, that those remaining in the module i.e. who are not assigned as a task force to screen, will do a greater share of the workload.

Conclusions

In contending that it did not violate the Order by assigning the claims examiners, as a task force, to do screening work in a different section on April 20, 1977, Respondent insists: (1) it was under no obligation to meet and confer with Complainant since the latter was not designated as the exclusive bargaining representative nor properly designated to act as the agent for such representative; (2) there is an arguable interpretation and application of the master agreement, and therefore the matter is not properly the subject of an unfair labor practice proceeding; (3) the action taken herein followed a past practice so that no change occurred, and the assignment resulted in no substantial impact upon the unit employees.

In respect to Respondent's contentions that no obligation exists to bargain with Complainant since it is not the bargaining representative nor the agent thereof, and, further, that the issue involves contract interpretation, I reject their arguments. My reasons therefor are as stated in Case No. 30-7855(CA), supra, together with the cases cited in my recommended decision and order therein, as well as those expressed by me in Case No. 30-7725 (recommended decision and order issued June 8, 1977).

Respondent also argues that the "detailing" of the three claims authorizers to screen cases in Section 3 was neither a changed conditions of employment nor resulted in a substantial impact on personnel policies and practices. I do not agree.

While the record does establish that screening by claims examiners was a continuing operation, it does not appear that assigning a task force, as occurred herein, was an established practice. Individual examiners were, it is true, designated to screen cases in a particular unit. However, the assignment of a group of employees to perform this operation in a different work area under these circumstances was a variation from the former procedure. Under the former practice, the screening of cases was not formalized nor did it necessarily call for a reassignment of individuals to alleviate a heavy workload. It occurred within the unit, and may not have resulted in any change in the work performance or time devoted thereto.

The assignment on April 20, 1977 of the authorizers to Section 3 as screeners for a 1-10 day period called for such individuals to spend 100% of their time on such an operation. Except for those in the terminal digit modules, claims authorizers do not screen their own work each day. Thus, the devotion by the task force of all of their time screening cases, albeit an assignment of short duration, might well be a matter about which the Complainant would seek to bargain. In this respect, I conclude that this case differs from 30-7855(CA) wherein the technical authorizers spent the same percentage of their time auditing the claims authorizers' work during the detail as therefore. In the cited case the assignment produced no change other than the TA's reporting to a different manager and auditing cases of different claims authorizers. Since the individuals in the case at bar were required to screen matters exclusively during the period of assignment, I conclude there must necessarily exist a substantial impact upon, at least, these particular employees. Their work is centered upon a specific phase of Respondent's operation, and the employees in Section 1 may well be concerned about being assigned to a task limited to screening cases. In this posture, the assignment herein is dependent upon the particular caseload in Section 3.

Accordingly, I conclude Respondent was obligated to meet and confer as the procedure to be followed in effectuating the assignment and on the impact of its decision on adversely affected employees. See Department of Health, Education and Welfare, Social Security Administration, BRSI, Northeastern Program Service Center, A/SLMR No. 984. This obligation was not met by Respondent's announcement of the intended assignment at the meeting on April 20, 1977 and its informing the Complainant thereof on that date.

Despite Complainant's request to do so, Respondent adhered to its position that it was not required to meet and confer re the procedures to be followed in the assignment of the screeners to Section 3, as well as the impact of the assignment on the employees adversely affected. I conclude and find that such refusal constituted a violation of Section 19(a)(6) of the Order. Federal Railroad Administration, A/SLMR No. 418.

Moreover, I find that the failure and refusal to bargain with Complainant re the implementation and impact of the assignment of those screeners had a restraining effect upon employees and was violative of Section 19(a)(1) of the Order. Federal Railroad Administration, supra.

Recommendation

Having found that Respondent violated Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order, I recommend that the Assistant Secretary adopt the following order designed to effectuate the purpose of Executive Order 11491, as amended.

Recommended Order

Pursuant to Section 6(b) of Executive Order 11491, as amended, and Section 203.26(b) of the Regulations, the Assistant Secretary of Labor for Labor-Management Relations hereby orders that the Department of Health, Education and Welfare, Social Security Administration, BRSI, Northeastern Program Service Center shall:

1. Cease and desist from

(a) Instituting a detail or assignment of its employees for the purpose of screening social security claim cases without notifying American Federation of Government Employees, AFL-CIO, Local 1760, as the authorized representative, and affording it the opportunity to meet and confer, to the extent consonant with law and regulations, on the procedures which management will observe in implementing such detail or assignment, and on the impact such detail or assignment will have on adversely affected employees in the exclusively recognized unit.

2. Take the following affirmative action in order to effectuate the purposes and provisions of Executive Order 11491, as amended:

(a) Notify American Federation of Government Employees, AFL-CIO, Local 1760, as the authorized representative of the National Office, American Federation of Government Employees, AFL-CIO (National Council of Social Security Payment Center Locals), the exclusive bargaining representative of Respondent's employees, of any intended detail or assignment of employees to screen social security claim cases, and upon request meet and confer in good faith, to the extent consonant with law and regulations, on the procedures which management will observe in implementing such detail or assignment, and on the impact such detail or assignment will have on adversely affected employees in the exclusively recognized unit.

(b) Post at its facility at the Northeastern Program Center copies of the attached notice marked "Appendix" on forms to be furnished by the Assistant Secretary of Labor for Labor-Management Relations. Upon receipt of such forms they shall be signed by the Director of Respondent and shall be posted and maintained by him for 60 consecutive days thereafter in conspicuous places, including all bulletin boards and other places where notices to employees are customarily posted. This Notice must remain posted for sixty (60) consecutive days from the date of posting, and must not be altered, defaced, or covered by any other material.

If employees have any other questions concerning this Notice or compliance with any of its provisions, they may communicate directly with the Regional Administrator for Labor-Management Services, Labor-Management Services Administration, U.S. Department of Labor, whose address is: Room 3515 - 1515 Broadway, New York, New York 10036.

This case involved an unfair labor practice complaint filed by the Federal Employees Metal Trades Council, AFL-CIO (Complainant) alleging that the Respondent violated Section 19(a)(1), (2) and (6) of the Order by prohibiting a shop steward and an employee from conferring in a particular building. The Respondent contended that the refusal to permit the meeting did not constitute an unfair labor practice and even if such conduct were found to constitute a breach of the negotiated agreement it was not an unfair labor practice as contemplated within Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order.

The Administrative Law Judge concluded that the Respondent violated Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order. In this regard, he found that Respondent's refusal to permit the shop steward and the employee to meet in a building which was the employee's work site was in violation of the parties' negotiated agreement and violative of the Order. The Administrative Law Judge also found that no proof was offered to substantiate the allegation that the Respondent violated Section 19(a)(2) of the Order.

Contrary to the Administrative Law Judge, the Assistant Secretary found that the Respondent had not violated Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order and dismissed the complaint in its entirety. In this regard, he considered that the Respondent's interpretation and application of Article VII, Section 6 of its negotiated agreement in refusing to permit the shop steward and the employee to meet in the building involved did not constitute a clear and patent breach of the parties' agreement. Rather, he found that the Respondent's action was based on an arguable interpretation of the parties' agreement. Under these circumstances, the Assistant Secretary concluded that the Respondent's conduct did not, standing alone, constitute a violation of Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order.

Accordingly, he ordered that the complaint be dismissed in its entirety.

DECISION AND ORDER

On September 29, 1978, Administrative Law Judge John V. Evans issued his Recommended Decision and Order in the above-entitled proceeding, finding that the Respondent had engaged in the unfair labor practices alleged in the complaint and recommending that it cease and desist therefrom and take certain affirmative actions as set forth in the attached Administrative Law Judge's Recommended Decision and Order. Thereafter, the Respondent filed exceptions and a supporting brief with respect to the Administrative Law Judge's Recommended Decision and Order.

The Assistant Secretary has reviewed the rulings of the Administrative Law Judge made at the hearing and finds that no prejudicial error was committed. The rulings are hereby affirmed. Upon consideration of the Administrative Law Judge's Recommended Decision and Order and the entire record in the instant case, including the Respondent's exceptions and supporting brief, I hereby adopt the Administrative Law Judge's findings, conclusions and recommendations, only to the extent consistent herewith.

The Administrative Law Judge found that the Respondent's refusal to permit employee Snead and Shop Steward Jackson to meet in the immediate vicinity of the employee's assigned work site, Building 216, as provided for in Article VII, Section 6 of the parties' negotiated agreement, was a breach of that agreement and violative of the Order. I disagree.

It has consistently been held that a party to a negotiated agreement acts at its peril in interpreting and applying such agreement. Thus, if the Respondent's interpretation of the negotiated agreement was such that it resulted in a clear and patent breach of the agreement, then such interpretation could rise to the level of an unfair labor practice. On the other hand, if the Respondent's interpretation was arguably within the terms of the negotiated agreement, then such interpretation would merely be a matter of contract interpretation to be resolved through the parties' grievance and arbitration machinery. 1/

Applying these principles to the facts of the instant case, I find that the action of the Respondent in interpreting and applying the provisions of Article VII, Section 6 of its negotiated agreement in refusing to permit employee Snead and Shop Steward Jackson to meet in Building 216 did not constitute a clear and patent breach of that agreement but, rather, was arguably within the terms of the agreement. Thus, the language of Article VII, Section 6, provides, in part, that, ". . . consistent with workload commitments, meetings between employees and Council Representatives . . . will normally take place in the immediate vicinity of the employee's assigned work site." (Emphasis added.) Under these circumstances, I conclude that the Respondent's action was based on an arguable interpretation of the parties' agreement, and that, therefore, its refusal to permit employee Snead and Shop Steward Jackson to meet in Building 216 did not, standing alone, constitute a violation of Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order. Accordingly, I shall order that the complaint herein be dismissed in its entirety. 2/

IT IS HEREBY ORDERED that the complaint in Case No. 72-7482(CA) be, and it hereby is, dismissed.

Administrative Law Judge

This proceeding arises under Executive Order 11491, as amended. Pursuant to the regulations of the Assistant Secretary of Labor for Labor-Management Relations, a Notice of Hearing on the Complaint was issued on June 30, 1978, with reference to alleged violations of sections 19(a)(1) and (16) of the Order.

The case was initiated by a Complaint filed on April 20, 1978, by the Federal Employees Metal Trades Council, AFL-CIO against the Department of Navy, Long Beach Naval Shipyard, Long Beach, California.

A hearing was held in Long Beach, California, on August 22, 1978, at which time all parties were represented and were afforded full opportunity to be heard, adduce evidence, examine and cross-examine witnesses, and argue orally. Thereafter, both parties filed briefs which have been considered. Upon the entire record, from observation of the witnesses and their demeanor, and from all of the testimony and evidence, the following findings, conclusions, and recommendations are made.

Facts

On Friday, March 3, 1978, Willie C. Jackson, a Shop Steward of the Metal Trades Council, received a telephone call from Ed Williams, the Sandblaster Foreman in Shop 71, telling him that an employee, James C. Snead, employed in building 216, wished to have a meeting with Mr. Jackson.

On Monday morning, March 6, 1978, Mr. Jackson went to building 216 to see Mr. Snead but was informed by Foreman Williams at building 216 that Mr. Snead was at the dispensary and not available. Mr. Jackson left and later that day received a telephone call from Foreman Williams that he could see Mr. Snead at 1:00 p.m. on March 7, 1978, (with no mention as to where the meeting would take place).

March 7th, 1978, Shop Steward Jackson went to building 216 and on his arrival he was advised by Mr. Snead to have a seat and Mr. Snead would be right back. While awaiting Mr. Snead's return James L. Lewis the Shop Superintendent of Shop 71, entered and inquired as to what Mr. Jackson was doing there. After being advised by Mr. Jackson that he was there to see Mr. Snead, Mr. Lewis asked if Jackson had permission to be in building 216. Mr. Jackson told Lewis he had Foreman William's permission. Mr. Lewis summoned Foreman Williams who then stated that he had given permission for the interview, but not in building 216. At this point Mr. Jackson asked when and where he could see Mr. Snead and was advised by Foreman Williams that he could see Mr. Snead at 8:00 a.m., March 8th in building 161.

Witnesses Jackson, Snead, Sanders and Johnnie Williams all testified that work in building 216 did not at any time stop while the discussion between Jackson, Snead, Foreman Williams and Superintendent Lewis was taking place on March 7th. Superintendent Lewis was emphatic that all work was stopped when he arrived at building 216 and saw Steward Jackson and Mr. Snead conferring. Foreman Williams was unsure as to whether the machinery was on or off. Superintendent Lewis cited the machinery stoppage as his reason for objecting to a meeting in building 216. The greater weight of the evidence is contrary to Lewis' testimony.

A meeting was held in building 161 on March 8th between Mr. Snead and Steward Jackson after which they requested Foreman Williams to permit them to go to building 216 to observe certain conditions. Williams advised them that he could not grant them permission but agreed to seek guidance from his superiors. Whereupon he placed a telephone call to the Personnel Supervisor for Management who said she would call back in five minutes. On calling back, the Personnel Supervisor told Foreman Williams that a Mr. Soanes, Head Superintendent of the Service Group, would not grant permission for Steward Jackson and Mr. Snead to go to building 216.

It is the position of the Union that Respondent's failure to permit Shop Steward Jackson and employee Snead to meet in building 216 on March 7th and to go to building 216 on March 8th constitute facts which substantiate the charges in their Complaint.

Respondent contends that the refusal to permit the meetings in building 216 did not constitute an unfair labor practice and even if it was found to be a breach of the negotiated agreement (Resp. Ex. 1) it was not an unfair labor practice as contemplated within sections 19(a)(1) and (6).

Issue

Did Respondents' actions in prohibiting Shop Steward Jackson and employee Snead from conferring in building 216 on March 7th and 8th, 1978, constitute an unfair labor practice under sections 19 (a)(1) and (6) of Executive Order 11491, as amended.

While the Complaint alleges a violation of section 19(a)(2), no proof was offered to substantiate a charge under that section of the Executive Order.

Conclusions

Respondents' Exhibit 1 being an agreement, dated February 11, 1974, between Long Beach Naval Shipyard and Federal Employees Metal Trades Council, Long Beach, AFL-CIO, at pages 16 and 17, provides as follows:

Section 6. Any employee in the Unit, who has a complaint or an alleged grievance has the right, and shall be protected in the exercise of that right, to discuss the matter with a Council representative of his choice.

A Unit employee may request the service of a specific Council Representative, either through his supervisor or privately during non-duty hours, such as lunch periods, before and after work.

In those cases where an employee, through his supervisor, requests the services of a Council Representative, that supervisor will arrange the date, time and place at which the employee can expect to meet with the requested Council Representative.

In those cases where an employee, privately during non-duty hours, requests the services of a Council Representative, that Council Representative will so notify his supervisor who will arrange the date, time and place at which the Council Representative can expect to meet with the employee who requested his services.

In either case the responsible supervisor will advise the employee or the Council Representative of the arrangements made.

To expedite the resolution of complaints and grievances and consistent with workload commitments, meetings between employees and Council Representatives will be scheduled promptly and will normally take place in the immediate vicinity of the employee's assigned work site.

It is apparent from the undisputed facts that the Respondent refused to permit the employee Snead and his Union Shop Steward Jackson to meet "in the immediate vicinity of the employee's assigned work site" as provided for in the aforementioned agreement. It is found that the requested "worksite meeting" was a reasonable and feasible demand under the facts in this case.

This admitted conduct on the part of the Respondent is found to be a violation of the terms of the Agreement and to constitute an unfair labor practice under sections 19(a)(1) and (6).

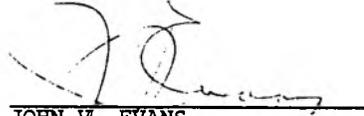

Recommended Order

Pursuant to section 6(b) of Executive Order 11491, as amended, and section 203.26(b) of the Regulations, the Assistant Secretary of Labor for Labor-Management Relations, hereby orders that the Department of Navy, Long Beach Naval Shipyard, Long Beach, California shall:

1. Cease and desist from refusing to permit its employees from meeting with their Council Representative in the immediate vicinity of the employee's assigned work site as provided for in section 6 of Article VII of the Agreement.

2. Post at its Long Beach Naval Shipyard, Department of the Navy, Long Beach, California, copies of the attached notice marked "appendix" on forms to be furnished by the Assistant Secretary of Labor for Labor-Management Relations. Upon receipt of such forms, they shall be signed by the Commanding Officer, Long Beach Naval Shipyard, Department of the Navy, Long Beach, California, and they shall be posted and maintained by him for sixty (60) consecutive days thereafter, in conspicuous places, including all bulletin boards and other places where notices to employees are customarily posted. The Commanding Officer shall take reasonable steps to insure that such notices are not altered or defaced or covered by any other material.

3. The Commanding Officer shall, pursuant to section 203.27 of the regulations, report to the Assistant Secretary in writing within twenty (20) days from date of this Order what steps have been taken to comply with said Order.

Case No. 22-09099(CU)

AMERICAN FEDERATION OF GOVERNMENT EMPLOYEES, AFL-CIO

Petitioner

DECISION AND ORDER CLARIFYING UNIT

This case involved a petition for clarification of unit (CU) filed by the American Federation of Government Employees, AFL-CIO (AFGE) seeking to clarify a unit of guards and security police represented by AFGE Local 2798 by including in said unit employees classified as Supervisory Hospital Police Officer, GS-083-6. The Activity took the position that the subject employees were supervisors within the meaning of Section 2(c) of the Order and should be excluded from the unit on that basis.

Upon a petition duly filed under Section 6 of Executive Order 11491, as amended, a hearing was held before Hearing Officer Robert Hardin. The Hearing Officer's rulings made at the hearing are free from prejudicial error and are hereby affirmed.

The Assistant Secretary found that the employees in the disputed classification were supervisors within the meaning of the Order. He noted that they utilize independent judgment in assigning work, authorizing overtime, approving leave and adjusting employee complaints. Further, they make effective recommendations with regard to employee evaluations, the retention or dismissal of probationary employees and the granting of awards. Under these circumstances, the Assistant Secretary found that the disputed employees were supervisors within the meaning of Section 2(c) of the Order, and he clarified the existing unit consistent with his finding.

Upon the entire record in this case, including the brief filed by the Activity, 2/ the Assistant Secretary finds:

In this proceeding, the Petitioner seeks to clarify a unit represented by the American Federation of Government Employees, Local 2798, AFL-CIO, which unit consists of "All Guards and Security Police employed by and assigned to Washington, D.C. Veterans Administration Hospital," by including employees classified as "Supervisory Hospital Police Officer, GS-083-6." The Activity takes the position that the employees involved are supervisors within the meaning of Section 2(c) of the Order and should be excluded from the unit on that basis.

The employees in the disputed classification are assigned to the Activity's Hospital Police Section which is responsible for enforcing Federal and appropriate state criminal codes as well as Veterans Administration regulations relating to the physical protection of property of the United States Government and personal property on the Hospital grounds. They also control traffic and the parking of privately owned vehicles by enforcing parking regulations.

1/ The name of the Activity appears as amended at the hearing.

2/ A brief submitted by the Petitioner was untimely filed and, therefore, has not been considered.

The record reveals that 23 employees are assigned to the Hospital Police Section, including one GS-10 Supervisory Hospital Police Officer, three GS-6 Supervisory Hospital Police Officers, the classification in question herein, 18 GS-5 Hospital Police Officers and one GS-6 Detective. 3/ Based upon an internal ranking system, the GS-10 Supervisory Hospital Police Officer has been designated a captain while the employees in the disputed classification bear the rank of lieutenant. Special insignia are worn by the lieutenants and the captain denoting their respective ranks.

The Hospital Police Section maintains continuous 24-hour operations, divided into three shifts. The captain is permanently assigned to the day shift while the lieutenants and the other officers work on a rotating basis. Shift assignments for the lieutenants and the officers are made by the captain. Work assignments within each shift are made by the lieutenants. Generally, there are at least three officers per shift, although they may number as many as nine during the day. On occasion, when, due to manpower shortages, there are fewer than three officers assigned to a shift, the lieutenant on duty may perform regular police duties.

In addition to making work assignments, the record reveals that the lieutenants interview candidates for police officer positions, orient new officers or assign other more senior officers to train them, evaluate officers for transfer or promotion purposes, and evaluate probationary employees making recommendations as to their retention or dismissal, which recommendations are generally followed. 4/ The lieutenants also effectively recommend awards, sign off on within-grade increases, authorize overtime, adjust employee complaints, counsel, and, if necessary, admonish employees, and approve or disapprove leave.

Additionally, the lieutenants attend supervisory meetings during which operating policies are evaluated and discussed and have received supervisory training. The evidence further establishes that in the absence of the captain, lieutenants are authorized to act in his place and that this has, in fact, occurred on a number of occasions.

Based on the foregoing circumstances, I find that the lieutenants involved herein are supervisors within the meaning of Section 2(c) of the Order. In this regard, the evidence establishes that they utilize independent judgment in assigning work, authorizing overtime, approving 3/ The eligibility of the GS-6 Detective is not at issue in this proceeding.

4/ On one occasion, the record reveals that the captain independently observed a probationary employee whose termination had been recommended by two lieutenants because of the serious nature of the act giving rise to the dismissal recommendation, but ultimately concurred in that recommendation.

leave and adjusting employee complaints, and that they effectively make recommendations with regard to employee evaluations, the retention or dismissal of probationary employees as well as the granting of awards. Accordingly, as the Activity's employees classified as Supervisory Hospital Police Officer, GS-083-6, are supervisors within the meaning of the Order, 5/ I shall order that they be excluded from the exclusively recognized unit.

ORDER

IT IS HEREBY ORDERED that the unit sought to be clarified herein, which is exclusively represented by the American Federation of Government Employees, Local 2798, AFL-CIO, be, and it hereby is, clarified by excluding from said unit employees classified as Supervisory Hospital Police Officer, GS-083-6.

A/SLMR No. 1161

This case involved an unfair labor practice complaint filed by the National Treasury Employees Union (NTEU) and NTEU Chapter 143 alleging that the Respondent violated Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order by instituting a team concept for the assignment of its inspectional personnel without first affording the NTEU an opportunity to bargain over the procedures management would observe in taking the action involved and its impact on adversely affected employees, and by unilaterally changing certain established terms and conditions of employment without first negotiating in good faith with the NTEU.

The Administrative Law Judge found that the Respondent had engaged in conduct violative of Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order when it changed the workday, workweek and frequency of shift rotation without first bargaining in good faith on these matters which he concluded were within the ambit of Section 11(a) of the Order. He also found that while the decision to adopt a team concept was a reserved management right within the meaning of Section 11(b), the Respondent violated Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order by implementing the new procedure without first affording the NTEU an opportunity to bargain over its implementation and impact.

Noting particularly the absence of exceptions, the Assistant Secretary adopted the findings, conclusions and recommendations of the Administrative Law Judge and ordered the Respondent to cease and desist from the conduct found violative of the Order and take certain affirmative actions.

Devaney issued his Recommended Decision and Order in the above-entitled proceeding, finding that the Respondent had engaged in certain unfair labor practices and recommending that it cease and desist therefrom and take certain affirmative actions as set forth in the attached Administrative Law Judge's Recommended Decision and Order. No exceptions were filed to the Administrative Law Judge's Recommended Decision and Order.

The Assistant Secretary has reviewed the rulings of the Administrative Law Judge made at the hearing and finds that no prejudicial error was committed. The rulings are hereby affirmed. Upon consideration of the Administrative Law Judge's Recommended Decision and Order and the entire record in the subject case, and noting particularly the absence of exceptions, I hereby adopt the Administrative Law Judge's findings, conclusions and recommendations, as modified herein.

3. Prior to January, 1977, for purposes of assignment of work, each of the five separate work locations constituted a separate work assignment. Prior to January, 1977, the regular workday consisted of 8 hours and the normal work-week consisted of 40 hours; however, overtime, between the hours of 5:00 p.m. and 8:00 a.m. and on Sundays and on holidays, was frequently required. Prior to January, 1977, in order to man the border at all times, there were five overlapping shifts of eight hours per shift, Monday through Saturday; and six overlapping shifts of eight hours per shift on Sunday and holidays. These shifts were as follows:

Monday - Saturday

6:00 a.m.	to	2:00 p.m.
8:00 a.m.	to	4:00 p.m.
2:00 p.m.	to	10:00 p.m.
4:00 p.m.	to	12:00 midnight
12 midnight	to	8:00 a.m.

Sunday and Holidays

8:00 a.m.	to	4:00 p.m.
10:00 a.m.	to	6:00 p.m.
11:00 a.m.	to	7:00 p.m.
2:00 p.m.	to	10:00 p.m.
4:00 p.m.	to	12:00 midnight
12:00 midnight	to	8:00 a.m.

4. Prior to January, 1977, inspectors were individually assigned and rotated every four weeks. Rotation could consist of rotating from one shift to another shift at the same work location, from one shift to the same shift at another work location, or from one shift to another shift at another work location. The object and intent was to rotate each inspector through each shift and through all locations to maintain currency and proficiency in the various functions which differed at various work locations as to the nature of the work, that is whether chiefly "primary", or "secondary", or examination of merchandise, invoices and manifests, etc. At some time in the past, El Paso had used a wheel to determine rotation whereby the name of each inspector was placed on the spoke of the wheel and as that spoke moved to a number, which designated a work location and a shift, his rotation was thus determined; but this method had become unsatisfactory and had been abandoned and rotation for a considerable period of time had been determined by management, without any wholly fixed pattern but based on knowledge of prior schedules, to achieve a fair and equitable assignment of inspectors to each shift, some of which were considered undesirable by most inspectors, as well as rotation through each work location. After each schedule was posted, inspectors were permitted to "trade" their respective assignments.

5. Prior to January, 1977, there had been a major exception to the requirement that inspectors rotate shifts and this was the special "school shift", whereby inspectors attending school were permanently assigned to a non-rotating "school shift" starting at 4:00 p.m. and ending at 12:00 midnight during the time that school was in session. When school was not in session their shifts rotated, for example, during summer vacation break, and when an inspector completed, or left school, he/she resumed shift rotation.

At any one time, between ten and twenty inspectors regularly attend college.

6. Prior to January, 1977, the individual rotation of inspectors resulted in each inspector working under various supervisors, indeed, prior to January, 1977, Complainant's witnesses represented that an average of four supervisors had imput on the annual performance evaluation of each inspector. In addition, each inspector tended to be assigned to work with many different inspectors.

7. In September, 1976, management in El Paso began consideration of a "team" concept for the assignment and utilization of inspectors whereby inspectors would be divided into permanent teams and each team, as a unit, would rotate. NTEU, by rumor, became aware that management was considering a "team" concept and Mr. Robert Malwitz, President of Chapter 143, by letter dated September 19, 1976, addressed to District Director William Hughes, demanded to negotiate,

"... regarding the proposed change, from the current situation whereby Inspectors are assigned to shifts to enable them to attend college ... to the proposed situation whereby Inspectors would be lumped into a pool, divided into teams with each team assigned to a different Supervisor, and then each entire team would be rotated to a different shift every four (4) weeks. This, also, affects leave, status, personnel relations, etc.

"... negotiations should commence by no later than October 4, 1976. NTEU Chapter 143 hereby renews its proposal of September 12, 1975. 1/ Since NTEU has already submitted proposals, please provide management's proposals to NTEU, sufficiently in advance to afford time for digestion and preparation for bargaining." (Res. Exh. 1).

8. By letter dated October 1, 1976, Acting District Director John M. Hudson responded to Mr. Malwitz' letter of September 19, 1976, and stated that:

"... since we have no specific proposal we are not at the place to notify you and discuss the questions with you. If the proposal gels into a specific plan, we would want to notify you and have some input and discussion with you.

"In the second paragraph of your letter you talk about a proposal of yours dated September 12, 1975. 2/ We have not been able to locate this proposal in our files. Please forward a copy to us for our information." (Comp. Exh. 1).

9. By letter dated November 19, 1976, Mr. John M. Hudson, for District Director Hughes, advised Mr. Malwitz, President of

1/ In September, 1975, Mr. Charles Easley, then Chief Inspector in El Paso, had mentioned the possibility of a "team" concept and had asked for NTEU's opinion. Mr. Malwitz, after conferring with bargaining unit employees, had advised Mr. Easley that NTEU proposed, as more beneficial, "slot rotation".

2/ It would appear that this proposal, indeed Mr. Easley's mention of a team concept as well, had been oral. Although it does not appear that Complainant ever "forwarded a copy" of its 1975 proposal in response to the letter of October 1, 1976, there is no dispute, as set forth hereinafter, that in 1976 Complainant proposed "slot rotation", which was substantially the method of assignment in effect prior to January, 1977, except that "slot rotation" would have been more precisely controlled essentially like "wheel rotation", a term Complainant uses as synonymous to "slot rotation", although, as Mr. Chapius testified, there may be some distinctions, depending on circumstances, between the two terms.

of Chapter 143; as follows:

"Attached is a circular proposing a change in work assignments for Customs Inspectors at the Port of El Paso, effective date December 5, 1976. (Emphasis supplied.) (Comp. Exh. 2).

The Circular stated, inter alia,

"Each team will rotate on a four-week basis. ..." (Comp. Exh. 2)

10. Mr. Malwitz, by letter dated November 26, 1976, acknowledged receipt of Mr. Hughes' letter of November 19, 1976, and stated:

"... NTEU and Chapter 143 wish to negotiate the concept and its impact upon the affected employees. We hereby renew our demand for negotiations sent to you on September 19, 1976.

"I will be willing to meet with you at a time and place convenient ... to establish ground rules for the negotiations." (Comp. Exh. 3)

11. Respondent responded by letter dated November 30, 1976, stating, in part, as follows:

"... The Director of Inspections & Control contacted you today, Tuesday, November 30, 1976, and it was agreed that NTEU and management meet on December 1, 1976. ... The purpose of the meeting will be to negotiate the impact and/or implementation of the inspectional team concept. ..." (Comp. Exh. 5). (Emphasis supplied.)

12. The parties met on December 1 and Mr. Malwitz opened the meeting by reading a statement (Comp. Exhs. 6, 7 and attachment to Comp. Exh. 8) which, inter alia, requested management to:

- a) advise the union in detail as to the substance and procedures of all contemplated changes;
- b) time and place for negotiations of ground rules.

- c) provide all information used or relied upon in proposing the change;
- d) implementation be deferred until completion of negotiations.

13. Respondent asserted that the following areas were inappropriate for negotiation:

- (a) ground rules for negotiation; and
- (b) background information.

Respondent further stated that only implementation and impact was negotiable (Comp. Exh. 8).

There then followed some discussion of some eleven aspects of problem areas that could arise with the team concept and the parties adjourned to reconvene on December 14, 1976. The minutes, taken by Mrs. Dorothy Clinton accurately reflect the events of December 1, 1976.

14. A letter dated December 8, 1976, from District Director of Customs Hughes addressed to Mr. Malwitz (Comp. Exh. 10) purported to submit the minutes of the December 1st meeting together with proposed duty assignment and a proposed master schedule. Mr. Malwitz did not receive the letter dated December 8, 1976, nor the attachments, until the meeting of December 14, 1976, when a copy was furnished by Mr. Chapuis (Res. Exh. 3).

15. The documents entitled "Duty Assignments" and "Master Schedule - One Year" received by Complainant on December 14, 1976, are particularly significant in that these documents disclosed, for the first time, that Respondent proposed changes in established working conditions which went far beyond the team concept of assignment of Inspectors. Thus, by way of example, the Duty Assignment document disclosed for the first time proposed changes of: a) starting times of all shifts, except the 12 midnight to 8:00 a.m. shift and the shifts at the Import Lot, by 30 minutes; and b) the regular workweek from 40 hours to 42 1/2 hours; and the Master Schedule disclosed, also for the first time, that rotation was to be monthly rather than every four weeks. In addition, the number of shifts was reduced and certain work assignments were changed.

Upon receipt of this information, Complainant requested, and was granted, a 30 minute recess and upon resumption of the meeting of December 14, 1976, requested bargaining on each of the proposed changes, i.e., workday, workweek, work assignments, and rotation, of which Complainant was first informed on December 14, 1976. As noted hereinafter, there was never any negotiation, as requested, as to any of these proposed changes.

16. Respondent by letter dated November 30, 1976, had stated that the purpose of the meeting of December 1 was to "negotiate the impact and/or implementation of the inspectional team concept"; however, although the meeting of December 14, 1976, was a resumption of the discussions begun on December 1, 1976, both the minutes, as taken by Mrs. Clinton (Res. Exh. 3), and the testimony, demonstrated that the parties discussed at some length the proposed decision to adopt a team concept. Complainant, while not withdrawing its demand to negotiate ground rules, agreed not to make an issue of its demand for ground rules. Complainant urged slot rotation as a more acceptable alternative which would achieve all the objectives sought by management. Complainant's primary objections to the team concept proposed by Respondent were: a) loss of freedom to trade shifts; b) isolation of Inspectors, both as to Supervisors and other Inspectors; and c) loss of a school shift. Respondent replied that nothing in the team concept precluded the supervisor allowing changes of shifts and that a single supervisor for each team would permit better evaluation for promotion.

It became clear that the school shift was of controlling importance. Complainant wanted the existing 4-12 school shift and stated:

"... the Union will accept the team concept in its entirety if Customs will give them a school shift." (Res. Exh. 3, p. 8).

Both from the minutes, which I find accurately reflect in most respects, the substance of the meeting of December 14, 1976, and from the testimony of the parties, it is clear that when Complainant referred to the school shift it meant the 4-12 shift and no other. Indeed the minutes further reflect the following statement by Mr. Chapuis,

"Mr. Chapuis said ... that the union would accept the Team Concept with the modification of a 4/12 shift for students." (Res. Exh. 3, p. 10).

Mr. Chapuis testified that Complainant

"... never offered to agree to the midnight to 8:00 shift." (Tr. 215).

Respondent had offered as a solution to the school shift sought by Complainant: a) rotation of all shifts on an annual basis which would permit Inspectors desiring to attend school to schedule their classes, either during the day or at night for a complete term; or b) a 12 midnight to 8:00 a.m. school shift would be provided if Complainant would supply a minimum of 12 Inspector-students. Mr. Malwitz stated that he was without authority, based on the instructions of his members to agree on anything other than Complainant's proposed slot rotation or the team concept with a 4-12 midnight school shift and requested a 10 day recess in order to poll his members on the various alternatives, including Complainant's proposed slot rotation. Mr. Chapuis stated that he would agree to the requested ten day recess,

"If the pole(sic) is to be conducted only on those two propositions of the Team Concept as proposed or the Team Concept with the special schedule [12 midnight to 8:00 a.m.]. ..." (Res. Exh. 3, p. 10).

Mr. Malwitz refused to limit the poll to the two choices and the following dialogue occurred:

"Mr. Chapuis replied, Since you do not accept that, we will as management, notify you that the Team Concept will go into effect on January 3, 1977.

"Mr. Malwitz asked if management was willing to discuss the mechanics and implementation and impact on this thing.

"Mr. Chapuis replied we can discuss it at another meeting. Perhaps Thursday the 16th at 10:00 in my office.

"The meeting was adjourned at 4:45 p.m." (Res. Exh. 3, p. 10).

17. The parties did meet on December 16, 1976, in Mr. Chapuis' office at which time Mr. Malwitz testified:

"Mr. Chapuis delivered a prepared statement to the effect that it was management's understanding that negotiation had been completed on the 14th of of December and that they would not continue to negotiate. All they would do is provide information from that point on.

* * * *

"We objected to that and said that we wanted to continue negotiation, that no agreement had been reached and that we still had many items that we wanted to negotiate." (Tr. 78).

The minutes of the December 16, 1976 meeting, taken by Mrs. Lilita Clark (Comp. Exh. 17) fully confirm Mr. Malwitz's testimony and further note, inter alia:

[Mr. Chapuis] "... there will be no further negotiations on impact or implementation.

* * * *

[Mr. Malwitz] "NTEU continues to want to negotiate regarding impact and implementation of the proposed scheduling change, specifically the two major concerns which focus upon employees attending school and work conditions and morale."

* * * *

"It is NTEU's position that this presents a fait accompli. NTEU requests good faith negotiations over the impact and implementation of the scheduling changes, and requests further negotiation sessions. ..."

[Mr. Chapuis] "It is management's position that negotiations on impact and implementation were completed last week when you were given management's decision that the team concept would go into effect January 2, 1977. At the meeting today we will be glad to provide you with any information we have, but there will be no further negotiation on impact or implementation.

[Mr. Malwitz] "On December 14, 1976, NTEU learned that the U.S. Customs Service management in El Paso contemplated a change whereby shifts would cover 8 1/2 hour periods rather than the 8 hour periods as had been past practice. NTEU, Chapter 143, hereby demands to negotiate regarding this proposed change.

"It is our understanding that the subject matter of duty hours is negotiable. It is also our understanding, based upon recent decisions of the Assistant Secretary of Labor Management Relations that the status quo must be maintained until the negotiation agreements are met.

[Mr. Chapuis] "It is management's position that negotiations on impact and implementation were completed last week when you were given management's decision that the team concept would go into effect January 2, 1977. At the meeting today we will be glad to provide you with any information we have, but there will be no further negotiations on impact or implementation.

"Mr. Malwitz then asked how the proposed change (team concept) will be put into effect, how the teams will be selected and what provisions had been made to make this thing operational.

"Mr. Chapuis stated that management will do it in an equitable way. ..." (Comp. Exh. 17).

Mr. Chapuis testified that the minutes (Comp. Exh. 17) fairly represented what occurred at the meeting of December 16, 1976.

18. Respondent implemented the team concept, as it had proposed on November 19, 1976, without a school shift on January 2, 1977; and at the same time changed the hours of work and regular workweek as shown on the "Duty Assignment" document and changed the frequency of shift rotation from every 4 weeks to monthly as shown on the "Master Schedule", both documents having been disclosed to Complainant for the first time at the meeting of December 14, 1976.

19. By letters dated January 4, 1977 (Comp. Exh. 12) and January 10, 1977 (Comp. Exh. 13) addressed to District Director of Customs William F. Hughes, Mr. Malwitz renewed Complainant's request "to negotiate the program management is unilaterally implementing on January 2, 1977 ... to negotiate regarding the impact and implementation of the scheduling change ... to negotiate regarding the change in work tours and hours of work." (Comp. Exh. 12); and "... NTEU Chapter 143 hereby formally requests that negotiation regarding the scheduling change ... be re-convened for the purpose of reaching an agreement acceptable to all parties." (Comp. Exh. 13).

20. Respondent replied to Complainant's letters of January 4 and 10, 1977, by letter dated February 15, 1977, in which it stated:

"It is the position of this office that negotiation on the impact and implementation of the team concept was concluded in our meeting of December 14, 1976. Therefore, no purpose could be served by reopening negotiations." (Comp. Exh. 14).

21. Respondent concedes, as it must as shown by the record, that the change of starting time, the increase in the regular workday and the corresponding increase in regular workweek, and the frequency of shift rotations, from every four weeks to monthly were never discussed on December 14, 1976, and Mr. Malwitz testified, without contradiction, that he requested bargaining as to each matter on December 14, 1976, when the proposed changes were first disclosed; that the request for bargaining on the proposed changes in duty hours was renewed on December 16, 1976; and that the request for bargaining on hours of work and work tours was repeated by Mr. Malwitz's letters of January 4 and 10, 1977.

Respondent asserts that, by Article VI, Section 1 g of the Basic Agreement, Complainant has waived all right to negotiate concerning the change in starting time, regular workday, regular workweek and frequency of shift rotation. Article VI provides as follows:

"MANAGEMENT RIGHTS

"1. In all actions and agreements, management reserves the right, in accordance with applicable laws and regulations, to:

[a-f are taken directly and, so far as material, in haec verba, from Section 12b(1)-(6) of the Order.]

"g. establish hours of work and tours of duty; ..." (Res. Exh. 2, p. 9)

22. Mr. Chapuis' memorandum dated November 8, 1976, to Mr. Jeff Spinks, Chief, Labor Management Relations Program Branch (Res. Exh. 4, Attachment 1) transmitted a copy of a proposed circular, undated, subject: Inspection Teams (Res. Exh. 4, Attachment 2), and Mr. Spinks responded by letter dated November 15, 1976 (Res. Exh. 4). There is no indication in the memorandum, the proposed circular or in Mr. Spinks' reply of any intention to change the starting time, regular workday, regular workweek, or frequency of rotation. Indeed, as to frequency of rotation the proposed circular stated, "Each team will rotate on a four-week basis. ..." A considerably abbreviated version of the same circular, dated November 16, 1976, was delivered to Complainant by letter dated November 19, 1976 (Comp. Exh. 2), which also stated, "Each team will rotate on a four-week basis. ..."

23. The principal purposes of the 30 minute expansion of the regular workday, which did not apply to the graveyard shift (12 midnight to 8 a.m.) or change the regular hours of work at the commercial import lot, were: a) to permit inspection of uniforms prior to the beginning of the shift; and b) to disseminate information and instructions to Inspectors at team briefings. Previously, there had been no one period for briefings, inspection of uniforms, etc., and the supervisors had to give instructions to individual Inspectors. Chief Inspector Lewis M. Jones had been opposed, initially, to the expansion of the regular workday because he could see no advantage to it; but Mr. Jones testified that he had found the change most helpful because it had given supervisors a point at which badly needed information could be disseminated to Inspectors.

CONCLUSIONS

A. Decision to Adopt Team Concept was a Reserved Right of Management

Section 11(b) of the Order provides, in part, as follows:

"... the obligation to meet and confer does not include matters with respect to ... its organization; the number of employees; and the numbers, types, and grades of positions assigned to an organizational unit, ... or tours of duty ... This does not preclude the parties from negotiating agreements providing appropriate arrangements for employees adversely affected by the impact of realignment of work forces. ..."

There is no dispute that the proposed team concept concerned "personnel policies and practices and matters affecting working conditions" as to which negotiations would have been required, pursuant to Section 11(a) of the Order, unless excepted from the obligation to bargain by Section 11(b) of the Order. 3/

By letter dated November 30, 1976, and at the first meeting on December 1, 1976, Respondent quite clearly asserted that "Only the implementation and impact on employees is negotiable. ..." which position was again asserted at the commencement of the meeting on December 14, 1976. Although the parties on December 14, 1976, plainly bargained on the proposed team concept, no agreement was reached and the fact that Respondent voluntarily bargained on a non-mandatory subject of bargaining did not make the matter a mandatory subject for bargaining. Accordingly, when Respondent on December 14, 1976, announced that, since no agreement had been reached, it would implement the team concept on January 3, 1977, Respondent did not thereby violate Section 19(a)(6) of the Order by refusing to bargain on the decision to implement the team concept if such matter were excepted from the obligation to negotiate pursuant to Section 11(b) of the Order as contended by Respondent. cf., Local 1485, National Federation of Federal Employees and Coast Guard Base, Miami, Florida, FLRC No. 75A-77, 4 FLRC 421, 424-425 (1976). Of course, Respondent was required, upon request, to negotiate in good faith on the impact and implementation of such decision even if the decision to change established conditions of employment were a reserved right of management pursuant to Section 11(b) of the Order. AFGE Local 1940 and Plum Island Animal Disease Laboratory, Department of Agriculture, Greenport, N.Y., FLRC No. 71A-11, 1 FLRC 101 (1971); Southeast Exchange Region of the Army and Air Force Exchange Service, Rosewood Warehouse, Columbia, South Carolina, A/SLMR No. 656, 6 A/SLMR 237 (1976); Department of Treasury, Internal Revenue Service, Brookhaven Service Center, A/SLMR No. 814, 7 A/SLMR 255 (1977); Pennsylvania Army National Guard and Association of Civilian Technicians, Inc., A/SLMR No. 475, 5 A/SLMR 47 (1975).

3/ Respondent, both at the hearing and in its Brief, asserts that its obligation to bargain on the team concept decision is excepted by Section 11(b) of the Order; but Respondent has not asserted that such decision was a reserved right of management pursuant to Section 12(b) of the Order. Accordingly, no opinion is expressed as to whether Section 12(b) of the Order is applicable.

Complainant asserts that the change from slot rotation was merely a procedural variation to implement the basic management decision that employees would rotate; that the key words in applying the 11(b) staffing language are "numbers, types, and grades of positions of employees, work project or tour of duty" (Brief, pp. 28, 29); and that there was no change in the numbers, types and grades of employees. Accordingly, Complainant contends that both Respondent's proposed team concept as well as its counterproposal, slot rotation, were negotiable as neither proposal was determinative of the numbers, types and grades of positions or employees assigned to an organizational unit or tour of duty and, therefore, not exempted from the obligation to bargain of Section 11(a) of the Order. Complainant's position, which has been well and forcefully presented, must be rejected for the reason that the change was significantly more than a procedural variation for implementation of the basic management decision that employees would rotate.

Establishment of a team concept consisted of dividing the inspectional staff into six teams, each team to consist of one supervisor, one Senior Inspector, sixteen or more Inspectors and one Detector Dog Unit; and each team would then rotate through all Inspection and Control functions of the Port of El Paso. In addition the circular, dated November 16, 1976, and transmitted to Complainant by letter dated November 19, 1976, stated that, as part of the contemplated action, management would "streamline and consolidate the inspectional apparatus within the Port of El Paso." On December 14, 1976, Respondent's Duty Assignment spelled out, inter alia, the consolidation of duty assignments and reduction of the number of shifts (6:00 a.m. to 2:00 p.m. and 2:00 p.m. to 10:00 p.m. Monday through Saturday; 10:00 a.m. to 6:00 p.m.; 11:00 a.m. to 7:00 p.m.; 2:00 p.m. to 10:00 p.m. on Sunday and holidays were eliminated).

Even if viewed in isolation, Respondent's decision to divide its inspectional staff into permanent teams, each team under the supervision of a supervisor and with a Senior Inspector assigned to each team, directly related to the "organization" of the agency which is excepted from the obligation to bargain by Section 11(b) of the Order. Federal Employees Metal Trades Council of Charleston, AFL-CIO and Charleston Naval Shipyard, Charleston, South Carolina, FLRC No. 72A-33, 1 FLRC 445 (1973); Local 1485, National Federation of Federal Employees and Coast Guard Base, Miami Beach, Florida, FLRC No. 75A-77, 4 FLRC 421 (1976). In the Coast Guard Base case, supra, the Council decision stated in pertinent part as follows:

"... section 11(b) ... excepts from the section 11(a) obligation to bargain matters with respect to, among other things, the agency's 'organization.' In this regard, the Council has previously stated in its Charleston decision, with respect to a proposal concerning 'assignment of each unit employee to one appropriate civilian supervisor,' as follows:

'In our opinion, the union proposal must be regarded as a subject within the above quoted provisions of section 11(b) of the Order, i.e., one about which the agency may, but is not required to negotiate. The supervisory structure of an agency and the designation of the supervisory positions to which nonsupervisory positions are assigned are essential parts of the overall organization of an agency, i.e., the administrative and functional structure of an agency.'
[1 FLRC at 448]

"In our view ... the instant disputed provision ["Such work shall be done under proper supervision"] also relates principally to the assignment of unit (non-supervisory) employees to supervisors. Hence ... we must find that such provision ... Deals with a matter with respect to the 'organization' of the agency and is excepted from the obligation to bargain under section 11(b) of the Order." (4 FLRC at 431-432)

Respondent's decision to institute a team concept not only concerned its "organization" but also concerned the number, types and grades of positions of employees assigned to an organizational unit - in this instance to each team. Thus, for example, one Senior Inspector was to be assigned to each team. Moreover, by setting up teams, Respondent could achieve better balance of experience and manpower on each team, all of which related to and was determinative of staffing for each work location and shift.

Viewed in whole, Respondent's team concept further contemplated, and provided for, the elimination of certain tours of duty and for realignment of duty assignments. Thus, Duty Assignment "A" was 12 midnight - 8:00 a.m. shifts at Paso Del Norte, Bridge of the Americas and Ysleta, plus private aircraft arriving at El Paso International Airport; Duty Assignment "B" was 7:30 - 4:00 p.m. shift at Paso Del Norte Bridge; Duty Assignment "C" was 3:30 - 12 midnight shift at Paso Del Norte and Ysleta; Duty Assignment "D" was 7:30 to 4:00 p.m. shift at Bridge of Americas; Duty Assignment "E" was 3:30 - 12 midnight shift at Bridge of the Americas; and Duty Assignment "F" was 8:30 - 5:00 p.m. shift at the Import Lot, Airport and Railroad and the 7:30 - 4:00 p.m. shift at Ysleta Station. In AFGE Local 1940 and Plum Island Animal Disease Laboratory, Department of Agriculture, Greenport, N.Y., FLRC No. 71A-11, 1 FLRC 101 (1971), the Council stated:

"It is plain ... that the establishment or change of tours of duty was intended to be excluded from the obligation to bargain under section 11(b)." (1 FLRC at 103)

In Federal Employees Metal Trades Council of Charleston and U.S. Naval Supply Center, Charleston, South Carolina, FLRC No. 71A-52, 1 FLRC 236 (1972), the Council further commented on its Plum Island decision as follows:

"... In the facts of that case [Plum Island], which dealt with a situation of round-the-clock operations and a work schedule of rotating tours of duty, the number and duration of the tours were integrally related to the numbers and types of workers assigned to those tours. Together they determined the agency's staffing pattern for accomplishing the work" (1 FLRC at 240).

In International Association of Fire Fighters, Local F-111 and Griffiss Air Force Base, Rome, N.Y., FLRC No. 71A-30, 1 FLRC 323 (1973), the Council, after noting the adoption of the present language of 11(b) in E.O. 11491 and the accompanying explanation, Labor-Management Relations in the Federal Service (1971), stated:

"It is evident from the foregoing that, under both E.O. 10988 and E.O. 11491, the organization of an agency, as well as its patterns of staffing that organization, were excluded from the obligation to bargain by the agency.

"The term 'organization' of an agency is customarily recognized to mean the administrative and functional structure or systematic grouping of work, of an agency to accomplish its mission. ..." (1 FLRC at 330).

Accordingly, Respondent's decision to institute the team concept, and Respondent's decision to eliminate certain shifts and to realign Duty Assignments to carry out its team concept concerned its organization and administrative and functional structure and was determinative of its staffing pattern. Therefore, such decisions were excepted from the 11(a) obligation to negotiate by the provisions of Section 11(b) of the Order. Further, Article VI 1.g. of the parties' Basic Agreement reserved to management the right to establish hours of work and tours of duty.

B. Change of the Regular Workday, the Regular Workweek and the Frequency of Shift Rotation were Mandatory Subjects for Bargaining

In NAGE Local R 12-183 and McClellan Air Force Base, California, FLRC No. 75A-81, 4 FLRC 354 (1976) it was stated:

"... the Council consistently has adhered to the principle that a proposal is excepted from the agency's obligation to bargain under section 11(b) if, in the circumstances of a particular case, such proposal is integrally related to and consequently determinative of the staffing patterns of the agency, that is, the numbers, type and/or grades of positions or employees assigned to an organizational unit, work project or tour of duty." (4 FLRC at 356).

The decisions of the Assistant Secretary are to like effect. See, Department of the Treasury, Internal Revenue Service, Chicago, District Office, Chicago, Illinois, A/SLMR No. 962 (1978).

In this case, Respondent increased the regular workday by 30 minutes and the regular workweek by 2 1/2 hours. However, desirable or beneficial such change may have been, such change was not integrally related to and did not determine or affect in any manner Respondent's staffing patterns, nor, of course, did the change of hours of work affect in any manner the numbers, type or grades of positions or employees assigned to any team or to any shift. That increase of work hours was not essential to implementation of a team concept was firmly shown by: a) the testimony of Chief Inspector Jones; b) the fact that inspection of uniforms and dissemination of information to Inspectors had been accomplished in the past without benefit of an inspection-briefing period prior to the beginning of each shift; and c) the absence of such inspection-briefing at the Import Lot and for the 12 midnight to 8:00 a.m. shifts.

Nor was the change in frequency of rotation integrally related to or determinative of Respondent's staffing patterns. Indeed, Respondent's proposal to Complainant (Comp. Exh. 2) specifically stated that "Each team will rotate on a four-week basis. ..." and it was not until Respondent produced its Master Schedule on December 14, 1976, that there was any indication that rotation was to be monthly, rather than every four weeks.

Recognizing that these changes were not, under the circumstances of this case, exempt from the obligation to negotiate, Respondent asserts that Article VI 1 g of the Basic Agreement constitutes an express waiver by Complainant of the right to negotiate concerning these matters. Article VI 1 g reserves to management the right to

"g. establish hours of work and tours of duty."

While a right to negotiate may be waived, the Assistant Secretary has made it clear that a waiver under the Order must be clear and unmistakable. NASA, Kennedy Space Center, Florida, A/SLMR No. 223, 2 A/SLMR 566, 569 (1972); Department of the Treasury, Internal Revenue Service, Southwest Region, Dallas, Texas, A/SLMR No. 858, 7 A/SLMR 523 (1977); Department of the Treasury, Internal Revenue Service, Chicago District Office, Chicago, Illinois, A/SLMR No. 962 (1978). Any intention to waive the right to bargain over so basic a right as the regular workday or the regular workweek would require language much more direct and specific than "establish hours or work and tours of duty". Such language does not indicate more than the right to establish the starting times and/or the number of shifts, an interpretation fully consistent with prior practice. As noted above, prior to January, 1977, Respondent had five shifts Monday through Saturday and six shifts Sunday and holidays, each of which was 8 hours. The only regular workday which varied was the shift at the Import Lot which was 8:30 a.m. to 5:00 p.m. No evidence or testimony was presented as to the bargaining history, intent or purpose of subsection "g"; nor was there any evidence or testimony as to whether the work hours at the Import Lot had been in existence prior to negotiation of the Basic Agreement (effective September 13, 1972) or had originated thereafter or whether such work hours had resulted from negotiation.

The precise meaning of subsection "g" is, at best, ambiguous and subsection "g" does not, in my opinion, spell out a clear and unmistakable intention by Complainant to waive its right to bargain over a change in the established regular workday and regular workweek. Indeed, the qualification of Article VI, "in accordance with applicable laws and regulations, to: g. establish hours of work and tours of duty" appears to have been a restatement of Section 11(b) rights. Structurally, Article VI a-f restate the provisions of 12(b) of the Order and g-i restates the substance of 11(b) of the Order. Plum Island, supra, had stated that "... the establishment or change of tours of duty was intended to be excluded from the obligation to bargain under section 11(b) ... Clearly, the number of its work shifts or tours of duty, and the duration of the shifts, comprise an essential and integral part of the 'staffing patterns' necessary to perform the work of the agency." (1 FLRC at 103). The Basic Agreement was signed on August 18, 1972, and was approved September 13, 1972. The U.S. Naval Supply Center, Charleston South Carolina, case, supra issued thereafter on November 24, 1972, held that "Absent this integral relationship to staffing pattern, this proposal [to affirm Monday through Friday as the basic workweek] does not conflict with section 11(b), and Plum Island is inapposite." (1 FLRC at 240). So viewed, Article VI, subsection g is merely the incorporation of Section 11(b) as regards hours of work and tours of duty and, as the increase of the regular workday and regular workweek was not integrally related to Respondent's staffing pattern, "in accordance with applicable laws", Respondent was obligated to negotiate, as Complainant requested, prior to implementing the change in established regular workday and workweek. If, contrary to this conclusion, Complainant had waived its right to negotiate on the change of the established workday and workweek, Respondent was, nevertheless required to negotiate on the impact and implementation of such change, as Complainant had also requested. cf. New Mexico Air National Guard, Department of Military Affairs, Office of the Adjutant General, Santa Fe, New Mexico, A/SLMR No. 362, 4 A/SLMR 176 (1974).

Nor do I find in either Section 11(b) of the Order or in Article VI "g" of the Basic Agreement any basis whatever for exemption or waiver of Complainant's right to negotiate on Respondent's proposed change in frequency of rotation. Accordingly, as Complainant had requested bargaining on this change of established conditions of employment, Respondent was required to negotiate before implementing this change.

C. Respondent Did Not Bargain in Good Faith

Respondent was required to bargain in good faith on: a) the impact and implementation of the team concept, elimination of shifts and realignment of Duty Assignments; b) the proposed change of the regular workday and regular workweek and/or impact and implementation of such change; and c) the proposed change of frequency of rotation. Complainant requested such bargaining. For the reasons stated hereinafter, Respondent did not bargain in good faith.

With full recognition that there may be mutual benefit from early discussion of contemplated changes of established conditions of employment with representatives of its employees, Respondent was not required to do so and its refusal to do so was not a violation of any obligation under the Order.

Respondent delivered to Complainant on November 19, 1976, its Circular which announced its intention to establish a team concept effective December 5, 1976. Complainant requested negotiation and the first meeting began at 2:00 p.m. and ended at 4:45 p.m. As the testimony and minutes show, this meeting concerned, entirely, Respondent's position that only implementation and impact of the team concept was negotiable; rejection of Complainant's request for ground rules negotiation and rejection of Complainant's request for background information; presentation of Complainant's position; and outline problem areas that could arise from the team concept. Respondent did agree to defer the effective date of the team concept.

The second meeting was held on December 14, 1976, beginning at 10:00 a.m. and ending at 4:45 p.m. Neither in the Circular delivered to Complainant on November 19, 1976, nor at the meeting of December 1, 1976, had Respondent disclosed: a) any realignment of Duty Assignments or elimination of any shifts; b) any change of hours of work. c) any change in frequency of rotation. Indeed, the Circular specifically stated that "Each team will rotate on a four-week basis". However, at the December 14, 1976, meeting Respondent produced, and delivered to Complainant at the meeting, a Duty Assignment which disclosed for the first time the change of the regular workday and regular workweek, except at the Import Lot and on the 12 midnight to 8:00 a.m. shift; the realignment of duty assignments; the elimination of shifts (there were to be only three basic shifts: 7:30-4 p.m.; 3:30 to 12:00 midnight; 12:00 midnight to 8:00 a.m., rather than 5 shifts Mon. - Sat. and 6 on Sun. and holidays, plus the existing 8:30-5:00 p.m. shift at the Import Lot). At the same time, Respondent delivered to Complainant a Master Schedule which disclosed, contrary to the statement on the Circular, that rotation was to be monthly, rather than every 4 weeks. Complainant was granted a 30 minute recess to consider the information supplied and Mr. Malwitz testified that he requested negotiation on each item, i.e., change of the regular workday and workweek, frequency of rotation and realignment of duty assignments. These matters were not reached on December 14, 1976.

Although, for reasons set forth above, Respondent was not required to negotiate its decision to adopt a team concept, including realignment of duty assignments and elimination of overlapping shifts, Respondent was required to negotiate concerning the impact and implementation thereof. Respondent, notwithstanding its assertion that it would negotiate only impact and implementation of the team concept, in fact negotiated on the decision to adopt the team concept. It became clear that the primary roadblock to agreement on the team concept was a school shift for Inspectors. This affected about 1/5 of the Inspectional staff and, clearly, was a primary concern of Complainant. Inspectors attending school had, in the past, been assigned to the 4:00 p.m. to midnight shift. Complainant offered to agree to the team concept if the 4-12 school shift were retained. To be sure, Respondent made two counterproposals: First, that Inspectors all be assigned to a single shift for one year; Second, that the 12 midnight to 8:00 a.m. shift would be the school shift if Complainant could supply sufficient volunteers. Complainant objected to conditioning a school shift on its supplying volunteers; but, more important, Complainant's negotiator made it clear that his authority was limited to retention of the 4-12 shift as the school shift and requested a recess to permit a further poll of his members. Respondent offered a recess if the poll were based on questions suggested by it; Complainant refused to limit its poll of its members to only some alternatives whereupon Respondent refused to agree to a recess of negotiations and announced that, since Complainant refused its offer of a 12 midnight to 8:00 a.m. school shift, it was unilaterally implementing the team concept on January 3, 1977.

At this point, Mr. Malwitz asked if management was willing to discuss the mechanics and implementation and impact of the team concept and Mr. Chapuis replied "... we can discuss it at another meeting." and December 16, 1976, was agreed upon as the date for the next meeting. As noted above, beyond requesting bargaining on the change of the regular workday and workweek and frequency of rotation, these matters had not been reached when the meeting of December 14, 1976, was terminated.

The parties assembled at 10:00 a.m. on December 16, 1976, to discuss the proposed team concept. Mr. Chapuis opened the meeting with the statement that,

"... it is management's position that negotiation on impact and implementation were completed last week when you were given management's decision that the team concept would be into effect January 2, 1977."

Complainant requested negotiation regarding impact and implementation on the team concept, specifically as to employees attending school, work conditions and morale; specifically requested bargaining on the change of duty hours; and requested information on how the team concept would be put into effect, how the teams would be selected, and what provisions had been made to make the team concept operational, to which Mr. Chapuis replied "management will do it in an equitable way". The meeting adjourned at 10:25 a.m.

By letters dated January 4 and 10, 1977, Complainant renewed its request for negotiations and Respondent by letter dated February 15, 1977, replied:

"it is the position of this office that negotiations on the impact and implementation of the team concept was concluded in our meeting of December 14, 1976. Therefore, no purpose could be served by reopening negotiations."

Throughout, Respondent was devious, to say the least. From the record, it is clear that, if not by November 16, 1976, when it prepared the Circular delivered to Complainant on November 19, 1976, at least prior to the meeting of December 1, 1976, it had decided on the realignment of duty assignments, the consolidation of shifts to three basic shifts, plus the existing shift at the Import Lot, change of frequency of rotation and to increase the regular workday from 8 to 8 1/2 hours and the regular workweek from 40 to 42 1/2 hours; but at no time prior to, or at the meeting of December 1, 1976, did it give Complainant any of the information relating thereto even though Complainant had requested, inter alia, "detail as to the substance and procedures of all contemplated changes". Indeed, on December 1, 1976, Respondent refused to provide Complainant with any information characterizing Complainant's whole request as "background information", whereas, background information had been only a part of Complainant's request.

Although Respondent purported to have written a letter dated December 8, 1976, addressed to Mr. Malwitz which contained, as attachments, the minutes of the December 1st meeting, the proposed duty assignments and the master schedule, the record shows, and I find, that Mr. Malwitz did not receive the letter until a copy, with attachments, was delivered to him after the commencement of the December 14, 1976 meeting.

Under the circumstances, Respondent's bargaining on the team concept decision is highly suspect. The effect was that Respondent, by purporting to negotiate on the decision to adopt the team concept, diverted bargaining away from the change in the established workday, etc., and after ritualistic "bargaining" on the team concept decision, announced that, because Complainant had not accepted its offer, it was implementing the team concept on January 3, 1977.

For reasons stated hereinabove, the decision to adopt the team concept was a reserved right of management and Respondent's announcement on December 14, 1976, that it intended to implement the team concept was not, therefore, a refusal to bargain; however, Respondent was required to negotiate in good faith with regard to the impact and implementation of that decision. Even if the school shift were viewed as part of impact and implementation, Respondent did not bargain in good faith. To be sure, Respondent did make two offers. One was that all Inspectors remain on an assigned shift for one year, a proposal Respondent must have known would be rejected and which Respondent accorded scant attention. The other was that the midnight to 8:00 a.m. shift constitute the school shift. Complainant offered to agree to the team concept if the 4-12 shift were retained as the school shift. Respondent rejected Complainant's offer without stating any reason and when Complainant's chief negotiator, Mr. Malwitz, made it clear that he was without authority to agree to the team concept without retention of the 4-12 school shift and sought an adjournment to poll his members, Respondent refused to grant a recess unless the questions submitted to the membership were framed by Respondent and when Complainant refused to so limit its poll, Respondent announced that it was going to implement the team concept.

But as to impact and implementation of the team concept, Respondent, on December 14, 1976, recognizing that there had been no resolution and when Mr. Malwitz asked "if management was willing to discuss the mechanics and implementation and impact of the team concept", Mr. Chapuis replied:

"... we can discuss it at another meeting."

Complainant had not been informed of the proposed change of the regular workday, the regular workweek, or the frequency of rotation until after commencement of the December 14, 1976 meeting, and beyond requesting negotiations these matters were not reached on December 14, 1976.

Thus, at the conclusion of the December 14, 1976, meeting, there had been no bargaining on the proposed change of the regular workday and workweek or the frequency of rotation which, for reasons stated above, were mandatory subjects for bargaining; nor had there been any good faith bargaining on the impact and implementation of the team concept. Even if the change of the regular workday and workweek were deemed a reserved right of management by virtue of subsection "g" of Article VI of the Basic Agreement, there had not been any negotiations as to impact and implementation. Indeed, Respondent had not given Complainant any reasonable prior notice of such proposed changes and even if Complainant had not specifically requested bargaining on these matters until December 16, and Mr. Malwitz's testimony to the contrary, i.e., that he did request bargaining on December 14 after he was given the documents which disclosed, for the first time, such proposed changes, was uncontradicted and has been fully credited, Complainant's December 16, 1976, request to negotiate would have been timely.

Notwithstanding its agreement, at the conclusion of the December 14 meeting, to discuss impact and implementation at another meeting, which meeting was fixed for December 16, 1976, when the December 16, 1976 meeting opened, Respondent announced that "... negotiations on impact and implementation were completed last week ..." Respondent's only response to the renewal of Complainant's demand to negotiate on the change of the regular workday and workweek was to reiterate that "negotiations on impact and implementation were completed last week." When Complainant asked how the proposed team concept would be put into effect, how the teams were to be selected, etc., Respondent simply asserted that "management will do it in an equitable way."

The refusal of Respondent to negotiate with respect to the change of the regular workday and workweek and the frequency of rotation was, without more, a violation of 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order and the refusal of Respondent to negotiate with respect to the impact and implementation of the team concept at all times on and after December 16, 1976, also, without more was a violation of Sections 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order. Indeed, Respondent refused to discuss, or furnish any information on December 16, 1976, concerning selection of the teams, provisions to make the team concept operational, or to consider any of the other matters which Complainant had outlined as problem areas on December 1, 1976. Respondent adhered to its position and, on February 15, 1977, in response to Complainant's letters of January 4 and 10, 1977, which renewed Complainant's request for negotiation, stated:

"It is the position of this office that negotiations on the impact and implementation of the team concept was concluded in our meeting of December 14, 1976. Therefore, no purpose could be served by reopening negotiations."

On January 2 or 3, 1977, Respondent implemented unilateral changes in terms and conditions of employment in violation of Sections 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order. In order to effectuate the purposes and policies of the Order, Respondent will, pursuant to Department of the Treasury, Internal Revenue Service, Southwest Region, Dallas, Texas, A/SLMR No. 858, 7 A/SLMR 524, 525 n.1 (1977), be required to reestablish the terms and conditions of employment in existence prior to the unilateral changes and maintain such terms and conditions during the period in which the parties are engaged in bargaining with respect to the proposed changes.

RECOMMENDATION

RECOMMENDED DECISION AND ORDER

This proceeding arises under Executive Order 11491, as amended. Pursuant to the regulations of the Assistant Secretary of Labor for Labor-Management Relations, a Notice of Hearing on the Complaint was issued on August 4, 1978, with reference to alleged violations of section 19(a)(1) and (3) of the Order.

The case was initiated by a Complaint filed on May 25, 1978, by Edward R. McCrary, President of AFGE, Local 2947, AFL-CIO against Nellis AFB, 57th Field Maintenance Squadron, Department of the Air Force, Nellis AFB, Nevada.

A hearing was held in Los Angeles, California, on September 26, 1978, at which time a motion to intervene was filed by the American Federation of Government Employees National Office by H. E. McLeod, the National Vice President. There being no objection said motion to intervene was granted.

All parties were represented and were afforded full opportunity to be heard, adduce evidence, examine and cross-examine witnesses, and argue orally. Briefs by all parties were filed and have been considered. Upon the entire record, from observation of the witnesses and their demeanor, and from all of the testimony and evidence, the following findings, conclusions, and recommendations are made.

Facts

In May of 1974, Harold E. McLeod, who was employed as a work leader at Nellis Air Force Base, ran for the office of National Vice President of the American Federation of Government Employees Union and was elected. The election, however, was protested and was not decided by the Department of Labor for 13 months. During that interval Mr. McLeod was promoted to the rank of foreman of the Nellis AFB electric shop and served as foreman for six weeks prior to June of 1975, when he was again re-elected and installed as National Vice President.

Pursuant to his assuming office Mr. McLeod wrote a letter dated July 18, 1975 (Complainant's Ex. #7), requesting a leave of absence without pay and requesting certain benefits in accordance with AFR 40-630. Said benefits being credit for six months toward retirement and one year of continued coverage under the Federal Employees Group Life Insurance and Federal Health Benefits Act.

By letter, dated August 13, 1975 (Complaint's Ex. #8), Mr. McLeod's request for leave without pay was granted by Respondent.

Subsequently Mr. McLeod was re-elected in 1976 and 1978 for two-year terms and was granted further extensions of leave without pay by the Respondent.

In the election of 1978, Mr. McLeod was opposed by the Complainant Edward McCrary, the President of Local 2947 of the AFGE, CIO, located in Los Angeles. Mr. McCrary testified that during the 1978 election campaign he learned for the first time that Mr. McLeod had been a foreman at Nellis AFB in 1975, and that in his opinion this made Mr. McLeod a supervisory official and a part of management. Mr. McCrary further testified that he filed the complaint herein the day following his becoming aware of the fact that Mr. McLeod had been a foreman for six weeks in 1975.

It is to be noted that Mr. McLeod was not made a foreman until six weeks before being re-elected in 1975. At that time he became eligible for promotion to fill a re-established foreman's position. Mr. McLeod testified that the fact he had been a foreman for six weeks prior to his election in 1975 was well known to the union caucuses held prior to the union elections from 1975 through 1978 (Tr. 51).

Mr. McCrary's complaint charges the Respondent with violations of section 19(a) of Executive Order 11491, as amended, subsections (1) and (3). These sections provide as follows:

Sec. 19. Unfair labor practices. (a)
Agency management shall not--

(1) interfere with, restrain, or coerce an employee in the exercise of the rights assured by this Order; (3) sponsor, control, or otherwise assist a labor organization, except that an agency may furnish customary and routine services and facilities under section 23 of this Order when consistent with the best interests of the agency, its employees, and the organization, and when the services and facilities are furnished, if requested, on an impartial basis to organizations having equivalent status:

Evidence at the hearing consisted of testimony from Mr. McCrary, Mr. McLeod and Ruth Graves, the civilian personnel officer for Nellis Air Force Base. Ms. Graves testified that Mr. McLeod's status was that of an employee with return rights upon expiration of his leave of absence without pay.

Complainant's Exhibit #5 is a copy of a letter dated June 27, 1978, from L. M. Pellarzi, General Counsel for the American Federation of Government Employees to the Compliance Offices of the U.S. Department of Labor, pointing out that the complaint was untimely filed and excoriating Mr. McCrary for filing the unfair labor practice complaint against Nellis Air Force Base.

Mr. Pellarzi in his letter states "it is nothing more than a thinly veiled attempt to utilize the processes of the LMSA to air an internal union dispute apparently arising from some personal disagreement between Mr. McLeod and Mr. McCrary. While the named respondent is Nellis AFB the real object of the action is Mr. McLeod." In effect, Complainant's own union questions and condemns his conduct of filing a complaint.

Issue

Did Nellis Air Force Base's action of promoting Mr. McLeod to a foreman for six weeks prior to his assuming his office of Vice President of the National Union in 1975 and its further action of granting him year to year leaves of absence constitute a violation of section 19(a)(1) and (3) of the Executive Order.

Conclusions

It became manifestly apparent from the testimony of Mr. McCrary that the complaint filed against Nellis Air Force Base was the result of a personal vendetta of Mr. McCrary against his opponent in an election for the office of Vice President of the National Union. The complaint was filed shortly prior to the election of June 1978, and the motivation of Mr. McCrary is highly suspect. In his testimony he resorted to innuendos and totally uncorroborated charges that Mr. McLeod's terms of office from 1975 to 1978 have resulted in loss of union members and a failure to vigorously pursue grievances at Nellis Air Force Base. He seeks to attribute the union's problems to the fact that Mr. McLeod was a foreman for six weeks in 1975 before his election. Curiously enough, Mr. McCrary testified that he previously voted for Mr. McLeod.

The record is totally devoid of any evidence establishing an unfair labor practice or violation of section 19(a)(1) and (3) of the Executive Order. The mere fact that Mr. McLeod, the National Vice President, was granted a leave of absence by the Respondent to fill his position as National Vice President of the union does not constitute a violation. The fact that Mr. McLeod was a foreman for six weeks in 1975 does not provide any grounds for a finding that Nellis Air Force Base violated subsections (1) and (3) of section 19(a) of Executive Order 11491.

Recommended Order

Having found that Respondent has not engaged in conduct violating section 19(a)(1) and (3) of the Executive Order, it is recommended that the complaint be dismissed in its entirety.

UNITED STATES DEPARTMENT OF LABOR
ASSISTANT SECRETARY FOR LABOR-MANAGEMENT RELATIONS
SUMMARY OF DECISION AND DIRECTION OF ELECTION
OF THE ASSISTANT SECRETARY
PURSUANT TO SECTION 6 OF EXECUTIVE ORDER 11491, AS AMENDED

ARMY AND AIR FORCE EXCHANGE SERVICE,
DALLAS, TEXAS
A/SLMR No. 1163

This case involved a petition for consolidation of units filed by the National Association of Government Employees (NAGE) seeking to consolidate 13 exclusively recognized units located at certain Army and Air Force Exchange Service (AAFES) activities for which certain of its constituent local chapters are the current exclusive representatives. Through the subject petition, the NAGE sought to establish a consolidated unit consisting of all the nonprofessional employees of the AAFES that the NAGE represents exclusively. The AAFES contended, essentially, that the proposed consolidated unit was not appropriate because it did not meet the criteria established by Section 10(b) of the Order.

The Assistant Secretary noted that in its review of appeals from certain of the Assistant Secretary decisions involving consolidation of units, the Federal Labor Relations Council (Council) has construed the Assistant Secretary's establishment of a presumption in favor of consolidation "as a recognition and affirmation of the strong policy in the Federal labor-management relations program of facilitating consolidation." Based on the facts and policy considerations involved, the Assistant Secretary found that the proposed unit was appropriate for the purpose of exclusive recognition under the Order. Thus, he found that the unit sought essentially included all nonprofessional employees at the various exchanges involved; that the employees shared a common mission, common overall supervision, essentially similar job classifications and working conditions; and that they are subject to similar personnel and labor relations policies which are established and coordinated by the AAFES headquarters. He noted that the parties had negotiated agreements covering 11 of the 13 units at the individual exchanges involved herein and that many of the subjects included in such agreements are dealt with uniformly.

Under these circumstances, the Assistant Secretary concluded that the employees in the petitioned for consolidated unit share a community of interest and that this more comprehensive bargaining unit would promote effective dealings and efficiency of agency operations consistent with the policy of the Order. Accordingly, he directed an election in the consolidated unit found appropriate.

DECISION AND DIRECTION OF ELECTION

Upon a petition duly filed under Section 6 of Executive Order 11491, as amended, a hearing was held before Hearing Officer A. Jack Lewis. The Hearing Officer's rulings made at the hearing are free from prejudicial error and are hereby affirmed.

The Petitioner, National Association of Government Employees, herein called NAGE, filed the instant petition seeking to consolidate 13 Army and Air Force Exchange Service (AAFES) units for which certain of its constituent locals are the current exclusive representatives. Through the subject petition, the NAGE seeks to establish a consolidated unit consisting of all nonprofessional full-time and part-time AAFES employees, including off-duty military personnel, located in the Military District of Washington, D.C.; ^{1/} and at Walter Reed Army Medical Center, Washington, D.C.; Castle Air Force Base, California; Fort Polk, Louisiana; Fort Leonard Wood, Missouri; Fort Bragg, North Carolina; Fort Bliss, Texas; Fort Eustis, Virginia; Langley Air Force Base, Virginia; Fort Monroe, Virginia; Fort Belvoir, Virginia; and in the Washington Area Exchange Office, Alexandria, Virginia; excluding temporary employees of 90 days or less with no expectation of continued employment, professional employees, management officials, employees engaged in Federal personnel work in other than a purely clerical capacity, and supervisors as defined in the Order.

The AAFES contends that the proposed consolidated unit is not appropriate for the purpose of exclusive recognition because it does not meet the criteria established by Section 10(b) of the Order as the employees in the proposed unit do not share a separate and distinct community of interest. Further, the proposed consolidated unit is not geographically or administratively coherent and, therefore, would not promote or enhance effective dealings and efficiency of agency operations. The AAFES also argues that the petition is based solely upon on the NAGE's extent of organization within the AAFES. 2/

^{1/} The record indicates that the NAGE represents exclusively two units in the Military District of Washington, in its Fort Myer/McNair Exchange and in its Cameron Station Exchange. In this regard, NAGE Local R4-49 represents a unit of barbers at both exchanges and NAGE Local R4-51 represents the remaining nonappropriated fund employees at the two exchanges.

The NAGE, on the other hand, argues that the proposed consolidation would merge 13 separate units into one and thus would eliminate redundancy and excessive time spent at the bargaining table, effectuate a more efficient bargaining process, and enable the parties to negotiate a master agreement as well as supplemental agreements covering activities below the level of recognition.

The AAFES is a nonappropriated fund instrumentality of the United States Government and a primary national subdivision of the Department of Defense. It has as its mission the providing of merchandise and services of necessity and convenience to authorized patrons at uniformly low prices and the generation of reasonable earnings to supplement appropriated funds for support of Army and Air Force welfare and recreation programs. The AAFES, a joint command of the Army and Air Force headquartered in Dallas, Texas, is under the command of an Air Force Major General and employs some 60,000 employees world-wide. It has approximately 25,000 employees represented in 111 bargaining units of which approximately 3,429 employees, all in the continental United States, are represented by the NAGE in the 13 exclusively recognized units which are the subject of the instant petition.

In the continental United States the AFFES is divided into five regions: the Alamo Exchange Region, the Capitol Exchange Region, the Golden Gate Exchange Region, the Ohio Valley Exchange Region, and the Southwest Exchange Region. Each region is headed by a regional chief who reports directly to the Commander of the AAFES, and is comprised of several area exchanges, each headed by a general manager who reports directly to the regional chief and each area exchange consists of several post or base exchanges headed by exchange managers. Regional chiefs have been delegated the responsibility for implementing AFFES personnel and labor relations policies, directives, and procedures within their respective regions. Attached to each region, except the Alamo Region, is a labor relations specialist who negotiates collective bargaining agreements on behalf of the exchanges and is responsible for labor relations matters within the region. 3/

As noted above, in this matter the NAGE is seeking to consolidate its 13 exclusively recognized AAFES units in the continental United States. The record indicates that of these 13 units, the NAGE exclusively represents all

2/ The AAFES requested that in the event the proposed consolidated unit is found to be appropriate, an election be held to determine whether or not the employees involved desire to be represented in the proposed consolidated unit by the NAGE.

3/ Representatives of the AAFES' General Counsel conduct labor relations negotiations for the Alamo Region.

nonappropriated fund employees at 12 post or base exchanges including two units in the Washington Military District (see footnote 1, above) and all nonappropriated fund employees in the Washington Area Exchange Office. Although the record reveals that AAFES activities may range in size and that some activities may provide certain services not available at other activities, the basic service of all of the activities is the sale of merchandise and services at uniformly low prices to support AAFES welfare and recreation programs and the employees covered by the subject petition have essentially similar job classifications and working conditions.

In its review of appeals from certain of the Assistant Secretary's decisions involving the consolidation of units, 4/ the Federal Labor Relations Council (Council) has construed the Assistant Secretary's establishment of a presumption in favor of consolidations "as a recognition and affirmation of the strong policy in the Federal labor-management relations program of facilitating consolidation." The Council noted that such affirmation accurately reflected its policy as set forth in its 1975 Report and Recommendations to facilitate the consolidation of existing units which conform to the appropriate unit criteria contained in Section 10(b) of the Executive Order.

Based on the foregoing facts and policy considerations, I find that the petitioned for consolidated unit is appropriate for the purpose of exclusive recognition under the Order. Thus, as indicated above, the unit sought encompasses all the employees within the AAFES represented by the NAGE and all of the various units alone, or in combination contain essentially all the nonprofessional employees at the various activities involved. 5/ Additionally, it is noted that all the employees within the petitioned for consolidated unit share a common mission, common overall supervision, essentially similar job classifications and working conditions, similar personnel and labor relations policies and practices as delegated in accordance with the AAFES' delegation of authority.

Under these circumstances, I find that the employees in the petitioned for unit share a clear and identifiable community of interest.

I find further that the petitioned for consolidated unit will promote effective dealings and efficiency of agency operations. Thus, the record reflects that Headquarters, AAFES, through AAFES regulations, promulgated by the Departments of the Army and Air Force, and through the promulgation and administration of its own Exchange Service Manual, effectively develops agency policy in all matters relating to AAFES personnel policies and practices, including reduction-in-force, hiring, promotions and wage and salary determinations, etc., which are then disseminated to the field for implementation of those policies within the local framework. Moreover, although the record reflects that each region, with the exception of the Alamo Region, has a labor relations specialist who handles labor relations for that region, the evidence establishes that all agreements must be approved by the General Counsel's office located at AAFES Headquarters. In addition, the General Counsel's office advises the regional labor relations specialists on technical matters and, in the case of the Alamo Region, representatives of the General Counsel handle the actual negotiations for that region. Field exchanges must notify the General Counsel's office when requests are made to negotiate new agreements or to modify existing agreements, when requests are made to use the services of the Federal Mediation and Conciliation Service or the Federal Service Impasses Panel, when negotiability issues are appealed to the Council, or when Applications for a Decision on Grievability or Arbitrability are filed with the Assistant Secretary. Furthermore, when negotiated agreements provide for automatic renewal upon appropriate notice, such notices may not issue without the approval of the General Counsel's office. The record shows that the AAFES and the NAGE have negotiated six separate and two multi-unit agreements covering 11 of the units at the individual activities involved herein, 6/ and that there is a high degree of commonality between the agreements in that many of the individual subjects are dealt with uniformly. Thus, although the AAFES contends that the authority to negotiate agreements has been delegated to the regions in order to tailor local agreements to the particular needs of the region, area, base, or post exchange, the record shows a pattern of uniformity within the negotiated agreements.

Under all of these circumstances, I find that effective dealings and efficiency of agency operations would be promoted by the establishment of the proposed consolidated unit and that AAFES labor relations policies could remain essentially the same, as evidenced by the uniformity in current contract provisions, and might well be enhanced if the proposed consolidated unit were effectuated. In this latter regard, regional labor relations specialists and other field personnel specialists could continue to provide input into the negotiating process and the particular needs of individual field exchanges could be satisfied by the use of local supplemental agreements. 7/ Moreover, I find that as the proposed consolidated unit, covering all of the employees represented by the 6/ There is a multi-unit agreement covering the NAGE's two units located in the Military District of Washington's Fort Myer/McNair Exchange and Cameron Station Exchange and another multi-unit agreement covering the NAGE's exclusively recognized units at the Fort Eustis Exchange, the Fort Monroe Exchange, and the Langley Air Force Base Exchange.

NAGE in the AAFES, will provide for bargaining in a single unit, rather than in the existing 13 bargaining units, it will promote a more comprehensive bargaining unit structure and is consistent with the policy of the Executive Order set forth above. 8/

Accordingly, I find that the following employees constitute a unit appropriate for the purpose of exclusive recognition under Executive Order, 11491, as amended: 9/

All full-time and part-time employees of the Army and Air Force Exchange Service, including off-duty military personnel, located in the Military District of Washington, D.C. (Fort Myer/McNair Exchange and Cameron Station Exchange); Walter Reed Army Medical Center, Washington, D.C.; Castle Air Force Base, California; Fort Polk, Louisiana; Fort Leonard Wood, Missouri; Fort Bragg, North Carolina; Fort Bliss Texas; Fort Eustis, Virginia; Langley Air Force Base, Virginia; Fort Monroe, Virginia; Fort Belvoir, Virginia; and the Washington Area Exchange Office, Alexandria, Virginia; excluding temporary employees of 90 days or less with no expectation of continued employment, professional employees, management officials, employees engaged in Federal personnel work in other than a purely clerical capacity, and supervisors as defined in the Order.

DIRECTION OF ELECTION

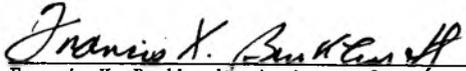

An election by secret ballot shall be conducted among the employees in the unit described above, as early as possible, but not later than 60 days from the date below. The appropriate Area Administrator shall supervise the election, subject to the Assistant Secretary's Regulations. Eligible to vote are those in the unit who were employed during the payroll period immediately preceding the date below, including employees who did not work during that period because they were out ill, or on 8/ The fact that the proposed consolidated unit applies only to existing units does not render such unit inappropriate inasmuch as it is noted that consolidation procedures apply only to situations where there is no question concerning representation and the unit herein meets the criteria specified in Section 10(b) of the Order and will promote a more comprehensive bargaining unit structure. See A/SLMR No. 1016, cited above in footnote 5, and FLRC No. 77A-88, cited above in footnote 4.

9/ Insofar as the actual state of the exclusively recognized units at the time of the consolidation election may differ, if at all, from the unit found appropriate herein, such unit descriptions should be so modified.

vacation or on furlough, including those in the military service who appear in person at the polls. Ineligible to vote are employees who have quit or were discharged for cause since the designated payroll period and who have not been rehired or reinstated before the election date. Those eligible shall vote whether or not they desire to be represented for the purpose of exclusive recognition in the proposed consolidated unit by the National Association of Government Employees.

ASSISTANT SECRETARY FOR LABOR-MANAGEMENT RELATIONS
SUMMARY OF DECISION AND ORDER OF THE ASSISTANT SECRETARY
PURSUANT TO SECTION 6 OF EXECUTIVE ORDER 11491, AS AMENDED

UNITED STATES COAST GUARD HEADQUARTERS
A/SLMP No. 1164

This case involved a petition filed by the American Federation of Government Employees, Local 3313, AFL-CIO (AFGE) in which it sought to amend its certification and clarify its unit. The sole unresolved issue was the AFGE's contention that the employees of the U.S. Coast Guard Oceanographic Unit and the OMEGA Navigation System Operations Detail (ONSOD) should be accreted to its exclusively recognized unit of Coast Guard Headquarters employees. The Activity contended that the employees of the Oceanographic Unit and the ONSOD do not share a community of interest with the Headquarters employees and noted that the two organizational entities in question were in existence at the time of the AFGE's certification for the Headquarters unit and their employees did not participate in the election resulting in the certification.

The Assistant Secretary found that there was insufficient evidence to support the proposed accretion sought by the AFGE. In this regard, he noted particularly that there had been no reorganization affecting the identities of the Oceanographic Unit and the ONSOD which resulted in an accretion to the AFGE's existing unit. Under all of the circumstances, he concluded that the employees of the Oceanographic Unit and the ONSOD do not share a community of interest with the Headquarters employees and that the proposed accretion would not promote effective dealings or efficiency of agency operations.

Accordingly, the Assistant Secretary ordered that the aspect of the petition involved in the instant proceeding be dismissed.

DECISION AND ORDER

Upon a petition duly filed under Section 6 of Executive Order 11491, as amended, a hearing was held before Hearing Officer Bridget Sisson. The Hearing Officer's rulings made at the hearing are free from prejudicial error and are hereby affirmed.

Upon the entire record in this case, including briefs filed by the parties, the Assistant Secretary finds:

The American Federation of Government Employees, Local 3313, AFL-CIO, herein called AFGE, filed a petition for clarification of unit (CU) seeking to clarify its existing exclusively recognized unit of professional and nonprofessional employees of the U.S. Coast Guard Headquarters, Washington, D. C., by including the employees of the U.S. Coast Guard Oceanographic Unit and the OMEGA Navigation System Operations Detail (ONSOD). 1/

1/ On September 12, 1978, pursuant to a Report and Findings of the Regional Administrator arising out of the instant petition, the certification of the unit in question was amended to reflect a change in the designation of the exclusive representative. In addition, the unit was clarified to include certain employees whose job location had changed. The foregoing actions by the Regional Administrator, upon which no request for review of the Assistant Secretary was filed, leaves as the sole remaining issue herein whether or not the certified unit should be clarified to include the employees of the Oceanographic Unit and the ONSOD.

The AFGE claims that the employees of the Oceanographic Unit and the ONSOD should be included in its existing unit of Headquarters employees essentially because they are serviced by the same personnel office and are covered by the same recently instituted Equal Employment Opportunity (EEO) Plan. The Activity takes the position that the employees of the Oceanographic Unit and the ONSOD do not share a community of interest with the Headquarters employees and, therefore, should not be included in the existing exclusively recognized unit.

The AFGE was certified on July 11, 1972, as the exclusive representative for a unit including essentially all employees of the United States Coast Guard Headquarters, Washington, D. C. 2/ At the hearing, the parties stipulated that the employees of the Oceanographic Unit and the ONSOD did not vote in the election resulting in the AFGE's certification. 3/

Each of the three organizational entities of the Coast Guard involved herein is under the direction of an individual commanding officer who reports directly to the Commandant of the Coast Guard, and each is responsible for a different mission. 4/ There is no evidence of any interchange among their respective employees. While some transfers have taken place, the record reveals that such transfers have involved only clerical employees.

The Headquarters employees work in two locations, the "NASSIF" Building and the Trans Point Building, both in Washington, D. C. The ONSOD employees have also been located at the Trans Point Building since 1974. 5/ The Oceanographic Unit employees are located in the Navy Annex in Southwest Washington, D. C., where they were located at the time of the AFGE's certification for the Headquarters unit.

Civilian personnel services are provided to the Oceanographic Unit and the ONSOD by the Headquarters Civilian Personnel Office based on a servicing agreement between the respective commanding officers and the Headquarters Civilian Personnel Officer. 6/ All three organizational

2/ At the time of the hearing in this matter, the parties had not negotiated an agreement covering the employees in the certified unit.

3/ There was no provision for them to vote in such election.

4/ The Coast Guard Headquarters essentially provides administrative services to the Commandant and the Coast Guard nationwide. The Oceanographic Unit is responsible for the Coast Guard's oceanographic operations and studies. The ONSOD is responsible for the direction of the OMEGA navigation system, worldwide.

5/ The record reflects that the ONSOD employees were located in Washington, D. C., in a different building at the time of the AFGE's certification. Thereafter, they were moved to Hawaii and subsequently relocated back to Washington, D. C., in 1974.

6/ While each of the organizational entities involved normally would have its own EEO plan, the record reflects that the most recent EEO plan of the Coast Guard Headquarters included all three due to an error on the part of the Headquarters EEO Officer.

entities have their own areas of consideration for merit staffing with respect to positions through GS-11. ^{7/} The competitive area for reductions-in-force is the metropolitan Washington, D. C., area, which includes the employees of all three organizational entities.

The evidence establishes that each of the three activities employs civilians to suit its organizational needs. In this regard, the Oceanographic unit employs some 18 civilians, most of whom are in scientific and technical classifications and whose specialities are oceanographic related. The ONSOD employs some 13 civilians, most of whom are in the scientific and technical classifications and whose specialities are navigation related. The Coast Guard Headquarters employs approximately 1300 employees in varied classifications representative of the general administrative functions performed in most government agencies at the headquarters level. ^{8/}

Based on the foregoing, I find insufficient basis upon which to conclude that the employees of the Oceanographic Unit and the ONSOD have accreted into the unit represented by the AFGE. Thus, there has been no reorganization affecting the identity of the Oceanographic Unit and the ONSOD which resulted in the employees involved accreting into the AFGE's unit. ^{9/} Further, the evidence establishes that both of the Coast Guard organizational entities sought to be accreted were in existence at the time the AFGE was certified as the exclusive representative of the Headquarters employees. While the employees of the two organizational entities involved are serviced by the same personnel office as the Headquarters employees, the record reveals that each entity is under the independent direction of its own commanding officer and is responsible for its own separate and distinct mission. In addition, the employees of each entity generally have their own functional job classifications and there is no employee interchange and minimal transfer of personnel with the Coast Guard Headquarters.

Under these circumstances, I find that the employees of the Oceanographic Unit and the ONSOD do not share a community of interest with the Headquarters employees. Nor, in my view, based on the facts outlined above, would the proposed accretion promote effective dealings and efficiency of agency operations.

^{7/} The area of consideration for GS-12 and 13 positions is Coast Guard-wide and for GS-14 and above, Department of Transportation-wide.

^{8/} Included in these categories are budget analysts, program analysts, management analysts, operations research analysts, accountants, computer programmers, military pay clerks, attorneys, engineers, and clerical employees.

^{9/} Compare Department of the Army, Fort McPherson, Georgia, 5 FLRC 398, FLRC No. 76A-32 (1977).

Accordingly, I shall order that the aspect of the petition involved in the instant proceeding, with respect to the proposed accretion of the Oceanographic Unit and ONSOD employees, be dismissed.

This case involved an unfair labor practice complaint filed by the American Federation of Government Employees, AFL-CIO, Local 41 (AFGE) alleging that the Respondent violated Section 19(a)(6) of the Order by eliminating previously agreed upon provisions in reproducing the printed version of the parties' negotiated agreement.

The Administrative Law Judge recommended that the complaint be dismissed in its entirety on the ground that the Complainant had failed to sustain its burden of proof. In this regard, the Administrative Law Judge credited testimony that the AFGE's chief negotiator had agreed to eliminate the disputed language in order to gain Section 15 approval of the negotiated agreement.

The Assistant Secretary adopted the Administrative Law Judge's findings, conclusions and recommendation and ordered that the complaint be dismissed in its entirety.

The Respondent in a complaint filed on December 27, 1977 was charged with having violated Section 19(a)(6) of the Order by refusing to confer and negotiate in good faith as to publication and distribution of a General Agreement which left out or altered certain changes that the parties had agreed upon. 1/

Upon the basis of the entire record, including the evidence adduced, the briefs submitted by the parties and my observation of the witnesses and judgment of their credibility, I make the following findings, conclusions and recommendations.

Findings of Fact

1. At all pertinent and material times herein, the Complainant was the exclusive representative for a bargaining unit of all non-professional General Schedule and Wage Grade employees of the Office of the Secretary, Department of Health, Education and Welfare, located in the District of Columbia Metropolitan Area. Complainant was certified as the exclusive representative on January 24, 1973.

1/ The complaint alleged: "Local 41 charges management with violations of 19(a)(6) of the Executive Order in refusing to confer and negotiate as required by the Order. Section 11(a) requires the parties to meet and confer in good faith on personnel policies, practices and matters affecting working conditions. Management officials have printed and distributed a General Agreement which alleges to be the agreement negotiated between OS management and Local 41. However, in the printing of the Agreement, provisions which were agreed upon, initialed, approved and ratified by both parties were left out or altered. Therefore, the changes that management made were never effectively incorporated in the agreement. The assertion that the 'Union did have an opportunity to review the galleys of the Agreement prior to their submission to the printer', does not effectively abrogate the Agreement that had been reached and endorsed by the parties. To print an altered version and to maintain that the Union is thereupon bound by the printed text is a breach of the Agreement and constitutes a failure to negotiate in good faith. The Union does not, cannot negotiate changes in an agreement through inaction, through failing to note changes in the galley proof of the text. Management has subsequently refused to resolve the complaint".

RECOMMENDED DECISION AND ORDER

Statement of the Case

This is an unfair labor practice proceeding in which a formal hearing of record was held on July 16, 1978, in Washington, D.C., pursuant to Executive Order 11491, as amended, (hereinafter referred to as the Order).

2. Beginning in 1975 representatives of AFGE Local 41 and Respondent commenced negotiations to consummate a contract agreement. An agreement between the Chief Negotiating Officers of AFGE Local 41 and Respondent was reached on March 21, 1977; copies of the draft agreement were forwarded to the approving official in March 23, 1977. Richard Hacker, Director of the Health, Education and Welfare Labor Management Relations Staff advised Respondents Chief Negotiator on April 13, 1977 of certain items in the agreement that did not appear to be consonant with the Order or agency policies and regulations. Mr. Hacker had been asked by the approving official to staff the Section 15 review. Some 9 items were questioned as being violations of the provisions of Section 15 of the Order. The matter was referred to Maurice B. Jones, Respondent's Chief Negotiator for discussion and negotiation with the Union's Chief Negotiator, Joseph Cook. The Chief Negotiators entered into an agreement on April 18, 1977 wherein four of the nine items that had been objected to in the early agreement were corrected or deleted and five which the Union negotiator insisted should not be changes remained in the agreement. The agreement was submitted for approval on April 18, 1977.

3. On April 22, 1977 AFGE Local 41 Chief Negotiator Joseph Cook was advised that approval of the agreement had been withheld because of five cited specific violations of Executive Order 11491 and HEW regulations contained in the OS Headquarters Agreement.

4. Members of Departmental LMR Staff, the OS Labor Relations Officer, a representative from the National Office of AFGE and a Federal Mediator met to discuss the five items cited in the April 22 letter advising that approval of the agreement had been withheld. As a result of the discussion, Section G of Article 11, Section 11 was modified and a waiver of the remaining violations was obtained. The agreement was then approved without requiring changes to those provisions.

5. The cited items were contained in a Memorandum dated April 22, 1977 from the Assistant Secretary, for Management and Budget, Department of Health, Education and Welfare to the Director of Administration, OASMB. 2/ The memorandum stated in part 2/ Office of the Assistant Secretary for Management and Budget.

"The agreement has been reviewed for conformance with applicable laws, Executive Order 11491, existing published agency policies and regulations, and regulations of other appropriate authorities. Such review revealed the specific violations cited below. Therefore, approval of the subject agreement is hereby withheld.

"The following is a listing of agreement provisions which do not conform with law, policy or regulation -- requiring either modification or deletion to permit approval of subject agreement:

(a) Article 3, Section 12(A) 3/ deals with a matter outside the obligation to bargain on personnel policies and practices and matters affecting working conditions under Section 11(a) of E.O. 11491. This section 11(a) obligation has been construed by the Federal Labor Relations Council (FLRC No. 74A-71, Report Number 100) to confine bargaining to those policies and practices which relate to positions within the bargaining unit. In addition, your authority as the Collective Bargaining Official is prescribed by HEW Personnel Instruction 711-1-20C and 711-1-110A as being limited to your administrative discretion in the administration of labor-management matters within the bargaining unit.

(b) Article 6, Section 7, First Sentence provides that the Assistant Secretary for Management and Budget agrees to an annual meeting as cited above concerning Article 3, Section 12A; the obligation to bargain is limited by section 11(a) of the Order,

3/ Article 3, Section 12 provides:

- A. The Employer agrees to train supervisors in accordance with requirements of the FPM.
- B. Working instructions will be conveyed to employees through established supervisory chambers.
- C. Employees can only be supervised by Civil Service Employees.

and HEW Personnel Instruction 711-1-20C and 711-1-110A to matters within your discretion as the head of the certified bargaining unit. Thus, the union has no standing to demand, nor do you have any authority to agree to, the commitment of resources beyond your own discretion. 4/

"c. Article 11, Section 11G, last sentence usurps management's right to select, thereby violating section 12(b)(2) of E.O. 11491. The Federal Labor Relations Council has repeatedly ruled that section 12(b) rights cannot be negotiated away at the bargaining table by management. While we recognize the right to negotiate procedures to be used in making selections, such procedures cannot be so specific as to deny management's basic right of selection as is done by the provision of your agreement. 5/

"d. Article 17, Section 6, Step 3 establishes the Assistant Secretary for Management and Budget as the Step 3 deciding official. For the same reasons cited above concerning Article 6, Section 7, you cannot commit authority and resources beyond your own discretion. 6/

4/ Article 6, Section 7, first sentence, states: "The Assistant Secretary for Management and Budget (ASMB), agrees to meet with the union annually."...

5/ Article 11, Section 11G relates to downgrading in a position classification and the last sentence states: The parties agree that this agreement shall be suspended to insert Proposal No. 1 or 2 contained in Appendix D of this agreement for Article 11. Section 11G dealing with promotion of downgraded employees of the Agency or the FLRC declares it to be negotiable. Also, see, Appendix D to the General Agreement, Respondent Exhibit No. 1, page 96.

6/ Article 17, Section 6, Step 3, provides: If the employee is dissatisfied with the decision rendered in Step 2, the grievance may be presented in writing with a copy of the Stage 1 and 2 decisions to the Assistant Secretary for Management and Budget or his designee within seven (7) workdays. Within five (5) workdays after receipt of the written grievance, not counting the day of receipt, the 3rd Stage officials or (continued on next page)

"e. Article 18, Section 1 establishes the Assistant Secretary for Management and Budget as a deciding official in the arbitration process. For the same reason cited above concerning Article 6, Section 7, you cannot commit authority and resources beyond your own discretion. 7/

"When the the parties have executed an agreement to correct the above cited violations, please provide us with an amended copy of the changed articles for review under HEW Personnel Instruction 711-1-150."

The decision will state specifically the reason(s) for the decision."

7/ Article 18, Section 1 of the General Agreement provides in part:

A. A grievance processed under Article 17 or a disciplinary action processed under Article 19 of this Agreement, if unresolved may be referred to arbitration as provided for in this Article.

"B. Either party may bring to the other's attention a matter of concern regarding the interpretation or application of any of the provisions of this Agreement. These issues or interpretation and application of the Agreement, before being submitted to arbitration, shall be discussed informally with the appropriate parties. If there is still no resolution, the President and/or the Vice President/OS or the Union and the Assistant Secretary for Management and Budget or his designee shall meet to resolve the issue. If the issue is not resolved, it may be submitted to arbitration."

8/ Testimony elicited at the hearing was to the effect that union representatives had the galleys for some six days before they were returned with corrections for publication and distribution. The Chief negotiator for the union testified that he only reviewed the Agreement for about a half day before returning it for final printing.

6. In October 1977, AFGE's Chief Negotiator for Local 41, Joseph Cook reported that there were certain alleged discrepancies consisting of either changes or deletions in the negotiated contract between the parties. When called to Respondent's attention it was management's position that the changes and deletions had been made pursuant to negotiations with Complainant and reviewed by the parties prior to publication and distribution of the general agreement in September 1977. The Unfair Labor Practice Complaint was subsequently filed.

7. The four changed or deleted items construed to be in issue 9/ are:

- (a) The change of the term Office of the Secretary (OS) to Agency;
- (b) The deletion of the sentence dealing with cash payments of union dues reading: "In lieu of payroll deductions employees may make direct cash payments."
- (c) The addition to the signature page of the contract to include the AFGE Local Union 41 President;
- (d) Article 20, Section 2 relating to Maintaining the Stability of the Workforce was cited as a violation because it did not conform to the Federal Personnel Manual as the provisions were taken out of context.

8. The negotiating authority under Section 11 of the Order and the approval authority under Section 15 of the Order were not to the same official. The official who had the negotiating authority under Section 11, was the Director of Administration, Office of the Secretary Headquarters. The authority who had approval for Section 15 approval was the Assistant Secretary for Management and Budget.

Discussion and Conclusion

Section 19 of Executive Order 11491 relates to Unfair Labor Practices and provides in part, as follows:

9/ Despite insistence at the hearing for Complainant to briefly and clearly delineate and enumerate the four items charged or omitted from the agreement alleged to be the basis for the complaint, they were not all clearly depicted and I extracted them from the Complainant's and Respondent's presentation to best clarify, particularly item (d) above.

(a) Agency management shall not -

(6) refuse to consult, confer, or negotiate with a labor organization as required by this Order. 10/

The same obligation as is imposed upon Agency management in Section 19(a) (6) is also imposed on a labor organization by Section 19(b) (6).

The documentary and oral evidence clearly establishes that the items alleged to have been changed or omitted were in the Agreement negotiated in March 1977. However, when they were questioned as items not consonant with the Order prior to Section 15 approval, they were referred to the "Parties respective Chief negotiators" for further consideration before final submission. These were the same parties who had participated in previous discussions leading to the agreement and they were each intimately aware of the provisions of the contract. The reasons for further considering the subject items was also conveyed to them. When the agreement was returned after discussion of all of the cited items, there were four that had either been changed or dropped. The remaining five were contained in the agreement.

The term "Meet and Confer" contained in the parties own General Agreement effective June 24, 1977 is defined as follows: "Meet and Confer - The Term 'meet and confer', is intended to be construed as a synonym for 'negotiate.'"

Consult is also defined in the General Agreement as follows: "The parties meeting in good faith, after reasonable notification, for the purpose of providing information on proposed plans or actions and to provide reasonable opportunity for views in implementing such actions." These provisions were not then or now in dispute and were in the Agreement in March 1977.

10/ Complainant in its brief referred to violations of 19(a) (1) and (6) of the Order. However, neither the complaint or the Notice of Hearing specified a violation of Section 19(a) (1) and I have not considered it an issue in this proceeding.

The record clearly shows that the parties Chief Negotiators in this proceeding were meeting to negotiate items called to their attention as not consonant with the Order and to reconcile them prior to final action and approval. The items in issue are certainly not those that the "parties" Chief Negotiators did not have authority to consider and negotiate.

On a credibility basis I conclude that the AFGE Local's 41, Chief negotiator did agree to changes and/or deletions of the four items herein in issue. The belated claim after the contract is subsequently signed and approved with the changes and/or deletions that he did not have authority to negotiate and approve has no merit.

In United States Department of Agriculture and Agricultural Research Service and National Federation of Federal Employees, Local 552, A/SLMR No. 519, the Assistant Secretary based on 1969 and 1975 study committee reports and recommendations for acceleration of the approval process in association with the requirement of Section 11 imposing upon agencies and exclusive representatives "to meet at reasonable times and confer in good faith" stated:

"I find that the granting of approval authority to more than one level for review is inconsistent with the purposes and policies of the Order. Thus, to subject locally negotiated agreements to intermediate levels of approval would, in my judgement, result in an unsettling effect on labor relations in the Federal sector by impairing and substantially delaying the collective bargaining process. While clearly an Agency may choose to delegate its Section 15 approval authority to an intermediate level or, in the alternative, provide that an intermediate official review the executed agreement and forward that agreement, with any comments, to the 'approval' authority, I do not believe that the establishment of intermediate, independent approval authorities is consistent with the intent and purposes of Section 15. As demonstrated by the circumstances herein, where an agency seeks to delegate a portion of its approval authority to an intermediate level and still retains a portion of that authority in the agency head, an additional level of review and approval is created which is time consuming, lacks finality and, in effect, creates unreasonable delays in the consummating of negotiated agreements. Clearly the purposes of the Order are not best served where, as here, an agency head or his representative who has been designated to have Section 15 approval authority, does not receive a locally executed agreement for approval until nearly nine months after the original signing because of the intermediate approval level's prior incomplete review and subsequent return of that agreement to the local level for modification." 11/

I find the facts of the case in this proceeding are materially different from those in United States Department of Agriculture and Agricultural Research Service and National Federation of Federal Employees, Local 1552, A/SLMR 519, in that there is no unreasonable delay evident, and the negotiating authority under Section 11 of the Order and the Approval Authority under Section 15 of the Order was not to the same official; likewise, items called to attention of the parties as not consonant with the Order or agency policy and regulations, were promptly considered and returned for appropriate action. Thereafter, approval of the Agreement was withheld because of five cited violations of the Order. I make no determination as to whether the review by Hacker for the Assistant Secretary for Management and Budget was proper because there was no question raised by the Union Chief Negotiator as to the Section 15 approval authority of the Assistant Secretary of Management and Budget. Likewise, there was no question raised as to the four items he and Management's Chief Negotiator had discussed and agreed to drop; further, it is not shown that these four items were again mentioned before the contract was reviewed and signed. I find no evidence of bad faith bargaining and as a matter of fact, it is alleged only by Complainant in retrospect rather than during the course of bargaining proceedings.

11/ With regard to the above, the Assistant Secretary further stated in footnote 4 to A/SLMR 519 decision that: "The subject case arose and was litigated prior to the recent amendments to Executive Order 11491. However, that the new 45 day requirement would not necessarily remedy the type of improper conduct which I find was involved herein. Thus, even under the current Order, an intermediate level of review and approval could disapprove an agreement within the prescribed 45 day period and the parties at the local level could not be assured, as demonstrated by the facts in the instant case, that conforming the agreement in accordance with the recommendation of the intermediate level would subsequently result in an approved agreement since the agency head or his designated representative had not yet received such agreement to ascertain whether it conforms to applicable laws, the Order, existing agency policies and regulations, and regulations of other appropriate authorities."

The principal issue herein, is whether the Complainant after negotiating and signing a contract can reopen and seek its reformation or modification under the guise of an unfair labor practice on matters considered during the negotiating process.

It is my opinion that where agreement has been reached on the substantive provisions of the contract, the refusal to consider changes, deletions, or additions to such agreement at this point does not constitute bad faith bargaining in violation of 19(a)(6). Obviously, there comes a time and point where negotiations must have some form of finality; reconsideration of previously resolved matters, absent mutual assent, does not permit such finality.

In Community Services Administration, A/SLMR No. 749, the Assistant Secretary for Labor Management Relations stated with reference to the disputed version of a contract provision which appeared in a draft copy of Amendment 11, initialed at an earlier date by the parties that:

"While I agree with the Administrative Law Judge that where the language of an agreement clearly does not reflect what the parties agreed to, it may be reformed, I do not view the evidence herein as clearly establishing that the language appearing in the final printed version of Amendment 11 did not reflect the parties agreement. Thus reformation of an agreement is a remedy accorded by courts of equity to parties only where the agreement fails through fraud or mutual mistake to express the real agreement or intention of the parties. In this regard, two rules have been firmly established in equity to avoid needless disputes: First, that the burden is on the complaining party to prove the mutual mistake, or the mistake of one party and the deceit, fraud, or inequitable conduct of the other upon which he relies for a modification or avoidance of the agreement; and, second, that in view of the written record of the terms of the agreement, a preponderance of the evidence is insufficient and nothing less than evidence that is plain and convincing beyond reasonable controversy will constitute such proof as will warrant modification of a written agreement." 12/

12/ Also, see, United States Department of the Air Force, 15th Air Base Wing, Hickam Air Force Base Hawaii, A/SLMR No. 1011.

In the instant proceeding even the testimony of Complainant's Chief Negotiator falls far short of establishing mutual mistake, or the mistake of one party and the deceit, fraud, or other inequitable conduct of the other upon which he relies for modification or avoidance of the agreement. Further, in view of the opportunities available to Complainant to bring up the subject after the four items were changed or deleted from the initial draft of the agreement until the time of the contract agreement was signed, the evidence is not so plain and convincing beyond reasonable controversy as to constitute proof sufficient to warrant modification, reformation of the contract or restoration in the contract of the four items in dispute herein. In this connection, there was bargaining and approval of the contract after the items at issue herein were changed and/or deleted.

Thus even if preliminary consideration of the agreement by Richard Hacker for the Assistant Secretary for Management and Budget be considered an intermediate level of review the Complainant waived its right to stand on the agreement by bargaining on the questioned items with Respondent's Chief Negotiating Officer. An agreement contract properly approved is final and reformation, modification, or change in the absence of fraud, deceit, or mistake is not an appropriate remedy available under the guise of an alleged unfair labor practice.

From the foregoing, I conclude that:

- (1) The Respondent did not refuse to consult, confer, or negotiate with a labor organization as required by this Order;
- (2) The Complainant has not sustained its burden of proving by a preponderance of the evidence that the Respondent violated the provisions of Section 19(a)(6) of the Order.

RECOMMENDATION

Upon the basis of the above findings, conclusions, and the entire record, I recommend to the Assistant Secretary that the complaint in Case No. 22-08670(CA) is dismissed in its entirety.

DEFENSE CONTRACT ADMINISTRATION

DEFENSE CONTRACT ADMINISTRATION
SERVICES MANAGEMENT AREA,
BINGHAMTON, NEW YORK
A/SLMR No. 1166

This case involved an RA petition filed by the Defense Contract Administration Services Region (DCASR), Boston, Massachusetts, and the Defense Contract Administration Services Management Area (DCASMA), Binghamton, New York, which would, in effect, sever the employees of the newly established Defense Contract Administration Services Plant Representative Office (DCASPRO), IBM Owego, New York, from the DCASMA, Binghamton, unit represented exclusively by the National Association of Government Employees, Local R2-56 (NAGE). The nucleus of employees assigned to the DCASPRO, IBM Owego, when it was established on February 1, 1978, had been working at that location for some time as a part of the DCASMA, Binghamton. The petition was filed because the Commander of the newly formed DCASPRO, IBM Owego, assumed an organizational status equal to that of the Commander of the DCASMA, Binghamton and the Activity-Petitioners contended that the organization of labor relations should parallel command responsibility. The NAGE took the position that the employees involved continued to be a part of its existing unit.

The Assistant Secretary found that the unit involved continued to remain appropriate for the purpose of exclusive recognition. In reaching this conclusion, he noted particularly that the reorganization did not result in any change in the day-to-day terms and conditions of employment of the employees involved, including their physical location, job function, and immediate supervision. Also, both the DCASMA, Binghamton, and the DCASPRO, IBM Owego, continued to report to the same organizational command, the DCASR Boston, they continued to be serviced by the same personnel office, they remained in the same areas of consideration for promotions and the same competitive area for reduction-in-force procedures, and they had an established history of collective bargaining. The Assistant Secretary further noted that the severance of the DCASPRO, IBM Owego, employees, which was sought by the petition, with the potential for the establishment of a new unit there, would tend to promote unnecessary unit fragmentation.

Accordingly, the Assistant Secretary ordered that the RA petition be dismissed.

DECISION AND ORDER

Upon a petition duly filed under Section 6 of Executive Order 11491, as amended, a hearing was held before Hearing Officer Dorothy Richardson. The Hearing Officer's rulings made at the hearing are free from prejudicial error and are hereby affirmed.

Upon the entire record in the subject case, including a brief filed by the National Association of Government Employees, Local R2-56 (NAGE), the Assistant Secretary finds:

On June 12, 1968, NAGE Local R2-56 was recognized as the exclusive representative in a unit of essentially all nonprofessional employees of what is now the Defense Contract Administration Services Management Area (DCASMA), Binghamton, New York. Subsequently, the NAGE and the predecessor to the present DCASMA, Binghamton, entered into a three-year negotiated agreement dated February 14, 1974. At the hearing, the parties stipulated that this agreement has been renewed by the parties, and that its current termination date is February 14, 1979.

On February 1, 1978, the Defense Contract Administration Services Region (DCASR), Boston, established a Defense Contract Administration Services Plant Representative Office (DCASPRO) at the International Business Machines (IBM) plant in Owego, New York. Prior to this time, the IBM plant at Owego had been serviced by a branch of the Quality Assurance Group organizationally assigned to the DCASMA, Binghamton. On February 1, 1978, those DCASMA, Binghamton, employees who had been assigned to the IBM plant in Owego formed the nucleus of the newly formed DCASPRO, IBM Owego. The Activity-Petitioners contend that the Commander of the newly formed DCASPRO, IBM Owego, assumed an organizational status equal to that of the Commander of the DCASMA, Binghamton, thus giving both the same delegated authority with respect to personnel administration and labor relations, as well as other matters. Based on their position that the organization of labor relations should parallel command responsibility, the Activity-Petitioners filed the instant petition, which would have the effect of severing the employees of the DCASPRO, IBM Owego, from the DCASMA, Binghamton, unit represented exclusively by the NAGE. The NAGE contends that the employees of the DCASPRO, IBM Owego, continue to be part of its existing unit, as they have and continue to share a clear and identifiable community of interest with the employees of the DCASMA, Binghamton, they continue to be subject to common policies and procedures established by the DCASR, Boston, they continue to be subject to the same personnel policies, and they continue to share the same areas of consideration for promotions and area of competition for reduction-in-force proceedings.

The DCASR Boston is one of nine regions of the Defense Logistics Agency. With the establishment of the DCASPRO, IBM Owego, there are currently six DCASMA's and six DCASPRO's within the DCASR Boston. Each DCASMA has a geographic area of responsibility, providing contract administration services in support of the Department of Defense and other Federal agencies at various facilities within its area. The DCASPROs provide the same service at a single plant location which has a significant workload requiring both permanent on-site personnel and administrative responsibility.

As noted above, the record reflects that on February 1, 1978, the IBM Owego, Branch of the Quality Assurance Group, DCASMA, Binghamton, formed the nucleus of the DCASPRO, IBM Owego. This unit was established on that date because the IBM plant had been awarded contracts which necessitated the increase of the complement there. Some 20 unit employees of the DCASMA, Binghamton, were transferred in place as a result of the reorganization. Three other employees from other locations within the DCASMA, Binghamton, were reassigned to the DCASPRO, IBM Owego, at the time of the reorganization. Since that time, other employees have been hired by the DCASPRO, IBM Owego, from the DCASMA, Binghamton, from other facilities of the DCASR Boston, and from outside the Boston Region. Currently, there are 94 employees in the unit claimed to be appropriate by the NAGE, with 57 assigned to the DCASMA, Binghamton, and 37 assigned to the DCASPRO, IBM Owego.

With respect to the mission and duties performed by the employees of the DCASPRO, IBM Owego, the record reflects that the reorganization has not, except for the imposition of a new command authority, essentially altered either the mission or type of duties performed, as the bargaining unit employees, for the most part, remain in the same location and continue to perform the same duties under the same immediate supervisors. Further, they are subject to the same personnel policies and practices established by the DCASR Boston, they remain in the same areas of consideration for promotions and the same competitive area for reduction-in-force procedures as the DCASMA, Binghamton, employees, and they continue to be serviced by the DCASR Boston Personnel Office concerning personnel matters. Primary responsibility and guidance for labor relations policies and personnel matters remain with the Personnel Office of DCASR in Boston. Further, the DCASR Boston provides Section 15 approval of all negotiated agreements, although both the DCASMA, Binghamton, Commander, and the DCASPRO, IBM Owego, Commander, have been delegated considerable authority for administering labor relations policies within their commands and are free to negotiate agreements and consult with exclusive bargaining representatives.

Under the circumstances outlined above, I find that the exclusively recognized unit continues to be appropriate for the purpose of exclusive recognition. 1/ In reaching this conclusion, I note particularly that the reorganization involved herein did not result in any change in the day-to-day terms and conditions of employment of the employees involved, including their physical location, job function, and immediate supervision. Also, both the DCASMA, Binghamton, and the DCASPRO, IBM Owego, continue to report to the same organizational command, the DCASR Boston, continue to be serviced by the same personnel office, remain in the same areas of consideration for promotions and the same competitive area for reduction-in-force procedures, and have an established history of collective bargaining. Further, in my view, the severance of the DCASPRO, IBM Owego, employees, which is sought by the subject petition, with the potential for the establishment of a new unit there, would tend to promote unnecessary unit fragmentation. Accordingly, I shall order that the petition herein be dismissed. 2/

2/ While it has been found that the exclusively recognized unit herein continued, after the reorganization, to be appropriate for the purpose of exclusive recognition, such a finding would not preclude the filing of an appropriate petition for amendment of recognition in order to conform the recognition to the existing circumstances.

SUMMARY OF DECISION AND ORDER OF THE ASSISTANT SECRETARY
PURSUANT TO SECTION 6 OF EXECUTIVE ORDER 11491, AS AMENDED

VETERANS ADMINISTRATION HOSPITAL,
BUTLER, PENNSYLVANIA
A/SLMR No. 1167

This case involved an unfair labor practice complaint filed by the National Association of Government Employees, Local R3-74 (Complainant) alleging, in essence, that the Respondent violated Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order by refusing to negotiate concerning the Complainant's proposal that the parties' negotiated agreement be modified to permit employees in the Nursing and Dietetic Service to have every third weekend off.

At the hearing, the Complainant called no witnesses. The only evidence presented was the parties' negotiated agreement. The Administrative Law Judge concluded that where, as here, no evidence is presented in support of the allegations of a complaint, a complainant has not sustained its burden of proof and the complaint must be dismissed. He therefore recommended that the complaint in the instant case be dismissed in its entirety.

Noting particularly the absence of exceptions, the Assistant Secretary adopted the findings, conclusions, and recommendation of the Administrative Law Judge and ordered that the complaint be dismissed.

RECOMMENDED DECISION AND ORDER

Statement of the Case

This proceeding under Executive Order 11491, as amended (hereinafter also referred to as the "Order"), was initiated by a charge filed on, or about, August 28, 1977, and a Complaint, filed October 25, 1977 (Asst. Sec. Exh. 1) which alleged violations of Sections 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order. Notice of Hearing issued May 16, 1978, pursuant to which a hearing was duly held before the undersigned on June 20, 1978, in Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania.

The Complaint alleged that on July 27, 1977, Complainant wrote to Mr. Morris, Hospital Director, and requested that he negotiate with the local relative to a local proposal previously submitted that would give employees of the Hospital's Nursing and Dietetic Services one (1) weekend in three (3) off. By letter dated August 4, 1977, he refused to negotiate. ..."

Complainant declined to call any witnesses and the only evidence presented was the parties' collective bargaining agreement, effective April 21, 1975 (Jt. Exh. 1). Mr. Harry Breen, Complainant's National Vice President and Complainant's representative at the hearing, stated Complainant's position. Mr. Breen made it clear that Respondent's only statement concerning Complainant's proposal on, or after, February 28, 1977, had been the Hospital Director letter of August 4, 1977, which, in pertinent part, stated as follows:

"Our decision on this particular issue has not changed. The proposals previously advanced are not considered negotiable since Management reserves the right to establish tours of duty and to determine the numbers and grade levels assigned to each tour to effectively operate the service. However, we are available to discuss matters which are negotiable within this Article." 1/

Although Complainant adduced no evidence or testimony to support Mr. Breen's statement of position, Mr. Breen asserted that on January 27, 1976, Complainant requested an amendment to the 1975 collective bargaining agreement to give employees of the Hospital's Nursing and Dietetic Services [Butler, Pennsylvania] one weekend in three off; that on March 15, 1976, Respondent said it would agree to Complainant's proposal and would sign an amendment on March 19, 1976; that Respondent cancelled the March 19, 1976 meeting; that on March 29, 1976, Respondent refused to agree to Complainant's proposal; that on April 13, 1976, Respondent advised Complainant in writing that it would not negotiate on Complainant's proposal because the proposal was non-negotiable. Mr. Breen also stated that a representative of Respondent on June 2, 1976, said that the employees involved should vote on the issue, i.e., whether or not they wanted every third weekend off; that the employees voted in favor of the proposal; that, nevertheless, Respondent continued to assert, for example on November 19, 1976, and January 10, 1977, that the proposal was non-negotiable; and that mediation, requested by Complainant, had been unsuccessful.

Complainant has not requested an agency head's determination as to negotiability of its proposal; nor has Complainant sought to bargain on any other proposal than its January 27, 1976, proposed amendment.

Respondent has moved that the Complaint be dismissed.

At the close of the hearing, July 22, 1978, was fixed as the date for filing briefs; however, upon subsequent request of Complainant the time was extended, on July 18 and, again on July 27, 1978, to August 7, 1978, and briefs, timely mailed were received on August 14, 1978, and have been carefully considered.

1/ Mr. Breen read this portion of the letter of August 4, 1977, into the record; however, because the transcript, including the text of this letter, is so replete with errors, I have used a copy of the actual letter submitted to the Regional Administrator, even though the letter was not offered as an Exhibit, since the quality of the transcript is so poor as to be thoroughly unreliable.

Discussion and Conclusions

Complainant presented no evidence or testimony in support of the allegations of the Complaint and has not therefore, sustained the burden of proof imposed by Section 203.15 of the Regulations, 29 C.F.R. § 203.15, namely, that:

"A complainant in asserting a violation of the order shall have the burden of proving the allegation of the complaint by a preponderance of the evidence."

Where no evidence is adduced in support of the allegation in a complaint, the complaint must be dismissed. Department of Defense, Air National Guard, 147th Fighter Group, Texas Air National Guard, Austin, Texas, A/SLMR No. 667, 6 A/SLMR 308 (1976); Department of Housing and Urban Development, Detroit Area Office, Detroit, Michigan, A/SLMR No. 474, 4 A/SLMR 480 (1974).

Even if it were assumed that Complainant's statement of position constituted probative evidence, and I specifically do not consider statements of position to constitute probative evidence, nevertheless, the unfair labor practice, if any, occurred in 1976. Complainant's position is that Respondent on March 15, 1976, stated that it would agree to Complainant's proposed amendment to the parties' collective bargaining agreement; that on March 29, 1976, Respondent refused to agree on Complainant's proposal; and on April 13, 1976, advised Complainant in writing that it would not negotiate on Complainant's proposal because the proposal was non-negotiable. It is Complainant's further position that Respondent suggested that the concerned employees vote on the proposal; that after the employees had voted in favor of the proposal, Respondent, in 1976, again refused to negotiate on the proposal because it was non-negotiable. Whether such conduct, if proved, would or would not constitute an unfair labor practice is not determined, but if Respondent, by virtue of such conduct, committed an unfair labor practice, it did so in 1976 and no charge was filed within six months of the occurrence thereof, as required by Section 203.2(a)(2) of the Regulations to constitute the basis for an unfair labor practice, nor was a complaint filed within nine months of the occurrence thereof, as required by Section 203.2(b)(3) of the Regulations. Accordingly, any unfair labor practice proceeding with respect to acts which occurred in 1976 are barred by the Regulations. Department of Housing and Urban Development, Detroit Area Office, Detroit, Michigan, supra. Although Respondent has continued to assert that Complainant's proposal is non-negotiable, the specific conduct stated by Complainant with regard to initial agreement, withdrawal, suggested vote by concerned employees (presumably Complainant's position inferred that Respondent would agree to its proposal if the employees voted for it) and refusal to agree were not continuing violations. If Respondent, by such conduct, committed an unfair labor practice it did so in 1976.

Finally, Respondent from April 13, 1976, even by Complainant's statement of position, has consistently asserted that Complainant's proposal was non-negotiable. Respondent has changed no established conditions of employment. The assertion by an agency in negotiations that a proposal is non-negotiable is not reviewable under the unfair labor practice procedures of the Order. Army and Air Force Exchange Service, Keesler Consolidated Exchange, A/SLMR No. 144, 2 A/SLMR 170 (1972). Section 11(c) of the Order provides for the resolution of such issues and the Assistant Secretary in the Keesler Consolidated Exchange case, supra, stated:

"... In my view, Section 11(c) of the Order provides the exclusive method for resolving such a dispute. ..." (2 A/SLMR at 175-176).

Although the Executive Order was amended in 1975 to assign to the Assistant Secretary express authority to resolve certain negotiability determinations (Sections 6(a)(4), 11(d)), it is perfectly clear that such authority is expressly limited to those situations where: "an alleged unilateral act by one of the parties requires an initial negotiability determination" (Section 6(a)(4)); "as the result of an alleged unilateral change in, or addition to, personnel policies and practices or matters affecting working conditions, the acting party is charged with a refusal to consult, confer ... the Assistant Secretary may, in the exercise of his authority under Section 6(a)(4) of the Order, make those determinations of negotiability as may be necessary to resolve the ... unfair labor practice. ..." (Section 11(d)). Not only is the language of the Order, as amended, clear, directive and wholly free of ambiguity in this regard, but the accompanying Report and Recommendation of the Federal Labor Relations Council on the Amendment further reaffirms the intention that negotiability disputes which arise in connection with negotiations be resolved under the procedures prescribed by Section 11(c) and not otherwise. Thus, the Report states:

"Thus, if in connection with negotiations, a dispute arises over the negotiability of a proposal and that dispute meets the conditions prescribed in section 11(c) of the Order, it shall be resolved by the Council. ...

* * * *

The amendments which we propose would affirm the authority of the Assistant Secretary ... to resolve negotiability issues ... so long as these issues do not arise in connection with negotiations between the parties but rather as a result of a respondent's alleged refusal to negotiate by unilaterally changing an established personnel policy or practice, or matters affecting working conditions." (Labor-Management Relations in the Federal Service, Report and Recommendation, 1975, pp. 59-61).

Here, Complainant, in negotiations, submitted a proposal to amend the collective bargaining agreement; Respondent refused to negotiate Complainant's specific proposal because Respondent determined that proposal non-negotiable. Respondent stated that it was "available to discuss matters which are negotiable" but Complainant: a) submitted no other proposal; and b) sought no review of the negotiability issue pursuant to Section 11(c) of the Order. Accordingly, even if Respondent's refusal to negotiate on a proposal it first determined was non-negotiable on April 13, 1976, and has consistently thereafter determined the same proposal to be non-negotiable, were assumed to be a continuing refusal to negotiate within the reach of the Complaint, such refusal to negotiate is neither reviewable under the unfair labor practice procedures of the Order nor is the assertion of non-negotiability a violation of Section 19(a)(6) of the Order. Environmental Protection Agency, Washington, D. C., Environmental Protection Agency, Research Triangle Park, North Carolina, A/SLMR No. 943, 7 A/SLMR 1022 (1977); Cf., Environmental Protection Agency, Region VII, Kansas City, Missouri, A/SLMR No. 668, 6 A/SLMR 314 (1976), FLRC No. 76A-87, 4 FLRC 646 (1976).

Of course, Respondent asserts that Complainant's proposal does integrally relate to Respondent's reserved right to establish tours of duty and to determine the numbers and grade levels assigned to each tour to effectively operate its Nursing and Dietetic Services. Respondent's negotiability determination is subject to review pursuant to Section 11(c) of the Order, but is not subject to review under the unfair labor practice procedures of the Order, when, as here, Respondent has made no change in, or addition to, any personnel policies or practices or matters affecting working conditions.

RECOMMENDATION

Having found that Complainant has not proved the allegations of the Complaint by a preponderance of the evidence, indeed Complainant failed and refused to adduce any evidence in support of the allegations of the Complaint; and further, having found that even if Complainant's statement of position were assumed, for the purpose of discussion to be true, nevertheless Respondent has not even pursuant to Complainant's statement of position engaged in certain conduct prohibited by Sections 19(a)(1) and (6) of Executive Order 11491, as amended, and accordingly, I recommend that the Complaint herein be dismissed.

UNITED STATES DEPARTMENT OF LABOR
ASSISTANT SECRETARY FOR LABOR-MANAGEMENT RELATIONS
SUMMARY OF DECISION AND ORDER OF THE ASSISTANT SECRETARY
PURSUANT TO SECTION 6 OF EXECUTIVE ORDER 11491, AS AMENDED

DEPARTMENT OF HEALTH, EDUCATION AND WELFARE,
OFFICE OF THE SECRETARY
A/SLMR No. 1168

This case involved an unfair labor practice complaint filed by the American Federation of Government Employees, Local 1802, AFL-CIO (AFGE) alleging that the Respondent, Department of Health, Education and Welfare (HEW), Office of the Secretary, violated Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order by advertising positions in a newly established Training Institute outside the minimum area of consideration as specified in the negotiated agreement between the AFGE and the Respondent's regional office, Region VIII. The Respondent took the position that the new positions were outside the bargaining unit and, as a result, there was no obligation to abide by the terms of the agreement.

The negotiated agreement in question contained a provision pertaining to the filling of new or vacant positions. One procedure that was outlined specified that for certain grade levels, the minimum area of consideration used to solicit applicants would be region-wide. On August 16, 1977, the Respondent issued the vacancy announcement herein and posted it nationwide.

The Administrative Law Judge noted that a determination as to whether or not the Respondent violated the Executive Order was predicated on a finding that the Institute positions had accreted into the existing bargaining unit. Finding that the Institute employees shared a community of interest with other unit employees, and that the inclusion of such employees would lead to effective dealings and efficiency of agency operations by reducing the possibility of unit fragmentation, the Administrative Law Judge found that the Institute employees accreted into the existing unit. As such, he concluded that the Respondent's conduct, in posting the announcement nationwide, contravened the terms of the parties' negotiated agreement in violation of Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order.

Contrary to the Administrative Law Judge, the Assistant Secretary found that the inclusion of the Institute employees into the Region VIII bargaining unit would not equally satisfy the criteria contained in Section 10(b) of the Order. Noting that the Institute had no organizational relationship with HEW, Region VIII, but, instead, was administratively under the control of its headquarters component in Washington, D.C., and that the Institute was physically located in Region VIII only because of its geographic proximity to those employees for whom it would provide training, and not because of any organizational relationship, the Assistant Secretary found that effective dealings and efficiency of agency operations would not be promoted by including the Institute employees in the unit. Having found that the disputed positions did not accrete into the existing unit, the Assistant Secretary found that the Respondent's conduct in advertising the positions nationwide did not constitute a violation of the Order. In his view, the issue involved essentially a matter of interpretation of the negotiated agreement, rather than a clear and patent breach thereof. Under these circumstances, he noted that the aggrieved party's remedy for such a matter was within the grievance/arbitration machinery of the negotiated agreement, rather than through the unfair labor practice procedures. Accordingly, the Assistant Secretary ordered that the complaint be dismissed.

DECISION AND ORDER

On October 6, 1978, Administrative Law Judge Henry B. Lasky issued his Recommended Decision and Order in the above-entitled proceeding, finding that the Respondent had engaged in certain unfair labor practices and recommending that it cease and desist therefrom and take certain affirmative actions as set forth in the attached Administrative Law Judge's Recommended Decision and Order. Thereafter, the Respondent filed exceptions to the Administrative Law Judge's Recommended Decision and Order.

The Assistant Secretary has reviewed the rulings of the Administrative Law Judge made at the hearing and finds that no prejudicial error was committed. The rulings are hereby affirmed. Upon consideration of the Administrative Law Judge's Recommended Decision and Order and the entire record in the subject case, including the Respondent's exceptions, I hereby adopt the Administrative Law Judge's findings, conclusions, and recommendations, only to the extent consistent herewith.

The complaint herein alleged, in essence, that the Respondent, Department of Health, Education and Welfare (HEW), Office of the Secretary, violated Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order by advertising new positions outside the minimum area of consideration as specified in the negotiated agreement between the Complainant and HEW, Region VIII (Region). The Respondent took the position that the positions involved were outside the bargaining unit and, therefore, it had no obligation to abide by the terms of the agreement.

The Complainant and the Region are parties to a negotiated agreement which became effective on October 26, 1976. The agreement contains a provision pertaining to the filling of new or vacant positions and outlines the various methods by which such positions may be filled. One procedure involves a solicitation of applications from a specified "minimum area of consideration." For positions at the GS-9 to GS-13 levels, the minimum area of consideration is region-wide. 1/

In July 1977, a Training Institute (Institute) was established for the purpose of providing training for employees of the HEW, Office of Civil Rights (OCR) and for those other employees whose duties involve the enforcement of and compliance with civil rights matters. The Institute, which is physically located in the Region, is organizationally a part of the OCR. The OCR, headquartered in Washington, D.C., has ten regional offices, including one in Region VIII, each headed by a regional director. The employees of the OCR assigned to the Region are part of the existing bargaining unit represented exclusively by the Complainant. The Director of the Institute reports to the Director of the OCR's Training Division in Washington, D.C., who, in turn, reports to the Office of the Deputy Director, Compliance and Enforcement. The Regional Director of OCR, Region VIII, reports to this latter Office as well. The evidence establishes that there is no organizational relationship between the Institute and OCR, Region VIII. 2/

A vacancy announcement for four Equal Opportunity Specialist positions, at grades GS-9 through GS-12, in the Institute was posted nationwide by the Respondent on August 16, 1977. 3/ Following the closing date of the announcement, the Complainant contacted officials of the Respondent, as well as the Region's Personnel Office, asserting that the vacancy announcement should have been issued by the Regional Personnel Office which, by the terms of the negotiated agreement, had the appointing authority for bargaining unit positions. In essence, the Respondent replied that the positions were not administratively under the control of the Regional Office and that the classification and appointing authority for such positions was being retained by the Respondent. 4/

1/ The agreement specifies certain exceptions to the minimum area of consideration, but they are not material to the circumstances involved herein.

2/ The only relationship which exists between the Institute and OCR, Region VIII, is that of certain training provided by the former to the latter's employees.

3/ The parties were in dispute as to whether or not the vacancy announcement was posted in Region VIII.

4/ Subsequent to the closing date of the announcement, one employee was reassigned laterally to the position of Equal Opportunity Specialist, GS-11, at the Institute. The announcement with respect to the GS-12 and GS-13 positions was cancelled and the positions had not been filled as of the date of the hearing in this matter.

In reaching his conclusion that the Respondent had violated the Executive Order, the Administrative Law Judge noted that such determination was predicated on a finding that employees of the Institute had accreted into the existing bargaining unit, and that, consequently, the Institute was subject to the provisions of the negotiated agreement. He made such a finding of accretion noting that the inclusion of the employees of the Institute in the exclusively recognized unit satisfied each of the appropriate unit criteria enumerated in Section 10(b) of the Order. 5/ Having found that the Institute's employees had accreted into the exclusively recognized unit, the Administrative Law Judge further found that the Respondent's nationwide posting of the vacancy announcement contravened the terms of the parties' negotiated agreement and was, therefore, violative of Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order. 6/ I disagree.

It has previously been held that unit determinations in cases involving claimed accretions must equally satisfy all three criteria set forth in Section 10(b) of the Order. 7/ In the instant case, although the Administrative Law Judge found factors supporting a finding that a community of interest existed between employees of the Institute and unit employees, he relied essentially on the policy pronouncement of the Federal Labor Relations Council in its Report and Recommendations, dated January 1975, favoring the creation of comprehensive bargaining units, in order to find that the accretion of the Institute employees into the existing unit would promote effective dealings and efficiency of agency operations.

In my view, the evidence presented in the record is insufficient to establish that effective dealings and efficiency of agency operations would be promoted if the Institute employees were included in the existing unit. Thus, the record indicates that there is no organizational relationship between the Institute and OCR, Region VIII, or other organizational components of the Region, and that the Regional Director of OCR, Region VIII, exercises no administrative control over the Institute. With the exception of such services as procurement and personnel for the Institute's clerical staff provided by the Region, all administrative and programmatic control over the Institute is retained by headquarters

5/ Section 10(b) of the Order provides, in pertinent part: "A unit may be established on a plant or installation, craft, functional, or other basis which will ensure a clear and identifiable community of interest among the employees concerned and will promote effective dealings and efficiency of agency operations."

6/ The Administrative Law Judge also found that, while the posting was purportedly nationwide, the vacancy announcement had not, in fact, been posted in the Region.

7/ See, in this regard, Department of the Army, Fort McPherson, Georgia, A/SLMR No. 1005 (1978), FLRC No. 76A-82 (1977).

in Washington, D.C. As noted above, the Director of the Institute reports directly to the head of the Training Division in OCR headquarters, not to any regional authority. Furthermore, as indicated by the Respondent, the location of the Institute was chosen, not because of any organizational relationship between it and the Region, but because of the Institute's geographic proximity to those employees for whom it will provide training. In this regard, the record reveals that the employees being served will come not only from the Region but from regional offices throughout the country.

Under these circumstances, I find that the inclusion of employees of the Institute in the existing exclusively represented bargaining unit will not promote effective dealings or efficiency of agency operations. Therefore, such employees do not constitute an accretion to the existing bargaining unit. In light of this conclusion, the question as to whether or not the provisions of the negotiated agreement apply to positions outside the unit, i.e., positions within the Institute, becomes one of contract interpretation. It is well established, in this regard, that alleged violations of a negotiated agreement which, as here, concern differing and arguable interpretations of such agreement, as distinguished from alleged actions which would constitute a clear and patent breach of the agreement, are not violative of the Order. 8/ In such circumstances, it has been found that the aggrieved party's remedy for such matters lies within the grievance/arbitration machinery of its negotiated agreement, rather than through the unfair labor practice procedures.

Under the circumstances of this case, I find that as the issue in the instant proceeding involves essentially differing and arguable interpretations of the parties' negotiated agreement, the Respondent's conduct did not violate Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order. I shall, therefore, order that the instant complaint be dismissed in its entirety.

ORDER

IT IS HEREBY ORDERED that the complaint in Case No. 22-08683(CA) be, and it hereby is, dismissed.

RECOMMENDED DECISION AND ORDER

Pursuant to a notice of hearing issued on June 13, 1978, by the Regional Administrator for Labor-Management Services Administration for the U. S. Department of Labor, Philadelphia Region, a hearing was held on August 8, 1978, in Denver, Colorado.

This proceeding was initiated under Executive Order 11491, as amended (hereinafter called the Order), by the filing of a complaint dated January 4, 1978, on January 10, 1978, by American Federation of Government Employees, Local 1802, AFL-CIO (hereinafter called the Complainant), which alleged that the Department of Health, Education and Welfare, Office of the Secretary (hereinafter called the Respondent), violated sections 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order when Respondent advertised in Washington, D. C., the availability of new and vacant positions in the Office for Civil Rights at their Training Institute in Denver, Colorado. Complainant is the exclusive collective bargaining representative of all employees, as defined in the collective bargaining agreement. The existing agreement between Complainant and the management of Health, Education and Welfare, Regional Office, Denver, Colorado, dated October 26, 1976, contains an article which provides for the filling of new and vacant positions.

Complainant contends that Respondent, by advertising these positions outside the bargaining unit, violated the agreement and in effect, changed the conditions and terms of the agreement without negotiations. Respondent denies violating the Order and alleges that the employees and vacancies in the Training Institute, Office for Civil Rights, are not part of the recognized bargaining unit represented by Complainant and therefore Respondent's action in advertising the positions in Washington, D. C. was not a violation of the negotiated agreement.

The issues forwarded by the Regional Administrator for decision are, whether the employees located in the Training Institute, Office for Civil Rights, in Denver, Colorado, are part of the recognized bargaining unit represented by AFGE Local 1802, and if so, whether the Respondent's action in posting a vacancy announcement for the filling of these positions in the Training Institute constituted a violation of sections 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order.

At the hearing both parties were represented and afforded full opportunity to be heard, to present evidence, and to examine and cross-examine the witnesses. Post-hearing briefs were allowed to be filed by posting by mail no later than September 25, 1978. The Complainant and the Respondent filed briefs with the undersigned within the time required, which have been duly considered.

Upon the entire record herein, from my observation of the witnesses, and their demeanor, and from all the evidence presented at the hearing, I make the following findings, conclusions, and recommendations.

Findings of Fact

In 1977, the Department of Health, Education and Welfare, Office of the Secretary, issued vacancy announcement 77-242 soliciting applications for employment for four new positions at the Training Institute, Office for Civil Rights located in Denver, Colorado. The nationwide posting occurred from August 16, 1977 through September 7, 1977, and was posted in Washington, D. C. Although there is conflicting evidence, I conclude, based upon the credibility of the witnesses, that Respondent failed to post nationwide because the vacancy announcement was not posted in Respondent's Region VIII, Denver, Colorado. Of the four new positions, three are still vacant, and one was filled as a result of a lateral assignment, and not as a result of the announcement.

After September 7, 1977, the chief steward of the Complainant was called by employees in Denver, complaining that they heard that the vacancy announcement for these new positions was posted in Washington, D. C., and expressed dissatisfaction that they were not made aware of these vacancies until after the solicitation period had expired. The steward unsuccessfully attempted to locate the announcement in Denver, and on September 12, 1977, she ultimately secured a copy from an employee who had obtained the copy in Washington, D. C. The steward contacted the Region VIII personnel officer of the agency in Denver, who acknowledged he was not aware of the particular vacancy announcement and admitted it was not advertised by the Denver Regional Office. The Region VIII personnel officer further acknowledged that the posting of vacancy announcements for positions is normally done outside his office and he never observed it at any time during the posting period.

The organizational chart of Respondent's Office for Civil Rights was admitted into evidence. This office is divided into ten regions nationally, with Region VIII in Denver. The employees of Region VIII are within the bargaining unit. The Regional Office for Civil Rights is organizationally under the control of the Office of Compliance and Enforcement. The Training Institute, in Denver, which is the subject of this case, is part of the Division of Training and is also organizationally within the ambit of the Office of Compliance and Enforcement.

The Office for Civil Rights, Region VIII, is housed in the Denver Federal Building. Respondent argues that the Training Institute is not part of the bargaining unit because it is located in the Blue Cross Building; it is not covered by the collective bargaining agreement because it did not exist at the time of the agreement; the appointing authority for the filling of vacancies in the Training Institute is in Washington, D. C.; there is allegedly no community of interest between the Training Institute and the Regional Office for Civil Rights.

The Training Institute, established July 21, 1977, was designed to train employees for the regional offices of the Office for Civil Rights, including Region VIII. Article 15, section 4(b), of the collective bargaining agreement, provides that new or vacant positions may be filled under various authorities and methods but that applications will be solicited from employees in a specific area called a "minimum area of consideration". A minimum area of consideration is the area in which the agency should reasonably expect to locate enough highly qualified candidates to fill the vacancy and is the smallest area in which a job must be announced. For GS-9/13, the area of consideration is region-wide subject to certain exceptions which are not applicable.

The chief steward of the Complainant, after finally obtaining a copy of vacancy announcement 77-242, immediately sent a mailgram, dated September 13, 1977, to Respondent setting forth the Complainant's position that the posting of the vacancy announcement in Washington, D. C., and not within Region VIII, was a violation of the collective bargaining agreement. In a letter, dated October 12, 1977, Respondent replied that since the positions of the Training Institute are new, no determination has been made as to whether the positions would be in the bargaining unit, and that the appointing and classification authority for the positions is placed in the headquarters component of the Office of the Secretary. However, it was not until November 14, 1977, long after the posting period for the vacancy announcement had expired, that the Respondent withdrew the delegation of authority, and revoked the regional authority to appoint the new positions by reinstating the authority of the Office of the Secretary.

The Training Institute is in the Denver Blue Cross Building, which also contains the Bureau of Hearing and Appeals, whose employees are part of the bargaining unit. The evidence further established that the position descriptions for the Training Institute are similar to the position descriptions for the Regional Office for Civil Rights. The basic knowledge and skills required, with minor variation, render the positions interchangeable. The clerical positions of the Training Institute are part of the bargaining unit and the Region VIII personnel office is permitted to do lower level hiring for the Institute. Although there was conflicting evidence, I conclude, based upon credibility of the witnesses, that the Training Institute and the Office for Civil Rights, Region VIII, share services of the procurement office for supplies and equipment, services of the Region VIII personnel office for clerical help, access to HEW credit union, and other personnel practices and working conditions.

Both the Training Institute as well as the Office for Civil Rights, Region VIII, share the overall common mission which is as follows:

The primary mission of the Office for Civil Rights is to eliminate unlawful discrimination and to ensure equal opportunities for the beneficiaries or potential beneficiaries of federal financial assistance.

In addition, the Training Institute has the function of developing and directing civil rights training programs for the regional offices of the Office for Civil Rights, including Region VIII.

The bargaining unit includes both professional employees of Health, Education, and Welfare, Region VIII, except those professionals in the Food and Drug Administration, and non-professional employees of the Department of Health, Education and Welfare, Region VIII in enumerated organizational components.

Discussion and Conclusions

Complainant herein urges that the few positions sought to be filled by the posting of vacancy announcement 77-242 are part of the bargaining unit represented by AFGE Local 1802. Such assertion is well founded. The appropriateness of a unit must satisfy the criteria of ensuring a clear and identifiable community of interest among the employees concerned and promote effective dealings and efficiency of agency operations. The fact that the positions at the Training Institute were not in existence at the time of the negotiated agreement does not preclude their being part of the bargaining unit for such positions are accretions to the established bargaining unit.

In order to determine whether or not employees are an accretion to an existing bargaining unit, the factors which must be considered include geographic proximity, the physical, functional and administrative integration of units, substantially similar job classifications, similar terms and conditions of employment, common supervision, whether or not the new employees and those in the existing unit are interchangeable, and the role of the new employees in the operations of the existing unit, if any.

It is a combination of factors, rather than any one factor, which dictates whether the Training Institute positions constitute an accretion to the existing bargaining unit. The employees of the Training Institute are located in the same city with Region VIII employees of the Office for Civil Rights who are members of the unit. Admittedly, they occupy different buildings. However, this distinction is without significance because the Training Institute is housed in the Blue Cross Building with other Department of Health, Education and Welfare employees (Bureau of Hearings and Appeals), who are part of the unit. The Training Institute employees, for all practical purposes, share similar terms and conditions of employment with the employees of Office for Civil Rights, Region VIII, as well as with the other department employees in their same building. The Training Institute and the Office for Civil Rights, Region VIII, share an overall common mission, and more importantly, it is the Training Institute which provides training for the regional employees of the Office for Civil Rights. In addition, the employee classifications for the Training Institute are very similar to those classifications of existing unit employees of the Office for Civil Rights, Region VIII, with only minor variation. Consequently, the position descriptions for the Training Institute are substantially the same as those of the Office for Civil Rights, and but for minor variations, the job skills required for the two respective offices are almost interchangeable. Both the Training Institute and the Regional Office for Civil Rights share a common organizational superior as both offices are under the Office of Compliance and Enforcement.

Respondent argues that the Training Institute operates under the supervision of the headquarters office rather than the regional office. This distinction is insufficient, by itself, to negate the clear and identifiable community of interest resulting from the existence of the other factors. The promotion of effective dealings and efficiency of agency operations requires that the Training Institute employees be part of the existing bargaining unit. To hold otherwise, would result in needless artificial fragmentation and impede, rather than promote, effective dealings and efficiency of agency operation.

The fragmented organization of the Respondent's Office for Civil Rights does not require the fragmentation of the bargaining unit. To the contrary, it is the fundamental policy of the Federal Labor Relations Council that the creation of more comprehensive units is a necessary evolutionary step in the development of a labor-management relations program which best meets the needs of the parties in the federal labor-management relations program and best serves the public interest.

We believe that the policy of promoting more comprehensive bargaining units and hence of reducing fragmentation in the bargaining unit structure will foster the development of a sound Federal labor-management relations program. Report and Recommendations of the Federal Labor Relations Council on the Amendment of Executive Order 11491 as amended, January, 1975.

Accordingly, the employees of the Training Institute have a clear and identifiable community of interest with the other employees of the bargaining unit and their inclusion within the bargaining unit will promote effective dealings and efficiency of agency operations as required by section 10(b).

The posting by the Respondent of vacancy announcement 77-242 in Washington, D. C., regardless of whether posted in Denver, was accomplished by Respondent in total disregard of the negotiated agreement with Complainant. Complainant acknowledges that the agency has authority to determine the authority of the regional personnel office; but it cannot do so in an effort to circumvent the negotiated agreement between the union and the activity.

The record herein clearly established that Respondent attempted, by unilateral implementation, to fill the new vacancies in the Training Institute by apparent nationwide posting, thereby superseding and modifying the terms of the negotiated agreement. No adequate explanation for such action was offered by Respondent. The withdrawal of authority of the Region VIII personnel office to fill the vacancies at the Training Institute, after the posting period of the vacancy announcement had expired, was an attempt to legitimate Respondent's prior posting of the vacancy announcement in violation of the negotiated agreement. Not only did Respondent circumvent the negotiated agreement by its actions with reference to the posting, but it is also clear from the record, that the failure to post in Denver, Colorado, constituted a failure to comply with the announcement's own expressed terms that the solicitation of applications be nationwide. The aforesaid factors suggest an intent to avoid applications, for the few new positions, from the Denver area.

It should be noted that when acts are practiced which constitute unfair labor practices by "agency management" as defined in section 2(f) of the Order, there is no basis for drawing artificial distinctions between organizational levels of such agency management in order to relieve them of the responsibility for their acts, which would otherwise be violative of the Order. Naval Air Rework Facility, Pensacola, Florida, and Secretary of the Navy, Washington, D.C., A/SLMR No. 873. Therefore the acts of the Office of the Secretary, Department of Health, Education and Welfare are not immune from a finding of an unfair labor practice under the terms of negotiated collective bargaining agreement entered into by a lower organizational level of agency management.

Respondent relies on the case of Department of Health, Education and Welfare, Social and Rehabilitation Service, A/SLMR No. 632, for the proposition that employees sought to be added to a bargaining unit, who in fact had not been hired, are speculative, and should not be added to the unit. Such reliance is misplaced. In A/SLMR No. 632, no appropriated funds had been made available for the newly established entity and it was a "paper organization." Under the evidence herein, the Training Institute is not a paper organization, but rather a going concern.

It would be inconsistent with the purposes and policies of the Order to permit a higher level of agency management to unilaterally change matters effecting working conditions established by a negotiated agreement when such a change is not required by law or regulations of an appropriate authority. The Department of Transportation, Federal Aviation Administration, Metropolitan Washington Airport Service, Dullis International Airport; and Director, Metropolitan Washington Airports, Federal Agency Administration, A/SLMR No. 1062. Accordingly, the Respondent's actions in posting the vacancy announcement 77-242 was a violation of Article 15, section 4(b) of the collective bargaining agreement and section 19(a)(1) of the Order. The unilateral conduct of the Respondent, additionally, constitutes a failure to meet and confer in good faith with respect to personnel policies and practices and matters affecting working conditions within the meaning of section 11(a) of the Order. Such conduct violated section 19(a)(6) of the Order. I therefore recommend adoption of the following order.

Recommended Order

Pursuant to section 6(b) of Executive Order 11491, as amended, and section 203.26(b) of the regulations, the Assistant Secretary of Labor for Labor-Management Relations hereby orders that the Department of Health, Education and Welfare, Office of the Secretary shall:

1. Cease and desist:

Case No. 53-10241(CA)

ALBERT A. LATAILLE

Complainant

This case involved an unfair labor practice complaint filed by an individual alleging that the Respondent, through its supervisory employee, the Officer in Charge of the Cincinnati Office, engaged in activity in violation of Section 19(a)(1) and (2) of the Order by various acts described as "a systematic scheme designed to harass, isolate and discredit Complainant."

The Administrative Law Judge found that the Respondent had not engaged in the unfair practices alleged in the complaint and recommended that the complaint be dismissed. In this regard, the Administrative Law Judge found that there was not a scintilla of evidence on the record to establish anti-union animus on the part of the Respondent. He also credited the explanation of the Officer in Charge with respect to numerous instances alleged by the Complainant to be attempts to harass and discredit him. In conclusion, the Administrative Law Judge found that there was no evidence in the record that established that the Respondent violated the Order.

Noting particularly the absence of exceptions, the Assistant Secretary adopted the findings, conclusions and recommendation of the Administrative Law Judge and ordered that the complaint be dismissed.

DECISION AND ORDER

On October 24, 1978, Administrative Law Judge Peter McC. Giesey issued his Recommended Decision and Order in the above-entitled proceeding, finding that the Respondent had not engaged in the unfair labor practices alleged in the complaint and recommending that the complaint be dismissed in its entirety. No exceptions were filed to the Administrative Law Judge's Recommended Decision and Order.

The Assistant Secretary has reviewed the rulings of the Administrative Law Judge made at the hearing and finds that no prejudicial error was committed. The rulings are hereby affirmed. Upon consideration of the Administrative Law Judge's Recommended Decision and Order and the entire record in this case, and noting particularly that no exceptions were filed, I hereby adopt the Administrative Law Judge's findings, conclusions and recommendation.

RECOMMENDED DECISION AND ORDER

This is a proceeding brought under Executive Order 11491, as amended (hereafter "the Order") by Albert Lataille, formerly an employee of respondent at its Cincinnati office and steward for the labor organization representing employees in a unit appropriate for collective bargaining purposes.

He complains that respondent, through its supervisory employee, the Officer in charge at the Cincinnati office, engaged in activity in violating of Sections 19(a) (1) and (2) 1/ of the Order by various acts described as "a systematic scheme designed to harrass, isolate and discredit" complainant.

A hearing was held in Cincinnati, Ohio on June 20, 1978. Briefly, the record shows the following.

Statement of the Case

Mr. Lataille testified that he was the only immigration examiner assigned permanently to the Cincinnati office of Immigration and Naturalization during the relevant period. 2/ There were 1300 to 1500 cases pending in that sub-office. Beginning in December, 1976 the (new) officer in charge ("O in C") began to transmit "little handwritten notes" and, later, "full blown directives" to Mr. Lataille directing him to process certain cases. Mr. Lataille testified that he attempted to have the O in C "realign or reassign these cases in the priority in which he wanted them", but he continued to send memos "asking another case be done earlier or later than the one that he already sent in."

Further, he testified that when he began to reply in writing to his supervisor's notes concerning case handling, he was told to cease doing so on pain of being charged with insubordination.

Discussions of work load, priorities and congressional inquiries, according to Lataille, became "a tirade and talk always loud enough ... to make sure everybody in the area heard what was going on." He stated that he felt these occasions were "demeaning ... degrading."

1/ Viz; Sec. 19 Unfair labor practices. (a) Agency management shall not-

(1) interfere with, restrain, or coerce an employee in the exercise of the rights assured by this Order;

(2) encourage or discourage membership in a labor organization by discrimination in regard to hiring, tenure, promotion, or other conditions of employment;

2/ From December, 1976 until Mr. Lataille was separated from the service.

He stated that in late August 1977, "several people informed me that they had been told they could no longer come to me for any kind of advice or anything else [-] I was to be left strictly alone." When he asked his O in C about this, the supervisor explained that "this was so I would have more time to work on my cases." According to Lataille, when reminded that he was the Union steward and therefore needed information and contact with fellow employees, the O in C told him on several occasions "that [neither] the Union nor [Lataille] ran the Office [-] [he] wouldn't discuss it at all with me."

In February, 1977, the O in C delivered a "memorandum of meeting of February 16, 1977" to Mr. Lataille. It stated;

This is written in reference to our discussion on February 16, 1977, concerning your use of government time to conduct Union business and to further prepare your recently filed grievance.

As I stated at the time of our discussion in the late afternoon of February 16, 1977, in no case are you to conduct internal Union business on official time. Additionally, as on December 27, 1976, you took two hours of official duty time to prepare a grievance, you were then advised and on February 16, 1977, again advised that you were not to further use official duty time in preparation of that grievance. You were further reminded on February 16, 1977, that you are not to use the government telephones to conduct Union business or to further discuss your grievance with your Union representatives.

It is hoped that in the future you will conduct your Union business in a professional manner consistent with the INS/AFGE Negotiated Agreement.

Mr. Lataille also asserted that "on at least three occasions" the O in C interrupted his "lunch period" to discuss business, an asserted conflict with a provision of the collective bargaining agreement providing for uninterrupted lunch periods.

Concerning the grievance mentioned, supra, Mr. Lataille testified that he heard that upon its filing in the district office, the director of that office "approached a number of persons in [that] office and disseminated the information that was in it and questioned the propriety of a Union Steward filing a grievance in the name of the Union."

Three fellow employees and the O in C corroborated many of the facts to which Mr. Lataille testified, such as the numerous memos and the arguments between the O in C and Mr. Lataille. An immigration inspector trainee who worked with Mr. Lataille at the time of the events recited by him remembered only one argument between the O in C and Lataille in which voices were raised " and I think they adjourned to the Officer in Charge's office."

The president of the labor organization, employed in the Cleveland office, testified that within three months of the arrival of the new O in C in Cincinnati the union had a great increase in membership in the office. She testified that when the union members heard that Mr. Lataille had filed an unfair labor practice charge and learned the nature of the charge, "many members threatened to quit" and "the district representative of the union recommended "to keep peace ... we continue to support Mr. Lataille but that the Cleveland District not take any active part."

The O in C, Cincinnati, testified that he had sent many memos to Mr. Lataille concerning overage cases only after discovering that his verbal directives were ignored, that he directed Lataille to cease replying in writing to these memos because his replies included discussions of internal disagreements between personnel of the Service and were an improper inclusion in aliens' files. He further stated that he had restricted Mr. Lataille's use of the office telephone for internal union business and that, after Mr. Lataille explained that his inability to process cases as requested was in part owing to frequent interruptions by fellow employees, he instructed several employees to stop taking their questions to Lataille and address them to O in C. He explained that Mr. Lataille frequently ate his lunch at his desk and that on two or three occasions when he stopped at Lataille's desk to ask him a question, Lataille became "very irate" and "holler[ed] at me that I was interrupting his lunch period." The O in C explained that "it was hard to tell" when Lataille was engaged in his lunch period because he sat at his desk and, at the times referred to, there was no food in sight. He also testified that, when told by Lataille that he was engaged in his lunch period, he immediately ceased his conversation and left the room.

Findings of Fact and Conclusions of Law

Having considered the entire record including the testimony, exhibits and briefs of the parties and having observed the demeanor of the witnesses, I make the following findings of fact, conclusions of law and recommended decision and order based thereon.

At the beginning of the hearing, the parties stipulated that there were nine "allegations that are at issue here."

First, whether the specifications brought against Mr. Lataille were motivated by "a pervasive antiunion animus".

Second, whether the "use of written directives involving immigration cases assigned Mr. Lataille ... were borne out of antiunion animus."

Third, whether "meetings ... and other personal contact with [the O in C] in front of other employees ... were used to bait and upset [complainant], thus discouraging union membership."

Fourth, whether the O in C told employees "not to talk to Mr. Lataille in order to isolate him from employees he was supposed to represent as union steward."

Fifth, whether "depletion in union membership on or about September of 1977 was due to the overall antiunion sentiment in the office."

Sixth, whether "restrictions were placed on Mr. Lataille regarding ... telephone [use] for union business."

Seventh, whether complainant was "interrupted during lunch periods" in violation of the collective bargaining agreement.

Eighth, whether the O in C "directed [claimant] to discontinue written memoranda responses ... inhibit[ing] Mr. Lataille's authority to perform his work."

Ninth, whether the District Director discussed with employees an unfair labor practice charge filed by Mr. Lataille.

It is unnecessary to the decision here to address the doubtful question of whether several of these "allegations that are at issue" if established would constitute unfair labor practices. I will assume that, given certain other circumstances, each would.

The first is dependent upon the establishment of some evidence of antiunion animus on the part of management. This is also true of numbers two, three, and four. Not a scintilla of substantial evidence on this record indicates that management harbored any such animus. Moreover, when shorn of adjectives, speculation and descriptions of subjective feelings, the only testimony indicating the existence of antiunion animus was that of the president of the labor organization. Thus, she described the antiunion reaction of employees when they learned that their bargaining agent might become involved in the litigation of an unfair labor practice charge against their employer filed by Mr. Lataille. Nothing in this record indicates that their threats to quit were motivated by anything other than judgment of the subject matter of the charge.

The fifth allegation, that "depletion of union membership, etc." fails simply because the only evidence of record concerning union membership is the union president's testimony that, following the O in C's arrival in Cincinnati "we had a great increase in membership in Cincinnati."

The O in C's credible explanation and the written notice concerning Mr. Lataille's use of the agency's telephone for internal union business (Compl. Exhib. #1) effectively dispose of allegation number six since section 20 of the Order provides in part that "internal business of a labor organization shall be conducted during non-duty hours...."

Allegation number seven must fail simply because the interruptions alleged did not occur in the manner and under the circumstances asserted. The O in C's explanation was credible and demonstrates circumstances undenied by complainant.

The circumstances constituting allegation number eight were similarly explained in a credible and reasonable manner by the O in C. That complainant did not fully understand the O in C's reasons for his action is regrettable, but in no way the responsibility of the O in C who explained his action in clear, unambiguous terms to complainant at the time and on the record at hearing.

Finally, there is no credible evidence on the record that the District Director ever "discussed" the earlier unfair labor practice charge with any employee. Assuming that he remarked concerning the propriety of complainant's presumption in filing such a charge on behalf of the labor organization rather than by himself as an individual, he simply reflected the concern of the employees themselves - who threatened to quit the union because of this matter, according to complainant's witness. In any case, discussion, as here, of such matters under non-coercive circumstances in a manner not tending to denigrate the labor organization's status does not constitute an unfair labor practice.

Accordingly, I recommend that the Assistant Secretary dismiss the complaint in its entirety.

This case involved an unfair labor practice complaint filed by the American Federation of Government Employees, AFL-CIO, Local 1760 (Complainant) alleging that the Respondent violated Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order by unilaterally implementing new parking rules relating to certain parking spaces without bargaining with respect to the impact and implementation of the change.

The Assistant Secretary found, in agreement with the Administrative Law Judge, that the Respondent did not improperly fail to bargain on the impact and implementation of a change in rules concerning the use of certain parking spaces at the Respondent's facility, as alleged in the complaint. In making this finding, the Assistant Secretary noted that at the June 20, 1977, meeting between representatives of the Respondent and the Complainant, the Respondent's representative notified the Complainant that it intended to change the rules governing certain parking spaces used by unit employees to prohibit parking of personal vehicles; that the Respondent sought and received the Complainant's comments and proposals on the change in parking rules, which it considered and rejected; and that the Complainant was advised that if it wished to bargain on the parking issue, it could contact the Chief of the Facilities Management Branch (FMB). The evidence established that the Complainant never contacted the Chief of the FMB. Rather, the record revealed that the subsequent meeting of July 11, 1977, at which time the Complainant was notified that the change in parking rules would be put into effect on July 14, 1977, was called by the Chief of the FMB and was not in response to any request to bargain by the Complainant.

Under these circumstances, the Assistant Secretary found that on June 20, 1977, the Complainant had received ample notice of the Respondent's intent to change the parking rules prior to the change on July 14, 1977, and that the Complainant bargained with the Respondent on the impact and implementation of such change at the June 20, 1977, meeting. Furthermore, he found that after the June 20, 1977, meeting, the Complainant did not diligently seek bargaining with the Respondent. Therefore, he concurred with the Administrative Law Judge that the Respondent had not engaged in conduct violative of Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order and ordered that the complaint be dismissed in its entirety.

DECISION AND ORDER

On October 19, 1978, Administrative Law Judge Louis Scalzo issued his Recommended Decision in the above-entitled proceeding, finding that the Respondent had not engaged in the unfair labor practices alleged in the complaint and recommending that the complaint be dismissed in its entirety. Thereafter, the parties filed exceptions to the Administrative Law Judge's Recommended Decision and the Complainant filed an answering brief to the Respondent's exceptions.

The Assistant Secretary has reviewed the rulings of the Administrative Law Judge made at the hearing and finds that no prejudicial error was committed. The rulings are hereby affirmed. Upon consideration of the Administrative Law Judge's Recommended Decision, and the entire record in this case, including the exceptions filed by the parties and the answering brief to the Respondent's exceptions filed by the Complainant, I hereby adopt the Administrative Law Judge's findings, conclusions and recommendation.

In agreeing with the Administrative Law Judge that the Respondent did not improperly fail to bargain on the impact and implementation of a change in rules concerning the use of certain parking spaces at the Respondent's facility, as alleged in the complaint, I note that at the June 20, 1977, meeting between representatives of the Respondent and the Complainant, the Respondent's representative notified the Complainant that the rules governing certain parking spaces used by unit employees would soon be changed to prohibit parking of personal vehicles; that the Respondent sought and received the Complainant's comments and proposals on the change in parking rules which it considered and rejected; and that the Complainant was informed that if it wished to bargain on the parking issue, it could contact the Chief of the Facilities Management Branch (FMB). The evidence establishes that the Complainant never contacted the Chief of the FMB. Rather, the record reveals that the subsequent meeting of July 11, 1977, at which time the Complainant was notified that the change in parking rules would be put into effect on July 14, 1977, was called by the Chief of the FMB and was not in response to any request to bargain by the Complainant.

Under these circumstances, I find that on June 20, 1977, the Complainant received ample notice of the Respondent's intent to change parking rules prior to the effectuation of the change on July 14, 1977. Further, the Complainant bargained with the Respondent on the impact and implementation of such change at the June 20, 1977, meeting, and the Complainant did not thereafter diligently seek further to bargain in this regard with the Respondent. Accordingly, I concur with the Administrative Law Judge's conclusion that the Respondent's conduct herein was not violative of Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order. 1/and (6) of the Order by unilaterally implementing new parking rules relating to certain parking spaces utilized in connection with the main building of the NEPSC without negotiating with respect to the implementation and adverse impact of the change.

Respondent contends that the labor management agreement binding the parties provides for consultation rather than negotiation at the Local level, that management has no obligation to negotiate at the Local level, that management met its obligation to consult, and lastly that the change implemented was simply necessary enforcement of existing General Services Administration (GSA) regulations.

Findings of Fact

1. Stipulations

The following stipulations, among others, offered for the record as Joint Exhibit 1, and/or as oral stipulations, are accepted as true:

1. BRSI has six program service centers, one in each of six major cities. The one involved herein, the NEPSC, is located in Flushing, New York.
2. These centers are responsible for review and adjudication of retirement and survivors' claims, health insurance entitlement, supplementary medical insurance premium collection, certification of benefit payments, and maintenance of retirement and survivors' insurance beneficiary rolls.
3. The management team in each of the six program service centers is headed by a Director, with assistance from a Director of Management and Operations.

RECOMMENDED DECISION

Statement of the Case

This case arises under Executive Order 11491 as amended, (hereinafter referred to as the Order). It was initiated by the filing of an unfair labor practice complaint on October 17, 1977, by Local 1760, American Federation of Government Employees, AFL-CIO (herein referred to as the Complainant, Local or Union) against the Northeastern Program Service Center (NEPSC), Bureau of Retirement and Survivors Insurance (BRSI), Social Security Administration, Department of Health, Education and Welfare (herein referred to as Respondent or management). It alleged that Respondent violated Sections 19(a)(1)

- 6. The National Office of the American Federation of Government Employees, AFL-CIO (National Council of Social Security Payment Center Locals) is the exclusively recognized representative for a bargaining unit consisting of all nonsupervisory employees (except management officials and employees engaged in federal personnel work other than clerical) in the Social Security Administration's six program service centers.
- 7. The American Federation of Government Employees National Council of Social Security Payment Center Locals serve their respective memberships at each of six payment centers, with Local 1760, being the Local at the NEPSC.
- 8. The National Council of Social Security Payment Center Locals, through six affiliated Locals, has exclusive representation rights for the nonsupervisory employees in the six program service centers.
- 9. On June 29, 1971, the first negotiated Master Agreement between the parties became effective, and subsequently a renegotiated Master Agreement between the parties was approved and became effective on November 20, 1972. The third negotiated Master Agreement between the parties became effective on March 15, 1974, and is currently in effect.

2. General

The record reflects that a lease executed by GSA and the LSS Leasing Corporation provided parking "space for ten (10) government vehicles in the parking area located in the rear of 96-05 Horace Harding Expressway...." (Joint Exhibit 3 at page 9 of lease dated February 5, 1970). These ten spaces, situated to the rear of the main building of the NEPSC, were made available to NEPSC management, together with an additional ten parking spaces located elsewhere, and provided to the NEPSC in a separate lease agreement executed on June 4, 1965, by GSA and a private lessor. Only six of the ten spaces provided in the February 5, 1970, lease pertain to the unfair labor practice complaint being considered. These were assigned to the Chief of the NEPSC Facilities Management Branch (FMB) for use by that Branch. 1/

The FMB has the task of providing maintenance and service at the Center. It has responsibility for supervising approximately a dozen contractors who visit the facility. The six spaces were provided to the FMB to accommodate the need for parking vehicles visiting the NEPSC on official business related to the work of the Center. A Vice President of Local 1760 acknowledged that the six spaces were allocated to the FMB to provide accommodations for "official government vehicles." (Tr. 41). Counsel for the Complainant acknowledged that terminology in the lease providing the space in question meant that space was designed for vehicles purchased by the government, or vehicles being used in pursuit of government business. (Tr. 144-145).

3. FMB Employees Allowed to Utilize Six Parking Spaces

Officials responsible for the management of FMB established a practice of allowing FMB employees to park their personal vehicles in the six spaces allocated to FMB. However, in the late spring or early summer of 1975, the Chief of the FMB complained to officials of the Local that undesirable traffic congestion was being generated in the parking area as a result of the practice, that parking regulations were being violated, and that management was going to have to discontinue the practice of allowing FMB employees to use the six spaces. 2/ An agreement was reached whereby all FMB employees were to be permitted the option of parking in the six spaces on a biweekly rotational basis. This system was designed to facilitate the interests of the Respondent as well as employees. The practice continued without interruption for approximately two years. Approximately sixteen FMB employees were involved in the rotation scheme.

1/ The six are designated as spaces thirty through thirty-five on Respondent's Exhibit 4. The record indicates that four of the ten provided in the February 5, 1970 lease were not located at the rear of 96-05 Horace Harding Expressway, and that these four, together with the ten parking spaces provided in the lease executed on June 4, 1965, have, under the authority of the NEPSC Director, been permanently assigned to top management personnel located at the NEPSC.

2/ The meeting was attended by Eric Schlesinger, Chief of the FMB, and James Armet and Jack Katzker, officials of Local 1760.

4. June 20, 1977 Meeting Relating to Parking Space Issue

Testimony disclosed that problems posed by the use of the six spaces by FMB personnel began to surface in the summer of 1977. Julian Bergman, a labor relations specialist was instructed by the Respondent to take up the problem with the Local, as management intended to issue a memorandum prohibiting the use of the six spaces for non-government vehicles.

On June 20, 1977, Mr. Bergman attended a meeting with representatives of Local 1760 to discuss various subjects, including the parking issue. The Union was represented by Mr. Collender, Mr. Armet, and Mr O'Leary, all officials of the Local. The record disclosed that discussion of the parking issue was sought by Mr. Bergman to elicit the concerns of employees; to determine the impact of the proposed decision to discontinue the parking of personal vehicles in the six spaces; to discuss issues relating to implementation; and to seek the views of the Local regarding implementation.

The Union was advised that a memo was being drawn up which would have the effect of prohibiting use of the six spaces for the parking of personal vehicles. The reasons for the intended action were explained with reference being made to the lease and GSA regulatory provisions relating to parking generally, traffic congestion caused by the practice, obstruction of government vehicles moving through the area, blockage of loading docks, and difficulty in finding parking space for vehicles entering the area to provide services to the NEPSC.

A key problem discussed related to inconvenience to individuals renting nearby space from an Employees Activities Association. The Association leased a block of thirty-five spaces in the general area wherein the six spaces in question were located. The record established that the use of the rotation plan was interfering with individual users of Employees Activity Association parking spaces. 3/

Mr. Bergman requested the comments of the Local on the proposal to discontinue the practice of using the space by FMB employees, and Union Representatives made certain proposals in response. It was suggested that the same parking practice be continued with Mr. Armet, as a Union official, being given jurisdiction to administer the rotation system. In this regard, the Union proposed that Mr. Armet be provided with more official time than was then provided in the Master Agreement so that he would be able to police the area. It was also suggested that those abusing the practice be controlled and that parking by FMB personnel be allowed to continue. These proposals were rejected by the Respondent, and the Union was advised that the Respondent intended to implement the change in the very near future.

In response to a request to bargain concerning the parking issue, the union representatives were advised that they could contact Mr. Schlesinger further concerning the issue since the change concerned the operations of the FMB, or that Mr. Schlesinger would contact them. Mr. Schlesinger was not contacted by the Union.

5. July 11, 1977, Meeting Relating to Parking Space Issue

The record disclosed that about a week prior to July 11, 1977, Mr. Bergman suggested to Mr. Schlesinger that he contact union representatives about the change previously discussed. Mr. Schlesinger was told to do this when Mr. Schlesinger received written instruction concerning the change contemplated.

On July 11, 1977, a memorandum outlining the proposed change and the reasons for it was received by Mr. Schlesinger from William F. Kuntz, Director of Management. (Assistant Secretary Exhibit 1). The memorandum, dated July 11, 1977, 3/ The Employees Activity Association concession was not a government activity. Due to the interference outlined, the Association was having some difficulty collecting rent for spaces leased. Two Association parking spaces were immediately adjacent to the six spaces provided for government vehicles.

outlined the problems posed by the practice and noted the fact that the six spaces were originally set aside for the purpose of parking official government vehicles, and for use by suppliers or scheduled visitors. It informed that as of July 14, 1977, the space would be used only for government vehicles and/or official government business.

On July 11th, the date of receipt of the Kuntz memorandum, Mr. Schlesinger phoned Mr. Jack Katzker to advise that he wished to consult with the Union regarding the parking space issue. On the same date Mr. Schlesinger and another FMB management official met with Mr. Katzker, who together with two union stewards, represented the Local.

A copy of the memorandum was supplied to the Union and its content was discussed. It was announced that the policy would not be put in operation immediately, but that the policy would be effectuated on July 14, 1977. Through the testimony of Mr. Katzker it was established that the meeting involved more than a mere discussion. The transcript reflects the following:

By Mr. Dippel:

Q. . . . Now, wasn't it really just a discussion between you and Mr. Schlesinger along with the people you mentioned who were there on July 11?

A. I think no. There was some bargaining that went on at the session, sir, I don't think it was just a discussion. (Tr. 30).

Ensuing portions of Mr. Katzker's testimony make it clear that Mr. Katzker understood that he was negotiating with Mr. Schlesinger concerning the issue. However, Mr. Schlesinger indicated that the policy would be implemented as planned, and that there would be no further delay. Mr. Katzker responded that if the policy were to be implemented it should be administered fairly and without favoritism. Mr. Katzker informed Mr. Schlesinger that he intended to refer the matter to the president of the Local. Thereafter, Respondent made arrangements to implement the new policy on July 14, 1977.

Conclusions of Law

The Respondent contends that the national office of the American Federation of Government Employees is the bargaining agent for the employees of the six program service centers, that the Respondent had no obligation to negotiate with Local 1760 except as to supplemental agreements referred to in Article 30 of the written agreement, and further that management's responsibility is limited under the agreement (Article 2, Section (e), and Article (6)) to conferring and consulting with affiliated locals. (Joint Exhibit 2). These arguments must be rejected in the light of recent decisions involving the same parties and essentially the same issues. Department of Health, Education and Welfare, Social Security Administration, BRSI, Northeastern Program Service Center, A/SLMR No. 1101; Department of Health, Education and Welfare, Social Security Administration, Bureau of Retirement and Survivors Insurance, A/SLMR No. 1022; Department of Health, Education and Welfare, Social Security Administration, BRSI, Northeastern Program Service Center, A/SLMR No. 984.

It should be noted that the decision of Administrative Law Judge William Naimark in Department of Health, Education and Welfare, Social Security Administration, BRSI, Northeastern Program Service Center, A/SLMR No. 1101 is, without more, completely dispositive of the issue raised with respect to the claimed limitation on Respondent's obligation to bargain.

The Assistant Secretary has had occasion to consider similar factual situations in at least two other cases. Social Security Administration, Bureau of Hearings and Appeals, A/SLMR No. 828; and General Services Administration, Region 3, Public Buildings Service, Central Support Field Office, A/SLMR No. 583. These cases clearly hold that parking privileges are working conditions concerning which management, under Section 11(a), has an obligation to negotiate. 4/ However, in this case the Complainant merely alleges a failure to participate in bargaining with respect to implementation and adverse impact of management's discontinuance of the parking practice. It is unnecessary to determine whether there has been a failure to negotiate concerning the decision to change the practice in the first instance.

4/ Respondent claims that GSA regulations which were then in effect (as of July 1977) operated to preclude the parking practice in question. These regulations imposed responsibility on GSA for "determining what space in and around existing government-owned properties under its custody and control may be utilized for vehicle parking purposes." (41 CFR §101-20.111-1, July 1, 1977, edition). They also provided for GSA establishment of a rigid order of priority placing the parking of privately owned vehicles of employees not otherwise accommodated, far below parking relating to what may be characterized as official government purposes. (41 CFR §101-20.111-2, July 1, 1977 edition).

Under the provisions of Section 203.15 of the regulations of the Assistant Secretary, 29 CFR §203.15, the Complainant must prove the allegations of the complaint by a preponderance of the evidence. A careful analysis of the record discloses a failure of proof. The evidence indicates that a pattern of good faith bargaining did occur despite the position taken by Respondent with respect to negotiability. In this regard, reference must be made to Respondent's assignment of Mr. Bergman to discuss the issue with representatives of the Local; to the convening of a meeting with key Local officials on June 20, 1977, for the purpose of determining the impact of the proposed decision, and to discuss issues relating to implementation; to Mr. Bergman's request for the views of the Local; to consideration given to Union proposals on June 20, 1978; and lastly to a similar pattern of bargaining with representatives of the Local on July 11, 1977.

An official of the Local called to testify by the Complainant brought out the fact that bargaining continued at the July 11, 1977, meeting. In fact, the record developed indicates that at the July 11th meeting, a representative of the Local acquiesced in the change contemplated provided the change were implemented without favoritism.

Although the policy articulated in the cited regulatory provisions would appear to impose restrictions on the Respondent, it is noted that the regulations in question were not applicable to parking space acquired by lease. The regulations were restricted in application to "government-owned properties." Since the space in question was not "government-owned," the regulations cited may not be construed as a limitation upon the obligation to bargain in this case. Moreover, even assuming the applicability of these regulations, the Assistant Secretary has held that, although an illegal practice may be discontinued unilaterally by a government agency, there is a residual obligation to meet and confer on the procedures to be utilized in enforcing the law, and on the impact of such discontinuance on adversely affected employees. Department of the Army, Dugway Proving Ground, Dugway, Utah, A/SLMR No. 745.

Although there is considerable evidence of uncertainty on the part of Respondent with respect to the issue of negotiability, the record does establish that the Respondent actually did engage in good faith bargaining to the extent requested. A review of the evidence relating to the conduct of the parties convinces that whatever Respondent may have said concerning the negotiability of the parking space issue, and however the parties characterized their own conduct, what actually occurred constituted bargaining in good faith. Such is sufficient to meet Respondent's obligation under the Order and labor management relations agreement.

RECOMMENDATION

Having found that Respondent has not engaged in conduct prohibited by Sections 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order, it is recommended that the complaint herein be dismissed in its entirety.

PURSUANT TO SECTION 6 OF EXECUTIVE ORDER 11491, AS AMENDED

U.S. ARMY RESERVE, 166th SUPPORT GROUP, FORT BUCHANAN, PUERTO RICO
A/SLMR No. 1171

This case involved a petition for clarification of unit filed by American Federation of Government Employees, AFL-CIO, Local 2614 (AFGE) seeking to clarify the unit eligibility of eight employees in four job classifications. The Activity contended that all the employees involved should be excluded from the AFGE's exclusively recognized unit.

The Assistant Secretary found the Budget Analyst, GS-9, not to be a management official, confidential employee, or supervisor. Further, he found that two incumbents classified as Staff Training Assistant, GS-9, located in the 448th Engineer Battalion and the 346th Transportation Battalion of the Activity, not to be management officials or supervisors. Finding insufficient evidence on the record to make a determination as to the supervisory status of the Staff Training Assistant, GS-11, and the Staff Training Assistant, GS-9, of the 2nd Maneuver Training Command, the Assistant Secretary made no finding as to their unit eligibility. The Assistant Secretary also found the two incumbents of the classification Staff Administrative Assistant, GS-9, to be supervisors, and the Public Information Officer, GS-9, to be a management official.

Accordingly, the Assistant Secretary clarified the unit consistent with his findings.

DECISION AND ORDER CLARIFYING UNIT

Upon a petition duly filed under Section 6 of Executive Order 11491, as amended, a hearing was held before Hearing Officer Marcelino Rodriguez Ruiz. The Hearing Officer's rulings made at the hearing are free from prejudicial error and are hereby affirmed.

Upon the entire record in this case, the Assistant Secretary finds:

The Petitioner, American Federation of Government Employees, AFL-CIO, Local 2614 (AFGE) seeks to clarify the unit eligibility of eight employees in four job classifications. 1/ The Activity contends that

1/ At the hearing in this matter, the parties stipulated that the employee classified as Military Personnel Officer, GS-11, is engaged in Federal personnel work in other than a purely clerical capacity and, therefore, should be excluded from the unit. In the context of a unit clarification petition, such a stipulation is viewed as a motion to amend the petition in order to delete and, in effect, withdraw the petition as to the stipulated job classification. Under these circumstances, the motion to amend is hereby granted, and I therefore find it unnecessary to clarify the status of the employee in the stipulated job classification. Cf. Sheppard Technical Training Center, 3750th Air Base Group, Sheppard Air Force Base, Texas, A/SLMR No. 1000 (1978).

The parties stipulated further that no temporary employees are presently employed by the Activity. Under such circumstances, I find that it would not effectuate the purposes and policies of the Order to clarify a unit in the absence of facts relating to actual employees. Accordingly, the subject petition, insofar as it seeks to clarify the unit status of temporary employees, is hereby dismissed. Cf. Army and Air Force Exchange Service, Golden Gate Exchange Region, Storage and Distribution Branch, Norton Air Force Base, California, 2 A/SLMR 424, A/SLMR No. 190 (1972).

the employees in the job classifications of Staff Administrative Assistant and Staff Training Assistant should be excluded from the AFGE's exclusively recognized unit 2/ as they are management officials and supervisors; that the Public Information Officer should be excluded as either a management official or confidential employee; and that the Budget Analyst should be excluded as a management official, confidential employee or supervisor. The AFGE contends that the employees in the job classifications in question are eligible for inclusion within its unit.

The Activity, headquartered at Fort Buchanan, Puerto Rico, is subdivided into two battalions and various support units consisting of approximately 26 subordinate units located throughout the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico. Its civilian mission consists of the necessary planning, preparing, training, budgeting, and personnel management with regard to its various subordinate units in order to support the military mission.

Staff Administrative Assistant, GS-9

The Activity contends that the two incumbents in this position are management officials and supervisors. The incumbents are Staff Administrative Assistants (SAA) for the respective Commanders of two Station Hospitals. The record reveals that each SAA assists in the formulation of his unit's policy in the areas of training, maintenance, supply and administration. Each is a GS-9, and has working under him a Staff Administrative Specialist, GS-7, an Administrative Supply Technician, GS-6, and an Administrative Supply Technician, GS-5. The incumbents approve leave, assign work and effectively recommend awards for these employees. The evidence establishes that the foregoing exercise of authority is not of a merely routine or clerical nature but requires the use of independent judgment.

Under these circumstances, I find the incumbent SAA's to be supervisors within the meaning of Section 2(c) of the Order who should be excluded from the exclusively recognized unit. 3/

Staff Training Assistant, GS-9 and GS-11

The Activity contends that the four incumbents are management officials and supervisors. The GS-11 Staff Training Assistant (STA) is employed in the Operations and Training Section of the Activity's headquarters. The 2/ The AFGE was granted exclusive recognition for the unit herein on December 23, 1977. The record indicates that the unit is composed of all (civilian) employees of the 166th Support Group, U.S. Army Reserve in Puerto Rico, excluding professional employees, employees engaged in Federal personnel work in other than a purely clerical capacity, management officials, and supervisors as defined by the Order.

3/ In view of the above disposition, it was considered unnecessary to decide whether the two SAA's should be excluded from the unit on the basis that they are management officials.

record reveals that the GS-11 STA serves as the technical advisor to the Commanding General of the Activity regarding all phases of training within the Activity, and oversees the technical performance of STA's in the subordinate units. The three GS-9 STA's serve as technical advisors to their respective unit commanders regarding training within their units. The record reveals that the role of the incumbents of this classification does not go beyond that of an expert or professional rendering resource information. Thus, such employees do not effectively influence the making of policy within their respective units regarding personnel, procedures, or programs. 4/

Under these circumstances, I find that the four disputed employees are not management officials within the meaning of the Order and, therefore, should be included in the exclusively recognized unit. 5/

Public Information Officer, GS-9

The Activity contends that the employee in this position is either a management official or a confidential employee. The Public Information Officer is on the personal staff of the Commanding General of the Activity. The employee's immediate supervisor is the General's Supervisory Staff Administrative Assistant. The principal mission of this civilian position is to serve as the Commanding General's representative and spokesman for all internal and public relations matters. In this connection, the record shows that the Public Information Officer develops internal and external information programs, is responsible for developing and coordinating the Activity's civic action program, and serves as the General's liaison with local government agencies, Federal agencies in Puerto Rico, the Puerto Rico National Guard, the Coast Guard, and the other military services in Puerto Rico. The incumbent writes news items for Activity publications, calls press conferences, and is otherwise responsible for the release of information to the public.

The evidence establishes that the incumbent, in essence, determines the Activity's policies regarding public information, command information, and community relations, as they apply locally, with some guidance from 4/ See Department of the Air Force, Arnold Engineering Development Center, Air Force Systems Command, Arnold Air Force Station, Tennessee, 2 A/SLMR 83, A/SLMR No. 135 (1972).

5/ At the hearing, the Activity conceded that the two GS-9 STA's located in the 448th Engineer Battalion and the 346th Transportation Battalion are not supervisors. Having found that these two incumbents are not management officials, I conclude that they should be included in the exclusively recognized unit. With regard to the GS-11 STA and the GS-9 STA assigned to the 2nd Maneuver Training Command, in view of the lack of sufficient evidence to make a determination regarding their supervisory status, I will make no finding in this regard as to their unit eligibility.

higher level directives. In this connection, the Public Information Officer works in close concert with the Commanding General and the record further reveals that the General usually approves the incumbent's policy recommendations.

Based on the foregoing, I find that the functions performed by the incumbent align the interests of such an employee more closely with that of personnel who formulate, determine, and oversee policy than with personnel who carry out the resultant policy. Moreover, the role performed by the incumbent goes beyond that of an expert or professional rendering resource information, but, rather, consists of active participation in the ultimate determination of policy. Accordingly, I find that the Public Information Officer is a management official within the meaning of the Order and, as such, should be excluded from the exclusively recognized unit. 6/

Budget Analyst, GS-9

The Activity contends that the incumbent should be excluded from the unit as management official, supervisor, or confidential employee. The record reveals that although the incumbent's grade level is GS-9 and his job title and job description are that of a Budget Analyst, the employee is performing the duties of a GS-11 Budget Officer. His military supervisor is the Activity's Comptroller, who visits the office once a month to perform his duties as a reservist. The incumbent's civilian, day-to-day supervisor is the Commanding General's Supervisory Staff Administrative Assistant.

The record indicates that the Office of the Comptroller is responsible for developing and executing the Activity's budget. The incumbent performs these responsibilities by analysis, rationalization, and application of guidelines coming from the Commanding General of the Activity and from higher headquarters. The guidelines are detailed, setting forth established priorities. The incumbent's other duties include reconciliation of unliquidated obligations, matching manpower requirements versus authorizations, and helping to prepare manpower surveys within the Activity.

Under the foregoing circumstances, I find that the incumbent is not a management official within the meaning of the Order. Although the record reveals that the incumbent necessarily exercises discretion and independent judgment in the performance of his duties, I find that his role is limited to rendering resource information or recommendations, rather than active participation in the ultimate determination of what policy, in fact, will be. 7/

6/ Cf. 926th Tactical Airlift Group, U.S. Air Force Reserve, Naval Air Station, Belle Chasse, Louisiana, 2 A/SLMP 557, 561-62, A/SLMP No. 221 (1972). In view of the above, it was considered unnecessary to decide whether the Public Information Officer should be excluded from the unit on the basis that the incumbent is a confidential employee.

7/ Cf. Internal Revenue Service, Officer of the Regional Commissioner, Southeast Region, 5 A/SLMR 625, 628, A/SLMR No. 565 (1975).

Nor do I find the incumbent to be a confidential employee. Although he has free access to the Commanding General pursuant to his budgetary responsibilities, the evidence establishes that the incumbent has no duties in regard to labor relations matters, no access to confidential records or memoranda regarding employees, and otherwise does not deal with personnel matters or records.

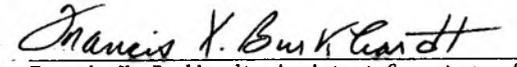

With respect to the Activity's assertion that the subject employee is a supervisor, the record indicates that a GS-4 Budget Clerk works in the Office of the Comptroller along with the incumbent. However, in this regard, the record reveals that the incumbent does not exercise supervisory authority, or effectively recommend action in regard to any of the supervisory indicia set forth in Section 2(c) of the Order. 8/

As the evidence does not establish that the incumbent either exercises supervisory authority requiring the use of independent judgment, or effectively recommends such action, I find that he is not a supervisor within the meaning of Section 2(c) of the Order. Accordingly, having found the Budget Analyst, GS-9, not to be a management official, confidential employee, or supervisor, I find that the subject employee should be included in the exclusively recognized unit.

ORDER

IT IS HEREBY ORDERED that the unit to be clarified herein, for which American Federation of Government Employees, AFL-CIO, Local 2614, was certified on December 23, 1977, be, and it hereby is, clarified by including in said unit the Budget Analyst, GS-9, and the two incumbents in the classification Staff Training Assistant, GS-9, located in the 448th Engineer Battalion and the 346th Transportation Battalion, and by excluding from said unit the two incumbents in the classification Staff Administrative Assistant, GS-9, and the Public Information Officer.

Dated, Washington, D. C.
December 28, 1978

Francis X. Burkhardt, Assistant Secretary of Labor for Labor-Management Relations

8/ It was noted particularly that the evidence does not establish that the incumbent assigns work to the Budget Clerk in other than a merely routine manner. Thus, the incumbent does not schedule the work of the Budget Clerk; rather the latter works independently, performing general clerical work within general guidelines.

SUMMARY OF DECISION AND ORDER OF THE ASSISTANT SECRETARY
PURSUANT TO SECTION 6 OF EXECUTIVE ORDER 11491, AS AMENDED

INTERNAL REVENUE SERVICE,
SOUTH CAROLINA DISTRICT
A/SLMR No. 1172

This case involved an unfair labor practice complaint filed by the National Treasury Employees Union (Complainant) alleging that the Respondent violated Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order when it interviewed a bargaining unit employee, who was a potential witness in an upcoming arbitration hearing, without affording the Complainant notification of the interview and an opportunity to be present.

The Administrative Law Judge recommended that the complaint be dismissed. He concluded that the interview was not a formal discussion within the meaning of Section 10(e) of the Order, and thus the Respondent was under no obligation to afford the Complainant an opportunity to attend.

Contrary to the Administrative Law Judge, the Assistant Secretary found that, under the circumstances of this case, the interview between management representatives of the Respondent and an employee who at all times material was a bargaining unit member, concerning a pending grievance, constituted a formal discussion within the meaning of Section 10(e) of the Order. Accordingly, he concluded that the Complainant was entitled to be represented at the interview and that the Respondent's failure to afford the Complainant such an opportunity violated Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order.

Under these circumstances, the Assistant Secretary ordered that the Respondent cease and desist from the conduct found violative and that it take certain affirmative actions.

DECISION AND ORDER

On October 2, 1978, Administrative Law Judge William B. Devaney issued his Recommended Decision and Order in the above-entitled proceeding, finding that the Respondent had not engaged in the unfair labor practices alleged in the complaint and recommending that the complaint be dismissed in its entirety. Thereafter, the Complainant filed exceptions and a supporting brief with respect to the Administrative Law Judge's Recommended Decision and Order and the Respondent filed an answering brief to the Complainant's exceptions.

The Assistant Secretary has reviewed the rulings of the Administrative Law Judge made at the hearing and finds that no prejudicial error was committed. The rulings are hereby affirmed. Upon consideration of the Administrative Law Judge's Recommended Decision and Order and the entire record in the subject case, including the Complainant's exceptions and supporting brief and the Respondent's answering brief, I hereby adopt the Administrative Law Judge's findings, conclusions and recommendation, only to the extent consistent herewith.

The instant complaint alleges, in substance, that the Respondent violated Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order when it interviewed a bargaining unit employee, who was a potential witness in an upcoming arbitration hearing, without affording the exclusive representative notification of the interview and an opportunity to be present.

The essential facts of the case are set forth, in detail, in the Administrative Law Judge's Recommended Decision and Order, and I shall repeat them only to the extent necessary.

In early August 1977, an attorney for the Complainant telephoned Ben Smith, a unit employee, and asked him to be a witness at the arbitration hearing. Shortly thereafter, the Staff Assistant to the Respondent's Regional Counsel, Robert Remes, requested a meeting with Smith. Although the Complainant had not formally submitted the employee's name as a prospective witness at that point, Remes testified that he thought it likely that Smith would be called. The requested meeting took place in the Group Manager's office, approximately a week before the hearing. It was attended by Smith, the Respondent's Chief of Personnel, and Remes, who questioned the employee about his knowledge of, and involvement in, the events precipitating the filing of the grievance which was at issue in the arbitration hearing.

The Administrative Law Judge recommended that the complaint be dismissed. He found that the interview of employee Smith was not a formal discussion within the meaning of Section 10(e) of the Order. 1/ While noting that the Assistant Secretary had held in United States Air Force, McClellan Air Force Base, California 7 A/SLMR 350, A/SLMR No. 830(1977), FLRC No. 77A-56(1977) that, in the particular circumstances of that case, the labor organization was entitled to be represented at interviews of unit witnesses in connection with the processing of a pending grievance, the Administrative Law Judge concluded that the McClellan decision was not dispositive of the subject case. Thus, as distinguished from the McClellan case, he noted that the interview at issue herein had been conducted well in advance of the hearing and prior to notification by the Complainant that it intended to call the employee as a witness for the grievant. Further, he noted that the questioning was confined to necessary trial preparation. Under these circumstances the Administrative Law Judge concluded that the meeting with Smith was not a formal discussion within the meaning of Section 10(e) of the Order, and therefore, the Respondent's failure to afford the Complainant an opportunity to be represented at such meeting was not violative of Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order.

I disagree. In my view, when an employee who is a member of the bargaining unit at all times material to a pending grievance 2/ is interviewed by management representatives concerning the events surrounding the grievance, Section 10(e) of the Order grants the exclusive representative

1/ Section 10(e) provides, in pertinent part:

"When a labor organization has been accorded exclusive recognition, it is the exclusive representative of employees in the unit and is entitled to act for and to negotiate agreements covering all employees in the unit... The labor organization shall be given the opportunity to be represented at formal discussions between management and employees or employee representatives concerning grievances...."

2/ Compare United States Department of the Treasury, Internal Revenue Service, 7 A/SLMR 371, A/SLMR No. 833 (1977), which involved interviews of an employee concerning events which occurred during a period of time in which the employee was an acting supervisor and thereby excluded from the exclusively recognized unit.

the right to be represented at such a formal discussion. As the Assistant Secretary stated in the McClellan case, cited above, an exclusive representative has a legitimate interest in being represented at the interviews of unit employees conducted by management in connection with the processing of a pending grievance, and the representational responsibilities conferred by Section 10(e) of the Order in this regard outweigh any impact its presence might have on management's preparation of its case for arbitration. 3/ Under these circumstances, I conclude that by failing to afford the Complainant an opportunity to be represented at the interview of employee Smith, the Respondent violated Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order.

ORDER

Pursuant to Section 6(b) of Executive Order 11491, as amended, and Section 203.26(b) of the Regulations, the Assistant Secretary of Labor for Labor-Management Relations hereby orders that the Internal Revenue Service, South Carolina District, shall:

1. Cease and desist from:

a. Conducting formal discussions between management and employees or employee representatives concerning grievances, personnel policies and practices, or other matters affecting general working conditions of employees in the unit without affording the National Treasury Employees Union, the employees' exclusive representative, the opportunity to be represented at such discussions.

b. In any like or related manner interfering with, restraining, or coercing its employees in the exercise of rights assured by Executive Order 11491, as amended.

2. Take the following affirmative actions in order to effectuate the purposes and policies of the Order:

a. Notify the National Treasury Employees Union of, and afford it the opportunity to be represented at, formal discussions between management and employees or employee representatives concerning grievances, personnel policies and practices, or other matters affecting general working conditions of employees in the unit.

b. Post at its facility at Columbia, South Carolina, copies of the attached notice marked "Appendix" on forms to be furnished by the Assistant Secretary of Labor for Labor-Management Relations. Upon receipt of such forms, they shall be signed by the District Director, South Carolina District, and shall be posted and maintained by him for 60 consecutive days thereafter, in conspicuous places, including all places where notices to employees are customarily posted. The District Director shall take reasonable steps to insure that such notices are not altered, defaced, or covered by any other material.

3/ Contrary to the Administrative Law Judge, I find it immaterial that the interview in the instant case was conducted well in advance of the arbitration hearing and prior to notification by the Complainant that it intended to call the employee as a witness for the grievant, or that the interview was non-coercive in nature.

c. Pursuant to Section 203.27 of the Regulations, notify the Assistant Secretary, in writing, within 30 days from the date of this order as to what steps have been taken to comply herewith.

RECOMMENDED DECISION AND ORDER

Statement of the Case

This proceeding, under Executive Order 11491, as amended (hereinafter also referred to as the "Order"), was initiated by a charge, filed on, or about, December 22, 1977, and a complaint, filed on February 24, 1978 (Asst. Sec. Exh. 1), alleging violations of Sections 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order by the interview of a bargaining unit employee, who was a potential witness in an arbitration case then pending, by the attorney representing Respondent in the arbitration case. The attorney representing the grievant in the arbitration case interviewed the same witness thereafter and did call the witness in question as a witness for the grievant.

Notice of Hearing issued on May 5, 1978, pursuant to which a hearing was duly held before the undersigned on July 11, 1978, in Charleston, South Carolina. At the close of the hearing August 29, 1978, was, at the request of the parties, and for good cause shown, fixed as the date for mailing briefs and briefs, timely mailed, were received on August 31, 1978. Thereafter, Respondent on August 31, 1978, mailed a corrected page 14 and such corrected page is hereby substituted for page 14 of Respondent's original brief on which a line of type had inadvertently been omitted. In addition, Respondent submitted with its original brief a Motion to Correct Transcript. The errors noted by Respondent are, obviously, transcription errors; Respondent's proposed corrections are wholly correct and proper; and, accordingly, Respondent's motion is granted and the transcript is hereby corrected as requested. 1/

All parties were represented by able counsel, were afforded full opportunity to be heard, to examine and cross-examine witnesses, and to present evidence and testimony. The briefs were excellent and have been carefully considered. Upon the basis of the entire record, including my observation of the witnesses and their demeanor, I hereby make the following findings, conclusions and recommendation:

1/ The transcript of hearing of July 11, 1978, is hereby corrected as follows:

FINDINGS OF FACT

1. On January 25, 1977, Group Manager George T. Close of Respondent's Charleston, South Carolina, office called a meeting with three GS-11 Revenue Officers in the Charleston Office, namely, Messrs. Michalk, Smith and Nance, and advised them that it had been determined that there was a staffing imbalance and that a GS-11 Revenue Officer would be transferred from the Charleston office to Beaufort, South Carolina. There is no dispute that the established practice, which was followed, was to seek a volunteer; and that, pursuant to the Multi-District Agreement, "When an involuntary transfer or reassignment is necessary due to a staffing imbalance, the employee at the affected post of duty with the least IRS length of service will be transferred." (Art. 28, Section 1). Mr. D.W. Nance had the least IRS length of service, and, if an involuntary transfer, or reassignment, became necessary, was the employee subject to involuntary transfer.

2. Mr. Close met individually with each of the three Revenue Officers on January 25, 1977. Messrs. Michalk and Nance declined to volunteer and Mr. Benjamin C. Smith on January 25, 1977, told Mr. Close:

"I was not particularly interested in going to Beaufort, but that if it fell my lot, that I would go." (Tr. 23)

3. On January 26, 1977, Mr. Smith told Mr. Close:

"I was tentatively volunteering for the Beaufort Post of Duty, and that I would like to meet with him and discuss it further sometime later in the day." (Tr. 24, 26)

4. Mr. Smith met with Mr. Close later in the morning of January 26th and told him:

"Well, in that sense, it appears that the transfer is not cast in concrete, that I would withdraw my willingness to go." And I wrote him a Bucksliip later that day and gave it to him the next morning, which said that I was not willing to volunteer at this time. The reason for that was that it was my understanding that the matter had not been settled and that I did tell him that in the event that it was definitely decided that somebody had to go, that I would go rather than Nance." (Te. 27)

Mr. Smith's Bucksliip, dated January 27, 1977, was introduced into evidence as Complainant's Exhibit 4 and states, "I do not wish to volunteer for reassignment at this time."

5. Mr. Nance was notified of his involuntary transfer, or reassignment, on February 22, 1977, and on March 7, 1977, filed a grievance (Comp. Exh. 1). Respondent's decision at the Fourth Step of the negotiated grievance procedure was dated May 12, 1977 (Comp. Exh. 2); arbitration was involked on, or about, June 5, 1977; and the arbitration hearing was held on August 23, 1977.

6. In early August, 1977, Mr. Steven P. Flig, an NTEU attorney, called Mr. Smith. Mr. Smith testified,

"Mr. Flig, who was the Union attorney called me sometime in the early part of August and asked me to be a witness and said that he would be calling me later on in the month to set up a time when we could meet together prior to the hearing." (Tr. 29)

7. Sometime shortly after Mr. Flig had called Mr. Smith, Group Manager Stribling told Mr. Smith that Mr. Robert A. Remes, then Staff Assistant to the Regional Counsel, would like to talk to him. Mr. Smith told Mr. Stribling that he had already had a call from Mr. Flig.

8. On, or about, August 16, 1977, Mr. Henry O. Lamar, Chief of Respondent's Personnel Branch, Columbia District, and Mr. Remes met with Mr. Smith in the Group Manager's office and Mr. Remes asked a number of question related to Mr. Smith's relationship with Mr. Close and the circumstances surrounding the transfer, whether or not Mr. Smith had volunteered and whether Mr. Smith considered himself a volunteer. Mr. Lamar asked no questions. Mr. Smith testified that he did not feel coerced; that the meeting was cordial; that Mr. Remes did not ask what, or whether, he had discussed with the Union; and Mr. Smith did not request union representation at the interview.

9. Mr. Smith later met with Mr. Flig and told Mr. Flig that he had already talked to Mr. Remes.

10. Neither Mr. Flig nor Mr. Remes had handled Mr. Nance's grievance prior to invocation of arbitration.

11. Neither Mr. Smith nor Respondent advised Complainant of the interview of Mr. Smith by Mr. Remes; although, as noted, Mr. Smith advised Mr. Flig that he had talked to Mr. Remes. Both interviews, i.e., by Messrs. Remes and Flig, took place on August 16, or Mr. Flig interviewed Mr. Smith on August 17, 1977. At the time Mr. Remes interviewed Mr. Smith on August 16, 1977, Complainant had not submitted any request to Respondent that Mr. Smith appear as a witness for the grievant, although Mr. Remes stated that he thought it was a very good likelihood that Mr. Smith would be a Union witness.

CONCLUSIONS

Whether a violation of the Order occurred in this case depends on the meaning of Section 10(e) of the Order which, in relevant part, provides as follows:

"... The labor organization shall be given the opportunity to be represented at formal discussions between management and employees or employee representatives concerning grievances, personnel policies and practices, or other matters affecting general working conditions of employees in the unit."

Is the interview of a potential witness in an arbitration case by an agency attorney a "formal discussion" concerning a "grievance"? In United States Air Force, McClellan Air Force Base, California and American Federation of Government Employees, Local 1857, AFL-CIO, A/SLMR No. 830, 7 A/SLMR 351 (1977), the Assistant Secretary held that:

"... interviews conducted by Respondent's counsel ... constituted a formal discussion concerning a grievance within the meaning of Section 10(e) of the Order." (7 A/SLMR at 352).

But in United States Department of the Treasury, Internal Revenue Service and National Treasury Employees Union, Chapter 81, Western Region, A/SLMR No. 833, 7 A/SLMR 372 (1977), the Assistant Secretary held that the interviews by Respondent's counsel,

"... were not formal discussions within the meaning of Section 10(e) of the Order." (7 A/SLMR at 373).

In each case a witness was interviewed; in each case the witness was a bargaining unit employee; in each case the interview was in preparation for an arbitration hearing; and in each case the interview was associated with the processing of a grievance. Obviously, the information discussed in the interview of any witness could potentially affect the disposition of any pending grievance in which the witness may testify. 2/

If the interview of a bargaining unit witness in association with the processing of a grievance is a formal discussion, then, pursuant to Section 10(e), "The labor organization shall be given the opportunity to be represented" at such formal discussions. Moreover, as the Assistant Secretary stated in McClellan Air Force Base, supra, the Union, as the exclusive representative of employees in the unit, would, with respect to any interview of any bargaining unit employee, have the same "legitimate interest in being represented at the interview of the unit employees involved which were conducted in connection with the processing of a pending grievance" as "clearly, the information discussed could potentially" affect "the disposition of the pending grievance." (7 A/SLMR at 352). But, of course, the Assistant Secretary in Internal Revenue Service, supra, held that the interview of a bargaining unit witness under the circumstances of that case was not a formal discussion and, necessarily, that the Union had no legitimate interest in being represented at the interview of the unit employee there involved even though the interview was conducted in connection with the processing of a pending grievance and the information discussed would potentially affect the disposition of the pending grievance.

By his decision in Internal Revenue Service, supra, the Assistant Secretary made clear that McClellan Air Force Base, supra, was not a per se rule that any interview with a prospective witness during the pendency of a grievance is a "formal discussion" within the meaning of Section 10(e) of the Order, otherwise the interview of the bargaining unit witness in Internal Revenue Service, supra, notwithstanding that

2/ Any discussion by management with grievants, whether at the informal or formal stage of the grievance procedure are formal discussions, Internal Revenue Service, Southeast Service Center, Chamblee, Georgia and National Treasury Employees Union and NTEU Chapter 070, A/SLMR No. 448, 4 A/SLMR 749 (1974); U.S. Department of the Treasury, Internal Revenue Service Pittsburgh District, Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania and National Treasury Employees Union and NTEU Chapter 34, A/SLMR No. 498, 5 A/SLMR 208 (1975).

the interview concerned only actions and decisions of the witness which occurred while he was serving in an acting supervisory capacity, would have constituted a formal discussion. In denying the agency's petition for review in the McClellan Air Force Base case, supra, the Council stated in footnote 2, in part, as follows:

"In so concluding, the Council does not construe the Assistant Secretary's decision herein as establishing a per se rule that any discussion with a prospective witness during the pendency of a grievance is a 'formal' discussion within the meaning of section 10(e) of the Order. ..." (United States Air Force, McClellan Air Force Base, California, A/SLMR No. 830, FLRC No. 77A-56, Number 136, October 4, 1977).

The facts in McClellan Air Force Base, supra, as set out in the decision of Administrative Law Judge Kramer, were as follows: The day before the arbitration hearing, grievant's representative gave the Personnel Office a list of the witnesses for the grievant; Personnel informed the attorney representing the agency late in the afternoon of October 20, the day before the hearing, of the names on the list; the names of three of the witnesses did not appear in the grievance file and had not come to the attention of the attorney in his preparation for the arbitration hearing; the attorney asked Personnel to request the three employees to come to his office at 8:00 a.m. the next morning, the arbitration hearing was to be held later in the morning; two of the employees arrived at the attorney's office at 8:00 a.m. and the third shortly thereafter; and the attorney "asked them what evidence they could give relevant to the Corrie grievance." or "what evidence they could give at the arbitration hearing about the grievance that was relevant." 3/

Under the circumstances, I am persuaded that the Assistant Secretary's decision in the McClellan Air Force Base case, supra, as it did not, as demonstrated by the Assistant Secretary's decision very soon thereafter in 3/ Two said they did not know; the third, a Union steward, said he knew he was to be a witness and also was to act as technical advisor to the grievant's representative. The three then asked the attorney what would be expected of them and the attorney replied that if they were asked to testify it would be their duty to do so.

Internal Revenue Service, supra, establish a per se rule, must be viewed as limited, as stated by the Assistant Secretary:

"... under the circumstances herein, including the fact that the witnesses interviewed were those of the grievant, the Complainant's representational responsibility, which under Section 10(e) of the Order extends to all employees in the bargaining unit, outweighed any impact its presence during the interviews might have had on Respondent's preparation of its case for arbitration." (7 A/SLMR at 352).

In extending McClellan Air Force Base, supra, beyond the particular circumstances there presented, I further conclude that there must be a balancing between the reasonable opportunity of the agency to prepare its defense and the interest of the exclusive representative in being represented at interviews of unit witnesses in connection with the processing of a pending grievance. Such conclusion is implicit in the McClellan Air Force Base decision itself; the right "to properly communicate with unit employees" was specifically noted by the Council in FLRC No. 77A-56, notwithstanding that the Council therein denied review of the Assistant Secretary's decision in McClellan Air Force Base; and was made explicit by the Assistant Secretary decision in Internal Revenue Service, supra. Indeed, the right of agency management to investigate under the Order is well established, see, for example, The Council's Statement on Major Policy Issue, FLRC No. 75P-2, 4 FLRC 710 (1976); Internal Revenue Service and National Treasury Employees Union, A/SLMR No. 897, 7 A/SLMR 783 (1977); and the right of an employer in the private sector to the reasonable opportunity to prepare his defense by interviewing employees in the immeasurably more hostile atmosphere of unfair labor practice proceedings or strongly contested representation proceedings, has consistently been recognized by the National Labor Relations Board, Johnnie's Poultry Co., 146 NLRB 770, 55 LRRM 1403 (1964), enf. denied, 344 F.2d 617 (8th Cir. 1965) and by the Courts, UAW v. NLRB, 392 F.2d 801 (D.C. Cir. 1967); Montgomery Ward & Co. v. NLRB, 377 F.2d 452 (6th Cir. 1967); NLRB v. Neuhoff Bros., Packers, Inc., 375 F.2d 272 (5th Cir. 1967), although any interrogation by the employer, to avoid the ever present danger of coercing employees in violation of their § 7 rights, must be limited in scope and manner of permissible questioning, be strictly confined to necessary trial preparation; the employer must communicate to the employee the purpose of the questions; must advise the employee that no reprisal will take place; and must obtain the employee's voluntary participation.

In the present case, the attorney for Complainant in the arbitration case, Mr. Flig, and the attorney for Respondent in the arbitration case, Mr. Remes, each entered the arbitration case at about the same time, in early August, 1977; neither had been involved in the earlier stages of the Nance grievance; each became aware that Mr. Smith's testimony was important, perhaps pivotal, in the arbitration hearing; and each contacted Mr. Smith to arrange an interview. Although Mr. Smith testified that Mr. Flig asked him to be a witness, Mr. Smith testified that he told Group Manager Stribling only that he had had a call from Mr. Flig. In any event, Mr. Flig had not interviewed Mr. Smith and, clearly, neither Mr. Flig, nor any other representative of Complainant had advised Respondent that Complainant intended to call Mr. Smith as a witness or that Mr. Smith was a witness for the grievant. 4/ Mr. Remes interviewed Mr. Smith first, so there is no basis whatever for any inference that Mr. Smith was interrogated concerning any statement he had given to Complainant's attorney; 5/ Mr. Remes' questions were strictly confined to necessary trial preparation; Mr. Remes' interview took place a week before the arbitration hearing; Mr. Smith informed Mr. Flig that he had already talked to Mr. Remes; and the interview was devoid of coercion, 6/ a consideration which 4/ Although "the fact that the witnesses interviewed were those of the grievant", which I take to mean had formally been requested by the grievant as his witnesses, was a factor, perhaps a critical factor, in McClellan Air Force Base, supra, it is highly questionable that this is a "sacred cow". For example, a clever attorney might well list a wholly adverse witness as his witness, with no intention of calling the witness to testify, to discourage, if not thwart, discovery of the adverse testimony.

5/ It is conceivable, as Respondent suggests, that the form of questioning in McClellan probed their subjective state of mind and/or by questioning their role in the arbitration hearing exceeded permissible bounds of inquiring as to facts necessary to trial preparation.

6/ Mr. Smith testified that he did not feel coerced and that the meeting was cordial. Under other circumstances, Respondent's actions might well have been inherently coercive. The "request" to meet Respondent's attorney was made by the employee's Group Manager; present at the interview was the Chief of Personnel for the District; and the meeting was held in the office of the Group Manager. Such "command performance of employees ... to come to the company offices ... the presence of management (Continued) is not directly in issue inasmuch as Mr. Smith did not request representation at the interview.

Respondent was entitled to question potential bargaining unit witnesses in preparation for the arbitration hearing and such interviews are not formal discussions within the meaning of Section 10(e) of the Order or within the parameters of the decision of the Assistant Secretary in McClellan Air Force Base, supra, when conducted well in advance of the hearing and prior to notification by the exclusive representative of intention to call the employees as witnesses for the grievant and the questioning is confined to necessary trial preparation. Here, Respondent interviewed Mr. Smith a week prior to the arbitration hearing; the interview was prior to any notification by Complainant that it intended to call Mr. Smith as a witness for the grievant, indeed was prior to the interview of Mr. Smith by the attorney for Complainant; and was limited to necessary trial preparation.

For all of the foregoing reasons, I find that the interview of the potential bargaining unit witness, Mr. Benjamin Smith, by Respondent's attorney was not a formal discussion within the meaning of Section 10(e) of the Act and, accordingly, that Respondent did not violate Sections 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order when it failed to afford Complainant an opportunity to be represented during the interview of Mr. Smith on August 16, 1977.

RECOMMENDATION

Having found that Respondent has not engaged in certain conduct prohibited by Section 10(e) and 19(a)(1) and (6) of Executive Order 11491, as amended, I recommend that the Complaint herein be dismissed.

DECISION AND ORDER

This case involved an unfair labor practice complaint filed by the Antilles Consolidated Education Association, NEA, Ceiba, Puerto Rico, alleging that the Respondent violated Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order by declining to sign and put into effect a Teacher Evaluation Form which had been negotiated by the Superintendent of the Antilles Consolidated School System.

The Administrative Law Judge found that the Respondent violated Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order when the Respondent's Area Coordinator failed to approve the Teacher Evaluation Form which had been negotiated by the Superintendent.

Noting particularly the absence of exceptions, the Assistant Secretary adopted the findings, conclusions and recommendations of the Administrative Law Judge and issued an appropriate remedial order for the violation found.

On October 12, 1978, Administrative Law Judge Rhea M. Burrow issued his Recommended Decision and Order in the above-entitled proceeding, finding that the Respondent had engaged in the unfair labor practices alleged in the complaint and recommending that it cease and desist therefrom and take certain affirmative actions as set forth in the attached Administrative Law Judge's Recommended Decision and Order. No exceptions were filed to the Administrative Law Judge's Recommended Decision and Order.

The Assistant Secretary has reviewed the rulings of the Administrative Law Judge made at the hearing and finds that no prejudicial error was committed. The rulings are hereby affirmed. Upon consideration of the Administrative Law Judge's Recommended Decision and Order and the entire record in the subject case, and noting particularly that no exceptions were filed, I hereby adopt the Administrative Law Judge's findings, conclusions and recommendations.

RECOMMENDED DECISION AND ORDER

Statement of the Case

This is an unfair labor practice proceeding in which a formal hearing of record was held on June 20, 1978 in San Juan, Puerto Rico, pursuant to Executive Order 11491, as amended, hereafter referred to as the Order.

The complaint filed on September 9, 1977 by Antilles Consolidated Education Association, hereinafter referred to as ACEA and/or Complainant alleges that Antilles Consolidated School System 1/ hereinafter referred to as ACSS and/or the Respondent, violated Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order by refusing to honor a February 8, 1977 agreement between Complainant and Respondent and refusing to negotiate in good faith on a teacher evaluation form during 1977. 2/

Upon the basis of the entire record, including the evidence adduced, the briefs submitted by the parties and my observation of the witnesses and judgment of their credibility, I make the following findings, conclusions and recommendations.

1/ At the hearing Counsel for Respondent moved to correct the record to reflect the Department of the Navy as the Agency and Antilles Consolidated School System as the Activity. There was no objection and the Activity had been designated as a party with the Navy in the complaint).

2/ Specifically the ACCS area coordinator was charged with: "Having revoked the signature of his school superintendent, Carl Engebretson, thereby refusing to honor an agreement signed with Antilles Consolidated Education Association...to use an employee evaluation form negotiated and signed by ACEA and ACSS. By such unilateral revocation, Area Coordinator Flanagan exceeded his ministerial right to review the agreement for violations of law and committed ACSS to breach of good faith.

"Additionally, Area Coordinator Flanagan never honored an agreement of December 18, 1976, signed at his direction to negotiate in good faith an evaluation form.

"Beginning on or about March 21, 1977, absent negotiations to rectify the unilateral revocation of the signed agreement, and ignoring written and telephoned objections from ACEA, the principals of ACSS...., with the consent and/or direction of then school superintendent Carl Engebretson, issued evaluations of unit employees using management developed forms and procedures.

"The ACEA has since called meetings to rectify the unfair labor practices, but in those meetings the current ACSS negotiator, Jesse Williams, has refused to negotiate the destruction or removal of the disputed evaluations and/or new evaluations on a form negotiated by the parties."

Findings of Fact

1. The Complainant, Antilles Consolidated Education Association, NEA, is and was at all times material herein, the authorized collective bargaining representative to the unit consisting of teachers, substitute teachers, guidance counselors, librarians, media specialists and nurses employed by Antilles Consolidated School System at Ft. Buchanan, Ft. Allen, Roosevelt Roads Naval Station and Ramey Annex, Puerto Rico.

2. The Antilles Consolidated School System is operated by the Department of the Navy in Puerto Rico by arrangement with the U.S. Office of Education under the terms of Public Law 81-874, Section 6. The ACSS operates seven schools at four locations in Puerto Rico providing elementary and secondary education for dependents of certain federal employees stationed on the Island.

3. In addition to being Commander of U.S. Naval Forces in the Carribean, the Department of the Navy head is also the Area Coordinator. The Area Coordinator is designated by the Chief of Naval Education and Training pursuant to applicable instructions to Act as a "Board of Education" and exercise all expressed or implied powers associated with a school board. Rear Admiral W.R. Flanagan was the Area Coordinator during the period material to this complaint.

4. The negotiated agreement between the parties was made effective on April 29, 1976, and, provided among other things that:

Article 20, Section h.

"The supervisor will give the employee an annual performance rating in writing prior to March 31 unless a proposed unsatisfactory rating is pending..."

5. A Policy Manual instruction letter dated May 6, 1976 for operation of Antilles Consolidated Schools System in Puerto Rico was issued by Rear Admiral W.R. Flanagan, Commander, U.S. Naval Forces, Carribean. The Instruction contained a manual provision relating to Performance Evaluation of teachers and provided that each teacher would be evaluated by the principal by March 31 and that the Employees Performance Appraisal will be used for the written evaluation. The principal will prepare a narrative report and will justify the performance rating marked.

6. A narrative form specifying two ratings, satisfactory or unsatisfactory, was the established form used for evaluating unit employees before Admiral Flanagan promulgated the official policy Manual on May 6, 1976. Attachment 5 of this Manual was a new form for evaluating teachers replacing and canceling the previously established form. 3/ The date of submission of the performance evaluation by March 31 of each year was unchanged.

7. The Complainant expressed dissatisfaction with certain provisions expressed in the manual and a meeting was held between ACSS Superintendent C.R. Engebretson and ACEA representatives and/or teachers Wallace, Bob Savage and Jean Johnson. As a result of this and another meeting held on December 18, 1976, Robert Savage, Commander R. J. Pineseault, Schools Officer; and Linn Wallace, President, ACEA, signed a Memorandum of Understanding providing among other things that:

1. The Teacher Evaluation Form and Agency Grievance Procedure Form will be held in Abeyance without prejudice pending

(a) The January Policy Manual Review.

(b) Bilateral meetings between the Association and Management in a good faith effort to develop an evaluation form and agency procedure.

(c) Supervisors may use applicable data from the currently completed teacher evaluation forms to be held in abeyance pending the development of an Evaluation Form during the January Policy Manual Review.

8. On February 8, 1977, a Teacher Evaluation Form was approved by Linn A. Wallace, President ACEA, and C.R. Engebretson, ACCS Superintendent. The form contained the statement:

"An employee must be outstanding in a majority of areas to receive an overall outstanding. An employee must be rated unsatisfactory in a majority of areas to receive an overall unsatisfactory."

The form otherwise listed some 19 items on which the individual was appraised or evaluated. At the bottom of the form there was a statement:

3/ See Complainant Exhibits 4 and 5.

"Upon approval by the Area Coordinator, it is understood that this form will be used in evaluating all ACSS teachers during school year 1976-1977.

9. Thereafter, on March 19, 1977 ACCEA was advised by School Officer R. Pinsonneault that Area Coordinator Flanagan had not approved the February 8, 1977 negotiated agreement as to the teacher evaluation form. Written notice was also given. On March 19, 1977 negotiation on the ACSS Teacher Evaluation form was requested. The record is clear that the part of the teacher evaluation form that was not acceptable to Rear Admiral Flanagan was that relating to receipt of outstanding or unsatisfactory in a majority of items or areas evaluated to receive an overall rating of outstanding or unsatisfactory.

10. It was conceded at the hearing that Rear Admiral Flanagan did not turn down or reject the teacher evaluation form because of any violation of law, regulations or the Executive Order.

11. Negotiations on the Teacher Evaluation Form resumed after disapproval and Jesse Williams was designated the ACSS special representative to negotiate with ACEA. No satisfactory progress was made after more than 40 hours was spent on discussion of the form at meetings held on May 10, 11, 12, 13 and 19 and June 23, 1977. On July 19, 1977 Rear Admiral Flanagan advised ACEA that a record evaluation for the school year 1976-1977 was necessary in fairness to the teachers affected as well as administrative responsibilities of the school system and it was his reluctant determination to terminate further discussion and he instructed Mr. Williams to cease further negotiations on the Teacher Evaluation Form.

Discussion and Conclusions

The Policy Manual for operation of Antilles Consolidated Schools System issued on May 6, 1976 was considered and approved by the then President of ACEA and is not an issue properly raised in this proceeding. Even if it were required that I consider the issue, I would find that ACEA did not sustain its burden of showing the Manual approved by its President containing the teacher Evaluation Form was not properly issued. See United States Department of the Air Force, 15th Air Base Wing, Hickam Air Force Base, Hawaii, A/SLMR No. 1011. After issuance of the Manual, a succeeding

President of ACEA stated he first saw it in August or September 1976, and raised the question as to whether management had conferred with ACEA before its promulgation as to the Teacher Evaluation Form. Finally, as a result of a meeting on December 18, 1976, between ACEA representatives and the School Board, it was agreed that certain teacher evaluations would be held in abeyance pending development of a revised form. School Superintendent Engebretson and ACEA President Wallace agreed on a revised Teacher Evaluation Form in February 1977; one provision was not found acceptable by Rear Admiral Flanagan and he designated Jesse Williams to continue the negotiations requested by ACEA President Wallace and to come up with an acceptable form. Further meetings on May 10, 11, 12, 13 and 19 and June 23, resulted in no apparent progress and on July 19, 1977 further discussions were terminated by Flanagan and the teachers were evaluated pursuant to guidelines outlined in the Manual form.

The Teacher Evaluation Form contained in the Manual provided for the following ratings: Outstanding, Superior, Satisfactory, Needs Improvement and Unsatisfactory. It contained the statement: "Any professional employee must have at least the majority of areas in which he is rated OUTSTANDING to receive an outstanding rating. Any professional employee must have at least the majority of areas in which he is rated either OUTSTANDING or SUPERIOR to receive a superior rating."

The Teacher Evaluation Form agreed to by Wallace and Superintendent Engebretson in February 1977 provided for the following ratings: Outstanding, Good, Needs Improvement and Unsatisfactory. It also contained the following statement: "An employee must be outstanding in a majority of areas to receive an overall outstanding. An employee must be rated unsatisfactory in a majority of areas to receive an overall unsatisfactory." It also provided that: "Upon approval by the Area Coordinator, it is understood that this form will be used in evaluating all ACSS teachers during school year 1966-1977."

There was no significant issue raised as to the difference in the 5 ratings contained in the Manual form and the 4 contained in the February 1977 form negotiated between Wallace and Engebretson. Thus, for all practical purposes the difference in controversy between the two forms is that part of the February 1977 form that states: "An employee must be rated unsatisfactory in a majority of areas to receive an overall unsatisfactory."

Both the negotiated agreement and the Manual provide that an annual performance rating in writing will be given an employee by March 31 unless a proposed unsatisfactory rating is pending and that a final rating will be given prior to the end of the School year in which the notice of unsatisfactory is given.

From the foregoing, it is evident that both the Complainant and the Respondent were clearly aware of the time element to evaluate employees prior to the end of the school term. It is also clear that before implementation of the Manual Teacher Evaluation Form teacher evaluations were by agreement held in abeyance pending negotiations and development of a revised form. Thus, I conclude that Complainant was given an opportunity and in fact did bargain with the Respondent as to the Manual Teacher Evaluation Form before its implementation in 1977.

Section 19 of Executive Order 11491 relates to Unfair Labor Practices and provides in part, as follows:

(a) Agency Management shall not -

(1) interfere with, restrain, or coerce an employee in the exercise of rights assured by this Order;

(6) refuse to consult, confer, or negotiate with a labor organization as required by this Order.

Since the record shows that the Respondents delayed from December 1976 to July 1977 to evaluate its teachers, while awaiting completion of numerous discussions for negotiation and development of a revised teacher evaluation form before termination of such discussion, it can hardly be argued by ACEA that the Respondent refused to consult, confer and negotiate with it in good faith before implementation of the adopted Manual Teacher Evaluation Form. The urgency of evaluating teachers by the end of the school term was evident to all parties and a responsibility that was of utmost importance for the Respondent to accomplish its mission.

Having held that the Policy Manual for operation of the Antilles Consolidated Schools System promulgated in May 1976 containing a Teacher Evaluation Form approved by the then ACEA President was properly issued by Rear Admiral Flanagan, the Area Coordinator, there was an acceptable basis for Respondent to evaluate teachers within the system for the 1976-1977 school term. However, in view of dissatisfaction expressed by Complainant as to certain agency forms, the Respondent in December 1976 agreed to hold in abeyance action on the Teacher Evaluation Forms pending: (a) the January Policy Review; (b) bilateral meetings between the Association and Management in a good faith effort to develop an evaluation form and Agency procedure; and (c) supervisors may use applicable data from the currently completed teacher evaluation forms to be held in abeyance pending the development of an Evaluation Form during the January Policy Manual Review.

The President of ACEA was unwilling to discuss the Teacher Evaluation Form at Policy Review meetings in January 1977. However, he the Respondent's designated representative did agree on a changed Teacher Evaluation Form in February 1977 which contained a statement that: "An employee must be outstanding in a majority of areas to receive an overall outstanding. An employee must be rated unsatisfactory in a majority of areas to receive an overall unsatisfactory." The form also contained the statement that: "Upon approval by the Area Coordinator, it is understood that this form will be used in evaluating all ACSS teachers during school year 1976-1977."

When the changed Teacher Evaluation Form was forwarded to Rear Admiral Flanagan in February 1977, its terms had been approved and signed by his Agent Superintendent Engebretson. Superintendent Engebretson testified at the hearing that he was of opinion that he had authority to reach an agreement on behalf of the Respondent Activity and records show that he had been the principal negotiator for Respondent on prior occasions.

I conclude on the basis of the facts and circumstances of this case that the Superintendent of the Antilles Consolidated School System Carl R. Engebretson, had the authority to enter into a negotiated agreement with the ACEA concerning a teacher evaluation form; that Rear Admiral Flanagan's signature was thereafter required as a ministerial formality once the terms of the Teacher Evaluation Form were agreed upon by ACEA and Flanagan's designated representative Engebretson. His failure to do so constituted a violation of Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order.

Rear Admiral Flanagan's powers as to the Teacher Evaluation Form agreement are complicated by the fact that he served in a dual role with the Respondent Activity; on the one hand, he was the Agency's Area Coordinator responsible for Section 15 reviews negotiated with the Respondent Activity; on the other, he was Respondent Activity's "School Board" with responsibility for conducting negotiations and concluding agreements with recognized labor organizations. The latter delegated powers were specifically delegated by Flanagan to the Superintendent of Schools upon promulgation of Appendix F3.C. of the Policy Manual on May 6, 1976.

The circumstances in this case are in many respects strikingly similar to those in Defense General Supply Center and American Federation of Government Employees, Local 2047, A/SLMR No. 790, where the Assistant Secretary held that:

"...the Activity Commander's signature was required as a ministerial formality once the terms of the Agreement had been agreed upon. I am therefore in agreement with the Administrative Law Judge's finding that the Activity Commander was obligated to sign the Agreement promptly and his failure to do so constituted a violation of Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order.

"Further, under the particular circumstances of this case, it is clear the Activity Commander had a dual role. Thus in addition to being responsible for approving the agreement at the local level as Activity head, he was also the official designated by the Defense Supply Agency (DSA) as responsible for approving or disapproving the agreement pursuant to Section 15 of the Order. Section 15 states, in part, that an agreement shall be approved by the Agency head or his official designee if it conforms to applicable laws, the Order, existing agency policies and regulations, and regulations of appropriate authorities, but will go into effect if not approved or disapproved within 45 days from date of execution. The Respondent argues that because the Activity Commander never 'executed' the agreement at the local level, the Activity Commander was not obligated to act pursuant to his Section 15 approval authority. It would follow, also, that because the agreement was not 'executed' it never went into effect. I cannot accept this argument. As found above, under the particular circumstances herein, the requirement for the Activity Commander's signature was a mere formality after the initial agreement was presented to him on September 12, 1975. Thus, the agreement had already been effectively executed by his agents. In my view, if, after an agreement is fully agreed upon by his authorized agents, an activity head is permitted to repudiate the very same agreement under his Section 15 authority, the negotiating process in the Federal Sector, would be seriously undermined. For this reason, where, as here, dual roles, i.e.--to negotiate and to approve--are imposed on the same activity head, I find that the two roles are effectively merged and approval for one purpose is, in effect, approval for both. Therefore, in the particular circumstances of this case, approval as Activity Commander, rendered by his fully authorized negotiating team, was also tantamount to approval pursuant to Section 15 of the Order. Accordingly, I find that the Respondent additionally violated Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order by refusing to implement the negotiated agreement."

The aforesaid principles held by the Assistant Secretary to be applicable in Defense Supply Center, A/SLMR 790, are also found to be applicable in the circumstances of the case herein. 4/ It can be added, however, that in view of the concession at the hearing that Area Coordinator Flanagan

4/ Section 15 of the Order provides:

"Approval of Agreements. An agreement with a labor organization as the exclusive representatives of employees in a unit is subject to the approval of the head of the agency or an official designated by him. An agreement shall be approved within forty-five days from the date of its execution if it conforms to applicable laws, the Order, existing published agency policies and regulations (unless the Agency has granted an exception to a policy or regulation) and regulations of other appropriate authorities. An agreement which has not been approved or disapproved within forty-five days from the date of its execution shall go into effect without the required approval of the agency head and shall be binding on the parties subject to the provisions of law, the Order and the regulations of appropriate authorities outside the agency. A local agreement subject to a national or other controlling agreement at a higher level shall be approved under the procedures of the controlling agreement, or, if none, under Agency regulations.

did not turn down or reject the teacher evaluation form because of any violation of law, regulations, or the Executive Order, any Section 15 issue that may have been for consideration has been removed, the fact that there was further bargaining after reaching agreement on the form in February 1977, did not in my opinion constitute a waiver of the agreement reached and is not regarded of significant importance in determining the issues.

In view of the foregoing, it is my opinion that Carl R. Engebretson as Superintendent of ACSS, had authority to enter into a negotiated agreement with ACEA concerning a teacher evaluation form; that the Area Coordinator of ACSS did exceed his ministerial authority in failing to approve the agreement reached; and, that the failure of the Area Coordinator to approve and implement the agreement is concluded to be a violation of Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order.

Recommendations

Having found that the Respondent has engaged in conduct which is violative of Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order, I recommend the Assistant Secretary adopt the following Order designed to effectuate the purposes of Executive Order 11491, as amended.

This case involved an unfair labor practice complaint filed by the American Federation of Government Employees, AFL-CIO, Local 2928 (Complainant) alleging that the Respondent violated Section 19(a)(1) and (2) of the Order by prohibiting an employee from acting simultaneously as a part-time Equal Employment Opportunity (EEO) counselor and as a union officer. The Respondent argued that the positions, if held concurrently, would result in a real or apparent conflict of interest within the meaning of Section 1(b) of the Order and, therefore, the employee was properly required to relinquish one of the positions.

The Administrative Law Judge concluded that the Respondent had violated Section 19(a)(1) of the Order by requiring the employee to choose between the two positions. In this regard, he found no conflict of interest under Section 1(b) of the Order because the employee's duties as union officer involved only internal management of the union and did not require her to be an adversary of management and an advocate for employees. Consequently, he concluded that the Respondent's conduct interfered with her Section 1(a) right to participate in the management of a labor organization. The Administrative Law Judge recommended dismissal of the Section 19(a)(2) allegation of the complaint as the individual's conditions of employment were unaffected by the Respondent's conduct.

The Assistant Secretary adopted the Administrative Law Judge's findings, conclusions and recommendations. Accordingly, he ordered the Respondent to cease and desist from the conduct found violative of Section 19(a)(1) of the Order, and to take certain affirmative actions, and ordered that the Section 19(a)(2) allegation be dismissed.

DECISION AND ORDER

On October 13, 1978, Administrative Law Judge Randolph D. The Administrative Law Judge also found that the Respondent did not violate Section 19(a)(2) of the Order and recommended that that portion of the complaint be dismissed. Thereafter, both parties filed exceptions and supporting briefs with respect to the Administrative Law Judge's Recommended Decision and Order.

The Assistant Secretary has reviewed the rulings of the Administrative Law Judge made at the hearing and finds that no prejudicial error was committed. The rulings are hereby affirmed. Upon consideration of the Administrative Law Judge's Recommended Decision and Order and the entire record in the subject case, including the exceptions and supporting briefs filed by both parties, I hereby adopt the Administrative Law Judge's findings, conclusions and recommendations.

RECOMMENDED DECISION AND ORDER

Preliminary Statement

This proceeding was heard in St. Louis, Missouri, on August 1, 1978, and arises under Executive Order 11491, as amended. Pursuant to the Regulations of the Assistant Secretary of Labor for Labor-Management Relations (hereinafter called the Assistant Secretary), a Notice of Hearing on Complaint was issued on May 25, 1978, and an Order changing the time on that day was issued by the undersigned on June 23, 1978. This case was initiated by a complaint filed on February 24, 1978, by Local 2928 of the American Federation of Government Employees (hereinafter the Union). In its amended complaint dated April 24, 1978, the Union alleges that the respondent violated Sections 19(a)(1) and (2) by prohibiting an employee from acting simultaneously as an Equal Employment Opportunity (EEO) Counselor and as an officer of the Union.

At the hearing, all parties were represented and were afforded full opportunity to be heard, adduce evidence, examine and cross-examine witnesses, and argue orally. Thereafter, both parties filed briefs. Upon consideration of the entire record in this case, from my observation of the witnesses and their demeanor, and from all of the testimony and evidence adduced at the hearing, I make the following findings, conclusions, and recommendation.

Findings of Fact

At all times material herein, the American Federation of Government Employees, AFL-CIO, Local 2928 was the exclusive representative for certain non-supervisory employees of the National Personnel Records Center (Civilian Personnel Records) General Services Administration, in St. Louis, Missouri.

At the time of the hearing, B. Louise Davis was a clerk-typist for the respondent and had also performed the duties of a part-time EEO Counselor for about five years. During that period she handled about 10 or 12 EEO discrimination complaints in her capacity as a Counselor. Ms. Davis generally performed the counseling duties set forth in Section 713.213(a) of Title 5 of the Code of Federal Regulations. That section provides, in part, as follows:

(a) An agency shall require that an aggrieved person who believes that he has been discriminated against because of race, color, religion, sex, or national origin consult with an Equal Employment Opportunity Counselor when he wishes to resolve the matter. The agency shall require the Equal Employment Opportunity Counselor to make whatever inquiry he believes necessary into the matter; to seek a solution of the matter on an informal basis; to counsel the aggrieved person concerning the issues in the matter; to keep a record of his counseling activities so as to brief periodically, the Equal Employment Opportunity Officer on those activities; and, when advised that a complaint of discrimination has been accepted from an aggrieved person, to submit a written report to the Equal Employment Opportunity Officer, with a copy to the aggrieved person concerning the issues in the matter. The Equal Employment Opportunity Counselor shall, insofar as is practicable, conduct his final interview with the aggrieved person not later than 21 calendar days after the date on which the matter was called to his attention by the aggrieved person. If the final interview is not concluded within 21 days and the matter has not previously been resolved to the satisfaction of the aggrieved person, the aggrieved person shall be informed in writing at that time of his right to file a complaint of discrimination. . . . The Counselor shall not attempt in any way to restrain the aggrieved person from filing a complaint.

The role of the EEO Counselor is to serve as a bridge between employees and management and, wherever possible, to resolve EEO problems on an informal basis. The EEO Counselor must win the trust and confidence of both management and aggrieved employees, and must provide an open and sympathetic channel through which employees and applicants may raise questions, discuss problems, get answers, and on an informal basis, get resolutions of problems connected with equal job opportunity. As a part-time Counselor Ms. Davis had to be independent and impartial in arriving at the solutions which she would propose to the parties involved. The Agency was required to assure that full cooperation was provided by all employees to Ms. Davis in the performance of her EEO duties. As a Counselor, it was required that she be "free from restraint, interference, coercion, discrimination, or reprisal in connection with the performance of [her EEO] duties". 5 CFR §713.213(b) and (c).

As an EEO Counselor, Ms. Davis had access to official personnel folders and other pertinent records when she had need for information in connection with the performance of her official counseling duties. All EEO Counselors, however, are prohibited from divulging information obtained from such personnel records.

During 1977 Ms. Davis was a member of the Union. In August of 1977 she was elected to the position of Assistant Secretary-Treasurer-Recorder. She served in that capacity until November of 1977. The duties of the office required her to record the minutes of the monthly meetings, maintain the membership rolls, and, on occasion, to assume the financial duties of the Secretary-Treasurer in the event of his absence. All of her duties concerned the internal management of the Union; she did not have any representational duties.

During 1977 the Union had 6 officers: the President, Vice President, Secretary-Treasurer, Assistant Secretary-Treasurer-Recorder, the Sergeant at Arms, and the Chief Shop Steward. The established practice within the Union was that all grievances were handled by the stewards or the Chief Shop Steward, and only on rare occasions would the Union President become involved in such matters. The other officers did not participate at all, and would always refer any grievances to the appropriate stewards. It would have been highly unusual for Ms. Davis to handle a grievance, and she had no intention of ever handling one.

In about November of 1977 Ms. Davis' supervisor told her that she could not continue to act simultaneously as an EEO Counselor and as a Union officer because management felt that a conflict of interest existed between the two positions. Ms. Davis was told that she could choose to resign from either one of the two jobs. As a result of management's action, Ms. Davis resigned from her Union office and continued as a part-time EEO Counselor.

The regulations of the Civil Service Commission do not prohibit supervisors from serving as EEO Counselors. During the past few years at least one supervisor has served in this capacity at GSA.

Conclusions

The first issue for consideration is whether respondent violated Section 19(a)(1) of the Executive Order. That section provides that agency management shall not interfere with, restrain, or coerce an employee in the exercise of the rights assured by the Order. Section 1(a) of the Order describes certain employee rights as follows:

Each employee of the Executive Branch of the Federal Government has the right, freely and without fear of penalty or reprisal, to form, join, and assist a labor organization or to refrain from any such activity, and each employee shall be protected in the exercise of this right. Except as otherwise expressly provided in this Order, the right to assist a labor organization extends to participation in the management of the organization and acting for the organization in the capacity of an organization representative....

Section 1(b) of the Order places the following restrictions on the above rights:

Paragraph (a) of this section does not authorize participation in the management of a labor organization or acting as a representative of such organization...by an employee when the participation or activity would result in a conflict or apparent conflict of interest or otherwise be incompatible with law or with the official duties of the employee.

In the instant case, B. Louise Davis was told by her supervisor that she could not simultaneously hold the positions of part-time EEO Counselor for the respondent and Assistant Secretary-Treasurer-Recorder for the Union local, and that she must resign from one of these positions. Thus the issue for decision is whether she had a right to participate in the management of the Union while holding her position as an EEO Counselor. It will be necessary to decide whether holding both positions would result in a conflict or apparent conflict of interest or otherwise be incompatible under Section 1(b).

The parties are in substantial agreement that the role of the EEO Counselor is to serve as a bridge between employees and management and, wherever possible, to resolve EEO problems on an informal basis. The EEO Counselor must win the trust and confidence of both management and aggrieved employees, and must provide an open and sympathetic channel through which employees and applicants may raise questions, discuss problems, get answers, and on an informal basis, get resolutions of problems connected with equal job opportunity. In proposing solutions to the parties, the Counselor is required to act independently and impartially. The applicable regulations provide that the Counselor shall be free from restraint, interference, coercion, discrimination, or reprisal in connection with the performance of his duties. 5 CFR §713.213(b) and (c); see also 5 CFR §713.203(k).

Respondent argues that any Union officer is essentially an adversary of management and an advocate for employees, and as such, would lack the requisite neutrality and objectivity essential to functioning effectively as an EEO Counselor.

Federal Personnel Manual Letter No. 713-29, dated September 12, 1974, is entitled "Interrelationships Between Labor Relations and Equal Employment Opportunity Programs." The letter was issued pursuant to the Commission's responsibility to regulate the Federal EEO programs and also to furnish appropriate guidance and technical assistance under Executive Order 11491. Part II(B)(5)(a)(2) of FPM Letter No. 713-29 provides, in part, as follows:

Union membership or inclusion in an exclusive bargaining unit are not valid reasons for non-selection [of EEO Counselors]. Since Counselors serve all employees (i.e. regardless of bargaining unit status) every effort should be made to have as broad a representation as possible, without limiting selections to the unit of recognition. Furthermore, since a Counselor serves as a bridge between the complainant and management in resolution of problems, rather than as a chosen or designated representative of the employee, and since a Counselor may need access to otherwise restricted information in order to function effectively, care should be taken to avoid conflicts of interest such as proscribed by Section 1(b) of Executive Order 11491, as amended.

Thus it is clear that membership in a Union would not preclude selection as an EEO Counselor. However, the FPM recognizes that conflicts of interest may arise with respect to certain EEO Counselors but does not attempt to define these situations as they might arise under Section 1(b) of the Executive Order.

I do not agree with respondent's position that the holding of any Union office, regardless of its duties, would in itself "result in a conflict or apparent conflict of interest or otherwise be incompatible with ... the official duties of" an EEO Counselor within the meaning of Section 1(b). 1/ This proposition is far too broad. For example, I do not believe that the mere election of an employee to a minor, or purely honorary, Union office necessarily makes an individual any more of an "adversary" of management than he was prior to his election. As noted previously, the FPM permits EEO Counselors to be Union members. Thus persons who are openly sympathetic with the causes of employees are not automatically prohibited from becoming EEO Counselors.

In my view the duties of the particular Union office in question must be examined to determine whether any conflict would arise under Section 1(b) of the Order if the officer simultaneously served as an EEO Counselor. In Louise Davis case, her duties as Assistant Secretary-Treasurer-Recorder involved only the internal management of the Union--primarily keeping the minutes and membership rolls. I am aware of respondent's contention that all officers in this Union had the authority to handle grievances on behalf of employees. The existing president of the Union testified that, in his opinion, if an employee demanded to be represented by a particular Union officer in a grievance proceeding, the officer would be required to represent that employee. Even if I were convinced that this was true, I would be guided by the actual policy and practice of the Union rather than any authority technically vested in the officers. The established practice was that all grievances were handled by the stewards or the Chief Shop Steward, and only on rare occasions would the Union president become involved. The other officers did not participate. In addition, Ms. Davis clearly had no intention of ever handling a grievance.

1/ Although supervisors and union officials are perceived by some as being adversaries, Civil Service Commission regulations do not prohibit supervisors from serving as EEO Counselors. Since union officers are often perceived in the same way, it seems unlikely that the Commission intended FPM Letter No. 713-29 to prohibit every union officer from serving as an EEO Counselor.

I do not think that Ms. Davis would ever have performed any sort of representational duties in her Union job. At best, the chances of her doing so would have been remote. Thus respondent has improperly portrayed Ms. Davis' position with the Union as being an adversary of management and an advocate for employees. 2/

Since Ms. Davis' position involving the internal management of the Union did not result in any conflict, or apparent conflict of interest or incompatibility within the meaning of Section 1(b), it follows that she should not have been prohibited from holding her Union office while acting as an EEO Counselor. I must conclude and hold that respondent's action interfered with her Section 1(a) right to participate in the management of the Union and constituted a violation of Section 19(a)(1) of the Order. United States Army and Air Force Exchange Service, Redstone Arsenal Exchange, Redstone Arsenal, Alabama, A/SLMR No. 491.

The only other issue remaining for decision is whether respondent violated Section 19(a)(2) by discouraging membership in the Union by "discrimination in regard to hiring, tenure, promotion or other conditions of employment." I hold that this section was not violated. In Redstone Arsenal, supra, management alleged that an employee was a supervisor and threatened to remove him from his job if he persisted in holding Union office. As a result of management's action, the employee resigned his Union position. The Assistant Secretary found that management had violated Section 19(a)(1) but that Section 19(a)(2) was not violated because the individual's employment with the agency was unaffected by management's conduct. The principle of that decision applies to the instant case because Louise Davis' employment as a part-time EEO Counselor was not affected by respondent's conduct. Redstone Arsenal Exchange, supra; Army and Air Force Exchange Service, Vandenberg Air Force Base, California, A/SLMR No. 437 (footnote 3).

2/ Having reached this conclusion, I need not decide whether a Union officer who could properly be considered a true adversary of management would be precluded by §1(b) from simultaneously serving as an EEO Counselor. It is noted, however, that the Civil Service Commission's unofficial view is that persons who normally represent employees either in discrimination cases or "for other reasons" should not simultaneously serve as EEO Counselors. Equal Employment Opportunity Counseling, A Guidebook, U.S. Civil Service Commission, Personnel Methods Series No. 19 at 4 (revised October 1975).

This case involved an unfair labor practice complaint filed by the American Federation of Government Employees, AFL-CIO, Local 2326, (Complainant) alleging that the Respondent violated Section 19(a) (1) and (6) of the Order by unilaterally changing a past practice whereby policemen in the unit would receive advance notice of their assignments.

The Administrative Law Judge concluded that the Respondent had violated Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order. In this regard, he found that the Respondent changed an existing policy and past practice on a matter within the ambit of Section 11(a) of the Order without first giving the Complainant an opportunity to meet and confer on the substance of the change. However, the Administrative Law Judge further found that the impact of the rescission of the past practice on employees was minimal and that ordering a restoration of the practice was not necessary or appropriate to effectuate the policies of the Order. Therefore, the Administrative Law Judge recommended only that the Respondent meet and confer, upon request by the Complainant, on a modification of the change in policy and on the impact of that change.

The Assistant Secretary concurred with the finding of the Administrative Law Judge that the Respondent's unilateral change in an established past practice constituted a violation of the Order. However, contrary to the Administrative Law Judge, the Assistant Secretary found that the Respondent's conduct constituted more than a de minimus or technical violation of the Order, distinguishing Vandenberg Air Force Base, 4392nd Aerospace Support Group, Vandenberg Air Force Base, California 3 FLRC 491, FLRC No. 74A-77 (1975). The Assistant Secretary therefore modified the Recommended Decision and Order of the Administrative Law Judge and directed the Respondent to rescind its change in policy.

DECISION AND ORDER

On October 27, 1978, Administrative Law Judge Milton Kramer issued his Recommended Decision and Order in the above-entitled proceeding, finding that the Respondent had engaged in the unfair labor practices alleged in the complaint and recommending that it take certain affirmative actions as set forth in the attached Administrative Law Judge's Recommended Decision and Order. Thereafter, the Respondent filed exceptions and a supporting brief with respect to the Administrative Law Judge's Recommended Decision and Order and the Complainant filed a response to the Respondent's exceptions.

The Assistant Secretary has reviewed the rulings of the Administrative Law Judge made at the hearing and finds that no prejudicial error was committed. The rulings are hereby affirmed. Upon consideration of the Administrative Law Judge's Recommended Decision and Order and the entire record in the subject case, including the Respondent's exceptions and supporting brief, and the Complainant's response to the Respondent's exceptions, I hereby adopt the Administrative Law Judge's findings, conclusions and recommendations, as modified herein.

In agreement with the Administrative Law Judge, I find that Respondent's action in unilaterally altering the established past practice of providing advance notice to employees in the exclusively recognized unit of their individual assignments without first notifying the Complainant and affording it the opportunity to bargain on such change constituted a violation of Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order. 1/ However, in reaching this conclusion, the Administrative Law Judge noted that, under the circumstances of this case, ". . . although there was a technical violation of Section 19(a)(6), it approaches if it does not meet the de minimus principle 1/," citing the Federal Labor Relations Council's (Council) decision in Vandenberg Air Force Base, 4392nd Aerospace Support Group, Vandenberg Air Force Base, California, FLRC No. 74A-77, 3 FLRC 491 (1975). I disagree.

In my view, the instant case is distinguishable from Vandenberg. Unlike Vandenberg, which arose in the context of contract negotiations and concerned a dispute over a particular matter in the negotiations which was rectified the following day, the instant case concerns a unilateral change in an existing policy and the failure by the Respondent to provide the Complainant with a prior opportunity to bargain over such change. 2/ Under these circumstances, I find the violation of the Order herein to be more than a mere "technical" violation, and I shall modify the Administrative Law Judge's recommended order accordingly. 3/

Pursuant to Section 6 (b) of Executive Order 11491, as amended, and Section 203.26(b) of the Regulations, the Assistant Secretary of Labor for Labor-Management Relations hereby orders that the Department of Defense, Department of the Navy, Naval Administrative Command, Naval Training Center, Great Lakes, Illinois, shall:

- 1/ The Administrative Law Judge inadvertently failed to find that by such conduct, the Respondent derivatively violated Section 19(a)(1) as well as Section 19(a)(6) of the Order. This inadvertence is hereby corrected. See Army and Air Force Exchange Service, Pacific Exchange System, Hawaii Regional Exchange, 4 A/SLMR 790, A/SLMR No. 454 (1974).
 - 2/ See Social Security Administration, Headquarters Bureau and Offices, Baltimore, Maryland, A/SLMR No. 1116 (1978).
 - 3/ Similarly, I reject the Respondent's argument, advanced in its exceptions, that the complaint should be dismissed based on the minimal impact of the Respondent's conduct, citing as dispositive Naval Communications Area, Master Station Eastpac, Honolulu, A/SLMR No. 1035 (1978); Department of Defense, Air National Guard, Texas Air National Guard, Camp Mabry, Austin, Texas, 6 A/SLMR 591, A/SLMR No. 738 (1976); and Department of the Navy, Norfolk Naval Shipyard, 7 A/SLMR 199, A/SLMR No. 805 (1977). I find the above-cited cases to be inapposite. The Texas Air National Guard case involved the issuance of a memorandum prohibiting the consumption
- (Continued)

1. Cease and desist from:

(a) Unilaterally changing the established past practice of giving the policemen in the unit exclusively represented by the American Federation of Government Employees, AFL-CIO, Local 2326, advance notice of their assignments, without first notifying the American Federation of Government Employees, AFL-CIO, Local 2326, and, upon request, bargaining with respect to such a proposed change in policy.

(b) In any like or related manner interfering with, restraining, or coercing employees in the exercise of their rights assured by Executive Order 11491, as amended.

2. Take the following affirmative actions in order to effectuate the purposes and policies of the Order:

(a) Withdraw and rescind the memorandum issued on March 3, 1978, by the Chief of Police directing that thereafter duty assignments would be made daily prior to the beginning of the shift and would no longer be assigned in advance.

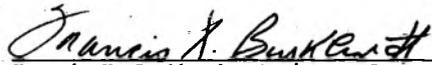

(b) Post at its facility copies of the attached notice marked "Appendix" on forms to be furnished by the Assistant Secretary of Labor for Labor-Management Relations. Upon receipt of such forms they shall be signed by the Commander, Naval Administrative Command, Naval Training Center, Great Lakes, Illinois, and shall be posted and maintained by him for 60 consecutive days thereafter, in conspicuous places, including all bulletin boards and other places where notices to all employees are customarily posted. The Commander shall take reasonable steps to insure that such notices are not altered, defaced, or covered by any other material.

- 3/ of alcoholic beverages on Air National Guard facilities and the Naval Communications Area case involved the use of volunteer bartenders. In my view, since both of these cases dealt with matters not traditionally associated with personnel policies, practices and general working conditions of Federal employees, they are factually distinguishable from the instant matter. Further, in the Norfolk Naval Shipyard case, which involved a change in the manner of enforcement of traffic regulations, it was found that no change had occurred in the personnel policies, practices, or general working terms and conditions of employees. Consequently, this case was clearly distinguishable from the instant situation.

(c) Pursuant to Section 203.27 of the Regulations, notify the Assistant Secretary, in writing, within 30 days from the date of this order as to what steps have been taken to comply herewith.

RECOMMENDED DECISION AND ORDER

Statement of the Case

This case arises under Executive Order 11491 as amended. It was initiated by a complaint filed May 23, 1978 alleging a violation of Sections 19(a)(1), (5), and (6) of the Executive Order. An amended complaint was filed June 2, 1978 alleging a violation of Sections 19(a)(1) and (6). As amended, the complaint alleges that the violation consisted of the Respondent's Chief of Police on March 3, 1978 unilaterally changing a past practice of almost four years of making duty assignments of police officers three days in advance.

On June 6, 1978 the Respondent responded to the complaint denying every allegation of the complaint and making some affirmative allegations. On June 9, 1978 the Respondent moved that the complaint be dismissed. No action was taken on that motion.

On July 12, 1978 the Regional Administrator issued a Notice of Hearing for a hearing to be held on August 15, 1978 in Chicago, Illinois. A hearing was held on that day in that City. Both parties were represented by counsel. The Complainant presented witnesses who were examined and cross-examined. Both parties offered exhibits which were received in evidence, made closing arguments, and filed timely briefs.

Facts

Prior to May 18, 1976 the Guards and Policemen employed by the Great Lakes Naval Training Center (the Respondent) were represented by Local 305, International Federation of Federal Police (IFFP). On that date an amendment of certification certified Local 2326, American Federation of Government Employees (AFGE), AFL-CIO as the certified exclusive representative of that unit. Local 2326 already represented other units of Respondent's employees. No new written agreement was entered into but the parties agreed to keep in effect through July 1, 1977 as to that unit the agreement earlier entered into by IFFP Local 305. No further extensions of that agreement appear in the record but both parties assumed and continued to regard it as continued in effect thereafter and thus tacitly agreed that it should remain in effect until superseded.

The Respondent's base, for patrol purposes, is divided into five areas. The unit employees of about 30 policemen work three eight-hour shifts with ten policemen to a shift under the supervision of a Lieutenant. They work six consecutive days and have two days off. Thus there are normally seven policemen on a shift, sometimes less because of absences. When there are six policemen on duty on a shift one of them works indoors as a radio dispatcher and the other five are assigned one to a patrol car to patrol one of the five patrol areas. When seven are on duty the seventh policeman patrols the entire base in a "roving" patrol car. In two of the areas on one or two of the shifts the patrolman would be required to leave his patrol car to direct traffic for from sixty to ninety minutes. In all of the areas on all the shifts the patrolman would be required to leave his squad car for varying periods from time to time in the performance of his police duties.

On February 16, 1974 at a regular monthly meeting of Local 305 IFFP and the Respondent, Local 305 raised the question of a policeman receiving advance notice of the assignment he would have on any day. This subject was raised by the union because a policeman might wear his thermal underwear believing he would be working outdoors and find that he was assigned to be the dispatcher that day and find it uncomfortably hot. 1/ Management agreed that advance notice should be given "subject to the need to ensure adequate response in police operations." 2/

Thereafter, and until March 1978, the Respondent gave the policemen in the unit advance notice of their assignments reserving the right, which it exercised and the Union recognized, to change any particular assignment after the policemen reported for duty. The record does not indicate how often such change occurred, but when management felt the need to do so the Union recognized its right to do so. On May 16, 1974, three months after the initiation of the "practice", at another monthly meeting it was agreed that as an alternative to the existing system some other system would be followed but that "alternative" was never implemented.

On March 3, 1978 the Respondent's Chief of Police issued a memorandum to the Watch Commanders (Lieutenants) in charge of the shifts directing that thereafter duty assignments would be made daily prior to the beginning of the shift and would not be assigned in advance. 3/ This was done without prior notice to or negotiation with the Complainant either on the making of the change or its impact. The Complainant thereupon promptly served an unfair-labor-practice charge on the Respondent without first attempting to confer informally; it regarded the March 3 Memorandum as a fait accompli with protest or attempts to negotiate futile. 4/ The memorandum of the Chief of Police was issued to the Lieutenants on March 3, 1978, the Complainant did not learn about it until two or three days later, and it served its unfair-labor-practice charge on March 10.

Despite the memorandum of March 3 the Lieutenants continued to give advance notice of the dispatcher assignments and to some extent of the other assignments. The frequency or regularity of advance notice of the other assignments is not shown in the record.

The Respondent argues that the cessation or partial cessation of advance notice was necessitated by officers taking unscheduled leave when assigned to an undesirable assignment. I cannot make such finding. There is such an allegation in its response to the original complaint, but it is only an allegation. The Respondent produced no witnesses. It attempted to develop such fact by cross-examination of Complainant's witnesses but they vigorously, and under oath, denied it. In such state of the record I cannot find that the change was necessitated by officers taking unscheduled leave when given an undesirable assignment. Such suggestion was first made in May 1974 yet the Respondent continued making the assignments in advance for four more years. The record does not show why the change was made in March 1978.

Discussion and Conclusion

Although initiated informally and never incorporated into the formal agreement, in February 1974 the Respondent started a practice of making the daily assignments of its policemen three days in advance. To be sure it was not a rigid practice. When adopted it was stated to be "subject to the need to ensure adequate response in police operations". With some undeterminable frequency the assignment would be changed after the men reported for work when the Lieutenant or Chief of Police thought it desirable to ensure adequate police response to needs, and the Complainant recognized the right of the Respondent to do so. But the assignments were made at least tentatively in advance and were not changed unless there was a reason to do so. I conclude that it became a practice, loose as it may have been, certainly after continuing for four years. I conclude further that it was a personnel practice affecting working conditions.

The only reason suggested by the Complainant for requesting advance notice in February 1974 was that if a police officer came to work wearing his thermal underwear and was assigned to work as the dispatcher, which was indoor work, it would be uncomfortably hot and might adversely affect his health. 5/ And the only adverse impact of the change in the practice that the Complainant could ascribe to the change was that the men might not know which kind of clothing to wear.

The change then was a change, albeit a slight one, in a practice, however flexible, affecting a working condition. When a practice has developed into a working condition management may not unilaterally change it without conferring with the union. 6/

The Respondent argues, correctly, that under Section 12(b) of the Executive Order the Respondent retains the right to assign employees. But the procedures by which that right will be exercised is a negotiable subject 7/; and an established practice pertaining to a working condition, especially one adopted upon the union's request, is tantamount to an agreement, and may not unilaterally be altered or abolished.

But here the "established practice" was rather loose. Although advance notice was given, the Respondent reserved the right to change the area assigned after the men reported for work and sometimes (the record does not indicate how often) did so, and the Complainant recognized its right to do so. When the Chief of Police rescinded the "practice" the Complainant did not protest or try to meet to discuss its impact other than promptly to file an unfair-labor-practice charge. The impact of the rescission was minimal. Despite the memorandum of the Chief of Police to the Lieutenants, the officer assigned to the dispatcher's assignment, work done indoors (and some others officers) continued to receive advance notice and so presumably he did not wear thermal underwear in the wintertime. Although on two of the assignments the officers regularly had to leave the squad car to direct traffic for about an hour, all officers had to leave the squad car from time to time while patrolling to attend to their duties. The record does not indicate how many, if any, of the officers actually wore thermal underwear or how often. Nor does it indicate on how many days between March 1978 (when the "practice" was formally but only partially rescinded) and August 1978 (when the hearing in this case was held) thermal underwear would have been appropriate in Chicago.

In these circumstances, although there was a technical violation of Section 19(a)(6), it approaches if it does not meet the de minimis principle. I suggest that a modification of the approach taken in Vandenberg Air Force Base, 4392d Aerospace Support Group, FLRC No. 47A-77, Rpt. No. 79 and United States Department of the Treasury, Internal Revenue Service, Chicago District, A/SLMR No. 711, 6 A/SLMR 492, 6 A/SLMR Supp. 191, be taken here.

In the Vandenberg case, when the parties reached impasse on one item the Activity stated it would not continue the negotiations on the other items until the impasse was resolved. The union then stated it would file an unfair labor practice charge and the Activity's representatives left the session. The next day the Activity offered to resume negotiations and stated it would not insist on first discussing the item on which impasse had been reached. The Council held that such a slight interruption of the bargaining process was not a violation of the obligation to "negotiate" or "meet and confer".

In the Internal Revenue Service, Chicago District case the violation was even more fleeting. The union had served eighteen proposals and the Activity had taken the position that only four of them were negotiable. At the beginning of a seven-hour negotiating session the Activity stated that it would not negotiate on the four admittedly negotiable proposals unless the union first agreed that the other fourteen were non-negotiable. The union refused and the parties immediately proceeded with negotiations and even reached agreement on some items. The infraction here lasted no longer than the twinkle of the legal eye. The complaint was dismissed.

Here, it is not the duration of the violation that renders it without significance but the effect that is virtually without significance. First, the "practice" was rather loose; the officers were given notice of the area each would patrol but the Respondent reserved the right to change the assignment after the men reported for work, sometimes did so, and the Complainant recognized the right to do so. The rescission of the "practice" was not complete. The man who would be the dispatcher, the one to whom knowledge of whether he should wear his thermal underwear would be most important, was still given advance notice. The others were still sometimes given advance notice. It is not known how many, if any, wore thermal underwear when on patrol. It is doubted that any did so between March and August, 1978, the months of the rescission of the practice and the hearing. The Complainant did nothing to initiate conference about the matter except promptly to file the charge in which it said it was ready to meet. The impact of the change was minimal if there was any at all.

I conclude that ordering a restoration of the "practice" is not necessary or appropriate to effectuate the policies of the Executive Order. All that would be appropriate would be to order the Respondent, upon request of the union, to meet and confer on a modification of the March 3, 1978 Memorandum of the Chief of Police and the impact of that memorandum or its modification.

RECOMMENDATION

I recommend that the Assistant Secretary issue an order, in the form attached hereto as Appendix A, that the Respondent, upon request of the Complainant, meet and confer with it on a modification of the March 3, 1978 memorandum of the Chief of Police and the impact of that memorandum or its modification.

Case No. 22-08900(CA)

AMERICAN FEDERATION OF GOVERNMENT

Complainant

This case involved an unfair labor practice complaint filed by the American Federation of Government Employees, AFL-CIO, Local 3615, (Complainant) alleging that the Respondent violated Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order by virtue of its refusing to negotiate with the Complainant concerning the impact and implementation of the decision by the Respondent to change the method of recording time spent on Civil Actions Branch cases.

The Administrative Law Judge concluded that the Respondent violated Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order. In this regard, he found that the unilateral change in the method of recording time spent on Civil Actions Branch cases had a substantial impact on the bargaining unit employees and that the Respondent's bargaining obligation in connection with such change was not fulfilled.

Noting particularly the absence of exceptions, the Assistant Secretary adopted the Administrative Law Judge's findings, conclusions, and recommendation and ordered the Respondent to cease and desist from the conduct found violative of the Order and to take certain affirmative actions.

DECISION AND ORDER

On November 7, 1978, Administrative Law Judge Burton S. Sternburg issued his Recommended Decision and Order in the above-entitled proceeding, finding that the Respondent had engaged in the unfair labor practices alleged in the complaint and recommending that it cease and desist therefrom and take certain affirmative actions as set forth in the attached Administrative Law Judge's Recommended Decision and Order. No exceptions were filed to the Administrative Law Judge's Recommended Decision and Order.

The Assistant Secretary has reviewed the rulings of the Administrative Law Judge made at the hearing and finds that no prejudicial error was committed. The rulings are hereby affirmed. Upon consideration of the Administrative Law Judge's Recommended Decision and Order and the entire record in the instant case, and noting particularly the absence of exceptions, I hereby adopt the Administrative Law Judge's findings, ^{1/} conclusions and recommendation.

^{1/} In reaching the disposition herein, I find it unnecessary to pass upon the apparent rationale of the Administrative Law Judge that in order to find a violation in this matter it would have to be reasonably foreseeable that the change involved would have a substantial impact on employee working conditions.

ORDER

Pursuant to Section 6(b) of Executive Order 11491, as amended, and Section 203.26(b) of the Regulations, the Assistant Secretary of Labor for Labor-Management Relations hereby orders that the Social Security Administration, Bureau of Hearings and Appeals, Arlington, Virginia, shall:

1. Cease and desist from:

(a) Instituting a change in the method of filling out the "Manpower Utilization Report" with respect to employees represented exclusively by American Federation of Government Employees, AFL-CIO, Local 3615, without affording such representative the opportunity to meet and confer, to the extent consonant with law and regulations, on the procedures to be utilized in effecting such change and on the impact the change will have on adversely affected unit employees.

(b) In any like or related manner interfering with, restraining, or coercing employees in the exercise of their rights assured by Executive Order 11491, as amended.

2. Take the following affirmative actions in order to effectuate the purposes and policies of Executive Order 11491, as amended:

(a) Upon request by American Federation of Government Employees, AFL-CIO, Local 3615, meet and confer, to the extent consonant with law and regulations, concerning the procedures to be utilized in affecting a change in the method of filling out the "Manpower Utilization Report" and the impact of the change on adversely affected unit employees.

(b) Post in the Arlington, Virginia, Office of the Bureau of Hearings and Appeals, copies of the attached notice marked "Appendix" on forms to be furnished by the Assistant Secretary of Labor for Labor-Management Relations. Upon receipt of such forms, they shall be signed by the Director of the Bureau of Hearings and Appeals and shall be posted and maintained by him for 60 consecutive days thereafter, in conspicuous places, including all bulletin boards and other places where notices to employees are customarily posted. DECISION AND ORDER

Statement of the Case

Pursuant to a complaint filed on March 22, 1978, under Executive Order 11491, as amended, by the American Federation of Government Employees, AFL-CIO, Local 3615, (hereinafter called the Complainant or AFGE), against the Social Security Administration, Bureau of Hearings and Appeals (hereinafter called the Agency or Respondent), a Notice of Hearing on Complaint was issued by the Regional Administrator for the Philadelphia, Pennsylvania Region on June 13, 1978.

The Complaint alleges, in substance, that the Respondent violated Sections 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Executive Order by virtue of its actions in refusing to negotiate with the AFGE concerning the impact and implementation of the decision by the Respondent to change the method of recording time spent on Civil Actions Branch cases.

A hearing was held in the captioned matter on August 3, 1978, in Washington, D.C. All parties were afforded full opportunity to be heard, to examine and cross-examine witnesses, and to introduce evidence bearing on the issue involved herein.

Upon the basis of the entire record ^{1/}, including my observation of the witnesses and their demeanor, I make the following findings of fact, conclusions and recommendations.

Findings of Fact

AFGE, Local 3615, AFL-CIO, represents a number of Hearings and Appeals Analysts assigned to Respondent's Disability Branch, Health Insurance Branch and Retirement and Survivors Branch. The aforementioned Hearings and Appeals Analysts as a general rule customarily analyze various cases which have not become the subject of civil actions in the courts. The analysis of those disability cases or decisions which have reached the court stage are generally handled by other Analysts assigned to the Civil Actions Branch (CAB). However, from time to time when the Civil Actions Branch was overloaded with work, some of the Hearings and Appeals Analysts from the other branches would be detailed for periods of 30, 60 or 90 days to handle the Civil Actions Branch cases. In recent years the amount of assignments to Civil Actions Branch cases increased to such an extent that Respondent saw fit in the latter part of 1976 to amend the job description of the Hearings and Appeals Analysts to include CAB work.

Despite the fact that the CAB work was included in the job description of the Hearings and Appeals Analysts not permanently assigned to the CAB branch, the Hearings and Appeals Analysts listed the time spent on CAB cases under the "Miscellaneous" category on the "Manpower Utilization Report" which was used to record the time spent on various projects during each Analyst's respective work day. The "Miscellaneous" category among other categories on the "Manpower Utilization

^{1/} In absence of any objection, Complainant's motion to correct the transcript is hereby granted. The corrections are set forth in Appendix A attached hereto.

Report" did not enter into the calculations used to arrive at an Analyst's "Hours Per Disposition" statistics. Thus, if a Hearings and Appeals Analyst encountered difficulty with a CAB case and spent an inordinate amount of time thereon due to the fact that he was not familiar with the case law involved, etc., such difficulty would not be reflected in his case production figures. ^{2/}

On or about January 26, 1978; Mr. Semans submitted to James Marshall, president of AFGE Local 3615, a draft memorandum for review. Citing the fact that the projected volume of CAB cases would make it necessary to use Analysts assigned to branches outside the CAB on a permanent basis, the memorandum stated in pertinent part as follows:

...the time spent on processing CAB cases will no longer be reported by the analysts under "miscellaneous" time on their manpower utilization reports nor included in "other hours" in the section and branch reports. Instead, these case action. . . will be counted just like any other Appeals Council case actions. . .and the time spent on processing these cases will be included in "hours in casework."

Pursuant to a request from Mr. Marshall dated January 30, 1978, a meeting was held between Union and Management representatives on February 6, 1978, for purposes of discussing the January 26, 1978, draft memorandum concerning the proposed change in the manner of recording the CAB work on the manpower utilization reports. During the course of the meeting Mr. Marshall made it clear that the Union was opposed to the proposed change on the ground that it would increase the workload of the affected analysts and have an adverse effect on their performance appraisals. Mr. Marshall further pointed out that it would affect the progression of the GS-12 analysts since they did not have the opportunity to be trained and/or perform the CAB work which was included in the position description of the GS-13 analysts. The Union offered no specific proposals other than a retention of the status quo. The meeting ended with Mr. Marshall requesting that he be informed of management's final decision with regard to the proposed change before it was implemented.

^{2/} According to the testimony of Mr. Semans, Assistant Bureau Director, Division of Appeals Operations, although there are no production standards or quotas, productivity is one of 13 or 14 items taken into consideration in preparing an employee's appraisal. Further, according to Mr. Semans, the time spent on CAB cases would be identified separately under the heading "miscellaneous".

On February 9, 1978, Mr. Nowicki, Jr., Branch Chief, Disability Branch, informed Mr. Marshall by telephone that the Respondent had decided to implement the change in the manner of recording the CAB work performed by analysts assigned to branches outside the CAB. On the same day, Mr. Marshall directed and sent a memorandum to Mr. Semans wherein he requested that Respondent "meet, confer, and negotiate, in good faith, regarding the impact and implementation" of its decision.

On February 14, 1978, Mr. Semans issued a memorandum in response to Mr. Marshall's February 9, 1978, request for bargaining over impact and implementation. The memorandum reads as follows:

At your request, representatives of the division met with Local 3615 on February 6, regarding the impact and implementation of the proposal to modify the recording procedures for certain casework items.

Your subject memorandum does not indicate what you now wish to negotiate nor did you raise specific matters for negotiations during the earlier meeting.

Accordingly, we are issuing instructions to implement these procedures.

Also, on February 14, 1978, Mr. Semans notified the various branch chiefs that the proposed change in the manner of reporting CAB work would be effective March 1, 1978. It appears from the record that the change was implemented without any further negotiations with the Union.

With regard to the amount of CAB work performed by the analysts involved herein, the record indicates that they were assigned approximately 1 case per month.

Discussion and Conclusions

The only questions to be determined herein is whether the Respondent was obligated to bargain with the AFGE with respect to the impact of its decision to change the method of recording CAB cases and, if so, whether it did in fact bargain.

Respondent takes the position that it was under no obligation to bargain with the AFGE since the change involved herein did not "materially affect, and have a substantial impact on personnel policies, practices and working conditions"

Alternatively, Respondent takes the position that it did in fact bargain with the AFGE on February 6, 1978, and that if the AFGE was dissatisfied with Respondent's decision, the AFGE should have submitted the matter to the Federal Services Impasses Panel.

The AFGE on the other hand takes the position that the change did have a substantial impact on the Analysts and that the Respondent, in violation of Sections 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Executive Order, refused to honor the AFGE's request for bargaining thereon.

Contrary to the contention of the Respondent, I find that the change involved herein could have a substantial impact on the working conditions of the Analysts outside the CAB. Inasmuch as the time spent on CAB cases was to be included in an analyst's case disposition statistics which were relied on in part in completing his yearly appraisal it can not be argued that there would be no impact. While it is true, on the basis of the current workload i.e., one case per month, the impact might well be slight, the fact remains that there is no guarantee that the CAB assignments will not increase in the future and have a significant impact on the case disposition statistics of the analysts. If it is reasonably foreseeable that the immediate change might in the future have a substantial impact on the working conditions of employees, then Respondent is obligated to bargain over impact. To hold otherwise would make impact bargaining in most cases a nullity since the effect or impact of many changes imposed by management do not manifest themselves until many months down the line. Fc. Dept. of the Treasury, IRS Manhattan District, A/SLMR No. 841.

With respect to the second issue, i.e., whether Respondent did in fact bargain with the AFGE concerning the impact of its decision to change the manner in reporting CAB case work, I find that the Respondent did not fulfill the obligations imposed by the Executive Order. The February 6 meeting relied upon by Respondent was specifically convened for purposes of discussing the proposed revision of the manner in which CAB work would be recorded on the manpower utilization report. While it is true that the possible impact of the change on the analysts involved was touched upon or mentioned during the meeting, the main thrust or subject of the meeting was the proposed change itself. No firm agreement was reached at the meeting wherein the AFGE vigorously argued for a retention of the status quo. In fact the meeting ended with a request from the AFGE that it be informed of the Respondent's final decision on the matter. If Respondent had acceded to the AFGE's position, then, of course, there would have been no change in working conditions and consequently no possible impact. However, such was not the case. Accordingly, in the absence of any substantive evidence that the impact of the proposed change was fully discussed during the February 6 meeting, the AFGE was entitled to an opportunity to meet and confer thereon prior to the implementation of the change. Having denied the AFGE's request for impact bargaining, Respondent violated Sections 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order. 3/

Recommendation

Having found that Respondent has engaged in conduct prohibited by Sections 19(a)(1) and (6) of Executive Order 11491, as amended, I recommend that the Assistant Secretary adopt the order as hereinafter set forth which is designed to effectuate the policies of the Order.

RECOMMENDED ORDER

Pursuant to Section 6(b) of Executive Order 11491, as amended, and Section 203.26(b) of the Regulations, the Assistant Secretary of Labor for Labor-Management Relations hereby orders that the Social Security Administration, Bureau of Hearings and Appeals, Arlington, Virginia, shall

DECISION AND ORDER

This case involved an unfair labor practice complaint filed by the American Federation of Government Employees, AFL-CIO, (Complainant) alleging that the Respondent violated Section 19(a)(1), (2) and (6) of the Order by unilaterally implementing three new policy directives under an existing labor agreement while negotiations on a new agreement were continuing with certain issues pending before the Federal Service Impasses Panel (Panel).

The Administrative Law Judge determined that the Respondent did not violate Section 19(a)(1), (2) and (6) of the Order and recommended that the complaint be dismissed in its entirety. In this regard, he found that the three personnel policies in question were unrelated to the issues before the Panel; that with regard to the directive relating to the scheduling and use of general purpose rooms there was no change in the existing space request procedure and, furthermore, that agreement on this procedure had been reached between the local union and management in a prior publication entitled, "Our New Building"; and that with regard to the final two directives, "Overtime Policy and Practice" and "Performance Awards," drafts of these two publications were delivered to the local union president and there was no evidence to indicate that, at any time, either the Complainant or the local union requested bargaining on these matters.

Noting particularly the absence of exceptions by the Complainant, the Assistant Secretary adopted the findings, conclusions and recommendation of the Administrative Law Judge and ordered that the complaint be dismissed.

On October 31, 1978, Administrative Law Judge William A. Gershuny issued his Recommended Decision and Order in the above-entitled proceeding, finding that the Respondent had not engaged in the unfair labor practices alleged in the complaint and recommending that the complaint be dismissed in its entirety. Thereafter, the Respondent filed exceptions and a supporting brief with respect to the Administrative Law Judge's Recommended Decision and Order. ^{1/}

The Assistant Secretary has reviewed the rulings of the Administrative Law Judge made at the hearing and finds that no prejudicial error was committed. The rulings are hereby affirmed. Upon consideration of the Administrative Law Judge's Recommended Decision and Order, and the entire record in the subject case, including the exceptions and supporting brief filed by the Respondent, and noting particularly the absence of exceptions by the Complainant, I hereby adopt the Administrative Law Judge's findings, conclusions and recommendation.

ORDER

IT IS HEREBY ORDERED that the complaint in Case No. 22-08523(CA) be, and it hereby is, dismissed.

on a new agreement were continuing and certain issues were pending before the Impasse Panel, in violation of Sections 19(a)(1), (2) and (6) of Executive Order 11491, as amended.

II

At a hearing conducted in Chicago, Illinois on July 31, 1978, the parties stipulated, and I find, that Complainant, through its National Council of Social Security Payment Center Locals, is the exclusive representative for a national bargaining unit consisting of all non-supervisory employees at the Activity's six regional program service centers, of which the Great Lakes Center is one; that affiliated with the Council are six local unions, of which Local 1395, Great Lakes is one; and that at all relevant times there remained in effect, by extensions, a Master Agreement effective March 15, 1974 (A/S Exh. 2; Tr. 6).

In addition, there is no dispute that contract negotiations commenced on February 7, 1977; that Complainant requested the assistance of the Impasse Panel on March 4, 1977 as to issues wholly unrelated to the subject of the three personnel policy changes in question (A/S Exh. 1; Tr. 80; Resp. Exh. J); and that no new contract has become effective.

The first publication relates to the scheduling and use of general purpose rooms in the Activity's new building. Mr. Zaltman, a local union vice-president, testified that the publication, "Guide GLPSC-BRSI-110", issued April 20, 1977, changed prior procedures by requiring that requests for space be in writing, thus resulting in delays in procuring approval. The building manager, Mr. Lara, testified that the requirement of a written request was present in the prior published procedure (Resp. Exh. D) and that the new publication was issued principally to deal with the added facilities available in the new building. I credit the latter and find that this publication resulted in no change of the space request procedure. The record evidence also is uncontroverted that agreement was reached in the Fall of 1976 concerning the wording of a publication entitled "Our New Building", which, in part, describes the available space for meetings and training and indicates the specific procedures for reserving use of the rooms would be subsequently established (Resp. Exhs. B and C, p. 27).

The second publication, GLPC-BRSI Guide 4-1, "Overtime Policy and Practice," issued March 18, 1977, adds a requirement that the overtime sign-in sheet reflect the employees'

RECOMMENDED DECISION AND ORDER

The Activity, by complaint dated September 9, 1977, is charged with unilateral implementation of certain personnel policies under an existing labor agreement while negotiations grade and step. Mr. Cunningham, Respondent's labor relations specialist, testified that on November 19, 1976, he gave copies of a preliminary draft to Local Union President Jones and requested the Union's comments by the following week, but that no response was received. (Resp. Exh. J; Tr. 75-77). Mr. Jones was not called to testify and the Executive Vice-President, Mr. Langster, conceded that he does not know if Mr. Jones had any discussions with the Activity as to any of the publications. He testified that the local's record-keeping system was maintained by volunteers and that he could find no evidence of the draft having been received in the office of the local union. I credit the testimony of Mr. Cunningham and find that the draft was delivered and the local union given an opportunity to comment.

The third publication, GLPS-BRSI Guide 5-1, "Performance Awards," issued March 15, 1977, alters the prior procedure by introducing the employee's leave record as an additional factor and establishing production standards as another factor. The Assistant Director of Management, Ms. Carothers, testified that she transmitted a draft to Mr. Jones on January 24, 1977, requesting the local's comments by February 1, but that no response was received (Resp. Exh. A; Tr. 32-35). Again Mr. Jones did not testify and Complainant's evidence was limited to testimony that a search of the files failed to reflect receipt of the document. I credit the testimony of Mrs. Carothers and find that the draft was delivered and the local union afforded an opportunity to comment.

There is no evidence to indicate that, at any time, either Complainant or the local union requested bargaining on any of these three publications.

II

The obligation of Respondent, under Article 2, Section e of the existing contract, to negotiate, on request of the local union, matters relating to personnel policies, practices and working conditions at regional centers is now established and, accordingly, there is no need for a discussion of Respondent's principal contention that its sole obligation is to "consult." Dept. of HEW, Social Security Administration, BRSI, Northeastern Program Service Center, A/SLMR No. 1101 (Aug. 16, 1978). However, there having been no such request to negotiate following notice to the local union of an intent to effect changes in performance award and overtime sign-in procedures, Respondent's publication of these changes is not violative of the Executive Order, unless it is otherwise prohibited from doing so by reason of the fact that certain unspecified, but unrelated, issues are pending before the Impasse Panel.

Citing U.S. Army, Philadelphia Corp of Engineers, A/SLMR No. 673 and Dept. of the Air Force, Kelly AFB, Texas, A/SLMR No. 540, Complainant contends that the Activity may not implement such changes either before or after impasse. Complainant's interpretation of these decisions is incorrect and its reliance on them, in any event, misplaced, for they are inapplicable to the facts of this case as established by the record evidence. First, unlike the situation in the cited cases where no contract was in existence, the parties here had agreed to extend the life of the predecessor contract and the procedural changes were being implemented in accordance with the existing contract. Second, Respondent gave notice of the proposed changes and negotiations were not requested. And finally, the procedural changes were identical with those initially proposed.

RECOMMENDATION

For the reasons stated above, it is recommended that the Complaint be dismissed.

DECISION AND ORDER

This case involved an unfair labor practice complaint filed by the Professional Air Traffic Controllers Organization, MEBA, AFL-CIO, Local Union 201 (Complainant) alleging that the Respondent violated Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order by unilaterally negating an agreement between the parties when it reversed an oral decision on a grievance processed under the parties' negotiated agreement.

The Administrative Law Judge found that the Respondent did not violate Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order and recommended that the complaint be dismissed in its entirety. In this regard, he found that the management official, who mistakenly relayed incorrect information to the Complainant, did not possess authority to render a binding decision on the Respondent's behalf and consequently his mistake did not bind the Respondent.

Noting particularly the absence of exceptions, the Assistant Secretary adopted the findings, conclusions and recommendation of the Administrative Law Judge and ordered that the complaint be dismissed.

On October 23, 1978, Administrative Law Judge Eli Nash, Jr., issued his Recommended Decision and Order in the above-entitled proceeding, finding that the Respondent had not engaged in the unfair labor practices alleged in the complaint and recommending that the complaint be dismissed in its entirety. No exceptions were filed to the Administrative Law Judge's Recommended Decision and Order.

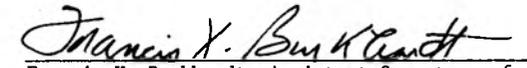

The Assistant Secretary has reviewed the rulings of the Administrative Law Judge made at the hearing and finds that no prejudicial error was committed. The rulings are hereby affirmed. Upon consideration of the Administrative Law Judge's Recommended Decision and Order and the entire record in this case, and noting particularly that no exceptions were filed, I hereby adopt the Administrative Law Judge's findings, conclusions and recommendation.

Administration, New York Air Route Traffic Control Center (hereinafter called the Respondent or Agency), a Notice of Hearing on Complaint was issued by the Regional Administrator for Labor-Management Services Administration, U.S. Department of Labor, New York Region, on May 24, 1978.

The complaint alleges, in substance, that Respondent unilaterally and without notice changed an existing working condition in derogation of the Union's right to consult, confer or negotiate about this change and its implementation and impact and thereby violated Sections 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order.

A hearing was held in this matter before the undersigned in Ronkonkoma, New York. Both parties were represented and afforded full opportunity to be heard, adduce evidence, and to examine and cross-examine witnesses. Thereafter both parties filed briefs which have been duly considered.

Upon the entire record in this case, from my observation of the witnesses and their demeanor, and from all of the testimony and the evidence adduced at the hearing, I make the following findings, conclusions and recommendations:

Findings of Fact

The Complainant herein has exclusive recognition for a unit of employees in the Respondent's New York Air Route Traffic Control Center. On September 2, 1977, a bargaining unit employee Mr. Jack Jacobs filed a formal grievance AEA-77-104-2 NY under Article 7, Section 3, Step 2, of the parties negotiated grievance procedure.

The negotiated agreement contains provision related to the administration of matters covered by the agreement. Article 7, Disputes Settlement and Procedure relating to the grievance procedure reads as follows:

Section 1. This Article provides the procedure for the timely consideration of grievances over the interpretation or application of this agreement. This procedure does not cover any other matters for which statutory appeals procedures exist and shall be the exclusive procedure available to the Parties and the employees in the unit for

Statement of the Case

Pursuant to a complaint filed on November 1, 1977 and an amended complaint filed in March 9, 1978 under Executive Order 11491, as amended, (hereinafter called the Order) by Professional Air Traffic Controllers Organization, Local 201 against Department of Transportation, Federal Aviation resolving grievances over the interpretation or application of this agreement. Any employee, group of employees or the Parties may file a grievance under this procedure. The Parties shall cooperate to resolve grievances informally at the earliest possible time and at the lowest possible supervisory level.

Section 2. Employees are entitled to be assisted by the Union in the presentation of grievances. Any employee or group of employees covered by this agreement may present grievances and have them adjusted, without the intervention of the exclusive representative, as long as the adjustment is not inconsistent with the terms of the agreement and the exclusive representative has been given opportunity to be present at the adjustment. This right of individual presentation does not extend beyond Step 2 of this procedure and does not include the right of taking the matter to arbitration, unless the Union agrees to do so.

Section 3. Grievances Filed by Employees.

Step 1: An aggrieved employee shall request informal resolution of his grievance from his immediate supervisor (who may be the Facility Chief) within 15 calendar days of the date of the event giving rise to the grievance or within 15 calendar days of the time the employee may have been reasonably expected to have learned of the event. The supervisor shall promptly arrange for a meeting at a mutually agreeable time, but no later than 15 calendar days following the date of the employee's request, to discuss the grievance. The employee and his representative will be given a reasonable amount of official time to present the grievance if they are otherwise in a duty status. The supervisor shall answer the grievance either orally or in writing within 10 calendar days following the meeting.

Step 2: If the employee or the Union is not satisfied with the answer, a formal grievance may be submitted to the Facility Chief within 10 calendar days following the receipt of the answer. The grievance shall be submitted in writing on a Grievance Form and shall contain the name of the grievant, the Article and Section of the agreement alleged to have been violated, the corrective action desired, the name of his Union representative and whether he wishes to make an oral presentation. If requested, the Facility Chief shall, prior to making a decision, afford the employee and/or Union representative an opportunity to present the grievance orally.

The employee and his representative will be given a reasonable amount of official time to present the grievance if they are otherwise in a duty status. The decision of the Facility Chief shall be delivered to the employee and/or Union representative within 15 calendar days following receipt of the written grievance. The decision shall be delivered personally to the employee, and/or his representative, if he is on duty. Otherwise, another appropriate method of delivery shall be used.

Step 3: If the Union is not satisfied with the decision, the Union may within 15 calendar days following receipt of the decision or the day the answer was due, advise the Chief, Labor Relations Branch, Regional headquarters, by certified mail, that it desires the matter be reviewed by the Chief, Air Traffic Division or his designee. If the Regional Vice President of the Union or his designee so requests, a meeting with the Air Traffic Division Chief or his designee will be held as promptly as possible but no later than 15 calendar days following the receipt of the request to discuss the grievance prior to the final Regional decision. The Union will be notified by certified mail within 15 calendar days of the Regional decision.

Other pertinent provisions of the agreement in this case are as follows:

Article 2 - Recognition and Union Representative and Rights.

Section 3. The union may designate facility representative at each facility. The Union may designate one representative and one designee for each team, crew, or group, as appropriate, in each facility. Normally on each tour of duty, the Union may designate one representative to deal with first and second level supervisors. At the team representative's option, he may designate an alternate to act on his behalf in dealing with first and second level supervisors. In addition, the Union shall designate in writing one principal representative and/or his designee may deal with the Facility Chief.

Section 4. During meetings between the Facility Chief and/or his designee and the principal Union representative and/or his designee, if such representative desires he may be accompanied by one other representative.

Section 7. When a Union representative is detailed to a supervisory position for more than six consecutive work days, he shall be required to name his designee to act in his place as a Union representative. When other qualified employees are available, the principal facility representative or his designee shall not be required to perform supervisory duties.

Section 8. The Union representatives specified in the above sections of this Article are the only individuals authorized to represent the Union in dealings with FAA officials at the respective levels specified in this Article.

Section 9. The principal facility representative and/or his designee shall be granted official time if otherwise in a duty status to deal with the Facility Chief and/or his designee. Such meetings shall be held at mutually agreeable times. At other meetings called by the Facility Chief and/or his designee, Union participants shall be on official time.

Section 13. Union facility representatives or their designees may be granted excused absence for short periods of time, ordinarily not to exceed 8 hours at a time, to receive information, briefings, or orientation by the Union and Employer relating to the Federal Labor Relations Program. Such meetings may be held locally, regionally, or nationally. The Union shall submit an agenda for meetings under this Article to the appropriate official. Determinations as to whether an individual can be spared from duty shall be made by the Employer, based solely on operational requirements.

Section 15. Each principal facility representative or his designee shall be granted 8 hours of excused absence to receive orientation on the meaning of the articles of the Agreement.

The grievance herein proceeded in accordance with the negotiated Agreement to Step 3 of the grievance proceeding. A Step 3 meeting was held on September 15, 1977. Complainant Union's President John Seddon represented the grievant at the formal meeting. The Respondent Agency was represented by Deputy Chief Howard Rubenstein and a Personnel Specialist, Mr. Macey. The meeting concluded without incident. However, at the conclusion of the meeting the Respondent requested an extension to answer the grievance so that Mr. Rubenstein could confer with the team supervisor involved in the grievance. Also, the lack of clerical staff to prepare the grievance in typed or written form was cited. Seddon states that he informed Respondent that he could not give an extension and while he appreciated the problem with the clerical staff he would accept an oral decision no later than September 16 and the written decision could be filed in writing on Monday, September 19.

Subsequently, on September 16, Seddon received a telephone call from Mr. Macey. According to Seddon, he was told that the grievance was sustained in total and that he would receive the follow-up in writing on Monday.

Mr. Rubenstein states that on September 16, Mr. Macey reminded him that the decision was due on the grievance. According to Rubenstein, he informed Macey to contact Seddon and tell him that he was looking at the grievance, but that he had not decided. However, he might sustain part of the grievance. He further stated that Seddon would probably get a written decision the following Monday. Clearly, this is not the information which was relayed to Seddon on the 16th.

Thereafter, on September 20 a written decision on the grievance was issued by Mr. Pol, the Facility Chief. That decision which was not received by Seddon until September 24 denied the grievance.

II. Contentions of the Parties

The Complainant contends that the September 16 notification from Mr. Macey that the grievance was sustained should be binding on the Respondent in this matter. It therefore argues that the time limits of the Agreement for written notification were disregarded and the oral response sustaining the grievance should be honored. The Respondent, on the other hand, states that there was a misunderstanding based primarily on Mr. Macey's erroneously relaying information to Mr. Seddon which was not correct. In its view, the Complainant is merely seeking through this forum to have an unfavorable decision set aside and to circumvent the arbitration process. Finally, Respondent contends that the parties should be left to their own remedies under the terms of their collective bargaining agreement for resolving the grievance dispute.

III. Discussion, Conclusions and Recommendations

It is well established that interference with the filing or processing of grievances may be violative of Section 19(a) (1) and (6) of the Executive Order. National Labor Relations Board, Region 17, and National Labor Relations Board, A/SLMR No. 670; Office of Economic Opportunity, Region V, Chicago, Illinois, A/SLMR No. 334; Veterans Administration Hospital, Charleston, South Carolina, A/SLMR No. 87.

The instant grievance was filed under a negotiated grievance procedure containing specific time limitations for responses. The Respondent contended that responses to grievances had in the past been in writing while the Complainant argues that there is no proviso in the written agreement requiring decisions on grievances to be "received" in writing. In fact, it states that alternate means may be used. Therefore, its position is that the failure to honor the oral statement that the grievance was sustained was bad faith bargaining and in violation of Section 19(a)(1) and (6). The Assistant Secretary has previously held that alleged violations of a negotiated agreement which concern differing and arguable interpretations of such agreement, as distinguished from alleged actions which would constitute clear, unilateral breaches of the agreement, are not deemed to be violative of the Order. Under such circumstances, the aggrieved party's remedy for such matters lies within the grievance machinery of the negotiated agreement, rather than through the unfair labor practice procedure. Department of the Army, Watervliet Arsenal, Watervliet, New York, A/SLMR No. 624.

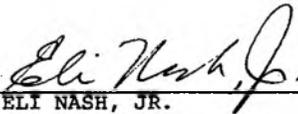

If it were established that Respondent reneged on an oral agreement to sustain the grievance herein such action would constitute a clear, unilateral breach of the negotiated agreement, and be violative of the Order. However, the only evidence of such an agreement to sustain the grievance occurred in a telephone conversation between Union President Seddon and the Respondent's personnel specialist, Mr. Macey. Contrary to the Complainant's contention, there is no evidence of record which establishes Mr. Macey's authority to bind the agency to an agreement in this matter. While Mr. Macey appeared to have been present at grievance proceedings on the agency's behalf there is no indication that he had authority to make decisions or that he exercised any such authority in these matters but, that he acted only upon decisions of the Facility Chief or Acting Chief. Mr. Rubenstein, Acting Chief of the Facility testified that Mr. Macey was not acting upon his instructions and that while he had told Mr. Macey that a part of the grievance might be sustained, his instructions to Macey were to get more time to file the written response to the grievance. Without a showing that Mr. Macey had authority to render a binding decision on the agency's behalf, I am constrained to find that he was mistaken in his communication with Mr. Seddon and that his mistake does not bind the agency. Interestingly, Mr. Macey, who has since retired, was not called by either party to testify at the hearing. Although there is considerable conflicting evidence as to the parties intent in this matter there is no extrinsic evidence in the record that either confirms or casts doubt on the veracity of the conflicting testimony, and it cannot be fairly said that the weight of evidence on the issue favors either party. It is axiomatic that where the evidence is evenly balanced the party having the burden of proof has failed to sustain that burden. Consequently, it must be concluded that the Complainant has failed to prove by a fair preponderance of the credible evidence that Respondent agreed verbally to sustain the grievance in its entirety.

In all the circumstances of the case and considering the totality of the conduct involved it is concluded that the Respondent's conduct does not constitute a clear and unilateral breach of the agreement and it is, therefore found, not be violative of Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order.

Recommendation

Having found that the Complainant has failed to prove by a preponderance of the evidence that the Respondent has engaged in certain conduct prohibited by Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of Executive Order 11491, as amended, it is recommended that the complaint be dismissed in its entirety.

DECISION AND ORDER

This matter is before the Assistant Secretary pursuant to Regional Administrator Kenneth M. Bazar's Order Transferring Case to the Assistant Secretary of Labor in accordance with Sections 203.5(b), 203.7(a)(4), and 206.5(a) of the Assistant Secretary's Regulations.

Upon consideration of the entire record in the subject case, including the parties' stipulation of facts, accompanying exhibits and briefs, 1/ the Assistant Secretary finds:

The complaint herein alleges that the Respondent, National Aeronautics and Space Administration, Lewis Research Center, Cleveland, Ohio, violated Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order by conducting a "Secretarial/Clerical Survey" among certain bargaining unit employees "without first consulting or conferring" with the employees' exclusive representative.

The undisputed facts, as stipulated by the parties, are as follows:

The Complainant, Lewis Engineers and Scientists Association, Local 28, IFPTE, AFL-CIO/CLC, was certified on April 12, 1978, as the exclusive representative of a unit of both professional and nonprofessional employees employed by the Respondent. 2/ On May 8, 1978, Mr. Harold D. Wharton, Assistant to the Director of Administration at the Respondent,

1/ The Assistant Secretary's consideration of the record in the instant case is limited to those matters incorporated within the stipulation of facts and accompanying exhibits, and does not encompass those supplemental facts and assertions which were alleged in the parties' briefs but not contained in the parties' stipulation.

2/ There is no evidence of any negotiated agreement between the parties.

This case involved an unfair labor practice complaint filed by the Lewis Engineers and Scientists Association, Local 28, AFL-CIO/CLC (Complainant) alleging that the Respondent violated Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order by conducting a survey among certain bargaining unit employees without first "consulting or conferring" with the Complainant, the employees' exclusive representative.

The parties stipulated that the Respondent distributed to directorate, office and divisional secretaries a survey entitled "Secretarial/Clerical Survey" concerning work performed and time spent on particular work functions and stated that the responses to such survey were to be voluntary. Secretarial personnel are included in the Complainant's exclusively recognized unit. The Respondent's stated purpose in conducting the survey was to determine whether or not to purchase word processing equipment. Thereafter, the Complainant's President requested that secretaries not be required to sign their names to the survey and the Complainant later requested that the survey be withdrawn. Both requests were denied. The parties did not have a negotiated agreement and management did not inform the Complainant about the survey prior to its issuance. As of the time of the filing of unfair labor practice complaint, no decision had been made concerning the acquisition of the word processing equipment.

The Assistant Secretary found that the Respondent's conducting of the subject survey was not violative of the Order. In this regard, he noted that the Federal Labor Relations Council has held that information-gathering devices are permissible under certain circumstances and that in any communication between management and bargaining unit employees a determination must be made as to whether the communication constitutes an attempt to bypass the exclusive representative and deal directly with bargaining unit employees. Under the particular circumstances of the present case, the Assistant Secretary concluded that the subject survey was a permissible information-gathering device and did not reflect an intention on the part of the Respondent to bypass the Complainant and avoid such bargaining responsibility as the Respondent would have had, if, and when, it decided to change working conditions by purchasing the new equipment.

Accordingly, he found that the Respondent's conducting of the "Secretarial/Clerical Survey" was not violative of Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order and he ordered that the complaint be dismissed in its entirety.

distributed to directorate, office and divisional secretaries a survey entitled "Secretarial/Clerical Survey", consisting of a number of questions concerning work performed and time spent on particular work functions. It was stated that the responses to such survey were to be voluntary. Secretarial personnel are included in the Complainant's exclusively recognized unit. The Respondent's stated purpose in conducting the survey was to determine whether or not to purchase word processing equipment. Management did not inform the Complainant about the survey prior to its issuance.

On or about May 10, 1978, Mr. Lyle Wright, the President of the Complainant, made a request to Mr. Paul Cline, the Respondent's Industrial Relations Officer, that secretaries not be required to sign their names to the survey. Wright's request was denied. On May 12, 1978, the Complainant sent a letter to the Respondent's Labor Relations Office requesting that the survey be withdrawn, which request was similarly denied. Approximately 54 percent of the Respondent's secretaries responded to the survey. As of August 25, 1978, no decision had been made concerning the acquisition of the word processing equipment.

FINDINGS AND CONCLUSIONS

I find that the Respondent's conducting of the survey involved herein, among employees exclusively represented by the Complainant, was not violative of Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order. Thus, the Federal Labor Relations Council (Council) has stated that management information-gathering among unit employees is not violative of the Order:

...where management does not, in the course of information gathering: seek to make commitments or counterproposals regarding employee opinions or complaints solicited by means of such devices; indicate that the employees' comments on such matters might have an effect on the employees' status... or gather information regarding employee sentiments for the purpose of using it subsequently to persuade the union to abandon a position taken during negotiations regarding the personnel policies or practices concerned. 3/

The Council has further held, that every direct communication between management and bargaining unit employees is not per se a bypass of the exclusive representative. In the Council's view, each communication must be judged independently and a determination made as to whether that communication constitutes an attempt to bypass the exclusive representative and deal directly with bargaining unit employees. In making that determination, the Council has indicated that both the content and the surrounding circumstances must be considered. 4/

3/ National Aeronautics and Space Administration (NASA), Washington, D.C. and Lyndon B. Johnson Center (NASA), Houston, Texas, 3 FLRC 617, FLRC No. 74A-95 (1975).

4/ Department of the Navy, Naval Air Station, Fallon, Nevada, 3 FLRC 697, FLRC No. 74A-80 (1975).

Under the particular circumstances herein, I find that the Respondent was not obligated to bargain with the Complainant before conducting the voluntary survey employed in the instant case. Thus, in my view, the survey constituted a form of information-gathering sanctioned under the Council's NASA, Johnson Space Center decision, cited above. In this regard, it is noted that no decision has been made by the Respondent to procure new processing equipment and that the information sought was solely for the purpose of making a future determination of whether to purchase the equipment. 5/ Further, the circumstances herein under which the information was collected and the nature of the information sought did not reflect an intention on the part of the Respondent to bypass the Complainant and avoid bargaining responsibility as the Respondent would have had, if, the Respondent had changed working conditions by a decision to make an agreement.

Accordingly, as the Respondent's conduct was not violative of the Order, I shall order that the complaint herein be dismissed in its entirety.

ORDER

IT IS HEREBY ORDERED that the complaint in Case No. 53-10705(CA) and it hereby is, dismissed.

Dated, Washington, D.C.

Francis X. Burkhardt, Assistant Secretary of Labor for Labor-Management Relations

5/ Compare Veterans Administration, Wadsworth, Hospital Center, Los Angeles, California, 4 A/SLMR No. 309, A/SLMR No. 388 (1974). The use of the questionnaire found violative of Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order in that case can be distinguished from the instant survey in that the questionnaire in the Wadsworth case specifically required bargaining unit employees to make a present commitment on a matter affecting employee terms and conditions of employment and upon which a decision had been reached, thus constituting an improper bypass and undermining of the status of the employee's exclusive representative.
