Case No. 22-7903(CA)

AMERICAN FEDERATION OF GOVERNMENT
EMPLOYEES, LOCAL 3615, AFL-CIO

Complainant

This case involved an unfair labor practice complaint filed by the American Federation of Government Employees, Local 3615, AFL-CIO (Complainant) alleging that the Respondent violated Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order by failing to bargain over the impact and implementation of a relocation of certain unit employees.

The Administrative Law Judge found that the Complainant was informed of the proposed relocation at a meeting held between the parties several months prior to its implementation, and that while the Complainant requested bargaining on the impact of the relocation a few days prior to its actual occurrence, this request, coming virtually at the last moment, was not timely made. Based on these findings, the Administrative Law Judge recommended dismissal of the complaint.

The Assistant Secretary adopted the Administrative Law Judge's findings, conclusions and recommendation and ordered that the complaint be dismissed.

DECISION AND ORDER

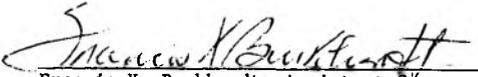

On October 4, 1977, Administrative Law Judge Burton S. Sternburg issued his Recommended Decision and Order in the above-entitled proceeding, finding that the Respondent had not engaged in the unfair labor practices alleged in the complaint and recommending that the complaint be dismissed in its entirety. Thereafter, the Complainant filed exceptions with respect to the Administrative Law Judge's Recommended Decision and Order.

The Assistant Secretary has reviewed the rulings of the Administrative Law Judge made at the hearing and finds that no prejudicial error was committed. The rulings are hereby affirmed. Upon consideration of the Administrative Law Judge's Recommended Decision and Order and the entire record in the subject case, including the exceptions filed by the Complainant, I hereby adopt the Administrative Law Judge's findings, 1/ conclusions and recommendation.

ORDER

IT IS HEREBY ORDERED that the complaint in Case No. 22-7903(CA) be, and it hereby is, dismissed.

Dated, Washington, D.C.
January 6, 1978

Francis X. Burkhardt, Assistant Secretary of
Labor for Labor-Management Relations

1/ In his Recommended Decision and Order, the Administrative Law Judge referred to certain events occurring in 1977 rather than in 1976. This inadvertence is hereby corrected.

RECOMMENDED DECISION AND ORDER

Statement of the Case

Pursuant to a complaint filed on April 12, 1977, under Executive Order 11491, as amended, by Local 3615, American Federation of Government Employees, (hereinafter called the Union or AFGE) against the Bureau of Hearings and Appeals (hereinafter called the Respondent or Activity), a Notice of Hearing on complaint was issued by the Regional Administrator for the Philadelphia, Pennsylvania Region on July 19, 1977.

The complaint alleges in substance that the Respondent violated Sections 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Executive Order by virtue of its actions in relocating a part of the bargaining unit without affording the Union an opportunity to bargain concerning the impact of such relocation on unit personnel.

A hearing was held in the captioned matter on September 15, 1977, in Washington, D.C. All parties were afforded full opportunity to be heard, to examine and cross-examine witnesses and to introduce evidence bearing on the issues involved herein. At the close of the hearing, both parties waived the right to file post-hearing briefs.

Upon the basis of the entire record, including my observation of the witnesses and their demeanor, I make the following findings of fact, conclusions and recommendations.

Findings of Fact

The Union is the exclusive representative of Respondent's Medical Advisory Staff (MAS) which is composed of both professionals and non-professionals. Prior to January 8, 1977, a number of the MAS employees were stationed or located on the sixth floor of a building known as Balston Tower 2. On January 8, 1977, approximately 30 employees of MAS were relocated to the fifth floor of Balston Tower 2. ^{1/}

In late 1976 or early 1977, the Respondent secured additional office space for its operations and proceeded to develop several alternate plans for the expansion and/or relocation of its various components or departments. In late March or early April, 1977, Respondent met with the Union and exhibited a number of charts indicating possible changes in the office locations of Respondent's various components, including MAS.

On September 2, 1977, representatives of Respondent called a meeting which was attended by Union Steward Larkin and Union Vice-President Cuthbertson. During the course of the meeting Respondent's representatives showed the Union representatives, among other things, the layout on the Medical Advisory Staff which indicated that part of ^{1/} It is this January 8, 1977 relocation which is the basis of the instant complaint.

MAS would be transferred from the sixth to the fifth floor. During the course of the meeting, Respondent estimated that the move or transfer would occur in November. When Mr. Cuthbertson inquired as to the possibility of moving MAS to another location rather than the one indicated on the plans, he was informed that the location was final.

During December 1977, various employees of the MAS unit were individually shown the plans of the fifth floor for purposes of allowing them to make individual office selections.

On or about January 6, 1977, about two days before the relocation, various employees approached the Union Steward concerning the upcoming move. In response to their inquiries the Union contacted Respondent for purposes of "meeting and conferring" about the move. Management, after checking with Mr. Toner, Chief, Labor Management Relations Section, refused to meet with the Union. According to Mr. Toner, prior to authorizing the refusal to meet with the Union, he checked out the situation and ascertained that the Union had been informed of the relocation in September. In view of this and since there were only two days remaining before the move he concluded that Respondent was not obligated to bargain at that time. Further according to Mr. Toner, whose testimony stands uncontradicted, the Union never, in response to his inquiry, stated specifically what they wanted to bargain over, other than stating "impact."

According to the record, during the period September 1976 when the plans for the relocation were shown to the Union representatives and January 6, 1977, two days prior to the planned move, the Union made no request whatsoever to bargain about any aspect of the MAS relocation.

Discussion and Conclusions

The decision to transfer part of the MAS unit from the sixth to the fifth floor of the Balston Tower building falls within the exclusionary language contained in Sections 11(b) and (12)(b) of the Executive Order. 2/ Accordingly,

2/ Social Security Administration, Bureau of Hearings and Appeals, A/SLMR No. 828; U.S. Department of Transportation, Federal Highway Administration, Vancouver, Washington, A/SLMR 612; Veterans Administration, Wadsworth Hospital Center, Los Angeles, California; A/SLMR 388.

I find that Respondent was not obligated to bargain with the Union with respect to its initial decision to relocate part of the MAS.

I further find that the Respondent fulfilled its obligation to give the Union ample prior notification of its decision to relocate MAS so that the Union could be afforded the opportunity to timely request bargaining, to the extent consonant with law and regulations, as to the procedures management intended to observe in effectuating its decision to relocate and as to the impact of such decision on those employees adversely affected. In this latter respect, I note that Respondent informed the Union of the contemplated action in September 1976, some five months prior to the actual relocation. Despite such advance notice and the fact that unit employees were approached in December to make office selections from the blueprints of the fifth floor, no request for bargaining over impact occurred until two days before the move was scheduled to begin. In these circumstances, I find that the Union's request was not timely made and that the Respondent did not violate Sections 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Executive Order when it refused on or about January 6, 1977, to bargain over the impact of the relocation scheduled for two days later. 3/

Recommendation

In view of the above findings and conclusions, it is hereby recommended to the Assistant Secretary that the complaint be dismissed in its entirety.

CHAPTER NO. 36, NATIONAL

Complainant

DECISION AND ORDER

This case involved an unfair labor practice complaint filed by Chapter No. 36 of the National Treasury Employees Union (NTEU) and the NTEU alleging that the Respondent violated Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order by issuing a memorandum which unilaterally altered a past practice of granting administrative time to unit employees for the purpose of preparing rebuttals to performance evaluations and by communicating this policy directly to unit employees by way of the memorandum, thereby bypassing the exclusive representative. The Respondent contended that the memorandum did not reflect a change in past practice and that it was standard operating procedure to communicate with employees by way of written memoranda.

On September 2, 1977, Administrative Law Judge John W. Earman issued his Report and Recommendation in the above-entitled proceeding, finding that the Respondent had not engaged in the unfair labor practices alleged in the complaint and recommending that the complaint be dismissed in its entirety. No exceptions were filed to the Administrative Law Judge's Report and Recommendation.

The Administrative Law Judge recommended dismissal of the complaint. In this regard, he found that the negotiated agreement which permitted employees to prepare rebuttals was silent as to the method of reporting time for such preparation. He further found there existed a past practice of charging leave for preparation time amounting to more than one hour and that, therefore, the memorandum did not reflect a change in the existing practice. The Administrative Law Judge also determined that the memorandum was not an improper attempt to deal directly with unit employees.

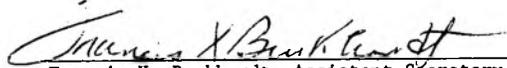

The Assistant Secretary has reviewed the rulings of the Administrative Law Judge made at the hearing and finds that no prejudicial error was committed. The rulings are hereby affirmed. Upon consideration of the Administrative Law Judge's Report and Recommendation and the entire record in the subject case, and noting particularly the absence of exceptions, I hereby adopt the Administrative Law Judge's findings, conclusions and recommendation.

The Assistant Secretary, noting particularly the absence of exceptions, adopted the findings, conclusions and recommendation of the Administrative Law Judge, and ordered that the complaint be dismissed in its entirety.

ORDER

IT IS HEREBY ORDERED that the complaint in Case No. 60-4945(CA) be, and it hereby is, dismissed.

Dated, Washington, D.C.

Francis X. Burkhardt, Assistant Secretary of
Labor for Labor-Management Relations

Motion to Dismiss

The Respondent moved that the complaint be dismissed since the Complainant is not the exclusive representative under the Multi-District Agreement. It was argued that Complainant is Chapter 36 of the NTEU, which is only one half of the exclusive representative, the NTEU Joint Council, composed of Chapters 14 and 36. The motion was denied with the parties given leave to brief the point, if they so desired. Respondent chose not to question the ruling on the motion.

Findings and Conclusions

The Article 9 of the Multi-District Agreement provides that evaluations made by the employee's immediate supervisor be furnished to the employee and discussed with him at least two workdays prior to its filing. The employee may make written rebuttal concerning any disagreement with the evaluation and these comments become a part of the evaluation. The MDA is silent as to the method of accounting for time used in writing a rebuttal. The evidence indicates that much confusion as to policy existed in other districts in mid and late 1975 and the arbitration of a grievance in Los Angeles on March 22, 1977 found that the right to make written rebuttals during duty time does not exist in the MDA. What then of the practice in the St. Louis District?

The Regional Personnel Officer on January 8, 1975 advised the St. Louis District that an employee was not entitled to administrative leave to rebut an unfavorable performance appraisal. This was noted as recending an interpretation sent on August 1, 1974 wherein it was stated that official time would be allowed.

On July 7, 1976 the Acting District Director issued a memo to the Division Chiefs in which he said it has been, and will continue to be, the District policy that the contract does not allow work or administrative time for rebuttals, but where the time would be minimal there was no need to charge annual leave. The managers were told to use their judgment in handling such cases. This memorandum was issued pursuant to a request by the group manager for Group 222, Kenneth R. Landers. Mr. Landers noticed that in his report for June 1976 agent Robert L. Baker charged preparing rebuttals to administrative leave. Mr. Landers, in turn, communicated the Director's information to Mr. Baker and the other employees in Group 222 by the memorandum of July 14, 1976 which gave rise to the present complaint. The language used by Mr. Landers was almost identical to that used by the Acting District Director, to wit:

"It is the District policy that the contract does not allow work or administrative time for employees to make written comments to evaluations. Where the time involved would be minimal, i.e. measured in minutes, there would be no need to charge leave. If the time is longer, a charge to leave will be made."

After informal settlement failed the complaint was filed alleging that the Landers' memorandum was issued only a few days after Mr. Baker, a shop steward, had requested and been granted 14 hours of administrative time under Article 9(1)(c) of the MDA. The complaint is in error as to the events that took place.

Mr. Baker, who has had an unusually large number of evaluations in his personnel file, listed on the back of his time sheet 4 hours administrative time for preparing responses on June 23, 1976 and 6 hours preparing reply to case file review on June 7, 1976. He did not obtain prior approval for using administrative time in that manner and it was not discovered by Mr. Landers until after July 1. Mr. Baker was not required to take annual leave for the time in question because he was at the time involved in a grievance procedure over an in-grade promotion.

Records were available only back to January 1976. They show that between January and June 1976 Mr. Baker made 7 rebuttals of which only one, in addition to the two above, was made on working time. On February 4, 1977 Mr. Baker listed 4 hours indirect time for preparing a rough draft to a work survey and 3 hours on February 5 for typing it. Mr. Landers was not aware of this use of time until 2 weeks before the hearing because he did not monitor indirect time as closely as administrative time since indirect time is usually charged back to the case.

After testifying that he took administrative time to prepare the rebuttals, Mr. Baker said that on 2 occasions he listed the time as union work. His testimony is also in question because the records show that he took 4 hours annual leave to prepare a rebuttal on June 29, 1976. This was in the period between his claim of administrative time and the issuance of the memorandum in question on July 14 and shows that he did not believe it to be the District's policy to allow administrative time for rebuttals.

Other than Mr. Baker's case the evidence is sparse as to the use of administrative time for rebuttals. Mr. Klaassen, the Chairman of the Joint Council has had little or no personal need for such time use and his knowledge of such use by other District employees is limited to one employee involved in an adverse action.

On the basis of the record it is found that the Article 9 of the Multi-District Agreement between the Internal Revenue Service and the National Treasury Employees Union provides that evaluations of performance may be commented on in writing by the employee, but no provision is made for the employee to use work time for this purpose. It is further found that in the St. Louis District it has been the policy and practice to charge leave whenever the comments cannot be made in an hour or less, although a manager is expected to use his judgment in each case. The memoranda issued by the District and by Mr. Landers did not constitute a change in employee working conditions. Therefore, there was no duty to meet and confer with the Complainant regarding the policy or its impact. Department of the Navy, Mare Island Naval Shipyard, Vallejo, California, A/SLMR No. 736 (1976).

Complainant urges that even if an improper change of policy or practice is not found, the Landers' memorandum was a communication in violation of the Executive Order, citing Department of the Navy, Naval Air Station, Fallon, Nevada, FLRC No. 74A-80. The Federal Labor Relations Council held in that case that in determining whether a specific communication is violative of the Order, that communication must be judged independently and a determination made as to whether it constitutes an attempt to deal or negotiate directly with employees, or to threaten or promise benefits to the employees. The Landers' memorandum was certainly not an attempt to deal or negotiate directly with employees and it could not be interpreted as a threat or promise of a benefit. It was simply a reaffirmation of existing District policy and was not an improper communication from management to employees.

RECOMMENDATION

Based upon the foregoing findings and conclusions it is recommended to the Assistant Secretary that the complaint against Respondents be dismissed in its entirety.

This case involved an unfair labor practice complaint filed by the National Treasury Employees Union and National Treasury Employees Union, Chapter 10 (Complainant) alleging that the Respondent violated Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order by implementing a unilateral change in working hours without having negotiated the change with the Complainant.

The Administrative Law Judge found that the Respondent had met its obligation to negotiate over the impact and implementation of its decision to change working hours, but that it violated Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order by failing to meet and confer with the Complainant over the decision. In reaching this conclusion, he noted that where, as here, a change in working hours is not integrally related to and determinative of the agency staffing pattern, it is a negotiable item under Section 11(a) of the Order. He further found that an agreement between the parties did not constitute a waiver of the Complainant's right to negotiate changes in working hours.

The Assistant Secretary adopted the findings, conclusions and recommendations of the Administrative Law Judge and ordered the Respondent to cease and desist from the conduct found violative of the Order and to take certain affirmative actions.

DECISION AND ORDER

On August 17, 1977, Administrative Law Judge William Naimark issued his Recommended Decision and Order in the above-entitled proceeding, finding that the Respondent had engaged in certain unfair labor practices and recommending that it cease and desist therefrom and take certain affirmative actions as set forth in the attached Administrative Law Judge's Recommended Decision and Order. Thereafter, the Respondent filed exceptions with respect to the Administrative Law Judge's Recommended Decision and Order.

The Assistant Secretary has reviewed the rulings of the Administrative Law Judge made at the hearing and finds that no prejudicial error was committed. The rulings are hereby affirmed. Upon consideration of the Administrative Law Judge's Recommended Decision and Order and the entire record in the subject case, including the exceptions filed by the Respondent,

I hereby adopt the Administrative Law Judge's findings, conclusions and recommendations. 1/

ORDER

Pursuant to Section 6(b) of Executive Order 11491, as amended, and Section 203.26(b) of the Regulations, the Assistant Secretary of Labor for Labor-Management Relations hereby orders that the Department of the Treasury, Internal Revenue Service, Chicago District Office, Chicago, Illinois, shall:

1. Cease and desist from:

(a) Instituting a change in working hours of employees represented exclusively by the National Treasury Employees Union, Chapter 10, without notifying the National Treasury Employees Union, Chapter 10, and affording such representative the opportunity to meet and confer, to the extent consonant with law and regulations, on the decision to effectuate such a change.

(b) In any like or related manner, interfering with, restraining, or coercing employees in the exercise of their rights assured by Executive Order 11491, as amended.

2. Take the following affirmative actions in order to effectuate the purposes and policies of Executive Order 11491, as amended:

(a) Rescind the memoranda of July 8, 10, and 11, 1975, pertaining to changes in working hours and restore the work hours schedule in effect prior to July 29, 1975, in the Audit Division.

1/ In its exceptions, the Respondent argued that the allegation with respect to the refusal to negotiate over the decision to change working hours was not properly before the Administrative Law Judge because it was not contained in the pre-complaint charge as required by Section 203.2(a) of the Assistant Secretary's Regulations. It appears that this contention by the Respondent was made for the first time at the hearing as the evidence does not establish that the issue was specifically raised prior thereto, either before the Area Administrator or the Regional Administrator. It has been held previously that it would not effectuate the purposes of the Order to permit an issue to be raised for the first time at a hearing or in a post-hearing brief, where a party has had adequate opportunity to raise such matter prior to the hearing. Veterans Administration Hospital, Charleston, South Carolina, 1 A/SLMR 400, 402, A/SLMR No. 87 (1971). Moreover, it appears that the matter was fully litigated by the Respondent at the hearing. Under these circumstances, I conclude that there is no procedural defect which would warrant dismissal of that portion of the complaint alleging an improper failure to negotiate by the Respondent over its decision to change working hours.

(b) Notify the National Treasury Employees Union, Chapter 10, of any intended change in the work hours schedule of unit employees, and, upon request, meet and confer, to the extent consonant with law and regulations, on the decision to effectuate such a change.

(c) Post at its facility at the Internal Revenue Service, Chicago District, copies of the attached notice marked "Appendix" on forms to be furnished by the Assistant Secretary of Labor for Labor-Management Relations. Upon receipt of such forms, they shall be signed by the District Director and shall be posted and maintained by him for 60 consecutive days thereafter, in conspicuous places, including all bulletin boards and other places where notices to employees are customarily posted. The District Director shall take reasonable steps to insure that such notices are not altered, defaced, or covered by any other material.

(d) Pursuant to Section 203.27 of the Regulations, notify the Assistant Secretary, in writing, within 30 days from the date of this order as to what steps have been taken to comply herewith.

RECOMMENDED DECISION AND ORDER

Statement of the Case

Pursuant to a Notice of Hearing on Complaint issued on December 14, 1976 by the Regional Administrator for Labor-Management Services Administration, Chicago Region, a hearing was held in the above-entitled case on February 15, 1977 at Chicago, Illinois.

This proceeding was initiated under Executive Order 11491, as amended, (herein called the Order), by the filing of a complaint by National Treasury Employees Union and its Chapter 10 (herein called Complainant) against Department of the Treasury, Internal Revenue Service, Chicago District, Chicago, Illinois (herein called Respondent). The complaint, which was filed on April 8, 1976, alleged that Respondent violated Sections 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order by implementing a unilateral change in working hours on July 29, 1975 without having negotiated the change with Complainant.

Respondent filed a response to the complaint on April 4, 1976 wherein it alleged: (1) The complaint was not timely filed within the 9 month period as required under 203.2(b)(3) of the Regulations; (2) the complaint differs from the charge in respect to alleged unfair labor practices and does not, comply with 203.2(a) of the Regulations; (3) no obligation is imposed upon Respondent under the Order to bargain as to hours of employment; (4) the union waived its right, under Article 22, Section 3 of the contract, to insist upon negotiations over changes in work hours; Respondent has bargained as to impact and implementation of the change, and thus fulfilled its obligation in that regard. 1/

All parties were represented at the hearing, were afforded full opportunity to be heard, to adduce evidence, and to examine as well as cross-examine witnesses. Thereafter the parties filed briefs which have been duly considered.

Upon the entire record herein, from my observation of the witnesses and their demeanor, and from all of the testimony and evidence adduced at the hearing, I make the following findings of fact, conclusions and recommendations:

1/ Since the change in work hours was effected on July 29, 1975, I deem the unfair labor practice as occurring on that date. Hence, I am satisfied that the complaint, which was filed on April 8, 1976, was timely under 203.2(b)(6) of the Regulations. Moreover, the variance in dates between the charge and complaint is not viewed as fatal, inasmuch as the recitation of dates is sufficient to apprise Respondent of the claim alleged and the correct date of the unilateral change appears in the complaint. The motions to dismiss on the foregoing procedural grounds is denied.

Findings of Fact

1. On behalf of various district offices, including Chapter 10 at Chicago, Illinois, the National Treasury Employees Union executed a collective bargaining agreement with the Internal Revenue Service on May 3, 1974. The said agreement, which was effective by its terms on August 3, 1974 for two years, contained an automatic renewal clause and covered all professional and non-professional employees 2/ as described therein.

2. The said agreement provided in Article 22, "Hours of Work", as follows:

Section 1.

The normal scheduled work week will consist of five (5) consecutive eight (8) hour days, Monday through Friday.

Section 2.

The Employer may establish special hours of duty not to exceed eight (8) hours a day or forty (40) hours a week to enable employees to take educational courses at their expense.

Section 3.

Prior to implementing a general change in any scheduled work week, the Employer agrees to notify the Union, as far in advance as possible.

3. At all times material herein Respondent and Complainant Chapter 10 held bi-weekly labor management relations (LMR) meetings to discuss types of material interest to both parties. John E. Swan, personnel officer who handled labor relations for management, testified that discussions thereat would not result in changes in the parties' contract, but would affect behavior; that, at least until October, 1975, Respondent differentiated between negotiations, which required ground rules and could lead to contract modifications, from discussions which dealt with broad generalities and amounted to "encouraged participation" at meetings; that, however, if union proposals were made at such meetings, management would consider same, but if the union demanded further discussion, it would require going into negotiations.

4. At an LMR meeting held on October 18, 1974, which was attended by various representatives of the Employer and the union, management advised the union officials that it planned to change the hours of work for the audit division of the district office. The employees in this division, revenue agents and clerks, worked on two shifts: 8:00 A.M. 4:30 P.M. and 8:15 A.M. - 4:45 P.M. Respondent notified the Union at this meeting it intended to have standard work hours - 8:00 A.M. to 4:30 P.M. - for everyone except the taxpayer service division. Swan explained to Complainant's representative that management wanted to avoid the confusion which resulted where employees who worked together separated and departed at different times, and that the employer felt it was easier to contact employees when they started the work day together. He also stated that the change in work hours was not negotiable; that under Article 22, Section 3 of the collective bargaining agreement the union waived its right to insist upon negotiation thereof.

Union representative Michael L. Peacher informed Swan at the October 18 meeting that the changes were negotiable as to substance, impact and implementation, and that the union wanted to negotiate the contemplated change of hours. He also requested that employees be permitted to work at their own starting time between 8:00 A.M. - 8:30 A.M. Peacher called Swan's attention to the fact that if the change were effected elevators would be crowded, problems re train schedules could arise, some employees might have difficulties arranging for babysitters, and certain employees might be compelled to quit their jobs.

5. The President of NTEU Chapter 10, Edward E. McCarthy, wrote a letter to Swan, dated October 19, 1974, wherein the union requested that Respondent negotiate the proposed changes in working hours. Further, he reiterated the union's position that the decision to alter the hours, as well as impact and implementation were negotiable, and McCarthy renewed the proposal that starting time be flexible between 8:00 A.M. and 8:30 A.M. and allow employees to decide when to report during that time frame.

6. By letter dated November 6, 1974 Swan replied to McCarthy and repeated its intention re changing to a standard starting time for employees in the headquarters office. He mentioned again the matter was not negotiable and was waived

7. In a letter addressed to Swan dated November 23, 1974 Peacher asked whether management refused to negotiate on impact and implementation of the hourly change because it felt the union waived its right to negotiate thereon. If not, wrote Peacher, the union wished to begin negotiation on November 29, 1974.

8. Swan replied to Peacher's letter on December 4, 1974, stating that management was only obliged under the contract to notify the union of hourly changes, and that such language is a waiver of NTEU's rights to negotiation thereon; that under Section 12 of the Order and FPM Supplement 990-2 it was precluded from negotiating this specific matter; and that the new hours would be effective on January 6, 1975.

9. An ad hoc meeting between Complainant and Respondent was held on December 20, 1974. Management advised the union the implementation date of January 6, 1975 for the change in hours was cancelled; that a study is being conducted of the elevator load capacity to determine the feasibility of the standard hours; that the employer will be looking to NTEU for their input and recommendations; and that flex time is not a District policy. Swan reaffirmed Respondent's position that the matter was not negotiable.

10. Another such ad hoc management-labor meeting was held on April 21, 1975 whereat the union was informed that under Article 22, Section 3 the Respondent was "obligated to discuss with the union prior to making any changes in the work week." Swan told the union representative the elevator survey showed there were no problems handling the load at 8:00 and 4:30.

11. Swan wrote to McCarthy again on July 2, 1975 repeating the intention to change the hours to standard 8:00 A.M. - 4:30 P.M., and asked the union for any feedback re problems it might cause employees. He remarked that the inconveniences referred to by the union were normal; that the change would occur on July 21.

12. A memo from Respondent's headquarter office to employees, dated July 8, 1975, informed them that a study had been completed of the elevator system; that effective July 29, 1975 all employees in headquarters office would observe the new hours of 8:00 A.M. - 4:30 P.M., except for the Taxpayer Service Division. 3/

3/ The Union was also notified of the new date by a letter dated July 10, 1975 and a DIR-CHI Memorandum 19-34 dated July 11, 1975.

13. McCarthy wrote Swan on July 15, 1975, reiterating its position that the changes are negotiable, and renewed its demand to negotiate the impact and implementation of the proposed change in working hours.

14. Swan replied to McCarthy by letter dated July 24, 1975 restating its position on waiver, and the employer's officer commented that management is precluded from negotiating this matter under Section 12 of the Order.

15. During his discussions with the union official Swan stated that any particular problems of an employee could be discussed through a group manager or branch chief; that if anyone had a particular problem, some arrangements could be made to the local group level; that it was not negotiable and management was not prepared to discuss flex time; but that, however, the union was requested to submit any specific data concerning impact upon employees which management would consider.

Conclusions

In denying that it has committed any unfair labor practice herein, Respondent makes three principal contentions: (1) the change in working hours is a non-negotiable matter under the Order, and complainant failed, in any event, to establish a refusal to meet and confer over the change; (2) any right vesting in the union to impose a bargaining obligation upon management was waived under Article 22, Section 3 of the contract herein 4/; (3) management fulfilled its obligation, in any event, to bargain over the impact and implementation of its decision to change the hours of employment.

(1) During the LMR meetings between Respondent and Complainant, which occurred during the period from October 1974 to July 1975, management insisted the change in starting and quitting times was excepted under the Order as a subject for bargaining. Moreover, in the exchange of correspondence between Swan and the union officials, the employer reiterated its position in that respect. Thus, the change in working hours for the audit division from both 8:00 A.M. - 4:30 P.M. and 8:15 A.M. - 4:45 P.M. to a standard 8:00 A.M. - 4:30 P.M. for all employees in said division was effected at a time when management adhered to said contention.

4/ In its brief Respondent asserts, further, that the dispute involves different contract interpretations, and therefore no unfair labor practice can be found in the absence of a flagrant breach of contract. This argument is rejected. An interpretation of Article 22 may be required to resolve the issue of waiver, but that requirement, in itself, does not militate against finding a violation of the Order.

Despite Respondent's insistence that a change in hours is not bargainable under the Order, I conclude that past decisions in the public sector establish this is a subject for bargaining and not excepted under Section 11(b) of the Order. In its discussion of this issue the Federal Labor Relations Council declared that a proposal relating to the basic workweek and hours of duty is not so excepted unless it is integrally related to and determinative of the staffing pattern of the agency, i.e., the numbers, types, and grades of positions of employees. See Office of the Administrator, Animal and Plant Health Inspection Service, U.S. Department of Agriculture, FLRC No. 73A-36. Subsequently the Assistant Secretary in Southeast Exchange Region of the Army and Air Force Exchange Service, Rosewood Warehouse, Columbia, S.C. A/SLMR No. 656, held that a change in work-hours from the scheduled 7:45 A.M. - 4:30 P.M. to 7:15 A.M. - 4:00 P.M. was not integrally related to and determinative of staffing pattern, and that the said change was a negotiable item within the meaning of Section 11(a) of the Order. His decision was sustained by the Federal Labor Relations Council in FLRC 76A-85 (June 2, 1977). The case at bar is thus one which, in respect to the obligation to bargain, over starting and quitting times, is controlled by the Rosewood case, supra. Accordingly, I find that Respondent was obliged to bargain over the change in such working hours. 5/

Moreover, I do not agree that the record establishes a failure on Complainant's part to prove a refusal to bargain over the decision to change the hours. The various letters to Swan, as well as the meetings between the parties, supports a continual demand by the union to negotiate the change. Complainant also proposed a flex time as part of its request, and insisted that the subject was a bargainable one. A review of the discussions and correspondence convinces me that, although time lapses occurred during communications between the parties, the union never abandoned its demand to bargain over the decision by Respondent to change to a standard 8:00 A.M. - 4:30 P.M. workday at the headquarters division. 6/

5/ See also Department of the Treasury, IRS Southwest Region, Dallas, Texas, A/SLMR No. 858.

6/ Complainant's demands to negotiate impact and implementation in its letter of July 15, 1975 to Swan, does not warrant the inference that the union yielded its claim that the decision itself was bargainable.

In respect to the decision by management to adopt uniform hours, I am also persuaded that this was a unilateral one and that Respondent refused to meet and confer with the union thereon. While it is true that discussions ensued between the parties re the effect of such a change upon employees and their attendant problems, the employer never bargained about the decision itself to alter the working hours. Apart from insisting that it was non-negotiable and establishing various dates for its implementation, Respondent categorically refused to consider or discuss flex time which had been proposed by Complainant. Although it stated that input from the union would be considered in making a decision to change the hours, management's continual declaration that it was precluded from negotiating the subject, must necessarily make any input from Complainant a patently futile gesture. Good faith bargaining can scarcely be conducted within the framework of a stated position which asserts that an employer is not obliged to negotiate. No other proposals were advanced by the employer, and I am convinced that Respondent did not fulfill its obligation to bargain over the decision to change the working hours to a standard 8:00 A.M. - 4:30 P.M. Accordingly, I find and conclude that by such conduct it has violated Sections 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order. 7/

(2) Respondent's contention that Complainant waived its right to negotiate the changes, as a result of Article 22, Section 3 in the contract, is also not persuasive. That provision merely requires that notification be given by the employer to the union when a change in the workweek is implemented. There is no language present in that section which expressly or impliedly reserves to management the sole right to effect changes in working conditions which are otherwise bargainable under the Order. I do not construe the obligation to notify the union of an impending change in the workweek as vesting such a right in the employer. Moreover, it has been pointedly held by the Assistant Secretary in NASA, Kennedy Space Center, Florida, A/SLMR No. 223 that a waiver, under the Order, must be clear and unmistakable. Any intention to waive the right to bargain over a change in hours would require language much more direct and specific than merely obligating an employer to notify a union when a change is to be implemented. Article 22, Section 3 scarcely fulfills that requirement, and does not,

7/ Assuming arguendo, that Respondent provided Complainant with an opportunity to meet and confer re the procedures and impact of its decision, it would not exculpate Respondent from a violation based on its refusal to negotiate the decision to change the hours. See Rosewood case, supra, and Naval Air Rework Facility, Pensacola, Florida, A/SLMR No. 608.

in my opinion, spell out a clear and unmistakable intention to waive the union's rights to bargain over this subject matter. IRS, Southwest Region, supra.

(3) Complainant maintains that Respondent also violated the Order by not bargaining over the impact and procedures involved in the decision to adopt uniform hours for the audit division. It insists there was "no give and take" during the meetings held in 1974 and 1975; that the discussions were limited to "information input" with no good faith negotiations re the effect upon employees as a result of the change.

Although, it is true, that management did unilaterally institute the change in hours, I am not convinced that they did not meet and confer as to the impact and implementation thereof. Thus, Complainant union was afforded ample opportunity to present the employer with particulars concerning the problems relating to babysitters, transportation, and the like which were raised by the union. Not only does the record fail to demonstrate that Respondent would not discuss these matters, but, contrariwise, it reflects continued requests by the employer that the bargaining agent submit specific information bearing on these potential problems. Moreover, management made it clear to the union that if there were adverse effects upon employees, such data would be considered before making a final determination. It was, in my opinion, incumbent upon the Complainant to furnish such information to Respondent before changing the latter with a refusal to bargain thereon. See Rosewood case, supra.

Record facts do not disclose an adamant position by the employer in refusing to confer as to impact and implementation of the change in hours. In truth, it indicated to the union at the LMR meetings that some accommodations could be made for those employees who were seriously inconvenienced by the change. Further, Respondent advised Complainant that particular problems could be resolved, or at least handled, by a group manager or branch chief. I do not agree with Complainant that the employer stood ready to consider only problems which it determined were likely to result from the change. There is no evidence to show that other surveys, in addition to the one involving the elevators, would not have been undertaken if sufficient basis were shown to exist. Further, I do not conclude that the discussions on the potential difficulties, as raised by Complainant, were not in good faith despite the unilateral decision to implement the change itself. The record, as a whole, convinces me that

Respondent was willing to meet and confer with respect to any adverse effects resulting from the uniform hours. Accordingly, I conclude Respondent has not refused to bargain over the impact and procedures involved as a result of its discussions, and has not violated Sections 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order in that regard. 8/

Recommendation

Having found that Respondent has engaged in conduct prohibited by Sections 19(a)(1) and (6) of Executive Order 11491, as amended, I recommend that the Assistant Secretary adopt the order hereinafter set forth which is designed to effectuate the policies of the Order.

Order

Pursuant to Section 6(b) of Executive Order 11491, as amended, and Section 203.25(b) of the Regulation, the Assistant Secretary of Labor for Labor-Management Relations hereby orders that the Department of the Treasury, Internal Revenue Service, Chicago District Office, Chicago, Illinois, shall:

1. Cease and desist from:

(a) Instituting a change in work-hours of employees represented exclusively by National Treasury Employees Union, Chapter 10, without notifying National Treasury Employees Union, Chapter 10 and affording such representation the opportunity to meet and confer on the decision to effectuate such change.

(b) In any like or related manner, interfering with, restraining, or coercing employees in the exercise of their rights assured by Executive Order 11491, as amended.

2. Take the following affirmative actions in order to effectuate the purposes and policies of Executive Order 11491, as amended:

(a) Rescind the memoranda of July 8, 10, and 11, 1975 pertaining to changes in working hours and restore the work-hours schedule in effect prior to July 29, 1975 in the audit division.

8/ Notwithstanding my conclusion in this respect, the Respondent would, in the future, still be obligated to bargain over the procedures and impact of any change in hours which may result after having met and conferred with Complainant as required and recommended herein.

(b) Notify the National Treasury Employees Union, Chapter 10 of any intended change in the work-hours schedule of unit employees, and, upon request, meet and confer in good faith, to the extent consonant with law and regulations, on the decision to effectuate such a change.

(c) Post at its facility at the Internal Revenue Service, Chicago District, 230 South Dearborn Street, Chicago, Illinois, copies of the attached notice marked "Appendix" on forms to be furnished by the Assistant Secretary of Labor for Labor-Management Relations. Upon receipt of such forms, they shall be signed by the District Director and shall be posted and maintained by him for 60 consecutive days thereafter, in conspicuous places, including all bulletin boards and other places where notices to employees are customarily posted. The District Director shall take reasonable steps to insure that such notices are not altered, defaced or covered by any other material.

(d) Pursuant to Section 203.26 of the Regulations, notify the Assistant Secretary of Labor, in writing, within 30 days from the date of this Order as to what steps have been taken to comply therewith.

DEPARTMENT OF HEALTH, EDUCATION AND WELFARE,
SOCIAL SECURITY ADMINISTRATION,
BUREAU OF FIELD OPERATIONS,
REGION V-A, CHICAGO, ILLINOIS
A/SLMR No. 963

This case involves an unfair labor practice complaint filed by Local 1395, American Federation of Government Employees, AFL-CIO (AFGE) alleging essentially that the Respondent violated Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order by refusing to negotiate with respect to a specific personnel policy covering the AFGE's Cook County District Office unit, one of the Social Security Administration (SSA) units in Illinois represented exclusively by the AFGE. The Respondent contended that it was not obligated to negotiate over such matters because of a pending unit consolidation (UC) petition which included the Cook County unit. Additionally, the Respondent contended that the issue presented in the instant proceeding was made res judicata by virtue of the Assistant Secretary's Decision and Order in Department of Health, Education and Welfare, Social Security Administration, Bureau of Field Operations, Region V-A, Chicago, Illinois, A/SLMR No. 832 (1977).

In agreement with the Administrative Law Judge, the Assistant Secretary concluded that the Respondent's conduct herein was violative of Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order. He found that the issues involved in A/SLMR No. 832 (1977) and the instant proceeding were distinguishable and warranted separate and distinct findings and remedial orders.

Accordingly, the Assistant Secretary, issued an appropriate remedial order in the instant proceeding.

DECISION AND ORDER

On August 29, 1977, Administrative Law Judge Milton Kramer issued his Recommended Decision and Order in the above-entitled proceeding, finding that the Respondent had engaged in the unfair labor practices alleged in the complaint and recommending that it cease and desist therefrom and take certain affirmative action as set forth in the attached Administrative Law Judge's Recommended Decision and Order. Thereafter, the Respondent and the Complainant filed exceptions and supporting briefs with respect to the Administrative Law Judge's Recommended Decision and Order.

The Assistant Secretary has reviewed the rulings of the Administrative Law Judge made at the hearing and finds that no prejudicial error was committed. The rulings are hereby affirmed. Upon consideration of the Administrative Law Judge's Recommended Decision and Order and the entire record in the subject case, including the exceptions and supporting briefs filed by the parties, I hereby adopt the Administrative Law Judge's findings, conclusions and recommendation, to the extent indicated herein.

In agreement with the Administrative Law Judge, I find that the decision in Department of Health, Education and Welfare, Social Security Administration, Bureau of Field Operations, Region V-A, Chicago, Illinois,

A/SLMR No. 832 (1977) 1/ is not res iudicata with respect to the issue presented in the instant proceeding. Thus, in A/SLMR No. 832 the issue presented concerned the general obligation of the Respondent to meet and confer, and enter into, a negotiated agreement during the pendency of a unit consolidation (UC) petition. In the instant proceeding, the matter at issue concerns the failure of the Respondent to negotiate with respect to a change in a current personnel policy of the Respondent concerning the granting of annual leave during the pendency of a UC petition. Under these circumstances, I find that the issues involved in the two proceedings, and the particular rights which flow from findings of violation in both instances, are sufficiently different to warrant separate and distinct findings and remedial orders. Accordingly, I shall issue a remedial order to remedy the violation found herein.

ORDER

Pursuant to Section 6(b) of Executive Order 11491, as amended, and Section 203.26(b) of the Rules and Regulations, the Assistant Secretary of Labor for Labor-Management Relations hereby orders that the Department of Health, Education and Welfare, Social Security Administration, Bureau of Field Operations, Region V-A, Chicago, Illinois, shall:

1. Cease and desist from:

(a) Refusing to negotiate with representatives of Local 1395, American Federation of Government Employees, AFL-CIO, with respect to specific personnel policies within the ambit of Section 11(a) of the Order for the unit of Social Security Administration District Office employees in Cook County, Illinois, during the pendency of a petition to consolidate exclusively recognized units which includes said unit.

(b) In any like or related manner, interfering with, restraining, or coercing employees in the exercise of their rights assured by Executive Order 11491, as amended.

2. Take the following affirmative actions in order to effectuate the purposes and policies of Executive Order 11491, as amended:

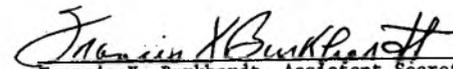

(a) Upon request, meet and confer with Local 1395, American Federation of Government Employees, AFL-CIO, with respect to specific personnel policies within the ambit of Section 11(a) of the Order for the unit of Social Security Administration District Office employees in Cook County, Illinois, during the pendency of a petition to consolidate exclusively recognized units which includes said unit.

1/ It was noted that since issuance of the Administrative Law Judge's Recommended Decision and Order in this case, the Federal Labor Relations Council has denied the Respondent's petition for review and stay with respect to A/SLMR No. 832. See FLRC No. 77A-62.

(b) Post at all of the facilities within the unit of the Social Security Administration District Office employees in Cook County, Illinois, represented exclusively by Local 1395, American Federation of Government Employees, AFL-CIO, copies of the attached notice marked "Appendix" on forms to be furnished by the Assistant Secretary of Labor for Labor-Management Relations. Upon receipt of such forms, they shall be signed by the Regional Representative, or other appropriate official in charge of the Bureau of Field Operations, Region V-A office, and they shall be posted and maintained by him for 60 consecutive days thereafter, in conspicuous places, including all bulletin boards and other places where notices to employees are customarily posted. The Regional Representative, or other appropriate official in charge of the Bureau of Field Operations, Region V-A office, shall take reasonable steps to insure that such notices are not altered, defaced, or covered by any other material.

(c) Pursuant to Section 203.27 of the Regulations, notify the Assistant Secretary, in writing, within 30 days from the date of this order to what steps have been taken to comply herewith.

RECOMMENDED DECISION AND ORDER

This case is governed by the decision of the Assistant Secretary in A/SLMR No. 832, involving the same parties, decided April 27, 1977, adopting in all material respects on the merits the recommended decision of the Administrative Law Judge in Case No. 50-13144(CA). The material facts in that case are set forth below.

The Complainant has been the recognized exclusive representative of a defined unit of Respondent's employees in Cook County, Illinois (basically Chicago) since December 30, 1969. On September 9, 1971 it was certified as the exclusive representative of a unit of Respondent's employees in Champaign, Illinois, about 125 miles south of Chicago. On August 29, 1975 the Complainant filed a petition to consolidate those units. That petition is still pending.

On February 4, 1976 the Complainant proposed that the parties negotiate ground rules for a comprehensive agreement for the Cook County unit. The Respondent refused on the ground that it had a good-faith doubt of the propriety of negotiating an agreement during the pendency of the consolidation petition.

A complaint was filed alleging a violation of Sections 19(a)(1) and (6) of Executive Order 11491 as amended and a hearing held. In the course of that proceeding the Respondent represented to the Administrative Law Judge that it had a good-faith doubt that it would be proper to negotiate while the consolidation petition was pending, that it would comply with the Assistant Secretary's decision on what its obligations were as soon as he made it, and for that reason, and others, if the Assistant Secretary should find a violation no posting should be required. The ALJ recommended on February 10, 1977 that the Assistant Secretary find that the Respondent had violated Sections 19(a)(1) and (6) and that he issue a cease-and-desist order but that no posting be required. On April 27, 1977 the Assistant Secretary issued his decision agreeing with the ALJ that a violation had occurred, issuing a cease-and-desist order, but fortunately disagreeing that posting be dispensed with and ordered the usual posting.

On June 10, 1977 ^{1/}, pursuant to an extension of time granted by the Federal Labor Relations Council, the Respondent filed with the Council a Petition for Review of the Assistant Secretary's decision of April 27 and a Request for Stay of his order. Under the Council's regulations, such a request accompanying a Petition for Review operates as a temporary stay pending the decision of the Council on the request and is effective retroactively to the date of the Assistant Secretary's decision, ^{2/} and in practice the Council does not act on the Request until it acts on the Petition. The Council has not yet acted on that Petition or Request.

^{2/} 5 C.F.R. § 2411.47(d).

On June 25, 1976 the Respondent refused to negotiate with Complainant on a proposal of the Complainant that it change a particular policy concerning the granting of annual leave. The ground for the refusal was the pending consolidation petition. ^{3/} Again on July 23, 1976 the Respondent refused to negotiate on that subject for the same reason ^{4/} and persists in that position to this day. On April 21, 1977 the Complainant filed a complainant over such refusal alleging it violates Section 19(a)(1), (2), and (6) of Executive Order 11491 as amended. On April 27, 1977 it filed an amended complaint alleging the Respondent's conduct violated Sections 19 (a)(1) and (6).

On May 6, 1977 the Respondent filed a Response to the Complaint. It admitted the essential facts alleged in the complaint. It alleged that it had taken an agency-wide position that it would not negotiate for new benefits during the pendency of a consolidation petition. In effect, it admitted that such position was in violation of the Assistant Secretary's order of April 27, 1977 but justified such violation on the ground that it was "considering a possible appeal and request for stay" with respect to the Assistant Secretary's decision and order in A/SLMR No. 832. It moved that the complaint be dismissed because the issue had already been decided or in the alternative that the Complainant be permitted to amend its complaint in Case No. 50-13155 (already decided in A/SLMR No. 832) to include this additional violation.

On June 17, 1977 the Regional Administrator denied the motion to dismiss and issued a Notice of Hearing to be held in Chicago on July 28, 1977. On July 15, 1977 the Respondent addressed a mailgram to the Chief Administrative Law Judge in which it stated it had appealed the Assistant Secretary's decision in A/SLMR No. 832 to FLRC and had requested a stay. It moved that the complaint therefore be dismissed or the hearing postponed. On July 19, the Chief Judge denied the motion.

At the hearing the Respondent again moved that the complaint be dismissed on the ground that the issue was res judicata by the earlier case! The motion was denied. ^{5/} The Complainant moved for a Request for Appearance of Witnesses. When asked why it had not made its motion in accordance with Section 206. 7(b) of the Regulations, its representative stated that he had just been assigned to present the case. The motion was denied. ^{6/} The Complainant

^{4/} Exh. C 2, p. 5.

^{5/} Tr. 6-8.

^{6/} Tr. 10-14.

introduced evidence. The Respondent did not present any evidence. Both parties made closing arguments. Neither party filed a brief. When asked during its closing argument who could claim he was harmed by the Respondent bargaining with the Complainant during the pendency of the consolidation petition, the Respondent was unable to answer. ^{7/}

This case is on "all fours" with A/SLMR No. 832; only the negotiable subject on which the union wants to negotiate is different. The Social Security Administrative refuses to negotiate with either the Chicago unit or the Champaign unit so long as the consolidation petition is pending. It is the only organization that has ever taken the position that the pendency of a consolidation petition relieves it of the obligation to negotiate with any of the units involved in the petition.

I recommend that the Assistant Secretary summarily issue the same order as was issued in A/SLMR No. 832 except that the posting be ordered for 120 days.

Case No. 22-7623 (AP)

AMERICAN FEDERATION OF GOVERNMENT

Applicant

This case involved an Application for Decision on Grievability or Arbitrability filed by the American Federation of Government Employees, Local 3407, AFL-CIO (AFGE) challenging a determination by the Defense Mapping Agency, Defense Mapping Agency Hydrographic Center (Activity) that a grievance filed by the AFGE was not grievable or arbitrable under the parties' negotiated agreement.

The AFGE contended that the Activity violated certain provisions of the negotiated agreement when it awarded "priority consideration" for first-line supervisory positions to two unit employees. The Activity contended that the provisions alleged to have been violated did not apply to first-line supervisory positions and, thus, were not grievable or arbitrable under the applicable procedures of the negotiated agreement.

The Administrative Law Judge found that certain elements of the AFGE's grievance were subject to the grievance and arbitration provisions of the parties' negotiated agreement. In this regard he concluded, and the Assistant Secretary concurred, that the issue of whether provisions of the negotiated agreement are applicable to first-line supervisory positions involves a question of interpretation and application of the negotiated agreement and, therefore, is grievable and arbitrable under the procedures of the agreement. The Assistant Secretary further found that, should it be determined that the negotiated agreement is applicable to first-line supervisory positions, the extent to which the awarding of "priority consideration" for such positions may be inconsistent with any provision of the negotiated agreement is also a matter involving interpretation and application of the agreement and is grievable and arbitrable under the agreement. Accordingly, he ordered the Activity to take appropriate steps to implement his findings.

DECISION ON GRIEVABILITY-ARBITRABILITY

On July 22, 1977, Administrative Law Judge Milton Kramer issued his Recommended Decision on Grievability in the above-entitled proceeding, finding that certain aspects of the grievance involved herein were subject to the grievance and arbitration procedures of the parties' negotiated procedure. The Activity filed exceptions and a supporting brief with respect to the Administrative Law Judge's Recommended Decision on Grievability.

The Assistant Secretary has reviewed the rulings of the Administrative Law Judge made at the hearing and finds that no prejudicial error was committed. The rulings are hereby affirmed. Upon consideration of the Administrative Law Judge's Recommended Decision on Grievability and the entire record in the subject case, including the Activity's exceptions and supporting brief, I hereby adopt the Administrative Law Judge's findings, conclusions and recommendation, as indicated herein. 1/

I agree with the Administrative Law Judge that the issue of whether provisions of the negotiated agreement are applicable to first-line supervisory positions involves a question of interpretation and application of the negotiated agreement and, therefore, is grievable and arbitrable under the procedures of the agreement. Moreover, should it be determined that the negotiated agreement is applicable to first-line supervisory positions, the extent to which the awarding of "priority consideration" for such positions may be inconsistent with any provision of the negotiated agreement is also a matter involving the interpretation and application of the agreement and is grievable and arbitrable under the aforementioned procedures. 2/

FINDING

IT IS HEREBY FOUND that the grievance in Case No. 22-7623(AP) is grievable and arbitrable under the terms of the parties' negotiated agreement.

RECOMMENDED DECISION ON GRIEVABILITY

Preliminary Statement

This case arises under Section 13(d) of the Executive Order 11491 as amended. It was initiated by an Application filed December 9, 1976 requesting the Assistant Secretary to determine whether a grievance filed October 4, 1976 and amended October 8 was subject to the grievance procedure in the parties' agreement. Under date of December 16, 1976 the Activity filed a response to the Application. On March 14, 1977 the Acting Regional Administrator issued a Notice of Hearing to be held in Washington, D.C. on April 25, 1977. A hearing was held on that day in that City. The Applicant was represented by the First Vice President of Local 3407 and the Activity was represented by its Labor Relations Officer. Both parties produced witnesses who were examined and cross-examined and both parties offered exhibits which were received in evidence. Both parties made closing arguments and the Applicant filed a timely brief.

2/ Community Services Administration, FLRC No. 76A-149, A/SLMR No. 921 (1977).

Facts

The Applicant is the recognized exclusive representative of a unit of non-supervisory professional and non-professional General Schedule and Wage Grade employees of the Activity. The parties entered into a "Negotiated Agreement" on September 11, 1973 effective October 26, 1973. That is the basic agreement still in effect. It now has three supplements.

Article X, Section 2 of that agreement provides that when a promotion panel is established for the purpose of ranking candidates for vacant positions within the unit, the Union may name one member of the panel. However, the Union nominee (1) may not serve on more than one panel in twelve months, (2) must not be a candidate for the vacant position, and (3) must be at least of equal grade with that of the position to be filled. It provides also that when a promotion panel is established for the purpose of ranking candidates for a vacant first-line supervisory position (not in the unit) for which an employee in the unit is qualified, the Union also may name one member of the panel with one additional restriction. In addition to the restrictions applicable to the Union nominee on a non-supervisory panel, the nominee must not be under the supervision of the vacant supervisory position.

Section 10 of Article X of the original agreement provided that the Activity would develop criteria for ranking candidates for promotions to positions within the unit and that when it did so the parties would negotiate the addition of the criteria to the agreement. On May 6, 1974 the parties executed Supplement 1 to the Negotiated Agreement adding such criteria for non-supervisory positions within the unit to the original Section 10 of Article X. There was no counterpart of Section 10 with respect to ranking candidates for first-line supervisory positions. The Applicant several times suggested that the parties agree on criteria for promotion to first-line supervisor but the Activity refused to negotiate on that subject on the ground that since the position was not in the unit it was not a subject of mandatory bargaining, and the Union did not pursue the matter. Section 2 of Article X contains the only express reference in the Negotiated Agreement to the filing of Supervisory positions.

Two promotion actions are the subject of this case. They occurred in "promotion actions 14/76 and 24/76." The facts with respect to those two promotion actions are identical in all significant respects.

In each of them a vacancy to a GS 13 first-line supervisory position was announced. A promotion panel to rank the applicants was established and in accordance with Article X, Section 2 of the collective agreement the Union appointed a member. The panel ranked the applicants according to the criteria prescribed by the Activity, and submitted their rankings to the selecting officials who made their selections.

Two employees, Askland and Smart, were displeased with the promotions made and protested to the Activity's Labor Relations Officer that the respective ranking panels had not properly applied the prescribed criteria by not giving them credit for some portions of their higher education. They were told that since the promotions were to supervisory positions for which the criteria were not negotiated they could not file a grievance under the negotiated grievance procedure but could file a grievance under the administrative grievance procedure.

Such a grievance was filed and it was found that the respective promotion panels had not given credits for two years of education completed by Askland at the New York State Maritime Academy and four and a half years completed by Smart, three at the Naval Academy and one and a half at the University of New Hampshire. Other errors were also found. 1/ It was decided that although several efforts had been made by the panels to obtain the necessary information from the applicants, every consideration must be given to seeing that each candidate receives full credit for creditable education regardless of the administrative difficulty involved. 2/

Promotion panels were established to re-evaluate the candidates for the two positions. The Applicant was requested to name its members on the panels. 3/ It declined to do so on the ground that the candidates had been given every opportunity to furnish the information, that the panels had leaned over backwards to help the candidates, that to re-evaluate would probably result in priority consideration being given over "guiltless" members of the unit when the next vacancy occurred, and such would be unfair. 4/ The re-evaluations were made resulting in Askland and Smart being given priority consideration for the next vacancies that should occur as provided in the Federal Personnel Manual, Ch. 335-31, subch. 6, Sec. 6-4(c).

3/ Exhs. A-7, A-8.

The Applicant filed a grievance under the negotiated grievance procedure over Askland and Smart being awarded priority consideration for the next vacancies. "Priority Consideration" means that when the next similar vacancy occurred they would be non-competitively considered, and if qualified would be appointed, and only if found not qualified would the vacancy be open to other applicants. The grievance asserts that the promotion panels made extraordinary efforts to be fair to Askland and Smart, that they went to special lengths to obtain information from them but they failed to cooperate, and that to give them priority consideration in the future over other equally or better qualified candidates who did cooperate would be inequitable and in violation of certain internal regulations of the Activity and Article X, Section 9b; Article III, Section 2; Article II, Section 2; Article X, Section 1; and Article X, Section 3 of the parties' agreement. 5/

The Activity denied the grievance as follows:

Article X, Section 9b provides (that "to correct promotions deemed erroneous through the grievance and/or arbitration procedures"):

"If the action does not include vacating the position, the employee (or employees) not promoted or given proper consideration will be given priority consideration for the next appropriate vacancy."

The Activity held that since that language was simply copied from the Federal Personnel Manual, and the grievances of Askland and Smart were processed under the administrative grievance procedure, the corrective action taken was not based on the terms of the agreement but on the Federal Personnel Manual.

4/ Exhs. A-9, A-6.
5/ Exhs. A-1, A-2, A-11, A-12.

Article III, Section 2 provides (in part):

".... DMAHC and the Union agree that all provisions of this agreement shall be applied fairly and equitably to all employees without regard to union membership or non-membership."

The Activity held that since in discussions with the Applicant over its grievance the Applicant stated that it was not contending that the Activity's action complained of was based on membership or non-membership in the Union, there could be no violation of that provision.

Article II, Section 2 of the agreement provides:

"In the administration of all matters covered by this agreement, officials and employees are governed by existing or future laws and the regulations of appropriate authorities, including policies set forth in the Federal Personnel Manual; by published DMA policies, and regulations. ..."

The Activity decided that since that provision was taken from Section 12(a) of the Executive Order and as such was required to be expressly stated in all agreements, the agreement did not incorporate all "laws and regulations" as part of the agreement.

Article X, Section 1 provides:

".... It is further agreed that DMAHC will utilize employee skills and potentials to the maximum extent possible by selecting and promoting employees on the basis of merit; without regard to race, creed, color, age, marital status, sex, physical handicap or personal favoritism. ..."

The Activity stated that it did not believe that the Applicant contended that the Activity discriminated on the basis of race, creed, color, age, marital status, sex, physical handicap, or personal favoritism (and hence that provision was not applicable), and that if the Applicant did so contend the Activity would not agree.

Article X, Section 3, which the grievance asserted was also violated, is entirely unrelated to the subject matter of this case. The Activity so stated and added that it believed that the Applicant may have meant to refer to Article X, Section 2. That Section provides "when promotion panels are established for the purpose of ranking candidates for vacant positions" the Union may nominate one member (with certain limitations). The Activity decided that the key phrase was "when promotion panels are established", that the provision did not require that a promotion panel be established for every promotion action, that when priority consideration is given a promotion panel is not established at least until after such consideration is given, and that therefore that provision had no application to this situation.

The Activity concluded with the statement that it did not find that the allegations of the grievance were upheld and that the grievance and the request for corrective action must be denied.

The parties met subsequently and the Activity took the position that the grievance was not grievable or arbitrable. All steps prior to arbitration were exhausted and the Activity suggested that the Union submit the matter to the Assistant Secretary in accordance with Part 205 of the Regulations. The Union agreed to do so with conditions. 6/ The Activity did not agree to the conditions, taking the position that they could not properly be imposed but stating that if the Assistant Secretary held the grievance to be grievable it would then be subject to arbitration. 7/ The Application then followed.

Discussion

The positions for which the Activity decided Askland and Smart would be given priority consideration should such vacancies occur in their working lifetimes with the Activity, are first-line supervisory positions. There is no obligation under the Executive Order to bargain over procedures for filling vacancies outside the bargaining unit. But there is no prohibition against doing so and if an agreement on such subject is reached it is a valid agreement. 8/ Misinterpretation or misapplication of such agreement provision can thus properly give rise to a grievance even though the negotiated grievance procedure is limited, as it is here, to grievances that "pertain only to the interpretation or application of this agreement". The task here, then, is to determine whether the grievance raises such an issue.

1. The grievance alleged that the granting of priority consideration to Askland and Smart violated certain regulations of the Activity. Article V of the negotiated agreement sets forth the grievance procedure. In Section 1 of that Article it is provided:

".... Grievances, to be processed under this article, shall pertain only to the interpretation or application of this agreement. ..."

Furthermore, Section 4 of Article V provides:

"Questions as to the interpretation of published agency policies or regulations ... shall not be subject to this negotiated grievance procedure. ..."

Clearly, that portion of the grievance was not subject to the negotiated grievance procedure.

2. The grievance alleged a violation of Article X, Section 9b of the negotiated agreement. As the Activity held, that provision was simply taken from the Federal Personnel Manual. See Exh. R-1, FPM 335-31, Part 6-4,C,(2). The Activity held that the corrective action taken therefor was not based on the terms of the agreement but on the FPM. Article X, Section 4, of the agreement provides:

"Questions as to the interpretation of ... regulations of appropriate authorities outside the agency shall not be subject to this negotiated grievance procedure regardless of whether such policies, laws or regulations are quoted, cited, or otherwise incorporated or referenced in this agreement."

The FPM is a regulation in part and a statement of policy in part of the Civil Service Commission. For the reason given by the Activity, and because of the above-quoted part of the agreement, this part of the grievance is excluded from the negotiated grievance procedure.

8/ Texas ANG Council of Locals, AFGE and State of Texas National Guard, FLRC No. 74A-71; Community Services Administration and National Council of CSA Locals, AFGE, AFL-CIO, A/SLMR No. 749.

3. The grievance alleged a violation of Article III, Section 2. That Section (quoted above in relevant part) provides that the parties agree that the provisions of the agreement will be applied fairly and equitably to all employees without regard to union membership or non-membership. There is no contention that the Activity discriminated on the basis of union membership. The Activity takes the position that that provision requires fairness and equity in applying the provisions of the agreement without regard only to union membership or non-membership. The Union takes the position that that provision requires fairness and equity in applying the agreement in all respects, including without regard to union membership or non-membership, and that granting the priority consideration here involved was not fair and equitable.

There thus is a disagreement over the interpretation of that provision of the agreement. But to this point it is only an abstract dispute, and abstract disputes are not, or should not, be subject to arbitration. The contract provision here involved provides that the "provisions of this agreement shall be applied fairly and equitably ... without regard to Union membership", so until we find some provision of the agreement that is contended not to have been fairly applied, there is not an arbitrable dispute.

The dispute over the interpretation of Article III, Section 2, of itself, is not grievable or arbitrable.

4. The grievance alleged also a violation of Article II, Section 2 of the agreement. That provision, quoted in relevant part above, recites that in the administration of the agreement the parties are governed by existing and future laws and regulations of appropriate authority. The Union contended that the actions under contention violated certain regulations and policies. The Activity held that that provision was simply copied from Section 12(a) of the Executive Order and as such was required to be expressly stated in the agreement. This of course so. See the last paragraph of Section 12 of Executive Order 11491. The agency concluded that therefore the provision did not incorporate all laws and regulations as part of the agreement.

The position of the agency on this point was sound for the reason it gave and additional reasons. Surely if the agreement provided that the parties would be governed by all laws of the United States such provision would not make the entire United States Code part of the agreement, so that a violation of Title 18 § 1262 or § 1716 or Title 27 § 122 would be a violation of the agreement.

In addition, the agreement itself so provides. Article V, Section 4 provides, in its first sentence, that questions of the interpretation of provisions of law shall not be subject to the negotiated grievance procedure regardless of whether such laws are quoted, cited, or otherwise incorporated or referenced in the agreement.

This part of the grievance was not subject to the negotiated grievance procedure.

5. The grievance alleged also that the Activity's actions under question violated Article X, Section 1. That Section provides that the Activity will utilize skills and potentials to the maximum extent possible by "promoting employees on the basis of merit; without regard to race, creed, color" etc. The Activity took the position that since it did not appear that the Union contended that the Activity took the action it did because of race, color, creed, etc., that Section was inapplicable, and that if the Union did so contend the Activity disagreed. It appears that the Agency is of the view that that provision requires the application of the merit principle without regard only to race, creed, color, etc., and that the Union is of the view that it is not so limited and that it requires the application of the merit principle without limitation. Also, it appears that the Activity is of the view that that provision is applicable to promotions only within the unit and hence is inapplicable to the actions here involved, and that the Union is of the view that that provision applies to all promotions including at least promotions to first-line supervisory positions, and that the awarding of priority consideration to Askland and Smart violated such provision.

Such disagreement does constitute a dispute that pertains to the proper interpretation and application of the negotiated agreement and is not excluded by Section 4 of Article V of the agreement from being presented as a grievance under the negotiated grievance procedure. While an agency is not obligated to negotiate over the filling of supervisory positions, it is permissible for it to do so and if it does and reaches agreement the agreement is valid and binding. ^{9/} The question here is whether it did so and to what extent.

This part of the grievance does present a grievable and arbitrable dispute in three aspects: first, whether the quoted provision of Article X, Section 1 applies to promotions to first-line supervisory positions; second, whether the "without regard to" clause limits the application of the merit principle only to disregarding race, creed, color, etc., and third, if it is not so limited was the principle violated by the Activity awarding Askland and Smart priority consideration for the next vacancies.

6. The grievance asserted that there was also a violation of Article X, Section 3. That provision is utterly inapplicable to this situation. The Activity so recognized and stated that it believed the Union meant to refer to Article X, Section 2 and it has developed that the Union did so intend. The Activity held that that provision had no application because it applied only when a promotion panel was established and did not require a promotion panel to be established for every promotion, and that when priority consideration is given a promotion panel is not established unless the promotion is not made on that basis.

That portion of the grievance was not subject to the negotiated grievance procedure for the reason given by the Activity and for an additional reason.

The provision in question provides that when a promotion panel is established the Union will be permitted to name one member. The Union was permitted to name a member of every such panel here involved and on every occasion either named one or declined to do so. The promotion panel was only a ranking panel. It took no part in the selecting or appointing of the individual appointed.

The Union appears to complain that in the case of two of the panels the rankings were found to be erroneous in some respects because of erroneous application of certain ranking criteria as a result of which priority consideration was determined to be called for. But the Union's participation on the panel is only for the purpose of ranking, and when the rankings are made and submitted to the appointing authority the panel is functus officio. It, including the Union member, had nothing further to do and the Union had no further contract interest in what happened thereafter except perhaps as provided in Article X, Section 2, discussed above, which I have found does present a grievance under the negotiated grievance procedure.

Conclusion and Recommendation

The grievance was not subject to the grievance and arbitration provisions of the collective agreement of the parties in most of its aspects. But it did present some issues, some of them contingently, that were subject to those provisions. I recommend that it be held that the grievance did present the following issues subject to the grievance and arbitration procedures of the collective agreement:

I. A. Does the second sentence of Article X, Section 1 of the collective agreement apply to promotions to first-line supervisory positions?

B. If the answer to the preceding question is "yes", then is the agreement to promote on the basis of merit limited to promoting without regard to race, creed, color, age, marital status, sex, physical handicap, or personal favoritism?

C. If issue I, B is reached and the answer is "No", was the granting of priority consideration to Askland a violation of that provision? Was it a violation to grant priority consideration to Smart?

II. If issue I, C is reached and the answer is "yes" to either of its parts, was such action also a violation of the second sentence of Article III, Section 2?

UNITED STATES DEPARTMENT OF LABOR
ASSISTANT SECRETARY FOR LABOR-MANAGEMENT RELATIONS
SUMMARY OF DECISION AND ORDER OF THE ASSISTANT SECRETARY
PURSUANT TO SECTION 6 OF EXECUTIVE ORDER 11491, AS AMENDED

AMERICAN FEDERATION OF GOVERNMENT
EMPLOYEES, LOCAL 2578, AFL-CIO, AND NATIONAL ARCHIVES AND RECORDS SERVICE
A/SLMR No. 965

This proceeding involved two unfair labor practices complaints. The first complaint, filed by the National Archives and Records Service (NARS), alleged that the American Federation of Government Employees, Local 2578, AFL-CIO (AFGE) violated Section 19(b)(6) of the Order by failing to negotiate a new agreement during September 1975. The second complaint, filed by the AFGE, alleged that the NARS violated Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order by failing to negotiate in good faith, to meet at reasonable times, and to give its negotiators the authority to negotiate an agreement.

The Administrative Law Judge found that the NARS violated Section 19(a)(6) of the Order by, in effect, engaging in a calculated strategy of delay which resulted in the exhaustion of official time for the AFGE negotiating team and discouraged the AFGE from proceeding with negotiations for a new agreement. Thus, he found that the NARS offered proposals "demeaning and unacceptable to the Union, which had the Union on the defensive attempting to hold on to what it had instead of moving for improvement on the existing contract." In this regard, he took particular note of proposals relating to three contract provisions, which, in his view, evidenced an intention on the part of the Activity negotiators to discourage the AFGE from proceeding with contract negotiations. With respect to the complaint against the AFGE, the Administrative Law Judge found that, under the circumstances, the AFGE was justified in breaking off contract negotiations and, therefore, its conduct was not violative of Section 19(b)(6) of the Order.

The Assistant Secretary disagreed with the Administrative Law Judge's finding of a Section 19(a)(6) violation against the NARS. He noted that the duty to bargain in "good faith" requires that parties to negotiations approach the bargaining table with an open mind and a sincere desire to reach agreement. This duty does not require either party to agree to a proposal or make concessions and no inference of bad faith bargaining can be drawn solely from a party's failure to retreat from its initial proposals. In addition to approaching bargaining with an open mind and a sincere desire to reach agreement, the duty to bargain in good faith requires that the parties make an earnest effort to reach agreement through the collective bargaining process. In determining whether a party has bargained in good faith the Assistant Secretary will not substitute his judgment with respect to the merits of contract proposals. Thus, even if a proposal or proposals appear onerous or burdensome to the outside observer, they will not be deemed to constitute bad faith bargaining unless the totality of the evidence will support the conclusion that such proposal or proposals were advanced with the clear intent of evading or frustrating the bargaining responsibility.

The Assistant Secretary found that although Activity negotiators engaged in "hard bargaining" with the AFGE, the totality of its conduct did not reflect a closed mind and the absence of a desire to reach agreement. In this connection, he noted, among other things, that the NARS had made no take it or leave it demands but, rather, continued to make proposals and counter-proposals throughout the course of negotiations and displayed a willingness to consider alternative proposals.

With respect to the unfair labor practice complaint filed by the NARS alleging that the AFGE's absence from four negotiating sessions constituted a violation of Section 19(b)(6) of the Order, the Assistant Secretary, concluded, in agreement with the Administrative Law Judge, that the AFGE had not violated the Order. In this regard, he noted, among other things, that while the AFGE team did not appear at the September negotiating sessions, its Chief Negotiator continued to communicate with his NARS counterpart in an attempt to gain a favorable arrangement in regard to his team's exhausted official time.

Accordingly, the Assistant Secretary ordered that the complaints be dismissed.

DECISION AND ORDER

On June 15, 1977, Administrative Law Judge George A. Fath issued his Recommended Decision and Order in the above-entitled consolidated proceeding, finding in Case No. 22-6621(CO) that the Respondent labor organization, American Federation of Government Employees, Local 2578, AFL-CIO, hereinafter called AFGE or Union, had not engaged in conduct which was violative of the Order. In Case No. 22-6648(CA), the Administrative Law Judge found that the Respondent Activity, National Archives and Records Service, hereinafter called NARS or Activity, had engaged in certain unfair labor practices and recommended that it cease and desist therefrom and take certain affirmative actions as set forth in the attached Administrative Law Judge's Recommended Decision and Order. Thereafter, the NARS filed exceptions and a supporting brief with respect to the Administrative Law Judge's Recommended Decision and Order.

The Assistant Secretary has reviewed the rulings of the Administrative Law Judge made at the hearing and finds that no prejudicial error was committed. The rulings are hereby affirmed. Upon consideration of the Administrative Law Judge's Recommended Decision and Order and the entire record in the subject cases, 1/ including the NARS' exceptions and supporting brief, I hereby adopt the Administrative Law Judge's findings, conclusions and recommendations, only to the extent consistent herewith.

The evidence establishes that in October 1974, the Chief Negotiators for the NARS and the AFGE signed ground rules drafted to govern the negotiations for a new agreement. The ground rules specified the composition of the bargaining teams; the days and times of bargaining sessions; a limit of 40 hours of official time for negotiations during duty hours for each member of the AFGE negotiating team; and a procedure for the Chief Negotiators to "initial off" individual contract clauses to indicate tentative agreement pending full and final agreement.

Negotiating sessions started on November 25, 1974, and continued until February 1975, when they were suspended by mutual agreement because of questions concerning the effect of the impending amendments to Executive Order 11491 and because of lack of progress. The record indicates that negotiations resumed on May 22, 1975, and continued until July 1975, at which time most of the AFGE negotiators had exhausted their 40 hours of official time. After a series of informal discussions between the Chief Negotiators in August 1975, the AFGE negotiators did not appear for further meetings or respond to the NARS' request for bargaining sessions in September. The NARS subsequently filed the complaint in Case No. 22-6621(CO) alleging that the Union violated Section 19(b)(6) of the Order by failing to negotiate a new agreement during September 1975. Shortly thereafter, the AFGE filed its complaint in Case No. 22-6648(CA) alleging that the NARS violated Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order by failing to negotiate in good faith, to meet at reasonable times, and to give its negotiators the authority to negotiate an agreement. 2/

In case No. 22-6648(CA), the Administrative Law Judge found that the NARS violated Section 19(a)(6) of the Order by, in effect, engaging in a calculated strategy of delay which resulted in the exhaustion of

1/ The Administrative Law Judge did not introduce the formal documents into the record. However, inasmuch as the record in the instant case transferred to the Assistant Secretary included the formal documents, they are deemed to be properly included in the record within the meaning of Section 203.23(b) of the Assistant Secretary's Regulations. See Local R1-57, National Association of Government Employees (NAGE), A/SLMR No. 896 (1977); Department of Health, Education and Welfare, Social Security Administration, Bureau of Field Operations, Region V-A, A/SLMR No. 832 (1977); Puget Sound Naval Shipyard, U.S. Department of the Navy, A/SLMR No. 829 (1977); and Charleston Naval Shipyard, 1 A/SLMR 27, A SLMR No. 1 (1970).

2/ The Regional Administrator dismissed the complaint in Case No. 22-6648(CA) insofar as it alleged that the Activity had refused to meet at reasonable times and had failed to invest its negotiators with appropriate authority. This dismissal action was not appealed.

official time for the Union negotiating team and which discouraged the Union from proceeding with negotiations for a new agreement. Thus, the Administrative Law Judge found that the NARS offered proposals "demeaning and unacceptable to the Union, which had the Union on the defensive attempting to hold on to what it had instead of moving for improvement on the existing contract." In this regard, he took particular note of proposals relating to three contract provisions, the preamble, the grievance procedure, and the proposal on union representatives, which, in his view, evidenced an intention on the part of the Activity negotiators to discourage the AFGE from proceeding with contract negotiations. With respect to the preamble, the Administrative Law Judge noted that the amendment to the preamble was not "initialed off" until May 1975, some seven months after negotiations commenced, and that the only change from the existing preamble was the deletion of the concluding paragraph. In connection with the grievance procedure, the Administrative Law Judge found the Activity's proposals to be a "complicated maze of steps, stages, qualifications, time limits, and permission slips." And, in regard to management's proposal on union representatives, he noted that the NARS' negotiators proposed that a steward be appointed for each unit in each branch and division of the NARS, a proposal which would require 45 stewards, and that employee violations of smoking and drinking prohibitions would result in disciplinary action taken against the steward in the branch or division in which the violating employee involved was a staff member.

The Administrative Law Judge also found evidence of collateral matters which he felt had a bearing on the issue of good faith bargaining. ^{3/} He concluded that the course of conduct pursued by the NARS was tantamount to a refusal to consult, confer, or negotiate with the AFGE and, therefore, violated Section 19(a)(6) of the Order.

I disagree with the foregoing conclusion of the Administrative Law Judge. In my view, the record does not establish that the NARS engaged in a course of conduct which was violative of the Order. The duty to bargain in "good faith" set forth in Section 11(a) of the Order requires that parties to negotiations approach the bargaining table with an open mind and a sincere desire to reach agreement. This duty does not necessarily require either party to agree to a proposal or to make a concession. Thus, in my view, no inference of bad faith bargaining can be drawn solely from a party's failure to retreat from its initial proposals. In addition to approaching bargaining with an open mind and a sincere desire to reach agreement, the duty to bargain in good faith also requires that the parties make an earnest effort to reach agreement through the collective bargaining process. In determining whether a party has bargained in good faith the Assistant Secretary will not substitute his judgment with respect to the merits of contract proposals. Thus, even if a proposal or proposals appear onerous or burdensome to the outside observer, they will not be deemed to constitute bad faith bargaining unless the totality of the evidence supports the conclusion that such proposal or proposals were advanced with the clear intent of evading or frustrating the bargaining responsibility. In my view, the record herein does not establish that the NARS violated its duty to bargain in good faith.

^{3/} The collateral matters which the Administrative Law Judge noted were the alleged harassment by the Activity of Union officers by eavesdropping on a Union business call and bad performance ratings; management's exclusion of additional employees from the exclusively represented unit and failure to give the AFGE a copy of its certification; and the expressions of management that it was not obligated to formulate training programs policy with the Union.

Although the Activity negotiators engaged in "hard bargaining" with the AFGE, the totality of their conduct, did not, in my opinion, reflect a closed mind and the absence of a desire to reach agreement. In this connection, the record reflects that the parties had reached tentative agreement on some eleven articles by the end of July 1975, and that the Activity, at no time, made any take it or leave it demands. Rather, it continued to make proposals and counter-proposals throughout the course of negotiations and it displayed a willingness to consider alternative proposals in order to reach agreement. ^{4/} With respect to the specific Activity proposals on the grievance procedure and on union representatives and disciplinary actions alluded to by the Administrative Law Judge, in my opinion, they were not so inherently onerous or burdensome that, standing alone, they would evidence an intent not to reach agreement on the part of the Activity negotiators. Further, with respect to these items, the Activity did not refuse to consider proposals from the Union, and its original proposals were modified in the course of negotiations. In regard to the bargaining over the preamble, the record discloses that the parties came to agreement on the proposed deletion the first and only time they negotiated over the matter. Further, the record reveals that the single paragraph deleted from the original preamble was essentially duplicative of one already contained in Article II of the negotiated agreement.

Nor, in my view, did the Activity's contention that certain proposals made by the Union were non-negotiable, constitute bad faith bargaining under the circumstances of this case. Thus, the Union never chose to contest the Activity's contention by other than a broad assertion that the latter was wrong and, with respect to those items deemed non-negotiable by the Activity's Chief Negotiators, the AFGE was informed that the Union could request a determination by the agency head regarding the negotiability of any Union proposal, and that it could avail itself of the procedures set forth in Section 11(c) of the Order to determine the negotiability of any management proposal. The record shows that the AFGE never sought such determinations of negotiability.

^{4/} With respect to the Administrative Law Judge's conclusion that the Respondent pursued a strategy of delay to cause the Complainant's negotiators to exhaust off duty-time, it is noted that the Regional Administrator dismissed the AFGE's allegation that the Activity had refused to meet at reasonable times and that the parties' ground rules were consistent with Section 20 of the Order. Moreover, the record reflects that the Activity's negotiators were willing to negotiate at adjustable times and, in a spirit of compromise, indicated that they would be willing to meet "half-on and half-off" the clock in an attempt to get the negotiations resumed.

ORDER

With respect to the collateral issues which the Administrative Law Judge referred to in his Recommended Decision and Order, the record reflects that the alleged harrasment, eavesdropping, and bad performance evaluations substantially pre-dated the commencement of the negotiations herein, and that no unfair labor practice complaints or grievances were filed in connection with these allegations. As to the allegations of bad performance evaluations, while a witness, in a self-serving statement, testified that his evaluations "could not be justified," there is no record evidence as to when the evaluations were made, what the evaluations were, or whether they were related in any way to his union activities.

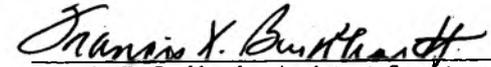

In connection with the Activity's contention in an unrelated proceeding that certain employees should be excluded from the existing unit, in my view, such contention, standing alone, is consistent with its rights under the Order and, absent any other evidence of improper motivation, cannot be deemed either violative of the Order or indicative of management's attitude with respect to the negotiation of an agreement. Thus, the Order permits management to question an employee's eligibility for inclusion within a unit, and it also permits an exclusive representative to contest management's position through the filing of a petition for clarification of unit. Finally, the AFGE had the opportunity to seek a negotiability determination in regard to management's unilateral formulation of some training programs and failed to do so.

Accordingly, under all of these circumstances, I find, contrary to the Administrative Law Judge, that the NARS' conduct was not violative of Section 19(a)(6) of the Order.

With respect to Case No. 22-6621(CO), the record indicates that in September 1975, the AFGE negotiators failed to appear for four negotiating sessions which had been proposed by the NARS negotiating team. The NARS contended that the AFGE's absence from these negotiating sessions constitute a violation of Section 19(b)(6) of the Order. The Administrative Law Judge found that the Union was justified in breaking off contract negotiations and, therefore, there was no violation of the Order. I agree with his conclusion. Thus, the evidence indicates that while the AFGE team did not appear at the September negotiating sessions, its Chief Negotiator continued to communicate with his NARS counterpart in an attempt to gain a favorable arrangement in regard to his team's exhausted official time. Moreover, in the context of the totality of the bargaining which took place between the parties, the AFGE's absence from the four sessions, standing alone, was not considered to constitute bad faith bargaining. Accordingly, I find that the AFGE's conduct was not violative of Section 19(b)(6) of the Order.

IT IS HEREBY ORDERED that the complaints in Case Nos. 22-6621(CO) and 22-6648(CA) be, and they hereby are, dismissed.

 Administrative Law Judge

This case arises under Executive Order 11491, as amended (hereinafter called the Order). A Notice of Hearing on Complainant was issued on May 4, 1976 by the Regional Administrator for Labor-Management Relations, Philadelphia Region, on complaints alleging violations of Sections 19(a) (1) (6) and 19(b) (1) (6) of the Order.

On January 15, 1976, the National Archives and Records Service (hereinafter called the Activity) filed a complaint against Local 2578, American Federation of Government Employees (hereinafter called the Union) stating: "The Union refused to negotiate a new agreement during the period September 5-19, 1975, and is, therefore, guilty of violating Section 19(b) (6) of E.O. 11491, as amended".

On February 2, 1976, the Union filed a complaint against the Activity charging a violation of the Order in that the Activity failed to negotiate in good faith, refused to meet at reasonable times, and absence of authority to negotiate on agreement.

The cases were consolidated for trial by Order of the Regional Administrator entered on May 4, 1976, and were tried from the 6th through the 12th of October 1976. The Activity was represented by Counsel and the Union was represented by the President and Vice-President of the Local.

The following findings, conclusions, and recommendations are based upon the entire record, and include credibility determinations based on the observation of witnesses, their demeanor, and evaluation of their testimony.

Rulings on Evidence

At the conclusion of the Union's case, the Activity objected to the admission into evidence of certain of the Union exhibits. Ruling on the objections was deferred pending receipt of the transcript.

The objections to the admission of exhibits U-51, U-52, and U-53 are statements submitted to the Regional Administrator in support of the Union's charge. These exhibits are a mixture of facts, self-serving statements of opinion and argument. The objections to the admission of these exhibits are sustained.

The objections to the admission of Union exhibits U-56, U-60, U-62, U-63, U-66, and U-68, which are proposals, counterproposals, and memoranda relating to negotiations between the parties, are overruled. These exhibits are found to be relative and material to the issues presented by the cases.

Local 2578, AFGE, is the exclusive collective bargaining representative of the personnel employed at the National Archives and Records Service exclusive of supervisors, management executives, temporary employees, guards and employees engaged in personnel work. There is a collective bargaining agreement effective November 6, 1972, operating between the parties.

In October 1974, the parties began negotiating a new collective bargaining agreement. "Ground Rules" governing the planned negotiations were agreed upon, which contained provisions naming the respective negotiating teams, establishing schedules for negotiating sessions, and allotting 40 hours off-duty time to the Union for negotiations.

Early in November 1974, the parties exchanged proposal. The Activity submitted 23 proposals to the Union and the Union offered 9 proposals to the Activity. Each proposal contained parts and subparts amendatory of the existing agreement. The parties met regularly, but by May 22, 1975, they had reached agreement only on Articles dealing to the Preamble, Recognition and Unit Determination, Restrictions and Conditions, Leave, Government Facilities and Services, Management Rights, and Incentive Awards. Up to that point the parties had been in session for at least 58 hours not including informal discussions which were not considered negotiating sessions.

In June, the chief negotiator for the Activity went on leave for a month and his place was taken by the alternate chief negotiator. Under the alternate chief negotiator, the parties agreed upon articles covering Assignments and Details, Position Descriptions and Classification Appeals, Counseling, and Equal Employment Opportunity.

Upon his return, the chief negotiator resumed his position and the alternate dropped out of active participation because of work demands of a promotion. By letter dated July 9, 1975, addressed to the Union, chief negotiator called a meeting for the following day to discuss unsettled contract articles with view to reaching an understanding of "each other's position in search for a compromise to our differences." The Union attended the meeting which took place on July 11, 1975 despite its complaints that it could not get the team together. Management found reason in the Union complaints for charging that the Union did not want to negotiate. The meeting ended in acrimony.

On the 23rd of July, the chief negotiator addressed a letter to the Union in which he cited 26 of the Union proposals which were nonnegotiable. The reasons given for the non-negotiability of these proposal were the conflicts with management rights.

On or about August 1, 1975, the chief negotiator was promoted and replaced on the management team. The new chief, who had been a member of the management team from the outset, began a vigorous letter writing campaign ostensibly to get the negotiations back on the track. On October 23, 1975, under the new chief, the Activity submitted to the Union a packaged version of management's proposals covering the whole contract including new matter and changes on initialed off (agreed) articles.

Bargaining sessions, as such, terminated in September, although the parties were discoursing informally and the chief was writing letters to the Union. The parties reached impasse over the scheduling of future sessions. The Union had exhausted the 40 hours bargaining off-clock time in February and desired to negotiate off the clock, but the Activity, in what it termed a spirit of compromise, was willing to negotiate only half off the clock. Up to July 11, 1975, the parties had been in formal negotiating sessions for not less than 80 hours.

From the beginning, the Activity questioned the meaning of each detail of the Union's proposals. The Union was required to explain, again and again, the most simple terms in the proposals. After each clarification, the proposals were then subjected to analysis. The management team talked at length on the philosophy of labor-management relations and current personnel problems.

The pace of the negotiations can be measured by the fact that management's proposal for amending the preamble of the existing contract was not initiated until May 1975. The effect of the amendment was to delete the following: "Pursuant to policy set forth in the Executive Order 11491, as amended, and subject to all existing or future laws and the regulations; of appropriate authorities, including policies set forth in the Federal Personal Manual; published GSA policies and regulations in existence at the time the agreement was approved; and by subsequently published GSA policies and regulations required by law or by the regulations of appropriate authorities, or authorized by the terms of a controlling agreement at a higher agency level."

Management offered proposals demeaning and unacceptable to the Union, which had the Union on the defensive attempting to hold on to what it had instead of moving for improvement on the existing contract. For example, management proposed that a steward be appointed for each unit in each branch and division of the Activity, and, in addition that an alternate be appointed for each steward. The proposal would require the appointment of 45 stewards. Further, it was proposed that only the steward in a unit could handle a complaint in the unit. These proposals arose out of a fear expressed by management that qualified stewards for the activity would "beat down" the supervisors. Under provisions for disciplinary action for violation of the smoking and drinking prohibitions, management proposed: "Any violations of such regulation will result in Management taking disciplinary or adverse action against the employee when it deems appropriate and will take disciplinary and adverse action against the Union representative for the organizational element in which the violating employee is a staff member." (emphasis added)

The grievance procedure proposed by management is a complicated maze of steps, stages, qualifications, time limits, and permission slips contained in Article XIII. This Article is supplemented by Article XXVII which expressly provides for the automatic termination of a grievance if any of the time limits or any procedures are violated, and, further, the article voids any decision in a grievance matter if the violation occurred prior to the decision and became known within 90 days after the decision was rendered.

The chief negotiator for management fostered an atmosphere of uncertainty during the negotiations relative to the negotiability of the Union's proposals. He unilaterally decided which proposals would be discussed based on his conception of what the Agency would approve. In his testimony at the formal hearing he stated that he did not want to negotiate on provisions for the contract which he thought would not be approved by the Agency.

Concurrently there were collateral matters bearing on the issues.

Through its supervisors, the Activity harassed the Union officers. The Union Vice-President witnessed his supervisor standing outside the door to his office eavesdropping on a Union business call. This same Union officer was given bad performance ratings and was unable to find out the reasons for the ratings.

The Activity challenged the right of the Union to represent certain employees. It contended that 19 employees should be excluded from the unit for various reasons. In January 1975, the Union requested a copy of the original certification for the unit. Management denied having the certification. In July of that year, management expanded the list of ineligible to 70 employees and therein classed all GS-12 personnel as supervisors. The Activity continued to deny it possessed the certification. The Union filed a grievance against the Activity, and, within a few days of the hearing on the grievance, management produced the certification.

There were expressions of opinion by top management in the Activity that it was not obligated to formulate personnel policy with the Union in the matter of training programs (T 85, 86).

Conclusions

After prolonged and fruitless negotiations, the Union was justified in breaking off contract negotiations. There is no violation by the Union of Section 19(b) (6) of the Order.

Throughout the negotiations the Activity delayed and hedged in a manner calculated to discourage the Union from proceeding with contract negotiations.

The strategy of delay pursued by the Activity placed the Union at a disadvantage in that it exhausted off-duty time and could only proceed at the considerable cost of annual leave or leave without pay.

The totality of the conduct of the Activity prior, during, and after the contract negotiations is indicative anti-union animus.

Negotiation by management is this instance, if it may be called that, was only token compliance with the Executive Order. The more than 80 hours spent by the parties in wrangling over the terms of a new contract were wasted. Off-duty time up to 40 hours should not be charged to the Union team.

The Union witnesses, the President and Vice-President are sincere, credible witnesses and their testimony is given great weight. They demonstrated an understanding of the meaning of the Executive Order. They have pursued their rights under the Order (without counsel) with great dedication and at considerable personal sacrifice.

Considering the history of these negotiations, the current attitudes of the parties, and the disarray which characterized their meetings, a mediator capable of maintaining constructive discussions between them is recommended for future negotiations.

The course of conduct pursued by the Activity is tantamount to a refusal to consult, confer, or negotiate with the Union and, therefore, violates Section 19(a)(6) of the Order.

Recommendations

In view of the findings and conclusions expressed above, it is recommended that the Assistant Secretary of Labor for Labor-Management Relations find that Local 2578, AFL-CIO did not violate Section 19(b)(6) of the Order and that the allegation of the complaint be dismissed, and, further, that the Assistant Secretary find that the National Archives and Records Service engaged in conduct in violation of Section 19(a)(6) of the Order, as amended, in that, it failed to consult, confer, and negotiate with the Union in the matter of a new contract as required by the Executive Order.

It is further recommended that the following Order, which is designed to effectuate the policies of Executive Order 11491, as amended, be adopted:

Order

Pursuant to Section 6(b) of Executive Order 11491 and Section 203.26(a) of the Rules and Regulations, the Assistant Secretary of Labor for Labor-Management Relations hereby orders the National Archives and Records Service, shall:

1. Cease and desist from:

(a) Failing and refusing to negotiate a collective bargaining agreement with Local 2578, American Federation of Government Employees, AFL-CIO.

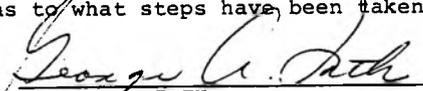

2. Take the following affirmative actions in order to effectuate the purposes and policies of the Order:

(a) Upon request, meet at reasonable times with representatives of Local 2578, AFGE, for the purpose of negotiating a collective bargaining agreement.

(b) Credit Local 2578, AFGE, with 40 hours of off-duty time for negotiating upon commencement thereof.

(c) Post at all of its facilities copies of the attached notice marked "Appendix" on forms to be furnished by the Assistant Secretary of Labor for Labor-Management Relations. Upon receipt of such forms, they shall be signed by the Archivist, or other appropriate official in charge of the Activity, and they shall be posted and maintained by him for 60 consecutive days thereafter in conspicuous places including all bulletin boards and other places where notices to employees are customarily posted. The Archivist, or other appropriate official in charge of the Activity, shall take reasonable steps to insure that such notices are not altered, defaced or covered by any other material.

(d) Pursuant to Section 203.27 of the Regulations, notify the Assistant Secretary, in writing, within 30 days from the date of this order as to what steps have been taken to comply herewith.

SUMMARY OF DECISION AND ORDER OF THE ASSISTANT SECRETARY
PURSUANT TO SECTION 6 OF EXECUTIVE ORDER 11491, AS AMENDED

UTAH ARMY NATIONAL GUARD,
SALT LAKE CITY, UTAH
A/SLMR No. 966

This case involved an unfair labor practice complaint filed by the National Federation of Federal Employees (Ind.), Local 1724, (Complainant) alleging that the Respondent violated Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order when, in the process of negotiating an agreement, the Respondent refused to continue negotiations because a former unit employee was present on the Union negotiating team. The Respondent contended that in accordance with mutually agreed upon ground rules, the Complainant waived its right to select nonemployees as members of its negotiating team.

The Administrative Law Judge found that the Respondent violated Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order by refusing to continue negotiations. He concluded that the ground rules did not clearly and unmistakably waive the Complainant's right under the Executive Order to select its own negotiating team members.

The Assistant Secretary adopted the Administrative Law Judge's findings, conclusions, and recommendations and issued an appropriate remedial order.

DECISION AND ORDER

On August 5, 1977, Administrative Law Judge Steven E. Halpern issued his Recommended Decision and Order in the above-entitled proceeding, finding that the Respondent had engaged in certain unfair labor practices and recommending that it cease and desist therefrom and take certain affirmative actions as set forth in the attached Administrative Law Judge's Recommended Decision and Order. Thereafter, both the Complainant and the Respondent filed exceptions and supporting briefs with respect to the Administrative Law Judge's Recommended Decision and Order.

The Assistant Secretary has reviewed the rulings of the Administrative Law Judge made at the hearing and finds that no prejudicial error was committed. The rulings are hereby affirmed. Upon consideration of the Administrative Law Judge's Recommended Decision and Order and the entire record in the subject case, including the exceptions and supporting briefs filed by the Complainant and the Respondent, I hereby adopt the Administrative Law Judge's findings, conclusions, and recommendations.

Pursuant to Section 6(b) of Executive Order 11491, as amended, and Section 203.26(b) of the Regulations, the Assistant Secretary of Labor for Labor-Management Relations hereby orders that the Utah Army

1/ The Complainant excepted to the Administrative Law Judge's failure to grant its prayer for relief, set forth on pages 11 and 12 of his Recommended Decision and Order. In agreement with the Administrative Law Judge, I find that the Complainant's request is overly speculative and broad and I shall issue an affirmative bargaining order which, in my view, adequately remedies the violation found herein.

National Guard, Salt Lake City, Utah, shall:

1. Cease and desist from:

(a) Refusing to meet and confer with the National Federation of Federal Employees (Ind.), Local 1724, by refusing to engage in further negotiations of a basic negotiated agreement until such time as the chief representative designated by the Union is removed as a member of the Union's negotiating team.

(b) Interfering with, restraining, or coercing its employees in the exercise of their rights assured by the Order by failing to afford the National Federation of Federal Employees (Ind.), Local 1724 the opportunity to be represented by representatives of its choice at future negotiations of a basic negotiated agreement.

(c) In any like or related manner interfering with, restraining, or coercing its employees in the exercise of their rights assured by Executive Order 11491, as amended.

2. Take the following affirmative actions in order to effectuate the purposes and policies of the Order:

(a) Upon request of the National Federation of Federal Employees (Ind.), Local 1724, resume and continue to engage in further negotiations of a basic negotiated agreement.

(b) Post at its facility at the Utah Army National Guard, Salt Lake City, Utah, copies of the attached notice marked "Appendix" on forms to be furnished by the Assistant Secretary of Labor for Labor-Management Relations. RECOMMENDED DECISION AND ORDER

Statement of the Case

This proceeding heard at Salt Lake City, Utah, on May 19, 1977, arises under Executive Order 11491, as amended (hereinafter referred to as the Order) pursuant to a Notice of Hearing issued May 5, 1977, by the Acting Regional Administrator, United States Department of Labor, Kansas City Region.

The proceeding was initiated by the filing of a complaint by the National Federation of Federal Employees, Local 1724, (hereinafter referred to as Complainant) against the Utah Army National Guard (hereinafter referred to as Respondent) on September 2, 1976.

The gravamen of the charge is that Respondent violated section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order by its failure to recognize a former employee as Complainant's chief representative. Conceding Complainant's right to appoint its own representatives, 1/ Respondent contends that such has been waived by language contained in an instrument designated "Ground Rules for Negotiation." 2/

At the hearing the parties were afforded full opportunity to be heard, to adduce evidence, to examine and cross-examine witnesses and to make oral argument. Briefs were subsequently filed and have been considered.

Based upon the preponderance of the evidence of record in this case, having observed the witnesses and assessed their credibility, I make the within findings, conclusions and recommendations.

In substance it is my opinion that Complainant, not clearly and unmistakably having waived its fundamental

1/ In its September 17, 1976, answer to the Complaint, Respondent states: "We fully recognize the rights of the Union to choose their negotiators knowing that it is a long and established policy in government and the private sector."

2/ Respondent's contention in said answer that the Ground Rules (and therefore the language relied upon) "were entered into with very little discussion or debate" is not beneficial to its cause.

right to select its representatives, Respondent having refused to recognize its Chief Negotiator stands in violation of the Executive Order.

Preliminary Matter

To the extent that Respondent's pre-trial motion to dismiss is a request for summary dismissal, said motion is denied; to the extent that it constitutes Respondent's ultimate prayer for relief on the merits, a recommendation of its disposition is made hereinbelow.

Findings of Fact

1. Complainant has, and at all times material hereto had, exclusive recognition as representative of Respondent's non-supervisory employees.

2. Since the testimony in the area of dates is less than satisfactory, it has been necessary to rely also upon the unobjected to representations made in Complainant's brief. I accordingly find that the parties' first collective bargaining agreement became effective on December 2, 1974, with a term of 18 months, with automatic one-year renewal periods thereafter. Thus, the first term would run in June 1976; the agreement currently continues in effect as a consequence of Respondent's refusal to bargain out of which this action arises.

3. On July 9, 1974, the parties had executed a memorandum of understanding as "Ground Rules for Negotiation" of the aforementioned basic agreement. The evidence indicates that the parties were then in possession of sample written materials from which the 1974 Ground Rules language likely in large part was adopted and that technical assistance was furnished through the participation of Complainant's national representative. Provision was made for the presence of such technical advisor by Article I(c) of the Ground Rules; and, by agreement of the parties, he actively participated in both discussions on the Ground Rules and on the basic agreement.

4. (a) Article I of said Ground Rules identifies those individuals constituting Management's negotiating committee and those individuals constituting the Union's negotiating committee, the latter all being employees.

(b) Article VI(a) of said Ground rules records that "The five members of the Union negotiating team are Utah Army National Guard employees ... ", and authorizes the use of a stated amount of official time by said employees in negotiations.

5. Early in March 1976, the Union requested renegotiation of the basic agreement. The 1974 Ground Rules are silent as to term, and I do not believe that either party contemplated they would control all contract negotiations in perpetuum. I find and conclude that said Ground Rules had no prospective life beyond negotiation of the 1974 basic agreement and such further incidental negotiations as may have been necessary thereon; but that said Ground Rules did not govern the procedures to be used in developing a new set of Ground Rules for the major renegotiation of the basic agreement requested in 1976.

6. On April 23, 1976, the parties executed a memorandum of understanding designated "Ground Rules for Negotiation" at Article VI(a) of which is the language on which Respondent relies.

7. As pertinent hereto, Articles I and VI(a) of the 1976 Ground Rules were copied verbatim from the corresponding sections of the 1974 Ground Rules:

(a) Article I of the 1976 Ground Rules identifies those individuals constituting Management's negotiating committee but does not set forth the composition of the Union's committee, it having been agreed that such information would be furnished at a later time.

(b) Nevertheless, Article VI(a) of said Ground Rules again records that "The five members of the Union negotiating team are Utah Army National Guard employees ... ", and again authorizes the utilization of official time for negotiations.

8. The following testimony of Respondent's sole witness^{3/} places in perspective the interrelationship between Articles I and VI(a):

Q. And will you tell me how Article VI came to exist?

3/ I credit the testimony of Respondent's sole witness who acted as its Assistant Chief Negotiator in 1976. Such was delivered in a forthright and candid manner and displayed his command of the sequential operative facts.

A. We received, I think some sample Ground Rules from the Civil Service Commission, and we developed our Ground Rules from that,

Q. Was there any discussion in 1974 prior to the time the then Ground Rules were signed off concerning the intent and implications of Article VI?

A. I recall none. One of the things was that both parties gave the names of their team at that time, and all members of that team were Utah National Guard employees at the time in '74 (Tr. 98, 99).

And referring to negotiation of the 1976 Ground Rules--

Q. Was anything said about Paragraph VI a. at that time?

A. No. I recall no conversation at all about the agreement itself.

Q. During the negotiations on the 22nd of April, was anything said about the provision in Paragraph VI a. dealing with National Guard membership?

A. No, it wasn't (Tr. 79).

Q. And as well with regard to the other lettered portions of Article VI with the exception of the language questioned here in Paragraph a., all of the other provisions of Article VI deal, do they not, with time and attendance and those sorts of things?

A. They do.

Q. Is it correct that Article I deals primarily with the composition and function of the negotiating teams both in the 1974 and in the 1976 version?

A. It does.

Q. Would you like to have a copy of that, Colonel, '76? You did respond to my question?

A. I did, I said I agree with that.

Q. Will you explain to me, Colonel, why a matter having to do with composition is included in Article VI rather than in Article I, if it is intended to have to do with composition of the team?

A. No, I can't. It would probably be better put in Article I (Tr. 100).

Q. Now, conjecturally for a moment, suppose there had been a discussion, a full-blown discussion at the time of the 1976 negotiations in which the Union insisted that it had the right to appoint anybody it wanted to its own negotiating team, be it an employee or non-employee, what would have happened?

A. We would negotiated that.

Q. And if ultimately they had not backed off that position, what would you have done as chief negotiator?

A. Well, hopefully we would bargain for something that would be helpful to us if we had given in on that situation (Tr. 101).

9. The process by virtue of which the respective Articles were constructed, thus having been revealed, counsel for Respondent in closing argument was prompted to state with regard to the language of Article VI(a) upon which its position is dependent:

I don't think the record shows that provision, per se, restricts it to National Guard employees was, in fact, negotiated. My use of that term is probably too broad in that context.

The provision existed in both the '74 agreement and the '76 agreement. I think you can say that it was negotiated by implication since it existed and nobody raised it, therefore, nobody was concerned about it. So, it simply found its way into the '76 agreement.

Whether it was negotiated prior to '74, I think, might be an open question. But, I think there has been such a lapse of time and the fact that it existed in both agreements, one can say by silence, the negotiation, if anything, that is a valid provision (Tr. 109).

10. Accordingly, I find as fact that there was no prior discussion either on the 1974 or the 1976 Ground Rules of the intent of the parties or the purpose or implications of Article VI(a) (Tr. 23, 24, 46, 56, 79, 98, 99, 109).

While the issue has been raised, the purpose of Article VI(a) as subjectively understood or intended by Respondent is not here of significant consequence; in any event it is difficult to make a definitive finding of Fact thereon. As I have elsewhere herein noted, Respondent's witness testified forthrightly and credibly; and it runs through his testimony that Respondent would like to negotiate local issues with local representatives" (Tr. 86, 92, 96). This I believe and find as fact; however, it does not speak to the question of whether or not Respondent intended Article VI(a) to achieve that purpose at the time it was inserted in either set of Ground Rules.

Even in response to the direct question from Respondent's counsel, the testimony is less than might be expected of its chief witness. The manner in which the response is couched leaves room for doubt:

Q. For what reason is that provision inserted in the Ground Rules, do you know?

A. Our feeling is that as Management, that we would prefer to negotiate local issues with local people, local representatives of the unit, and we had taken that attack in '74, and we felt the same way in '76 (Tr. 73).

If I were required to make a finding thereon, I would find that while Respondent then held such preference, it did not contemplate or intend that Article VI(a) would be the instrumentality of accomplishing it. From all of the evidence bearing on the point, and having had the opportunity of observing the witness as he gave the testimony I shall refer to, I do not believe that Respondent prospectively intended Article VI(a) to have the limiting effect it now argues. I believe that only upon being told who Union's negotiator was did Respondent's Chief Negotiator realize that Article VI(a) could be used as an argument. In this connection, he testified:

... I asked then, "Have you decided on your team or your chief negotiator?" I think Mr. Blair turned and said, "Oh, don't you know who the team is?" I said, "No, I don't." He says, "Don't you know who the chief negotiator is," and I said, "No." He said, "Well, Tom here is going to be the chief negotiator."

I thought about that for a few minutes, and then I presented, I had a set of Ground Rules in my desk, so I got them out and looked at them to make sure of what I was thinking about. I read through what I was thinking about, which was Article VI a. in question, and I said, "Tom can't be the chief negotiator, he is not a Utah National Guard employee." I showed him that, and Tom came over to my desk and read the thing and said, "You are not going to hold us to that, are you," and I said, "Yes, we are" (Tr. 82).

This seems to me to be the reaction of one who has just realized there to be "fine print" upon which reliance might be placed and not of one who on two separate occasions had such contractual language purposefully inserted.

11. Relying on the language of Ground Rule Article VI(a) Respondent, on July 26, 1976, at the first negotiation session on the basic agreement refused, and continues to refuse, to bargain with Complainant by refusing to recognize its duly appointed Chief Negotiator, a former employee.

Conclusions of Law

1. The Assistant Secretary has jurisdiction to adjudicate this matter (A/SLMR No. 417 at footnote 2).

2. Complainant Union's right to select its representatives for the purpose of negotiation is fundamental; absent a clear and unmistakable waiver, a labor organization holding exclusive recognition has the right to select its own representatives when dealing with Management (Internal Revenue Service Omaha District Office, Respondent and National Treasury Employees Union (NTEU) and Chapter No. 003, Complainant, A/SLMR No. 417).

3. While Complainant must prove its charge by a preponderance of the evidence, it being conceded that Respondent in fact refused to recognize Complainant's chief representative, there shifts to it the burden of coming forward with evidence sufficient to support the affirmative defense that Complainant has waived its right to select its representatives in a manner "clear and unmistakable". It has not carried this burden.^{4/}

4. There appears nothing in the history of the negotiations on either set of Ground Rules from which it reasonably can be argued either that Complainant intended to waive its right to appoint negotiators of its choice or that Respondent intended to attenuate that right by inclusion of the language in question. Furthermore, even if the determination were to turn on an analysis of the bare language alone, Respondent would not prevail, for the Article VI(a) word "are" is not of prospective application.

5. I conclude that Article VI(a) exists in the subject Ground Rules for the purpose of authorizing the use of official time by employees during negotiations and not for the purpose of limiting the composition of the Union's negotiating committee.

In reaching this conclusion, I have taken into consideration inter alia the structure of the Ground Rules and the specific Articles involved, the lack of actual negotiation on the critical Article and, particularly, the forthright and credible testimony of Respondent's Assistant Chief Negotiator in 1974 and its Chief Negotiator in 1976 (Tr. 100) from which I infer that notwithstanding the titles given the respective Articles, that were any limitation on the composition of Complainant's negotiating committee actually contemplated such would have been placed in Ground Rule Article I rather than Article VI.

In 1974, Article VI(a) correctly reported (by reference back to Article I) that all five members of the Union's negotiating team were employees. In 1976, without discussion, the same language was perpetuated; however, reference back to Article I shows it to be silent as to the identities of the Union's negotiating committee. The Union not yet being ready to commit itself in Article I as to its team's composition, the parties, having agreed that such could be disclosed at a later time, proceeded to execute the Ground Rules.

^{4/} ALJ instructions to counsel pursuant to the Acting Regional Administrator's May 5, 1977, letter to the parties (Tr. 5 and Joint Exh. 1).

Article VI(a) has no greater significance or function in the 1976 Ground Rules than it did in the 1974 Ground Rules in which it quite obviously was included reperto-rially rather than restrictively. It was perpetuated in the 1976 Ground Rules without consideration and was not then intended or understood by either party to constitute a commitment by the Union or a waiver of its right to select its representatives.

If any fault can be assessed against Complainant, it lies in that its representatives were insufficiently scrupulous draftsmen as to have excluded language which might later be misinterpreted to their disadvantage should it later prove, as it did, factually untrue. Given that such language could justifiably have given rise to an assumption by Respondent and caused it to be misled, there cannot be held to arise from such circum-stantiality the purposeful, unequivocal, unambiguous abandonment that must characterize a clear and unmistakable waiver of the most valuable and fundamental right of selection by the Union of its own representatives.

6. Accordingly, I conclude that Complainant did not, by executing the 1976 Ground Rules, clearly and unmistakably or otherwise waive its fundamental right to select its representatives; and it continues free to appoint non-employees to negotiate on its behalf if it so chooses.

7. It having been concluded that Complainant has made no clear and unmistakable waiver of its right to select its representatives, it is unnecessary to determine:

(a) Whether or not by permitting a non-employee to participate in negotiations on the first basic contract, Management abandoned its right to rely on the alleged waiver. However, if such determination were required, I would conclude that it had not on the facts in finding 3 hereinabove.

(b) Whether or not Management, by negotiating with the Union's chief representative, then known by it to be a non-employee, at the time of the negotiation of the 1976 Ground Rules, abandoned its right to assert the alleged waiver. However, if such determination were required, I would conclude that it did not on the facts in finding 5 hereinabove.

(c) Whether or not Management had abandoned its right to assert the waiver by failing promptly to advise Complainant of its reliance on Article VI(a) after the written notice of June 4, 1976, of the composition of its negotiating committee. However, if such determination were required, I would conclude that it did not on the finding that Management's Chief Negotiator upon receiving prior oral advice that the Union's Chief Negotiator would be a non-employee promptly orally objected and that the time delay between the first written notice and the first written objection does not establish a withdrawal from such position.

(d) Whether or not the individual objected to was duly selected as a Union representative (either Chief Negotiator or otherwise) prior to the 1976 Ground Rules negotiations and, if so, whether or not Respondent was so aware. However, if such determinations were required, I would find that the Union's representatives, including said individual, were selected prior to the 1976 Ground Rules negotiations at a point in time when he still was an employee but that Management was unaware thereof. Said selections were subject to change and, in fact, as reflected in the June 4 and July 4 written notices from Complainant to Respondent, one substitution, of no moment here, was made. Respondent's first advice of the identity of any of Complainant's negotiators was received in late May 1976 orally as aforesaid.

8. Finally I conclude that Respondent's refusal to recognize Complainant's chief representative and its attempt to control the selection of Complainant's chief representative constitute, in effect, an attempt to interfere improperly in Complainant's internal affairs, being violative of section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order as both an interference with assured employee rights and an improper refusal to negotiate with the duly appointed representatives of Complainant, the exclusive bargaining representative of Respondent's employees.

RECOMMENDATION

Having concluded that Respondent stands in violation of section 19(a)(1) and section 19(a)(6) of the Order, I recommend to the Assistant Secretary of Labor for Labor-Management Relations the following:

1. That Respondent's motion to dismiss be denied.
2. That Complainant's prayer for relief contained in its post-trial brief " ... that the agency be ordered to accept as the final new contract whatever proposals NFFE, Local 1724, presents within 60 days from the decision in this case, subject to section 15 review by the agency ahead ... " be denied as being overly broad and unnecessary to meet the ends of justice in this case.

3. That an Order be entered pursuant to section 6(b) of Executive Order 11491, as amended, and section 203.26(b) of the Regulations directing that the Utah Army National Guard, Salt Lake City, Utah, shall cease and desist from:

(a) Refusing to recognize the chief representative designated by National Federation of Federal Employees, Local 1724, the exclusive representative of its employees,

(b) Interfering with, restraining, or coercing its employees by refusing to recognize the chief representative designated by National Federation of Federal Employees, Local 1724, the exclusive representative of its employees,

(c) In any like or related manner interfering with, restraining, or coercing its employees in the exercise of rights assured by Executive Order 11491, as amended.

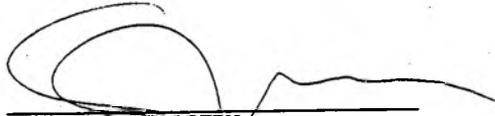

4. That the Assistant Secretary further direct Respondent to take the following affirmative actions to effectuate the purposes and policies of the Order.

(a) Upon request, recognize the chief representative designated by National Federation of Federal Employees, Local 1724, and the other duly appointed members of its negotiating committee.

(b) Upon request forthwith enter into contract negotiations with the negotiating committee designated by National Federation of Federal Employees, Local 1724.

(c) Post at the Utah Army National Guard facility, Salt Lake City, Utah, copies of the attached notice marked "Appendix" on forms to be furnished by the Assistant Secretary of Labor for Labor-Management Relations. Upon receipt of such forms, they shall be signed by the Commanding Officer and shall be posted and maintained by him for 60 consecutive days thereafter, in conspicuous places, including all bulletin boards and other places where notices to employees are customarily posted. The Commanding Officer shall take reasonable steps to insure that such notices are not altered, defaced, or covered by any other material.

(d) Pursuant to section 203.27 of the Regulations, notify the Assistant Secretary, in writing, within 20 days from the date of the Order, what steps have been taken to comply therewith.

DECISION AND ORDER

This case involved an unfair labor practice complaint filed by the Tidewater Virginia Federal Employees Metal Trades Council AFL-CIO (Council) alleging that the Respondent violated Section 19(a)(1) and (2) of the Order by responding, through an agent, to an inquiry by a personnel staffing and classifications specialist, concerning a unit member's qualification for selection for a position, that the employee involved was a union steward and spent a lot of time away from the job without permission. The Respondent contended that the agent, the employee's temporary supervisor, was acting in direct conflict with existing management policy and that it had remedied all possibility of prejudice to the offended employee. The Respondent further contended that it had taken steps to foreclose any repetition of such error in the future.

On September 12, 1977, Administrative Law Judge Peter McC. Giesey issued his Recommended Decision and Order in the above-entitled proceeding, finding that the Respondent had not engaged in the unfair labor practices alleged in the complaint and recommending that the complaint be dismissed in its entirety. No exceptions were filed to the Administrative Law Judge's Recommended Decision and Order.

The Administrative Law Judge noted that, upon discovery of the offending material, the information complained of was deleted from consideration, replaced with a favorable evaluation from the employee's former supervisor, and the employee was re-ranked by an entirely new promotion panel. He further noted that the Shipyard commander immediately published a memorandum to supervisors designed to avoid repetition of similar occurrences in future evaluations. Accordingly, he concluded that the Respondent did not violate Section 19(a)(1) and (2) of the Order and recommended that the complaint be dismissed in its entirety.

The Assistant Secretary has reviewed the rulings of the Administrative Law Judge made at the hearing and finds that no prejudicial error was committed. The rulings are hereby affirmed. Upon consideration of the Administrative Law Judge's Recommended Decision and Order and the entire record in this case, and noting particularly that no exceptions were filed, I hereby adopt the Administrative Law Judge's findings, conclusions and recommendations. 1/

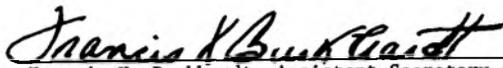

Noting particularly the absence of exceptions, the Assistant Secretary adopted the findings, conclusions and recommendations of the Administrative Law Judge and ordered that the complaint be dismissed.

1/ In reaching the disposition herein, I find it unnecessary to pass upon the conclusions of the Administrative Law Judge with respect to the matter set forth on page 5 of his Recommended Decision and Order inasmuch as such matter was not alleged in either the pre-complaint charge or the complaint.

Recommended Decision and Order

This is a proceeding brought under Executive Order 11491, as amended (hereafter, "the Order") by Tidewater Virginia Federal Employees Metal Trades Council (AFL-CIO) (hereafter, "Council") against Norfolk Naval Shipyard. Council complains that Shipyard violated sections 19(a)(1) and (2) of the Order 1/ by responding,

1/ Sec. 19. Unfair labor practices. (a) Agency management shall not-

(1) interfere with, restrain, or coerce an employee in the exercise of the rights assured by this Order;

(2) encourage or discourage membership in a labor organization by discrimination in regard to hiring, tenure, promotion or other conditions of employment.

through an agent, to an inquiry by a personnel staffing and classifications specialist concerning a unit member's qualification for selection for a position that:

He is a union steward, spends a lot of time away [from his] job without permission.

A hearing was held in Norfolk, Virginia on February 9, 1977. Briefly, the record shows the following.

Statement of the Case

The facts are undisputed.

In June, 1976, 2/ a personnel staffing and classifications specialist in Washington, D.C. was engaged in gathering information in order to rate 3/ applicants for an advertised position as planner and estimator. He called a supervisor in connection with an applicant who was a member of the appropriate unit represented by Council. The supervisor replied in the way complained of. 4/

Shortly thereafter, the applicant inquired of the personnel specialist concerning the status of his application and was told of the supervisor's comment. Council filed an unfair labor practice charge as summarized, supra.

Shipyard investigated the charge and answered it in July. Inter alia, the reply stated that the supervisor's offending comment had been deleted from the performance appraisal and that

2/ All dates are 1976.

3/ The record shows that a "job element rating sheet for inservice placement" is used for this purpose. Applicants are assigned numerical values in each of the "job elements" (required skill or knowledge, or potential), and the total points attained result in a "rating" of "highly qualified", "qualified", or "not qualified".

4/ While the language used may not be set forth exactly, there is no question that the supervisor coupled a disparaging remark about the applicant with the statement that he was a union steward.

a memorandum setting forth applicable policy had been circulated to all shipyard supervisors. 5/

Meanwhile, a former supervisor's appraisal of the applicant was substituted for the offending comments of the active supervisor, the applicant was re-rated by a panel different from the earlier panel, and the applicant was rated "qualified". Because only the names of applicants rated "highly qualified" were forwarded to the selecting official, the applicant in question was not considered for the sought position.

5/ The memorandum from the Shipyard commander, a copy of which was attached to the Shipyard's answer, is as follows;

1. Recently, I have received information which indicates there may exist some misunderstanding on the part of supervisors as regards to the marking of performance appraisals for promotional purposes of properly designated union representatives. This memorandum shall serve as guidance to those supervisors requiring it.

2. The recognized activities of employees who serve as representatives of labor organizations (such activities may include representing employees in the presentation of grievances, investigating bona fide employee dissatisfactions, negotiating with management officials, meeting with management and so on) are neither a part of nor related to the official duties of such employees. Such activities are not subject to appraisal for promotion purposes and such activities shall not be cited or referred to in any manner as justifying or supporting, in whole or in part, supervisory judgements of an employee's performance. The assessment of a union representative for promotional purposes will therefore be consistent with his on the job performance and represent a sound and realistic and fair appraisal of his work.

Findings of Fact and Conclusions of Law

Having considered the entire record including the testimony, 6/ exhibits and brief of respondent and having observed the demeanor of the witnesses, I make the following findings of fact, conclusions of law and recommended decision and order based thereon.

The facts are as set forth in the statement of the case.

Shipyard argues that a violation of the order is not shown on this record because anti-union animus and intent to discouragage union membership has not been shown. I disagree. It is a legal commonplace that persons intend the reasonably foreseeable consequence of their actions. To permit the protected activity of an employee to constitute a negative consideration in selection for promotion violates the Order. E.g., Department of the Army, Fort Benning, Georgia, A/SLMR 515; Internal Revenue Service, Wilmington, Delaware, A/SLMR 516; Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation, New York Region, A/SLMR 580.

However, I do agree with Shipyard's position that this sort of violation never occurred in this case. Thus, it is undisputed that immediately upon discovery of the offending material and before evaluation of the employee's fitness for promotion, the information complained of was removed from consideration and a different - and favorable - report was substituted. Moreover, the Shipyard commander immediately published a memorandum designed to avoid repetition in future evaluations of the offending evaluation. It is equally significant that a long standing (March, 1975) memorandum detailed quantified credit to be afforded employees active in local union and Council affairs. Thus, it is plain that the supervisor who coupled disparagement of an employee with that employee's activity as a steward was acting in direct conflict with existing management policy. In view of this and of Shipyard's swift and effective action to remedy all possibility of prejudice to the offended employee and to foreclose any repetition of the supervisor's error, I agree with Shipyard that its action conformed with the purpose of the Order as set forth in the Study Committee Report and Recommendations, August, 1976, Which Led to the Issuance of Executive Order 11491, Labor-Management Relations in the Federal Service; p.69, U.S. Government Printing Office, FLRC 75-1(4/75). Moreover, were the Assistant Secretary to issue a remedial Order, in my opinion, he could do no better than to order Shipyard to do what it has already done.

6/ The transcript introduced each witness as "having been first duly warned." The transcript is corrected in each case by inserting "affirmed" vice "first duly warned."any

Finally, the record reflects a criticism of a union steward 7/ delivered by a supervisor during the course of a meeting between management and officials of the union. In this context, I believe that the record demonstrates that the remark was isolated, ambiguous (de minimis), and neither intended to, nor effective in discouraging protected activity. Such meetings are intended to allow a frank interchange and are frequently marked by rancor, misunderstanding, and inappropriate or even personally offensive statements. It is an understatement to say that this aspect of labor-management relations is commonly experienced in both the public and private sector - and is likely to continue. I note also that, although the incident was spread on this record and briefed by Shipyard, it is not alleged in the charge to constitute a separate violation of the Order.

Accordingly, I recommend that the Assistant Secretary dismiss the complaint in its entirety.

PURSUANT TO SECTION 6 OF EXECUTIVE ORDER 11491, AS AMENDED

A/SLMR No. 968

This case involved an unfair labor practice complaint filed by the Tidewater Virginia Federal Employees Metal Trades Council, AFL-CIO (Council) alleging that the Respondent violated Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order when management representatives refused to furnish information requested by the Council regarding an employee's grievance. The information requested by the Council was the identity of the informant who spotted the aggrieved employee receiving a traffic ticket off the Shipyard when the employee was officially "on-the-clock." The informant, who was a supervisor, reported the information to the employee's superiors who then sought and received a copy of the citation from the local police. Subsequently, pre-action investigation was conducted which resulted in the employee's suspension. The employee then filed a grievance over his suspension. After the second step of the grievance had been processed, the Respondent furnished the Complainant with the information sought. The Respondent contended its actions did not constitute a violation of the Order, and that the complaint in this matter was barred by Section 19(d) of the Order in that the denial of the requested information was the subject of the aggrieved employee's grievance conducted pursuant to the parties' negotiated agreement.

The Administrative Law Judge found that Section 19(d) did not bar the instant complaint but that, under the particular circumstances of the case, the Respondent had not violated the Order. Accordingly, he recommended that the complaint be dismissed in its entirety.

Noting particularly the absence of exceptions, the Assistant Secretary adopted the Administrative Law Judge's findings, conclusions, and recommendations and ordered that the complaint be dismissed.

DECISION AND ORDER

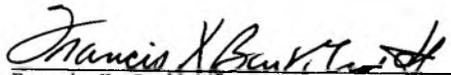

On September 12, 1977, Administrative Law Judge Peter McC. that the Shipyard violated sections 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order 1/ when management representatives "refused to furnish the Metal Trades Council vital information regarding [an employee's grievance]."

A hearing was held in Norfolk, Virginia, on February 9, 1977. Briefly, the record shows the following.

Statement of the Case

The Council is the exclusive collective bargaining for certain employees of the Shipyard in an appropriate unit. The employee whose grievance is the subject of this charge is a member of that unit.

On or about July 31, 1975, a "pre-action investigation" was commenced in the case of an employee who management had reason to believe had been away from his work-place on private business during a period when he was "on the clock" (being paid) and outside of the time designated as meal time. A "pre-action investigation" is commenced in instances where the employee's immediate supervisor, after informally consulting with an employee who he believes has violated a work-rule, recommends disciplinary action to the general foreman II ("chief quartermen") who appoints a supervisor to conduct the investigation and make recommendations based upon the information discovered.

In the instant case, a supervisory employee observed an employee receiving a traffic ticket on a city street during working hours. He informed the general foreman II. This supervisor, after ascertaining that the employee had not been granted an excused absence during the time of the observed incident, obtained a copy of the traffic citation from the town (Portsmouth) police. The citation indicated that it had been issued during working hours at a place outside the shipyard. A charge was drawn up and signed by the general foreman II and given, together with the copy of the traffic citation, to a general foreman I who was instructed to conduct a pre-action investigation.

1/ Agency management shall not -

(1) Interfere with, restrain, or coerce an employee in the exercise of the rights assured by this Order;

(6) refuse to consult, confer, or negotiate with a labor organization as required by this Order.

Recommended Decision and Order

This is a proceeding brought under Executive Order 11491, as amended (hereafter, "the Order") by Tidewater Virginia Federal Employees Metal Trades Council, (AFL-CIO) (hereafter, "the Council") against Norfolk Naval Shipyard ("the Shipyard"). Council complains

The employee charged with the infraction requested and was given representation by the Council. He denied the charge and offered no further information or evidence corroborating his denial. 2/

During the pre-action investigation and the review of the recommendation of disciplinary action that followed, the charged employee's representative repeatedly requested that he be furnished the name of the "accuser" or informant. The supervisor conducting the pre-action investigation did not know that there was an informant and made no attempt to find out. The reviewing official knew the identity of the informer but refused to reveal his name. He testified that both he and the supervisor who had signed the charge had unilaterally determined that, because "there had been . . . violence in the shipyard . . . employees striking supervisors, employees striking employees, . . . threatening phone calls to my home [,]. . . it was best. . . as long as we felt it was not necessary for the union to know who had seen [the charged employee], we shouldn't reveal [the informer's identity]."

When the reviewing supervisor confirmed the disciplinary action, the disciplined employee filed a grievance. The grievance was processed through the second step before management asked the informant (who had been assured that his identity would not be revealed) if he objected to the disclosure of his identity. He agreed to the disclosure and the grievant was given the information.

Findings of Fact and Conclusion of Law

The facts are as set forth above. All witnesses were credible and no material discrepancies appear in the testimony. 3/

2/ It is undisputed that the chief steward who advised the charged employee and the steward appointed to represent him, "instructed [the accused employee] not to . . . inform any[one]" of the fact that two fellow employees were with him when he received the traffic citation.

3/ I note that the person who typed the record consistently introduced the testimony of each witness as "having been first duly warned. . . ." The record is now corrected in each case by inserting "affirmed" vice "duly warned."

Having considered the entire record, including the testimony, exhibits and briefs and having observed the demeanor of the witnesses, I make the following findings of fact, conclusions of law and recommended decision and order based thereon.

Council urges that the record reveals actions on the part of agents of the Shipyard which violate section 19(a) (6) of the Order's requirement that it negotiate and consult in good faith and cites the terms of its collective bargaining agreement, viz.;

All personnel involved in a disciplinary action investigation or grievance procedures thereto shall not conceal any material facts relevant to such proceedings at any time.

Sic, Joint Exhibit 1, p. 72, Article 31, section 4.

I agree that the section of the collective bargaining agreement cited is wholly consistent with and admirably designed to further the responsible performance of mutual obligations under the Order. I do not agree that the facts on this record demonstrate a breach of good faith on the part of the Shipyard.

Nor do I agree with Shipyard's position that section 19(d) of the Order 4/ is applicable. Such a charge as this, if established, would constitute interference with rights assured by section 10(e) of the Order. E.g., Dallas Naval Air Station, A/SLMR No. 510; S.S.A. Kansas City Payment Center A/SLMR No. 411. Moreover, assuming that section 19(d) could be applicable, the Council did not invoke the grievance procedure in the matter at issue. Thus, section 19(d) does not preclude these proceedings under the Order. Internal Revenue Service, A/SLMR No. 642. Cf., Department of Defense, State of New Jersey, A/SLMR No. 539 and authority cited.

4/ (d) Issues which can properly be raised under an appeals procedure may not be raised under this section. Issues which can be raised under a grievance procedure may, in the discretion of the aggrieved party, be raised under that procedure or the complaint procedure under this section, but not under both procedures. Appeals or grievance decisions shall not be construed as unfair labor practice decisions under this Order nor as precedent for such decisions. All complaints under this section that cannot be resolved by the parties shall be filed with the Assistant Secretary.

Shipyard also argues that the charged employee received all the information to which he was entitled. I agree in part. First, management reasonably concluded that the copy of the traffic citation sufficiently evidenced the breach of work rules and informed the employee of time, place and circumstance.

Moreover, the assertions of management employees concerning the bases for their apprehension of retaliatory violence against the informant supervisor are undisputed on this record. I believe that management reasonably concluded that the informant's identity was unnecessary to the charged employee's defense and that, in view of the atmosphere of the shipyard at the time, it was both prudent and reasonable to refrain from revealing the identity of the informer. Moreover, the record demonstrates the good faith of these management employees following the second stage of the proceedings. At this point, although still convinced that the informant's identity was not necessary to the charged employee's defense, they took the generous position that they would no longer "hold out" this information in view of the employee's representative's insistence. It is significant that at no time did management conceal the existence of an informant, yet council admittedly concealed the fact that two fellow employees had been present in the charged employee's automobile when the traffic citation was issued. In these circumstances, it would appear that Shipyard's defense of pari delicto or its variation of an unclean hands doctrine understates the absence of good faith on the part of Council. Council, in bringing this case, is seeking to turn adversity to virtue in a manner which emphasizes the unattractive nature of its case. However that may be, the information sought by Council was provided as soon as Shipyard received the permission of the informant who was being protected from physical threat. Thus, no lasting prejudice was suffered by the charged employee and no violation of the Order occurred. Vandenberg Air Force Base, A/SLMR No. 410.

Accordingly, I recommend that the Assistant Secretary dismiss this complaint in its entirety.

UNITED STATES DEPARTMENT OF LABOR
ASSISTANT SECRETARY FOR LABOR-MANAGEMENT RELATIONS
SUMMARY OF DECISION AND ORDER OF THE ASSISTANT SECRETARY
PURSUANT TO SECTION 6 OF EXECUTIVE ORDER 11491, AS AMENDED

PENNSYLVANIA ARMY AND AIR NATIONAL GUARD
A/SLMR No. 969

This case involved an unfair labor practice complaint filed by the Pennsylvania State Council, Association of Civilian Technicians (Complainant) alleging that the Respondent violated Section 19(a)(1), (2), (5), and (6) of the Order by changing its policy regarding the use of military titles by civilian technicians in completing repair records, without first negotiating with the Complainant. The complaint also alleged that the Respondent's actions violated an earlier settlement agreement between the parties.

The Administrative Law Judge recommended that the complaint be dismissed in its entirety. In reaching this conclusion, he found, among other things, that the memorandum did not constitute a change in working conditions, and noted that even if it did constitute a change in working conditions, the Respondent had followed procedures for effecting such a change as set out in the prior settlement between the parties. Finally, he noted that even if the provisions of the agreement were breached, such a breach was not the type which would constitute a violation of Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order.

While agreeing with the Administrative Law Judge's recommendation to dismiss the Section 19(a)(2) and (5) allegations, the Assistant Secretary found that the Respondent's conduct improperly constituted a change in working conditions in violation of Section 19(a)(1) and (6). In this regard, the Assistant Secretary found that by issuing its memorandum of April 19, 1976, the Respondent unilaterally established what had been an ambiguous, irregularly enforced personnel policy covering unit employees without affording their exclusive representative the opportunity to bargain on such matter and that the parties' earlier settlement agreement did not preclude the utilization of the unfair labor practice procedures.

Under these circumstances, the Assistant Secretary issued an appropriate remedial order.

DECISION AND ORDER

On August 25, 1977, Administrative Law Judge Milton Kramer issued his Recommended Decision and Order in the above-entitled proceeding, finding that the Respondent had not engaged in the unfair labor practices alleged in the complaint and recommending that the complaint be dismissed in its entirety. Thereafter, the Complainant filed exceptions with respect to the Administrative Law Judge's Recommended Decision and Order.

The Assistant Secretary has reviewed the rulings of the Administrative Law Judge made at the hearing and finds that no prejudicial error was committed. The rulings are hereby affirmed. Upon consideration of the Administrative Law Judge's Recommended Decision and Order and the entire record in the subject case, including the Complainant's exceptions, I hereby adopt the Administrative Law Judge's findings, conclusions and recommendations, only to the extent consistent herewith.

The Administrative Law Judge concluded that the Respondent had not violated the Order when it issued a memorandum requiring civilian technicians to include their military rank on repair records. In reaching this conclusion, he found, among other things, that the memorandum in question did not constitute a change in working conditions, and noted that, even if it did, the Respondent had followed procedures for effecting such a change as set out in a prior settlement between the parties. Finally, he noted that even if the provisions of the agreement were breached, such a breach was not the type which would constitute a violation of Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order.

While I agree with the Administrative Law Judge's recommendation that the Section 19(a)(2) and (5) allegations of the instant complaint should be dismissed, I find that, under the particular circumstances of this case, the Respondent's conduct herein constituted an improper unilateral change in employee working conditions and thereby violated Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order. 1/ Thus, it is undisputed that the purpose of the memorandum involved herein was to clarify the Respondent's position on the use of military titles, a subject which previously has been found to be within the ambit of Section 11(a) of the Order. 2/ In this regard, the evidence establishes that if there was any policy prior to the memorandum, the Respondent's attempts to enforce such "policy" were irregular and ambiguous. Thus, confusion over the issue was so widespread that the officer who issued the memorandum in question had himself used his civilian grade in completing at least one document. In this context, I find that by issuing the memorandum herein, the Respondent unilaterally established what heretofore had been an ambiguous, irregularly enforced personnel policy covering unit employees without affording their exclusive representative the opportunity to bargain on such matter. 3/

Under these circumstances, I conclude that the Respondent's unilateral change in working conditions, resulting from its memorandum of April 19, 1976, was violative of Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order.

ORDER

Pursuant to Section 6(b) of Executive Order 11491, as amended, and Section 203.26(b) of the Regulations, the Assistant Secretary of Labor for Labor-Management Relations hereby orders that the Pennsylvania Army and Air National Guard shall:

- 1/ In my view, the record does not support a finding that the parties' earlier settlement agreement or subsequent conduct constituted a clear and unmistakable waiver of the Complainant's right under the Order to seek redress under the unfair labor practice procedures with respect to the matter in question. Cf. NASA, Kennedy Space Center, Kennedy Space Center, Florida, 2 A/SLMR 566, A/SLMR No. 223 (1972).
- 2/ New York Army and Air National Guard, Albany, New York, 4 A/SLMR 681, A/SLMR No. 441 (1974).
- 3/ See New Mexico Air National Guard, Department of Military Affairs, Office of the Adjutant General, Sante Fe, New Mexico, 4 A/SLMR 175, A/SLMR No. 362 (1974). Compare Alabama Air National Guard, Montgomery, Alabama, A/SLMR No. 895 (1977), where the complaint alleged 19(a)(1) and (6) violations based upon the alleged unilateral implementation of a program of more strict enforcement of existing rules. The complaint was dismissed because the directive involved therein was found not to constitute a change in enforcement policy but, rather, a reaffirmation of existing policy intended to ensure uniformity of enforcement.

1. Cease and desist from:

(a) Unilaterally implementing its memorandum issued on April 19, 1976, concerning the use of military titles by civilian technicians in the completion of repair records, without affording the Pennsylvania State Council, Association of Civilian Technicians, the opportunity to meet and confer, to the extent consonant with law and regulations, on the decision to change existing policy regarding use of titles.

(b) In any like or related manner interfering with, restraining, or coercing employees in the exercise of their rights assured by Executive Order 11491, as amended.

2. Take the following affirmative actions in order to effectuate the purposes and policies of Executive Order 11491, as amended:

(a) Rescind the memorandum of April 19, 1976, concerning the use of military titles by civilian technicians in the completion of repair records.

(b) Upon request, meet and confer with the Pennsylvania State Council, Association of Civilian Technicians, to the extent consonant with law and regulations, concerning any change in policy regarding the use of titles by civilian technicians.

(c) Post at all Pennsylvania Army and Air National Guard facilities and installations copies of the attached notice marked "Appendix" on forms to be furnished by the Assistant Secretary of Labor for Labor-Management Relations. Upon receipt of such forms, they shall be signed by the Commanding General, Department of Military Affairs, and shall be posted and maintained by him for 60 consecutive days thereafter, in conspicuous places, including all bulletin boards and other places where notices to employees are customarily posted. The Commanding General shall take reasonable steps to insure that such notices are not altered, defaced, or covered by any other material.

(d) Pursuant to Section 203.27 of the Regulations, notify the Assistant Secretary, in writing, within 30 days from the date of this order, as to what steps have been taken to comply herewith.

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED that the complaint, insofar as it alleges violations of Section 19(a)(2) and (5) of the Order be, and it hereby is, dismissed.

RECOMMENDED DECISION AND ORDER

Preliminary Statement

This case arises under Executive Order 11491 as amended. It was initiated by a complaint dated September 8, 1976 and filed September 10, 1976 alleging a violation of Sections 19(a) (1), (2), (5), and (6) of the Executive Order. The violation was alleged to consist of the Chief of Maintenance issuing a memorandum, without consultation with the recognized exclusive representative, requiring technicians, in signing a form showing that they had corrected a defect in equipment, to indicate their military grade. This was alleged also to constitute a violation of an agreement between the parties specifically providing that such a change would not be made without prior consultation. The Respondent filed a response dated September 16, 1976 admitting the action taken, arguing that it was not a change in working conditions and not in violation of the Executive Order, and requesting that the complaint be dismissed.

On November 24, 1976 the Regional Administrator issued a Notice of Hearing to be held in Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania, on February 3, 1977. There were several continuances on motion and Amended Notices of Hearing. A hearing was held in Pittsburgh on April 21, 1977. Both parties were represented, produced witnesses who were examined and cross-examined, offered exhibits which were received in evidence, made closing arguments, and filed briefs.

At the hearing the name of the Complainant in this proceeding, on motion and without objection, was changed as shown in the caption of this Recommended Decision.

FACTS

A statutory requirement for employment by the National Guard as a civilian technician is membership in the National Guard. 1/ Respondent's regulations at least since 1973 have provided that rules and customs of the military service be observed by technicians while performing technician duties just as though the technician were on duty in his military grade. 2/

Included among the duties of civilian technicians is the repair of defects in airplanes. In performing such operation Forms 781 are used. Air Force Form 781A is used to record the date a defect was discovered, who discovered it, what the defect was, who corrected it, the date he corrected it, and the like. 3/ The manner of using various forms used by civilian technicians, the responsibilities of the personnel involved, certain methodology in servicing airplanes, and the like are prescribed in "technical orders" issued by the Secretary of the Air Force.

The Technical Order here involved is TO 00-20-5. It provides that the minimum signature on Form 781A (and others) are the first name, middle initial, last name, and "grade". It has so provided since 1973. Several specific instructions in TO 00-20-5 direct that certain blocks in forms be filled with the signature and "grade" of the person who performed the particular function. Only two of them give an indication of what is meant by "grade", whether the civil service grade or military grade or rank. One of them, covering Form 781H (not involved in this case) provides that in filling out that form the crew chief shall enter the initial of his first name, his last name, and his grade and gives as an example "O. Weaver, SSgt". 4/ The other, applicable to Form 781A, the form here involved, also directs the crew chief to enter the initial of his first name, his last name, and grade in a particular box and gives as an example "M. Griffin, SSgt". 5/

1/ 32 U.S.C.A. § 709(b).
 3/ C. Exh. 9.

On October 1, 1974, the Chief of Maintenance of the 171st Maintenance Technicians, the group involved in this proceeding, in accordance with TO 00-20-5 issued a memorandum stating that the technician who performs or supervises the corrective action covered by Form 781A shall enter his first name, middle initial, last name, and grade on the form in the "corrected by" block.

Some of the civilian technicians in the 171st understood the term "grade" to mean wage grade and entered their name on Form 781A accordingly in the "corrected by" box. The majority of the technicians always entered their military grade, some of the remainder sometimes entered their military grade and sometimes entered their civilian grade, and some of the remainder always entered their civilian grade. Sometimes a supervisor told a technician who entered his civilian grade that he should enter his military grade, but no sanctions were imposed or threatened.

In 1976, a year and a half after the memorandum of October 1974, the Chief of Maintenance noticed the lack of uniformity in the way technicians entered their names in the "corrected by" box on Form 781A. On April 19, 1976 he issued a memorandum to the 171st stating that the references to "grade" in TO 00-20-5 and the examples given were references to military grade and that for uniformity only the military grade should be used. Before issuing the memorandum the Chief of Maintenance discussed it with the Chairman of the Complainant. The Chairman discussed it also with representatives of the Adjutant General's Office who took the position that that had been the rule and all the technicians should have been entering their military grade all the time. 6/

4/ R. Exh. 7, p. 2-7.
 6/ R. 23-24

On May 18, 1976 the Complainant filed an unfair labor practice charge with the Adjutant General contending that the memorandum of April 19, 1976 created a unilateral change in working conditions without first meeting and conferring with the Complainant, in violation of the Executive Order. On June 8, 1976 the Personnel Officer in the Adjutant General's Office replied denying that the April 19 memorandum changed working conditions, stating that the previous policy and oral instructions were to use the military grade, that a few technicians were not doing so, and that the memorandum was issued to achieve uniformity. 7/

The 171st Maintenance Technicians are stationed at the Greater Pittsburgh Airport. Also stationed at that Airport is the 112th. A similar situation arose with the 112th in 1974. In that unit a memorandum had been issued similar to the memorandum of April 19, 1976 in this case. A complaint alleging a violation of Section 19(a) of the Executive Order was filed and a hearing was scheduled. Case No. 20-5070(CA). The complaint was withdrawn after an agreement was entered into on October 29, 1975. That agreement was entered into by the Chairman of the Complainant and the Technician Personnel Officer of the Adjutant General. It provided that when a change in "terms and conditions of employment" was intended, sufficient notice would be given the Chairman of the Complainant to afford him the opportunity to negotiate on the matter with the Technician Personnel Officer, and in the event they could not resolve the matter "it may then be presented by ACT to the Deputy Adjutant General for his decision within 5 days." 8/

DISCUSSION AND CONCLUSIONS

There was no evidence whatsoever introduced concerning an alleged violation of Sections 19(a)(2) or (5) of the Executive Order. Those aspects of the complaint should be dismissed. There remains the allegation that Sections 19(a)(1) and (6) were violated by the Respondent's conduct described above.

Were this a case of first impression, I would recommend that the complaint be dismissed out-of-hand because the prefix or suffix one is directed to use with his name in a small box, on a particular form (AFTO Form 781A), to indicate who did the work to remedy a defect in some airplane equipment (so long as the prefix or suffix is not degrading or demeaning), is not a "working condition" within the meaning of Section 11(a) of the Executive Order, and hence a change directed by management in such a matter, without meeting and conferring with the exclusive representative, is not a unilateral change in established working conditions. Or if it is technically such a change, it is so inconsequential as not to warrant an unfair-labor-practice proceeding. If John Smith, a civilian employee working for the military who must be a member of the military branch by which he is employed as a civilian to be eligible for employment as a civilian, is directed to enter his name when he completes an assignment in a small box on AFTO Form 781A, it should not be a matter of any consequence whether he is directed to write his name without any prefix or suffix, or to use the prefix "Mr.", or the suffix "TSgt", or the suffix "WG 10" (assuming each of them is true).

But I am constrained by New York Army and Air National Guard and New York State Council, Association of Civilian Technicians, Inc., A/SLMR No. 441 (1974) to hold that the suffix one adds to one's name in filling out a prescribed form in the course of his employment is a working condition, and that a unilateral change in such suffix, without meeting and conferring with the exclusive representative, may, under certain circumstances, constitute a by-pass of the exclusive bargaining representative, be clearly inconsistent with an agency's obligations set forth in Section 11(a) of the Executive Order, thus constitute a violation of Sections 19(a)(6) of the Order, and also necessarily have a restraining influence on unit employees and a concomitant coercive effect on their rights assured by the Order in violation of Section 19(a)(1).

There remains to be considered whether this case is sufficiently analogous to the New York case to be governed by that case. I conclude it is not, both because of dissimilarities in the comparable underlying facts and because of a critical contractual difference.

In the New York case the requirement was that the technicians wear the clothing of the military, and the use of military rank in more or less formal conversation or written communication was construed by the Respondent as a corollary of the military uniform requirement. However, neither the specific requirement nor its corollary was strictly enforced, from its inception on January 1, 1969 to May 1971. There were three classes of technicians there involved; one class of about 300 and another of about 600 generally wore the uniform, while the third class of about 900 generally did not. The practice in using military titles varied considerably. Technicians "frequently" did not use military titles in discussions with fellow technicians of the same or lower rank but the "usual practice" was to use the military title in addressing a technician of higher rank. 9/ It was concluded that this practice constituted a tacit grant of an exception to the requirement of wearing the uniform, an exception the Respondent there was authorized to make. In April 1966, before membership in the National Guard was a requirement of employment as a civilian technician, a memorandum was issued that in correspondence officers and warrant officers will use their military rank, non-members will use "Mr.", and enlisted men would use at their option, their military rank or "Mr." but once an enlisted man selected either prefix it should be maintained. 10/ That policy was never specifically withdrawn or modified until May 1971 when the Respondent announced that thereafter the military uniform and form of address requirements would be strictly enforced. 11/

The facts here are quite different and call for a different conclusion. Here there was no unrescinded memorandum giving the men an option in the form of address to be employed. Here the form of address was unrelated to the wearing of the uniform and the men did wear the uniform appropriate to their military rank when performing their civilian duties, unlike the situation in the New York case. In this case the form of appellation was contained in a Technical Order directing the technician in the manner of filling a box in a form showing that he had done the work involved by entering his name and "grade". The Technical Order was issued in 1973 and in October 1974 the Chief of Maintenance, in accordance with TO 00-20-5, issued his memorandum advising his men of the TO direction to enter their names and "grade" in the box in question. In this case the departure from the direction was not as widespread or as prolonged, -- most of the technicians understood the word "grade" as it was intended, to mean military rank. Some were confused and sometimes used their military grade and sometimes their civilian grade. The remainder misunderstood and always used their civilian grade. It was only a year and a half later, on April 19, 1976, that the Chief of Maintenance, when his attention was called to the lack of uniformity in how the technicians entered their name in the box in question, issued his memorandum explaining that the word "grade" as used in the Technical Order meant military grade. A month later the unfair-labor-practice charge was served.

9/ Page 5 of ALJ Recommended Decision.
10/ Page 8 of ALJ Recommended Decision.
11/ Page 26 of ALJ Recommended Decision.

There can be no question that the Chief of Maintenance correctly interpreted the Technical Order. The word "grade" is used a number of times in that Order and in the only two examples of what was meant by name and grade the name of the technician is given followed by "SSgt", or staff sergeant. ^{12/} That Order was issued by the Secretary of the Air Force, and unlike the situation in the New York case there is nothing in the record to show that the Chief of Maintenance or anyone else had authority to waive its requirement, specifically or tacitly.

Finally, the parties had an agreement on the procedure for changing such a "working condition" if it was indeed a working condition. In 1974 the same situation arose with the 112th Maintenance Technicians, a different unit located at the same airport and represented by the same union. A complaint was filed under Executive Order 11491 and a hearing was scheduled. An agreement was made on October 29, 1975 and the complaint withdrawn. The agreement provided ^{13/} that when a "change in terms and conditions of employment is envisioned, the State Chairman of Pennsylvania State Council, ACT" would be given advance notice providing him with an opportunity to negotiate. It provided also that if the State Chairman and the Technician Personnel officer could not resolve the matter, "it may then be presented by ACT to the Deputy Adjutant General for his decision within 5 days" after which "further steps consonant with law and regulations" might be taken. The agreement was executed by the Technician Personnel Officer for the Respondent and the Chairman of the State Council, ACT, The Complainant in that case and in this case.

Before issuing his memorandum of April 19, 1976 the Chief of Maintenance advised the Chairman of the State Council and discussed it with him. ^{14/} The Chairman then discussed it with the Technician Personnel Officer and others in the Adjutant General's Office who took the position that that had always been the rule. ^{15/} ACT did not present the matter to the Deputy Adjutant General as permitted by the 1975 agreement if the April, 1976 memorandum effected a change in working conditions. Nor were any grievances filed. Instead, an unfair labor practice charge was served and a complaint filed under the Executive Order.

^{13/} C. Exh. 1.
^{15/} Tr. 23-24.

I have concluded above that the April 1976 memorandum did not constitute a change in working conditions. Even if it did, the procedure for effecting such a change, provided for in the October 1975 agreement, was complied with by the Respondent; it was the Complainant who did not carry it further. And if there was a breach of that agreement, a breach not perceptible to me on the basis of this record, not every breach of contract is an unfair labor practice. ^{16/} If there was a breach, it does not remotely approach the kind of breach that would constitute a violation of Section 19(a)(6) and in consequence a breach of 19(a)(1) of the Executive Order. ^{17/}

RECOMMENDATION

The complaint should be dismissed.

UNITED STATES DEPARTMENT OF LABOR
ASSISTANT SECRETARY FOR LABOR-MANAGEMENT RELATIONS
SUMMARY OF DECISION AND ORDER OF THE ASSISTANT SECRETARY
PURSUANT TO SECTION 6 OF EXECUTIVE ORDER 11491, AS AMENDED

NAVY EXCHANGE,
NAVAL AIR STATION MEMPHIS,
MILLINGTON, TENNESSEE
A/SLMR No. 970

This case involved a petition for amendment of certification filed by the National Association of Government Employees, Local R5-66 (NAGE) seeking to amend its certification to reflect the results of an agency directed reorganization involving the Activity. The NAGE proposed to amend the designation of the Activity on its certification by adding the words "Enlisted Mess Open, Recreation Department," and to amend the unit description by adding the employees of the Enlisted Mess Open, Recreation Department.

The reorganization resulted from a directive of the Deputy Chief of Naval Operations (Manpower) that the management of all clubs and messes within the Department of the Navy be performed by the Chief of Naval Personnel, rather than the Navy Resale Systems Office in Brooklyn, New York. The directive was implemented locally when control of the Enlisted Club and its employees was transferred from the Activity to the Recreation Department of the Naval Air Station, Memphis. The Enlisted Club was redesignated the Enlisted Mess Open.

The NAGE contended, in essence, that there should be no change in its representation of the employees who now work for the Enlisted Mess Open because the reorganization changes were purely administrative in nature and did not substantially change the employees' working conditions or their work location. The Activity, on the other hand, asserted, among other things, that the amended unit description proposed by the NAGE does not describe an appropriate unit.

The Assistant Secretary found that the employees who were transferred from the Enlisted Club of the Activity to the Enlisted Mess Open of the Recreation Department no longer share a community of interest with the employees of the Activity and that, with different organizational structures and servicing personnel offices, differing personnel policies, and in the absence of common negotiating authority, the retention of those employees in the Enlisted Mess Open in the current Activity unit, as proposed by the NAGE, would not promote effective dealings or efficiency of agency operations at the Activity. In view of these circumstances, the Assistant Secretary found that the instant petition for amendment of certification was not appropriate as the reorganization resulted in more than mere nominal or technical changes.

Accordingly, the Assistant Secretary ordered that the petition be dismissed.

DECISION AND ORDER

Upon a petition duly filed under Section 6 of Executive Order 11491, as amended, a hearing was held before Hearing Officer Steven Riggs. The Hearing Officer's rulings made at the hearing are free from prejudicial error and are hereby affirmed.

Upon the entire record in this case, including a brief filed by the Activity, the Assistant Secretary finds:

The Petitioner, National Association of Government Employees, Local R5-66, herein called NAGE, filed the subject petition seeking to amend its certification in order to conform its unit to the results of an agency directed reorganization of the Activity. The NAGE was certified on November 28, 1973, as the exclusive representative for a unit of all employees of the Navy Exchange at Naval Air Station Memphis, Millington, Tennessee. In this regard, it proposes to amend the Activity's designation on its certification by adding the words "Enlisted Mess Open, Recreation Department," and to amend the unit description by adding the employees of the Enlisted Mess Open, Recreation Department.

The NAGE contends, in essence, that there should be no change in its representation of the employees who now work for the Enlisted Mess Open because the changes resulting from the reorganization were purely administrative in nature and that there has not been substantial change in the employees' working conditions or their work location. The Activity, on the other hand, asserts, among other things, that the amended unit description proposed by the NAGE does not describe an appropriate unit.

On August 5, 1976, the Deputy Chief of Naval Operations (Manpower) directed that the management of all clubs and messes within the Department of the Navy be performed by the Chief of Naval Personnel, rather than by the Navy Resale Systems Office in Brooklyn, New York. The directive was implemented locally by the Activity, the Navy Exchange, and its host, the Naval Air Station Memphis, on March 26, 1977, by transferring control of the Enlisted Club from the Navy Exchange to the Recreation Department of the Naval Air Station Memphis, and redesignating it the Enlisted Mess Open. Approximately 465 nonsupervisory, nonappropriated fund employees remain in the Navy Exchange after the approximately 50 nonappropriated fund employees of the former Enlisted Club were transferred. The gaining Recreation Department apparently had 280 unrepresented, nonsupervisory, nonappropriated fund employees prior to the reorganization.

The mission of the Navy Exchange is to serve authorized patrons as a large, diversified retail store at the Naval Air Station Memphis, and, through profits, provide a source of funds for the welfare and recreation of military personnel. The mission of the Recreation Department at the Naval Air Station Memphis is to supervise and administer the morale, welfare and recreation programs for the physical fitness and recreation of all assigned military personnel and their dependents and to be responsible for the safe and efficient operation of several entities, including the Consolidated Package Store, the Commissioned Officers' Mess Open, the Chief Petty Officers' Mess Open, and since the reorganization, the Enlisted Mess Open.

The Enlisted Mess Open is in the same building as the former Enlisted Club. However, as a result of the reorganization, the employees of the Navy Exchange's Enlisted Club were treated essentially as new hires by the Recreation Department's Enlisted Mess Open. For some purposes they were treated as being terminated, but for other purposes merely transferred. 1/

The Navy Exchange contends that the approximately 50 former Enlisted Club employees who were transferred to the Enlisted Mess Open of the Recreation Department no longer share a community of interest with the remaining employees of the Navy Exchange. In this connection, the record shows that the employees of the Enlisted Mess Open do not have routine and regular working contact with Navy Exchange employees, nor is there any interchange between them and employees of the Navy Exchange. 2/

1/ The employees involved were afforded the rights of transferees by receiving credit toward their next step increase for the time they had worked for the Navy Exchange. On the other hand, they were given the right as terminated employees to withdraw their retirement funds, or as transferees to transfer their retirement funds to the Recreation Department's retirement program.

2/ The record reveals, however, that the three open messes of the Clubs/Messes Division of the Recreation Department reciprocate temporary details and are going to use standard uniforms to facilitate interchange.

Further, the employees of the Enlisted Mess Open no longer are serviced by the same personnel office as are all the remaining Navy Exchange employees. In this connection, the record shows that while the Navy Resale Systems Office in Brooklyn, New York, is the command headquarters element for the Navy Exchange, Naval Air Station Memphis, with respect to the promulgation of personnel policy, practices, and matters affecting the working conditions of Navy Exchange employees, the Bureau of Naval Personnel fulfills this role for the nonappropriated fund instrumentalities managed by the Recreation Department, Naval Air Station Memphis. In addition, the Recreation Department and the Navy Exchange each has its own personnel office.

The record shows that the transferred employees no longer are subject to many of the same programs and conditions of employment as are all the remaining Navy Exchange employees. Thus, the Enlisted Mess Open employees no longer continue to enjoy the same retirement, group health, or insurance programs as they did as Enlisted Club employees under the Navy Exchange. Further, the Consolidated Civilian Personnel Office of the Naval Air Station Memphis assists the personnel office of the Recreation Department by providing full wage and classification service to the nonappropriated fund activities other than the Navy Exchange while the Navy Resale Systems Office in Brooklyn, New York, classifies the employees' positions within the Navy Exchange. With respect to reduction-in-force actions, the Enlisted Mess Open constitutes its own area of consideration, as opposed to the former Enlisted Club which was a part of the larger Navy Exchange area of consideration. The Recreation Department and the Navy Exchange each has its own separate employment program in order to fill nonappropriated fund position vacancies, and separate merit promotion programs. Further, there is separate responsibility for collective bargaining negotiations. Thus, the Navy Exchange Officer has responsibility for negotiations on behalf of the Navy Exchange, whereas the consolidated Civilian Personnel Office represents the Recreation Department in negotiations concerning employees of the Enlisted Mess Open.

Under all of these circumstances, I find that the employees who were transferred from the Enlisted Club of the Navy Exchange to the Enlisted Mess Open of the Recreation Department no longer share a community of interest with the employees of the Navy Exchange and that, in the absence of common negotiating authority, and different organizational structures and servicing personnel offices as well as differing personnel policies, the retention of those employees in the Enlisted Mess Open in the current Navy Exchange unit, as proposed by the NAGE, would not promote effective dealings or efficiency of agency operations at the Navy Exchange.

In view of the foregoing, I find that the instant petition for amendment of certification should be dismissed. Thus, it has been held previously that an amendment of certification is appropriate only when the facts support a finding that the amendment will conform the recognition involved to existing circumstances resulting from such nominal or technical changes as a change in the name of the exclusive representative, or a change in the name or location of the agency or activity. ^{3/} In the instant case, the evidence establishes that more than mere nominal or technical changes have resulted from the reorganization herein. Accordingly, I shall order that the petition herein be dismissed.

SIXTH NATIONAL BANK REGION,

This case involved a petition filed by the National Treasury Employees Union (NTEU) seeking to represent a unit of nonprofessional employees of the Sixth National Bank Region, Office of the Comptroller of the Currency. The Activity contended that the unit was not appropriate as it would result in fragmentation and would not promote effective dealings or efficiency of agency operations. The Activity further contended that the proposed unit was based solely on the extent of organization.

Applying the three criteria found in Section 10(b) of the Order, the Assistant Secretary found that the unit sought was not appropriate for the purpose of exclusive recognition. In this regard, he noted that all employees of the Office of the Comptroller of the Currency (Agency) enjoy a common mission and common overall supervision, generally similar classifications, skills and duties, a high degree of interchange and transfer, and uniform personnel policies and practices. Under these circumstances, the Assistant Secretary found that employees in the sought unit do not share a clear and identifiable community of interest separate and distinct from other employees of the Agency. Moreover, noting that labor relations policies, as well as personnel policies and practices, are established and implemented at Agency headquarters, he found that the claimed unit would not promote effective dealings or efficiency of agency operations. Accordingly, the Assistant Secretary ordered that the petition be dismissed.

Petitioner

DECISION AND ORDER

Upon a petition duly filed under Section 6 of Executive Order 11491, as amended, a hearing was held before Hearing Officer Adam J. Conti. The Hearing Officer's rulings made at the hearing are free from prejudicial error and are hereby affirmed.

Upon the entire record in the subject case, including the briefs filed by the parties, the Assistant Secretary finds:

1. The labor organization involved claims to represent certain employees of the Activity.
2. The Petitioner, National Treasury Employees Union, hereinafter called NTEU, seeks an election in a unit composed of all nonprofessional employees of the Sixth National Bank Region, Office of the Comptroller of the Currency, excluding all professional employees, clerical employees, confidential employees, management officials, guards, and supervisors as defined by Executive Order 11491, as amended. ^{1/} The Activity contends that the petitioned for unit is not appropriate for the purpose of exclusive recognition as it would result in fragmentation which would impair efficiency of agency operations and effective dealings. The Activity further contends that the proposed unit is based solely on the extent of organization.

The mission of the Activity is to insure a solvent banking structure and enforce applicable statutes and regulations among the nationally chartered banks within the geographic area of its responsibility. The Office of the Comptroller of the Currency (Agency), headquartered in Washington, D.C., is organized into 14 geographic regions, among which is the Activity, which encompasses the states of Georgia, Florida and South Carolina. The Activity is administratively headed by a Regional Administrator, and is headquartered in Atlanta, Georgia.

The Activity achieves its mission by the periodic examination of banks within its jurisdiction utilizing a complement of bank examiners, ^{2/} who work out of their homes and are assigned to examine particular banks by the Activity's headquarters staff. In addition, the Activity contains seven Subregional Offices, which serve primarily as repositories for supplies of blank examination reports and files of past examination reports and correspondence concerning national banks located within the geographic area of the Subregional Office. Each Subregional Office is headed by either a commissioned national bank examiner or a commissioned trust examiner. These Subregional Office heads perform a variety of administrative duties, in addition to their regular examining functions. Thus, they are responsible for insuring that banks located within the geographic area of their subregions are examined at regular intervals and, in this regard, are responsible for making monthly work assignments designating the Examiner-in-Charge (EIC) and the supporting examining staff for each examination within their subregions, and submitting such assignments to their respective Regional Directors for approval.

The record reveals that there are three major types of examinations of banks corresponding to the internal operations of the banks - commercial, trust, and electronic data processing (EDP). All bank examiners employed by the Activity are trained to specialize in one of these three types of bank operations. Thus, Commissioned National Bank Examiners and Assistant National Bank Examiners conduct the examinations of a bank's commercial operations; Commissioned National Trust Examiners and Associate and Assistant National Trust Examiners conduct the examination of a bank's trust operations; and National and Assistant National Bank Examiners conduct the examination of a bank's EDP operations. Each bank examination is conducted by a team of examiners which is headed by a designated EIC.

The Activity's headquarters staff is also organized along these program areas. Thus, under the Regional Administrator, there is a Regional Director for Operations Planning, who is responsible for the monthly work assignments of examiners in the commercial area, checking and approving examination reports of commercial operations, and generally coordinating the various operations of the Activity. In addition, there is a Regional Director for Trust Operations and a Regional Director for Electronic Data Processing, who perform essentially the same duties with regard to their respective program areas.

As indicated above, the examination of an individual bank is conducted by a team of examiners assigned by the Activity, and headed by a designated EIC. The EIC must be a Commissioned Examiner, and he is responsible for the conduct of that examination. All such examinations are conducted pursuant to policies and procedures established by the Agency and implemented nationally. In carrying out his responsibilities, the EIC assigns team members to specific tasks in conducting the examination, monitors and coordinates their activities, and checks and signs their reports and forwards them to the appropriate Regional Director. During the conduct of the examination, the EIC has the authority to direct team members, to excuse them from duty in an emergency, to discipline them, and to evaluate their performance.

In addition to the three categories of examinations outlined above, there are more specialized examinations, including examinations of international departments and foreign branches of domestic banks. The Regional Office maintains a list of those individuals interested in and qualified to conduct international examinations. The International Division at the Agency's headquarters determines which banks are to be examined, when the examination is to take place, the number of personnel needed to conduct the examination, and makes the work assignments directly with the individuals. The record reveals that several of the Activity's examiners are qualified to conduct such examinations and have, in fact, been assigned along with examiners from other regions to conduct them. In addition, there are other examinations in which examiners from the Activity work with examiners from other regions. The National Shared Credits Program, wherein banks with loans which are shared or participated in by other banks, are examined by a team of three examiners, one from the region in which the bank is located, and two examiners from other regions. Additionally, the record indicates that, in order to alleviate uneven workloads, examiners from the Activity have been temporarily assigned to other regions, and examiners from other regions have been temporarily assigned to the Activity to perform bank examinations.

The record further reveals that personnel policies and practices are established by the Agency headquarters staff and are generally implemented through the regional headquarters staff. Thus, the Agency establishes and monitors the policies and procedures utilized in recruitment and hiring of new employees, training for all employees, and certification procedures for commissioning bank examiners and trust examiners. In addition, the Agency established a program of referring qualified examiners to promotional opportunities nationwide, and also transferring examiners across regional lines to achieve uniformity of personnel skills and qualifications nationwide. Personnel files of all Agency employees are maintained at its headquarters, and all budgetary policies and financial disbursements, including travel funds, are established and executed by the Agency through its headquarters staff. Finally, all labor relations policies are established and implemented by Agency headquarters staff. The record indicates that there are no management labor relations personnel in any regional office, nor are there any plans to conduct labor relations matters at the regional level.

Based on the foregoing circumstances, I find the sought unit herein is not appropriate for the purpose of exclusive recognition under the Order. In this regard, as noted above, the evidence establishes that the employees in the sought unit enjoy, with other employees of the Agency, a common mission and overall supervision, generally similar classifications, skills and duties, a high degree of interchange and transfer, and uniform personnel policies and practices. Under these circumstances, I find that employees in the sought unit do not share a clear and identifiable community of interest separate and distinct from other Agency employees. Moreover, in my view, the petitioned for unit could not reasonably be expected to promote effective dealings or efficiency of agency operations. In this connection, noted particularly was the fact that all labor relations policies, as well as personnel policies and practices, are established and implemented at the Agency headquarters level.

Accordingly, I shall order that the petition herein be dismissed. ^{3/}

DECISION AND ORDER

This case involved an unfair labor practice complaint filed by the National Treasury Employees Union and the National Treasury Employees Union, Chapter 37 (NTEU) alleging that the Respondent violated Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order by refusing to bargain about the substance, impact and implementation of a work evaluation program. The Respondent contended that the Complainant's proposals regarding the work evaluation program were non-negotiable. It further contended that the Assistant Secretary had no jurisdiction to decide the negotiability of the Complainant's proposals as the negotiability issue arose during the course of its negotiations with the Complainant and, therefore, the latter should have appealed the negotiability of its proposals pursuant to Section 11(c) of the Order.

On September 13, 1977, Administrative Law Judge Louis Scalzo issued his Recommended Decision and Order in the above-entitled proceeding, finding that the Respondent had not engaged in the unfair labor practices alleged in the complaint and recommending that the complaint be dismissed in its entirety. Thereafter, the Complainant filed exceptions with respect to the Administrative Law Judge's Recommended Decision and Order.

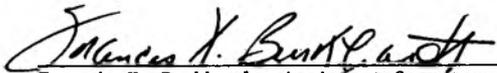

The Administrative Law Judge found that, pursuant to Section 11(d) of the Order, the Assistant Secretary has authority to make negotiability determinations necessary to resolve the merits of the alleged unfair labor practice herein. The Administrative Law Judge further found that the work measurement program, as proposed, necessarily would have involved the formulation of evaluation criteria designed to be used in rating the job performance of affected employees. Thus, as this would involve a basic change in the terms and conditions of employment for such employees, the Respondent had an obligation to negotiate concerning this subject. He concluded that the Respondent, although indicating its uncertainty as to the negotiability of the Complainant's proposals, did, in fact, negotiate in good faith concerning such proposals. The Administrative Law Judge further concluded that the Respondent had acted properly when it implemented the work measurement program. In reaching this conclusion, he noted that an impasse had been declared by the Complainant, that the Respondent provided timely notice of its intention to implement the work measurement program, that the Complainant had not sought the services of the Federal Service Impasses Panel, and that the program as implemented was consistent with the Respondent's proposals during the course of the negotiations. Thus, the Administrative Law Judge found that the Respondent had not violated Section 19(a)(1) and (6) by its conduct during the course of its negotiations concerning the work evaluation program or by the manner in which it was implemented. He recommended, therefore, that the complaint be dismissed.

The Assistant Secretary has reviewed the rulings of the Administrative Law Judge made at the hearing and finds that no prejudicial error was committed. The rulings are hereby affirmed. Upon consideration of the Administrative Law Judge's Recommended Decision and Order, and the entire record in this case, including the Complainant's exceptions, I hereby adopt the Administrative Law Judge's findings, conclusions and recommendations.

RECOMMENDED DECISION AND ORDER

Statement of the Case

This proceeding was initiated upon the filing of an unfair labor practice charge on October 19, 1976 by the National Treasury Employees Union and National Treasury Employees Union Chapter 37 (hereinafter referred to as the Complainant or Union), against the Internal Revenue Service, Cleveland District, United States Department of the Treasury (hereinafter referred to as the Respondent). A complaint filed on December 23, 1976 alleges that the Respondent violated Sections 19(a)(1) and 19(a)(6) of Executive Order 11491 as amended (hereinafter referred to as "the Order") by (1) refusing on September 15 and 16, 1976, to bargain concerning methods or procedures Respondent intended to use to implement a work measurement program; (2) refusing on September 15 and 16, 1976, to bargain concerning the impact of the work measurement program on affected employees; (3) unilaterally implementing the work measurement program on October 18, 1976; and (4) by refusing to meet and confer on September 15 and 16, 1976, upon a prior request by the Union to negotiate the substance, impact and implementation of the work measurement program.

A Notice of Hearing on Complaint was issued by the Regional Administrator, Labor Management Services Administration, Chicago Region. Pursuant thereto, a hearing was held in Cleveland, Ohio. Both parties were represented by counsel, and were afforded full opportunity to be heard, adduce evidence, and to examine and cross-examine witnesses. Thereafter the parties submitted briefs.

Upon the basis of the entire record, including my observation of the witnesses and their demeanor, I make the following findings of fact, conclusions and recommendation. 1/

1/ Following the hearing Walter L. Kerr, a representative of the Complainant, was deposed, and an affidavit dated December 3, 1976, executed by Mr. Kerr, together with a letter dated November 2, 1976 addressed to Mr. Kerr by Vincent L. Connery, National President of the National Treasury Employees Union, were offered by counsel for the Complainant, over objection interposed by counsel for the Respondent. These documents are also deemed part of the record.

1. History of Negotiations

During the last week of April 1976, Donald Heidler, Chief of the Audit Division, Internal Revenue Service, Cleveland District, informed Thomas Cozzens, a Labor Relations Specialist in the Cleveland District that there would be a substantial decrease in clerical staff in the District, but that there would be no diminution of work load. It was anticipated that the reduction would impact very heavily upon the Service Branch of the Audit Division of the Cleveland District as the Service Branch was responsible for the performance of clerical functions for the Audit Division. ^{2/}

An analysis of Service Branch operations was then in process in order to initiate labor saving changes and a redistribution of the workload. Mr. Heidler felt that there would be an effect upon the bargaining unit, and for this reason he and Mr. Cozzens made arrangements for representatives of the Respondent to meet with bargaining unit representatives on April 29, 1976. Mr. Heidler, Mr. Cozzens, and Donald Mitgang, an assistant to Mr. Heidler, represented management. The bargaining unit was represented by Walter Kerr, Chairman of the NTEU Joint Council, and John Risacher, the NTEU Steward for the Audit Division Service Branch.

Mr. Heidler advised the Union representatives of the reduction in the clerical staff and of the need for a number of changes. In this regard it was brought out that a work measurement program, involving recordation of time spent on Service Branch cases was being considered for implementation as one proposed change. It was made clear that the Respondent wanted to bring the Union into deliberations concerning all of the proposed changes at an early point in order to have the benefits of the Union's views and recommendations. The record reflects evidence that at the outset the Respondent expressed willingness to listen to the Union's views relating to the methodology to be employed in implementing the work measurement element of changes proposed.

In response to the announcement the Union requested that they be supplied with specific information concerning all of the changes proposed. Mr. Heidler promised to supply a list. By memorandum dated May 13, 1976, the Union was apprised of the full range of changes in more detail. (Joint Exhibit 1).

The May 13, 1976 memorandum detailed thirty separate proposed changes relating to the entire Audit Division. Only seventeen of those pertained to the Service Branch, and of the seventeen only two (items (6) and (7)) related to the proposed work measurement program. ^{3/}

In response to the many changes outlined in the May 13, 1976 memo, the Respondent was advised by letter dated May 17, 1976, signed by Walter L. Kerr, that the Union wished to negotiate, "the substance, impact, and implementation of the proposed changes...set forth in the memorandum...dated May 13, 1976." The Respondent was also requested to supply additional information. (Respondent Exhibit 1).

On the same day (May 17, 1976) Thomas Cozzens phoned Walter Kerr to discuss the Union's request, and announced a desire to meet with Union representatives concerning all of the proposals although some of them were deemed non-negotiable under the provisions of the Order. On the same date the information requested by the Union was supplied.

^{3/} Item (6) related to the "establishment of specific work guidelines to effectively evaluate clerical operations, and Item (7) pertained to the "establishment of a procedure to record time on cases, primarily related to the closing operation."

On May 19, 1976, another meeting was held. The Respondent was represented by Mr. Heidler, Mr. Mitgang, and Mr. Cozzens. The Union was represented by Mr. Kerr and Mr. Risacher. At this meeting Mr. Heidler went over each of the thirty items listed on the May 13, 1976 memo, and discussed them. Union representatives stated that they would like to have the views of bargaining unit members, and management advised the Union that it planned to hold a meeting of all Audit Division Service Branch employees on May 25, 1976. Mr. Risacher was invited to attend as the Union representative. Mr. Kerr advised that he then had a much better idea of the proposed changes and that he would discuss the changes with Respondent's representatives after conversing with bargaining unit employees. The Union was asked to submit their proposals by May 28, 1976, if they felt formal negotiations were necessary. The Union agreed to do so. During this May 19, 1976 meeting the work measurement program was specifically discussed with the Union.

On May 25, 1976, Mr. Heidler conducted the scheduled meeting with Audit Division Service Branch employees. The May 13, 1976 memorandum was discussed insofar as it related to Service Branch employees. Following the presentation by management, an opportunity for questions, discussion, and comment was provided. This meeting was scheduled so as to conclude at the beginning of the lunch hour so that employees of the Service Branch could discuss the May 13, 1976 memorandum with Mr. Risacher outside the presence of management officials.

On June 2, 1976, another meeting was held. This meeting was attended by Mr. Kerr and Mr. Risacher on behalf of the Union. Mr. Heidler, Mr. Cozzens and Mr. Miller, an assistant to Mr. Heidler, represented management. It was agreed that the Union would negotiate further on the work measurement program and a proposal to install partitions between the desks of certain employees. ^{4/} The Union agreed to all other changes proposed for the Service Branch. Confirmation of the agreement reached at this juncture, and residual issues relating to the work measurement program and proposed partitioning is reflected in Respondent Exhibits 2 and 3.

The next meeting occurred on July 13, 1976. Mr. Risacher represented the Union and Mr. Cozzens and Mr. Miller represented management. At this meeting agreement was reached on the issue relating to partitioning, thus leaving the work measurement program as the only area of concern not ironed out in negotiations.

At a July 28, 1976 meeting, the work measurement program was presented to the Union in its final proposed form. (Joint Exhibit 2). Mr. Fox and Mr. Risacher represented the Union at the meeting, and Mr. Heidler, Mr. Mitgang and Mr. Cozzens represented management. Sample copies of the forms to be utilized were made available with the explanation that they were subject to change based upon negotiations with the Union. Again, the Union requested that the views of bargaining unit members be obtained. Management advised that another meeting with Service Branch Employees would be held on August 4, 1976, and that Mr. Risacher would be invited to attend. The Union agreed to this procedure.

As finally presented, the program was designed to obtain the average times needed to perform Service Branch work operations. Statistics sought were to be used to plan work, overtime use, budget requirements, and personnel needs. It was anticipated that the program would locate bottlenecks, determine the need for personnel shifts, develop a records system to help determine the nature of employee performance, and ascertain reasons for employee deficiencies.

On August 4, 1976, a series of separate small group meetings were held with Service Branch employees. A Union representative attended each. Mr. Heidler made a presentation at each meeting, and provided employees with an opportunity to pose questions and make suggestions.

On August 16, 1976 two meetings were held by Audit Division management and the Union. During the morning Mr. Fox, Mr. Kerr, Mr. Risacher met with Mr. Heidler, Mr. Mitgang, Mr. Miller, Mr. Cozzens, and Ms. Betty Nelson, Chief of the Service Branch. During the afternoon Mr. Fox and Mr. Kerr again met with Mr. Cozzens. Management raised questions concerning the negotiability of the work measurement proposal under the order, but agreed to negotiate the issue of how the program would impact upon Service Branch employees.

In this regard the Union objected to the use of names on forms designed to indicate time spent on work performed, and to the utilization of the forms as an element in performance evaluation determinations. The Union also expressed particular concern over the possibility of Respondent imposing work production quotas.

At the meeting on August 16, 1976, and at prior meetings, the Union was informed that the work measurement program would not be utilized to establish specific work quotas or goals, and that Service Branch employees would not be compared to each other on the basis of reports submitted.

As a result of a failure to reach agreement on August 16th, the Union, on August 20, 1976, made a formal request to negotiate "the substance, impact and implementation" of the program. (Joint Exhibit 3). In a letter dated August 23, 1976, addressed to the Union, Respondent requested that the Union forward specific proposals. (Joint Exhibit 4). Mr. Fox and Mr. Cozzens discussed ground rules for the negotiations on the same day. Six specific proposals (articles) all relating to "implementation" of the work measurement program were received by management on September 9, 1976. (Joint Exhibit 7). Arrangements were made to discuss these proposals on September 15, 1976.

2. Union Proposals Negotiated

The meeting on September 15, 1976, was attended by Mr. Reed, counsel for the Complainant, who acted as chief spokesman for the Union. He was accompanied by a number of other Union representatives. Mr. Heidler represented a team of management negotiators.

At the outset of the meeting Mr. Heidler responded to the proposals by stating a general objection of non-negotiability under the provisions of the Order, but he also stated that management was willing to listen to Union representatives and consider each of the proposals.

Article (1) would have modified the purposes of the work measurement program in that the stated purposes of the program were limited by the terms of the article to, (a) establishment of relationships between volume of work done and output of man hours to do the work; and (b) to identify problem areas, and assist employees in overcoming problems. (Compare Joint Exhibits 2 and 7). Article (2) also questioned the basic thrust of the program by requiring a count of work units without inclusion of a report of hours spent on work activities. At the September 15, 1976 meeting Mr. Heidler expressed the view that the basic purposes of the program should remain unchanged.

With respect to Article (3) Mr. Heidler conceded that the phrase, "statistics maintained...will not be used as quotas, allocations or specific amounts of work that must be completed," was not objectionable in principle ^{5/} but that the phrase indicating that statistics would be "maintained by the Employer for the purpose of forecasting and monitoring aspects of work planning control programs" should be deleted as the purpose of the program should instead, be inferred from a revised Article (1).

Article (4), relating to the content of proposed Weekly Reports and Daily Tic Sheets, to be executed by Service Branch employees was designed to delete the requirement that employees identify themselves on such forms, and to insure that statistics would "not be accumulated in such a way as to identify the work product of any individual employee." The Respondent insisted that such reports would have to identify specific individuals. This Article became a major continuing area of disagreement due to the Union's insistence upon anonymity. The ultimate failure of negotiations stemmed primarily from disagreement over this point.

Article (5), a statement that production records (weekly and daily reports) would not be used to establish individual quantity performance standards, and further that such records would not be used to compare one employee in the Audit Division Service Branch to another was accepted almost in the form received. By agreement the phrase "production records" would have been changed to "weekly reports and daily tally sheets." Also, in connection with this Article Mr. Heidler again reiterated that documents collected would not be used to establish quantity performance standards. However, the Respondent continued to stress that averages or statistics derived from the program would be used as "indicators" in the evaluation process. Mr. Heidler stated further that he was in agreement with the second sentence of Article (5) which would have operated to prohibit the use of weekly and daily reports to compare one employee in the Service Branch to another.

Article (6), a statement that production records 6/ would not be utilized by the Respondent in making performance evaluations, was questioned by Mr. Heidler in that it was intended that the statistics would be used in the evaluation of employees without comparisons. He admitted that the program was a "motivational tool." Mr. Heidler referred to the inadequacies of the evaluation system being used, and indicated that the work measurement program would provide objective measured indicators of performance for the purpose of employee evaluation.

6/ As was the case with Article 5, the parties agreed to change the term "production records" to "weekly reports and daily tally sheets."

The parties adjourned on September 15, 1976, with the hope that agreement would be reached on the next day. On September 16th, the Union conceded to a degree by agreeing generally that Article (1) conform to the Respondent's view relating to the purposes of the program, and Article (2) was withdrawn. Again, Mr. Heidler articulated the previously stated opinion that all proposals were non-negotiable. However, despite this statement, a draft of a letter to the Union was exhibited to the Union as Respondent's proposal or counterproposal to the six specific articles considered on September 15, 1976. (Joint Exhibit 8). This letter incorporated key elements of the Union's position. The purposes of the program were spelled out in the draft, namely, to provide a system of counting units processed, and recording hours by individual employees in each phase of Service Branch operations; to establish relationships between work output and man-hours; to help Service Branch management in planning; to determine the efficiency of operations; to assist managers in the evaluation of employees; and to inform management of problems that arise in the workflow.

The proposed letter made assurances that statistics derived from the system would not be used as quotas, allocations, or specific amounts of work that must be completed, or to compare one employee in the Audit Division Service Branch to another. It stated: "managers will use the records maintained as one of the many resources to evaluate their employees. The program will help to identify superior performance, as well as performance which requires improvement, and will assist managers in rewarding deserving employees and assisting employees to reach their full potential in the Audit Division Service Branch." Negotiations on September 16, 1976 were concluded with the draft letter being offered as the Respondent's proposal and the Union declaring an impasse in negotiations. At this point the Union left the bargaining table. (Tr. 248). The draft letter was subsequently modified and as modified was sent to Mr. Fox on September 23, 1976. (Joint Exhibit 9). The letter indicated that the work measurement program as presented to the Union, would be implemented on October 18, 1976.

On September 24, 1976, counsel for the Complainant wrote to the Commissioner of Internal Revenue requesting an agency determination of the negotiability of the six proposals. Apparently the Union intended to seek a determination of negotiability under the provisions of Section 11(c) of the Order. This procedure was not pursued further.

3. Implementation

On October 18, 1976, the work measurement program was partially implemented in that employees began submitting data to their group managers. The collection of data was not complete as of the date of the hearing. The program implemented was identical to the one originally proposed, as modified by Union demands incorporated into the Respondent's September 16, 1976 counterproposal.

Although the record reflects that statistics supplied by employees might be used by Service Branch managers to compare one employee in the Service Branch to another, the Respondent introduced evidence that raw statistics would not be utilized in this manner. It was also established that such an abuse would contradict the official position taken by the Respondent, and could as a result, be a basis for the issuance of a reprimand to any supervisor responsible for such a comparison. 7/

7/ The Complainant introduced some evidence to show that such an abuse had in fact occurred in one isolated instance; however the evidence in this regard was inconclusive. Mr. Heidler testified that managers could duplicate the program on their own without the assistance of work measurement reports; and there was no clear showing that the daily or weekly reports submitted actually comprised the basis of the comparison reportedly made.

4. Application of Multi-District Agreements

The parties stipulated that Multi-District Agreement II (Joint Exhibit 13), covering Service Branch clerical employees among others, was in effect from August 3, 1974 through November 7, 1976. Article 9, Section 4 of this agreement provided a general prohibition against maintenance of statistics of the type generated by the work measurement program; however, the prohibition related only to statistics concerning the performance of field enforcement officers. (Joint Exhibit 13, at page 25). 8/ The prohibition was not applicable to Service Branch clerical employees. 9/

8/ Article 9, Section 4 provided:

A. The statistics concerning field enforcement officers' performance maintained by the Employer for the purpose of forecasting and monitoring aspects of work planning control programs will not be used as quotas, allocations or as specific amounts of work that must be completed.

B. The tax enforcement results of individual field enforcement officers (including reviewers and conferees) will not be accumulated and maintained as a regular statistic in such a way as to identify the product of any individual enforcement officer....

C. Enforcement production records will not be used to establish individual quantity performance standards. None of the foregoing will be used to compare one field enforcement officer with another.

9/ Counsel for the Complainant acknowledged that the proposals advanced by the Union in this case were made because of the absence of such coverage, and because of an intent to extend Article 9, Section 4 protections to Service Branch clerical employees.

Evidence in the record reflects that contract renewal negotiations leading to the approval of Multi-District Agreement III involved consideration of Article 9, as set forth in Multi-District Agreement II. Because of this circumstance Respondent also asserts that elements of the work measurement program were involved in negotiations relating to Multi-District Agreement III, and that Respondent should not be compelled to negotiate in two forums. ^{10/} However, the record does not indicate that a purely local work measurement practice involving the Audit Division Service Branch, Cleveland District, was a matter under consideration during negotiations at the national level. Moreover, there was no evidence introduced to show that the Complainant waived the right to bargain over this specific local issue.

Discussion, Conclusions, and Recommendation

1. The Jurisdiction of the Assistant Secretary

The Respondent argues that this case is not in the proper forum, and that Complainant should have appealed to the Federal Labor Relations Council under the provisions of Section 11(c) of the Order in order to obtain a decision on the negotiability of proposals characterized as non-negotiable by the Respondent.

Although it is true that such a procedure is authorized by Section 11(c) and the Rules of the Federal Labor Relations Council, ^{11/} Section 11(d) of the Order provides that the Assistant Secretary may make an initial negotiability determination when required to do so in the context of an unfair labor practice proceeding involving an alleged unilateral change in, or addition to, personnel policies and practices on matters affecting working conditions, where the acting party is charged with a refusal to consult or negotiate as required under the Order.

Respondent claims that since the negotiability issue arose in connection with negotiations, Section 11(c) is applicable, and the exception provided in Section 11(d) inapplicable. Authority cited by the Respondent for the inapplicability of Section 11(d) in this case is not at all persuasive. Moreover, in a relatively recent case involving a quite similar factual situation, the Federal Labor Relations Council refused to permit initial review by the Council under Section 11(c)(4) of the Order and the Council's rules of procedure. National Office, National Border Patrol Council, National I&NS Council, AFGE and Immigration and Naturalization Service, Department of Justice, FLRC No. 76A-47, (September 29, 1976), Report No. 114. The Council noted the following language from the Report and Recommendations of the Federal Labor Relations Council on the Amendment of Executive Order 11491 as Amended, Labor Relations in the Federal Service, January 1975:

Where negotiability issues arise in the context of such unfair labor practice proceedings they are often inextricably intertwined with disputed issues of fact which must be resolved in order to arrive at a conclusion concerning the motivation of the parties. Such disputed issues of fact are best resolved through the adversary process of a formal hearing.

The rule followed by the Council in the cited case is succinctly stated in these terms:

[S]ince the instant case arises out of an alleged unilateral change and involves both claims of a refusal to bargain and related contentions as to negotiability, the Assistant Secretary is empowered under sections 6(a)(4) and 11(d) to exercise his authority.

The quoted language may be applied with equal force to the facts presented in this case; therefore, it is concluded that the Assistant Secretary has jurisdiction to make such negotiability determinations as are necessary to resolve the merits of this alleged unfair labor practice.

2. The Applicability of Section 11(a) of the Order to Proposals Received by the Respondent on September 9, 1976

Among other purposes, the work measurement program was designed to develop statistics relating to the time utilized by individual employees to perform Service Branch work operations; to provide a data base for striking average time utilized to perform Service Branch work operations; to develop a records system to help determine objective evidence relating to employee performance; to provide management with a "motivational tool"; to develop "indicators" to be used in employee performance evaluation; and to provide data needed to ascertain the reason for employee deficiencies.

Section 11(a) of the Order requires that an agency and a labor organization that has been accorded exclusive recognition shall meet at reasonable times and confer in good faith with respect to personnel policies and practices and matters affecting working conditions of unit employees. It is a well settled principle in both federal and private sector labor law, that an employer may not lawfully change personnel policies, practices, or working conditions without first providing the collective bargaining representative with advance notice of the proposed changes, and allowing it an opportunity to negotiate concerning the proposed changes. A failure to comply with these requirements constitutes a violation of Sections 19(a)(1) and 19(a)(6) of the Order.

It has been held that the institution of changes in time schedules for the processing of work is a matter affecting working conditions within the meaning of Section 11(a), and further that such changes are a proper subject for collective bargaining. National Labor Relations Board, A/SLMR No. 246. Procedure used in evaluating employees also involves a condition of employment, and an activity may not change such a condition without first affording the exclusive collective bargaining representative an opportunity to bargain concerning the change. Federal Aviation Administration, National Aviation Facilities, Experimental Center, Atlantic City, New Jersey, A/SLMR No. 438. See also Department of Agriculture and Office of Investigation, A/SLMR No. 555.

The facts developed in this case clearly reflect that the work measurement program, as proposed, would necessarily have involved the formulation of evaluative criteria designed to be utilized in the rating of job performance of Service Branch clerical employees. In this regard the Respondent acknowledged that statistics gathered would be used to strike time averages for various work activities, and that in due course objective evidence of employee performance would be determined by making reference to such averages. That is, employee performance would be measured against these formulated averages. In fact the Respondent specifically acknowledged that the program was, in Respondent's view, designed to provide "objective" evidence of employee performance.

In a somewhat analagous factual situation involving the imposition of a rule requiring an employee to maintain a log of time away from his duty station on authorized union business, the Assistant Secretary held that the unilateral imposition of such a requirement involved a change in the terms and conditions of employment. United States Air Force, Kingsley Field, Klamath Falls, Oregon, A/SLMR No. 443. On the basis of authorities cited, it must be concluded that the intended use of the work measurement program to strike averages and develop employee evaluation criteria, in the context found in this case, involved a basic change in the terms and conditions of employment for Service Branch employees. 12/ Accordingly, the Respondent did have a mandatory obligation to negotiate concerning this subject. 13/ Having reached this conclusion, it is also determined that the work measurement program generally, and the proposals received by the Respondent from the Union on September 9, 1976, in particular, may not be classified as a permissive or voluntary topic of bargaining under Section 11(b) of the Order, nor a prohibited topic of bargaining embraced within the retained management rights clause found in Section 12(b) of the Order.

With respect to the contention that Respondent should not be compelled to negotiate the substance of the work measurement program at national level negotiations involving Multi-District Agreement III and, at local level talks in the Cleveland District, it is noted that the record is silent with respect to the specific areas of concern that were pending before national level negotiators, and that the record does not reflect that the specific proposals in question were actually on the bargaining table at the national level. More importantly, there is no evidence that the Complainant waived Section 11(a) rights to bargain over this specific local issue. In Order to have an effective waiver or limitation restricting the right conferred by Section 11(a) of the Executive Order to negotiate, the waiver must be clear and unmistakable. 3. Whether Respondent Violated Sections 19(a)(1) and 19(a)(6) of the Order by Refusing to Negotiate Concerning Proposals Submitted to the Respondent on September 9, 1977

12/ Section 11(a) limitations on the obligation to negotiate may not be deemed applicable in the circumstances of this case.

13/ Although the Respondent stressed that the work measurement program would not be used to set production goals or work quotas, the facts brought out do indicate that the program was in fact designed to produce statistics which would be used as a standard to measure employee production. In the absence of other Section 11(a) restrictions on negotiability, union proposals relating to production goals which an agency seeks to enforce are negotiable under Section 11(a) of the Order. Patent Office Professionals Association and U.S. Patent Office, Washington, D. C., 74 FSIP 20, FLRC No. 75A-13 (October 3, 1975), Report No. 85.

Having determined that the Respondent has an obligation to negotiate in good faith relating to the proposals received from the Union, it is necessary to determine the exact nature of this obligation.

The terms of the Union proposals clearly related to the "implementation of the work measurement program." This fact is evidenced in the complaint itself.

Any measure of management's response to the Union's proposals must be gauged in the light of the fact that the methodology to be used in implementing this program, was placed in issue by the Union's proposals, not the actual decision to institute a work measurement program in the first instance. However, the record reflects the fact that the Union was also afforded opportunities to negotiate concerning the decision to initiate such a program in the first instance. During the early stages of negotiations, Respondent was uncertain of the negotiability of the work measurement scheme, and out of an abundance of caution, and because of interest in the position of the Complainant, as well as individual bargaining unit employees, every effort was made to engage in wide-ranging negotiations relating to the work measurement program.

Initially the concept was brought to the Union's attention. An opportunity for full discussion was provided to the Union on April 29, 1976. Thereafter, at the request of the Union additional information was supplied by the Respondent. An opportunity to negotiate the basic concept involved in the work measurement program was also provided to the Union on May 19, 1976. On May 25, 1976 both the Union and bargaining unit members were afforded an opportunity to discuss the subject in detail, and question Respondent's position. On June 2, and July 13, 1976, additional bargaining sessions occurred. Agreement was reached on a number of change proposals advanced by Respondent, but not on the work measurement program. Up to this point the Union was aware that the program would involve employee recordation of time spent on Service Branch work activities.

On July 28, 1976 complete details relating to the program were presented to the Union together with an opportunity to negotiate in depth concerning the proposal. However, again the Union sought the views of bargaining unit members. On August 4, 1976 Respondent's detailed work measurement proposal was exposed to discussion and questioning at meetings attended by a Union representative and bargaining unit members.

On August 16, 1976 the Union was provided with an opportunity to negotiate concerning implementation. The record also evidences the fact that on this date the Respondent participated in discussions concerning the wisdom of initiating such a program in the first instance. However, the main thrust of the Union's objections related to the methodology to be followed in implementation of the program.

Thereafter, the Union submitted its proposed "Memorandum of Agreement" consisting of six separate articles. Subsequent negotiations on September 15, 1976 resulted in significant concessions by the Respondent, and on September 16, 1976, the Respondent offered a counterproposal in the form of a letter which incorporated these concessions.

Although Respondent indicated uncertainty concerning the negotiability of the Union's proposals at the outset of negotiations, and although on September 16, 1976, Respondent did declare that the Union proposals were technically non-negotiable, Respondent never refused to negotiate concerning these proposals to the degree demanded by the Union. That is, the Respondent negotiated in good faith on the subject of implementation and impact of the work measurement program.

The complaint filed in this case completely ignores the pattern of negotiations which occurred prior to September 15 and 16, 1976, and it completely ignores the facts with respect to negotiations sought and obtained by the Union on September 15 and 16, 1976. In fact the concessions obtained by the Union on September 16, 1976, in the form of a counterproposal made by the Respondent, were the result of an extended pattern of negotiations which began on April 29, 1976. However, the Respondent's counterproposal was met by the Union declaration of impasse, and by the Union's discontinuance of negotiations. There is no proof that the Union ever submitted a revised agreement of its own setting forth the Union's version of concessions made by the Respondent, and the Union's position; or that it suggested an alternative method of implementation after receipt of the Respondent's counterproposal on September 16, 1976. Moreover, a review of the evidence convinces that whatever Respondent may have said concerning the negotiability of the Union's proposals, and however the parties characterized their own conduct, what actually took place did in fact satisfy Respondent's obligation to negotiate. NASA, Kennedy Space Center, Kennedy Space Center, Florida, A/SLMR No. 223; United States Department of the Treasury, Internal Revenue Service, Chicago District, A/SLMR No. 711, petition for review denied, FLRC No. 76-126 (February 15, 1977), Report No. 122; Office of Economic Opportunity, Region V, Chicago, Illinois, A/SLMR No. 251, Decision of Administrative Law Judge at p. 10.

At the conclusion of the September 16, 1976 meeting, the Union did not request another meeting. When a meeting has been held, and the Union asks for no further meeting, because it exhausted all it cared to discuss about the pending subject, it should not be heard to complain that there was insufficient negotiating. Internal Revenue Service, Fresno Service Center, A/SLMR No. 489, Decision of the Administrative Law Judge, pp. 13-14; Department of the Navy, Bureau of Medicine and Surgery, Great Lakes Naval Hospital, A/SLMR No. 289.

Based upon the foregoing it is determined that the Respondent did not, as alleged, violate Sections 19(a)(1) and 19(a)(6) of the Order by (1) refusing to bargain concerning methods and procedures Respondent intended to use to implement the work measurement program; (2) refusing to bargain concerning the impact of the program on affected employees; and (3) refusing on September 15 and 16, 1976, to negotiate the substance, impact and implementation of the program.

4. Whether Respondent Violated Sections 19(a)(1) and 19(a)(6) of the Order by Unilaterally Implementing the Work Measurement Program after the Union Declared Negotiations to be at Impasse

The Complainant contends that implementation of the work measurement program on October 18, 1976, after the Union's declaration of impasse, violated Sections 19(a)(1) and 19(a)(6).

The record reflects that the Union's declaration of impasse was followed one week later by a letter addressed to the Union for the purpose of announcing an intention to implement the program on October 18, 1976. (Joint Exhibit 9). As was noted, this letter incorporates certain significant concessions agreed to by management as a result of prior bargaining. The program was implemented as proposed except for the concessions agreed to by the Respondent in the September 23, 1976 letter.

The Assistant Secretary has held that agency management violates its obligation to meet and confer under the Order when it unilaterally changes those terms or conditions of employment which are included within the ambit of Section 11(a) of the Order. 14/ After articulating this general rule the Assistant Secretary noted the following in United States Army Corps of Engineers, Philadelphia District:

However, in my judgement, after bargaining to an impasse, that is after good faith negotiations have exhausted the prospects of concluding an agreement, agency management does not violate the Order by unilaterally imposing changes in terms or conditions of employment which do not exceed the scope of its proposals made in the prior negotiations, so long as appropriate notice is given to the exclusive representative as to when the changes are intended to be put into effect in order to afford the exclusive representative ample opportunity to invoke the services of the (Federal Services Impasses Panel) at a time prior to the implementation of the changes.

The record herein discloses that the parties were engaged in bona fide negotiations concerning, among other things, the matter involved in the May 1974 change and that they had reached an impasse in those negotiations on March 4, 1974, some two months prior to the change. There also is no dispute that the Respondent's change in

DECISION AND ORDER CLARIFYING UNIT

Upon a petition duly filed under Section 6 of Executive Order 11491, as amended, a hearing was held before Hearing Officer Ralph R. Smith. The Hearing Officer's rulings made at the hearing are free from prejudicial error and are hereby affirmed.

Upon the entire record in this case, the Assistant Secretary finds:

The Activity-Petitioner, hereinafter called MDW, filed a petition for clarification of unit seeking to clarify whether, after a July 1, 1976, reorganization at the MDW, Wage Grade employees at the Fort Myer Commissary, who were administratively transferred intact to the newly created Army Troop Support Agency, hereinafter called TSA, are still included within the exclusively recognized unit represented by the Federal Employees and Transportation Workers Union, Local 960, Laborers International Union of North America, AFL-CIO, MTC, hereinafter called FETWU. 1/ In this regard, the MDW contends that as a result of the 1976 reorganization some 85 TSA Fort Myer Commissary Wage Grade employees are no longer included in the existing exclusive bargaining unit which is composed of some 288 Wage Grade employees at Fort Myer. On the other hand, the FETWU contends that it still represents the employees in question and that the TSA is a "successor" employer.

1/ The FETWU was granted exclusive recognition on September 20, 1965, for a unit of all nonsupervisory MDW Wage Grade employees assigned to Fort Myer, Virginia, with the normal exclusions. Meat cutters and meat cutter helpers also were expressly excluded from the unit.

The mission of the MDW is one of support to various military organizations in the Washington, D. C. area. Among other things, it provides housing, transportation and personnel services. In addition, it is responsible for the defense of the National Capital region.

Pursuant to the 1976 reorganization, the employees assigned to the Fort Myer Commissary were transferred intact to the TSA, which has the mission of managing the commissaries worldwide. The record reveals that the Fort Myer Commissary uses the same grounds and facilities as were used before the reorganization and that, as a result of the reorganization, the Commissary became a tenant organization at Fort Myer.

While most conditions of employment remain the same for the commissary employees subsequent to the reorganization, certain changes were effected. Thus, pursuant to the reorganization, the employees came under the authority of a new command with a different mission, different funding and different manpower allocation. Also changed were the chain of command and labor relations authority. In this latter regard, the Commissary Officer, as a result of the reorganization, now has the authority to hire, fire, promote and negotiate labor-management agreements, with the TSA having approving authority.

However, the record also reveals that after the reorganization the commissary employees continued to perform the same job functions in the same location with no substantial change in their working conditions, immediate supervision and job contacts or personnel policies. Further, the Fort Myer Commissary, as a tenant organization, continues to be serviced by the MDW's Civilian Personnel Office (CPO) at the base which is responsible for all civilian personnel matters, including day-to-day labor-management relations, for all the civilians located at the MDW. In this regard, the CPO is responsible for employee recruiting and the commissary employees are covered by the same MDW regulations, merit promotion plan, and reduction-in-force area of consideration as are other MDW employees. Also, commissary employees are considered for job vacancies at the MDW and are paid by the same payroll office.

Under the circumstances herein, and noting particularly that the evidence establishes that the July 1, 1976, reorganization involved the administrative transfer to the TSA of only a portion of the employees in the existing exclusively recognized unit, I find that no "successorship" relationship has been established by the reorganization. 2/ Rather, I find that, based upon the circumstances herein, the TSA Fort Myer Commissary employees have remained within the FETWU's existing exclusively recognized unit after the administrative transfer of the Fort Myer Commissary of the MDW to the TSA. Thus, the evidence establishes that after the reorganization the commissary employees continue to perform the same job functions in the same location with no substantial change in their working conditions, immediate supervision and job contacts or personnel policies as before the reorganization. In view of the continuity of most of the employment conditions applicable to these employees, I find that the commissary employees continue, subsequent to the reorganization, to share the same community of interest with other unit employees located at the MDW who are represented by the FETWU.

Also, I find that the retention of the commissary employees in the FETWU's exclusively recognized unit will promote effective dealings and efficiency of agency operations. Thus, the evidence establishes with regard to effective dealings that the MDW's CPO also services the TSA commissary employees and is responsible for the day-to-day labor relations program as it applies to all of the civilian employees it services. With respect to the efficiency of agency operations, I note that the continued inclusion of the Fort Myer Commissary employees in the FETWU's exclusively recognized unit will prevent fragmentation of the existing unit, all of whose employees are serviced by the same CPO.

Accordingly, I find that the Wage Grade commissary employees of the Fort Myer Commissary have remained within the FETWU's existing exclusively recognized unit subsequent to the July 1, 1976, reorganization. 3/

ORDER

IT IS HEREBY ORDERED that the unit sought to be clarified herein for which the Federal Employees and Transportation Workers Union, Local 960, Laborers International Union of North America, AFL-CIO, MTC, was accorded recognition as the exclusive bargaining representative in 1965, be, and it hereby is, clarified to include in said unit the Army Troop Support Agency Wage Grade employees located at the Fort Myer Commissary, Fort Myer, Virginia.

UNITED STATES DEPARTMENT OF LABOR
ASSISTANT SECRETARY FOR LABOR-MANAGEMENT RELATIONS
SUMMARY OF DECISION AND ORDER OF THE ASSISTANT SECRETARY
PURSUANT TO SECTION 6 OF EXECUTIVE ORDER 11491, AS AMENDED

DEPARTMENT OF THE TREASURY,
INTERNAL REVENUE SERVICE,
MILWAUKEE DISTRICT,
MILWAUKEE, WISCONSIN

This case involved an unfair labor practice complaint filed by the National Treasury Employees Union (NTEU) and NTEU Chapter 1, alleging that the Respondent violated Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order by refusing to make available to a union representative the evaluation materials pertaining to an employee who had been selected to be promoted. The materials were sought in order for the NTEU to be able to represent a non-selected employee in a grievance proceeding regarding the promotion action. The Respondent declined to produce the materials in question, contending at various stages of the proceeding that to do so would violate the employee's privacy, and also that the materials were not necessary and relevant to the processing of the grievance.

The Assistant Secretary noted that the Complainant had sought the evaluation materials in connection with the performance of its representational obligations, and found they are clearly necessary and relevant to the effective processing of a grievance which questions the selection herein. Although under the circumstances the mere removal of the candidate's name would not have protected his privacy, it was not established that additional steps could not have been taken to conceal his identity prior to the time the Respondent itself made future confidentiality impossible by release of all the evaluations except that of the selected candidate. Therefore, the Assistant Secretary found that the Respondent violated Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order by refusing to produce materials necessary and relevant to the Complainant in performing its representational duties.

The Assistant Secretary noted that a determination that material sought is necessary and relevant, and that it could be sanitized to protect the subject's privacy, normally would result in an order to produce the material. In this case, however, as the Respondent had made it impossible to conceal the subject's identity, the issue was raised as to what weight should be accorded an employee's right to have his personnel records kept private when this right conflicts with other rights, such as an exclusive representative's right to information necessary and relevant to the performance of its representational functions? The Assistant Secretary stated that in his view an individual's right to privacy of his records must be balanced against the conflicting rights in each case.

He noted that, here, the conflicting rights are broad and involve a paramount public interest. In such a case, the mere identification of the subject of certain documents is not a violation of an individual's privacy so significant as to bar disclosure of the material. The identified employee would still have the right to have the documents sanitized so as to omit any sensitive or damaging personal material.

The Assistant Secretary concluded that the instant case involves several rights which are broad enough to warrant disclosure of the subject's identity, including the right of an exclusive representative to adequately perform its representational functions, as well as the broad public interest in having the Federal government operate within its merit promotion system so that qualified candidates are given equitable treatment, while encouraging the use of nondisruptive grievance procedures to resolve employee disputes.

Under these circumstances, the Assistant Secretary ordered the Respondent to cease and desist from the conduct found violative and to take certain affirmative actions.

DECISION AND ORDER

This matter is before the Assistant Secretary pursuant to Regional Administrator R. C. DeMarco's Order Transferring Case to the Assistant Secretary of Labor in accordance with Section 203.5(b), 203.7(a)(4) and 206.5(a) of the Assistant Secretary's Regulations.

Upon consideration of the entire record in the subject case, including the parties' stipulation of facts, accompanying exhibits, and briefs, the Assistant Secretary finds:

The complaint herein alleges that the Respondent violated Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of Executive Order 11491, as amended, by refusing to make available to a union representative the evaluation materials pertaining to an employee who had been selected to be promoted. The materials were sought in order for the Complainant to represent a non-selected employee in a grievance proceeding regarding the promotion action. 1/ The Respondent declined to produce the materials in question, contending at various stages of this proceeding that to do so would violate the employee's privacy, and also that the materials were not necessary and relevant to the processing of the grievance.

The undisputed facts, as stipulated by the parties, are as follows:

On June 16, 1975, a promotion certificate was issued for a GS-12 Revenue Agent position in an Area Office of the Respondent District. Of the five candidates eligible for the position, only one, Gerald Bell, was found highly qualified. He was selected. Thereafter, pursuant to the parties' negotiated agreement, the Complainant was given a copy of the promotion certificate and was informed of the cut-off score for the highly qualified list.

One of the non-selected eligible candidates, Carl J. Konkel, filed a grievance over the selection under the negotiated grievance procedure. The Complainant requested the evaluation materials which had been considered by the ranking panel in connection with the performance of its duty to represent the grievant. The Respondent supplied materials on all individuals considered for the position but the selected candidate. It declined to supply the materials relating to Bell, claiming that the selected candidate's materials could be readily identified even if his name were deleted because the Respondent had been given the cut-off score for the highly qualified list and the selected candidate was the only one listed as highly qualified.

FINDINGS AND CONCLUSIONS

As noted above, the Complainant sought the evaluation materials in connection with the performance of its representational obligations. In my view, such evaluation materials on a selected candidate are clearly necessary and relevant to the effective processing of a grievance which questions the particular selection involved. The Respondent's argument that the instant complaint should be dismissed because the grievance was nevertheless processed without the materials sought hardly rebuts the necessity or relevance of the materials involved. Although, as described above, the mere removal of the candidate's name would not have protected his privacy, it has not been established that additional steps could not have been taken to conceal his identity before the Respondent itself made future confidentiality impossible by release of all the evaluations except

1/ In its brief, the Complainant contended specifically for the first time that the deletion of parts of the evaluative material it received concerning three other non-selected candidates constituted a separate aspect of its unfair labor practice allegation. As this contention was not raised at either the time of the filing of the charge or the complaint in this matter, I find it unnecessary to pass upon such allegation and, therefore, shall limit my decision herein to the allegation concerning the Respondent's refusal to submit any evaluation material concerning the selected candidate, as alleged in the complaint.

that of the selected candidate. 2/ Therefore, I find that the Respondent violated Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order by refusing to produce materials necessary and relevant to the Complainant in performing its representational duties. 3/

A determination that material sought is necessary and relevant, and that it could be sanitized to protect the subject's privacy, normally would result in an order to produce the material. Here, however, it is now impossible to conceal the subject's identity. Thus, the issue is raised as to what weight is to be accorded an employee's right to have his personnel records kept private when this right conflicts with other rights, such as an exclusive representative's right to information necessary and relevant to the performance of its representational functions?

In my view, an individual's right to privacy of his records must be balanced against the conflicting rights in each case. Here the conflicting rights are broad and involve a paramount public interest. In such a case, the mere identification of the subject of certain documents is not a violation of an individual's privacy so significant as to bar disclosure of the material. The identified employee would still have the right to have the documents sanitized so as to omit any sensitive or damaging personal material.

The instant case involves several rights which are broad enough to warrant disclosure of the subject's identity herein. Thus, involved are the right of an exclusive representative to adequately perform its representational functions as well as the broad public interest in having the Federal government operate within its merit promotion system so that qualified candidates are given equitable treatment, while encouraging the use of nondisruptive grievance procedures to resolve employee disputes.

2/ The Respondent's argument that the material cannot be produced even if necessary and relevant because of privacy considerations must be dealt with in determining whether production can be ordered given the present posture of this case. However, in my opinion, it is not a defense to its initial refusal. In its response to the charge, the Respondent conceded that it should have produced the evaluation at issue at the time it produced the others because it had now precluded the possibility of protecting the privacy of the selected employee. Thus, it stated:

Our analysis of the situation reflects that the union steward's request was appropriate and the material. . . should have been provided with the other material on employees who were not selected. I regret this was not done at the time, since to do it now would obviously invade the privacy of the employee who was selected.

3/ The Respondent contended that the instant complaint should be dismissed because the Complainant could have obtained the desired information directly from Bell. The question herein, however, is whether the Respondent was obligated to provide the requested information, not whether the Complainant could have obtained it through some other means.

In view of the foregoing, I shall order that, upon request, the Respondent make available to the Complainant evaluation materials regarding Gerald Bell used in connection with his selection for promotion pursuant to a June 16, 1975, promotion certificate, which are necessary and relevant to the Complainant's processing of the grievance of Carl J. Konkell, after removing therefrom any personal information of a sensitive or damaging personal nature. ^{4/}

ORDER

Pursuant to Section 6(b) of Executive Order 11491, as amended, and Section 203.26(b) of the Regulations, the Assistant Secretary of Labor for Labor-Management Relations hereby orders that the Department of the Treasury, Internal Revenue Service, Milwaukee District, Milwaukee, Wisconsin, shall:

1. Cease and desist from:

(a) Refusing to permit the National Treasury Employees Union, Chapter 1, access to such documents and materials as are necessary and relevant to the National Treasury Employees Union's processing of a grievance regarding the selection process for the GS-512-12 Revenue Agent vacancy for which Promotion Certificate No. 152-75 was issued.

(b) In any like or related manner, interfering with, restraining, or coercing employees in the exercise of their rights assured by Executive Order 11491, as amended.

2. Take the following affirmative actions in order to effectuate the purposes and policies of Executive Order 11491, as amended:

(a) Upon request, permit the National Treasury Employees Union, Chapter 1, access to such documents and materials as are necessary and relevant to the National Treasury Employees Union's processing of a grievance regarding the selection process for the GS-512-12 Revenue Agent vacancy for which Promotion Certificate No. 152-75 was issued.

(b) Post at its facility at the Internal Revenue Service, Milwaukee District, Milwaukee, Wisconsin, copies of the attached notice marked "Appendix" on forms to be furnished by the Assistant Secretary of Labor for Labor-Management Relations. Upon receipt of such forms, they shall be signed by the District Director, Internal Revenue Service, Milwaukee District, Milwaukee, Wisconsin, and shall be posted and maintained by him for 60 consecutive days thereafter in conspicuous places, including all places where notices to employees are customarily posted. The District Director shall take steps to ensure that notices are not altered, defaced, or covered by any other material.

^{4/} None of the requested material was made part of the record in this case. Therefore, I make no specific finding as to the form in which the material should be submitted.

(c) Pursuant to Section 203.27 of the Regulations, notify the Assistant Secretary, in writing, within 30 days from the date of this order as to what steps have been taken to comply herewith.

SUMMARY OF DECISION AND ORDER OF THE ASSISTANT SECRETARY
PURSUANT TO SECTION 6 OF EXECUTIVE ORDER 11491, AS AMENDED

INTERNAL REVENUE SERVICE and IRS, ATLANTA DISTRICT OFFICE
A/SLMR No. 975

This case involved an unfair labor practice complaint filed by the National Treasury Employees Union (NTEU) and its Chapter 26 alleging that the Respondent Agency and the Respondent Activity violated Section 19(a) (1) and (6) of the Order by refusing to furnish information to the NTEU which the latter sought as relevant and necessary for the processing of a grievance filed under the negotiated grievance procedure.

The Administrative Law Judge concluded, with respect to the Respondent's complaint against the Activity, that the information sought was relevant and necessary to the processing of the grievance and, therefore, the Respondent's refusal to furnish the information was violative of Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order. In reaching this conclusion, the Administrative Law Judge found that this matter was not barred by Section 19(d) because the request for information matter was not litigated under the grievance proceeding, and that it was not rendered moot by the production of the information by the Respondent under the Freedom of Information Act subsequent to its refusal. The Administrative Law Judge recommended dismissal of the complaint with respect to the Respondent Agency.

The Assistant Secretary adopted the Administrative Law Judge's findings, conclusions and recommendations, noting particularly with regard to the dismissal of the complaint as to the Respondent Agency that it was neither alleged, nor does it appear from the record, that the Respondent Agency by any specific act or conduct violated the Order. Accordingly, he ordered that the Respondent Activity cease and desist from the conduct found violative of the Order and that it take certain affirmative actions.

DECISION AND ORDER

On September 19, 1977, Administrative Law Judge David W. Pelkey issued his Recommended Decision and Order in the above-entitled proceeding, finding that the Respondent Activity, Atlanta District Office, had engaged in the unfair labor practices alleged in the complaint and recommending that it cease and desist therefrom and take certain affirmative actions as set forth in the attached Administrative Law Judge's Recommended Decision and Order. The Administrative Law Judge further found that the Respondent Agency, Internal Revenue Service, had not engaged in violative conduct and, therefore, recommended that the complaint be dismissed in its entirety with respect to the Respondent Agency. The Respondent Activity filed exceptions and a supporting brief to the Administrative Law Judge's Recommended Decision and Order.

The Assistant Secretary has reviewed the rulings of the Administrative Law Judge made at the hearing and finds that no prejudicial error was committed. The rulings are hereby affirmed. Upon consideration of the Administrative Law Judge's Recommended Decision and Order and the entire record in the subject case, including the Respondent Activity's exceptions and supporting brief, I hereby adopt the Administrative Law Judge's findings, conclusions and recommendations. 1/

1/ In agreement with the Administrative Law Judge's recommendation, I shall order that the complaint against the Respondent Agency be dismissed. In this regard, I note particularly that the Complainants filed no exceptions to this aspect of the Administrative Law Judge's recommendation and that they neither alleged in the complaint, nor does it appear from the record, that the Respondent Agency, by any specific act or conduct, violated the Order.

Pursuant to Section 6(b) of Executive Order 11491, as amended, and Section 203.26(b) of the Regulations, the Assistant Secretary of Labor for Labor-Management Relations hereby orders that the Internal Revenue Service, Atlanta District Office, shall:

1. Cease and desist from:

(a) Withholding or failing to provide, upon request by the National Treasury Employees Union, Chapter 26, any information relevant to the processing of a grievance, which information is necessary to enable the National Treasury Employees Union, Chapter 26, to discharge its obligation as the exclusive representative to represent the interests of all employees in the exclusively recognized unit.

(b) In any like or related manner interfering with, restraining, or coercing its employees in the exercise of their rights assured by Executive Order 11491, as amended.

2. Take the following affirmative actions in order to effectuate the purposes and policies of Executive Order 11491, as amended:

(a) Upon request, make available to the National Treasury Employees Union, Chapter 26, all information relevant to the processing of a grievance, which information is necessary to enable the National Treasury Employees Union, Chapter 26, to discharge its obligation as the exclusive representative to represent the interests of all employees in the exclusively recognized unit. 3/

(b) Post at its facility at the Internal Revenue Service, Atlanta District Office, copies of the attached notice marked "Appendix" on forms to be furnished by the Assistant Secretary of Labor for Labor-Management Relations. Upon receipt of such forms, they shall be signed by the Director, Internal Revenue Service, Atlanta District Office, and shall be posted and maintained by him for 60 consecutive days thereafter, in conspicuous places, including all bulletin boards and other places where notices to employees are customarily posted. The Director shall take reasonable steps to insure that notices are not altered, defaced, or covered by any other material.

2/ In view of the finding of a Section 19(a)(6) and 19(a)(1) derivative violation and the remedial order herein, I deem it unnecessary to find an independent 19(a)(1) violation flowing from the same violative conduct by the Respondent Activity.

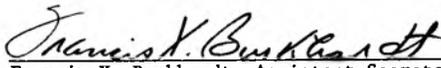

3/ The record reveals that subsequent to the filing of the pre-complaint charge herein the Complainant, NTEU Chapter 26, obtained a copy of the material at issue pursuant to a request under the Freedom of Information Act. Therefore, I find it unnecessary to require production of that specific material in the remedial order herein.

(c) Pursuant to Section 203.27 of the Regulations, notify the Assistant Secretary, in writing, within 30 days from the date of this order as to what steps have been taken to comply herewith.

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED that the complaint, insofar as it alleges that the Respondent Agency violated the Executive Order, be, and it hereby is, dismissed.

interfere with, restrain or coerce an employee in the exercise of the right, freely and without fear of penalty or reprisal, to form, to join and to assist a labor organization; or to refrain from any such activity. By its terms, 19(a)(6) provides that an agency's management shall not refuse to consult, confer or negotiate with a labor organization by refusing to meet with, at reasonable times, and to confer with such an organization, in good faith, with respect to personnel policies and practices and matters affecting working conditions.

This matter arises out of Respondents' refusal to supply Complainant with information requested during the course of Complainant's representation of an employee (Employee) in a grievance attending Employee's entitlement to an award.

A Notice of Hearing on Complaint issued on April 8, 1977, and, on May 24, 1977, a hearing on the Complaint was conducted in accordance with the provisions of 5 U.S.C. 554. At that hearing, the parties submitted the following issues for resolution:

- 1) Whether Complainant has standing to bring an unfair labor practice complaint against Internal Revenue Service.
- 2) Whether Complainant raised the request-for-report issue, and the relevance and necessity of the report, under the negotiated grievance procedure.
- 3) Whether, if it be determined that the request-for-report issue was raised under the grievance procedure, Complainant is barred from pursuing that issue under the unfair labor practice procedure by reason of the provisions of Subsection 19(d) of the Order.
- 4) Whether the requested report is relevant and/or necessary to the processing of the grievance involved herein.
- 5) Whether, by refusing to furnish Complainant with information that was requested during the processing of the grievance, Respondent violated Subsection 19(a)(6) in that Respondents refused to consult, confer and/or negotiate in good faith with respect to personnel policies and practices attending employee grievances.

RECOMMENDED DECISION AND ORDER

In a Complaint filed on February 7, 1977, Complainant alleged that Respondents have engaged in violations of Subsections 19(a)(1) (hereafter 19(a)(1)) and 19(a)(6) (hereafter 19(a)(6)) of Executive Order No. 11491, as amended, (the Order). By its terms, 19(a)(1) provides that an agency's management shall not represented by Complainant; and interfered with Complainant's obligation fairly to represent Employee.

7. Whether the issues relating to violations under 19(a)(1) and 19(a)(6) are now moot because Employee was mailed a copy of the requested report on the same day that Complainant filed the informal unfair labor practice charge.

Such issues will be discussed and resolved in connection with my consideration of the pertinent facts I find to be established as a result of my examination and evaluation of the entire record established herein. The facts found to be established follow.

Findings of Fact

1) On April 14, 1976, a Multi-District Agreement (MDA) governed relationships between Internal Revenue Service (I.R.S.) representing 56 district offices and National Treasury Employees Union (NTEU) representing chapters holding exclusive recognition in those district offices. I.R.S. Atlanta District Office (ADO) was one such office. Chapter 26 was one such chapter.

2) Article 9, Section 2, of the MDA provided, in pertinent part:

"Where it has been administratively determined that an employee has performed:

- 1. higher graded duties for 50% or more of the previous 12 month period,
- 2. in a manner which fully meets the performance requirements of the higher graded duties, such performance will be recognized by a Special Achievement Award."

3) Article 35 of the MDA covered grievances arising out of interpretation and/or application of the terms of the agreement. Section 3A provided that grievances could be initiated by employees, singly or jointly, or by NTEU on behalf of employees. Section 3G gave grieving employees the right to be accompanied, represented and advised by an NTEU steward at any stage of the proceeding.

4) Among ADO employee positions were Employee Plans Specialists. Such specialists occupied position-grade-levels of GS-9, GS-11, GS-12, or GS-13. Occupants of the positions reviewed profit-sharing, pension or similar employer-taxpayer plans to determine whether, under the Internal Revenue Code, the plans qualified as tax-exempt trusts.

5) Guidelines for assignment of plans (cases) to specialists at the four position-grade-levels were published in I.R.S. Manual Supplement 45G-218 (MS-218), January 24, 1975. Plans were categorized by "probable" case-grade-levels designed to correspond to the position-grade-levels of specialists. Generally, the guidelines contemplated (with decisional control being exercised by specialists' supervisors) assignment of a GS-9 case to a GS-9 specialist. Exceptions, for employee developmental purposes, were contemplated. MS-218 directed that, after a stated period, I.R.S. regions submit reports that would be designed to reflect information that included "the frequency and reasons for any changes in the level of cases after being worked."

6) On January 8, 1976, and pursuant to MS-218, an ADO Employee Plans Reviewer prepared a report for the ADO Employee Plans/Exempt Organizations Division Chief. It covered the period from February through December 1975. The report reflected a review of 1011 cases processed to determine whether plans qualified for tax exemption (determination cases) and 889 cases involving on-site examination of plans (examination cases). All cases had been processed by GS-9 through GS-13 specialists. The reviewer reported "grading changes" in 33 of the 1011 determination cases and in 6 of the 889 examination cases. He reported that 30 of the 39 changes arose out of "errors in initial grading decisions" and that 22 of the 30 changes involved reduction in case grades.

7) Between March 16 and 22, 1976, an ADO GS-9 Employee Plans Specialist (Employee) represented to her Group Manager (supervisor) that, based on her list of plans (cases) that the specialist processed for the 12-month period following March 16, 1975, she had performed duties at a position-grade-level above GS-9 for more than 50 percent of the period. She requested that she be given a Special Achievement Award on the basis of such performance. Her supervisor did not concur in the request.

8) On April 14, 1976, Employee and her union steward filed a grievance (with her supervisor) under Article 35 of the MDA. Therein, they alleged that she had satisfied the performance requirements for a Special Achievement Award under Article 9, Section 2, of the MDA. They asked that she be granted the award. This action constituted Step 1 of the prescribed grievance procedure.

9) Step 1 was concluded by the supervisor's denial of the requested relief. The denial was based, in part, on the Group Manager's examination and "downgrading" of some cases that had been processed during a 12-month period agreed upon by Employee and the supervisor. The Group Manager concluded, in part, that Employee had not performed "higher graded duties" for 50 percent or more of that period.

10) In a May 3, 1976, communication to the Group Manager, Employee and the steward asked that she and/or he be furnished with a copy of a report that had been prepared as required by MS-218 and that the grievance be advanced to Step 3 of the grievance procedure.

11) A May 21, 1976, communication to Employee and the steward from her Division Chief referenced a May 13 Step 3 meeting (attendees at which included Employee and the steward) and a denial of her request for the award. Therein, he mentioned her request for a copy of the MS-218 report and his denial of that request. In connection with the denial, the letter contained the following:

"It was pointed out that the report did not contain any employee identities nor any information as to which grades were changed. It is my opinion the report is a management report and has no bearing or impact in the instant grievance."

12) At a June 1, 1976, Step 4 grievance meeting, Complainant's attorney requested a copy of so much of the report as reflected the number of cases it covered and the number of cases on which case-grade-levels had been changed after the cases were processed. The request was denied in the Assistant District Director's June 16 letter to Employee (through the steward). Therein, the writer stated, in part:

"After serious consideration of this modification of your original request for this report, I indicated that I feel this information should not be released in any form in that this is privileged information and furthermore is not germane to your grievance. This report does not contain any employee or case names nor any information such as how many GS-9 cases were changed to GS-11 or GS-12."

13) On July 23, 1976, and as a result of Employee's May 15, 1976, initiative to obtain a copy of the report under the Freedom of Information Act, Commissioner of Internal Revenue Service sent her a sanitized copy thereof.

Discussion

Issue 1: Whether Complainant has standing to bring an unfair labor practice complaint against Internal Revenue Service (I.R.S)

Resolution of this issue on its merits requires recognition of the fact that, at the close of Complainant's case-in-chief at the May 24, 1977, hearing, Respondents' attorney moved for dismissal of I.R.S. as a party. The motion was bottomed on the submissions that "NTEU has no recognition at the national level of the I.R.S., and, furthermore, it has not sought nor obtained national consultation rights." In view of the fact that the subject-matter of the motion had been incorporated as an issue to be resolved on the merits, I elected to incorporate a ruling on the motion in my determination of the issue on its merits.

On brief, at Page 3 thereof, Complainant describes its status, as follows:

"the Complainant, the National Treasury Employees union is the exclusive representative of employees in separate units located in each of the 56 of I.R.S.' 58 District offices. 2/ The NTEU and I.R.S. have in effect a Multi-District Agreement (herein called M.D.A.) which covers employees in each of the 56 District offices". (Footnotes omitted)

Further, on brief and at Page 24, Complainant acknowledges that, at all pertinent times, it "did not have exclusive recognition with the I.R.S. on a nationwide basis," but submits that the M.D.A. was negotiated at the national level on behalf of the district offices. On the basis of the submission, Complainant proposes that a refusal to furnish information relative to a grievance, the procedures attending which are governed by the M.D.A., properly qualifies I.R.S. as a party.

I find the proposal to be without merit. Rather, I find that Respondents' posture on brief, supported by citation of A/SLMR decisions I consider to be controlling herein, as dictating the finding that Complainant has no standing to maintain this unfair labor practice litigation against Internal Revenue Service.

Conclusion: Complainant has no standing to bring an unfair labor practice complaint against Internal Revenue Service.

Conclusion: Internal Revenue Service is not a proper party in this matter and must be dismissed therefrom as a Respondent.

Conclusion: Atlanta District Office is the proper party Respondent herein.

Issue 2: Whether Complainant raised the request-for-report issue, and the relevance and necessity of the report, under the negotiated grievance procedure.

Uncontroverted testimony at the hearing and documentation relied on by the parties establish, and I have found, that Complainant repeatedly requested a copy of the MS-218 report. They establish that the requests were made during accomplishment of the first three steps of the grievance procedure followed in connection with Employee's entitlement to the award.

However, I find no probatively persuasive evidence that Complainant's entitlement to a copy of the report was submitted as an issue to be resolved pursuant to the grievance procedure. Rather, I find that it was not so submitted. I consider the following to be supportive thereof:

- 1) The April 14, 1976, grievance alleged that Respondent had violated Article 9, Section 2, of the M.D.A. That section involves the Special Achievement Award. It does not involve the MS-218 report.
- 2) The Group Manager's April 28, 1976, Step 1 denial of the grievance referenced no resolution of a grievance related to MS-218 or the report issued pursuant thereto.
- 3) The May 3, 1976, appeal to Step 3 of the grievance procedure contained a request for the report but it reflected no refusal of a prior request therefor.
- 4) The Division Chief's May 21, 1976, Step 3 denial of the grievance reflected his "consideration of the grievance filed by you on April 14, 1976." That grievance required no resolution of a report issue. The denial specifically noted that Employee had "grieved under Article 9, Section 2, of the Multi-District Agreement." Further, and with reference to the report, he wrote that it had "no bearing or impact in the instant grievance."

5) The Assistant District Director's June 16, 1976, Step 4 denial of the grievance reflected "the grievance filed by you on April 14, 1976," and specified that "you charged violation of Article 9, Section 2." Whereas the Assistant Director mentioned that a request for the report "had previously been made under the negotiated grievance procedure and the Freedom of Information Act," he stated an opinion that the report was not "germane to your grievance."

The foregoing is among the evidence that convinces me that, during the processing of the grievance through Step 4, no proper person considered the request for the report to be an issue to be resolved under the negotiated grievance procedure.

Conclusion: Complainant did not raise the request-for-report issue under the negotiated grievance procedure.

Conclusion: Complainant raised the request-for-report issue during the negotiated grievance procedure.

I find that the record contains evidence that is sufficient to support adoption of the proposition that Complainant raised the relevance and necessity of the report during the negotiated grievance procedure.

The appeal to Step 3 challenged the Group Manager's undertaking to regrade cases that Employee had processed. It indicated that the requirements of MS-218 had not been followed. It noted that a report generated by MS-218 reflected "the frequency and reasons for any changes in the level of cases being worked." The foregoing was followed by a request for a copy of the report.

The Division Chief's Step 3 denial noted that, in connection with his denial of the request for the report, he had "pointed out that the report did not contain any employee identities nor any information as to which grades were changed." His opinion, that the report was a "management report," not bearing or impacting on the grievance, is read as reflecting his having considered the relevance and necessity of the report contents to resolution of the grievance.

The Assistant District Director's Step 4 denial acknowledged that Complainant's attorney had indicated that he believed that so much of the report as contained "information indicating the number of cases and the number of cases changed by review" was relevant and necessary to proper prosecution of the grievance.

Respondent's Labor-Management Relations Specialist testified that she and the Division Chief discussed the relevance and necessity of the report to proper administration of the Step 3 aspects of the grievance.

Such evidence convinces me that, during the processing of the grievance through Step 4, the relevancy and necessity of the report to proper resolution of the grievance was brought to the attention of Respondent.

Conclusion: Complainant raised the relevance and necessity of the report during the negotiated grievance procedure.

Conclusion: During the negotiated grievance procedure, Respondent was aware that Complainant considered information in the report to be relevant and necessary to proper presentation of Employee's grievance.

Issue 3: Whether, if it be determined that the request-for-report issue was raised under the grievance procedure, Complainant is barred from pursuing that issue under the unfair labor practice procedure by reason of the provisions of subsection 19(d) of the Order.

Resolution of this issue on its merits requires recognition of the fact that, at the close of Complainant's case-in-chief at the May 24, 1977, hearing, Respondent's attorney moved that the Complaint be dismissed because Complainant had then failed to meet the burden of proof to show that the Complaint was not barred by 19(d). I elected to incorporate a ruling on the motion in my determination of the issue on its merits.

In pertinent part, Subsection 19(d) reads, as follows:

"Issues which can be raised under a grievance procedure may, in the discretion of the aggrieved party, be raised under that procedure or the complaint procedure under this section, but not under both procedures."

In effecting resolution of Issue 2, I concluded that Complainant raised the request-for-report issue during the negotiated grievance procedure and that it did not raise that issue under that procedure. In the context in which I discussed them in connection with Issue 2, I consider the distinction between during and under to be decisively controlling. Accordingly, I find that the request-for-report issue was neither litigated nor resolved pursuant to the grievance procedure. Further, I find that 19(d) does not bar resolution of that issue under an unfair labor practice complaint.

~~The findings have not been made without having evaluated Respondent's position on brief: the issue cannot be considered herein because Respondent's refusal to supply Complainant with requested information "has been raised through the negotiated grievance procedure."~~ Respondent submits that:

"[w]hile it is clear that one of the issues in the grievance was whether Ms. Smith was entitled to a Special Achievement Award, it is equally clear that other issues arose as to * * * and whether the requested reports were relevant and necessary for processing the Smith grievance."

In support of its position, Respondent cites Equal Employment Opportunity Commission, A/SLMR No. 707 (1976), and Department of the Army, U.S. Army Transportation Center and Fort Eustis, Virginia, A/SLMR No. 681 (1976). Whereas each case supports the proposition that the same subject-matter cannot be pursued as a grievance and as an unfair labor practice, neither case presents a factual situation wherein a party challenged the fact that the same subject-matter was so pursued. Herein, the fact of submission of the request-for-report issue under the grievance procedure has been challenged. Herein, I find, consistent with the position of Complainant on brief, that the grievance issue was whether Employee was entitled to a Special Achievement Award and that the unfair labor practice issue is whether Respondent properly refused to give Complainant requested information.

Respondent also references Boston District Office, Internal Revenue Service, A/SLMR No. 727 (1976). The factual situation therein resembles the factual situation herein in that it involved an activity's refusal to furnish a union local with information that the local felt was required properly to represent an employee in an adverse action situation. The Decision and Order states, relative to that request-for-information issue:

" * * * the issue was litigated before the arbitrator at the advisory arbitration proceeding; and the issue was considered by the arbitrator and was the subject of several rulings at the hearing, as well as a written ruling with respect to whether the Complainant was entitled to certain of the material sought.

* * * *

" Thus, the record clearly reflects that throughout the adverse action proceeding the Complainant incorporated with the merits of the case its asserted right to material deemed necessary and relevant to its role as the exclusive representative of Catania."

"Under the particular circumstances" of that case, 19(d) was found to bar pursuit of the request-for-information unfair labor practice complaint.

I consider the "litigated issue" aspect of Boston as so distinguishing it from the instant matter as to render it not controlling herein. I do not find that the request-for-report issue was litigated during the grievance procedure.

Significantly, I find a Decision and Order, issued on the same date Boston issued, to be controlling herein. In Department of the Navy, Long Beach Naval Shipyard, Long Beach, California, A/SLMR No. 728 (1976), it was determined that the evidence established that the matter of access to the requested documents was not made an issue in the grievance involved; that the matter was not incorporated in or decided in the grievance proceeding. Accordingly, 19(d) was found not to bar proceedings under an unfair labor charge complaint.

Conclusion: During the presentation of its case-in-chief, Complainant made a prima facie showing that the Complaint was not barred by Subsection 19(d) of the Order.

Conclusion: Subsection 19(d) of the Order does not bar processing of the request-for-report issue under the unfair labor practice procedure.

Issue 4: Whether the requested report is relevant and/or necessary to the processing of the grievance involved herein.

On brief, Respondent submits that the report is neither relevant nor necessary. Factual support for the submission is based on the proposition that record evidence includes that which establishes that the report: 1) does not show how many of any particular employee's case grades were changed; 2) does not reflect the number of cases that were reviewed; 3) does not cover the period covered by the grievance; 4) does not reflect grade changes according to grade level; 5) does not show how many cases were changed by Group Managers; 6) does not contain accurate statistics; and 7) does not contain information reasonably required to determine whether Employee's Group Manager acted discriminatorily or unjustly in effecting a review of Employee's cases.

Legal support for the submission is based on the holdings in Department of Defense, State of New Jersey, A/SLMR No. 323 (1973), and Agency for International Development, Department of State, A/SLMR No. 676, (1976).

On brief, Complainant submits that the report is relevant and necessary to enable it properly to represent Employee during the grievance procedures. The submission is based on the proposition that the report demonstrates that the grade-levels initially assigned to cases processed by specialists are, percentage-wise, more accurate than is the accuracy of the grade-levels assigned to cases processed by Employee as the result of the Group Manager's grievance - oriented, post-processing, review of Employee's cases. Complainant proposes that the report is relevant and necessary because it is supportive of Employee's claim of entitlement to the Special Achievement Award.

I determine that resolution of this issue requires answers to the following questions:

- 1) Is the nature of the information in the report reasonably related to the subject-matter of the grievance? (Is the report relevant to the grievance?).
- 2) Is the nature of the information in the report reasonably useful in, and properly applied to, resolution of the grievance? (Is the report necessary in processing the grievance?).

Crucial to the Step 3 and Step 4 denials of the grievance was the determination that Employee was not entitled to the Special Achievement Award because she spent but 27.3 percent of her time on "higher graded duties." That percentage resulted, in part, from the downgrading of a number of cases, after they had been processed by Employee, by her Group Manager. The report involves the number and percentage of cases of specialists, including Employee, that were downgraded or otherwise regraded by review personnel after they had been processed. I conclude, therefore, that the nature of the information in the report is reasonably related to the subject-matter of the grievance. The former is relevant to the latter.

Essential to establishment of Employee's position during the grievance procedure is the need to establish, at a minimum, that the regrading action taken by the Group Manager is inconsistent with and/or unsupported by regrading actions taken by other reviewing personnel. I find it reasonable to adopt the proposition that the contents of the report may satisfy that need. I conclude, therefore, that the nature of the information in the report is reasonably useful in, and properly applied to, resolution of the grievance. The former is necessary in the latter.

Whereas I respect the interpretation Respondent attaches to the evidence it references, I do not accept that interpretation. I do not find that it bears on relevance or necessity. Rather, I find that it bears on the reliability and probative value of the information in the report. Further, I read Department of Defense as being supportive of the proposition that a union cannot meet its grievance responsibility if it is refused certain information but I read it as making no meaningful contribution to the resolution of this issue. Still further, I read Agency for International Development as being persuasive herein only if I adopt the opinions of Respondent's personnel as to relevance and necessity. I do not adopt those opinions.

Conclusion: The requested report is relevant and necessary to the processing of the grievance involved herein.

Issue 5: Whether, by refusing to furnish Complainant with information that was requested during the processing of the grievance, Respondent violated Subsection 19(a)(6) in that Respondent refused to consult, confer and/or negotiate in good faith with respect to personnel policies and practices attending employee grievances.

On brief, Respondent proposes that the facts developed in the record dictate a finding that the refusal did not constitute a refusal prohibited by the Order. The proposal is based on the submission that the report is neither relevant nor necessary properly to process Employee's grievance.

Heretofore, I have concluded that the report is relevant and necessary properly to pursue Employee's grievance. Accordingly, I find Respondent's proposal, as based on the submission, to be without merit.

Respondent acknowledges, and Complainant submits, on brief, that Department of State, State of New Jersey, A/SLMR No. 323 (1973); and Agency for International Development, Department of State, A/SLMR No. 676 (1976), stand for the proposition that, if the information is relevant and necessary, management is obligated to honor a union's request therefor so that the representative can police and administer so much of an agreement as relates to representing an employee in a grievance proceeding. Complainant's identification with grievance matters is found in so much of Subsection 10 of the Order as states:

" * * * It is responsible for representing the interests of all employees in the unit * * *. The labor organization shall be given the opportunity to be represented at formal discussions * * * concerning grievances, * * * *".

Conclusion: By refusing to furnish Complainant with information that was requested during the processing of the grievance, Respondent violated Subsection 19(a)(6) of the Order.

Issue 6: Whether, by refusing to furnish Complainant with information requested during the negotiated grievance procedure, Respondent interfered with and restrained Employee in her right to present her grievance; interfered with her right fairly to be represented by Complainant; and interfered with Complainant's obligation fairly to represent Employee.

In its treatment of this issue on brief, Respondent addresses factual, but not legal, considerations. I have heretofore disposed of the merits of Respondent's factual position as to the relevance and necessity of the report. I have rejected it.

Treatment of the legal considerations attending this issue, initially, involves a determination as to whether Respondent's refusal interfered with and restrained Employee in her right to present her grievance. I find controlling guidance in two cases. In Department of the Navy, Long Beach Naval Shipyard, Long Beach, California, A/SLMR No. 728 (1976), a respondent failed to make available documents a committee used in evaluating candidates for an open position. The documents were requested during grievance proceedings. The failure to make the documents available was determined to constitute a violation of Subsection 19(a)(1) of the Order. In General Services Administration, Region 3, A/SLMR No. 734 (1976), a respondent failed to make documents available in a timely manner. The documents were requested in connection with a contemplated grievance. Such a failure was determined to constitute a violation of the subsection.

Controlling guidance in determining whether Respondent's refusal interfered with Employee's right fairly to be represented by Complainant is found in Department of Health, Education, and Welfare, Social Security Administration, Kansas City Payment Center, Bureau of Retirement and Survivors Insurance, A/SLMR No. 411 (1974). In that case, a respondent refused to make requested machine utilization reports available. It was determined that such action inherently interfered with and coerced the grieving employees in their right to have their exclusive representative act for and represent their interests in the grievances.

Controlling guidance in determining whether Respondent's refusal interfered with Complainant's obligation fairly to represent Employee is found in the cases referenced above and in two additional cases. Department of Navy, Dallas Naval Air Station, Dallas, Texas, A/SLMR No. 510 (1975), involved a Respondent's refusal, during grievance processing, to make requested information available. It was determined that the refusal precluded the union from meeting its responsibility to represent the interests of the grieving employees. Department of Defense, State of New Jersey, A/SLMR No. 323 (1973), held that a labor organization cannot meet its responsibility to represent unit employees' interests if it is prevented from obtaining relevant and necessary information in connection with the processing of grievances.

Conclusion: Respondent's refusal to furnish the requested information interfered with and restrained Employee in her right to present her grievance.

Conclusion: Respondent's refusal to furnish the requested information interfered with Employee's right fairly to be represented by Complainant.

Conclusion: Respondent's refusal to furnish the requested information interfered with Complainant's obligation fairly to represent Employee.

Issue 7 : Whether the issues relating to violations under 19(a)(1) and 19(a)(6) are now moot because Employee was mailed a copy of the requested report on the same day that Complainant filed the informal unfair labor practice charge.

As I read its position on brief, Respondent addresses the issue of whether, in view of the fact that Complainant received a copy of the report, the issues herein have become moot. Respondent submits that they have become moot.

I disagree. The pertinent issues herein are not resolved by receipt of the report. The pertinent issues revolve around the relevance of and the need for the report in connection with the grievance procedure, and the supportability of Respondent's refusal to furnish the report upon request.

Further, Employee obtained a copy of the report as a result of a request therefor under the Freedom of Information Act (FOIA). FOIA obligates agency and department heads to furnish information that is not exempt from disclosure under the statute. FOIA is not concerned with, and it does not govern, refusal to disclose information as an unfair labor practice under the Order. At the same time, entitlement to information under the Order is not governed by the guidelines under FOIA. Representatives are entitled to information under the Order, as I read the Order, if the information is, among other considerations, relevant and/or necessary for the accomplishment of purposes, protection of rights, and/or meeting of obligations under the Order.

On brief, Complainant submits that, if this matter be considered moot, Respondent could refuse to furnish relevant and/or necessary information to a representative and force an individual to seek that information under FOIA. Such, Complainant proposes, could render the representative ineffective in processing grievances and could impede "policing" a collective bargaining agreement. I evaluate the foregoing in connection with so much of Page 17 of Respondent's brief as reads:

"Upon determining, after due consideration, that the union was not entitled to the reports, management informed the union of this and supplied it with reasons and written decisions. It is difficult to see how the reasoned denial of information to which the union was not entitled would be an unfair labor practice."

My evaluation results in my determination that Complainant's submission and proposal have merit and support a finding that neither is this matter now moot nor are the consequences of actions taken by Respondent de minimus in effect.

Conclusion: The issues relating to violations under 19(a)(1) and 19(a)(6) are not now moot.

Recommendations

Upon the basis of the foregoing findings and conclusions, I recommend that the Complaint in Case No. 40-7843(CA) be dismissed as to Respondent Internal Revenue Service.

Having found that Respondent I.R.S. Atlanta District Office has engaged in conduct that is violative of Subsections 19(a)(1) and 19(a)(6) of Executive Order 11491, as amended, I recommend that the Assistant Secretary, to effectuate the purposes and policies of that Order, adopt the following Recommended Order.

Recommended Order

Pursuant to Section 6(a) of Executive Order 11491, as amended, and Section 203.26(a) of the Regulations, the Assistant Secretary of Labor for Labor-Management Relations orders that the Complaint in Case No. 40-7843(CA) be, and the same is hereby, dismissed as to Respondent Internal Revenue Service.

Pursuant to Section 6(b) of Executive Order 11491, as amended, and Section 203.26(b) of the Regulations, the Assistant Secretary of Labor for Labor-Management Relations hereby orders that I.R.S. Atlanta District Office shall:

1. Cease and desist from:
 - a. Withholding or failing to provide, upon request by National Treasury Employees Union (NTEU Chapter 26) any information relative to the processing of a grievance, which information is necessary to enable National Treasury Employees Union (NTEU Chapter 26) to discharge its obligation as the exclusive representative to represent effectively all employees in the exclusively recognized unit.

b. Interfering with, restraining or coercing its employees in the exercise of their rights assured by the Executive Order by denying National Treasury Employees Union (NTEU Chapter 26) information necessary to enable such labor organization, as the exclusive representative, to discharge its obligation to represent effectively all employees in the exclusively recognized unit.

c. In any like or related manner interfering with, restraining, or coercing its employees in the exercise of their rights assured by Executive Order 11491, as amended.

2. Take the following affirmative actions in order to effectuate the purposes and policies of Executive Order 11491, as amended:

a. Upon request, make available to National Treasury Employees Union (NTEU Chapter 26) all information relevant to the processing of a grievance, which information is necessary to enable National Treasury Employees Union (NTEU Chapter 26) to discharge its obligations as the exclusive representative to represent effectively all employees in the exclusively recognized unit.

b. Post, at its I.R.S. Atlanta District Office facilities, copies of the attached notice marked "Appendix" on forms to be furnished by the Assistant Secretary of Labor for Labor-Management Relations. Upon receipt of such forms, they shall be signed by I.R.S. Atlanta District Office Director and shall be posted and maintained by him for 60 consecutive days thereafter, in conspicuous places, including all bulletin boards and other places where notices to employees are customarily posted. The Director shall take reasonable steps to insure that such notices are not altered, defaced, or covered by any other material.

c. Pursuant to Section 203.27 of the Regulations, notify the Assistant Secretary, in writing, within 30 days from the date of this order, as to what steps have been taken to comply herewith.

Case No. 73-902(CA)

SERVICE EMPLOYEES' INTERNATIONAL UNION, LOCAL 556, AFL-CIO

Complainant

This case involved an unfair labor practice complaint filed by the Service Employees' International Union, Local 556, AFL-CIO, alleging that the Respondent, Veterans Administration Regional Office, Honolulu, Hawaii, had violated Section 19(a)(1) and (2) of the Order by attempting to restrict employee Maggie M. Sodergren from soliciting authorization cards on behalf of a labor organization, and by reassigning her to a new position in reprisal for her union activities.

The Chief Administrative Law Judge concluded that the Respondent had not engaged in conduct violative of the Order. He noted that the Respondent's decision to reassign Sodergren was not motivated by anti-union animus, but, rather, was based on a Grievance Examiner's finding that she should be transferred, and on Sodergren's own request for a transfer as part of that grievance remedy. He further found that the allegation that the Respondent had attempted to restrict Sodergren from soliciting authorization cards was not contained in the pre-complaint charge and, thus, was not properly a part of the complaint, but that, in any event, the Complainant had failed to prove more than a de minimus violation in this regard. Accordingly, the Chief Administrative Law Judge recommended that the complaint be dismissed in its entirety.

Noting particularly the absence of exceptions, the Assistant Secretary adopted the findings, conclusions and recommendations of the Chief Administrative Law Judge and ordered that the complaint be dismissed.

DECISION AND ORDER

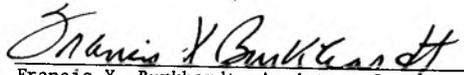

On October 27, 1977, Chief Administrative Law Judge H. Stephan Gordon issued his Recommended Decision and Order in the above-entitled proceeding, finding that the Respondent had not engaged in the unfair labor practices alleged in the complaint and recommending that the complaint be dismissed in its entirety. No exceptions were filed to the Chief Administrative Law Judge's Recommended Decision and Order.

The Assistant Secretary has reviewed the rulings of the Chief Administrative Law Judge made at the hearing and finds that no prejudicial error was committed. The rulings are hereby affirmed. Upon consideration of the Chief Administrative Law Judge's Recommended Decision and Order and the entire record in this case, and noting particularly that no exceptions were filed, I hereby adopt the Chief Administrative Law Judge's findings, conclusions and recommendations.

ORDER

IT IS HEREBY ORDERED that the complaint in Case No. 73-902(CA) be, and it hereby is, dismissed.

RECOMMENDED DECISION AND ORDER

Statement of the Case

This proceeding arises under Executive Order 11491, as amended (hereinafter referred to as the Order) pursuant to a Notice of Hearing issued by the Regional Administrator, U.S. Department of Labor, San Francisco Region.

The proceeding was initiated by the filing of a complaint on November 8, 1976 by Service Employees' International Union Local 556 (hereinafter referred to as the Union or Complainant) against the Veterans Administration Regional Office in Honolulu, Hawaii (hereinafter referred to as VARO or the Activity). This complaint was amended on January 25, 1977.

The amended complaint alleges that the Activity violated Sections 19(a)(1) and (2) of the Order when it unlawfully restricted employee Maggie M. Sodergren's solicitation activities on behalf of a labor organization and when it reassigned her to another division within VARO without prior consultation with the Union and in reprisal for her Union activities.

At the hearing all parties were afforded a full opportunity to be heard, to adduce evidence, to examine and cross-examine witnesses and to make oral argument. Post-hearing briefs, received from both parties, have been given careful consideration.

Based on the entire record in this case, including my observation of the witnesses and their demeanor, and all the testimony and evidence adduced at the hearing, I make the following findings, conclusions, and recommendations:

Background

The Honolulu Regional Office of the Veterans Administration is organizationally divided into several divisions under the supervision of a central director. At all times material herein, most of the 100 GS employees working at VARO were located at 680 Ala Moana Boulevard in Honolulu. However some divisions, including the Loan Guaranty Division, were located in the Hawaiian Life Building, some two-and-a-half miles away.

Ms. Sodergren first began work with the Activity as a secretary in the Adjudication Division. From May 1974, until January 1976, she worked under the direct supervision of the Adjudication Officer, Mr. Jess D. Johnson. Mr. Johnson was transferred to a different duty station on January 22, 1976. The new adjudication officer, Mr. Jim H. Shepherd, supervised Ms. Sodergren until she was transferred to the Loan Guaranty Division on November 7, 1976. Mr. William C. Oshiro has been the Activity's director throughout the entire period of Ms. Sodergren's employment at VARO.

Employee's Union Activities

Ms. Sodergren first attempted to organize her fellow employees in April 1976. At this time her efforts were on behalf of the American Federation of Government Employees (hereinafter referred to as AFGE). On April 28, 1976 VARO's director issued a memorandum to all employees and supervisors explaining employee rights with respect to union organizing activities. Among other things, the memorandum stated that employees could attend union organizing meetings and participate in other organizing activities only while they were in "non-duty status." This portion of the memo was revised at Ms. Sodergren's request. The revision, issued on May 7, 1976, explained that participation in union organizing activities was also permissible during employee rest periods, coffee breaks, and the half-hour lunch break in addition to other non-working periods.

AFGE's organizing drive proved unsuccessful. However in May 1976, Ms. Sodergren began organizing again, this time on behalf of the Complainant. On June 3, 1976 an RO petition was filed by the Union with the Department of Labor seeking an election at VARO. On July 30, 1976, the Union was certified as the exclusive bargaining agent for VARO employees.

The President of Local 556 appointed Ms. Sodergren Employee Union Representative on August 13, 1976, and VARO's director was informed of this action by letter on this same date. Ms. Sodergren's duties as Union Representative include helping employees during lunch and break times, with grievances and misunderstandings.

Mr. Oshiro testified that he was fully aware of Ms. Sodergren's union activities.

Employee's Work Performance

Ms. Sodergren stated that she worked as a secretary (stenography) in the Adjudication Division and as an Administrative Aide (typing) in the Loan Guaranty Division. Both positions were at the GS-5 level. Complainant's charge letter indicates she received a notice of unsatisfactory work performance from her supervisor on June 23, 1976. Apart from this incident, however, the record is devoid of any reference to unsatisfactory work performance.

Accordingly I find that her work performance was completely satisfactory at all other times relevant to these proceedings.

Employee's Grievances 1/

During the course of her tenure in the Adjudication Division, Ms. Sodergren filed several grievances complaining of the behavior of various employees. On September 23, 1975 she filed a grievance with her supervisor, Jess D. Johnson, alleging indecorous conduct and harassment toward her by other employees in the Adjudication Division. She requested that these employees be disciplined and controlled. On October 24, 1975 she wrote a memorandum to Mr. Oshiro complaining that the Adjudication Officer was unable to handle the situation there and requested reassignment to another office in the Agency. In a memorandum to VARO's Personnel Officer dated October 28, 1975, Ms. Sodergren emphasized that she wanted her reassignment to be made "constructively...that it be a learning reassignment leading to a managerial position in the Agency." 2/

Grievant's designated representative reiterated her demand for disciplinary action against specific employees in a memorandum to VARO's director dated November 3, 1975. This memorandum also requested disciplinary action against her supervisor, Jess D. Johnson and stated that grievant would drop all actions against management "if a permanent reassignment elsewhere in the Agency ... will be undertaken immediately." 3/ Before her grievance could be resolved, however, Mr. Johnson was transferred to a new duty station in Lincoln, Nebraska. A grievance was then filed against Mr. Oshiro complaining that the time limits for the processing of grievances had not been met with respect to her grievances against Mr. Johnson.

Another, unrelated grievance was filed on March 5, 1976 regarding the director's decision to charge grievant with two hours leave without pay because of an absence from the office on January 25, 1976. This grievance was filed jointly against the director, the new Adjudication Officer, and Ms. Kathy Morgan, the Acting Adjudication Officer on February 25, 1976. The grievance was amended on March 8, 1976 to include Ms. Asako Watanabe, VARO's Personnel Officer. In addition, a grievance was filed against Mr. Ray E. Smith, Field Director, Area 4, VARO, Washington, D.C., and his Assistant, Ray T. Miller, Jr., for failing to satisfactorily and timely respond to grievant's complaints against Mr. Oshiro and others at VARO.

1/ This section relies substantially on the summary set forth in the Grievance Examiner's Report and Findings, issued August 23, 1976.

The Grievance Examiner's Report

The Grievance Examiner's Report and Findings on Ms. Sodergren's grievances was issued on August 23, 1976. In it, the Examiner found (1) that the grievances against Mr. Johnson and other employees in the Adjudication Division, filed prior to January 29, 1976, became moot on that date by virtue of Mr. Johnson's transfer to another station; (2) that Management's failure to timely resolve Ms. Sodergren's grievances was partly due to their attempts to amicably resolve the dispute and did not violate the spirit of the guidelines; and (3) that grievant should not have been charged with two hours leave without pay on February 25, 1976.

In making his recommendation, the Examiner first determined that disciplinary action against other agency officials or employees was not an appropriate remedy for redress of personal grievances. He also found that the grievant "is still convinced she is the object of unwarranted bias and prejudice, emanating from her supervisor, the current Adjudication Officer." 4/ Therefore, he recommended that efforts be made to transfer grievant from Adjudication to another division at VARO.

By letter dated September 15, 1976, Ray Smith advised Ms. Sodergren that he was accepting the Examiner's findings and recommendations. Specifically, he stated that he had asked the director to reassign her to another division at VARO and to amend her time card for February 26, 1976, restoring two hours of pay. On November 3, 1976 Mr. Oshiro notified Ms. Sodergren that he had reassigned her to the Loan Guaranty Division. This reassignment became effective on November 7, 1976.

Position of the Parties

The Complainant alleges that Ms. Sodergren's reassignment was initiated in reprisal for her union activities, and was conducted without prior consultation with the Union, in violation of Sections 19(a)(1) and (2) of the Order. Complainant also alleges that the Activity violated these sections when it restricted Ms. Sodergren's circulation and solicitation of union authorization cards during AFGE's organizing drive.

Complainant primarily relies on the Activity's unlawful restrictions on union organizing activity, the treatment of Ms. Sodergren's grievances, and the timing and manner of her reassignment as evidence these actions were taken in response to Ms. Sodergren's union activities. Complainant also points to Ms. Sodergren's statement that she no longer wished to be reassigned after January 1976, as further evidence of the Activity's bad faith.

In contrast, the Activity argues that Ms. Sodergren's reassignment was solely the result of the implementation of the Grievance Examiner's recommendations. The Activity relies heavily on the Examiner's finding of a continuing conflict to support their contention that the reassignment was justified by business considerations. In addition, the Activity argues that the Complainant has failed to demonstrate anti-union animus in connection with the reassignment.

Further, the Activity argues that the resolution of personal grievances is not a proper subject for an unfair labor practice complaint.

Finally, the Activity argues that the Complainant's amended complaint raises new matter not mentioned in the charge letter and not timely filed, in violation of the Secretary's regulations.

Conclusions of Law

The procedures for filing an Unfair Labor Practice Complaint are clear. Before a complaint may issue, a written charge must be filed with the charged party specifically enumerating the unfair practices. The parties then have 30 days to informally resolve the dispute, after which a complaint may be filed limited to the matters raised in the charge.

Complainant's amended complaint alleges violations of Section 19(a)(1) and (2) of the Order based on the Activity's restriction of Ms. Sodergren's right to circulate and solicit union authorization cards. Yet there is no mention of any such incident in Complainant's charge letter of October 7, 1976. Nor can the allegations in Complainant's charge letter be read so broadly as to include such a violation. The letter is concerned with alleged violations of the Order based on the processing and resolution of Ms. Sodergren's grievances. The charges concerning restraint of union organizing activity are unrelated to the processing of these grievances. Therefore, I conclude that this portion of the complaint was not raised in a timely charge letter and therefore is barred from consideration in the Unfair Labor Practice complaint. See 29 CFR §203.2(a)(2) and §203.2(b). See also Defense General Supply Center, A/SLMR No. 821 (April 7, 1977).

Furthermore, the Complainant failed to prove more than a de minimus violation of the Order. The only evidence of an improper restriction of union organizing activity occurred in connection with an April 28, 1976 memorandum during AFGE's campaign. However, Mr. Oshiro testified that this memorandum was corrected on May 7, 1976 at Ms. Sodergren's request. Absent a showing of further restrictions on employee rights to organize, I find that the Activity engaged in no more than a de minimus violation of the Order in connection with management's April 28, 1976 memorandum, which violation was adequately remedied by a May 7, 1976 correction.

Ms. Sodergren's reassignment

I further conclude that Ms. Sodergren's reassignment to another division within the agency did not interfere with the exercise of any employee rights under the Order nor did it discriminate against her in violation of the Order.

Ms. Sodergren's reassignment arose in connection with the implementation of a non-negotiated grievance procedure. Section 19(d) of the Order prohibits raising issues in an unfair labor practice complaint which previously been the subject of such a procedure. However, the issues in the case sub judice involve alleged violations in the processing and resolution of those grievances, issues not before the Examiner and not discussed in his report. Therefore, this section constitutes no bar to raising these issues in an unfair labor practice complaint. Long Beach Naval Shipyard, Long Beach, California, A/SLMR No. 728 (October 13, 1976).

That the Order reserves to management officials the right to transfer and reassign employees cannot be disputed. However this right is not unlimited: in exercising its prerogatives management may not interfere with, restrain, or coerce an employee in the exercise of rights assured by the Order or encourage or discourage membership a labor organization by discrimination in hiring, tenure, promotion, or other conditions of employment.

However, Complainant has failed to prove by a preponderance of the credible evidence in this case that the Activity interfered with, restrained, or coerced any employee in the exercise of his rights under the Order. Testimony indicated that as a result of the physical separation between the Loan Guaranty Division and the bulk of the GS unit employees, Ms. Sodergren's job as Union representative has been made more difficult. On the other hand, testimony also indicated that management made efforts to alleviate these difficulties. With Ms. Sodergren's help, a memorandum was drafted informing employees that transportation would be provided should they ever want to consult with their representative. Furthermore, the employees remained within easy telephone and travel distance of Ms. Sodergren. Finally, the Director testified that the separation was to be only temporary, until all divisions could be moved into a new Federal Building sometime in 1977. Indeed, this consolidation has already taken place, and any objections to her transfer based on her physical separation from the bulk of the GS unit employees can now be regarded as moot.

The evidence indicates that Ms. Sodergren's reassignment made her union duties difficult, but not impossible. There was no evidence that a single employee was, in fact, interfered with, restrained, or coerced in the exercise of his or her rights. Ms. Sodergren testified that she gets "[h]ardly any phone calls" at her new place of employment, but there is no evidence that this was the result of management coercion. Accordingly, I am constrained to conclude that Ms. Sodergren's reassignment did not interfere with, restrain, or coerce any employee in the exercise of rights assured by the Order.

Furthermore, the mere coincidence of an employee's union activity and that employee's reassignment will not support a charge of discrimination. In addition, there must be a finding of anti-union animus. EEOC, A/SLMR No. 802

(February 18, 1977). However, no such animus appears on the face of the present record. To the contrary, the record reveals management has been sensitive to union concerns. Management moved quickly to correct its April 22, 1976 memorandum on union organizing activities when errors were brought to its attention. Mr. Oshiro testified that he remained scrupulously neutral during Complainant's organizing campaign and counselled his staff members to do likewise. In addition, management attempted to alleviate the disruption of Ms. Sodergren's union activities, by issuing a memorandum, partly drafted by her, indicating when and where she could be reached for consultation with individual employees. By contrast, no evidence was introduced indicating any anti-union animus by management.

The coincidence between Ms. Sodergren's designation as Union representative and her reassignment is indeed striking, but not remarkable. The fact remains that Ms. Sodergren requested reassignment several times and failed to inform management of any change in disposition. Under these circumstances, I cannot find that Ms. Sodergren reassignment was motivated by any feelings of animus toward Complainant.

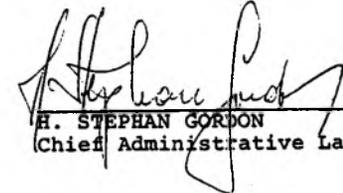

Moreover, I conclude that Complainant has failed to prove that the Activity in fact discriminated against Ms. Sodergren with respect to hiring, tenure, promotion, or other conditions of employment. The Complainant adduced much evidence as to the differences between her present and former positions. However Complainant failed to show that the two differ markedly in promotion prospects or other conditions of employment. Both positions are listed at the GS-5 level. Both positions are primarily secretarial, with administrative functions as well. An alleged difference in "growth potential" was adequately explained by Mr. Oshiro as a misunderstanding stemming from a job reclassification proposal which was rejected in 1970.

Claimant's charges of discrimination must also be evaluated in the light of Ms. Sodergren's repeated requests for permanent reassignment out of the Adjudication Division. While her transfer to the Loan Guaranty Division may not have been ideal from her viewpoint, it was a transfer to a position consistent with her skills and background. The Activity has supplied adequate substantiation of its position that the transfer was motivated solely by business needs.

Mr. Oshiro testified that his decision was based on a review of staff requirements, and that this division was most in need of additional help. Consequently I cannot conclude that Ms. Sodergren's reassignment was designed to either promote or discourage her union activities.

RECOMMENDATION

Having found that the Activity has not engaged in conduct violative of Sections 19(a)(1) and (2) of the Order, I recommend that the complaint herein, as amended, be dismissed in its entirety.

SUMMARY OF DECISION AND ORDER OF THE ASSISTANT SECRETARY
PURSUANT TO SECTION 6 OF EXECUTIVE ORDER 11491, AS AMENDED

U.S. DEPARTMENT OF AGRICULTURE,
OZARK - ST. FRANCIS NATIONAL FORESTS,
RUSSELLVILLE, ARKANSAS
A/SLMR No. 977

This case involved an unfair labor practice complaint filed by the National Federation of Federal Employees, Local 1075 (Complainant) alleging that the Respondent violated Section 19(a)(1) of the Order when its supervisor, after being approached by a steward to discuss a grievance, threatened the steward with physical harm, invited the steward to hit him, and called the steward a "troublemaker" in the presence of other employees.

The Administrative Law Judge found that despite evidence of the supervisor's "sense of frustration" with the steward, he could not excuse the supervisor's conduct which interfered with, restrained, or coerced the steward while he was engaged in activity protected by Section 1(a) of the Order. Moreover, he found that such threats against a union steward, made in the presence of numerous employees, had a "chilling effect" on all employees, and showed disdain for the Complainant's representative which would, itself, discourage employees from exercising rights protected by Section 1(a) of the Order.

Noting particularly the absence of exceptions, the Assistant Secretary adopted the findings, conclusions and recommendations of the Administrative Law Judge, and ordered the Respondent to cease and desist from the conduct found violative of the Order and to take certain affirmative actions.

DECISION AND ORDER

On November 16, 1977, Administrative Law Judge William B. Devaney issued his Recommended Decision and Order in the above-entitled proceeding, finding that the Respondent had engaged in certain unfair labor practices and recommending that it cease and desist therefrom and take certain affirmative action as set forth in the attached Administrative Law Judge's Recommended Decision and Order. No exceptions were filed to the Administrative Law Judge's Recommended Decision and Order.

The Assistant Secretary has reviewed the rulings of the Administrative Law Judge made at the hearing and finds that no prejudicial error was committed. The rulings are hereby affirmed. Upon consideration of the Administrative Law Judge's Recommended Decision and Order and the entire record in the subject case, and noting particularly that no exceptions were filed, I hereby adopt the Administrative Law Judge's findings, conclusions and recommendations.

ORDER

Pursuant to Section 6(b) of Executive Order 11491, as amended, and Section 203.26(b) of the Regulations, the Assistant Secretary of Labor for Labor-Management Relations hereby orders that the Ozark - St. Francis National Forests, United States Department of Agriculture, shall:

1. Cease and desist from:

(a) Interfering with, restraining, or coercing its employees in the exercise of rights assured by Executive Order 11491, as amended, by threatening physical force or by disciplining or threatening to discipline employees for exercising their right assured by the Order to assist a labor organization.

(b) Interfering with, restraining, or coercing its employees by preventing a steward of Local 1075, National Federation of Federal Employees, or any other individual acting as a representative of said labor organization, from presenting and processing grievances and otherwise carrying out lawful duties as a steward or representative of a labor organization, by physical force or threats of physical force, by verbal abuse, or by demeaning and/or disdainful treatment.

(c) Adversely criticizing or taking any adverse action against Alfred Webb, or any other employee, for the filing or processing of grievances pursuant to the terms of a negotiated agreement.

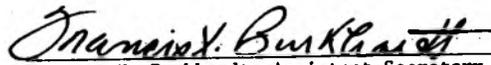

(d) In any like or related manner interfering with, restraining, or coercing its employees in the exercise of rights assured by Section 1(a) of Executive Order 11491, as amended.

2. Take the following affirmative actions in order to effectuate the purposes and policies of the Order:

(a) Post at the Ozark - St. Francis National Forests, Russellville, Arkansas, and at the Work Center at Fifty Six, Arkansas, copies of the attached notice marked "Appendix" on forms to be furnished by the Assistant Secretary of Labor for Labor-Management Relations. Upon receipt of such forms, they shall be signed by the Ranger, or other individual in charge of the Ozark - St. Francis National Forests, and shall be posted and maintained by him for 60 consecutive days thereafter in conspicuous places, including all places where notices to employees are customarily posted. The Ranger, or other person in charge of the Ozark - St. Francis National Forests, shall take reasonable steps to insure that such notices are not altered, defaced, or covered by any other material.

(b) Pursuant to Section 203.27 of the Regulations, notify the Assistant Secretary, in writing, within 30 days from the date of this order as to what steps have been taken to comply herewith.

July 19, 1977, alleging a violation of Section 19(a)(1) only. Notice of Hearing on the 19(a)(1) allegation issued July 26, 1977, pursuant to which a formal hearing of record was duly held before the undersigned on September 29, 1977, in Mountain View, Arkansas.

The violation alleged concerns certain statements made and actions taken by a foreman against a union steward on December 1, 1976, at the Forest Service Work Center in Fifty Six, Arkansas.

All parties were represented, were afforded full opportunity to be heard, to examine and cross-examine witnesses and to introduce evidence bearing on issues involved. At the request of the parties, November 10, 1977, was fixed as the date for submission of briefs but neither party has submitted a brief. Upon the basis of the entire record, including my observation of the witnesses and their demeanor, I make the following findings, conclusions and recommendations:

FINDINGS OF FACT

1. Alfred Webb, a WG-3 employee of Respondent at its Fifty Six, Arkansas, Work Center, was a union steward of Local 1075, National Federation of Federal Employees (hereinafter also referred to as "Union") in 1976 and by the time the hearing had become the Union's Chief Steward.

2. Mr. Webb had begun employment with Respondent in about 1962. Prior to 1976 Mr. Webb had worked in Security as a Forestry Technician and in April, 1976, was transferred to Timber Stand Improvements under the supervision of Hale Mitchell. Mr. Webb's immediate supervisor was Eugene Shipman, a GS-4 Forestry Technician. Mr. Webb, throughout his employment by Respondent, had gained a reputation as a profane and contentious individual who had difficulty getting along with his supervisors.

3. Mr. Webb became a Union Steward after his transfer to Timber Stand Improvements in April, 1976, and, although the date of his becoming a steward was not shown, Mr. Mitchell testified that from about October, 1976, Mr. Webb would confront him each morning or each evening, with some complaint the "the boys" had; that "you couldn't even make out what he [Webb] was talking about"; that he [Mitchell] even called his immediate supervisor, Mr. Jack Griswald, out to try to find out what was going on, to see if he could straighten it out and all the men on the crew said "we haven't got no complaints whatever"; but Mr. Webb continued to present "one gripe right after another."

RECOMMENDED DECISION AND ORDER

Statement of the Case

This case arises under Executive Order 11491, as amended (hereinafter also referred to as the "Order") and was initiated by a charge filed on, or about, January 27, 1977. A Complaint was filed on April 20, 1977, alleging violations of Sections 19(a)(1) and (4) of the Order and an Amended Complaint was filed

4. Mr. Mitchell testified that on November 30, 1976, he had told Mr. Webb that if he had any complaints to take them to Mr. Griswald "because he is the boss and he [Webb] had already come to me enough"; but on the following morning, December 1, 1976, when Mr. Mitchell arrived at the Work Center, Mr. Webb called Mr. Mitchell over to where Mr. Webb and Mr. T.C. Newcomb, then Chief Steward, were standing and Mr. Mitchell testified:

"I got loud, but yet I couldn't get a word in because he had been on my back for several days and I was getting tired of it.

"I also told him to hit [me]. The reason I wanted him to hit me was because I knew if he did hit me I would have a way out of this thing ... I told him he wasn't nothing but a troublemaker and I wanted him to stay off my back." (Tr. 68-69)

"... he [Webb] called me, as usual, and started in on me, swinging his arms in a nervous position.

"Then that is why I ... A person can just take so much. It just went on for so long until you can take it for so long.

"But I didn't have in mind at any time hitting Webb. I was trying to force him to hit me. That is the only thing I could figure.

"He didn't hit me and so we hadn't had any cross words since." (Tr. 75) (Emphasis supplied.)

* * * *

"When I first walked up to him, I hadn't been there but about two minutes when he started cursing.

* * * *

"... I said, 'There will be a 15 til 5 some-time and we can settle this.'

"I did tell him, I said, 'Hit me.' I was wanting him to hit me.

"Like I said, I felt that if I could get him to hit me, it would be a lot better than me hitting him, and that is what I had in mind." (Tr. 87-88)

5. On November 3, 1976, it had been raining prior to the commencement of work and there was no indication that the weather would improve. Mr. Mitchell called Assistant Ranger Hurlburt and asked if he had any inside work for the crew and Mr. Hurlburt called back and told Mr. Mitchell he had no inside work. Mr. Mitchell then told Mr. Shipman that the only work available for temporary employees was in the woods and if they did not want to work in the rain there was no work for them (Mr. Mitchell told Mr. Shipman that he had enough inside work for the three or four regular employees); however, by the time Mr. Hurlburt had called back it was about 8:10 a.m. and the temporary employees had worked about 10 minutes cleaning up the Work Center when they were sent home as they did not want to work in the woods in the rain. On, or about, November 15, 1976, Mr. Shipman called Mr. Mitchell to say that Mr. Webb was filing a grievance because the temporary employees had been sent home on a rainy day. Mr. Hurlburt agreed to pay the employees sent home on November 3, 1976, for one hour's work which, presumably, settled the matter.

6. On Thursday, November 11, 1976, it had snowed and the members of Mr. Mitchell's crew asked Mr. Mitchell for time off the next day to go deer hunting. Mr. Mitchell had no objection and said he would like to go deer hunting also, so they agreed to go deer hunting, on Friday. Mr. Webb had been assigned to the Engineers for several days and was working with the Engineers on Thursday and was not present when this decision was made by Mr. Mitchell and his crew to go deer hunting. As Mr. Mitchell was leaving the Work Center Thursday evening, Mr. Webb met him at the gate and said "The Engineers won't need me tomorrow" whereupon, Mr. Mitchell told him "me and the crew decided to go deer hunting tomorrow and there won't be a TSI crew." The following morning Mr. Mitchell called Mr. Webb to tell him there was inside work if he wanted it but Mr. Webb was not at home and Mr. Mitchell was subsequently informed by Mr. Pat Tripp, Mr. Webb's supervisor on the Engineers Crew, that he had asked Mr. Webb to take cement samples to Little Rock.

7. On December 1, 1976, Mr. Webb, on the way to work, met Chief Steward Newcomb at Balentine's Grocery and asked Mr. Newcomb to sign a Union Complaint (Grievance) Form to represent Mr. Webb. Mr. Newcomb told Mr. Webb that it was not necessary that he sign it; that if he (Mr. Webb) wanted him (Mr. Newcomb) to represent him, just put his name on it. However, to placate Mr. Webb, Mr. Newcomb signed the form. Mr. Webb then told Mr. Newcomb he would like him, "... hear him tell Hale that he was going on to the next step and that he would not give him the list of names that he had requested." (Tr. 59). At the Work Center, Mr. Webb called Mr. Mitchell over and told him that he was going on to the next step in this, that he hadn't got an answer on it and Mr. Mitchell said"

"Well, Webb, I didn't send you home."

* * * *

"Hale said he thought that he deserved to know who was complaining.

"He [Mr. Webb] said, 'I will if Jack [the Ranger] asks me to give them, I will.'" (Tr. 56-57)

8. Curiously, Mr. Webb testified that there was no list; that the "list" was Alfred Webb. Nor was it wholly clear, even at the hearing, what Mr. Webb's grievance involved. He made it clear that the grievance concerned him personally. Although he stated that "bad weather was what the whole thing was about, that we would work regardless. That is what the grievance was about -- if it was bad weather or rain or snow or whatever, not to send the guys home ... I was the one that signed the grievance because he had sent me home and I signed it." (Tr. 39), Mr. Webb also made it clear that he wasn't sent home but had been told on Thursday (November 11) not to report on Friday (November 12) and admitted that, in any event, he had been called to work with the engineers on that Friday (November 12). Moreover, the record shows that Mr. Mitchell told Mr. Webb on November 11 that he and the crew had decided to go deer hunting the next day and there would not be a TSI crew.

9. The testimony of Mr. Mitchell concerning his inviting Mr. Webb to hit him, calling Mr. Webb a troublemaker, etc., as set forth in Paragraph 4, was fully corroborated by the testimony of Messrs. Webb, Newcomb and Shipman. There is no support whatever for Mr. Webb's assertion that Mr. Mitchell, after they entered the office, walked into Mr. Webb, scooted him back on the desk, pushed Mr. Webb, or touched Mr. Webb in any manner. The wholly credible testimony of Mr. Mitchell is to the contrary, as was the equally credible testimony of Mr. John J. Mitchell. Not only was Mr. John J. Mitchell a most credible witness but he was virtually "caught in the middle" of the confrontation as he was sitting on a desk in the office when Mr. Webb came in and sat next to him. In addition to Mr. John J. Mitchell's specific denial that Mr. Hale Mitchell ever touched Mr. Webb in any manner, he further stated that Mr. Hale Mitchell had his hands in his pockets.

10. There is no dispute whatever that in the course of the confrontation Mr. Webb, after Mr. Mitchell told him "There will be a 15 till 5 one of these days and we will settle it", had called Mr. Webb a troublemaker, and had invited Mr. Webb to hit him, said he was going to call the Ranger; that Mr. Mitchell told him "to go ahead and call the Ranger"; that Mr. Webb did so but the Ranger was not in and he talked to Mr. Von Ward; and that after Mr. Webb talked to Mr. Ward, Mr. Mitchell also talked to Mr. Ward. After talking to Mr. Ward both Mr. Webb and Mr. Mitchell calmed down and Mr. Webb left the office.

The record shows that Mr. Webb, on December 1, 1976, demonstrated little knowledge of, or appreciation for, the grievance concept. Success in grievance processing begins with a clear statement of the issue. Mr. Webb had every right to assert a personal grievance, or, as a Union Steward, he might have asserted a grievance for violation of the Union's agreement, or he might have filed a grievance, as a Steward, on behalf of individual employees; but whatever the grievance asserted, adjustment of it mandated that the particular dispute, or claim asserted, be stated. The Union Complaint (grievance) Form prepared by Mr. Webb was not produced or offered at the hearing nor does it appear on the record that Chief Steward Newcomb, to whom Mr. Webb delivered the form, ever presented the form to Mr. Mitchell or to any other representative of Respondent. Mr. Webb's contrived and staged position about a list, in view of his assertion that the grievance was personal and concerned only himself; and his assertion that he was grieving because he was sent home because of inclement weather, in view of the fact that on the occasion about which he was complaining he had not been sent home, inclement weather was not involved, and he had, in fact, worked, without more, well illustrates the accuracy of Mr. Mitchell's statement that "you couldn't even make out what he [Webb] was talking about."

Indeed, I found Mr. Mitchell a most forthright and credible witness and, based on Mr. Webb's conduct on December 1, 1976, it seems highly probable that Mr. Webb, who had a reputation for being a profane and contentious person, became even more contentious after he became a steward; but, while I understand Mr. Mitchell's sense of frustration, it can neither obscure nor excuse Mr. Mitchell's conduct.

However inept Mr. Webb's statement of his grievance and whatever its merit, there is no possible doubt that Mr. Webb, in the course of presenting a grievance, was called a troublemaker by Mr. Mitchell, his foreman; was threatened by Mr. Mitchell; and that Mr. Mitchell quite deliberately tried to induce Mr. Webb to strike him in order to give Mr. Mitchell an excuse to fire him. Nor can there be any doubt that Mr. Webb was fully justified in being "... pretty scared. I thought I was about to lose my job." All of this occurred in the presence of a number of employees and whether Mr. Webb is viewed merely as an employee presenting a grievance or as a Union Steward presenting a grievance, Mr. Mitchell's conduct clearly and unmistakably interfered with, restrained, or coerced Mr. Webb in the exercise of his rights assured by the Order in violation of Section 19(a) (1) of the Order. Department of Transportation, Federal Aviation Administration, Indianapolis Air Route Traffic Control Center, Weir Cook Airport, Indianapolis, Indiana, A/SLMR No. 812 (1977); National Labor Relations Board, Region 17, and National Labor Relations Board, A/SLMR No. 671, 6 A/SLMR 333 (1976); U.S. Small Business Administration, Central Office, Washington, D.C., A/SLMR No. 631, 6 A/SLMR 158 (1976); Miramar Naval Air Station Commissary Store, San Diego, California, A/SLMR No. 472, 5 A/SLMR 29 (1975). Moreover, such threats against a union steward in the presence of numerous employees had a chilling effect on all employees who would assert a grievance or act as a representative; and, in addition, showed disdain for a union representative which would, itself, discourage employees from exercising their rights granted under Section 1(a) of the Order. RECOMMENDATION

Having found that Respondent has engaged in conduct violative of Section 19(a)(1) of Executive Order 11491, as amended, I recommend that the Assistant Secretary adopt the following order designed to effectuate the policies of the Executive Order:

RECOMMENDED ORDER

Pursuant to Section 6(b) of Executive Order 11491, as amended, and Section 203.26(b) of the Regulations, 29 C.F.R. § 203.26(b), the Assistant Secretary of Labor for Labor-Management Relations hereby orders that the Ozark - St. Francis National Forest, United States Department of Agriculture shall:

1. Cease and desist from:

- a. Interfering with, restraining, or coercing its employees in the exercise of rights assured by Executive Order 11491, as amended, by threatening physical force, by disciplining or threatening to discipline employees for exercising their rights assured by the Order to assist a labor organization.

- b. Interfering with, restraining, or coercing its employees by preventing a steward of Local 1075, National Federation of Federal Employees, or any other individual acting as a representative of such labor organization, presenting and processing grievances and otherwise carrying out lawful duties as a steward or representative of a labor organization, by physical force or threats of physical force, by verbal abuse, or by demeaning and/or disdainful treatment.

- c. Adversely criticizing, or taking any adverse action against, Alfred Webb, or any other employee, for the filing or processing of grievances pursuant to the terms of a negotiated agreement.

- d. In any like or related manner interfering with, restraining, or coercing its employees in the exercise of rights assured by Section 1(a) of Executive Order 11491, as amended.

2. Take the following affirmative action in order to effectuate the purposes and policies of the Executive Order:

- a. Post at the Ozark - St. Francis National Forests, Russellville, Arkansas, and at the Work Center at Fifty Six Arkansas, copies of the attached notice marked "Appendix" on forms to be furnished by the Assistant Secretary of Labor for Labor-Management Relations. Upon receipt of such forms, they shall be signed by the Ranger, or other individual, in charge of the Ozark - St. Francis National Forests and shall be posted and maintained by him for 60 consecutive days thereafter in conspicuous places, including all places where notices to employees are customarily posted. The Ranger, or other person in charge of the Ozark - St. Francis National Forests, shall take reasonable steps to insure that such notices are not altered, defaced, or covered by any other material.

b. Pursuant to Section 203.27 of the Regulations, notify the Assistant Secretary of Labor for Labor-Management Relations in writing within 30 days from the date of this order as to what steps have been taken to comply herewith.

SUMMARY OF DECISION AND ORDER OF THE ASSISTANT SECRETARY
PURSUANT TO SECTION 6 OF EXECUTIVE ORDER 11491, AS AMENDED

U.S. CUSTOMS SERVICE, REGION VIII,
TREASURY DEPARTMENT,
SAN FRANCISCO, CALIFORNIA
A/SLMR No. 978

This case involved an unfair labor practice complaint filed by the National Treasury Employees Union (NTEU) alleging that the Respondent violated Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order by (1) unilaterally implementing a change in working conditions when it announced a decision to conduct a 24-hour surveillance, with 12-hour shifts and mandatory overtime, of all suspects arriving from a specified geographical area, and (2) failing to afford the NTEU an opportunity to be present at the meeting in which the alleged change was announced.

The Administrative Law Judge noted that there had been surveillance operations of this type in the past, and that the Patrol Policy Statement which had been negotiated by the parties included matters relating to the impact and implementation of policy concerning overtime, tours of duty and assignments. Thus, he concluded that the Respondent had no further obligation to negotiate those issues. Moreover, he found that the subject meeting was not a formal discussion within the meaning of Section 10(e) of the Order and, thus, the Respondent was not obligated to afford the Complainant the opportunity to be present.

The Assistant Secretary adopted the findings, conclusions and recommendation of the Administrative Law Judge and ordered that the complaint be dismissed.

DECISION AND ORDER

On September 23, 1977, Administrative Law Judge Edward C. Burch issued his Recommended Decision and Order in the above-entitled proceeding, finding that the Respondent had not engaged in the unfair labor practices alleged in the complaint and recommending that the complaint be dismissed in its entirety. Thereafter, the Complainant filed exceptions and a supporting brief with respect to the Administrative Law Judge's Recommended Decision and Order and the Respondent filed an answering brief to the Complainant's exceptions and supporting brief.

The Assistant Secretary has reviewed the rulings of the Administrative Law Judge made at the hearing and finds that no prejudicial error was committed. The rulings are hereby affirmed. Upon consideration of the Administrative Law Judge's Recommended Decision and Order and the entire record in the subject case, including the Complainant's exceptions and supporting brief and the Respondent's answering brief thereto, I hereby adopt the Administrative Law Judge's findings, conclusions and recommendation. 1/ Thus, I find that there is insufficient evidence to establish that the Respondent's instructions to employees at an October 8, 1976, meeting concerning Custom Patrol Officers' overtime assignments in an impending operation constituted a change from past practices in the implementation of overtime policy as set forth in the Respondent's Patrol Policy Statement and, therefore, further proceedings in this matter are not warranted.

Moreover, in agreement with the Administrative Law Judge, I find that the October 8th meeting was not a "formal discussion" within the meaning of Section 10(e) of the Order. In my view, the subject meeting was primarily a briefing session concerning an impending surveillance operation and was not called for the purpose of discussing with unit employees personnel policies and practices or other matters affecting general working conditions. 2/ As the meeting was not within the parameters of Section 10(e), the Respondent's failure to notify the Complainant and afford it the opportunity to be present was not violative of the Order. Accordingly, I shall order that the instant complaint be dismissed.

ORDER

IT IS HEREBY ORDERED that the complaint in Case No. 71-4179(CA) be, and it hereby is, dismissed.

It was noted that this requirement was suggested by a mid-level supervisor and was withdrawn almost immediately by the chief supervisor. Cf. RECOMMENDED DECISION AND ORDER

Statement of the Case

Pursuant to a complaint filed by the National Treasury Employees Union ("the Union") February 14, 1977, under Executive Order 11491, as amended, against the U. S. Customs Service, Region VIII, Treasury Department ("respondent"), a Notice of Hearing on Complaint was issued by the Regional Administrator for the San Francisco Region June 21, 1977.

The union alleged respondent violated sections 19(a)(1) and 19(a)(6) of the Executive Order when, on October 8, 1976, Supervisory Customs Patrol Officers (SCPO's) advised bargaining unit Customs Patrol Officers (CPO's), in the Seattle, Washington office, that they would have to work mandatory overtime in order to maintain 24-hour surveillance of certain foreign suspects. The exclusive representative of Region VIII was not afforded the opportunity to be present at the October 8, 1976, meeting.

Respondent admits the meeting was held and admits the exclusive representative was not specifically invited to be present. Respondent also concedes the bargaining unit patrol officers' working hours, schedules and shifts were temporarily affected. Respondent denies the meeting had the effect of changing personnel policies and denies the exclusive representative of the bargaining unit had a need or right to be present.

A hearing was held in Seattle, Washington, on July 8, 1977, at which time exhibits were received and witnesses examined.

Upon the basis of the entire record the following findings of fact, conclusions and recommendation are made.

Findings of Fact

July 6, 1972, respondent and the union ^{1/} entered into a Basic Agreement which, in part, provided, Article V, management rights, that management reserve the right to:

^{1/} Actually, the union's predecessor, whose rights and responsibilities the current union has assumed.

(e) Determine the methods, means and personnel by which such operations are to be conducted;

(f) Take whatever other actions may be necessary to carry out the mission of the bureau and emergency situations; and

(g) Establish hours of work and tours of duty.

In addition, however, Article VI provided for meetings between management and the union, and:

Matters appropriate for discussion hereunder shall include ... the criteria for the assignment of work shifts or tours of duty (and) ... assignments to overtime work ...

The mission of the customs officers was redefined in 1973 to be more responsive to drug smuggling attempts. With the patrol working in a more flexible manner, grievances and complaints arose concerning changes in shift assignments, overtime and temporary duty. Union and management then met, beginning August of 1974, several times, to resolve the differences.

It was agreed management would issue a Patrol Policy Statement.

October 24, 1974, the Regional Commissioner of respondent wrote to the union vice president, enclosing a proposed draft of the Patrol Policy Statement and inviting comments. The union requested additional time to consider the draft, and this request was granted.

November 20, 1974, the union national vice president responded with suggested changes. The Patrol Policy Statement was then revised to reflect several of the suggested changes, and was sent to the union December 18, 1974.

January 12, 1975, the union responded with further suggestions. Some suggestions were accepted and a counter-proposal was sent to the union January 22, 1975, with the request that if the union wished to comment further to please do so by February 7, 1975. When nothing additional was heard from the union, a final revised policy statement was sent to the union March 25, 1976, advising that respondent proposed to effectuate the statement April 19, 1976. There was no response from the union.

The Patrol Policy Statement effectuated April 19, 1976, was in effect October of 1976. One of the purposes was (testimony of Regional Director of patrol) to:

... assure the flexibility needed by the patrol division in establishing tours of duty, in changing tours of duty, in changing shift assignments; and it was done so that it wouldn't then be necessary in the future to negotiate with the union each and every time that it was necessary to change a tour or an assignment.

The Patrol Policy Statement in effect October of 1976 provided, in part, as follows:

The U. S. Customs Patrol is first and foremost committed to a viable, flexible, highly mobile and responsive effort operating in a tactical interdiction mode ... tours of duty will be changed when operational requirements demand it. Last minute changes will occur relatively infrequent as required by an intensified enforcement operation, TDY assignments or similar emergency situations. Every patrol officer will, as directed, participate in all patrol activities whether land, sea, or air.

The nature of the patrol mission requires AVO and FEPA assignments and all CPO's are expected to participate ...

Administratively uncontrollable overtime (AVO) is the only form of reimbursement for overtime requirements that is generally unknown in advance, cannot be covered by the normal periodic changes in tours of duty, and is often in response to an immediate customs need. AVO may be scheduled and directed to the extent that an officer may be directed a day or more in advance to provide certain coverage ... however, AVO often results from an individual officer's ... responsibility to extend his tour ...

To illustrate the conclusion of SCPO Bauchaud that the policies and procedures in the October 10 to 12, 1976, surveillance in question were no different than they had been for three and a half years, it was shown that in the prior month, September, as well as in August, there had been 24-hour surveillance on similar suspects with the CPO's compensated under the AVO program for time in excess of regular shifts. Meetings similar to the October 8, 1976, meeting were held prior to the August and September periods of surveillance, except that there were no objections voiced in August and September.

One distinguishing characteristic of the October operation was its size. As a result, it was expected that greater manpower would be required than in the August and September and earlier operations. In the past, with not as great a demand for manpower, respondent had attempted to comply with individual CPO's desires to work or not to work overtime surveillance. At the October 8, 1976, meeting the CPO's were advised they would be working overtime on a mandatory basis. As SCPO Bauchaud testified:

... while we respected the fact that these people would and had volunteered in the past, that because of the extensive coverage and not knowing then how many suspects we were talking about, that AUO would probably not get enough people to cover all those suspects; and if we didn't, it would have to be directed in accordance with the Region policy.

He further testified that it had in the past been necessary to direct overtime.

As a result of the decision to conduct 24-hour surveillance on all suspects arriving from one geographical area outside the United States, the monthly schedule for the CPO's was changed and employees were rescheduled for 12-hour shifts. If a suspect arrived in Seattle, those CPO's scheduled had to report for the 12-hour shift. The CPO's were also advised at the October 8, 1976, meeting that they should be available to a phone so they could be advised if they were to report to work.

Several CPO's objected, stating they were being placed on standby. As the opposition became more vociferous, management rescinded the telephone availability requirement and stated the CPO's would be advised before the end of their shift whether they would or would not be required to report for work.

The CPO's were advised that once on duty they were to remain until given permission to leave.

Payment for overtime was to be on the basis of administratively uncontrollable overtime (AUO). AUO is provided by Congress for law enforcement agencies, and is used when overtime must be flexibly applied. 2/

Respondent's Motion to Dismiss

At the outset respondent moved to dismiss for lack of jurisdiction, contending the negotiated basic agreement "before the parties provides for the grievance procedure as the exclusive remedy for resolving disputes of the type alleged in the complaint." The basic agreement provides, Article IV, paragraph 1:

When presenting a grievance under the negotiated grievance procedure, which is the exclusive procedure available to the participants and the employees in this unit for resolving grievances over the interpretation and application of this agreement ...

Section 19(d) of the Executive Order provides, however:

Issues which can be raised under a grievance procedure may, in the discretion of the grieved party, be raised under that procedure or the complaint procedure under this section ...

A like motion was made in General Services Administration Region 5, A/SLMR No. 528. The agreement between the parties there had like language that the grievance procedure shall be the exclusive procedure available. The Assistant Secretary adopted without exception the Administrative Law Judge's recommended decision, which stated, in part:

... a breach of contract can be an unfair labor practice. When it is, it may be presented either as a grievance under the grievance procedure or it may be presented as an unfair labor practice under the Executive Order. That is exactly what is provided in section 19(d) of the Order.

See also Department of the Navy, Portsmouth Naval Shipyard, A/SLMR No. 508.

On the basis of section 19(d) of the Executive Order and the above authority, respondent's motion to dismiss is denied.

2/ Whether overtime payment was properly AUO or FEPA is not here an issue. That question is before another forum.

Discussion, Further Findings of Fact and Conclusion

Respondent is here charged with violations of section 19(a) (1) and (6) of the Executive Order. It is contended:

(1) That changes in working conditions were implemented at the October 8, 1976, meeting without affording the union the opportunity to negotiate, and

(2) That the meeting of October 8, 1976, was a formal discussion and under section 10(e) of the Executive Order the labor organization had the right to be represented.

The evidence conclusively establishes that 24-hour surveillance, schedule changes and 12-hour shifts had occurred in the past. The requirement, during 24-hour surveillance, that CPO's could not leave until obtaining a supervisor's permission, was also not a new requirement. While admitting that management had the right to assign overtime (Tr. 43) the union contends that here the situation was different, for the reason there was not an identified specific suspect, but rather, an overall plan to observe all arrivals from one foreign geographical area.

This attempted distinction is not impressive. The mission of respondent is to prevent smuggling. There is no change in policy or practice because a group rather than an individual is observed.

Section 11(d) of the Executive Order provides:

... the obligation to meet and confer does not include matters with respect to the mission of an agency.

Under Article VI of the Basic Agreement, however, overtime, tours of duty and assignments are matters appropriate for discussion. Put another way, management had an obligation to bargain on the implementation and impact of overtime. Alabama National Guard, A/SLMR No. 660.

Those discussions (or negotiations) occurred during the formation of the policy patrol statement. As in NASA, Kennedy Space Center, A/SLMR No. 223, we are dealing not with waiver, but rather, with actual negotiations at an earlier time.

In that very similar case, just as in the instant case, the parties met and exchanged letters concerning changes in a medical and health program. The respondent there also requested suggestions from complainant. The Assistant Secretary concluded:

In the context of these events, it is clear that the proposed revision was discussed fully by both parties and that as a practical matter--regardless of what the parties consider their correspondence, proposals and discussions concerning revision to be--the parties did, in fact, engage in negotiations regarding the proposed KMI revision. Under these circumstances, I find that the respondent satisfied its obligation to negotiate with the complainant on the proposed revision.

When the letter of March 25, 1976, advised the union management proposed to effectuate the negotiated Patrol Policy Statement on April 19, 1976, the union was required to respond further if additional changes were desired. See Department of the Navy, Portsmouth Naval Shipyard, A/SLMR No. 508 at page 253. When there was no response from the union the Patrol Policy Statement became effective April 19, 1976.

Finally, it is concluded the meeting of October 8, 1976, was not a formal discussion under section 10(e) of the Executive Order.

A good analysis of what constitutes a formal discussion appears in Department of Health, Education and Welfare, Social Security Administration, A/SLMR No. 419, where it was said:

... it is the nature and significance of the discussion that is determinative.

Here a meeting was not held to discuss or negotiate working conditions or policies. That had already been accomplished by the Patrol Policy Statement. This meeting was called to advise and brief the employees concerning an upcoming operation. It was not anticipated there would be discussions concerning personnel availability, shifts and hours worked. Thus, there was no intent to deal or negotiate directly with unit employees. As stated in Department of the Navy, Naval Airstation, Fallon, Nevada, FLRC No. 74A-80 (October 24, 1975):

In determining whether a communication is violative of the Order, it must be judged

UNITED STATES DEPARTMENT OF LABOR
ASSISTANT SECRETARY FOR LABOR-MANAGEMENT RELATIONS
SUMMARY OF DECISION AND ORDER OF THE ASSISTANT SECRETARY
PURSUANT TO SECTION 6 OF EXECUTIVE ORDER 11491, AS AMENDED

independently and a determination made as to whether that communication constitutes, for example, an attempt by agency management to deal or negotiate directly with unit employees ... In reaching this determination, both the content of the communication and the circumstances surrounding it must be considered.

So viewing the instant case, there was no obligation the exclusive representative be represented at the meeting.

A possible exception to the above conclusion was the decree CPO's would have to stand by a phone to determine if they would work. This requirement was not, in my opinion, covered by the Patrol Policy Statement. If implemented, it would have constituted standby duty and a change in working conditions.

Because the subject was discussed (negotiated) at the October 8, 1976, meeting, this one subject could have cast the discussion into the "formal" category under section 10(e) of the Executive Order, requiring union representation. However, the very quick retreat of management makes this issue de minimus, not warranting the finding of a violation. Vandenberg Airforce Base, California, FLRC No. 74A-77 (August 8, 1975).

Hence, it is concluded there was no violation of sections 19(a)(1) and 19(a)(6) of the Executive Order.

Recommendation

Having found that respondent has not engaged in conduct violative of sections 19(a)(1) and 19(a)(6) of the Order, I recommend that the complaint herein be dismissed in its entirety.

BUREAU OF HEARINGS AND APPEALS
A/SLMR No. 979

This case involved an unfair labor practice complaint filed by the American Federation of Government Employees, AFL-CIO, Local 3615 (Complainant) alleging that the Respondent failed to negotiate with the Complainant prior to making the final decision to use a revised form utilized in initiating grievances under the agency grievance procedure.

The Administrative Law Judge concluded that the Respondent had not violated Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order. In this regard, he found that revision of the form used to initiate a grievance under the agency grievance procedure did not change personnel policies and practices or other matters affecting working conditions. In his view, the Respondent owed no obligation under Section 11(a) of the Order to meet and confer with the Complainant prior to issuing the revised agency grievance form because the revision did not materially affect, or have a substantial impact on, personnel policies and practices or matters affecting general working conditions. He further found that use of the form, both before and after the revision, was not mandatory, and, accordingly, there was no change in any existing practice or procedure.

Noting particularly the absence of exceptions, the Assistant Secretary adopted the findings, conclusions, and recommendation of the Administrative Law Judge and ordered that the complaint be dismissed in its entirety.

RECOMMENDED DECISION AND ORDER

Statement of the Case

This is a case under Executive Order 11491, as amended (hereinafter also referred to as the "Order") which was initiated by a charge filed on, or about, October 1, 1976 (Asst. Sec. Exh. 1) and a complaint filed on November 8, 1976 (Asst. Sec. Exh. 2). Notice of Hearing issued March 14, 1977 (Asst. Sec. Exh. 3), pursuant to which a formal hearing was duly held before the undersigned on April 27, 1977, in Washington, D.C. At the hearing, June 15, 1977, was fixed, by agreement of the parties, as the date for the filing of briefs; however, at the request of Respondent for good cause shown, and with the agreement of Complainant, the date for the filing of briefs was extended on June 9, 1977, to July 1, 1977. Briefs were timely filed by the parties and have been carefully considered.

The charge had alleged violations of Section 19(a)(1), (2) and (6) of the Order but the complaint alleged violations of Sections 19(a)(1) and (6), only, and the Notice of Hearing issued only as to the 19(a)(1) and (6) allegations. The issue in this case 1/ is the narrow question as to whether 1/ By letter dated April 18, 1977, the Acting Regional Administrator, Mr. Hilary M. Sheply, denied the request for official time for the appearance of Mr. Albert B. Carrozza as the representative of Local 3615. Mr. Carrozza renewed the request for official time for himself at the hearing and the request was, again, denied, inter alia, for the reasons that § 203.16(a) pertains to authority of the Administrative Law Judge to "(a) Grant requests for appearances of witnesses ...", and does not constitute authority to grant requests for appearance of an individual to appear in a representative capacity; and Sections 203.16(n) and 204.76(n) do not contemplate thereunder the approval of official time for an individual appearing in a representative capacity. Complainant has renewed the request for official time for Mr. Carrozza, who appeared solely in a representative capacity at the hearing, in its brief. The request is denied.

In, Department of the Navy and The U.S. Naval Weapons Station, A/SLMR No. 139, 2 A/SLMR 134 (1972), the Assistant Secretary, while holding that Respondent violated Section 19(a)(1) of the Order by refusing to grant official time to necessary witnesses in a unit determination hearing, specifically found that agencies "are not obligated to make available on official time any employees who appear solely as union representatives... an employee who represents a union ... is, in effect, working for the union and agencies should not be obligated to grant official time to such an employee." (2 A/SLMR 134, p. 138) (emphasis supplied). See, also, Department of the Army, Reserve Command Headquarters, Camp McCoy, Sparta, Wisconsin, 102nd Reserve Command, St. Louis, Missouri, A/SLMR No. 256, 3 A/SLMR 150 (1973); U.S. Army Electronics Command, Fort Monmouth, New Jersey, A/SLMR No. 281, 3 A/SLMR 315 (1973). The Council, in FLRC No. 72A-20 (A/SLMR No. 139), 1 Decisions and Interpretations of the Federal Labor Relations Council (hereinafter cited as "FLRC" preceded by the volume number and followed by the page (Continued)

Respondent violated Section 19(a)(6) of the Order, and, derivatively of Section 19(a)(1) (Complainant's assertion of union animus having been wholly unsupported), by changing its grievance form, for use in filing grievances under Respondent's unilateral grievance procedure, to provide blocks for designation of the capacity of a grievant's representative, if any, i.e., whether the representative appeared "in a personal capacity" or "on behalf of the exclusive representative, AFGE Local 3615."

All parties were represented, were afforded full opportunity to be heard, to examine and cross-examine witnesses and to introduce evidence bearing on the issues involved. Upon the basis of the entire record, I make the following findings of fact, conclusions and recommendations:

FINDINGS OF FACT

1. This case concerns only Respondent's unilateral grievance procedure and specifically revision of the grievance form by Respondent on September 10, 1976, although the parties from some date in 1975 engaged in collective bargaining which resulted in an agreement containing a negotiated grievance procedure effective in January, 1977. Until the negotiated grievance procedure became effective, all grievances were processed under Respondent's non-negotiated, or unilateral, grievance procedure.

2. The processing of grievances under Respondent's grievance procedure was, and is, governed by HEW Instruction 771-3.

number of the bound Report) 490 (1973) and FLRC No. 73A-18 (A/SLMR No. 256), 1 FLRC 497 (1973), set aside the Assistant Secretary's finding in A/SLMR Nos. 139 and 256 concerning the grant of official time for witnesses for the reason that "... there is no obligation under the Order to grant official time to union witnesses. ..." A fortiori, the Order imposes no obligation on agencies to grant official time to employees who appear solely as union representatives.

The Council went on to state that it would be consistent with the Order for the Assistant Secretary, "to promulgate a regulation requiring that necessary witnesses be on official time for the period of their participation at formal hearings. ..." (1 FLRC at 495) (emphasis supplied). This, of course, the Assistant Secretary has done (See, § 206.7(g) of the Regulations (29 C.F.R. 206.7(g)); but, official time is authorized only for employees determined to be necessary as witnesses.

internally with the instruction that management ensure that "your supervisors are informed of this change and receive copies of the enclosed material." (Comp. Exh. 5). Nevertheless, Mr. Robert M. Whitehead, Chief of Employee Relations, testified that Respondent's grievance form, both before and after September 10, 1976, was merely a sample and its use was not mandatory, which was fully confirmed by all other testimony and evidence. For example, Respondent's Exhibit 1 is a grievance filed May 28, 1976, where Complainant did not use the HEW form at all; Respondent's Exhibit 2 is a grievance filed September 13, 1976, where Complainant used the "old" form; and Mr. Mosley testified that after September 10, 1976, he did not indicate the capacity in which he appeared as representative of the grievant, whereas he had generally done so before September 10, 1976.

8. The record affirmatively shows that there is no difference in the amount of official time allowed the representative whether he appears in an individual capacity or as representative of Local 3615. A second stage official may, pursuant to Instruction 771-3 restrict the employee representative, based upon workload, when the same individual has handled an excessive number of grievances whether the representative acted in his union capacity or in an individual capacity. The revision of Respondent's grievance form on September 10, 1976, reflected no change in this policy and practice. Indeed, except for revision of the grievance form, Instruction 771-3 was not changed in any respect on September 10, 1976.

9. The Director's insistence on immediate action on certification of representation (Comp. Exhs. 9, 10) and/or the comment, for internal information only, concerning litigation (Comp. Exh. 11) utterly fails to establish any basis for asserted union animus. Nor is there any basis on the record to indicate any possible harassment of Complainant. To the contrary, the record shows that Respondent's concern about compliance with Section 10(e) notice was bona fide; was well understood by Complainant; that Respondent discussed the problem informally with Complainant as early as December, 1975, or January, 1976; that, whatever Respondent's initial position with regard to its desire for a separate "Certificate of Representation", Respondent abandoned its insistence on such certification; that, on August 19, 1976, Complainant suggested modification of the grievance form; and that Respondent adopted Complainant's suggestion and added spaces to the prior form to be checked to indicate the capacity in which the representative appeared.

Agency management violates its obligation to meet and confer under the Order when it unilaterally changes those terms or conditions of employment which are included within the ambit of Section 11(a) of the Order. U.S. Army Corps of Engineers Philadelphia District, A/SLMR No. 673, 6 A/SLMR 339 (1976); Social Security Administration, Bureau of Hearings and Appeals, A/SLMR No. 828 (1977). On September 10, 1976, the only grievance procedure available to employees represented by Local 3615 was the grievance procedure established unilaterally by Respondent. Although an agency grievance procedure does not result from any rights accorded to individual employees or to labor organizations under the Order, Office of Economic Opportunity Region V, Chicago, Illinois, A/SLMR No. 334, 3 A/SLMR 668 (1973), it is a condition of employment. Failure of an agency to properly apply the provisions of its own grievance procedure, in the absence of discriminatory motivation or disparity of treatment based on union membership considerations - which is wholly absent in this case - is not a violation of the Order, Office of Economic Opportunity, supra; General Services Administration, Region 7, Fort Worth, Texas, A/SLMR No. 416, 4 A/SLMR 490 (1974); United States Navy, Navy Air Station (North Island, San Diego, California, A/SLMR No. 422, 4 A/SLMR 527 (1974). It is assumed, but not decided, that a change of an agency's grievance procedure is a change of a condition of employment and that a unilateral change of a grievance procedure would violate 19(a)(6) and, derivatively, would violate Section 19(a)(1), notwithstanding that a violation of a unilaterally established grievance procedure, in the absence of discriminatory motivation or disparity of treatment based on union membership considerations, would not violate the Order. It is not necessary to decide, and, therefore no decision has been made or is to be inferred, as to whether Respondent would have violated Sections 19(a)(6) and (1) of the Order had it unilaterally changed its grievance procedure since, on the record, it is clear that Respondent neither changed its grievance procedure nor any condition of employment.

First, Respondent's change of its grievance form did not change the right of any representative to freely designate the capacity in which he appeared for a grievant. To the contrary, the revised form merely provided blocks for entry of the representative's name, the appropriate block being selected by the representative depending on whether the representative wished to appear "in a personal capacity" or "on behalf of the exclusive representative, AFGE Local 3615"; and was wholly in accord with existing practice. The fact that lines for signature were provided on an agency form for the name of the representative, if any, whereas the prior agency form had not provided such lines for signature, certainly constituted no change in Respondent's grievance procedure and no change in any condition of employment, i.e., did not change "personnel policies and practices and matters affecting working conditions".

Second, use of Respondent's form was not mandatory, either before or after September 10, 1976, and, accordingly, there was no mandated change in any existing practice or procedure.

Third, Section 11(a) "is not intended to embrace every issue which is of interest to ... exclusive representatives and which indirectly may affect employees. Rather, Section 11(a) encompasses those matters which materially affect, and have a substantial impact on, personnel policies, practices, and general working conditions." Department of Defense, Air National Guard, Texas Air National Guard, Camp Mabry, Austin, Texas, A/SLMR No. 738, 6 A/SLMR 591 (1976). While the record in this case in my view shows that the revision of Respondent's grievance form had no effect whatever on personnel policies, practices or working conditions, by no standard can it be said that the revision of Respondent's grievance form "materially" affected or had a "substantial impact on, personnel policies, practices, and general working conditions" and, accordingly, Respondent owed no obligation under Section 11(a) of the Order to notify, and, upon request, to meet and confer with Complainant prior to issuance of its revised grievance form. Department of Defense, Air National Guard, Texas Air National Guard, Camp Mabry, Austin, Texas, supra.

Since the Complainant failed to prove a violation of Section 19(a)(6) or (1) of Executive Order 11491, as amended, the complaint should be dismissed.

RECOMMENDATION

The complaint herein should be dismissed.

OF THE ASSISTANT SECRETARY
PURSUANT TO SECTION 6 OF EXECUTIVE ORDER 11491, AS AMENDED

VETERANS ADMINISTRATION HEALTH CARE FACILITY,
MONTROSE, NEW YORK
A/SLMR No. 980

This case involved a representation petition filed by the American Federation of Government Employees, Local 1119 (AFGE) seeking an election in a unit of all professional and nonprofessional General Schedule employees of the Veterans Administration Health Care Facility, Montrose, New York. The petitioned for unit is coextensive with the unit for which the National Federation of Federal Employees, Local 1119 (NFFE) is the incumbent exclusive representative. The Activity and the NFFE took the position that their negotiated agreement which became effective on September 12, 1972, and which provided for automatic renewal biannually until modified or terminated, constituted a bar to the subject petition, and that, therefore, the AFGE's petition, which was filed on April 11, 1977, was not timely filed.

The record revealed that in June 1976, the NFFE requested to meet with the Activity for the purpose of revising the parties' negotiated agreement. Following the agreement's anniversary date of September 12, 1976, the parties commenced negotiations for a new agreement. In the Assistant Secretary's view, when the parties commenced negotiations following the anniversary date of the agreement, it became unclear as to whether the parties intended to negotiate a new agreement with a new term, continuing the old agreement indefinitely pending completion of the negotiations, or intended to renew their prior agreement for a new, fixed term. In this ambiguous setting, third parties wishing to challenge the representative status of the NFFE had no way of ascertaining the appropriate time for the filing of a petition. In the Assistant Secretary's view, such a situation might also give the NFFE an unfair advantage in being able to negotiate a completely new agreement after its prior agreement had expired and yet retain protection from challenges by third parties while the negotiations continued. Under these circumstances, the Assistant Secretary determined that the agreement became one of indefinite duration after September 12, 1976, lacking a clearly fixed term, and that it, therefore, could not serve as a bar to the AFGE's petition which was timely filed.

Accordingly, the Assistant Secretary ordered an election in the unit found appropriate.

DECISION AND DIRECTION OF ELECTION

Upon a petition duly filed under Section 6 of Executive Order 11491, as amended, a hearing was held before Hearing Officer Raymond Wren. The Hearing Officer's rulings made at the hearing are free from prejudicial error and are hereby affirmed.

Upon the entire record in this case, including briefs filed by the Petitioner, the American Federation of Government Employees, Local 1119, hereinafter called AFGE, and the Intervenor, the National Federation of Federal Employees, Local 1119, hereinafter called NFFE, the Assistant Secretary finds:

- 1. The labor organizations involved claim to represent certain employees of the Activity.
2. The AFGE seeks an election in a unit consisting of all professional and nonprofessional General Schedule (GS) employees, including Canteen Service employees, of the Veterans Administration Health Care Facility, Montrose, New York, excluding all Wage Grade (WG) employees, employees engaged in Federal personnel work in other than a purely clerical capacity, management officials and supervisors as defined by the Order. 1/ The petitioned for unit is coextensive with the unit for which the NFFE is currently the incumbent exclusive representative. 2/

The Activity and the NFFE take the position that their negotiated agreement, which became effective on September 12, 1972, and which provides for automatic renewal biannually until modified or terminated, constitutes a bar to the instant petition. 3/ Thus, the Activity and the NFFE contend that the agreement renewed itself on September 12, 1974, and again on September 12, 1976, and that the AFGE's petition, which was filed on April 11, 1977, was not filed during the "open

1/ The unit appears essentially as amended at the hearing.

2/ The NFFE was granted exclusive recognition in the aforesaid unit in 1965. In 1974, a timely representation petition was filed by another labor organization. As a result of that petition, the Assistant Secretary directed an election in a unit of all professional and nonprofessional GS employees, excluding, among others, guards, in Veterans Administration Hospital, Montrose, New York, 5 A/SLMR 108, A/SLMR No. 484 (1975). The NFFE won the election and was certified as the exclusive representative on April 7, 1976. Thereafter, the Assistant Secretary, in Veterans Administration Hospital, Montrose, N.Y., A/SLMR No. 872 (1977), dismissed a petition seeking to represent the guards who had been excluded from the unit description contained in the certification issued to the NFFE in 1976, finding that the unit description had inadvertently excluded the guards and that the guards continued to be included in the NFFE's unit.

3/ The agreement provides, in pertinent part:

ARTICLE 45 - DURATION OF AGREEMENT AND MODIFICATION

SECTION I. This agreement shall . . . remain in effect for a period of two (2) years from its effective date and be automatically renewable every two (2) years on the second anniversary date thereafter until modified or terminated as provided herein. Each new 2 year period will be a new duration period with a new effective date.

SECTION II. Once each calendar year, either party may request modification of this agreement by notifying the other, not less than 60 days prior to the anniversary date of this agreement, that a conference is desired to consider the need for revising this agreement. If either party indicates its intention to modify or make changes during the aforesaid periods, this agreement shall remain in full force and effect until such changes are negotiated . . .

period." 4/ On the other hand, the AFGE contends, among other things, that, even assuming the agreement was renewed in 1974, the NFFE had served timely notice to modify, which acted to prevent the renewal of the agreement for bar purposes in 1976. It further argues that, even assuming the agreement continued beyond September 12, 1976, by its terms it became one of indefinite duration and, therefore, could not serve as a bar to the instant petition.

The record reveals that in June 1976, the NFFE requested to meet with the Activity for the purpose of revising the parties' negotiated agreement. Both parties stipulated that negotiating sessions were held from December 1976, to February 1977, and that, while the parties agreed on several articles, they did not agree to all terms of a new agreement. No negotiations were held subsequent to February 1977. Thereafter, on April 11, 1977, the AFGE filed the instant petition.

Under the foregoing circumstances, I find that there was no agreement bar to the filing of the subject petition. It has been previously held that in order for an agreement to constitute a bar to the processing of a petition, it should contain a clearly enunciated fixed term or duration from which employees and labor organizations can ascertain, without having to rely on other factors, the appropriate time for the filing of representation petitions. Thus, it has been found that to permit agreements of unclear duration to constitute bars to elections would, in effect, be granting protection to parties who have entered into ambiguous commitments and could result in the abridgement of the rights of employees under the Executive Order. 5/

As noted above, the NFFE gave notice of its desire to revise the existing negotiated agreement in June 1976. Following the agreement's anniversary date of September 12, 1976, the parties commenced negotiations for a new agreement. At this point, it became unclear as to whether the parties would negotiate a new agreement with a new term, continuing the old agreement indefinitely pending completion of the 4/ Section 202.3(c)(1) of the Assistant Secretary's Regulations provides that:

When an agreement covering a claimed unit has been signed and dated by the activity and the incumbent exclusive representative, a petition for exclusive recognition or other election petition will be considered timely when filed as follows: (1) Not more than ninety (90) days and not less than sixty (60) days prior to the terminal date of an agreement having a term of three (3) years or less from the date it was signed and dated by the activity and the incumbent exclusive representative; . . .

5/ See Treasury Department, United States Mint, Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, 1 A/SLMR 236, A/SLMR No. 45 (1971).

negotiations, or would renew their prior agreement for a new, fixed term. In this ambiguous setting, third parties wishing to challenge the representative status of the NFFE had no way of ascertaining the appropriate time for the filing of a petition. In addition, this created an unfair advantage for the incumbent labor organization in that it could negotiate for a completely new agreement at a time when its prior agreement had expired and yet retain a protection from challenges by third parties while the negotiations continued.

Thus, under the particular circumstances herein, I find that the extended agreement was one of indefinite duration after September 12, 1976, lacking a clearly fixed term, and that such agreement could not serve as a bar to the AFGE's petition which was filed on April 11, 1977. 6/ In my view, such a temporary, stopgap arrangement does not constitute a final, fixed term agreement and lacks the stability sought to be achieved by the agreement bar principle. 7/

Accordingly, I shall direct an election in the following unit which I find appropriate for the purpose of exclusive recognition under Executive Order 11491, as amended:

All professional and nonprofessional General Schedule employees, including Canteen Service employees, of the Veterans Administration Health Care Facility, Montrose, New York, excluding all Wage Grade employees, employees engaged in Federal personnel work in other than a purely clerical capacity, management officials and supervisors as defined in the Order.

As noted above, the unit found appropriate includes professional employees. However, the Assistant Secretary is prohibited by Section 10(b)(4) of the Order from including professional employees in any unit with nonprofessional employees unless a majority of the professional employees votes for inclusion in such unit. Accordingly, the desires of the professional employees must be ascertained. I shall, therefore, direct separate elections in the following groups:

Voting Group (a): All professional General Schedule employees, including professional employees of the Canteen Service, of the Veterans Administration Health Care Facility, Montrose, New York, excluding all nonprofessional employees, Wage Grade employees, employees engaged in Federal personnel work in other than a purely clerical capacity, management officials and supervisors as defined in the Order.

6/ Cf. Veterans Administration Hospital, Leech Farm Road, Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania, 1 A/SLMR 483, A/SLMR No. 104 (1971).

7/ See U.S. Department of the Air Force, Holloman Air Force Base, Alamogordo, New Mexico, 3 A/SLMR 23, A/SLMR No. 235 (1973).

Voting Group (b): All nonprofessional General Schedule employees, including nonprofessional employees of the Canteen Service, of the Veterans Administration Health Care Facility, Montrose, New York, excluding all professional employees, Wage Grade employees, employees engaged in Federal personnel work in other than a purely clerical capacity, management officials and supervisors as defined in the Order.

The employees in the nonprofessional voting group (b) will be polled whether or not they desire to be represented by the AFGE, by the NFFE, or by neither.

The employees in the professional voting group (a) will be asked two questions on their ballots: (1) whether or not they wish to be included with the nonprofessional employees for the purpose of exclusive recognition, and (2) whether or not they wish to be represented for the purpose of exclusive recognition by the AFGE, the NFFE, or neither. In the event that a majority of the valid votes of voting group (a) is cast in favor of inclusion in the same unit as the nonprofessional employees, the ballots of voting group (a) shall be combined with those of voting group (b).

Unless a majority of the valid votes of voting group (a) is cast for inclusion in the same unit as the nonprofessional employees, they will be taken to have indicated their desire to constitute a separate unit, and an appropriate certification will be issued indicating whether the AFGE, the NFFE, or neither was selected by the professional employee unit.

The unit determination in the subject case is based, in part, then, upon the results of the election among the professional employees. However, I will now make the following findings in regard to the appropriate unit:

1. If a majority of the professional employees votes for inclusion in the same unit as the nonprofessional employees, I find that the following employees constitute a unit appropriate for the purpose of exclusive recognition within the meaning of Section 10 of the Order:

All professional and nonprofessional General Schedule employees, including Canteen Service employees, of the Veterans Administration Health Care Facility, Montrose, New York, excluding all Wage Grade employees, employees engaged in Federal personnel work in other than a purely clerical capacity, management officials and supervisors as defined in the Order.

2. If a majority of the professional employees does not vote for inclusion in the same unit as the nonprofessional employees, I find that the following two groups of employees constitute separate units appropriate for the purpose of exclusive recognition within the meaning of Section 10 of the Order:

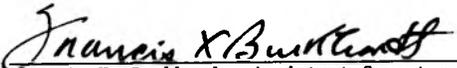

(a) All professional General Schedule employees, including professional employees of the Canteen Service, of the Veterans Administration Health Care Facility, Montrose, New York, excluding all nonprofessional employees, Wage Grade employees, employees engaged in Federal personnel work in other than a purely clerical capacity, management officials and supervisors as defined in the Order.

(b) All nonprofessional General Schedule employees, including nonprofessional employees of the Canteen Service, of the Veterans Administration Health Care Facility, Montrose, New York, excluding all professional employees, Wage Grade employees, employees engaged in Federal personnel work in other than a purely clerical capacity, management officials and supervisors as defined in the Order.

DIRECTION OF ELECTION

An election by secret ballot shall be conducted among employees in the unit found appropriate as early as possible, but not later than 60 days from the date below. The appropriate Area Administrator shall supervise the election subject to the Assistant Secretary's Regulations. Eligible to vote are those in the unit who were employed during the payroll period immediately preceding the date below, including employees who did not work during that period because they were out ill, or on vacation or on furlough, including those in the military service who appear in person at the polls. Ineligible to vote are employees who quit, or were discharged for cause, since the designated payroll period and who have not been rehired or reinstated before the election date. Those eligible shall vote whether they wish to be represented for the purpose of exclusive recognition by the American Federation of Government Employees, Local 1119; by the National Federation of Federal Employees, Local 1119; or by neither.

PURSUANT TO SECTION 6 OF EXECUTIVE ORDER 11491, AS AMENDED

PICATINNY ARSENAL AND
THE PROJECT MANAGER FOR NUCLEAR MUNITIONS,
DOVER, NEW JERSEY
A/SLMR No. 981

This case involved three unfair labor practice complaints filed by the Complainants, Local Union 1437, National Federation of Federal Employees, Ind. (NFFE); Local Union 142, Office and Professional Employees International Union, AFL-CIO (OPE); Federal Employees Council 270 (Council 270); and Local Union 169, Federal Uniformed Firefighters, AFL-CIO (Firefighters) alleging that the Respondents violated Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order by failing to bargain with the Complainants prior to a change in competitive areas and levels.

As a result of a major reorganization of the Department of the Army armaments community, the Respondent Picatinny Arsenal (Arsenal) was essentially disestablished, and its functions were distributed between two new commands. One of the new commands, U.S. Army Armament Research and Development Command (ARRADCOM), was established on January 31, 1977, at the Arsenal site, Dover, New Jersey, and was made a party Respondent in this proceeding. In the summer of 1976 the Complainants had requested the Arsenal to bargain with them on a change in the competitive areas, which the Arsenal refused asserting that the matters involved were non-negotiable.

The Assistant Secretary, noting particularly that no exceptions had been filed by the NFFE, adopted the Administrative Law Judge's finding in Case No. 32-04800(CA) that the Respondent Arsenal had not violated Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order by establishing new competitive levels without first meeting and conferring with the Complainant NFFE, and ordered that the complaint in that case be dismissed.

The Assistant Secretary concurred also in the Administrative Law Judge's finding in Case Nos. 32-04793(CA) and 32-04838(CA) that the Arsenal had violated Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order by changing competitive areas without first meeting and conferring with the Complainants regarding the decision to effectuate such a change. However, noting that the Arsenal has been disestablished, the Assistant Secretary concluded that the issuance of a remedial order would be inappropriate at this time as before there could be an appropriate remedial order, the question of whether the ARRADCOM and/or the Project Manager for Nuclear Munitions (an alleged successor to a tenant activity of the Arsenal) have become successor activities must be established prior to ordering them to remedy their predecessors' unfair labor practices. He ordered, therefore, that if a final determination is made in the pending subsequent representation proceedings that these Respondents meet the test of successorship and the Complainants are found to remain the exclusive representatives in appropriate units of employees located at the Dover site, such exclusive representatives must be notified by the appropriate respondent-activity of any intended change in the competitive areas affecting employees within the unit, and afforded the opportunity to meet and confer, to the extent consonant with law and regulations, on the decision to effectuate such a change. Conversely, if successorship was not established, he ordered the Regional Administrator to close Case Nos. 32-04793(CA) and 32-04838(CA) without issuance of a remedial order.

On July 22, 1977, Administrative Law Judge Robert L. Ramsey issued his Recommended Decision and Order in the above-entitled consolidated proceeding, finding in Case No. 32-04800(CA) that the Respondent Picatinny Arsenal, Dover, New Jersey, (Arsenal) had not violated the Order and recommending dismissal of that complaint. In Case Nos. 32-04793(CA) and 32-04838(CA) he found that the Respondents, the Project Manager for Nuclear Munitions and the Arsenal had violated Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order and recommended that they cease and desist therefrom and take certain affirmative actions as set forth in the attached Administrative Law Judge's Recommended Decision and Order. Thereafter, the Headquarters, U.S. Army Materiel Development and Readiness Command (DARCOM), as the major command to which the Respondents report, filed exceptions and a supporting brief in behalf of the Respondents 1/ with respect to the Administrative Law Judge's Recommended Decision and Order.

The Assistant Secretary has reviewed the rulings of the Administrative Law Judge made at the hearing and finds that no prejudicial error was committed. The rulings are hereby affirmed. Upon consideration of the Administrative Law Judge's Recommended Decision and Order and the entire record in the subject cases, including the exceptions and supporting brief filed by the DARCOM, I hereby adopt the Administrative Law Judge's findings, conclusions and recommendations, only to the extent consistent herewith.

The record indicates that as a result, in part, of a major reorganization of the Department of the Army armaments community which, among other things, affected employees located at Picatinny Arsenal, the Arsenal was essentially disestablished and its functions distributed between two new commands. One of the new commands, the ARRADCOM, was established on January 31, 1977, and its headquarters were located at the Dover, New Jersey, site. The planning and implementation of such reorganization resulted in the transfer of some employees located at the Arsenal to other duty stations, and in the transfer of other employees at duty stations other than the Arsenal to the Dover site.

The record herein indicates that sometime during the summer of 1976 the Complainants, Local Union 1437, National Federation of Federal Employees (NFFE); Local Union 142, Office and Professional Employees International Union, AFL-CIO (OPE); Federal Employees Council 270 (Council 270); and Local Union 169, Federal Uniformed Firefighters,

1/ It is noted that, at the hearing, the Administrative Law Judge granted the Complainants' motion to amend the complaints to include the U.S. Army Armament Research and Development Command (ARRADCOM) as a party Respondent in this proceeding.

AFL-CIO (Firefighters) 2/ requested the Respondent Arsenal 3/ to bargain with them on proposed changes in competitive areas [Case Nos. 32-04793(CA) and 32-04838(CA)]. Case No. 32-04800(CA) involved a request of the Arsenal in June 1976, by the NFFE to participate in the determinations with regard to the competitive levels. The Arsenal refused these bargaining requests asserting that the matters involved were non-negotiable. The Complainants herein contended that there was an obligation on the part of the Respondents to negotiate with the exclusive representatives concerning the establishment of the new competitive areas and levels and their adverse impact on unit employees.

As indicated above, the Administrative Law Judge found that no violation of the Order occurred in Case No. 32-04800(CA). 4/ He found, however, in Case Nos. 32-04793(CA) and 32-04838(CA), that the Respondent Arsenal and the Respondent Project Manager for Nuclear Munitions had violated Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order "when they established new competitive areas without first meeting and conferring or negotiating with the named Complainants on the establishment of these competitive areas and/or their impact on the Complainants." I concur in that finding insofar as the Arsenal was found to have violated the Order. 5/

2/ These Complainants were the exclusive representatives of the following employees employed at the Arsenal: NFFE represented all professional employees employed by the Arsenal and its tenant activities serviced by the Arsenal; OPE represented employees in the Micro Data Branch; Council 270 represented uniformed guards; and the Firefighters represented the firefighters.

3/ The Project Manager for Nuclear Munitions was included as a Respondent by the NFFE in Case No. 32-04793(CA) based on its contention that, subsequent to the reorganization, the Project Manager for Nuclear Munitions became the successor to the Project Manager for Safeguard Munitions, a tenant activity which was serviced by the Arsenal and whose employees were included in the unit at the Arsenal represented by the NFFE. The record indicates that the Project Manager for Safeguard Munitions was phased out prior to the establishment of the Project Manager for Nuclear Munitions. The Respondents deny that the Project Manager for Nuclear Munitions became the successor to the Project Manager for Safeguard Munitions.

4/ Noting particularly that no exceptions were filed by the NFFE to that conclusion, I hereby adopt the Administrative Law Judge's finding and recommendation, and I shall order that the complaint in that case be dismissed.

5/ With regard to the violation found against the Project Manager for Nuclear Munitions, I note that at the time of the violation its alleged predecessor activity, the Project Manager for Safeguard Munitions, was not an entity separate and apart from the Arsenal unit represented by the NFFE. However, as indicated hereafter, if the Project Manager for Nuclear Munitions is found in a subsequent proceeding to be a successor entity to part of the Arsenal unit, it will be ordered to remedy those violations for which it is responsible.

The Assistant Secretary has held that while agencies are not obligated to bargain on the decision to effectuate a reduction in force, they are obligated to bargain on the establishment of new competitive areas for the purpose of a reduction in force. 6/ In its review of A/SLMR No. 679, the Federal Labor Relations Council (Council) noted (FLRC No. 76A-101) that agency management is obligated to negotiate with a labor organization accorded exclusive recognition with respect to personnel policies and practices and matters affecting working conditions of employees in the bargaining unit, and that where changes in established personnel policies and practices, such as competitive areas, are to be made, an agency has the obligation to provide the exclusive representative adequate notice and an opportunity to request negotiations concerning the proposed change insofar as it affects employees within the unit of recognition. The Council further stated that an agency must notify the labor organization representing employees who are to remain in the competitive area of the decision to remove other employees and, upon request, negotiate concerning the impact of such removal on those remaining employees.

While, as indicated above, I agree with the Administrative Law Judge's finding that the Respondent Arsenal violated Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order by failing to bargain on the change in competitive areas, I am unable, under the particular circumstances herein, to issue an appropriate remedial order at this time. Thus, at the time the improper actions herein occurred, the Arsenal was the employer-activity of the employees represented exclusively by the Complainants. Subsequent to the filing of the complaints herein, and the phasing out of the Project Manager for Safeguard Munitions, the Arsenal was disestablished, and the Project Manager for Nuclear Munitions, as well as the ARRADCOM, were separately established at the Dover site. Thus, there is a question as to whether the ARRADCOM has become the successor to the Arsenal, and/or the Project Manager for Nuclear Munitions has become the successor to the Project Manager for Safeguard Munitions.

In Defense Supply Agency, Defense Property Disposal Office, Aberdeen Proving Ground, Aberdeen, Maryland, 3 FLRC 787, FLRC No. 74A-22(1975), the Council set forth the criteria necessary to establish successorship, i.e., (1) the recognized unit is transferred substantially intact to the gaining employer; (2) the appropriateness of the unit remains unimpaired in the gaining employer; and (3) a question concerning representation is not timely raised as to the representative status of the incumbent labor organization. Further, it stated that "the gaining employer (whether by inter or intra agency transfer) takes the place of the losing agency or employing entity as a 'successor' under [Section] 10(a) when the substantive elements of recognition continue without material change after the subject reorganization."

6/ Department of the Army, U.S. Army Electronics Command, Fort Monmouth, New Jersey, 6 A/SLMR 365, A/SLMR No. 679 (1976).

In my opinion, therefore, before there can be an appropriate remedial order in this matter, it must be established that the Respondent ARRADCOM is a successor to the Arsenal and/or the Respondent Project Manager for Nuclear Munitions is a successor obligated to bargain with the Complainants and to remedy the predecessors' unfair labor practices. The record herein is insufficient to establish that the ARRADCOM and the Project Manager for Nuclear Munitions meet the successor criteria set forth above. Accordingly, I find that the Administrative Law Judge's proposed remedial order is inappropriate at this time. Rather, if a final determination is made in any subsequent proceeding 7/ that the ARRADCOM is a successor to the Arsenal and/or the Project Manager for Nuclear Munitions is a successor Activity, and the Complainants in Case Nos. 32-04793(CA) and 32-04838(CA) are the representatives of appropriate units located at the Dover, New Jersey, facility, the following remedial order would be appropriate with the appropriate designations of the respondents and exclusive representatives therein. 8/ Further, since the Picatinny Arsenal has, in effect, been disestablished, unless successorship is established in subsequent proceedings and the Complainants are found to remain the exclusive representatives in appropriate units of employees located at the Dover, New Jersey, site, I find that it would not effectuate the purposes of the Order to issue a remedial order against the Picatinny Arsenal and/or the Project Manager for Nuclear Munitions in Case Nos. 32-04793(CA) and 32-04838(CA). 9/

Pursuant to Section 6(b) of Executive Order 11491, as amended, and Section 203.26(b) of the Regulations, the Assistant Secretary of Labor

7/ I have been administratively advised that a number of RA petitions have been filed relative to the successor issue.

8/ Cf. Department of Agriculture and Office of Investigations, 5 A/SLMR 580, A/SLMR No. 555 (1975).

9/ In such circumstances, the appropriate Regional Administrator would close the above cited cases without a remedial order.

10/ Cf. Department of the Interior, Bureau of Reclamation, Yuma Projects Office, Yuma, Arizona, A/SLMR No. 808 (1977), in which the Acting Assistant Secretary held, in applying the principles enunciated by the Council in FLRC No. 74A-52, that a status quo ante remedy with respect to the reestablishment of prior competitive areas was inappropriate where the Activity unilaterally established new competitive areas for the purpose of reduction-in-force insofar as the issue sought to be resolved in an unfair labor practice proceeding (i.e., reevaluation of layoffs and reinstatement of employees improperly laid off) could have properly been invoked under an appeals procedure. In the Council's view, such appeals procedure precluded the Assistant Secretary under Section 19(d) of the Order from disposing of such issue or fashioning such attendant remedies under Section 19 in an unfair labor practice proceeding.

for Labor-Management Relations hereby orders that (respondent-activity), Dover, New Jersey, shall:

1. Cease and desist from:

(a) Changing the composition of the competitive areas without notifying (exclusive representative) of any intended change in competitive areas affecting employees within its unit and affording such representative the opportunity to meet and confer, to the extent consonant with law and regulations, on the decision to effectuate such a change.

(b) In any like or related manner, interfering with, restraining, or coercing employees in the exercise of their rights assured by Executive Order 11491, as amended.

2. Take the following affirmative actions in order to effectuate the purposes and policies of Executive Order 11491, as amended:

(a) Notify (exclusive representative) of any intended change in the competitive areas affecting employees within its unit, and afford such representative the opportunity to meet and confer, to the extent consonant with law and regulations, on the decision to effectuate such a change.

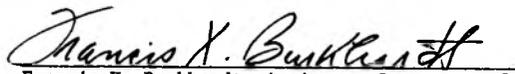

(b) Post at its Dover, New Jersey, facility, copies of the attached Notice marked "Appendix" on forms to be furnished by the Assistant Secretary of Labor for Labor-Management Relations. Upon receipt of such forms, they shall be signed by the Commander, or other appropriate official in charge, of the (respondent-activity) and they shall be posted for 60 consecutive days thereafter, in conspicuous places, including all places where notices to employees are customarily posted. The Commander shall take reasonable steps to insure that such notices are not altered, defaced, or covered by any other material.

(c) Pursuant to Section 203.27 of the Regulations, notify the Assistant Secretary, in writing, within 30 days from the date of this order as to what steps have been taken to comply herewith.

10/ In my opinion, the principles enunciated by the Council in the Yuma case are equally applicable herein and I have, therefore, modified the Administrative Law Judge's recommended order accordingly.

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED that the complaint in Case No. 32-04800(CA) be, and it hereby is, dismissed.

RECOMMENDED DECISION AND ORDER

Statement of the Case

This case originated as three separate complaints. Case No. 32-04793(CA) was initiated by the filing of a complaint on October 14, 1976, by Local 1437, National Federation of Federal Employees against Picatinny Arsenal and the Project Manager for Nuclear Munitions. The agency's response was dated October 29, 1976. Case No. 32-04800(CA) was instituted by the filing of a complaint dated November 1, 1976, by Local Union 1437, National Federation of Federal Employees against Picatinny Arsenal, Dover, New Jersey. The agency's response to this complaint was dated November 12, 1976. Case No. 32-04838(CA) was initiated by the filing of a complaint dated December 2, 1976, by Local 1437, National Federation of Federal Employees; Local Union 142, Office and Professional Employees International Union, AFL-CIO; Federal Employees Council 270; and Local Union 169, Federal Uniformed Firefighters, AFL-CIO. The agency's response was dated December 15, 1976. Thereafter under date of March 11, 1977, amended complaints in each of these cases were filed.

Though the cases vary slightly as to allegations and complaints, they arise out of a common set of facts which are set forth below. Basically, Case No. 32-04793(CA) charges the Activities with establishing new competitive areas without prior negotiation with the Complainant in violation of section 19(a)(1) and (6) of Executive Order 11491, as amended. The amended complaint in Case No. 32-04800(CA) charges the Activity with the creation of new competitive levels without prior negotiation with the Complainant in violation of section 19(a)(1) and (6) of Executive Order 11491, as amended. The amended complaint in Case No. 32-04838(CA) charges the Activity with the creation of new competitive areas without prior negotiation with the Complainants in violation of section 19(a)(1) and (6) of Executive Order 11491, as amended.

Under date of April 14, 1977, Benjamin B. Naumoff, Regional Administrator, New York Region, Labor-Management Services Administration, entered an order consolidating the above cases for hearing and noticed the same for hearing on April 28, 1977.

Hearings were held in the consolidated cases on April 28, 1977, April 29, 1977, May 2, 1977, and May 3, 1977, at Dover, New Jersey. All parties were afforded and took advantage of the opportunity to be heard, to examine and cross-examine witnesses, and to introduce evidence bearing on the issues involved herein. Thereafter the record was left open for the submission of briefs and the same have been received.

Findings of Fact

At all times pertinent hereto, the Complainant Unions were the exclusive bargaining representatives for their membership with regard to the named Activities.

For a considerable length of time prior to the filing of charges by the union herein, the Department of the Army was in the process of a major nation-wide reorganization of its armaments community. The object of this reorganization was to increase the efficiency of operations by separating the logistics or supply functions from the research and development functions of existing operations. At the same time, it was hoped to increase efficiency by eliminating any wasteful duplication of effort which may have existed under the prior fragmented system. The idea, then, was to bring all research and development activities together under one command. In late 1975, as part of this reorganization, the U. S. Army Materiel Development and Readiness Command (DARCOM) undertook a review of its subordinate command, the U. S. Army Armament Command (ARMCOM). This review was directed toward consolidating ARMCOM's research and development functions under one command and its logistics functions under another. Obviously, this was no small project. To the contrary, it was a major nation-wide effort involving high-level executive decisions, Congress, large numbers of state and local officials in many localities, as well as consideration for the individual employees involved. The decisions at the early stages involved conceptual realignments of structure, mission and function. Later decisions involved locations, placement of buildings and equipment, and the establishment of a research and development headquarters. Ultimately, the decision was made by the Department of the Army to locate the headquarters of the U. S. Army Armaments Research and Development Command (ARRADCOM) at Dover, New Jersey. At that time, there was located at Dover an installation called Picatinny Arsenal which was a subordinate installation to the Armaments Command located at Rock Island, Illinois.

As a result of the reorganization, the Armaments Command (ARCOM) was to be disestablished. Further, the functions of its various installations were to be reshuffled, and placed either under the Armaments Materiel and Readiness Command (ARRCOM) to be located at Rock Island, or under ARRADCOM at Dover. Picatinny was one of those installations so affected. Under the reorganization plan, Picatinny was to be essentially disestablished and its appropriate functions distributed between the two commands. Under the reorganization plan, it was intended that as the functions moved, so would the positions accomplishing those functions and the people in those positions. Among the changes to be made in the tenant Activities which comprised Picatinny Arsenal, the most germane to this case were:

- (1) The transfer of the Project Manager's Office for Cannon Artillery Weapons Systems (PM CAWC) from Rock Island to Picatinny,
- (2) The supplanting at Picatinny of the Project Manager's Office for Safeguard Munitions with the Project Manager's Office for Nuclear Munitions (PM NM),
- (3) The enlargement of the Picatinny Base Support Activity and its renaming to ARRADCOM Support Activity, and
- (4) The transfer of the U. S. Army Armament Readiness Command (ARRCOM) Detachment from Rock Island, Illinois to Picatinny.

Under the reorganization plan, the actual work of accomplishing the movement of functions, equipment, positions and people became the responsibility of an ad hoc group known as the ARRADCOM Implementation Task Force (AITF). In particular, the task of effectuating the numerous personnel actions was to be the responsibility of the AITF. This task likewise was no small undertaking, as the actions taken by AITF would impact on the rights of diversified and widely separated groups of employees. In particular, it is noted that there was to be geographical dispersion in five different locations (Exhibit R. 3-102). In those locations were twenty-one separate and distinct established bargaining units, represented by a total of fifteen locals of nine national labor organizations (Exhibit R. 3-103). Of the twenty-one units, NFFE Local 1437 represented but one (Exhibit R. 3-108). The same is true of the remaining Complainants and of the other organization comprising the Picatinny Arsenal Labor Council (PALC).

Obviously, the reorganization, being on a national scale, would involve a considerable realignment in positions, job descriptions, relocation of personnel, questions of seniority, and the like.

When it became known to NFFE Local 1437, that the reorganization was imminent, the president of NFFE Local 1437, on more than one occasion, requested AITF to negotiate with respect to the impact of the proposed reorganization on the rights of members of the Local. These requests were refused; however, it should be noted that in the summer of 1976, Mrs. Ruth Nicolaides and Mrs. Renee Stone, both members of NFFE Local 1437, were called to a brief meeting held by Mr. Cavanaugh, the laboratory chief at Warhead Special Projects, a part of Picatinny Arsenal. The purpose of this meeting was to review the competitive levels for various technical positions.

It is the position of the Complainants in each of these cases that there was an obligation on the part of the Respondents, through AITF, to negotiate with the respective unions concerning the impact of the proposed reorganization on the employees. Specifically, the Complainant Unions feel that the Respondents, through AITF, had an obligation to negotiate the establishment of competitive areas (Case No. 32-04793(CA) and Case No. 32-04838(CA)), and further, that there was an obligation to negotiate the establishment of competitive levels (Case No. 32-04800(CA)). It is the position of the Respondents that no such obligation existed for two reasons: (1) that the Complainants involved in these cases represented certified units of Picatinny Arsenal only and were not certified to, nor did they have representational rights with the AITF, and (2) that the establishment of competitive areas and the establishment of competitive levels are not subject to negotiation because they involve the right to assign work, and the right to assign work is a right reserved to management under section 11(b) of Executive Order 11491.

I reject the first argument proposed by the Respondents, namely that since the Complainant Unions were not certified to, nor did they have representational rights with the AITF, there was no obligation on the part of the Respondents to negotiate. It is abundantly clear from the record that the Complainants were the duly certified representatives of various employees at Picatinny Arsenal and, as such, had exclusive representational rights with the tenant Activities at Picatinny. It is further clearly demonstrated by the record that AITF was created solely for the purpose of accomplishing or effectuating the changes made necessary by the reorganization and was the "clearinghouse" for problems arising from the implementation of the reorganization. In short, insofar as the reorganization was concerned, AITF was the spokesman for the Department of the Army and its subordinate organizations. To argue that this ad hoc group established by the Department of the Army owed no obligation to the Complainants to negotiate on the impact of the proposed reorganization is to ignore the obvious. Assuming, arguendo, that there was a duty on the part of the various Respondents to meet and confer or negotiate (the terms are here used interchangeably) with the Complainants on the impact of the reorganization, it follows that the AITF, as the agent or representative of the Respondents, would be bound by the obligation to negotiate. It is a play on words to say that where a principal is bound to negotiate with a party, the agent of the principal is not so obligated, simply by reason of the fact that the agent does not have the same name or identity as the principal. Thus, I find the Respondents' first argument without merit and hold that if there was a duty on the part of the Respondents to negotiate with the Complainants on the impact of the reorganization, that duty was transferred to and binding on the AITF as the duly designated representative of the Respondents during the period of the reorganization.

We now turn to the second argument put forth by the Respondents, namely that there was no obligation to negotiate the establishment of competitive areas or the establishment of competitive levels during the reorganization, as the establishment of competitive areas and the establishment of competitive levels are not subject to negotiation because they involve the right to assign work and that the right to assign work is a right reserved to management under Executive Order 11491. I agree with this argument as it applies to the establishment of competitive levels, but reject it as to the establishment of competitive areas.

A competitive level is a grouping of all positions in a competitive area and in the same grade or occupational level which are sufficiently alike in qualification requirements, duties, responsibilities, pay schedules, and working conditions, so that an agency readily may assign the incumbent of any one position to any of the other positions without changing the terms of his appointment or unduly interrupting the work program. (See 5 C.F.R. § 351.403(a)). It is axiomatic that the establishment of a competitive level involves an examination and evaluation of qualification requirements, duties, responsibilities, pay schedules, and working conditions involved in a given position as well as an examination of those items in another position which may be interchangeable with those of the first position. Quite obviously, these considerations are paramount in the establishment of position descriptions and relate directly to the ultimate interchangeability of positions in any reduction-in-force. The interchangeability flows directly from the skills and knowledge required by various positions and whether the incumbent in one position could perform without deleterious effect the duties of another position on the same level. In the absence of true interchangeability, it is obvious that the mission and functions of the agency involved could be seriously inhibited. From what has been said, I find that the establishment of competitive levels ultimately determines the methods, means and personnel by which an agency's mission and function will be accomplished, and, as such, falls within those items which are excepted from the obligation to bargain under section 11(b) of Executive Order 11491, and on which no duty to meet and confer or negotiate exists. Absent any modification of this reserved right in the agreement between the parties, the reservation is absolute. Department of the Treasury, Internal Revenue Service, Brookhaven Service Center, A/SLMR No. 814.

Competitive areas, on the other hand, specify which geographical or organizational areas will be grouped together in determining which employees compete for retention during a reduction-in-force. Federal Personnel Manual 351-17 (Exhibit R-7) states in part: "(2) Field Service. In the field service, a competitive area ordinarily should not be smaller than the field installation

When, however, a field installation includes activities in more than one commuting area, a separate competitive area may be established for each of the commuting areas." Further, Title 5 of the Code of Federal Regulations provides as follows:

Section 351.402 Competitive Area.

(a) Each agency shall establish competitive areas in which employees compete for retention under this part.

(b) The standard for a competitive area is that it include all or that part of an agency in which employees are assigned under a single administrative authority. A competitive area in the departmental service meets this standard when it covers a primary subdivision of an agency in the local commuting area. A competitive area in the field service meets this standard when it covers a field installation in the local commuting area.

Obviously, the decision to establish new competitive areas as alleged in Case No. 32-04793(CA) and Case No. 32-04838(CA) would have a significant impact on the Complainants' members and would seriously affect their retention rights in the event of a reduction-in-force. By reason of such, I find that the Respondents in Cases Nos. 32-04793(CA) and 32-04838(CA) were obligated to meet and confer or negotiate with the Complainants in those cases with regard to the establishment of new competitive areas, and that the failure of the Respondents in those cases to so negotiate constitutes a violation of section 19(a)(1) and (6) of Executive Order 11491. In this regard see Department of the Army, U. S. Army Electronics Command, Fort Monmouth, New Jersey, A/SLMR No. 679 (July 26, 1979) and Department of the Interior, Bureau of Reclamation, Yuma Projects Office, Yuma, Arizona, A/SLMR No. 808 March 1, 1977).

Conclusions

From the foregoing, I conclude that in Case No. 32-04793(CA) and Case No. 32-04838(CA) the named Activities were guilty of a violation of section 19(a)(1) and (6) when they established new competitive areas without first meeting and conferring or negotiating with the named Complainants on the establishment of these competitive areas and/or their impact on the Complainants.

With respect to Case No. 32-04800(CA), I find that the named Activity was not guilty of a violation of section 19(a)(1) and (6) of Executive Order 11491 when it established new competitive levels without first meeting and conferring or negotiating with the named Complainant, because the establishment of competitive levels comes with the ambit of powers reserved to management under section 11(b) of Executive Order 11491.

Recommendation

1. Having found that the named Respondent in Case No. 32-04800(CA) has not engaged in conduct violative of section 19(a)(1) and (6) of Executive Order 11491, I recommend that the complaint in that case be dismissed in its entirety.

2. Having found that the named Respondents in Case No. 32-04973(CA) and Case No. 32-04838(CA) have engaged in conduct violative of section 19(a)(1) and (6) of Executive Order 11491, I recommend that the Assistant Secretary adopt the following order designed to effectuate the purposes of Executive Order 11491.

Recommended Order

Pursuant to section 6(b) of Executive Order 11491, as amended, and section 203.25(b) of the Regulations, the Assistant Secretary of Labor for Labor-Management Relations hereby orders that the Picatinny Arsenal and the Project Manager for Nuclear Munitions and the Picatinny Arsenal, Dover, New Jersey, shall:

1. Cease and desist from:

(a) Refusing to negotiate on the establishment of new competitive areas and on the impact of changes in competitive areas pursuant to any reorganization or realignment of the labor force at the Picatinny Arsenal site.

(b) In any like or related manner interfering with, restraining or coercing its employees represented by Local 1437, National Federation of Federal Employees; Local 142, Office and Professional Employees International Union, AFL-CIO; Federal Employees Council 270 and Local 169, Federal Uniformed Firefighters, AFL-CIO, in the exercise of rights assured by Executive Order 11491, as amended.

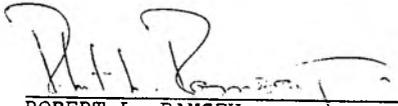

2. Take the following affirmative actions in order to effectuate the purposes and policies of Executive Order 11491, as amended:

(a) Upon request, promptly negotiate on the impact of changes in competitive areas and insure that any settlement arrived at shall be effective as of the date of the original request to negotiate or the date the Respondent Activities should have begun negotiations, whichever is earlier.

(b) Establish procedures to insure that all proposed changes in personnel policies, practices and working conditions are transmitted to the appropriate unions in order that they may be negotiated prior to the implementation of any such changes.

(c) Post at its facilities at the Picatinny Arsenal site, copies of the attached notice marked "Appendix" on forms to be furnished by the Assistant Secretary of Labor for Labor-Management Relations. Upon receipt of such forms, they shall be signed by the Commanding Officer and shall be posted and maintained by him for sixty consecutive days thereafter, in conspicuous places, including all bulletin boards and other places where notices to employees are customarily posted. The Commanding Officer shall take reasonable steps to insure that such notices are not altered, defaced, or covered by other material.

(d) Pursuant to section 203.27 of the Regulations, notify the Assistant Secretary in writing within thirty days from the date of this order as to what steps have been taken to comply herewith.

SUPPLEMENTAL DECISION AND ORDER TO A/SLMR No. 981

On February 3, 1978, the Assistant Secretary issued his Decision and Order in the above-entitled consolidated proceeding, finding, among other things, in agreement with the Administrative Law Judge's Recommended Decision and Order, and in the apparent absence of exceptions by the Complainant, Local Union 1437, National Federation of Federal Employees, Ind., herein called NFFE, that the Respondent had not engaged in the unfair labor practices alleged in the complaint in Case No. 32-04800(CA), i.e., that the Respondent Picatinny Arsenal, herein called the Arsenal, had refused to bargain on the establishment of new competitive levels and their adverse impact on unit employees. Accordingly, he ordered that the complaint in that case be dismissed.

On February 14, 1978, the NFFE filed a motion with the Assistant Secretary requesting that A/SLMR No. 981 be reopened and reconsidered on the basis that the NFFE had filed timely exceptions together with a supporting brief with the Assistant Secretary to the Administrative Law Judge's Recommended Decision and Order in Case No. 32-04800(CA). Thereafter, the Respondent U.S. Army Armament Research and Development Command, herein called ARRADCOM, requested that the motion be denied. Having duly considered the NFFE's motion and the ARRADCOM's opposition thereto, and the record indicating that such exceptions had, in fact, been timely filed by the NFFE, I hereby grant the motion filed by the NFFE, and make the following supplemental findings and conclusions:

The Administrative Law Judge found, and I agree, that the establishment of competitive levels is not a negotiable matter within the ambit of Section 11(a) of the Order. However, such determination does not necessarily mean that there was no bargaining obligation involved herein. Thus, it is well established in the Federal sector that in the context of a non-negotiable management decision, there is no bar to negotiations on procedures, to the extent consonant with law and regulations, which management will observe in reaching the decision involved and on the impact of the decision on unit employees. 1/ The evidence herein establishes that the NFFE requested bargaining on impact and that the Respondent Arsenal rejected such request. Under these circumstances, I find that the Respondent's conduct constituted a refusal to bargain in violation of Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order. 2/ Therefore, I shall modify the Order and Appendix issued in A/SLMR No. 981 in accordance with my finding herein.

1/ See Veterans Administration Research Hospital, Chicago, Illinois, 1 FLRC No. 227, FLRC 71A-31 (1972), and Naval Public Works Center, Norfolk, Virginia, 1 FLRC No. 431, FLRC No. 71A-56 (1973).

2/ On page 5 of his Recommended Decision and Order, the Administrative Law Judge noted that two members of the NFFE "were called to a brief meeting held by Mr. Cavanaugh, the laboratory chief at Warhead Special Projects, a part of Picatinny Arsenal. The purpose of this meeting was to review the competitive levels for various technical positions." The record indicates that these employees were summoned to the meeting as experts in their fields, and not as members or representatives of the NFFE. Consequently, in my view, such a meeting did not fulfill the Respondent's bargaining obligation under the Order.

Pursuant to Section 6(b) of Executive Order 11491, as amended, and Section 203.26(b) of the Regulations, the Assistant Secretary of Labor for Labor-Management Relations hereby orders that (respondent-activity), Dover, New Jersey, shall take the following action:

1. Redesignate paragraph (b) as paragraph (c) and insert the following paragraph as 1(b):

(b) Changing the composition of the competitive levels without notifying Local Union 1437, National Federation of Federal Employees, Ind., the exclusive representative, of any intended change in competitive levels affecting employees within its unit and affording such representative the opportunity to meet and confer, to the extent consonant with law and regulations, on the impact which the modification of the competitive levels will have on the employees it represents.

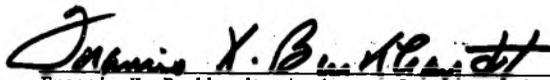

2. Redesignate paragraphs 2(b) and (c) as paragraphs 2(c) and (d) and insert the following as paragraph 2(b):

(b) Notify Local Union 1437, National Federation of Federal Employees, Ind., the exclusive representative, of any intended change in the competitive levels affecting employees within its unit, and afford such representative the opportunity to meet and confer, to the extent consonant with law and regulations, on the impact any such change will have on the employees it represents.

3. Substitute the attached notice marked "Appendix" for that in A/SLMR No. 981 issued by the Assistant Secretary on February 3, 1978.

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED that the order dismissing the complaint in Case No. 32-04800(CA) be, and it hereby is, vacated.

Dated, Washington, D.C.
May 9, 1978

Francis X. Burkhardt, Assistant Secretary of
Labor for Labor-Management Relations

3/ As noted in A/SLMR No. 981, at page 5, the remedial order herein is operative only if the Respondent ARRADCOM is determined in any subsequent proceeding to be the successor to the Arsenal and the Complainants involved, including the NFFE, are determined to be the exclusive representatives of appropriate units located at the Dover, New Jersey, facility.

UNITED STATES DEPARTMENT OF LABOR
ASSISTANT SECRETARY FOR LABOR-MANAGEMENT RELATIONS
SUMMARY OF DECISION AND ORDER OF THE ASSISTANT SECRETARY
PURSUANT TO SECTION 6 OF EXECUTIVE ORDER 11491, AS AMENDED

SOCIAL SECURITY ADMINISTRATION
BRANCH OFFICE,
ANGLETON, TEXAS
A/SLMR No. 982

This case involved an unfair labor practice complaint filed by the National Federation of Federal Employees, Local 1823 (Complainant) alleging that the Respondent violated Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order by unilaterally instituting a program for mandatory overtime without first affording the Complainant the opportunity to bargain over the impact and implementation of such program.

The Assistant Secretary concluded, contrary to the Administrative Law Judge, that the Respondent had fulfilled its obligation to meet and confer on the impact and implementation of its decision to institute mandatory overtime. He noted that the Respondent had informed the Complainant's Vice-President, the ranking union representative of the Complainant at the facility, of its decision to institute mandatory overtime and sought the Complainant's comments on implementation; the Complainant's Vice-President went to the unit employees and solicited their comments on mandatory overtime, met with the Respondent, and made proposals; and the Complainant's proposals were considered before the method of implementation was announced to unit employees.

The Assistant Secretary found that the meeting between the Complainant and the Respondent, prior to the time the method of implementation was announced to unit employees, was more than a meeting to decide whether or not to institute mandatory overtime but, in fact, dealt extensively with the Complainant's proposals on the method of implementing the imposition of mandatory overtime. Under the particular circumstances, he concluded that the Respondent had fulfilled its obligation to bargain on the impact and implementation of its decision to institute mandatory overtime before it met with the unit employees to inform them of how the program would operate and before the Complainant's President returned to the facility and requested bargaining on the impact and implementation of the Respondent's decision.

Accordingly, the Assistant Secretary ordered that the complaint be dismissed.

DECISION AND ORDER

On July 28, 1977, Administrative Law Judge Burton S. Sternburg issued his Recommended Decision and Order in the above-entitled proceeding, finding that the Respondent had engaged in the unfair labor practices alleged in the complaint and recommending that it cease and desist therefrom and take certain affirmative action as set forth in the attached Administrative Law Judge's Recommended Decision and Order. Thereafter, the Respondent filed exceptions with respect to the Administrative Law Judge's Recommended Decision and Order.

The Assistant Secretary has reviewed the rulings of the Administrative Law Judge made at the hearing and finds that no prejudicial error was committed. The rulings are hereby affirmed. Upon consideration of the Administrative Law Judge's Recommended Decision and Order and the entire record in the subject case, including the exceptions filed by the Respondent, I hereby adopt the Administrative Law Judge's findings, conclusions, and recommendations, only to the extent consistent herewith.

This case arose as a result of a complaint filed by the National Federation of Federal Employees, Local 1823 (Complainant) alleging that the Respondent Activity violated Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order by unilaterally instituting a program for mandatory overtime without first affording the Complainant the opportunity to bargain over the impact and implementation of such program.

During August 1976, the Respondent's District Manager concluded that mandatory overtime was necessary to handle the Respondent's case load and decided to exercise his authority under the parties' negotiated agreement to order such overtime. 1/ On August 16, the Respondent contacted the Complainant's Vice-President, who was the ranking union representative present that day, informed the Vice-President of his decision and granted him official time to consider and discuss the matter with unit employees. 2/ On or about August 18 or 19, the Respondent again discussed the matter with the Complainant's Vice-President and received the Complainant's comments on the matter. The Complainant's Vice-President testified that with respect to this latter meeting, "Management listened to me, and we discussed my proposals. Management said that they would be considered." (Tr. p. 14) On August 19, the Respondent's District Manager informed the Complainant's Vice-President of the decision to institute mandatory overtime during certain hours and in the afternoon on that date he met with the employees and informed them of his decision with respect to the manner in which the mandatory overtime would be worked.

1/ In this regard, Article X of the parties' negotiated agreement provides:

The parties to this agreement agree that to the extent possible it is desirable to reduce overtime. In this regard, the Employer shall, whenever possible, schedule overtime on a voluntary basis, but it is understood that the Employer maintains the right to mandate overtime to complete the mission of the Agency when circumstances beyond his direct control would preclude voluntary overtime.

2/ The record reveals that the Complainant's Vice-President went to the members for their comments. He testified that:

Well, the ideas as told to me by members of the staff that I could meet with and discuss with was overtime was determined to be necessary by all the people that I talked to, in view of our work situation, but that overtime should be (sic) worked five hours per week as proposed by management, but instead, twenty hours per month per individual. It was also proposed by union members that, in addition to being allowed to work after normal working hours, in other words, after 4:30, that overtime be worked before opening at 7:45, and rather than working just one-half day Saturday, in other words, from 8:00 to 1:00, that all day Saturday be reserved as open for overtime. (Tr. p. 21)

On August 20, the Complainant's President returned to the Respondent's facility from a field trip. He was informed by the Complainant's Vice-President of the events which had occurred during his absence. That same day, August 20, the President requested negotiations with the Respondent with respect to the impact and implementation of the Respondent's decision on instituting the mandatory overtime. The Respondent took the position that, as overtime was covered in the agreement, further negotiation on the matter was not necessary. That afternoon, the Respondent issued a memorandum stating that mandatory overtime would begin on August 23. Overtime, in fact, began on August 23, and continued until September 27 when it was permanently halted.

The Administrative Law Judge found that the Respondent's conduct violated Sections 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order. He concluded that Article X of the parties' negotiated agreement did not constitute a clear and unmistakable waiver of the Complainant's right to meet and confer on the impact and implementation of a management decision to invoke mandatory overtime and that the Respondent's meetings with the Complainant's Vice-President on August 16, 18, and/or 19, while touching on the manner and method of instituting overtime, were in the main confined to the issue of whether or not mandatory overtime should be instituted and did not fulfill the Respondent's obligation under the Order to meet and confer on the impact and implementation of the decision to institute mandatory overtime. Therefore, he concluded that the Respondent's failure to accede to the request of the Complainant's President on August 20, to negotiate on the impact and implementation of its decision, was violative of Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order. I disagree.

Under the particular circumstances of this case, I find that the Respondent fulfilled its obligation to meet and confer on the impact and implementation of its decision to institute mandatory overtime. As noted above, the evidence establishes that the Respondent informed the Complainant's Vice-President, the ranking union representative of the Complainant present at the facility, of his decision to institute mandatory overtime and sought the Union's comments on implementation; the Complainant's Vice-President went to the unit employees and solicited their comments on mandatory overtime, met with the Respondent, and made proposals; and the Complainant's proposals were considered before the method of implementation was announced to employees on August 19. ^{3/}

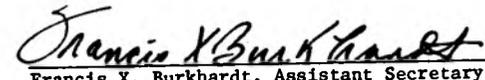

^{3/} The Respondent testified that changes in the method of implementing the plan were, in fact, adopted after its meeting with the Complainant and before its August 19 meeting with employees.

It is clearly evident from the record testimony, cited above, that the meeting on August 18 or 19 between the Respondent and the Complainant was more than a meeting to decide whether or not to institute mandatory overtime but, in fact, dealt extensively with the Complainant's proposals on the method of implementing the imposition of mandatory overtime. Thus, regardless of how the parties characterized the meeting of August 18 or 19, ^{4/} in my view, the Respondent fulfilled its obligation to negotiate with the Complainant on the impact and implementation of its decision to institute mandatory overtime before it met with the unit employees, on August 19, to inform them of how the program would operate beginning on August 23. Accordingly, I find that the Respondent had fulfilled its obligation to bargain on impact and implementation by the time the Complainant's President returned to the Respondent's facility on August 20. Consequently, its failure to accede to the Complainant's President's request for bargaining was not violative of Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order and I shall, therefore, dismiss the complaint herein.

ORDER

IT IS HEREBY ORDERED that the complaint in Case No. 63-7128(CA) be, and it hereby is, dismissed.

RECOMMENDED DECISION AND ORDER

Statement of the Case

Pursuant to a complaint filed on December 3, 1976, under Executive Order 11491, as amended, by Local 1823,

National Federation of Federal Employees (hereinafter called NFFE or the Union) against the Social Security Administration, Branch Office, Angleton, Texas (hereinafter called the Respondent or Activity), a Notice of Hearing on Complaint was issued by the Regional Administrator for the Kansas City Region on March 10, 1977.

The complaint alleges that the Respondent violated Sections 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Executive Order by virtue of its actions in unilaterally instituting a program of mandatory overtime without first affording the Union the opportunity to bargain over the impact and implementation of such program.

A hearing was held in the captioned matter on May 10, 1977, in Galveston, Texas. All parties were afforded full opportunity to be heard, to examine and cross-examine witnesses, and to introduce evidence bearing on the issues involved herein.

Upon the basis of the entire record, including my observation of the witnesses and their demeanor, I make the following findings of fact, conclusions and recommendations.

Findings of Fact

The Union and the Respondent are parties to a collective bargaining agreement covering the Galveston District, which includes the Angleton Branch Office. Article X, of the collective bargaining agreement reads as follows:

Overtime

The parties to this agreement agree that to the extent possible it is desirable to reduce overtime. In this regard, the Employer shall, whenever possible, schedule overtime on a voluntary basis, but it is understood that the Employer maintains the right to mandate overtime to complete the mission of the Agency when circumstances beyond his direct control would preclude voluntary overtime.

According to the record, in the negotiations leading up to the execution of the current contract, the Union, in an attempt to cut down on the large amount of overtime being worked by unit employees, submitted various proposals on overtime. The proposals, while recognizing the need for overtime work, made overtime voluntary rather than mandatory. Subsequently, following an impasse and the aid of a federal mediator, the parties reached agreement on the overtime provision quoted above. There was no evidence indicating that any discussion had taken place between the parties concerning the impact and/or implementation of any possible future decision made by the Respondent to exercise the powers set forth in Article X, Overtime.

During early August 1976, Gordon Gonzalez, the District Manager of the Galveston District, who was deeply sensitive to Congressional criticism of the Social Security Administration's various programs and operations, became concerned about the backlog of work in the Angleton Branch Office. Following a conversation with Carol Martinez, operations supervisor for the Angleton Branch, and a study of the work flow therein, Mr. Gonzalez decided to exercise the powers set forth in Article X of the contract and order mandatory overtime. According to Mr. Gonzalez, without overtime, it would be impossible to clear up the case backlog by December, 1976, the date he understood to have been established by Congress for the completion of such work.

On August 16, Mr. Gonzalez instructed Mrs. Martinez to contact the Union and talk to its representatives about his decision to establish mandatory overtime. Mrs. Martinez, in turn, spoke to Mr. DeVries, the union Vice president and ranking union official present, and conveyed Mr. Gonzalez' proposal. Mrs. Martinez granted Mr. DeVries official time to consider and discuss the matter with unit employees.

On or about August 18 or 19, 1976, Mrs. Martinez again discussed the matter with Mr. DeVries and received the Union's comments on the matter. Thereafter, Mrs. Martinez and Mr. Gonzalez further discussed the matter and decided to institute mandatory overtime during certain hours. On August 19, Mr. Gonzalez informed Mr. DeVries of his decision with respect to the matter and his intention of talking to the unit employees as a group. That afternoon, Mr. Gonzalez met with the employees and informed them of his decision with respect to the manner in which the mandatory overtime was to be worked.

The next day, Friday, August 20, Mr. Roy Sinclair, President of the Union, returned to the office from a field trip. Upon being informed by Mr. DeVries of the above described events, Mr. Sinclair immediately met with Mr. Gonzalez to discuss the matter. According to Mr. Sinclair during a discussion of the Respondent's action relative to mandatory overtime, he, Mr. Sinclair, requested negotiations with respect to the impact and implementation of Respondent's decision. According to Mr. Sinclair, Mr. Gonzalez declined to negotiate the impact taking the position that the matter was covered by the contract. Mr. Gonzalez, on the other hand, acknowledges meeting with Mr. Sinclair and discussing the right of Respondent under the contract to institute mandatory overtime. Mr. Gonzalez does not recall any specific discussion of impact or implementation or a request to negotiate thereon. However, Mr. Gonzalez further stated that he was not denying that implementation and impact were discussed. Lastly, Mr. Gonzalez acknowledged that in the discussion with Mr. Sinclair he took the position that since overtime was covered in the contract, "it was implemented in the contract itself and further negotiations on that the matter was not necessary." Based upon the foregoing, I find that Mr. Sinclair made it clear that he desired to bargain concerning the impact and manner in which Respondent's decision on overtime was to be implemented.

On Friday afternoon, August 20, 1976, Respondent issued a memorandum which stated that mandatory overtime was to begin on August 23, 1976. The following Monday, August 23, overtime began and continued until September 27, when it was permanently halted.

Discussion and Conclusions

The sole issue presented for resolution is whether or not the Respondent was under an obligation to bargain with the Complainant with respect to the impact and implementation of its decision to institute mandatory overtime. The Complainant contends that Respondent is so obligated. Respondent on the other hand takes the alternative positions that (1) in view of the provision on overtime included in the collective bargaining agreement it was not obligated to bargain thereon, (2) it did in fact bargain with the Complainant, and (3) that in any event it was not obligated to bargain since no demand for bargaining on impact and implementation was ever made by the Union.

An Agency or Activity is obliged to afford exclusive representatives a reasonable opportunity to meet and confer concerning the impact and implementation of decisions taken within the ambit of Section 11(b) of the Executive Order. United States Air Force Electronics Systems Divisions (AFSC) Hanscom Air Force Base A/SLMR No. 571. The obligation to bargain with respect to impact and implementation of any such decision falling within the ambit of Section 11(b) arises only upon the request therefor timely presented by the exclusive representative. U.S. Air Force, Norton A.F.B., Cal. A/SLMR No. 761.

In the instant case unless the right to bargain on the impact and implementation of mandatory overtime had been waived by the Union by virtue of the inclusion of Article X, Overtime, in the collective bargaining contract, Respondent was obliged to bargain with the Union following the request therefor presented by Mr. Sinclair. The record indicates that the only discussions or negotiations concerning Article X, Overtime, dealt exclusively with the right of the Respondent to mandate overtime without consultation with the exclusive representative. No discussion of the impact or the manner of implementation of any such decision appears to have occurred. In these circumstances it can hardly be argued that there was a clear and unmistakable waiver of the Union's right to negotiate concerning impact and implementation. Cf. NASA, Kennedy Space Center, Kennedy Space Center, Florida, A/SLMR No. 233; U.S. Department of Navy, Naval Ordnance Station, Louisville, Kentucky, A/SLMR No. 400. In the absence of a waiver, I find that Respondent was obliged to bargain with the Union with respect to its decision on mandatory overtime.

I further find that Respondent's earlier discussions with the Union, and in particular Mr. DeVries on August 16, 18 and 19, while touching on the manner and method of instituting overtime, were in the main confined to the issue of whether or not mandatory overtime should be instituted. Accordingly, contrary to the contention of Respondent, I do not find that the August 16, 18 and 19 discussions fulfilled the obligations imposed by the Executive Order with respect to bargaining over impact and implementation.

On the basis of the foregoing, I find and conclude that the Respondent failed to consult and confer with the Union, as required by Section 19(a)(6) of the Executive Order when it failed to accede to the Union's request for bargaining over the impact and implementation of its decision to institute mandatory overtime. Additionally, I find that such conduct had a concomitant coercive effect upon, and interfered with, the rights assured employees by the Executive Order in violation of Section 19(a)(1).

Having found that the Respondent Activity engaged in conduct which violated Sections 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Executive Order, I shall recommend that the Assistant Secretary adopt the following recommended Order designed to effectuate the policies of Executive Order 11491, as amended.

Recommended Order

Pursuant to Section 6(b) of Executive Order 11491, as amended, and Section 203.26(b) of the Regulations, the Assistant Secretary of Labor for Labor-Management Relations hereby orders that the Social Security Administration, Branch Office, Angleton, Texas shall:

1. Cease and desist from:

(a) Instituting a policy of mandatory overtime without first affording Local 1823, National Federation of Federal Employees an opportunity to meet and confer, to the extent consonant with law and regulations, on the procedures which management will observe in effectuating such policy and on the impact of such policy on adversely affected employees.

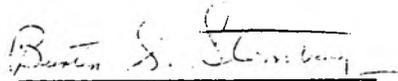

(b) In any like or related manner interfering with, restraining, or coercing employees in the exercise of their rights assured by Executive Order 11491, as amended.

2. Take the following affirmative action in order to effectuate the purposes and policies of Executive Order 11491, as amended:

(a) Post at its Galveston and Angleton, Texas facilities, copies of the attached notice marked "Appendix" on forms to be furnished by the Assistant Secretary of Labor for Labor-Management Relations. Upon receipt of such forms, they shall be signed by the District Manager and they shall be posted at the Galveston and Angleton, Texas facilities and maintained by the District Manager for 60 consecutive days thereafter, in conspicuous places, including all bulletin boards and other places where notices to employees are customarily posted. The District Manager shall take reasonable steps to insure that such notices are not altered, defaced, or covered by any other material.

(b) Pursuant to Section 203.27 of the Regulations, notify the Assistant Secretary in writing within 30 days from the date of this Order as to what steps have been taken to comply herewith.

UNITED STATES DEPARTMENT OF LABOR
ASSISTANT SECRETARY FOR LABOR-MANAGEMENT RELATIONS
SUMMARY OF DECISION AND ORDER OF THE ASSISTANT SECRETARY
PURSUANT TO SECTION 6 OF EXECUTIVE ORDER 11491, AS AMENDED

DEPARTMENT OF THE TREASURY,
INTERNAL REVENUE SERVICE,
FRESNO SERVICE CENTER
A/SLMR No. 983

This case involved an unfair labor practice complaint filed by the National Treasury Employees Union and NTEU, Chapter 97, IND. (NTEU) alleging that the Respondent violated Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order by unilaterally implementing a change in the quality review system without giving the NTEU the opportunity to meet and confer concerning the impact of the change on unit employees and the procedures for implementing the change. The Respondent contended that the complaint should be dismissed as two grievances concerning the quality review system barred the complaint under Section 19(d) of the Order; the matter in dispute involved contract interpretation and, therefore, should have been pursued through the grievance procedure; the change in procedure was, in fact, an attempt to implement the previously agreed upon contract policy of uniformity and that by agreeing to such policy, the NTEU had waived its right to bargain further over quality review matters pertaining to uniformity; and that the change involved no impact on the terms and conditions of employment of employees in the unit.

The Administrative Law Judge concluded that Respondent violated Section 19(a)(1) and (6) by unilaterally altering the method of selecting samples of the work product of unit employees for quality review purposes without first notifying and affording the NTEU an opportunity to bargain over the impact and implementation of such change. In this regard, he rejected the Respondent's arguments that Section 19(d) of the Order barred the complaint and that the gravamen of the complaint involved a matter of contract interpretation. Thus, he noted that the grievances referred to by the Respondent were filed by individual employees rather than by the NTEU in its institutional capacity, and that the allegations of the complaint raised issues involving rights accorded by the Order, and not rights established by the terms of a negotiated agreement.

In reaching his conclusion, the Administrative Law Judge found that the negotiated agreement established a requirement for uniformity of application of the quality review system, and did not diminish the Respondent's obligation, nor constitute a waiver of the NTEU's right to bargain over the impact and implementation of changes in the procedures implementing the contractually established requirement. Finally, the Administrative Law Judge concluded that the Respondent's changes in procedures did, in fact, have an impact on the bargaining unit employees.

Adopting the Administrative Law Judge's findings, conclusions and recommendations, the Assistant Secretary ordered that the Respondent cease and desist from conduct found violative of the Order and that it take certain affirmative actions.

DECISION AND ORDER

On September 6, 1977, Administrative Law Judge Steven Halpern issued his Recommended Decision and Order in the above-entitled proceeding, finding that the Respondent had engaged in the unfair labor practices alleged in the complaint and recommending that it cease and desist therefrom and take certain affirmative actions as set forth in the attached Administrative Law Judge's Recommended Decision and Order. Thereafter, the Respondent filed exceptions and a supporting brief with respect to the Administrative Law Judge's Recommended Decision and Order.

The Assistant Secretary has reviewed the rulings of the Administrative Law Judge made at the hearing and finds that no prejudicial error was committed. The rulings are hereby affirmed. Upon consideration of the Administrative Law Judge's Recommended Decision and Order and the entire record in the subject case, including the Respondent's exceptions and supporting brief, I hereby adopt the Administrative Law Judge's findings, conclusions and recommendations, as modified herein.

ORDER

Pursuant to Section 6(b) of Executive Order 11491, as amended, and Section 203.26(b) of the Regulations, the Assistant Secretary of Labor for Labor-Management Relations hereby orders that the Department of the Treasury, Internal Revenue Service, Fresno Service Center shall:

1. Cease and desist from:

- (a) Instituting changes in the system used for review of the quality of the work of its employees represented exclusively by the National Treasury Employees Union, Chapter 97, without first notifying the exclusive representative and affording it the opportunity to meet and confer, to the extent consonant with law and regulations, on the implementing procedures and impact of the new system used for review of the quality of the work of its employees outlined in the April 5, 1976, memorandum to employees of the Accounting Branch.

- (b) In any like or related manner, interfering with, restraining, or coercing employees in the exercise of their rights assured by Executive Order 11491, as amended.

2. Take the following affirmative actions in order to effectuate the purposes and policies of Executive Order 11491, as amended:

- (a) Upon request by the National Treasury Employees Union, Chapter 97, the exclusive representative of its employees, meet and confer, to the extent consonant with law and regulations, on the implementing procedures and impact of the new system used for review of the quality of the work of its employees outlined in the April 5, 1976, memorandum to employees of the Accounting Branch.
- (b) Post at all Department of Treasury, Internal Revenue Service, Fresno Service Center, Fresno, California, facilities and installations copies of the attached notice marked "Appendix" on forms to be furnished by the Assistant Secretary of Labor for Labor-Management Relations. Upon receipt of such forms, they shall be signed by the Director of the Fresno Service Center and shall be posted and maintained by him for 60 consecutive days thereafter, in conspicuous places, including all bulletin boards and other places where notices to employees are customarily posted. The Director shall take reasonable steps to insure that such notices are not altered, defaced, or covered by any other material.
- (c) Pursuant to Section 203.27 of the Regulations, notify the Assistant Secretary, in writing, within 30 days from the date of this order as to what steps have been taken to comply herewith.

RECOMMENDED DECISION AND ORDER

Statement of the Case

This proceeding under Executive Order 11491, as amended, was initiated by Complaint filed September 30, 1976, with an amended complaint having been filed March 3, 1977. On March 17, 1977, the Regional Administrator, United States Department of Labor, San Francisco Region issued a Notice of Hearing pursuant to which hearing was held at Fresno, California, on April 19, 1977.

The essence of the complaint is set forth therein as follows:

On or about April 6, Mr. James L. Anderson, Acting Chief, Accounting Branch, issued a memorandum dated April 5 to all employees in the Accounting Branch. This memorandum established a new system by which an employee's work would be quality reviewed...

... The method by which an employee's work is quality reviewed has a direct impact on the employee's evaluation. Both classes of employees, measured and unmeasured, are evaluated as to the quality of their work ... The employee's quality of work is largely determined by errors or lack thereof, charged by quality review. NTEU was not consulted or given the opportunity to meet and confer prior to the issuance of this memorandum and the implementation of the quality review system.

These allegations having been made, Respondent is charged with violation of section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Executive Order.

At the hearing the parties were afforded full opportunity to be heard, to adduce evidence, to examine and cross-examine witnesses and to make oral argument.

1/ Upon joint motion of the parties made at hearing the time for filing briefs was extended to thirty days from receipt of transcript. It later having been represented by counsel that transcripts were not received until

Based upon the preponderance of the evidence of record in this case, having observed the witnesses and assessed their credibility, I make the within findings, conclusions and recommendation.

Preliminary Matters

Section 19(d) of the Executive Order provides, in effect, that issues which can be raised under a grievance procedure or as an Unfair Labor Practice having been raised in one by "the aggrieved party" may not later be raised in the other.

Article 33 of the parties' collective bargaining agreement sets forth the grievance procedures agreed upon by the parties and at Section 3 provides, in effect, that if employees' rights are involved a grievance may be filed by the employees or by the Union on their behalf; if the Union's rights are involved it may file a grievance on its own behalf.

An inspection of the grievances (M. Ex. #1 and M. Ex. #5) upon which Respondent bases its contention that this Unfair Labor Practice action is barred reveals that none was filed by the Union on its own behalf as an "aggrieved party". It is only by a grievance so filed that the Union may pursue its institutional rights under the parties agreed upon grievance machinery; and, correspondingly, it is only the prosecution of such a grievance, in which the Union raises, on its own behalf, its institutional right to negotiate implementation and impact, that would bar the Union's right to bring this unfair labor practice action. No such grievance having been filed there is no impediment to the bringing of this action.

1/ (continued) June 29, 1977, notwithstanding continuing efforts to obtain such, the record was ordered closed on July 29, 1977. Only Respondent has filed a timely brief. Subsequent to the closing of the record, the undersigned was advised that the attorney who appeared at the hearing on behalf of Complainant was no longer its counsel and there appeared to be some degree of confusion as to who, if anyone, was handling the matter in his stead. Under the applicable Rules and Regulations of the Assistant Secretary (29 C.F.R. § 203.22) any request for additional time in which to file a brief after the hearing "shall be made to the Chief Administrative Law Judge, in writing ... not later than three (3) days before the date such briefs are due." Complainant, not having contacted the Office of Administrative Law Judges until after the date on which briefs were due, and Respondent having demanded strict compliance with the Rules, Complainant is foreclosed from filing a brief.

Noting the language of the provision made in the collective bargaining agreement at Article 33 Section 1C. that the Union agrees to submit virtually all contract related matters to the negotiated grievance procedure-- and to use sparingly unfair labor practice procedures-- I am able to perceive in it no legally binding effect such as would preclude the instant action.

I have also considered and find no merit in Respondent's contention that this is not properly an unfair labor practice matter but, rather, is one of contract interpretation which therefore should be pursued through the grievance procedure. What is involved here is not as Respondent urges a matter of contract interpretation, but rather of a right, guaranteed by, the Executive Order, standing independent of the parties collective bargaining agreement. The complaint being grounded upon such right is the proper subject matter of this unfair labor practice action.

Findings of Fact

1. Complainant has, and at all times material hereto had, exclusive recognition as representative of Respondent's nonsupervisory employees.

2. At all times material hereto, a negotiated multi-center agreement (Document 6225, Rev. 10-75, J. Ex. #2, herein referred to as MCA-2) governed Labor-Management Relations at the Activity.

The preamble to MCA-2 incorporates the following language:

... the public interest requires high standards of employee performance and continual development and implementation of modern and progressive work practices to facilitate improved employee performance and efficiency; and ... the well being of employees and efficient administration of the government are benefited by providing employees an opportunity to participate in the formulation and implementation of personnel policies and practices affecting the conditions of their employment; and ... the participation of employees is improved through the maintenance of constructive and cooperative relationships between the labor organization and management officials

3. The Internal Revenue Service Center, Fresno, California, is responsible for the processing of tax returns and related documents through the use of automatic data processing systems and for the maintenance of accountability records for the Internal Revenue taxes collected within its area of jurisdiction.

Since the Service Center's inception, it has maintained a program of quality review in order to exercise control over the quality of its product. In mid-1973, the quality review system was expanded in scope so as to allow for evaluation and rating of individual employees per se. In that context an employee's error rate is compared to that of his peer group as a whole, and the employee is given a relative rating on the basis of that comparison. An employee's rate of errors is ascertained from a review of the employee's work for particular errors listed on a special list of critical errors, or defects, devised for the particular program involved. Procedurally, quality reviewers review a random sampling of the employee's production. Sample size is determined by several complex mathematical formulae and tables, based on factors such as anticipated peer group production levels and error rates.

In February 1975, at the negotiations over MCA-2, the Union sought to have a voice in determining the system for quality review of employees' work. Management rejected this asserting that such was its sole responsibility. Ultimately, the standards established by management were incorporated as part of the agreement, as pertinent here, in Article 6 Section 6. The Union was concerned that there were disparities in the treatment of employees under the quality review system. Ultimately, the parties developed the terms "valid", "indicative", and "uniform" as the limitations to be placed on management in its operation of the quality review system. Thus, the system had to be "valid", the work product sample was required to be indicative of the employee's work, and the application of the system to individual employees had to be uniform within peer groups. When the Union asked what was to be grievable in the proposed provision, management responded that the commitment to uniform application alone would be grievable.

In Accounting Branch, prior to December 30, 1975, the reviewers selected work samples for review by choosing cases at spaced intervals, beginning with a number chosen by the reviewer. However, the Branch management determined that that system was potentially vulnerable to abuse by reviewers, whether conscious or unconscious, in determining subjectively which cases to pull. Therefore, the Branch decided to shift to a procedure by which one control clerk pulled all the sample cases for the reviewers; the change in procedure was announced in a memorandum dated December 30, 1975, and issued by the Branch Chief to all employees (M. Ex. #4).

Subsequently, the management of Accounting Branch became aware of the fact that certain employees had spotted unconscious trends of control clerks and reviewers to favor certain numbers in choosing sample cases; employees were able to "stack" their cases accordingly and thereby distort the resultant data. Inasmuch as this made the application of the quality review system non-uniform in the Accounting Branch, the Acting Branch Chief decided to make another change in sampling procedures. This second change was announced in a memorandum, issued to all employees and dated April 5, 1976 (J. Ex. #3), which described the changed procedures.

4. No prior notice was given by management to the Union of the implementation of the new system, and no opportunity to meet, confer or negotiate on the implementation or impact thereof was afforded, out of which circumstance arises this uniform labor practice matter.

Conclusions of Law

The basic issue here presented is whether Respondent Agency stands in violation of the Executive Order by failure to meet and confer/negotiate with Complainant Union prior to institution of the quality review system described in the memorandum dated April 5, 1976.

Section 19(a) of the Order, as here pertinent, provides that Agency Management shall not (1) interfere with, restrain or coerce an employee in the exercise of the rights assured by this Order, or (6) refuse to consult, confer or negotiate with a labor organization as required by this Order.

Section 11(a) of the Order requires an agency to meet with a labor organization which is accorded exclusive recognition at reasonable times and to confer in good faith with respect to personnel policies and practices, as well as matters affecting working conditions of unit employees. This duty is expected of the parties to the extent that it is appropriate under applicable laws and regulations, policies set forth in the Federal Personnel Manual, Agency Policies and Regulations, a national agreement at a higher level, and the Order itself. While section 11(a) of the Order sets forth the scope of the Activity's duty to meet and confer enforced in section 19(a)(6), section 11(b) provides that the obligation to meet and confer does not include matters with respect to the mission of the agency or the technology of performing its work; and management retains the right, in any agreement between it and a labor organization, under section 12(b) of the Order, to maintain the efficiency of the government operations entrusted to it and to determine the methods and means by which such operations are to be conducted.

Thus, while the Order imposes a requirement upon management that it meet with labor to negotiate with respect to personnel policies and practices as well as matters affecting working conditions of unit employees, no such obligation exists in the so-called area of "management prerogatives" in which its actions are non-negotiable.

Work product quality being crucial to Respondent Agency's mission the establishment of standards and criteria by virtue of which quality is measured and evaluated is its exclusive prerogative and is privileged. Complainant makes no argument to the contrary. It therefore stands undisputed that the Activity did not have any obligation to negotiate with the Union concerning the decision to adopt a new system of quality review or the criteria to be employed therein and, in any event, it is so found and concluded.

However, even when an Activity is privileged by the Order to take such action without first bargaining about the basic decision, as noted in the last sentence of 11(b) as interpreted by the Assistant Secretary and the Federal Labor Relations Council, it nevertheless is obliged to bargain, upon request, with the collective bargaining representative of its employees concerning the procedures for implementing the decision and the impact of the decision on the employees. Immigration and Naturalization Service, FLRC No. 70A-10; Plum Island Animal Disease

Laboratory, FLRC No. 71A-11; Griffiss Air Force Base, FLRC No. 71A-30; Norton Air Force Base, A/SLMR No. 261; U. S. Department of Interior, Bureau of Indian Affairs, A/SLMR No. 341; New Mexico Air National Guard, A/SLMR No. 362; Federal Railroad Administration, A/SLMR No. 418; Army and Air Force Exchange Service, A/SLMR No. 451; Bureau of the Mint, U. S. Department of the Treasury, Case No. A/SLMR No. 750.

It thus is well settled that employer may not lawfully change personnel policies, practices or working conditions without first providing the collective bargaining representative an opportunity to negotiate the implementation and impact of the change; failure so to do constitutes a violation of the Order.

Management in its July 29, 1976, letter reply to the Union's charge (J. Ex. 5) appears to recognize that if the changes brought about by the new quality review system constituted "new" personnel policies or practices there would be an obligation to negotiate. It goes on to reason, however, and it was so argued at trial and on brief, that such changes were implemented in order to comply with the parties' agreement and understanding that management would administer the quality review system in a uniform manner; and, that being measures taken to implement and administer an already-existing bilaterally-negotiated personnel policy they did not constitute "new" personnel policies or practices. Thus, management concludes "we are not convinced, therefore, that the center had an obligation to share the letter with you in advance so as to give you the opportunity to negotiate".

In implementing what it described in the April 5, 1977, memorandum (J. Ex. 3) as its "new system" of Quality Review management employed practices and procedures as detailed therein different from those theretofore utilized. That substantial changes in practice and procedure were involved may be inferred from the fact that the system had to be abandoned at one point for lack of sufficiently trained personnel to administer it (Tr. 173); there is no contention that changes in practices and procedures were not made and, in any event, such in fact were made.

The evidence thus discloses that under the new quality review system changed practices and procedures were implemented having effect upon the evaluations of the quality of employees' work and upon the several performance evaluations and ratings having ultimate bearing upon the most basic of the terms and conditions of employment--retention in job status and career advancement (Tr. 61-62; J. Ex. 2, Articles 6-9). That such procedures may have been implemented for the purpose of compliance with the agreed upon concept of uniformity does not diminish management's obligation to negotiate implementation and impact.

That the subject system, or any system of quality review, the procedures of which were non-uniformly applied, would impact adversely on some employees is apparent since Respondent measures the quality of each employee's work relative to that of the other employees performing the same work. The validity of any such measurement and its fairness to a given employee are therefore dependent not upon what standard of measure is used, but rather how it is used. For example, a system in which bad criteria were applied uniformly to all employees would be more fair than a system in which excellent criteria were applied even somewhat non-uniformly. Apparently, that is the very reason the Thompson/Murphy grievance was filed; not to complain of the criteria, but rather that the procedures described in the April 5, 1976, memorandum were not being utilized. It is reasonable to infer that one of the concerns of the grievants was the relative advantage or disadvantage that employees evaluated under different systems might have as to each other.

If any example need be given of a specific area which could have been negotiated to advance the concept of uniformity, the record furnishes a concrete illustration in the discontinuance of certain procedures set forth in the April 5, 1976, memorandum due to lack of trained quality review personnel (Tr. 173). It is of obvious importance that the procedures of a given system once implemented remain in effect with sufficient continuity and total duration as to assure the integrity of the system of relative ratings. An area that might have been discussed prior to implementation is what measures would be taken to insure that there would be sufficient, and sufficiently trained, quality review personnel to administer the new procedures uniformly and with continuity.

Clearly, under a relative rating system it is important that the work of all employees be measured by the same standard. To the extent that the systems procedures are non-uniformly applied the standard is varied employee to employee. Thus, an employee's quality rating is impacted adversely in proportion to the degree of non-uniformity of implementation of the procedures employed. It being apparent that any system of quality review non-uniformly administered would adversely impact on the employees, the contention made on behalf of Respondent that no element of impact is present is rejected.

Nevertheless, while management must negotiate as to the impact of a privileged decision, no violation for failure to do so exists where the Union has not requested such of the Activity. Department of Navy, Bureau of Medicine and Surgery, Great Lakes Naval Hospital, Illinois, A/SLMR No. 289. However, in order that the Union be given a meaningful opportunity to consult and confer on impact issues, it would have to be informed of the action sufficiently in advance of implementation to allow for the preparation of proposals and the good faith exchange of views contemplated by the Order. The right to bargain would be meaningless unless the Union was advised of the procedures proposed for implementation of the system in sufficient time to afford a reasonable opportunity to consider and analyze the implementation and the impact of the decision and to request to bargain thereon. Therefore, only by a showing that Complainant Union was made aware with specificity of the action intended to be taken by the Agency prior to its implementation and that the Union thereafter failed timely to request to meet and negotiate can Respondent exculpate itself. If the Activity is found to have failed to have afforded the Union a meaningful opportunity to confer, a violation of section 19(a)(6) must be found.

Respondent contends that any obligation it may have had to negotiate concerning implementation and impact was discharged at the MCA-2 negotiations when it agreed that any new system of quality review would be valid, indicative and uniform. I cannot so conclude. The MCA-2 negotiations conceptualized the theory of uniformity. The obligation to negotiate the implementation of such concept as related to the practices and procedures to be utilized in a specific system of quality review survived the MCA-2 negotiations.

While the Union abandoned its attempt at the MCA-2 negotiations to participate in establishing standards of quality review, likely in recognition that such was management's exclusive prerogative, its interest in uniformity of application of such standards was emphasized rather than placed in doubt and certainly never was relinquished. It has not been shown that any waiver was intended and certainly none clearly and unmistakably was made of the Union's right to negotiation of the implementation and impact of any system of quality review prospectively to be employed by management. Neither does any practice of the parties in relation to other changes establish a clear and unmistakable waiver of such right. On the contrary, from the testimony of Kathryn Lee Bierhalder, which I credit as having come from a knowledgeable witness and having been delivered in a forthright, candid and assured manner, it appears that management met with the Union on a number of occasions to negotiate changes in the quality review system; and, on at least one such occasion, there were negotiations prior to implementation (Tr. 65, 66). Additionally, consistent with reason, management could not help but have recognized the Union's vital institutional interest in assuring the uniformity of any such system. When such was devised, and prior to implementation, it therefore remained management's obligation to notify and afford the Union reasonable time within which to request negotiation. The record establishes that the Activity failed so to do and that the Union was unaware of the new quality review system until after its implementation.

It is stated in Department of Treasury, IRS, Manhattan District and NTEU, reported at A/SLMR No. 841 that "Sometimes the lines between a decision, the procedures for implementing the decision and the impact of that decision are difficult to draw or to see. In the instant case for example, the decision ... is very close to the procedures for implementing that decision."

As I see the matter at hand, management had a privileged right to devise a new system of quality review; but, it had an obligation to negotiate the implementation of the changed practices and procedures and the impact of the new system. To the extent that the design of the system, which is non-negotiable, and the implementation of its procedures, which is negotiable, overlap, a grey area exists. Substance and procedure here are almost inextricably bound together as the April 5, 1976, memorandum reveals. This does not render the issue incapable of resolution, however, nor does it relieve management of the duty to negotiate, although, in practice it will require the "constructive and cooperative relationship ..." between labor and management memorialized in the preamble to MCA-2 (J. Ex. 2).

It is not within the scope of this decision to rule upon any specific proposals by the Union, none having been submitted. This decision therefore does not extend beyond affirmation of management's obligation to negotiate implementation and impact.

The area of these negotiations, however, would appear to be circumscribed by the principle enunciated by the Council in Veterans Administration Independent Service Employees

Union and Veterans Administration Research Hospital, Chicago, Ill., FLRC No. 71A-31.

The emphasis is on the reservation of management authority to decide and act on these matters, and the clear import is that no right accorded to unions under the Order may be permitted to interfere with that authority. However, there is no implication that such reservation of decision making and action authority is intended to bar negotiations of procedures, to the extent consonant with law and regulations, which management will observe in reaching the decision or taking the action involved, provided that such procedures do not have the effect of negating the authority reserved.

In view of all of the above and considering the totality of the circumstances in this case, I find and conclude that Respondent, by unilaterally issuing the subject April 5, 1976, memorandum and implementing the quality review system described therein, deprived Complainant of the right to meet, confer and negotiate, to the extent consonant with law and regulations, on the implementation and the impact of said system on unit employees. Respondent thereby violated section 19(a)(6) and derivitively violated section 19(a)(1) of the Executive Order.

Recommendation

Upon the foregoing findings of fact and conclusions of law and pursuant to section 203.23(a) of the Rules and Regulations, 29 C.F.R. § 203.23(a), I recommend that the Assistant Secretary adopt the following order designed to effectuate the policies of Executive Order 11491, as amended.

Recommended Order

Pursuant to section 6(b) of Executive Order 11491, as amended, and section 203.26(b) of the Rules and Regulations, 29 C.F.R. § 203.26(b), the Assistant Secretary of Labor for Labor-Management Relations hereby orders that the Department of the Treasury, Internal Revenue Service, Fresno Service Center, shall:

1. Cease and desist from:

- (a) Instituting changes in the system used for review of the quality of the work of its employees represented exclusive by the National Treasury Employees Union, Chapter 97, or any other exclusive representative, without first notifying the exclusive representative and affording it the opportunity to meet, confer and negotiate, to the extent consonant with law and regulations, on the uniformity of the procedures which management will observe in implementing such system and on the impact of such changed procedures on unit employees.

- (b) In any like or related manner, interfering with, restraining or coercing employees in the exercise of rights assured by Executive Order 11491, as amended.

2. Take the following affirmative actions in order to effectuate the purposes and policies of Executive Order 11491, as amended:

- (a) Notify the National Treasury Employees Union, Chapter 97, or any other exclusive representative, prior to institution of changes in Quality Review procedures and, upon request, meet, confer and negotiate, to the extent consonant with law and regulations, on the uniformity of the implementation of such procedures and the impact of such changes on unit employees.

- (b) Upon request by the National Treasury Employees Union, Chapter 97, made within a reasonable time of the date of this Order, meet, confer and negotiate as to the matters above described, to the extent consonant with law and regulations, concerning the new system of Quality Review outlined in the April 5, 1976, Memorandum to "All Employees Accounting Branch" from "Acting Chief, Accounting Branch" subject "Quality Review Sampling".

- (c) Post at all Department of Treasury, Internal Revenue Service, Fresno

Service Center, Fresno, California, facilities and installations copies of the attached notice marked "Appendix" on forms to be furnished by the Assistant Secretary of Labor for Labor-Management Relations. Upon receipt of such forms, they shall be signed by the Director of the Fresno Service Center and shall be posted and maintained by him for 60 consecutive days thereafter, in conspicuous places, including all bulletin boards and other places where notices to employees are customarily posted. The Director shall take reasonable steps to insure that such notices are not altered, defaced, or covered by any other material.

- (d) Pursuant to section 203.27 of the Regulations, notify the Assistant Secretary, in writing, within 30 days from the date of this Order as to what steps have been taken to comply herewith.

SUMMARY OF DECISION AND ORDER OF THE ASSISTANT SECRETARY
PURSUANT TO SECTION 6 OF EXECUTIVE ORDER 11491, AS AMENDED

DEPARTMENT OF HEALTH, EDUCATION AND WELFARE,
SOCIAL SECURITY ADMINISTRATION, BRSI,
NORTHEASTERN PROGRAM SERVICE CENTER
A/SLMR No. 984

This case arose as a result of an unfair labor practice complaint filed by the American Federation of Government Employees, AFL-CIO, Local 1760 (Complainant) alleging, in substance, that the Respondent violated Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order when, on May 25, 1976, it transferred claims cases from a work module to the remaining section of its Claims Authorization Branch without meeting and conferring with the Complainant as to the decision and on its impact and implementation.

The Administrative Law Judge found, and the Assistant Secretary concurred, that the Respondent was not obligated to afford the Complainant an opportunity to meet and confer on its decision to transfer claims cases, as such decision was outside the scope of the bargaining requirements of the Order. However, the Assistant Secretary did not adopt the Administrative Law Judge's finding that the Respondent was also under no obligation to negotiate on the impact and implementation of its decision as the transfers involved no substantial change in the duties, responsibilities, or functions of the Respondent's employees.

The Assistant Secretary concluded that the decision to transfer claims cases effected a change in employee terms and conditions of employment. However, he noted that the record indicated that in May 1975, the Respondent had informed the Complainant that cases would be transferred on a continuing basis and that there was no evidence of a request for bargaining on impact and implementation by the Complainant at that time, or at any time during the subsequent year, even though transfers were being conducted. Under these circumstances, the Assistant Secretary concluded that the Respondent's conduct in May 1976, was not violative of the Order.

Accordingly, the Assistant Secretary ordered that the complaint be dismissed in its entirety.

DECISION AND ORDER

On September 9, 1977, Administrative Law Judge William Naimark issued his Recommended Decision in the above-entitled proceeding, finding that the Respondent had not engaged in the unfair labor practices alleged in the complaint and recommending that the complaint be dismissed in its entirety. Thereafter, the Complainant filed exceptions and a supporting brief with respect to the Administrative Law Judge's Recommended Decision.

The Assistant Secretary has reviewed the rulings of the Administrative Law Judge made at the hearing and finds that no prejudicial error was committed. The rulings are hereby affirmed. Upon consideration of the Administrative Law Judge's Recommended Decision and the entire record in the subject case, including the exceptions and supporting brief filed by the Complainant, I hereby adopt the Administrative Law Judge's findings, conclusions and recommendations, to the extent consistent herewith.

The instant complaint alleges, in substance, that the Respondent violated Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order when, on May 25, 1976, it transferred claims cases from a work module to the remaining section of its Claims Authorization Branch without meeting and conferring with the Complainant as to the decision and on its impact and implementation.

The Administrative Law Judge concluded that the Respondent's failure to bargain over the decision to transfer claims cases was not violative of the Order as, in his view, such a decision is a reserved management right under Section 12(b)(5) of the Order. He noted also that the obligation to bargain on the impact and implementation of a decision arises only when management takes an action effectuating a change in existing terms and conditions of employment. Having found that the transfers involved no substantial change in the duties, responsibilities, or functions of the Respondent's employees, he concluded that the Respondent was under no obligation to negotiate on impact and implementation and, therefore, did not violate Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order by refusing to bargain in this regard.

I concur with the Administrative Law Judge's determination that the Respondent was not obligated to afford the Complainant an opportunity to meet and confer on the former's decision to transfer claims cases, as such decision was outside the scope of the bargaining requirements of the Order. However, I find that the Respondent was obligated under the Order to afford the Complainant notice and an opportunity to meet and confer on the procedures to be utilized in effectuating its decision to transfer claims cases, which, in my view, effected a change in employee terms and conditions of employment, and on the impact of its decision on adversely affected employees. In my opinion, under the particular circumstances herein, the Respondent met its obligation in this regard.

It is clear from un rebutted testimony in the record that in May 1975, the Respondent notified the Complainant that, due to a diminishing workload in the remaining section of the Branch, cases would be transferred from the modules on a continuing basis. There is no evidence of any request by the Complainant for bargaining on impact and implementation at that time, or at any other time during the year preceding the incident from which the instant complaint arises, even though the record indicates that case transfers were being conducted on a regular basis. ^{1/}

Under these circumstances, I find that the Respondent's conduct herein was not violative of the Order. Accordingly, I shall order that the instant complaint be dismissed in its entirety.

RECOMMENDED DECISION

Statement of the Case

Pursuant to a Notice of Hearing on Complaint issued on March 8, 1977 by the Regional Administrator for Labor-Management Services of the U.S. Department of Labor, New York Region, a hearing in this case was held before the undersigned on March 22, 1977 at Flushing, New York.

The proceeding herein is brought under Executive Order 11491, as amended (herein called the Order). A complaint was filed on July 22, 1976 by American Federation of Government Employees, AFL-CIO, Local 1760 (herein called the Complainant) against Department of Health, Education and Welfare, Social Security Administration, BRSI, North-eastern Program Service Center (herein called the Respondent). The said complaint alleged, in substance, that on May 25, 1976 Respondent violated Sections 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order by transferring claims case work from a module to the Claims Branch without meeting and conferring with Complainant both as to the decision and impact upon employees of such transfer. Respondent submitted a response dated August 19, 1976 alleging it was not obliged to bargain over such transfer of cases since this was a management prerogative. Further, it asserted there was no impact upon employees since the transfer involved no new job functions.

Both parties were represented at the hearing, were afforded full opportunity to be heard, to adduce evidence, and to examine as well as cross-examine witnesses. Thereafter, briefs were filed which have been duly considered.

Upon the entire record herein and from my observation of the witnesses and their demeanor, and from all of the testimony and evidence adduced at the hearing, I make the following findings of fact, conclusions and recommendations:

Findings of fact

1. At all times since about 1969 Complainant has represented the non-supervisory employees of Respondent's Northeastern Program Center.
2. A collective bargaining agreement, effective by its terms on March 15, 1974 for a period of two years, was executed by the National Office, American Federation of Government Employees, AFL-CIO and various locals, including Complainant, and the Bureau of Retirement and Survivors Insurance (BRSI) of Social Security Administration, covering the unit of non-supervisory employees at the Northeastern Program Center and other service centers of the BRSI. The said agreement has continued in effect since its expiration date.

3. Until 1974 the claims processing procedure for social security benefits at the Respondent's center were handled by the Claims Authorization Branch. In October 1974, the modular system of processing cases was introduced thereat. This provided for the handling of cases by a module composed of about 42 employees who, as specialists, performed the entire processing functions handled by 200-300 individuals prior thereto. By 1976 there were 41 modules in the Program Service Center, and the entire modularization was not completed. About 40 employees of the 300 who worked in the branch are still not modularized. They work in Section 1, and the Claims Authorization Branch has ceased to exist. 1/

4. Charles Lunin, Director of Operations, testified that management has, in the past, always moved cases around when a back-up occurred. Further, that while cases were also transferred from module to module, or from module to branch, the union has not, in the past, asked to negotiate the transfer of such cases. It does appear, however, that the distribution of cases received from other sections or programs centers had been the subject of discussion between management and the bargaining agent; that suggestions had been received from the union re the method of accomplishing such distribution, and modification made by the employer with respect thereto.

5. On May 20, 1976 Bruce Friedman, a claims authorizer and treasurer of Complainant, noticed that cases were coming in to the branch from one of the modules. He spoke to Norman Green, manager of the section, regarding consultation of the transfer of cases. The manager replied he did not feel it was a proper subject for consultation, whereas the union indicated that bargaining was proper in respect to how the cases should be worked, overtime resolved, or the priority to be given such cases when handled. Green suggested that the union official talk to Isodore Gross, the branch manager.

6. Friedman conferred with Gross on the same day and asked why there was not consultation concerning the cases being transferred from the module. The manager retorted it was not necessary; that some months ago when cases were received from another program center there had been discussions with the union, and it resulted in "carte blanche" being given to management in regard thereto. When the union representative protested that this situation was different, Gross suggested he speak to manager Al Brown.

7. On May 24, 1977 Friedman and union agent Irwin Berger, vice-president for Claims Authorization Branch, met with Brown. The union representatives requested consultation on the transfer of cases from the module. They asked whether all authorizers would receive transferred cases, if the cases would be put in a bin and handled in order or when the authorizer was available, and whether overtime would be paid. Brown told the union agents that the transfer of cases and assignments was not a matter for consultation, despite part discussion, since there was a new structure in the organization. 2/

Complainant asserts that management had conferred with it in the past regarding assignment of casework; that its refusal to do so in May 1976 was a breach of its obligation to bargain in violation of 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order; and that, assuming arguendo, it was not a bargainable subject, management waived its rights under Section 11(b) of the Order by reason of past consultation with the union in regard thereto. It also maintains that the union was never afforded an opportunity to make a formal request to meet because Respondent implemented the case assignment and transfers without giving Complainant notification thereof. In contending that the employer has violated the Order herein, Complainant insists the decision to transfer claims cases is bargainable, and, further, Respondent is obliged to meet and confer regarding the impact of the decision.

(1) While an agency is mandated, under Section 11(a) of the Order, to meet and confer re personnel policies and practices, as well as matters affecting working conditions, certain matters are excluded from the scope of obligatory bargaining. Thus, under 11(b), the obligation

2/ Brown testified that while he notified the union of any transfer of cases in the past, he did not negotiate the matter; that while the union requested bargaining as to the impact of case assignment, it was not granted. Moreover, Brown stated he did not feel bound to confer re impact upon the authorizers caused by the transfer of cases to the claims authorizers.

does not include matters dealing with the technology of performing its work. Moreover, management retains the right, pursuant to 12(b) of the Order, to maintain the efficiency of Government operations entrusted to them and to determine the methods, means and personnel by which such operations are to be conducted.

In my view decisions as to the assignment and flow of cases within an agency must necessarily be reserved to management in order to effectively conduct its operations. Efficiency of government performance, as well as its functioning, would be impaired and hampered if the decisions regarding the transfer of cases required continuous bargaining with the union representative. Since management retains the right under 12(b) to assign employees to tasks, a correlative right to assign them cases would seem warranted to maintain effective operations. I consider the transfer of claims cases by Respondent to be a management function, and conclude that, at least under 12(b)(5), a decision in this regard is embraced within the right granted management to determine the methods and means by which its work is to be performed.

Complainant's argument that Respondent has, in the past, bargained over the assignment and transfer of cases does not justify a different conclusion herein. Apart from the fact that there is some dispute as to whether actual bargaining occurred as to this matter, the Assistant Secretary has held that past practice and bargaining history are without controlling significance where a matter constitutes a reserved management right under Section 12(b) of the Order. Small Business Administration, District Office, Hato Rey, Puerto Rico, et. al. A/SLMR No. 751. See also Tidewater Virginia Federal Employees Metal Trades Council and Naval Public Works Center, Norfolk, VA, FLRC No. 71A-56.

Accordingly, and in view of the foregoing, I conclude that the failure to bargain over the decision re the transfer of claims cases from the module to the claims section, as alleged herein, was not violative of Section 19(a)(1) or (6) of the Order.

(2) In respect to the contention that Respondent was obliged to meet and confer as to the impact of its decision prior to implementation, I find no merit therein.

The assignment and transfer of cases is a continued function of the agency and its personnel. Questions posed by Complainant's representatives concerning the handling of transferred cases were properly addressed to immediate supervisors at all times. However, the record does not support a finding that the transfer of claims cases resulted in any substantial change in duties, responsibilities or functions of Respondent's claims authorizers who performed the work. The obligation to bargain re procedures involved and the impact of a decision prior to implementation arises only when management takes action affecting a change in existing terms and conditions of employment. Department of Treasury, Internal Revenue Service, Brookhaven Service Center, A/SLMR No. 814. Accordingly, and in view of my conclusion that the transfer of cases from the module herein involved no especial change in the duties and functions of the employees, I find no violation of 19(a)(1) or (6) by Respondent for refusing to bargain re the impact of its decision in that regard.

RECOMMENDATION

It having been found that Respondent did not violate Sections 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order by refusing to bargain over the decision, or impact therein, to transfer claims cases from its module division to the claims section, I recommend that the complaint herein be dismissed in its entirety.

 A/SLMR No. 985

This case involved an unfair labor practice complaint filed by American Federation of Government Employees, Local Union 2600, AFL-CIO (Complainant) alleging that the Respondent violated Section 19(a)(1) of the Order by an investigator of the General Services Administration's Office of Investigation questioning the Complainant's Chief Steward during the course of an administrative investigation. The investigator asked for the names of the persons attending a union meeting, which names he sought in connection with an investigation of possible violations of agency regulations with regard to the unlawful taking of a confidential bid document. The document had been obtained by another employee at the union meeting in question. When the Steward refused to cooperate in any manner, asserting an intrusion into union business, the investigator reminded him of possible administrative discipline up to and including discharge.

The Administrative Law Judge, noting that the investigator advised the Steward that the only reason he wished to obtain the names was to interview persons to determine how the document was obtained and that he was not interested in any matters discussed at the meeting, concluded that the investigator's inquiry was reasonable under the circumstances and did not constitute a violation of the Order.

The Assistant Secretary adopted the findings, conclusions and recommendation of the Administrative Law Judge and ordered that the complaint be dismissed.

DECISION AND ORDER

On August 29, 1977, Administrative Law Judge Edward C. Burch issued his Recommended Decision and Order in the above-entitled proceeding, finding that the Respondent had not engaged in the unfair labor practice alleged in the complaint and recommending that the complaint be dismissed in its entirety. Thereafter, the Complainant filed exceptions with respect to the Administrative Law Judge's Recommended Decision and Order.

The Assistant Secretary has reviewed the rulings of the Administrative Law Judge made at the hearing and finds that no prejudicial error was committed. The rulings are hereby affirmed. Upon consideration of the Administrative Law Judge's Recommended Decision and Order and the entire record in the subject case, including the Complainant's exceptions, I hereby adopt the Administrative Law Judge's findings, 1/ conclusions and recommendation.

Under the particular circumstances of the instant case, I agree with the Administrative Law Judge that dismissal of the subject complaint is warranted. Thus, the record reflects that, with respect to the particular incident alleged to be violative of the Order, the Criminal Investigator of the Office of Investigations of the General Services Administration,

RECOMMENDED DECISION AND ORDER

Statement of the Case

Pursuant to a complaint filed by the American Federation of Government Employees ("AFGE"), December 7, 1976, and amended March 25, 1977, under Executive Order 11491, as amended, against the General Services Administration ("GSA"), Region 10, a Notice of Hearing on complaint was issued by the Regional Administrator for the San Francisco Region April 25, 1977.

The amended complaint alleged respondent violated section 19(a)(1) of the Executive Order when a special investigator of respondent, in the course of an administrative investigation, asked complainant's Chief Steward for the names of all persons who attended a union meeting June 19, 1976. When the Chief Steward refused to furnish the names of those in attendance he was threatened, it is alleged, with administrative sanctions up to and including removal.

A hearing was held June 15, 1977, in Auburn, Washington, at which time exhibits were received and witnesses examined.

Upon the basis of the entire record the following findings of fact, conclusions and recommendation are made.

Findings of Fact

June of 1976, Mr. William Pearson, manager of the self-service store of the Federal Supply Service, Seattle, Washington, called a procurement agent, Mrs. Mead, and requested information on obtaining labor to assist in the self-service store. Mr. Pearson, in that conversation, made reference to a confidential procurement bid. When questioned he stated he did not at that time have the document before him. Mrs. Mead, who was suspicious, asked Mr. Pearson to call back when he could refer to the document. June 25, 1976, he again called, stating he had the procurement document before him, and discussed the document. Having concluded Mr. Pearson had obtained a confidential document, Mrs. Mead reported the incident to a senior procurement agent in the Federal Supply Service, GSA, Auburn, Washington.

June 28, 1976, James E. Voiland, Criminal Investigator assigned to the GSA Office of Investigations in Auburn, Washington, was advised by letter by the then Regional Commissioner of the Federal Supply Service, Marvin Blaylock, that Mr. Pearson may have been in unauthorized possession of a confidential procurement bid. Mr. Blaylock's letter was considered by Mr. Voiland to be a request for an investigation.

The requirement of confidentiality is, of course, to insure that the government obtains contracts at the lowest prices. Obviously that goal is lost when bidders have access to the bids of others.

Federal Procurement Regulations, 2nd ed., F.P.R. Amendment 153, September 1975, section 1-3.805-1(b), provide "no information regarding the number or identity of the offerors participating in the negotiations shall be made available to the public or anyone whose official duties do not require such knowledge."

The procurement bid in question lost its confidentiality once the contract was awarded. That occurred June 24, 1976.

A preliminary investigation satisfied Mr. Voiland that "there was something to the allegation." Mr. Voiland determined that Mr. Pearson had no authority to be in possession of the document and had no legitimate access to the file. He then advised his Central Office in Washington, D. C. that there was a basis for suspecting a violation of the Standards of Conduct of GSA and requested his office to assign a case number and initiate an investigation. Field investigators, such as Mr. Voiland, report not to the Regional Administrator where they are assigned, but to the Office of Audits and Investigations, in Washington, D. C., who in turn reports directly to the GSA Administrator in Washington, D. C.

Having received authority to proceed with the investigation Mr. Voiland interviewed Mr. Pearson on July 2, 1976.

Mr. Pearson stated he had obtained a copy of the bid at the June 19, 1976, meeting of the AFGE Local 2600. Mr. Pearson denied knowing who brought the document to the meeting.

Elwin A. Snyder, Chief Steward of Local 2600, was then interviewed July 12, 1976. Mr. Snyder denied knowing who had brought the document to the meeting but confirmed the document was at the June 19, 1976, union meeting.

Shortly thereafter Mr. Voiland met with an assistant United States attorney to determine if there was a possible criminal violation under 18 U.S.C. § 1905. ^{1/} The United States attorney suggested further investigation.

By October 20, 1976, Mr. Voiland had interviewed approximately 25 persons in an attempt to learn how the document had been removed from the government file and the name of the responsible person. Of those interviewed approximately seven to ten were union members and the remainder were not members of AFGE.

August 25, 1976, a second meeting was held with the Assistant United States Attorney. When advised that the government had apparently not been harmed nor the bidding system compromised by the unauthorized disclosure, the United States Attorney declined criminal prosecution, and suggested the matter be handled administratively. A report of the investigation was sent by Mr. Voiland to his Central Office September 14, 1976. A copy was not sent to the Regional Administrator.

October 20, 1976, Mr. Voiland again interviewed Mr. Snyder. Mr. Snyder was asked, and refused to give, the names of those persons at the June 19, 1976, union meeting. Mr. Voiland wanted the list to enable him to question all persons present. He had not been able to obtain this information from other sources.

Mr. Snyder was advised by Mr. Voiland, on October 20, that the only reason he wished the names was to interview those persons to determine how the bid document was disclosed from a confidential file. Mr. Voiland further explained he was not interested in the subject matter discussed at the union meeting.

Mr. Snyder was advised of section 104.2 of the GSA Standards of Conduct, which provides:

Each employee must cooperate with investigative representatives conducting official investigations and furnish signed statements under oath if appropriate.

^{1/} "Whoever, being an ... employee of the United States ... discloses or makes known in any manner or to any extent not authorized by law any information coming to him in the course of his employment or official duties ... which information concerns or relates to ... trade secrets, processes, operations ... shall be fined or imprisoned ..."

He was further advised that failure to comply with section 104.2 of the GSA Standards of Conduct could result in disciplinary action, up to removal. Mr. Snyder was advised Mr. Violand did not make disciplinary decisions but that the violation would be reported.

Mr. Snyder responded that the information was confidential to the union and, he felt, outside the scope of the investigation.

Mr. Voiland received no direction or control from the Regional Administrator of Region 10. However, on November 17, 1976, he submitted a report to the Regional Administrator. This report contained information that dealt with matters the Regional Administrator might act upon, such as uncooperativeness of witnesses, and advisement of the security problem. This report was sent only after it was determined the case would not be handled as a criminal offense, but rather, would be handled administratively.

It is clear from all of the evidence that the investigation was conducted by persons independent of Region 10, and that the investigation was neither directed nor controlled by the management of GSA Region 10.

Discussion, Further Findings of Fact and Conclusions

Section 19(a)(1) of the Executive Order provides that agency management shall not interfere with, restrain, or coerce an employee in the exercise of the rights assured by this Order. One of those rights is section 1, which provides that each employee has the right:

... freely and without fear of penalty or reprisal to form, join, and assist a labor organization ... and each employee shall be protected in the exercise of this right.

Complainant contends section 1 was violated (1) when Mr. Snyder was asked the names of those in attendance at the June 19, 1976, union meeting and (2) was then threatened for failure to give those names.

In Office of Economic Opportunity, Region 5, A/SLMR No. 477, the Assistant Secretary agreed with the recommendation of the Administrative Law Judge, who found that interrogation and threats to a union employee were in violation of section 19(a)(1) of the Executive Order.

In that case a memo was issued by management withdrawing the privilege of the union to post and distribute material because those postings contained attacks upon management. The memo was itself attacked by a circulated leaflet. Management then attempted to learn who had been responsible for the leaflet. An employee was interrogated as to whether she wrote or distributed the leaflet. She refused to answer and was then advised discipline would be taken against her for failure to answer.

The Administrative Law Judge concluded that the interrogation was a prohibited interrogation of an employee concerning union activities. He further concluded that management's investigation of alleged misconduct may not encroach on the rights afforded by section 1 of the Order. See also, Vandenberg Airforce Base, California, A/SLMR No. 383.

The principles of the above cases are, of course, sound. They are simply not applicable to the present fact situation.

There was here no interrogation concerning union activities nor was there a threat.

Mr. Voiland wished only the names of those present at the union meeting so he could question them, not concerning union activity, but concerning possible violations of the GSA Standards of Conduct, the Federal Procurement Regulations, and the United States Code. There was no intrusion on the internal affairs of the union nor was there any threat, open or veiled, that in any way interfered with, restricted or coerced an employee in the right to form, join or assist a labor organization.

Mr. Snyder was not threatened because of any union activity. First, he was not threatened. He was simply advised that disciplinary action might be taken by others under the GSA Standards of Conduct. Further, there was no discriminatory action taken because of union activity as in Environmental Protection Agency, Perrine Primate Laboratory, A/SLMR No. 136.

It is also very important to note that the interrogation was conducted, not by a representative of management, but, rather, by an independent criminal investigator who reported only to Washington, D. C.

The mere fact that the person questioned concerning unauthorized disclosures is a union official does not make the questioning violative of the Executive Order.

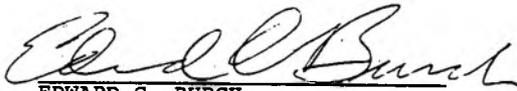

February 9, 1978

Department of Transportation, FAA, Las Vegas, A/SLMR No. 796 stated that the distribution of non-public information is not a right protected by section 1(a) of the Executive Order and a reprimand therefore does not violate the Order.

In conclusion, the investigation, the questioning, and the admonishment here in question encroached upon no rights afforded by section 1 of the Executive Order, and there was no violation of section 19(a)(1) of that Order.

Recommendation

Having found that respondent has not engaged in conduct violative of section 19(a)(1) of the Order, I recommend that the complaint herein be dismissed in its entirety.

SUMMARY OF DECISION AND ORDER AMENDING RECOGNITION AND CLARIFYING UNIT OF THE ASSISTANT SECRETARY
PURSUANT TO SECTION 6 OF EXECUTIVE ORDER 11491, AS AMENDED

U. S. COAST GUARD SUPPORT CENTER,
PORTSMOUTH, VIRGINIA
A/SLMR No. 986

This case involved a petition for clarification of unit (CU) and amendment of recognition (AC) filed by the Tidewater Virginia Federal Employees Metal Trades Council (Council) seeking to amend and clarify the unit for which it received exclusive recognition at the U. S. Coast Guard Base, Portsmouth, Virginia, (Base) to reflect changes brought about by the closure of the Base and the mass transfer of its personnel to the U. S. Coast Guard Support Center, Portsmouth, Virginia, (Support Center). The Council sought to amend the description of its exclusively recognized unit by changing the designation "U. S. Coast Guard Base, Portsmouth, Virginia" to "U. S. Coast Guard Support Center, Portsmouth, Virginia." It also sought to clarify its unit at the Support Center with respect to employees of the Public Works Division and the Security Section of the Administrative Division, who were employed at the Support Center prior to the mass transfer of base personnel. The Activity contended that these employees should be considered as within the Council's unit. At the hearing, the Council agreed with the Activity's position.

The Assistant Secretary found that, subsequent to the base closure and transfer of base personnel to the Support Center, the Council's exclusively recognized unit continues to remain appropriate for the purpose of exclusive recognition under the Order and that the previously unrepresented employees of the Public Works Division and the Security Section had become an integral part of the Council's reconstituted unit at the Support Center. Accordingly, he ordered that the exclusively recognized unit represented by the Council be amended to conform the recognition to the existing circumstances resulting from the base closure and transfer of base personnel to the Support Center and to clarify the unit to include all eligible employees of the Public Works Division and the Security Section of the Administrative Division.

DECISION AND ORDER AMENDING RECOGNITION AND CLARIFYING UNIT

Upon a petition duly filed under Section 6 of Executive Order 11491, as amended, a hearing was held before Hearing Officer Nancy Anderson. The Hearing Officer's rulings made at the hearing are free from prejudicial error and are hereby affirmed.

Upon the entire record in this case, including the brief filed by the Activity, the Assistant Secretary finds:

On August 9, 1963, the Petitioner, Tidewater Virginia Federal Employees Metal Trades Council, herein called Council, was granted exclusive recognition in a unit of essentially all Wage Grade and General Schedule employees of the U. S. Coast Guard Base, Portsmouth, Virginia, herein called Base Portsmouth. The most recent negotiated agreement was entered into by the Council and Base Portsmouth on January 16, 1976. In this proceeding, the Council seeks to amend its recognition to reflect the closure of Base Portsmouth and the mass transfer of base unit employees to the U. S. Coast Guard Support Center, Portsmouth, Virginia, herein called Support Center. It also seeks to clarify the status of all the previously unrepresented Wage Grade and General Schedule employees of the Support Center. These employees were employed in the Public Works Division and the Security Section of the Administrative Division at the Support Center prior to the above-noted base closure.

On April 7, 1977, all employees, civilian and military, and all program responsibilities of Base Portsmouth were physically and administratively transferred to the existing U. S. Coast Guard Support Center, Portsmouth, Virginia, approximately 8 miles away. The Council contends that, as a result of the closure of Base Portsmouth and the relocation of its employees and their functions to the Support Center, the name of the Activity should be changed from U. S. Coast Guard Base, Portsmouth, Virginia, to the U. S. Coast Guard Support Center, Portsmouth, Virginia, to conform to the existing circumstances precipitated by the closure and physical transfer of all unit employees. In this regard, the Council contends that the unit has remained appropriate and intact and that the employees' duties, classifications, and assignments have remained unaffected by the physical relocation. The Activity agrees with the Council's position with respect to the amendment of recognition but also contends, with respect to the proposed clarification of unit, that the Council's unit should be considered to include employees of the Public Works Division and Security Section of the Administrative Division. The Activity asserts that such a unit would be appropriate as the employees involved not only share a community of interest, but the unit would promote effective dealings, efficiency of operations, and prevent unit fragmentation. At the hearing, the Council agreed with the Activity's position.

The U. S. Coast Guard Support Center, Portsmouth, Virginia, is a Coast Guard "unit" within the command of the 5th U. S. Coast Guard District, one of 12 such districts in the continental United States. The mission of the Support Center, subsequent to the closure of Base Portsmouth, is to operate and maintain boats in execution of assigned programs; maintain and repair cutters, boats, buoys, shore facilities and equipment; and provide a wide range of material and personnel support services for other units.

Prior to its closure, Base Portsmouth was administratively organized into three divisions, Industrial, Comptroller, and Administrative, 1/ and the Council's exclusively represented unit comprised the 47 eligible employees in the Industrial and Comptroller divisions. 2/ Subsequent to the April 7, 1977, base closure, these divisions were transferred en masse to the Support Center. The record reveals that at the Support Center there were some 17 unrepresented civilian employees who were assigned to the Public Works Division and the Security Section of the Administrative Division prior to the transfer of the Council's unit and that these employees have remained in their respective positions.

Subsequent to the closure of Base Portsmouth and the transfer of employees, and except for the physical relocation and change of Activity's title, unit employees are performing essentially the same duties that they performed at Base Portsmouth under the same immediate supervision. In addition, the record reveals that the unit employees have not changed job titles, skills, divisional assignments, personnel practices or policies, or other terms and conditions of employment. Labor relations policies continue to be administered by the District Personnel Office and the Activity Commander. Under all these circumstances, I find that the unit which was at Base Portsmouth has been relocated at the Support Center and continues to remain appropriate for the purpose of exclusive recognition under the Order.

1/ The Administrative Division was comprised solely of military personnel.

2/ The record indicates that there were some nonappropriated fund activity employees located at the Base who were never a part of the exclusively represented unit.

Under the new organizational structure, all Support Center employees are subject to the supervision of the Commander and his staff. The record further reveals that all employees of the Support Center, including those assigned to the Public Works Division and the Security Section of the Administrative Division, enjoy essentially similar job classifications, duties, skills and working conditions pursuant to policies and procedures established by the Support Center. Moreover, they now share common overall supervision, as well as the personnel and labor relations policies and practices established by the Coast Guard Headquarters in Washington, D. C., and administered by the 5th District Personnel Office, the Support Center Commander and his staff.

Under these circumstances, I find that the employees assigned to the Public Works Division and the Security Section of the Administrative Division accreted into and became an integral part of the bargaining unit represented exclusively by the Council. Thus, in my view, subsequent to the closure of Base Portsmouth and the physical transfer of its employees, the previously unrepresented employees in the aforementioned divisions have been administratively and functionally integrated into the Council's existing unit of Support Center employees and now share a clear and identifiable community of interest with such employees. Although the record shows that the Public Works Division and Security Section employees perform a portion of their work separate and apart from other divisions, a significant number of their projects require the direct and indirect support of those divisions and are controlled and coordinated by the Support Center Commander and his staff. Moreover, the inclusion of the subject employees into the unit represented by the Council, under the circumstances outlined above, will, in my view, promote effective dealings and efficiency of agency operations by reducing unit fragmentation in an activity where components are functionally integrated and where the success of the Activity's mission requires cooperation and interaction between its component parts.

Accordingly, I shall amend the recognition and clarify the unit consistent with my decision herein.

ORDER

IT IS HEREBY ORDERED that the exclusive recognition granted on August 9, 1963, to the Tidewater Virginia Federal Employees Metal Trades Council, be, and it hereby is, amended by changing the designation "U. S. Coast Guard Base, Portsmouth, Virginia" to read "U. S. Coast Guard Support Center, Portsmouth, Virginia."

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED that the unit exclusively represented by the Tidewater Virginia Federal Employees Metal Trades Council be, and it hereby is, clarified by including in the said unit all eligible employees located in the Public Works Division and the Security Section of the Administrative Division.

The unit description, as clarified, is as follows:

All Wage Grade and General Schedule employees of the U. S. Coast Guard Support Center, Portsmouth, Virginia, excluding employees engaged in Federal personnel work in other than a purely clerical capacity, management officials, confidential employees, nonappropriated fund activity employees, temporary employees with no reasonable expectation of continued employment, and supervisors as defined in the Order.

AND NTEU CHAPTER 010

Complainants

DECISION AND ORDER

This case involved an unfair labor practice complaint filed by the National Treasury Employees Union (NTEU) and NTEU Chapter 010 (Complainants) alleging that the Respondents violated Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order by their failure to allow a union representative to continue speaking at a formal meeting between representatives of management and unit employees. The Complainants contend that the union representative was engaged in representing the employees when he was improperly prevented from continuing such representation. The Respondents contend, on the other hand, that the meeting involved was not a formal discussion within the meaning of Section 10(e) of the Order. However, the Respondents argue that, even if the meeting in question was a formal discussion within the meaning of Section 10(e), management was within its rights in directing the union representative to return to his seat when his remarks exceeded the bounds of the issue for discussion.

The Assistant Secretary concluded that dismissal of the instant complaint was warranted. In this connection, he found that the meeting in question was a formal discussion within the meaning of Section 10(e) of the Order in that it was a meeting between management and unit employees wherein suggestions were solicited and the matter being discussed affected general working conditions of employees in the unit. He further concluded, however, that, under the particular circumstances of the case, where the Respondent only restricted the union representative's participation in the meeting to the extent that his remarks clearly were extraneous to the subject matter, and where the evidence did not reflect that he was prevented from either representing the employees' interests or stating the Complainants' position regarding the subject matter of the meeting, the evidence was insufficient to establish that the Respondents' conduct was violative of the Order.

Accordingly, the Assistant Secretary ordered that the complaint be dismissed in its entirety.

This matter is before the Assistant Secretary pursuant to Regional Administrator R. C. DeMarco's Order Transferring Case to the Assistant Secretary of Labor, dated June 20, 1977, in accordance with Sections 203.5(b), 203.7(a)(4) and 206.5(a) of the Assistant Secretary's Regulations.

Upon consideration of the entire record in the subject case, including the parties' stipulation of facts, accompanying exhibits and briefs, the Assistant Secretary finds:

The complaint herein alleges that Respondents violated Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of Executive Order 11491, as amended, by their failure to allow a union representative to continue speaking at a formal meeting with unit employees. The Complainants contend essentially that the meeting in question was a formal discussion within the meaning of Section 10(e) of the Order and that the union representative was engaged in representing unit employees when he was improperly prevented by the Respondents from continuing such representation.

The Respondents contend, on the other hand, that the meeting in question was not a formal discussion within the meaning of Section 10(e) of the Order. And even if the meeting in question was a formal discussion within the meaning of Section 10(e), the Respondents assert that management was within its rights in directing the union representative to return to his seat when his remarks exceeded the bounds of the issue for discussion at the meeting. ^{1/}

^{1/} The Respondents also raised two procedural issues which they claimed had never been ruled upon. In this regard, the Respondents contend that the instant complaint should be dismissed as the Respondent, Internal Revenue Service, hereinafter called IRS, Chicago District, was not simultaneously served with a copy of the instant complaint

The undisputed facts, as stipulated by the parties, are as follows:

A meeting took place on June 13, 1975, in the South Area Office of the Chicago District of the IRS. Present at the meeting were five management officials, including the Office Manager of the South Area Office and various District Office officials, Mr. Michael Peacher, the Chief Steward of the exclusive representative of the Chicago District's employees, the National Treasury Employees Union, Chapter 010, hereinafter called NTEU, and approximately 60 bargaining unit employees. Mr. Peacher was present in his capacity as a union official.

The purpose of the meeting was to inform the employees about a management proposal concerning space utilization and to obtain employee suggestions and opinions concerning this proposal. The meeting was part of management's overall plan to implement its proposal throughout the Chicago District and was one of several meetings held. It was not conducted for the purpose of grieving or negotiating on the proposal.

The meeting began with the Office Manager explaining its purpose. He indicated that after he finished his explanation the management officials present would try to answer the questions of employees and solicit suggestions for improvement of the proposal. He spoke for approximately one-half hour after which unit employees began asking questions. Approximately ten minutes into the questioning period, Mr. Peacher asked to be recognized. Upon being recognized, he went to the front of the room and made the following two points: (1) that the proposal would, in his opinion, victimize the employees; and (2) that employees, in his opinion, were already "subsidizing" the Government by providing their own supplies and transportation to perform their field duties.

The Office Manager interrupted Mr. Peacher at this point and stated that his remarks were improper as they did not deal with the issue under discussion. Mr. Peacher agreed not to make further similar remarks, stating that he was merely trying to show by his remarks that the employees were already making sacrifices in the interest of economy. Mr. Peacher then suggested that if employees wanted to take some action concerning the proposal, they could do what he was going to do, which was to write their Congressman regarding the proposal. At this point a District Office official interrupted Mr. Peacher and said he had overstepped the bounds of appropriate comments, and that he (Peacher) should limit himself to commenting on the issue being discussed. Further, he stated that Peacher was conducting union business on Government time when he suggested that employees should contact their Congressman. For these reasons, the District Office official told Peacher to return to his seat. After telling the employees that this was a management attempt to silence the Union, Chief Steward Peacher sat down and made no further comment during the meeting which ended shortly thereafter.

1/ as required by Section 203.4(b) of the Assistant Secretary's Regulations, and as, in their view, the Complainants failed to furnish any evidence in support of the complaint at the time the complaint was filed.

I find no basis for dismissal of the instant complaint based on either of these contentions. With respect to the first argument, the evidence establishes that both the IRS, Chicago District and the IRS National Office were named in the instant complaint, the IRS National Office was served with a copy of the instant complaint, and the record reflects that both parties were fully represented at all stages of the proceeding. With respect to the Respondents' second argument, I find that the evidence herein establishes that the Complainants met their initial burden of proof in this matter so as to warrant further processing of the complaint.

FINDINGS AND CONCLUSIONS

In my view, the subject meeting constituted a "formal discussion" within the meaning of Section 10(e) of the Order. 2/ Thus, the meeting was between management and unit employees, and the matter being discussed, a proposal concerning space utilization, was a matter clearly "affecting general working conditions of employees in the unit." In this regard, I find that the Respondents' reliance on the Federal Labor Relations Council's decision in National Aeronautics and Space Administration (NASA) Washington, D.C. and Lyndon B. Johnson Space Center, Houston, Texas, 3 FLRC 617, FLRC No. 74A-95 (1975) is misplaced. Thus, the subject meeting was between management and unit employees, and not, as in the NASA case, between headquarter-level management and employees in a unit recognized at a lower organizational level. Moreover, the meeting in question was not merely an "information gathering device" as in NASA, but rather was a meeting where management clearly indicated at the outset that it was soliciting suggestions in connection with a management proposal concerning the working conditions of unit employees. Under these circumstances, I find that the NTEU had the right to be represented at the meeting and the obligation to represent the interests of all the employees in the unit. 3/

However, under the particular circumstances herein, I find that dismissal of the instant complaint is warranted. Thus, as noted above, the Respondents restricted the participation of the NTEU representative in the meeting only to the extent that his remarks were extraneous to its subject matter, and there was no evidence that the representative was prevented from representing the unit employees or stating the position of the NTEU regarding space utilization plans of the Respondents. Indeed, the evidence reflects that Chief Steward Peacher, after he was first interrupted by management, in effect, conceded that his remarks were not on point. Moreover, there was no allegation that Peacher, after being told to return to his seat, attempted to or was prevented

2/ Section 10(e) provides, in pertinent part, that, ". . . The labor organization shall be given the opportunity to be represented at formal discussions between management and employees or employee representatives concerning grievances, personnel policies and practices, or other matters affecting general working conditions of employees in the unit."

SUMMARY OF DECISION AND ORDER CLARIFYING UNIT
OF THE ASSISTANT SECRETARY
PURSUANT TO SECTION 6 OF EXECUTIVE ORDER 11491, AS AMENDED

NAVAL TRAINING CENTER,
ORLANDO, FLORIDA
A/SLMR No. 988

This case involved a petition for clarification of unit filed by the Hotel, Motel, Restaurant Employees and Bartenders Union, Local 737, AFL-CIO (Petitioner) seeking to clarify the status of its existing exclusively recognized unit after an agency directed reorganization involving the Activity. The Petitioner proposed to clarify its existing unit of messes and consolidated package stores by including in it all the eligible employees of the Activity's Enlisted Mess Open, contending that those employees have accreted to its existing unit due to the reorganization.

The reorganization resulted from a directive of the Deputy Chief of Naval Operations (Manpower) that the management of all clubs and messes within the Department of the Navy be performed by the Chief of Naval Personnel, rather than the Navy Resale Systems Office in Brooklyn, New York. The reorganization was implemented locally when control of the Enlisted Club and its employees was transferred from the Navy Exchange, Naval Training Center, Orlando, Florida, to the Administrative Command of the Activity. The Enlisted Club was redesignated the Enlisted Club Open.

The Activity took the position that the unit should be clarified as sought by the Petitioner. The Intervenor, Local 1451, National Federation of Federal Employees, Independent, conceded that the employees of the Enlisted Mess Open were no longer a part of its existing unit of all employees in the Navy Exchange, Naval Training Center, Orlando, Florida. However, it asserted that the employees involved have not accreted into the Petitioner's existing unit, but that an election should be conducted among the employees of the Enlisted Mess Open giving them a choice between the Petitioner and "no union."

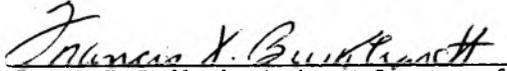

The Assistant Secretary found that the employees of the Enlisted Mess Open share a community of interest with the employees represented exclusively by the Petitioner as they share common supervision; receive their personnel services from the same Civilian Personnel Office; are subject to the same hiring and recruiting programs; are provided with the same job rating and position classification service by the same Civilian Personnel Office; and share the same retirement, group health, and insurance programs. He found also that effective dealings and efficiency of agency

Accordingly, under these circumstances, I find that the evidence was insufficient to establish that the Respondents' conduct was violative of Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order, and, therefore, I shall order that the subject complaint be dismissed in its entirety.

ORDER

IT IS HEREBY ORDERED that the complaint in Case No. 50-13134(CA) be, and it hereby is, dismissed.

operations would be promoted by virtue of inclusion of the employees in question in the Petitioner's existing unit. Under these circumstances, based on the policy set forth by the Federal Labor Relations Council in Department of the Army, Fort McPherson, Georgia, FLRC No. 76A-82 (June 2, 1977), the Assistant Secretary found that the approximately 30 employees of the Enlisted Mess Open had accreted to the unit of approximately 150 employees represented by the Petitioner.

Accordingly, the Assistant Secretary ordered that the unit be clarified consistent with his findings.

DECISION AND ORDER CLARIFYING UNIT

Upon a petition duly filed under Section 6 of Executive Order 11491, as amended, a hearing was held before Hearing Officer Seymour X. Alsher. The Hearing Officer's rulings made at the hearing are free from prejudicial error and are hereby affirmed.

Upon the entire record in this case, including a brief filed by the Activity, the Assistant Secretary finds:

The Hotel, Motel, Restaurant Employees and Bartenders Union, Local 737, AFL-CIO, herein called the Petitioner, seeks to clarify the status of its existing exclusively recognized unit of approximately 150 non-appropriated fund employees after an agency directed reorganization involving the Activity. 2/ The Petitioner proposes to clarify its existing unit by including in it all full-time and regular part-time employees of the Enlisted Mess Open of the Activity, approximately 30 in number.

1/ The name of the Intervenor appears as amended at the hearing.

2/ The Petitioner is the exclusive representative of the following certified unit with the standard exclusions: All employees of the Commissioned Officers Mess Open; Chief Petty Officers Mess Open; Petty Officers Mess Open; Consolidated Package Store; Consolidated Mess Open, McCoy Annex; and Consolidated Package Store Annex, McCoy Annex of the Naval Training Center, Orlando, Florida.

The Petitioner contends that the employees of the Enlisted Mess Open have accreted to its existing unit based upon common supervision, functional integration, geographical proximity, similar jobs and skills, and equivalent working conditions. Local 1451, National Federation of Federal Employees, Independent, herein called the Intervenor, 3/ concurs that the employees of the Enlisted Mess Open are no longer a part of its Navy Exchange unit. However, it asserts that the employees involved have not accreted into the Petitioner's existing unit, but that an election should be conducted among the employees of the Enlisted Mess Open giving them a choice between the Petitioner or "no union." The Activity contends that an election in this case would serve no useful purpose and that the employees of the Enlisted Mess Open have, in fact, accreted to the Petitioner's existing unit.

The above noted reorganization began on August 5, 1976, when the Deputy Chief of Naval Operations (Manpower) directed that the management of all clubs and messes within the Department of the Navy be exercised by the Chief of Naval Personnel, rather than the Navy Resale Systems Office in Brooklyn, New York. The directive was implemented locally on May 25, 1977, when control of the Enlisted Club was transferred from the Navy Exchange at the Activity to the Naval Administrative Command of the Activity. The Enlisted Club was redesignated the Enlisted Mess Open. The approximately 30 nonappropriated fund employees of the Enlisted Club, including management officials and supervisors, were directly affected by the reorganization.

The mission of the Activity is to provide basic indoctrination for enlisted personnel, to provide initial skill, advanced and/or other specialized training for officers and enlisted personnel of the regular Navy and Navy Reserve, to provide command and coordination for the efforts of assigned subordinate activities, and to provide support to other activities as assigned. The Activity is host to approximately 20 tenant activities located on the Naval Training Center compound. The Naval Administrative Command, one of the three major component command organizations of the Activity, performs the "housekeeping" functions (logistics support and administrative services) for the other activities of the Naval Training Center. Among its other functions, the Naval Administrative Command has responsibility for the operation of the various consolidated package stores and messes, including, as a consequence of the above noted reorganization, the Enlisted Mess Open. The mission of the Navy Exchange, Naval Training Center, Orlando, Florida, is to serve authorized patrons as a large, diversified retail store and, through profits, to provide a source of funds for the welfare and recreation of military personnel.

3/ The Intervenor was granted exclusive recognition on December 9, 1968, for a unit of all employees in the Navy Exchange, Naval Training Center, Orlando, Florida. The unit consists of approximately 710 nonappropriated fund employees.

Although the Enlisted Mess Open is in the same building as the former Enlisted Club, the employees of the Navy Exchange's Enlisted Club were treated as new hires by the gaining Naval Administrative Command. Further, these employees were treated as being terminated for some purposes, and transferred for others. 4/

As indicated above, the Intervenor concedes that employees of the Enlisted Mess Open no longer are part of its unit. The record reveals that subsequent to the reorganization the employees at issue no longer share common supervision with Navy Exchange nonappropriated fund employees, nor are they serviced by the same personnel office. Also, the two groups of employees do not have routine and regular working contacts, nor is there interchange between them. In addition, they no longer share the same area of consideration for reduction in force purposes.

Under the circumstances, I find that the employees of the Enlisted Mess Open share a community of interest with employees represented exclusively by the Petitioner. Thus, as part of the Naval Administrative Command of the Activity, the two groups share common supervision. Further, they receive all personnel services from the Civilian Personnel Office of the Activity, which provides personnel services to all tenant activities located on the base with the exception of the Navy Exchange. 5/ In addition, the employees of the Enlisted Mess Open and the employees represented by the Petitioner are subject to the same hiring and recruiting programs, are provided with the same job rating and position classification service by the Civilian Personnel Office, and share the same retirement, group health, and insurance programs.

I find also that effective dealings and efficiency of agency operations would be promoted by virtue of the inclusion of the disputed employees in the Petitioner's existing unit. Thus, the record reveals that the Activity has the same labor-management relations authority with regard to both Enlisted Mess Open employees and the employees represented by the Petitioner. Additionally, the Civilian Personnel Office is responsible, in general, for the labor relations program for the nonappropriated fund activities under the jurisdiction of the Activity, and for the administration of the current negotiated agreement between the Petitioner and the Activity. By the terms of this agreement, the employees of the consolidated package stores and messes represented by the Petitioner are in the same area of consideration for primary consideration for merit promotion. Employees of the Enlisted Mess Open are eligible for participation in this merit promotion program. Further, the Enlisted Mess Open's operations, fund handling system, and job classifications have been modified and now resemble those of the Activity's other messes and consolidated package stores.

4/ Thus, they were afforded the rights of transferees by receiving time-in-grade credit for the time they had worked for the Navy Exchange, and they were given the right as terminated employees to be paid for their annual leave, or as transferees to transfer their annual leave with them.

5/ The Navy Exchange has its own personnel office.

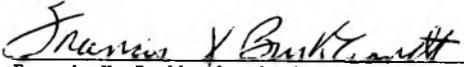

February 22, 1978

In Department of the Army, Fort McPherson, Georgia. FLRC No. 76A-82 (June 2, 1977), the Federal Labor Relations Council (Council) determined that a finding that a group of employees has accreted to an existing unit must take into account equal application of the three Section 10(b) criteria and the purposes and policies of the Order sought to be achieved; i.e., preventing further fragmentation of bargaining units as well as reducing existing fragmentation, thereby promoting a more comprehensive bargaining unit structure. Further, it noted that in the Federal sector a finding of accretion is not dependent upon thorough physical integration of the employees at issue into the existing unit. As noted above, I have found that the employees of the Enlisted Mess Open share a clear and identifiable community of interest with the employees represented by the Petitioner, and that their inclusion in the unit would promote effective dealings and efficiency of operations. Under these circumstances, while the employees of the Enlisted Mess Open remain a distinct and identifiable grouping of employees with no evidence of thorough physical integration between them and the employees already in the Petitioner's unit, and despite the fact they originally voted to be represented by a labor organization other than the Petitioner, 6/ based on the policy set forth by the Council in its Fort McPherson decision, I am constrained to find that the approximately 30 employees of the Enlisted Mess Open have accreted to the unit of approximately 150 employees represented by the Petitioner. Accordingly, I shall order that the unit represented by the Petitioner be clarified to include the employees of the Enlisted Mess Open.

ORDER

IT IS HEREBY ORDERED that the unit of messes and consolidated package stores at the Naval Training Center, Orlando, Florida, for which the Hotel, Motel, Restaurant Employees and Bartenders Union, Local 737, AFL-CIO, was certified as exclusive representative on February 8, 1974, and clarified on October 24, 1974, be, and it hereby is, clarified to include all eligible employees of the Enlisted Mess Open.

Dated. Washington, D. C.
February 22, 1978

Francis X. Burkhardt, Assistant Secretary of
Labor for Labor-Management Relations

6/ As indicated above, however, the Intervenor concedes that the employees of the Enlisted Mess Open are no longer part of its Navy Exchange unit.

A/SLMR No. 989

This case involved an unfair labor practice complaint filed by the National Treasury Employees Union (NTEU) and NTEU, Chapter 98 (Complainant) alleging that the Respondent violated Section 19(a)(1) and (2) of the Order when it terminated the employment of Audrea Huggins, a probationary employee and union steward, due to her union activities. The Complainant further alleged that the Respondent independently violated Section 19(a)(1) of the Order by its reference to Ms. Huggins' union activities in a performance appraisal.

The Administrative Law Judge concluded that the Respondent had not violated Section 19(a)(2) of the Order as there was insufficient evidence to establish that Ms. Huggins was terminated from employment because of her union activities. With regard to the alleged Section 19(a)(1) violation, he found that the Respondent's statement in Ms. Huggins performance appraisal concerning her union activities was violative of Section 19(a)(1) of the Order and thus recommended the issuance of an appropriate remedial order.

The Assistant Secretary adopted the Administrative Law Judge's findings, conclusions, and recommendations and issued an appropriate remedial order for the violation found herein.

DECISION AND ORDER

On October 21, 1977, Administrative Law Judge John H. Fenton issued his Recommended Decision and Order in the above-entitled proceeding, finding that the Respondent had violated Section 19(a)(1) of the Order, and recommending that it cease and desist therefrom and take certain affirmative actions as set forth in the attached Administrative Law Judge's Recommended Decision and Order. The Administrative Law Judge found further that the Respondent had not violated Section 19(a)(2) of the Order as alleged in the complaint. Thereafter, the Respondent filed an exception directed solely to the Administrative Law Judge's Recommended Order. ^{1/}

The Assistant Secretary has reviewed the rulings of the Administrative Law Judge made at the hearing and finds that no prejudicial error was committed. The rulings are hereby affirmed. Upon consideration of the Administrative Law Judge's Recommended Decision and Order and the entire record in this case, including the Respondent's exception to the Administrative Law Judge's Recommended Order, I hereby adopt the Administrative Law Judge's findings, conclusions and recommendations.

In its exception, the Respondent contended that the Administrative Law Judge's proposed remedy in the instant case was unnecessary inasmuch as it had previously complied with the terms of a settlement agreement in another case which effectively resolved the subject case. I disagree. Thus, the instant case involves a different employee than the prior

^{1/} It was noted that the Respondent did not except to the Administrative Law Judge's finding that it had violated Section 19(a)(1) of the Executive Order, and that the Complainant did not except to the recommended dismissal of the alleged violation of Section 19(a)(2) of the Order.

Accordingly, I shall require the Respondent to remedy the violation found herein, including the posting of a notice consistent with such remedial order. In my view, such a remedial notice is necessary to inform and assure employees that the rights guaranteed to them and their exclusive representative by the Order will be protected.

ORDER

Pursuant to Section 6(b) of Executive Order 11491, as amended, and Section 203.26(b) of the Regulations, the Assistant Secretary of Labor for Labor-Management Relations hereby orders that the Internal Revenue Service, Memphis Service Center, shall:

1. Cease and desist from:

(a) Interfering with, restraining, or coercing Audrea Huggins, by inserting any remark or comment in any appraisal regarding the union activities of Audrea Huggins.

(b) In any like or related manner interfering with, restraining, or coercing its employees in the exercise of rights assured by Section 1(a) of Executive Order 11491, as amended.

2. Take the following affirmative actions in order to effectuate the purposes and policies of the Order:

(a) Require and instruct its supervisors not to insert any remark or comment in any appraisal regarding the union activities of Audrea Huggins.

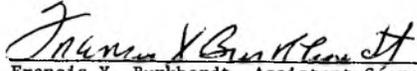

(b) Expunge any reference to union activities made by the Respondent, if such reference exists, from the personnel file of Audrea Huggins.

(c) Post at its facility at the Memphis Service Center, copies of the attached notice marked "Appendix" on forms to be furnished by the Assistant Secretary of Labor for Labor-Management Relations. Upon receipt of such forms they shall be signed by the Center Director and shall be posted and maintained by him for 60 consecutive days thereafter, in conspicuous places, including all bulletin boards and other places where notices to employees are customarily posted. The Center Director shall take reasonable steps to insure that such notices are not altered, defaced, or covered by any other material.

(d) Pursuant to Section 203.27 of the Regulations, notify the Assistant Secretary, in writing, within 30 days from the date of this order as to what steps have been taken to comply herewith.

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED that the instant complaint, insofar as it alleges a violation of Section 19(a)(2) of the Order, be, and it hereby is, dismissed.

RECOMMENDED DECISION AND ORDER

Statement of the Case

Pursuant to a complaint filed August 16, 1976, under Executive Order 11491, as amended, by the National Treasury Employees Union and its Chapter 98, against the IRS Memphis Service Center, a Notice of Hearing on Complaint was issued on October 18, 1976, by the Regional Administrator for the Atlanta Region of the Labor-Management Services Administration.

JHF:hjc

The complaint alleged that Respondent violated Sections 19(a) (1) and (2) of the Executive Order by making reference to Ms. Audrea Huggins' union activities in a performance evaluation, and by discharging her because of such activities.

A hearing was held in Memphis, Tennessee, on November 9 and 10, 1976. All parties were afforded full opportunity to be heard, to examine and cross-examine witnesses and to introduce evidence. Post-hearing briefs were filed and have been duly considered.

Upon the entire record, including my observation of the witnesses and their demeanor, I make the following findings of fact, conclusions and recommendations.

1. NTEU Chapter 98 has been collective bargaining representative of the Memphis Center employees at all material times. Ms. Huggins was hired in January, 1975 as one of 10 seasonal WAE GS-3 tax examiners employed for the peak tax season. She was furloughed in August, recalled on February 2, 1976 and discharged on March 26. The termination was "for disqualification during probationary period for uncooperative attitude toward your manager in your work".

2. When she was hired she was assigned to the Receipt and Control Section, Unidentified Unit, under the supervision of Ms. Mary Dudero. At dates not well fixed, she was detailed to other units under the supervision of Ms. Gladys Henderson and Ms. Emma Williams. During this same period, and also at unknown times, she joined the Union and became its Treasurer. She was appointed steward for Receipt and Control on July 23.

3. On June 4, 1975 Dudero evaluated Huggins on a furlough and recall form. At the same time she rated six GS-4 tax examiners, and three other GS-3 tax examiners, all of whom had entered service with Huggins. 1/ The GS-4's received scores ranging from 96 to 80. The GS-3's received a 72, and three 64s. Huggins received a 64 which was, by reference to error rates, the lowest of all. On a rating scaled from 1 to 5 she received a 3 in quantity and quality of work performed and a 2 in dependability. A score of 3 indicates fully acceptable performance a two is superior to that. On June 11 Dudero rated Huggins on a rating form used for promotion to non-supervisory positions. She received an identical appraisal, plus a 3 in an additional factor which assessed learning ability and application of knowledge to job.

4. Later in June, Huggins grieved her 64 rating, unsuccessfully requesting that it be raised. That rating affected her prospects for furlough and recall, as well as her chances for achieving permanent status. She testified that she was told an 80 was necessary for permanent status and that Dudero, at a counselling session preceding the June 4 rating, had indicated that she would receive an 80 for her unmeasured work, notwithstanding that the computer print-out sheet (IPR) for measured work she had performed scored her 64. Thus she accused Dudero of misrepresenting the matter to her. Dudero's version of this was that, after the initial three-week training period, she assigned Huggins to "unmeasured critical work". Huggins allegedly attempted to avoid having her work reviewed by not putting it in the review basket, denied ever being told to do so and later acknowledged her presence at the meeting where such instruction were given but denied having heard them. 2/ When Huggins' error rate reached 64%, Dudero placed her on uncritical work where no error rate was kept. At some later time, when she went over Huggins' IPR with her, she explained the furlough-recall procedure, noting that management works off the top of the list and that Huggins was on the bottom. Huggins said she would not have made so many errors if she had as much experience as the others. Huggins asked for and was granted a second meeting in the presence of Chief Steward Marlene Johnson. At Johnson's request she was given another chance on critical (unmeasured) work, with senior tax examiner Virginia Hall working with her one-on-one. Hall reported back that her progress was good. 3/

2/ Dudero stated that Huggins would not listen to descriptions of errors when they were brought back, but rather appeared to be busy composing her response or excuse. Neither evaluation made mention of this, nor was she counselled about such alleged attitude.

3/ Johnson also requested a transfer from the section on the ground that there was a developing personality conflict. [continued on next page]

5. Huggins was twice detailed for two-week periods to the Cleaning Unit of the Receipt and Control Branch, under the temporary supervision of Emma L. Williams. Williams described her, in a signed statement made available to the Union, as a very conscientious, cooperative and eager employee whose quality of work steadily increased while her error rate decreased. In her testimony she acknowledged that Huggins had a high error rate, as did some others. Huggins worked for Gladys Henderson, Section Chief of Audit, on two-week details in June and in August. Henderson on August 28 prepared at Dudero's request an evaluation of her work. She found her production rate low and her quality very good. She commented that Huggins was "most cooperative...seemed eager to do what you wanted...and appeared to want to do a good job. With respect to dependability, she had the following to say:

Spent entirely too much time observing what went on in the area and on the phone, although I believe most of this was probably...on union matters. She spent quite a bit of time over in Correspondence Audit at the desk of Marlene Johnson (another union official)...4/

Huggins was in non-work status when this was written, having been furloughed in early August. She was unaware of its existence until after her recall to work on February 2, 1976.

She observed that Huggins did not believe what Dudero said, that Dudero believed Huggins did not believe what she said, and that "the respect and trust was wavering".

4/ There is no indication that this was intended to flag upper management's attention to Huggins' activist Union role. On the contrary, it appears to have been offered in mitigation of her low production. Even Huggins, who displayed a highly suspicious turn of mind as to the impact of her Union activities upon her employment conditions, spoke highly of Henderson as a supervisor. As noted, the appraisal was in other respects flattering, and the reference to time consumed in Union matters appears to be an effort to square low production with the presence of other attributes which would suggest high productivity.

6. Whatever the relationship between Huggins and Dudero during 1975, matters took a prompt turn for the worse when Huggins returned to duty in 1976. During her first week back, she sought health insurance coverage. Dudero denied her request on the ground she had not worked the required six months in 1975 and did not have the prospect of six months employment in 1976. It is evident that Huggins thought this was discriminatory. Dudero explained that such insurance was available only to employees with six months service who could reasonably anticipate six more months. Because Huggins did not yet have six months, and was on the bottom of the recall list, Dudero did not think she could qualify.

7. On February 10, Huggins, as steward, was approached by seven or eight permanent GS-4 employees about rumors that temporary GS-5 promotions were to be given to seasonal employees. Huggins took the matter to Dudero, but refused her request for the names of the employees she represented. Dudero told her that any discussion was premature as no appointments had been made, but agreed to hold a meeting and explain the matter to the complaining employees after the promotions were made. There was some controversy over the anonymity of the complaining people. 5/ Huggins and Johnson then visited Dorothy Kallaher in Labor Relations to report the incident. Kallaher agreed that a meeting between Dudero and the concerned employees would be one way to handle it, but said that it was up to Dudero. Dudero was again approached and again refused. A signed request from the concerned employees, dated February 25 was then presented to Dudero, and a meeting was finally held on March 1 after Huggins left on sick leave for cancer surgery.

8. On February 19 Huggins went to Dudero's desk, again bringing up the subject of health insurance coverage and also asking about a promotion to GS-4, as she was now eligible on the basis of six months service. Dudero told her that the decision about insurance was final. According to Huggins, she further told her that "there was no GS-4 in the future, period". Dudero testified that she told Huggins that her high error rate made promotion impossible and that time-in-grade did not suffice. Huggins reacted by saying that she was not going to be treated in this way, that she would not accept the treatment she received the year before, and that, if she did not receive a promotion, she would file a grievance. Dudero replied that that was her privilege. Each testified that the other raised her voice. Again, there was obviously irritation on both sides. 6/

5/ It is evident from Union Exhibit 4, a memorandum prepared by Dudero, that she was upset about Huggins' refusal to name the complaining employees (which she believed violated the "agreed procedures" for informal conferences), [continued on next page]

Later that day, another incident occurred which clearly led to an angry exchange. Huggins was called to Dudero's desk for purposes of a counselling session, but was first presented with a white card to be filled out for use in furlough and recall. Huggins' version is that Dudero threw the card on the desk and instructed her to fill it out with her name, social security number, address and telephone number. Huggins asked what it was needed for, as such information was in her files. Dudero did not respond, and Huggins just sat looking at her because she had not answered. Dudero again instructed her to fill it out, and Huggins repeated her question concerning the need for it. Dudero then grabbed the card, told Huggins she was insubordinate and announced the intention to terminate her. At this point, being dumbfounded by Dudero's loud and abusive that she felt Huggins had "told" her to call a meeting (which she refused to do until after the fact) and that she was irritated by Huggins' attitude. Dudero testified on cross-examination, when asked whether Huggins thus displayed a bad attitude, that she did, that she "always displays a bad attitude if you don't agree with her".

6/ On cross-examination Dudero admitted that she thought of this as a threat, and as improper, drawing a distinction between one's right to file a grievance, and the use of a threat to grieve in order to get one's way. When pressed on whether such "threats" were one of the ways Huggins displayed an improper attitude, she replied that "usually her bad attitude was in regard to errors". Elsewhere on cross, Dudero stated she was upset not by any such threat, but by the reference to alleged mistreatment the year before, as Dudero felt she had gone out of her way to help Huggins, notwithstanding her problems. In a note written after the incident (Union Exhibit 6) Dudero stated [continued on next page] manner, Huggins started to write down what Dudero had to say. She asked Dudero what the card was for, and was informed it was for furlough recall. Huggins then said she had not refused to fill it out, but had simply asked what it was for. Huggins then said she was sorry Dudero had taken "that attitude" about it and Dudero responded that she was indeed sorry, that everyone knows she is sorry and that she would be sorrier. Dudero then pulled out Huggins' IPR for purposes of going over it. Huggins was still busy writing down what she had said about the card. Dudero instructed her to stop writing. Huggins explained that she was just taking notes because she believed she needed to take them. Dudero again told her to stop writing, reminding her she was going over her IPR with her. Huggins said "Just a second" and continued to finish the sentence she was on. Dudero then jumped up in anger, took the IPR, and again threatened Huggins with termination for insubordination. Needless to say, with respect to this and all other incidents, Dudero has a very different recollection, one which would provide more ample justification for the described loss of control which she in any event denies. I find it unnecessary to determine which is the more accurate recollection of the event, as I would conclude that Dudero had cause to be upset and that this was an important incident in a rapidly deteriorating relationship.

9. Later in the day on February 19, Dudero summoned Huggins to a counselling session in the Section Chief's office. What transpired there was the subject of much conflicting testimony as well as several exhibits (Union Exhibits 1, 2 and 6). According to Huggins she was unaware of the purpose of the meeting, and asked when she sat down if a decision had been reached concerning the promotion "grievance". Dudero replied that the purpose of the meeting was to counsel her on her errors, not to discuss other employees. Huggins then requested and was refused the attendance of her steward. Dudero then presented her with the previously described Henderson appraisal and requested that she initial it. Dudero advised her that she must lower her error rate to 7% in two weeks. Huggins asked why the permissible error rate for other employees was 11%. Dudero allegedly replied that Huggins had to reduce her error rate to 7% regardless of the rate applied to others, and said that Huggins used a loud voice so that others could hear her, that she tried to embarrass and scare her, and that she tries to give others the impression that she is the boss and that "I will do what she wants or else".

that adverse action would ensue if she did not. 7/ Each woman took notes. Huggins' notes (Union Exhibit 2) were signed, to verify their accuracy, by Dudero. That Exhibit consists of two pages, obviously copied from the two sides of one piece of paper. On what is labeled page 1, reference is made to the error rate discussion, the unsuccessful request for a steward, and Dudero's manner at the counselling session. She is described as "loud and vicious", and is reported to have threatened Huggins with adverse action and warned her not to discuss the matter with anyone else. On the reverse side are three paragraphs, the first two of which are numbered. Paragraph 1 has to do with attitude, and indicates that Huggins was told she was not a steward during her working time in the area, but the same as any other employee, and that she was not to threaten Dudero because she did not receive a promotion. Paragraph 2 indicates that Huggins was instructed to fill out and sign a form before leaving the unit on Union business. The third, unnumbered, paragraph states that Dudero showed Huggins the Henderson appraisal of August 28 and requested that she sign it to acknowledge she had seen it. Next to this is Dudero's signature and an acknowledgement that "this is correct". The Exhibit was introduced to establish that Dudero had set an error rate for Huggins alone, coupled with a discharge threat, had sworn her to secrecy, and had warned her about her activities as steward and her announced disposition to grieve about the failure to promote her. Dudero asserted that she had acknowledged only the paragraph concerning the Henderson memo. I think its highly likely that the page was signed by her as it is, but I do not believe she was aware of the reverse side. In any event, I in large measure credit Dudero's account of the counselling session, as reflected in Union Exhibits 1 and 6, and her testimony.

7/ Dudero informed the other GS-3 examiners that their error rates had to be held to 7%, and told the GS-5s, at a meeting, that their error rates could not exceed 11%. The meeting was provoked by Dudero's receipt of a memo from management, informing her that the Section's error rate was too high. Dudero showed the memo to her subordinates, and was obviously concerned about measures to reduce the rate. Thus, according to Chief Steward Johnson, Dudero had called a meeting of the entire unit, told them that the error rate was getting out of sight and that something had to be done about it.

Although important to the resolution of this controversy as I view it, I cannot on this record reconstruct the order in which matters were discussed with any sense of certainty. It appears from the notes taken by both that attitude was the first matter brought up. However, from Huggins testimony and from the turn which the discussion took, Huggins apparently came to the meeting thinking the matter of the temporary promotions would be on the table. In fact, Dudero had called the meeting because it was the time for counselling about error rates and because she wished to discuss Huggins' attitude, especially after the incident(s) that morning. When Huggins arrived in the office, she asked about the temporary promotions, and was told that she was not there for any discussion of that, but for a counselling session about her attitude and her error rate. Turning to her attitude first, Dudero told her that when she is working in the unit she is an employee the same as any other employee, and that Dudero expected the same respect from her as from any other subordinate. She told her further that she was not to threaten her with what she would do if she did not receive a promotion or any other desired action. Dudero then shifted to Huggins' error rate, saying that it must be reduced to 7% by March 5. Huggins asked what would happen if she did not do it and was told it could mean adverse action. Huggins then informed Dudero that others in the unit, including permanent employees, had higher error rates, and demanded to know what Dudero intended to do about them. It is clear that Huggins thought she was being singled out, and likely that she said so. Dudero told her that she did not discuss Huggins with other employees and did not intend to discuss them with her. Then, in what Dudero took to be a deliberate misunderstanding of her words, Huggins replied that she could discuss whatever she wished with whomever she wished. In her notes (Union Exh. 1 and 6) Dudero again observed that Huggins does not listen attentively but rather concentrates on her own thoughts, and shows no desire or intention to improve. She also wrote that Huggins "has the worst attitude of any employee I have ever known". Dudero described Huggins' bad attitude during counselling as a rejection of errors brought to her attention as "nit-picking", as not having happened or as consistent with instructions. Huggins also allegedly demonstrated an unwillingness to focus on her problems, but rather turned to the problems of other employees, thus "trying to act as a policeman in the unit" and telling Dudero what to do.

At the end of the session Dudero remarked that she had worked with many people without having all of these problems. Huggins replied that Dudero only thought she was without problems, that she in fact had many of them. Dudero asked what they were, and Huggins told her the only reason for her belief that she had no problems was that she had never had a Union steward working for her before. ^{8/} She then said she was not going "to let (Dudero) get by with anything". At Huggins' request an informal conference with her steward was arranged.

Sometime during the session Dudero presented Huggins with a copy of the Henderson appraisal and instructed her to read it and sign it. After initially refusing to sign, Huggins did so.

10. Complainant attempted to establish animus toward Huggins in her capacity as steward by attributing to Dudero the statement that she would "never have a union steward in her unit", and by showing that she reacted with irritation and hostility to phone calls placed to Huggins as steward. Thus Huggins testified that Dudero made such a statement. Dudero denied having done so, pointing out that she had in fact dealt with stewards before. Both Shirley Wilkes, a Union witness, and Earl Walker had previously served as stewards in that Unit. While Wilkes was apparently inactive, Walker testified that he took up Union matters with Dudero on two occasions. He said that she was fair and objective, and treated him with appropriate respect. Lillian Hyde and Shirley Wilkes allegedly witnessed the statement, but failed to confirm it. In the circumstances, I credit Dudero's denial. On the matter of the telephone, Evelyn York testified that Dudero's tone of voice would change when she called Dudero to the phone. Lillian Hyde testified that she was put off by the rude attitude manifested by Dudero when, after ascertaining that Hyde was calling from home, she asked Hyde whether her phone call to Huggins was on Union business. Dudero testified that she could not recall this incident, but explained that, because both taxpayers and revenue officers called her unit, it was her practice when answering calls placed to Huggins in the latter's absence, to inquire whether the call was on IRS business or Union business. She said that she did so because business callers could often have their inquiries answered in any event, and callers on Union matters could be referred to Johnson. No evidence was presented indicating that she ever inquired into the nature of calls about Union matters. Shirley Wilkes, a former steward, testified that Dudero's voice was raised when anyone got a lot of calls.

11. Huggins also alleged that the defect code, which would enable her to understand the nature of her errors and to take appropriate corrective action, was withheld from her until February. Given my understanding of operations this seems a most implausible claim. 9/ Reference to the code is routinely made when errors are found and returned. Defect codes are routinely issued to new employees, and there certainly existed no reason, early in her employment, to withhold such materials. I find it difficult to understand how she could work for six months unaware of the presence of the code and the need for it, and am persuaded by this and the testimony of Dudero and Stiger that she had the Code. In any event, it was not her high error rate as such, but her alleged attitude when counselled or otherwise instructed about it, which is at the heart of this case.

12. The Union called several witnesses in support of Huggins' view of her experience with Dudero. Thus Mary Myers, a signatory to the request for a meeting about the temporary promotions, expressed the belief that this "grievance" led to Huggins' trouble, and said there was no meeting because, after Huggins went on sick leave, they were too scared to pursue the matter. Evelyn York, also a signatory, testified that no meeting occurred, and said that Dudero seemed distressed by Huggins' Union activity. York was clearly influenced by her belief that Dudero threatened to terminate Huggins for insubordination in response to the latter's presentation of the temporary GS-5 grievance. That incident was in fact provoked by Huggins' failure to fill out the recall form. The recollections of Myers and York are also called into question by their statements that no meeting was held concerning the temporary promotions. Dudero's testimony that she held a meeting on March 1 is supported by Respondent Exhibit 3 and by Shirley Wilkes. I find that the meeting occurred.

13. On the crucial matter of Huggins' attitude when confronted with errors, employees Annie Stiger, Elizabeth Moore and Virginia Hall gave testimony damaging to her cause. Stiger, a GS-5, said that Huggins was at times "reluctant" to acknowledge errors brought to her attention and that her attitude was, in this respect, different from that of other employees. Stiger reported that she was sometimes argumentative when errors were brought back, or couldn't seem to understand her mistake. GS-6 Senior Tax Examiner Virginia Hall was briefly assigned in 1975 to help train Huggins because of her high error rate. She testified that Huggins often would offer excuses when shown her errors, asserting that she had never been told how to do it properly, or that she had missed a training session. Hall summed it up by saying that Huggins seemed to have the attitude, when shown errors, that you were picking on her and trying to hurt her. She also noted that Huggins had a tendency to repeat errors. Tax Examiner Elizabeth Moore trained Huggins in the beginning. She testified that Huggins was different from the other trainees in that she did not accept errors but offered excuses. Moore further testified that, in 1976, Huggins continued her practice of claiming that someone else told her to do her assignment the wrong way (to the point where Moore instructed her not to ask anyone else), or that she had never been told how to do it correctly. Moore said that Huggins was more hostile in such situations in 1976, and gave the impression that her mind was on something else. I am persuaded that, although Huggins was in many respects an eager and cooperative employee, anxious to do well, she was also a difficult employee because of an inability to acknowledge responsibility for errors. I conclude she was defensive about them, and focused her attention on excuses rather than on the effort to learn and apply correct procedures.

9/ Annie B. Stiger, a GS-5 who assisted in training Huggins, testified that she did have a defect code list. [continued on next page]

14. Dudero testified that she began her effort to terminate Huggins on February 20, the day after the counseling session which she had memorialized in Respondent Exhibit 6, in which she concluded that Huggins had the "worst attitude of any employee (she had) ever known". On March 16 the Center notified Huggins by letter that "it is necessary to terminate you...for disqualification during your probationary period for your uncooperative attitude toward your manager in your work. This attitude has been demonstrated on numerous occasions both in response to your manager's directions and counselling, and in regard to your work performance". The termination was to be effective on March 26, thus violating Article 30, Section 1(B) of the Multi-Center Agreement, which requires 15 days notice of termination. 10/

That notice was received by Huggins on March 19, the day before she left the hospital after an emergency cancer operation. Pursuant to Section 1(c) of MCA Article 30, through steward Johnson, Huggins submitted a written reply and requested opportunity to make an oral reply and postponement of her termination date. She also requested an extension of time in which to make her oral reply and the right to be represented by counsel. G.W. Grabo, Assistant Director of the Center denied these requests. He took the position that granting Huggins an additional 15 days pursuant to Article 30 would not have altered her appeal rights in any way, and that she had no right to counsel. The oral reply meeting took place on Friday, March 26. Huggins had in the meantime submitted her written reply, in which she asserted her Union activities had caused her termination, and Grabo had interviewed Dudero, Mr. Bret Creeze, the Chief of the Section and Mr. Bill McGoldrick, a Unit Supervisor in the same Section. Grabo heard Huggins' oral reply, and promised to conduct an investigation before making a decision. He made it clear that the "tone" of Huggins relationship with Dudero, and the question of who caused the bad feeling would be decisive to him. He then interviewed Virginia Hall and Elizabeth Moore. He testified that they confirmed Dudero's description of Huggins as unreceptive to criticism, antagonistic, and as appearing to "have it in" for supervisors. Satisfied that the problem was with Huggins' attitude toward supervision, Grabo promptly told the Labor Relations Section to advise Huggins that the termination decision would not be changed so as to avoid her reporting for work on Monday. Upon returning to her home, Huggins found a Form 50 Notification of Personnel Action (Joint Exhibit 1(c)), dated March 22, informing her that she was "terminated after receiving written notification of decision to terminate".... Complainant contends that this exposes the oral reply session as a charade, the final decision to terminate having preceded the discussion and the additional investigation. Respondent asserts that it altered nothing because Grabo retained the authority to modify or rescind the termination action. Thus the Form 50 Notification was confirmation of the decision to terminate, and Huggins' separation could not have been accomplished without it. I read the contract as contemplating service of am persuaded it is of no significance. Respondent's Exhibit 2 lists 14 probationary employees terminated during the 5 months preceding Huggins discharge. Only one received the required 15 days notice. None were shown to be the Union officials.

the papers reflecting a decision to terminate before the oral reply session occurs. I therefore reject the Union's argument that a purposeless meeting took place which fortifies its claim that Huggins was terminated for union reasons.

15. Assistant Director Grabo testified that, although Huggins' activities as steward played no role in the decision to terminate her he received "feedback" from managers other than Dudero to the effect that she used her union position against her supervisor. Thus he received the impression that she took advantage of her Union position to cause problems where there were none, to carry forward a personal vendetta under the guise of Union business, and to make Dudero look bad as a supervisor by aggravating and embarrassing her. In its Response to the Complaint, IRS said that "Huggins attempted to use her union position as an offensive weapon against management to allow her to ignore or thumb her nose at her supervisor when her supervisor attempted to counsel her. The fact that Huggins was a union steward did not exempt her from complying with the standards expected by management from all its employees. Huggins attempted to exempt herself and was terminated". Complainant argues that these matters constitute admissions that Huggins' union activities and her "attitude" as steward, in fact played a role in, and therefore tainted, the decision to discharge her.

16. While Huggins was a candidate for Chief Steward at the time of her removal, there is no evidence that management was aware of this fact until thereafter. Likewise, there is no evidence that Dudero was aware that Huggins had cancer when she decided that termination was the appropriate course of action. The evidence is to the contrary. I address this point because the Complainant strongly suggests that management heartlessly ignored the possibility that Huggins' actions might have been caused by emotional strain, and might have been excused or remedied in a less harsh way. Huggins in fact learned of the condition very shortly before the operation. Finally, there is no evidence of a general union animus on management's part at the Memphis Center.

Conclusions

The reference to Huggins' union activities in Supervisor Henderson's August 28, 1975, performance appraisal is clearly violative of 19(a)(1), notwithstanding my finding of its innocent purpose, unless the charge filed on April 14, 1976 is considered untimely because more than six months had passed. The Federal Labor Relations Council (FLRC) has held that timeliness is measured from the date of the incident, rather than from the date a complainant gains knowledge of the incident, absent fraudulent concealment or other unusual circumstance. In Federal Aviation Administration, Western Region, San Francisco, California, FLRC No. 74A-27 (Report No. 55, 1974), the Council sustained the Assistant Secretary's dismissal, as untimely, of a complaint filed more than nine months after the activity sent written communications concerning complainant's union activities to the Civil Service Commission. In rejecting complainant's contention that the date of discovery should govern, the Council noted that he made "no showing, for example, that the written communications were retained in..(his)..personnel file, and thereby constituted a continuing unfair labor practice... that might warrant the granting of a "waiver" of the timeliness requirement." I would make on this record no finding that Respondent fraudulently concealed or otherwise willfully withheld the document. Rather I find it was simply prepared after Huggins was furloughed, and was forgotten until the counselling session revealed its presence and the obligation to show it to her. While the Council in FAA did not decide that retaining such materials in a file constitutes a continuing violation, it strongly suggests that such is the case. In Western Division of Naval Facilities Engineering Command, San Bruno, California, A/SLMR No. 264, the Assistant Secretary held such a remark in an appraisal form constituted a continuing violation where it was retained on file and was accessible into the period reached by the complaint. As the instant evaluation was retained in the file until at least February 19, 1975, less than two months prior to the charge, it follows that an actionable violation of Section 19(a)(1) occurred.

Resolution of the Section 19(a)(2) issue is difficult to articulate, notwithstanding my conviction that Huggins' Union activities did not lead to her termination, because her role as steward and her performance as an employee were almost simultaneously enmeshed in a developing personality conflict, with the hostility spilling over in both directions. The ultimate question is whether Huggins' stewardship played any part in the decision to terminate her, and it cannot fairly be said, on this record, that the growing conflict is entirely separable from her Union activities. Thus Huggins clearly irritated Duderio by the manner in which she demanding a meeting about the temporary GS-5 promotions, as well as her failure to name the complaining employees. She irritated her even more when she brought the subject up again at the counselling session. Duderio was annoyed by Huggins "threat" to file a grievance over the refusal to promote her, although it is clear that Duderio was also annoyed by Huggins' assertion that she would not put up with the kind of treatment she had received the year before. Finally, Duderio was upset by what she took to be Huggins' posturing as a "policeman" in the unit, attempting to indicate that she, rather than Duderio, ran the unit.

On the other hand, it is obvious that Huggins, as an employee, severely tested Duderio's patience on many occasions. She did so particularly with her demonstrated inability to accept criticism constructively, by her refusal to fill out the furlough-recall card without first asking many questions, and by her taking notes rather than listening to what Duderio had to say. It is equally obvious that, at a time when Duderio was quite concerned about her unit's error rate, she became very angry with Huggins' reaction to the effort to counsel her. Huggins was unable to separate her role as an employee from her role as a steward, and insisted on focusing on employee problems when Duderio attempted to address her problems as an employee. Duderio reminded her that, as an employee, she was no different from other employees, and that the purpose of the counselling session was to seek improvement in her error rate rather than to talk about other employees. Huggins nevertheless wound up the session by telling Duderio that she had lots of problems as a manager, was ignorant of them only because she had never before had a steward, and that she (Huggins) would not let her get away with anything. She also accused Duderio of attempting to swear her to secrecy about the meeting. The upshot was Duderio's conclusion that Huggins was the worst employee she had ever had. This session, and the incident about the card, precipitated the decision to terminate. Because there was clearly much misunderstanding and considerable ambiguity in their communications, it is important to put these meetings in perspective.

That general perspective begins with two observations: that there is no credible evidence of Union animus, as such, on the part of the activity or Duderio, and that Huggins was a marginal employee in her probationary year. Thus, there is no suggestion that the Memphis Center's management was ill-disposed toward Union adherents or activists. On the contrary, it appears that a cooperative relationship existed with the Union, and it was established that previous stewards in Duderero's unit were treated with courtesy and respect. On the matter of Huggins' performance, I find she was a marginal employee because she was on the bottom of the recall list. The earlier, relatively favorable ratings by Duderero are accorded little weight because I credit her testimony that she was aware of Huggins' need for employment and attempted to help her in the hope she would improve. The other evidence indicates a high error rate. It also very significantly indicates a developing personality conflict over a month before Huggins was appointed steward. That conflict featured Huggins' assertion, in her informal grievance of June, 1975, that Duderero had deliberately misled her about the rating she would receive. This display of attitude, the central issue here, postdated the evaluations. I am not persuaded by the Williams and Henderson evaluations that Huggins was a superior employee. She worked briefly for them, on different work. As Duderero testified, she was an eager employee, anxious to please. The real difficulty centered on her reaction to criticism. Neither Williams nor Henderson had a sufficiently long association with her to test that factor. The testimony of Stiger, Moore and Hall, who worked with her over a long period of time goes directly to this point, and describes an employee whose reaction to errors brought to her attention was negative and unproductive.

Thus the personality conflict had erupted before Huggins was designated steward. In addition, on the basis of appraisals which also antedated any Union activity, she was at the bottom of the furlough and recall list. Upon her return to work in February 1976, and again before any significant Union activity (during her very first week) a dispute developed over her eligibility for insurance. Huggins thought Duderero was wrong about the duration of her 1975 employment and was obviously concerned and suspicious about Duderero's explanation that she could not meet the requirement that there be a reasonable likelihood that she would work for six months in 1976. While Duderero's caution seems altogether sensible, and devoid of any improper motive, it is apparent that both her decision and Huggins' persistence in re-raising the matter contributed significantly to their deteriorating relationship.

On February 10 Huggins approached Duderero about the GS-5 promotions. As noted, Duderero was upset at Huggins' manner, feeling that she was being "told" to call a meeting, and at her refusal to name the complaining employees, which she regarded as a violation of the agreed-upon procedures for informal grievances. While refusing to take prompt action, because the promotions had not taken place, Duderero did, after receiving a signed request from the employees, hold a meeting to explain the matter. On February 19 Huggins again asked about her health insurance and about a promotion, and another "personal" incident occurred which contributed to their growing alienation. Later that same day Huggins, by refusing to promptly fill out the furlough-recall card and by ignoring Duderero's request that she, in effect, stop writing notes and start listening to her supervisor, so provoked Duderero that she spoke of the possibility of termination for insubordination. Having been frustrated in her intention to counsel Huggins about her error rate by this development, Duderero called her later in the day to the Section Chief's office for more private counselling about her attitude and her error rate. She concluded, in evident exasperation, that Huggins was the most difficult subordinate she had ever attempted to supervise. That session and the earlier session that day, even as recounted by Huggins reveal an employee who sorely tested her supervisor with respect to her role as an employee. To repeat, she resisted the filling out of a simple form as unnecessary, she persisted in taking notes when her supervisor directed her to listen, and she kept focusing on the problems of the unit when her supervisor tried to deal with her shortcomings as an employee. All of this followed Virginia Hall's report that she was experiencing much difficulty in trying to deal with Huggins' errors, and occurred at a time when upper management had indicated its displeasure with the error rate in Duderero's unit. Concerned with securing prompt improvement, Duderero was met with Huggins' previously demonstrated attitude that she was being picked upon and treated differently from others, and a generally defensive reaction which precluded a useful discussion of her own shortcomings. The course of the discussion shows that Huggins, rather than acknowledging her errors and seeking guidance for purposes of improvement, sought to talk about everyone else. She persisted in doing so even after being reminded that she was there as an employee, and that the discussion was to be confined to her performance as an employee. I am persuaded that she went on to misinterpret Duderero's statement that Duderero did not discuss her problems with other counselled employees and would not discuss their problems with her as a command that she (Huggins) could not discuss the session with anyone else. Duderero understandably concluded that it was not possible to work constructively with her, and that she should be separated during her probationary year. It is clear that she was totally exasperated by Huggins' attitude.

I dwell on this at length because, as noted above, a discharge is tainted if motivated in any measure by a desire to be rid of a Union activist. I cannot conclude on this record that Dudero had any such purpose. Huggins' activity had consisted of presentation of the request for a meeting about the temporary promotions and a statement that she would not let Dudero get away with anything. The reference to a policeman in the unit was tied to Huggins' efforts, during the counseling session, to discuss the performance of other employees instead of focusing on her own. I find that Dudero was, indeed, annoyed by the manner in which Huggins presented the grievance, and by her persistence in bringing it up at an inappropriate time. I have also found that Dudero was far more greatly annoyed by Huggins' conduct, as an employee, at the meetings on February 19. Given the attitude displayed by Huggins, the marginal quality of her work, and the serious personality conflict which had arisen, abundant reason existed for her separation. Given also the fact that Dudero had peacefully coexisted with previous stewards, and had in no way indicated hostility toward the Union, I am not persuaded that her decision to recommend discharge was affected by the fact that Huggins was the steward, or brought an informal grievance to her attention, or threatened to keep her in line. While Dudero may have resented the manner in which these things were done, or the inappropriate use of a counselling session for such purposes, there exists no convincing evidence that she urged Huggins' separation on such grounds or even that she would be disposed to do so. I therefore recommend that the Section 19(a)(2) allegations be dismissed.

Recommendations

1. That the Section 19(a)(2) allegations of the complaint be dismissed.
2. That Respondent be found to have engaged in conduct proscribed by Section 19(a)(1), based on its supervisor's having commented about Huggins' union activity in a performance evaluation memorandum, and that, accordingly, the following Order, designed to effectuate the policies of Executive Order 11491, be adopted.

Recommended Order

Pursuant to Section 6(b) of Executive Order 11491, as amended, and Section 203.25(a) of the Regulations, the Assistant Secretary of Labor for Labor-Management Relations hereby orders that the Internal Revenue Service, Memphis Service Center, shall:

1. Cease and desist from:
 - (a) Interfering with, restraining, or coercing Audrea Huggins, or any other employee, by inserting any remark or comment in any appraisal regarding the union activities of Audrea Huggins or any other employee.
 - (b) In any like or related manner interfering with, restraining, or coercing its employees in the exercise of rights assured by Section 1(a) of Executive Order 11491, as amended.
2. Take the following affirmative action in order to effectuate the purposes and provisions of the Order:
 - (a) Require and instruct its supervisors not to insert any remark or comment in any appraisal regarding the union activities of Audrea Huggins or any of its employees.
 - (b) Expunge any reference to union activities made by the Respondent, if such reference exists, from the personnel file of Audrea Huggins or any other of its employees.
 - (c) Post at its facility at the Memphis Service Center, copies of the attached notice marked "Appendix" on forms to be furnished by the Assistant Secretary of Labor for Labor-Management Relations. Upon receipt of such forms they shall be signed by the Center Director and shall be posted and maintained by him for 60 consecutive days thereafter, in conspicuous places, including all bulleting boards and other places where notices to employees are customarily posted. The Center Director shall take reasonable steps to insure that such notices are not altered, defaced, or covered by any other material.
 - (d) Pursuant to Section 203.26 of the Regulations, notify the Assistant Secretary in writing within 20 days from the date of this Order as to what steps have been taken to comply herewith.

PURSUANT TO SECTION 6 OF EXECUTIVE ORDER 11491, AS AMENDED

U.S. MERCHANT MARINE ACADEMY, SHIP'S SERVICE ORGANIZATION
A/SLMR No. 990

This case involved a petition for clarification of unit filed by the American Federation of Government Employees, AFL-CIO, Local 2116 (AFGE) seeking to determine the status of three employee classifications. The Activity contended that one of the employees was a supervisor within the meaning of Section 2(c) of the Order, and that the remaining two employees were confidential employees.

The Assistant Secretary found that the employee classified as Associate Buyer-Secretary was not a supervisor within the meaning of Section 2(c) of the Order, that the Secretary to the General Manager of the Activity was a confidential employee, and that the Bookkeeper of the Activity was not a confidential employee.

Accordingly, the Assistant Secretary clarified the unit consistent with his determinations.

DECISION AND ORDER CLARIFYING UNIT

Upon a petition duly filed under Section 6 of Executive Order 11491, as amended, a hearing was held before Hearing Officer Herschell Chanin. The Hearing Officer's rulings made at the hearing are free from prejudicial error and are hereby affirmed.

Upon the entire record in this case, including a brief submitted by the Activity, the Assistant Secretary finds:

The Petitioner, the American Federation of Government Employees, AFL-CIO, Local 2116, hereinafter called AFGE, was certified on November 16, 1976, as the exclusive representative of a unit of all nonsupervisory employees assigned to Ship's Service Organization of the U.S. Merchant Marine Academy, Kings Point, N.Y., hereinafter called the Activity. In this proceeding, the AFGE seeks to clarify the status of the following three employees who the Activity contends should be excluded from the unit: Celia Rubenstein, Associate Buyer-Secretary; Marion Conroy, the Secretary to the General Manager of Ship's Service; and Lorraine Fishman, Bookkeeper of Ship's Service. The Activity contends that Rubenstein is a supervisor and that Conroy and Fishman are confidential employees.

The mission of the Merchant Marine Academy is to train individuals to serve as officers in the American Merchant Marine. The mission of the Activity (which is a nonappropriated fund activity) is to provide uniforms, textbooks and other government goods to the Midshipmen of the Academy. The Academy is one of five Federal academies operating under the Maritime Administration, which is part of the U.S. Department of Commerce. Organizationally the Activity is divided into the following stores: Cleveland Store, Uniform and Varsity Shop, Warehouse and the Bookstore.

With respect to the particular employees whose status is in dispute herein, I make the following findings and conclusions:

Celia Rubenstein, Associate Buyer-Secretary

The record reveals that Rubenstein works in the Cleveland Store along with three other employees to whom she makes routine work assignments within well established guidelines. In this connection, she realigns personnel in the store from one work area to another and trains new employees. However, the evidence establishes that she has not hired, fired, transferred, suspended, laid off, recalled, promoted, discharged, rewarded or disciplined employees, adjusted their grievances, or recommended such actions. Although it is contended that Rubenstein has the authority to review grievances it is acknowledged that her review of them would not necessarily be effective. Rubenstein reports to Mr. Yanovsky, the General Manager of the Activity, but does not attend the monthly staff meetings held by Yanovsky and Mr. Lewis, the head of Administrative Services and Procurement of the Academy.

Under the foregoing circumstances, I find that the evidence is insufficient to establish that Rubenstein is a supervisor within the meaning of Section 2(c) of the Order. Thus, as noted above, her assignment of work is routine in nature, within established guidelines, and does not require the use of independent judgment. Further, the evidence does not establish that she adjusts grievances or effectively recommends adjustment. Accordingly, I shall include the position of Associate Buyer-Secretary in the exclusively recognized unit.

Marion Conroy, Secretary to the General Manager of Ship's Service

The record reveals that Conroy is the personal secretary of Mr. Yanovsky, who is responsible for the supervision of the entire complement of employees in all four of the Activity's stores and, thus, is in charge of all the employees in the bargaining unit. In this capacity, he is involved in formulating and effectuating labor relations and management policy with respect to the Activity. In this regard, the parties stipulated that during the course of the past contract negotiating sessions Yanovsky actively participated on behalf of management and that he has a responsibility for effectuating labor-management policy in the Activity.

The evidence establishes that Conroy performs a variety of secretarial duties for Yanovsky, including acting as his principal secretary. In this regard, she is responsible for, and has access to, Yanovsky's personal files and employee personnel records. She prepares and types all of his correspondence, reviews all of his incoming mail, and has access to, and has typed, letters of promotion, discipline, removal and Yanovsky's personal notes on the aforementioned contract negotiations.

Under these circumstances, I find that Conroy acts in a confidential capacity to an official who is involved in the formulation and effectuation of the Activity's labor-management policies. Accordingly, I shall order that the Secretary to the General Manager of the Ship's Service be excluded from the exclusively recognized unit as a confidential employee.

Lorraine Fishman, Bookkeeper of Ship's Service

Lorraine Fishman is employed as the Activity's bookkeeper. She prepares financial surveys and reviews, prepares and maintains all Activity bookkeeping records. However, her access to personnel records is limited in that she only refers to them in connection with questions concerning financial matters. Although in her capacity as bookkeeper she has attended staff meetings concerning "financial" matters, Ms. Fishman testified that she has never attended staff meetings involving personnel matters. Her recommendations regarding the financial dispositions of budgets and surveys are subject to review and the record reflects that her recommendations on "buy-back" of sick leave and the duration of the annual plant-wide shut down were both rejected by the Activity.

Based on the foregoing, I find that the record fails to establish that Fishman serves in a confidential capacity to the officials who formulate and effectuate labor relations policies. Accordingly, I find that the Bookkeeper of the Ship's Service is not a confidential employee and should be included in the exclusively recognized unit.

ORDER

IT IS HEREBY ORDERED that the unit sought to be clarified herein, in which exclusive recognition was granted to the American Federation of Government Employees, AFL-CIO, Local 2116 on November 16, 1976, be, and it hereby is, clarified by including in said unit the Associate Buyer-Secretary and the Bookkeeper of Ship's Service, and by excluding from said unit the Secretary to the General Manager of Ship's Service.

SUMMARY OF DECISION AND DIRECTION OF ELECTION
OF THE ASSISTANT SECRETARY
PURSUANT TO SECTION 6 OF EXECUTIVE ORDER 11491, AS AMENDED

U.S. CUSTOMS SERVICE,
WASHINGTON, D.C.
A/SLMR No. 991

This case involved a petition for consolidation of units filed by the National Treasury Employees Union (NTEU) on behalf of itself and/or its constituent local chapters seeking to consolidate 12 units for which the NTEU and/or its constituent local chapters are the current exclusive representatives. Through the subject petition, the NTEU sought to establish a consolidated unit consisting of all professional and non-professional employees of the Customs Service in its national headquarters and offices of the Regional Commissioners, who are currently represented exclusively by the NTEU and/or its constituent local chapters. The Customs Service contended, essentially, that the NTEU was without standing to file the instant petition on behalf of one of its exclusively recognized local chapters as, among other things, the Executive Order requires that consolidation may be sought only by an exclusive representative and the NTEU had not, as a minimum, sought authorization from its exclusively recognized local chapter to file the present petition. Furthermore, the Customs Service asserted that the proposed consolidated unit was not appropriate because it did not meet the criteria established by Section 10(b) of the Order.

The Assistant Secretary found that the NTEU had standing to file the instant petition on behalf of its exclusively recognized local chapter. With respect to the appropriateness of the proposed unit, he noted that consistent with the Federal Labor Relations Council's clear policy guidelines on consolidation of units there has been established, in effect, a presumption favoring the appropriateness of proposed consolidated units. Given these policy guidelines, and based on the facts presented, he found that the consolidated unit petitioned for by the NTEU was appropriate for the purpose of exclusive recognition under the Order. Thus, he found that the employees in the unit sought share a common mission, common overall supervision, essentially similar work classifications and working conditions, and similar labor relations and personnel policies and practices. Under these circumstances, he concluded that the employees in the petitioned for consolidated unit share a clear and identifiable community of interest. The Assistant Secretary also found, in the light of the Federal Labor Relations Council's 1975 Report and Recommendations, that the record demonstrated that the proposed unit consolidation would promote effective dealings and efficiency of agency operations.

Accordingly, he directed an election in the consolidated unit found appropriate.

Case No. 22-06810(UC)

NATIONAL TREASURY EMPLOYEES
UNION

Petitioner

DECISION AND DIRECTION OF ELECTION

Upon a petition duly filed under Section 6 of Executive Order 11491, as amended, a hearing was held before Hearing Officer Jonathan Kaufman. The Hearing Officer's rulings made at the hearing are free from prejudicial error and are hereby affirmed. 1/

The Petitioner, National Treasury Employees Union, hereinafter called NTEU, on behalf of itself and/or its constituent local chapters, seeks to consolidate 12 units for which the NTEU and/or its constituent local chapters are the current exclusive representatives. 2/ The petition, as amended at the hearing, includes all nonprofessional employees assigned to the Headquarters Office of the U.S. Customs Service with the exception of the Office of Investigations and the Office of Internal Affairs, all professional employees of the Office of Regulations and Rulings, all nonprofessional employees in Regions I, II, III, IV, V, VI, VII, VIII, and IX, and all professional employees in Regions II and IX.

Specifically excluded are all professional employees in Regions I, III, IV, V, VI, VII, and VIII, management officials, supervisors, confidential employees, employees engaged in Federal personnel work in other than a purely clerical capacity, guards and all headquarters and field elements of the Office of Investigations and the Office of Internal Affairs. 3/

The NTEU is the exclusive representative of the Activity's employees in field and Headquarters offices in 12 exclusively recognized bargaining units. At present only 2 of its 12 units are covered by negotiated agreements, a unit of professional employees in the Office of Regulations and Rulings and a unit of nonprofessional employees in Region VII. The remaining units are now in the process of negotiating new agreements.

The Activity contends that the NTEU was without standing to file the instant petition on behalf of one of its exclusively recognized local chapters, NTEU Local 101, and that such chapter must jointly participate in, or give its authorization to, the filing of a unit consolidation petition which encompasses that chapter's certified unit. The Activity further asserts that the proposed consolidated unit is not appropriate because it does not meet the criteria established by Section 10(b) of the Order since the proposed unit is directly contrary to its existing organizational structure, lines of delegated authority, and the employees involved do not share a community of interest.

The mission of the Customs Service, which is an organizational component of the Department of the Treasury, is to assess, collect and protect revenues from import duties and taxes and to control carriers, persons, and articles entering into or departing from the United States in accordance with customs laws. In addition, the Customs Service enforces and/or administers over 400 State and Federal laws relative to international traffic and trade.

The Customs Service operates under the direction of the Commissioner of Customs who is appointed by the Secretary of the Treasury. The Secretary has delegated to the Commissioner of Customs his rights, powers and duties under the Tariff Act of 1930, as amended, as well as

1/ At the hearing, the Hearing Officer received into evidence, over the objection of the U.S. Customs Service, herein also called the Activity, Petitioner's Exhibit 3, an internal document containing the views of various Activity management officials concerning the propriety of a possible consolidation of units. As, in my view, such document is irrelevant and immaterial to the present proceeding, it was not considered in reaching the determination herein. Under these circumstances, I find that the Activity was not prejudiced by the ruling of the Hearing Officer.

2/ NTEU Chapter 101 is the exclusive representative for a unit of professional employees in the Activity's Office of Regulations and Rulings. The national NTEU is the exclusive representative for all other units herein.

3/ Although the transcript is unclear as to whether or not all professional employees of Region II were intended to be included in the petition, the record is clear that the parties understood and intended the petition, as amended at the hearing, to include all units currently represented by the NTEU, including all units in which elections or appeals involving the NTEU were pending, should the NTEU prove successful. Accordingly, as the NTEU, since the filing of the instant petition, has been certified as the exclusive representative of all professional and nonprofessional employees in Region II, and all nonprofessional employees in the Puerto Rico District Office, Region IV, these units will be included among those sought to be consolidated in the subject petition.

other laws, with express exceptions. The Assistant Secretary of the Treasury (Enforcement, Operations, and Tariff Affairs) has general supervisory authority over the Customs Service. The Assistant Secretary of the Treasury for Administration exercises direction over all general administrative functions, such as personnel, organization, and audit, etc. within the Treasury Department. The Chief Counsel of the Customs Service is under the general supervision of the General Counsel of the Treasury and is responsible to one of the Treasury Department's five Assistant General Counsels.

The Commissioner of Customs may prescribe certain internal regulations for the guidance of Customs Officers which are not inconsistent with regulations issued by the Treasury Department, and he may waive requirements of Customs Regulations in accordance with law. The Commissioner may also further delegate his rights and powers to his subordinates. The Commissioner is responsible for the implementation and administration of all Presidential directives and legislation relating to Customs. He also promulgates rules and regulations with the approval of the Secretary of the Treasury.

The Activity has two primary organizational levels, a Headquarters Office, located in Washington, D.C., and nine Customs regions located throughout the United States. The Headquarters Office consists of the Office of the Commissioner, the Deputy Commissioner and seven major organizational subdivisions, six of which are headed by an Assistant Commissioner who reports to the Deputy Commissioner. These six subdivisions are the Office of Administration, Office of Operations, Office of Investigations, Office of Regulations and Rulings, Office of Internal Affairs, and Office of Enforcement Support. The seventh office is the Office of the Chief Counsel.

The record reveals that the day-to-day operations of the Activity's Headquarters Office are essentially directed by the Deputy Commissioner and the various Assistant Commissioners. The Headquarters Office develops nation-wide policies and programs for the administration of Customs laws and provides overall direction for the Activity's field organization. The Assistant Commissioner (Administration) provides executive direction and leadership in the development, implementation, and evaluation of service-wide programs, policies, and procedures pertaining to, among other things, personnel management, position classification, training and career development, labor and employee relations, employment, equal employment opportunity (EEO), and headquarters personnel matters. He also exercises line supervision over all Headquarters Office of Administration personnel and activities. Working under the direction of the Assistant Commissioner, the Headquarters Office provides functional supervision and guidance to regional and other field personnel in all administrative matters. There are eight Divisions in the Office of Administration, among which is the Personnel Management Division. ^{4/}

^{4/} The other divisions include the Management Analysis Division, Logistics Management Division, Accounting Division, Budget and Planning Division, Equal Opportunity Division, Public Information Division, and Automatic Data Processing Division.

The Personnel Management Division is divided into the following six branches:

(1) The Position Classification and Pay Programs Branch is responsible for the direction of classification and wage administration in the Activity which includes the development of policies regarding allowances and differentials, classification standards and guides, hours of work, and leave administration.

(2) The Labor-Management Relations Program Branch is responsible for developing, planning, coordinating, budgeting and evaluating the labor-management relations program of the Activity. This office provides technical advice to management officials throughout the Service, interprets Executive Order 11491, as amended, regulations, and case law, and recommends Activity-wide policy in this connection. Its areas of responsibility include contract negotiations and administration, unfair labor practice cases, negotiated grievances and arbitration, mediation and impasse resolution, matters before the Federal Labor Relations Council, national consultations, unit determinations, matters before the Department of Labor, and coordination with the Department of the Treasury.

(3) The Employee Relations Program Branch is responsible for the direction, scope, and effectiveness of the employee relations and incentive awards functions of the Customs Service including, in part, agency adverse actions, grievance systems and appeals, EEO cases, disciplinary actions, incentive awards, insurance and health benefits, and recreation.

(4) The Staffing Programs Branch is responsible for the direction, scope and effectiveness of the staffing function in the Customs Service including, among other matters, appointments, details, overseas employment, probationary periods, employee rotation, skills inventory, EEO coordination, the merit promotion system, performance appraisals, evaluations, processing personnel actions, qualification standards, recruitment, reduction-in-force and outplacement, separations, special emphasis employment programs, special pay rate determinations and supervisory selection techniques.

(5) The Headquarters Personnel Branch develops, recommends and administers the Headquarters personnel management program including, in part, accessions, the merit promotion system, classification, personnel records, personnel actions, qualification standards, recruitment, labor and employee relations, reduction-in-force, separations, special pay scales, status of persons, special employment programs, and training.

(6) The Training and Career Development Branch is responsible for the development, implementation and evaluation of the training functions in Customs including the development and administration of a labor-management relations training program.

The Assistant Commissioner (Operations) provides executive direction and leadership over the development, implementation, evaluation and management of Activity-wide programs, policies and procedures pertaining to the major operational functions of the Activity which include, among other functions, the administration of a comprehensive program planning and budgeting system for the Office of Operations, including regional and district operations. The Assistant Commissioner (Operations) exercises line supervision over all Headquarters Office of Operations personnel and activities. Working under the direction of the Assistant Commissioner and his Deputy, the Headquarters Office provides functional supervision over regional and other field personnel in all operational matters.

There are four types of regional offices in each region: the Office of the Regional Director of Investigations, the Office of the Regional Director of Internal Affairs, the Office of the Regional Counsel, and the Office of the Regional Commissioner. ^{5/} The Offices of the Regional Commissioners, with the exception of Region II, are divided into Districts, Ports and Stations. Whereas headquarters personnel located at headquarters are under the immediate direction of the appropriate Assistant Commissioner, the field personnel, who implement the programs and policies of the Customs Service in the program areas under the jurisdiction of the National Headquarters Offices of Administration, Operations, Regulations and Rulings, and Enforcement Support, are assigned in each region to the Office of the Regional Commissioner. Each Regional Commissioner is directly responsible to the Deputy Commissioner. It appears that exclusively recognized units of regional personnel sought to be consolidated by the instant petition include only those employees assigned to, and under the direction of, the various Regional Commissioners in the nine regional offices.

The Regional Commissioners are responsible for the day-to-day operations of the Customs Service in their respective programmatic areas and for the implementation of the policies, programs and procedures established by the National Headquarters. They supervise the operations of the District Offices, Ports and Stations within their regions. The number of employees in the various regional units sought to be consolidated herein ranges from approximately 200 to approximately 2,800.

Whereas the majority of unit employees in the regional offices are operational employees, i.e. inspectors, import specialists, customs patrol officers, and agents, with the remaining employees being primarily clerical or administrative, most Headquarters Office nonprofessional employees are clerical or administrative employees. Fifty to sixty percent of all bargaining unit positions receive training at the Customs Service Academy in Washington, D.C. In addition, training material prepared in the regions is often used nation-wide. The record reveals that some employees in various regions are called upon to conduct intensive enforcement efforts across regional lines based on plans developed in the Headquarters Office, and that other employees are detailed from one region to another to assist in handling seasonal variations of workload and are permanently reassigned between regions and between regions and headquarters. Because the nine Customs Regions encompass the United States, Puerto Rico, and the Virgin Islands, there are significant differences in climate and workload between the different regions. However, the record reveals that regional employees, especially in contiguous regions, share many similarities in duties, climate and working conditions.

In 1963, a Treasury/Customs Survey Group was commissioned to conduct an evaluation of the mission, organization, and management of the Activity and to make recommendations for improvement. The Survey Group reported, the following major findings: (1) Too many independent field activities were reporting directly to the Headquarters in Washington, D.C. to permit consistent and efficient direction; (2) there was a lack of unity of command over Customs work performed in a given port, district or geographic region, creating an absence of uniformity among areas with common problems; (3) there was a need for a better distribution of workload and responsibility; and (4) a different organizational structure was needed, with unity of command at all levels to assure tight management of all Customs responsibilities.

As a result of this report both the Activity's Headquarters Office and its field operations were restructured and consolidated, with regions being established to furnish greater operational and administrative unity to field operations. This reorganization was substantially completed in July 1966, and is reflected in the foregoing description of the Activity's organizational structure.

From the record, it now appears that line authority in the Customs Service for the field flows from the Commissioner and Deputy Commissioner directly to the Regional Commissioner, District Director, Area Director and Port Director. Assistant Commissioners do not have line authority over Regional Commissioners, but do exercise functional authority or supervision over regional and other field personnel regarding programs within their specialized areas. Functional officials, i.e. Assistant Commissioners, enunciate national policy and issue instructions, regulations and advice for the guidance of operations officials. While only line officials can take corrective action, a Customs official receiving instructions issued by either line or functional officials is nevertheless responsible for seeing that implementing instructions necessary to effective execution are issued and that all necessary steps are taken to determine that the instructions are carried out. Due to the number and complexity of the instructions which must flow from the Headquarters Office to the field offices, line officials in Headquarters review and sign only the most important of these instructions. Functional officials are authorized not only to formulate (using their specialized knowledge and skills) but also to issue all the rest of the necessary instructions. 6/

The involvement of Department of the Treasury and Customs Headquarters in Custom's regional matters is demonstrated further by the location of approval authority for organizational changes in the Customs regions. The Assistant Secretary of the Treasury (Enforcement, Operations, and Tariff Affairs) must approve changes in the location of a regional or district headquarters, the establishing or abolishing of Ports of Entry and Customs stations, and the establishing, abolishing, or changing of boundaries of Customs regions or districts. Field changes involving geographic adjustments also normally receive advance approval from the Assistant Secretary of the Treasury for Administration. The Commissioner of Customs must approve any action which would result in the changing of functions, or the establishment or abolishment of regional headquarters offices and divisions, headquarters offices and divisions, district divisions, Office of Regional Director (Internal Affairs), and Internal Affairs field division, Service Headquarters branches, and Office of Investigations regional, district, and resident agent offices. The Commissioner of Customs has delegated to Regional Commissioners the authority to approve changing the functions of, or the establishment or abolishment of, branches, sections, and units in regions and districts over which they have line authority, provided that no organizational change conflicts with an organizational structure prescribed by higher authority. Assistant Commissioners have authority to change the functions of, or to approve the establishment or abolishing of, sections in units, both in Headquarters and the field over which they have line authority. Regional Commissioners and Assistant Commissioners, in the exercise of their line authority within certain limitations, have been delegated authority by the Commissioner to establish or abolish temporary and permanent positions over which they have line authority.

The record discloses that the Commissioner of Customs has specifically delegated most of his labor relations authority to the Director of the Personnel Management Division who is authorized (1) to act as the Customs' representative in dealing with the national headquarters of labor organizations; (2) to negotiate agreements covering Customs' headquarters employees in a bargaining unit consisting of employees under the supervision of more than one Assistant Commissioner, and multi-unit agreements; (3) to act as the final approving authority of all local agreements, subject to existing statements of Customs Service policy; (4) to represent the Customs' position in the representation matters, unfair labor practice cases, standards of conduct cases and other formal proceedings before the Department of Labor, the Federal Labor Relations Council and the Federal Service Impasses Panel (the Activity's General Counsel represents the Activity in these proceedings); (5) to consult, as appropriate, with labor organizations holding national consultation rights; and (6) to grant national consultation rights.

6/ The Customs Manual and other specialized manuals (i.e. personnel and organization) contain operating instructions for Customs officers to utilize in the performance of their duties. Additionally, an internal directives system is used to establish, amend, or clarify policy, organization, authority, responsibility, methods, and procedures within the Headquarters Office or throughout the field organization. Directives under this system are issued over the signature of the Commissioner or, where the Commissioner has so delegated the authority, by the six Assistant Commissioners.

Regional Commissioners and Assistant Commissioners may, regarding a unit under their jurisdiction, (1) negotiate agreements after prior consultations with the Director, Personnel Management Division; (2) consult with local union officials regarding local issues; (3) grant exclusive recognition; (4) determine the appropriateness of bargaining units after consultation with the Director, Personnel Management Division; (5) conduct representation elections; (6) file unfair labor practice complaints, after consultation with the Director Personnel Management Division; and (7) request assistance of the Federal Mediation and Conciliation Service. The authority delegated to the Director, Personnel Management Division and Assistant Commissioners may be redelivered to the Chief, Labor and Employee Relations Program Branch.

The Customs Service has raised a threshold question that the NTEU is without standing to file the instant petition, which includes a headquarters unit of professional employees for which NTEU Chapter 101 is the exclusive representative. As indicated above, the National NTEU is the certified representative in the remaining units involved.

It has been held previously that there is nothing in the Order, the 1975 Report and Recommendations of the Federal Labor Relations Council, or the Assistant Secretary's Regulations, which requires the Assistant Secretary to challenge the constitutional authority of a national labor organization, such as the NTEU in the instant case, to file a unit consolidation petition on behalf of its exclusively recognized local chapters. 7/ While, under certain circumstances, it may be necessary to review the constitutional authority of a national labor organization to take such action where the constitution of the labor organization is unclear in this regard or appears to delimit such authority, there is no contention herein, nor does it appear, that the Constitution and Bylaws of the NTEU preclude the NTEU from filing a unit consolidation petition on behalf of one of its constituent local chapters. Accordingly, I find that the NTEU has standing to file the instant petition for itself and on behalf of one of its exclusively recognized local chapters.

7/ See Internal Revenue Service, Washington, D.C. A/SLMR No. 831 (1977), and Internal Revenue Service, Washington, D.C. A/SLMR No. 853 (1977).

With respect to the appropriateness of the proposed consolidated unit, the Customs Service contends that it is an essentially decentralized organization which has delegated primary authority for those decisions concerning the terms and conditions of employment of its employees to its line managers at each level of its organization. In this regard, the record shows that all the Assistant Commissioners (with respect to Headquarters affected employees) and the Regional Commissioners have been delegated and effectively exercise day-to-day authority with respect to such matters as hiring, firing, transfer, intra-regional or office reassignment, promotion, reduction-in-force, furloughing, classification of positions (up to GS-14), discipline, the utilization of WAE or intermittent employees, overtime, safety, outside employment, awards and employee counseling. Regional Commissioners and Assistant Commissioners also exercise labor relations authority which enables them to grant recognition, file unfair labor practice complaints, grant administrative leave or official time to union officials, resolve grievances, approve the use of bulletin boards, and negotiate collective bargaining agreements. Furthermore, the record shows that only a small number of Activity employees receive either temporary details or permanent reassignments/promotions between Customs regions and that the effective areas of consideration for both reduction-in-force procedures and promotions are Region-wide. Based on these considerations, the Customs Service argues that consolidation will require the centralization of its decision-making authority with respect to all matters affecting employee terms and conditions of employment and adversely affect effective dealings and efficiency of agency operations.

It has been held previously that in view of the clear policy guidelines in the consolidation of units area set forth in the 1975 Report and Recommendations of the Federal Labor Relations Council, which accompanied the issuance of Executive Order 11838, there has been established, in effect, a presumption favoring the appropriateness of proposed consolidated units. 8/ In this context, and based upon all the foregoing circumstances, I find that the proposed consolidated unit is appropriate for the purpose of exclusive recognition under the Order in that it meets the three unit criteria set forth in Section 10(b). Thus, I find that the employees in the unit sought, consisting of all employees currently represented exclusively by the NTEU in a number of existing bargaining units, enjoy a clear and identifiable community of interest in that they share a common mission, common overall supervision, essentially similar job classifications and working conditions, and similar personnel and labor relations policies and practices.

The Activity's contention that consolidation will result in the centralization of its decentralized decision-making authority with respect to employee terms and conditions of employment must be examined in the context of the substantial degree of Headquarters Office involvement already being exercised in those areas. The record in this case contains over 2,000 pages of testimony and over 700 exhibits. The exhibits appear to include almost every Customs regulation and directive applicable to matters affecting employee terms and conditions of employment. Of particular interest has been the Customs Organization Manual, the Customs Personnel Manual, the Merit Promotion Plan, and various directives dealing with delegations of authority to Regional Commissioners and Assistant Commissioners. These exhibits demonstrate that while Regional Commissioners and Assistant Commissioners exercise extensive day-to-day authority over their employees with respect to hiring, firing, transfer, promotion, reduction-in-force, discipline, etc., this authority is limited by Headquarters budgetary and administrative directives prescribing the circumstances and the procedures that must be used and/or considered prior to the exercise of that authority. Additionally, it is noted that the Director of the Personnel Management Division, Office of Administration, presently is delegated authority to deal with the national headquarters of labor organizations and to negotiate agreements covering Customs Headquarters employees in a bargaining unit consisting of employees under the supervision of more than one Assistant Commissioner, and multi-unit agreements, and that Regional Commissioners and Assistant Commissioners, under existing delegations of authority, may now negotiate agreements, determine the appropriateness of bargaining units, and file unfair labor practice complaints only after prior consultations with the Director, Personnel Management Division. Under these circumstances, I view it as highly improbable that a unit nation-wide in scope and an agreement negotiated at the national level of the Activity would have a significant impact on the Activity's current methods of decision-making and policy formulation.

Consequently, I find from the facts presented, and in the light of the Federal Labor Relations Council's clear policy pronouncements, that the proposed unit consolidation will promote effective dealings and efficiency of agency operations. Thus, in my opinion, national negotiations in the Customs Service will provide the parties with the opportunity to resolve labor-management relations matters which are national in scope and which require uniform application. Moreover, a national agreement derived from national bargaining will tend to be more cost effective by allowing the negotiation of employee terms and conditions of employment and personnel policies and practices on a national basis. Further, national negotiations within the Customs Service will permit direct, face-to-face access by the NTEU to representatives of the Activity at the national level and to the considerable scope of personnel concerns which are controlled at that level; it will tend to promote consistency and uniformity in negotiated terms and conditions of employment, and in their administration; 9/ and it will tend to promote predictability in budgeting and manpower planning as they relate to negotiated provisions.

9/ Lack of uniformity and inconsistent administration of negotiated terms and conditions of employment were cited by the NTEU as major employee concerns. Additionally noted is the fact that no evidence was presented to show that the Activity could not consult with its field personnel concerning negotiations on regionally sensitive issues with the NTEU at the national level, or that an agreement negotiated at the national level would interfere with the Activity's discretion to delegate to field level managers certain authority, such as the resolution of grievances and the scheduling of meetings with local union representatives, to deal with local problems. Cf. AFGE Council of Prison Locals. FLRC No. 76A-38 (1977).

Finally, the petitioned for consolidated unit, which provides for bargaining in a single, rather than in the existing 12 bargaining units, will reduce unit fragmentation and promote a more comprehensive bargaining unit structure, which is consistent with the policies of the Order.

Accordingly, I find that the following unit is appropriate for the purpose of exclusive recognition under Executive Order 11491, as amended: 10/

All professional employees assigned to the Office of Regulations and Rulings and Regions II and IX, and all nonprofessional employees assigned to the Headquarters Office and Regions I, II, III, IV, V, VI, VII, VIII, and IX of the U.S. Customs Service, excluding all employees assigned to the Office of Investigations and the Office of Internal Affairs, all other professional employees assigned to the Headquarters Office and to Regions I, III, IV, V, VI, VII and VIII, management officials, employees engaged in Federal personnel work in other than a purely clerical capacity, confidential employees, guards, and supervisors as defined in the Order.

The Activity requested that in the event the proposed consolidated unit was found appropriate, an election be held to determine whether or not the employees involved desire to be represented in the proposed consolidated unit by the NTEU. As noted above, the unit found appropriate includes professional employees. However, the Assistant Secretary is prohibited by Section 10(b)(4) of the Order from including professional employees in a unit with nonprofessional employees unless a majority of the professional employees votes for inclusion in such a unit. Accordingly, the desires of the professional employees as to inclusion in a unit with nonprofessional employees must be ascertained. I shall, therefore, direct that separate elections be conducted in the following voting groups:

Voting group (a): All professional employees assigned to the Office of Regulations and Rulings and to Regions II and IX, of the U.S. Customs Service, excluding all nonprofessional employees, all employees assigned to the Office of Investigations and the Office of Internal Affairs, all other professional employees assigned to the Headquarters Office and to Regions I, III, IV, V, VI, VII and VIII, management officials, employees engaged in Federal personnel work in other than a purely clerical capacity, confidential employees, guards, and supervisors as defined in the Order.

Voting group (b): All nonprofessional employees assigned to the Headquarters Office, and to Regions I, II, III, IV, V, VI, VII, VIII and IX of the U.S. Customs Service, excluding all professional employees, 10/ Insofar as the actual state of the exclusively recognized units at the time of the consolidation election may differ, if at all, from the unit found appropriate herein, the unit description should be so modified.

all employees assigned to the Office of Investigations, and the Office of Internal Affairs, management officials, employees engaged in Federal personnel work in other than a purely clerical capacity, confidential employees, guards, and supervisors as defined in the Order.

Employees in the nonprofessional voting group (b) will be polled whether they desire to be represented for the purpose of exclusive recognition in the proposed consolidated unit by the National Treasury Employees Union.

Employees in the professional voting group (a) will be asked two questions on their ballots: (1) whether they desire to be represented for the purpose of exclusive recognition in the proposed consolidated unit by the National Treasury Employees Union, and (2) whether they desire to be represented in a separate consolidated professional unit if the proposed consolidated unit is approved by a majority of all the employees voting.

The valid votes cast by all the eligible employees will be tallied to determine if a majority of the valid votes have been cast in favor of the proposed consolidated unit. If a majority of the valid votes have not been cast in favor of the proposed consolidated unit, the employees will be taken to have indicated their desire to continue to be represented in their current units of exclusive recognition. If a majority of the valid votes are cast in favor of the proposed consolidated unit, the ballots of the professional employees in voting group (a) will then be tallied to determine whether they wish to be included in the same consolidated unit with the nonprofessional employees. Unless a majority of the valid votes of voting group (a) are cast for inclusion in the same consolidated unit as the nonprofessional employees, the professional employees will be taken to have indicated their desire to constitute a separate consolidated professional unit, and an appropriate certification will be issued by the Area Administrator.

The unit determination in the subject case is based, in part, then, upon the results of the election among the professional employees. However, I will now make the following findings in regard to the appropriate unit:

1. If a majority of the professional employees does not vote for inclusion in the same unit as the nonprofessional employees, I find the following units appropriate for the purpose of exclusive recognition within the meaning of Section 10 of the Order:

(a) All professional employees assigned to the Office of Regulations and Rulings and to Regions II and IX of the U.S. Customs Service, excluding all nonprofessional employees, all employees assigned to the Office of Investigations and the Office of Internal Affairs, all other professional employees assigned to the Headquarters Office and to Regions I, III, IV, V, VI, VII and VIII, management officials, employees engaged in Federal personnel work in other than a purely clerical capacity, confidential employees, guards, and supervisors as defined in the Order.

(b) All nonprofessional employees assigned to the Headquarters Office, and to Regions I, II, III, IV, V, VI, VII, VIII, and IX of the U.S. Customs Service, excluding all professional employees, all employees assigned to the Office of Investigations and the Office of Internal Affairs, management officials, employees engaged in Federal personnel work in other than a purely clerical capacity, confidential employees, guards, and supervisors as defined in the Order.

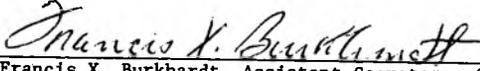

2. If a majority of the professional employees votes for inclusion in the same consolidated unit as the nonprofessional employees, I find the following unit appropriate for the purpose of exclusive recognition within the meaning of Section 10 of the Order:

All professional employees assigned to the Office of Regulations and Rulings and Regions II and IX, and all nonprofessional employees assigned to the Headquarters Office and Regions I, II, III, IV, V, VI, VII, VIII, and IX of the U.S. Customs Service, excluding all employees assigned to the Office of Investigations and the Office of Internal Affairs, all other professional employees assigned to the Headquarters Office and to Regions I, III, IV, V, VI, VII and VIII, management officials, employees engaged in Federal personnel work in other than a purely clerical capacity, confidential employees, guards and supervisors as defined in the Order.

DIRECTION OF ELECTION

An election by secret ballot shall be conducted among the employees in the voting groups described above, as early as possible, but not later than 60 days from the date below. The appropriate Area Administrator shall supervise the election, subject to the Assistant Secretary's Regulations. Eligible to vote are those in the voting groups who were employed during the payroll period immediately preceding the date below, including employees who did not work during the period because they were out ill, or on vacation or on furlough, including those in the military service who appear in person at the polls. Ineligible to vote are employees who have quit or were discharged for cause since the designated payroll period and who have not been rehired or reinstated before the election date. Those eligible shall vote whether or not they desire to be represented for the purpose of exclusive recognition in the proposed consolidated unit by the National Treasury Employees Union.

Labor for Labor-Management Relations

UNITED STATES DEPARTMENT OF LABOR
ASSISTANT SECRETARY FOR LABOR-MANAGEMENT RELATIONS
SUMMARY OF DECISION AND ORDER OF THE ASSISTANT SECRETARY
PURSUANT TO SECTION 6 OF EXECUTIVE ORDER 11491, AS AMENDED

FEDERAL AVIATION ADMINISTRATION
A/SLMR No. 992

This case involved an unfair labor practice complaint filed by the Professional Air Traffic Controllers Organization (PATCO) alleging that the Respondent violated Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order by unilaterally altering the basic watch schedule without first negotiating with PATCO. The Respondent contended that the parties' negotiated agreement called for consultation only prior to any changes in the basic watch schedule and that consultation had, in fact, occurred. The Respondent further argued that Section 19(d) of the Order barred processing of the complaint herein.

The Administrative Law Judge found the matter of the basic watch schedule to be negotiable within the meaning of Section 11(a) of the Order, but concluded that the parties had contractually limited the bargaining obligation to one of consultation. He further found that consultation had occurred and recommended dismissal of the complaint. The Administrative Law Judge was unable to determine whether grievances which had been filed by local PATCO representatives raised the same issue as that raised in the complaint.

The Assistant Secretary adopted the Administrative Law Judge's recommendation that the complaint be dismissed, noting that in view of the disposition, he found it unnecessary to pass upon the negotiability of the basic watch schedule.

UNITED STATES DEPARTMENT OF LABOR

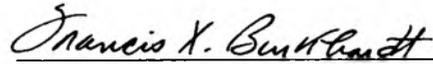

IT IS HEREBY ORDERED that the complaint in Case No. 22-7440(CA) be, and it hereby is, dismissed.

DECISION AND ORDER

On October 14, 1977, Administrative Law Judge Robert J. Feldman issued his Recommended Decision in the above-entitled proceeding, finding that the Respondent had not engaged in the unfair labor practices alleged in the complaint and recommending that the complaint be dismissed in its entirety. Thereafter, the Complainant filed exceptions with respect to the Administrative Law Judge's Recommended Decision and the Respondent filed an answering brief to the Complainant's exceptions.

The Assistant Secretary has reviewed the rulings of the Administrative Law Judge made at the hearing and finds that no prejudicial error was committed. The rulings are hereby affirmed. Upon consideration of the Administrative Law Judge's Recommended Decision and the entire record in the subject case, including the Complainant's exceptions and the Respondent's response thereto, I hereby adopt the Administrative Law Judge's findings, conclusions 1/ and recommendation. 2/

1/ Cf. U.S. Army School/Training Center, Fort Gordon, Georgia, 2 A/SLMR 201, A/SLMR No. 148 (1972). In view of the disposition herein, I find it unnecessary to pass upon the Administrative Law Judge's conclusion that the issue of the basic watch schedule is a negotiable matter within the meaning of Section 11(a) of the Order.

2/ In reaching the disposition herein, it was considered unnecessary to pass upon the Administrative Law Judge's comments on page 8 of his Recommended Decision concerning what he considered to be "the heart of the dispute" herein.

RECOMMENDED DECISION

This is an unfair labor practice proceeding in which a formal hearing of record was held pursuant to Executive Order 11491 as amended (hereinafter referred to the Order) and 29 CFR Part 203.

Respondent is charged with violating Sections 19(a) (1) and 19(a) (6) of the Order by unilaterally changing watch schedules for employees in the bargaining unit without meeting and conferring (i.e., negotiating) with the exclusive bargaining representative on the new watch schedules or the impact thereof upon the work force. Upon all the evidence adduced, my observation of the witnesses, and my judgment of their credibility, I make the findings of fact and reach the conclusions of law set forth below.

1. Complainant is the exclusive bargaining representative in the unit consisting of Air Traffic Control Specialists, GS-2152 series, employed at Respondent's air traffic control towers, air traffic control centers and combined-station-towers. It does not have national consultation rights.

2. At each of the Respondent's facilities, the hours of work and the work shifts of the air traffic controllers are determined in a basic watch schedule. Individual employees are then assigned periodically to the watch schedule, shifts being rotated or otherwise varied among employee groups or teams.

3. Article 5 of the negotiated agreement between the parties provides

Article 5--Changes In Agreement
And Past Practices

Section 1. It is agreed that personnel policies, practices and matters affecting working conditions which are within the scope of the Employer's authority will not be changed or implemented without prior negotiations when they are in conflict with this agreement.

Section 2. The parties agree to consult prior to implementing changes in personnel policies, practices and matters affecting working conditions that are within the scope of the Employer's authority and that are not specifically covered by this agreement.

4. Article 33 of the negotiated agreement provides in pertinent part as follows:

Article 33--Watch Schedules and Shift
Assignments

Section 1. Basic watch schedule is defined as the days in the week, hours of the day, rotation of shifts and change in regular days off. Assignments of individual employees to the watch schedule are not considered as changes in the basic watch schedule. The basic watch schedule will not be changed without prior consultation with the Union. In developing the basic watch schedule the Facility Chief shall meet with the principal facility representative and carefully consider his views and recommendations concerning the schedule. The objective of this meeting or meetings shall be to carefully and thoroughly examine the alternatives and options available as suggested by the principal facility representative.

5. Prior to July, 1976, Respondent had required air traffic controllers to report for "pre-duty briefing" a sufficient amount of time before the start of the shift to acquaint themselves with prevailing conditions pertaining to the functions to which they were assigned. Although this practice necessitated the spending of time on the job in addition to the customary eight-hour shift, the employees had not been compensated therefor.

6. In April, 1976, Respondent notified its facility managers that in compliance with the Fair Labor Standards Act (FLSA) all overtime must be paid; that it would be necessary that supervisors insure that all overtime work is assigned and performed in increments of six minutes; that pre-duty briefing, called "duty familiarization", will be considered as "clock time" and therefore will require compensation; that the most practical method to reduce overtime costs relative to "duty familiarization" is the establishment of overlapping shift schedules which will minimize overtime costs and will additionally provide time for briefing and meetings away from the control areas; and that consultations with unions, at the local level, should be initiated as soon as possible.

7. Thereafter Complainant's local presidents or facility representatives were advised by Respondent's facility managers of proposed new watch schedules, which were prepared in response to Respondent's directives as to compliance with FLSA requirements.

8. Complainant advised its facility representatives that with respect to a new watch schedule, facility managers were required under the Executive Order to negotiate rather than consult; that to engage in any discussion, it was necessary to have the FLSA Law, a copy of the General Notice (GENOT) distributed to all facilities on Implementation of the Fair Labor Standards Act, and the Civil Service Directives as to procedures on such implementation; and that upon refusal to furnish such documentation, grievances should be filed individually, rather than as union grievances.

9. Early in June, 1976, Complainant's Director of Labor Management Relations wrote to Respondent, calling attention to the fact that requests of local representatives for the above documents had been refused, and making a further request at the national level for information as to the FLSA Law or Civil Service Directive which mandates management to change watch schedules.

10. Respondent thereafter advised Complainant that neither the Law nor the Regulations of the Civil Service Commission explicitly dictate any specific action to change shift patterns, but they require payment of overtime in situations which in the past were not compensable. As a result, facility chiefs had been instructed to review watch schedules and to consult with union representatives before making any changes deemed necessary to minimize overtime costs associated with implementation of FLSA.

11. When new watch schedules were finalized and announced or put into effect, numerous grievances were filed at the local level, and on June 29, 1976, Complainant by its General Counsel issued an unfair labor practice charge against Respondent. This proceeding ensued.

12. At diverse times during the months of April, May and June, 1976, proposed new watch schedules were submitted to the local union president or facility representative at the Atlanta Air Traffic Control Tower, the Atlanta Air Route Traffic Control Center, the Baltimore Air Traffic Control Tower and Cleveland Air Route Traffic Control Center, among others. The facility chiefs asked the union representatives for their comments or suggestions and invited their consultation prior to putting any of such new watch schedules into effect.

13. Though their requests for the documentation suggested by the national office were denied, union facility representatives made objections, oral or written, to the proposed watch schedules or made counter proposals, a few of which were reflected in the final schedules put into effect.

14. A number of grievances were filed individually at the local level by facility representatives and other employees, pertaining to the new watch schedules or to overtime compensation for duty familiarization. Neither counsel having seen fit to introduce a copy of any grievance filed and the testimony thereon being imprecise and indecisive, no finding can be made as to whether the grievances raised the same issue as that presented here.

15. Respondent instructed its facility chiefs to consult with union representatives about the proposed new watch schedules. It did not instruct them to negotiate or to meet and confer.

16. In April, 1975, during the course of negotiation of the collective bargaining agreement, representatives of the parties discussed the 1975 report of the Federal Labor Relations Council on The Obligation to Negotiate, particularly in its effect upon Article 5 and Article 33. Neither of those Articles was changed as a result of the discussion.

17. Article 72 of the negotiated agreement dealing with FLSA Amendments was revised in 1976 without specific reference to watch schedules.

CONCLUSIONS OF LAW

On the surface, the controversy here appears to be largely a question of semantics. Did the Respondent's facility chiefs "negotiate" with union representatives over the proposed new watch schedules? Or did the chiefs "consult" with them prior to putting the schedules into effect?

The 1975 FLRC Report equates the obligation "to meet and confer" with the obligation "to negotiate". "Consultation" is required only where the union has national consultation rights under Section 9 (not here applicable). The change in watch schedules was a change in matters affecting working conditions, with respect to which there had been some question as to whether prior negotiation was required under the Order. In that regard, however, the FLRC made its position clear:

The Assistant Secretary, when faced with this issue in a case, concluded that the Order does require adequate notice and an opportunity to negotiate prior to changing established personnel policies and practices in matters affecting working conditions during the term of an existing agreement unless the issues thus raised are controlled by current contractual commitments, or a clear and unmistakable waiver is present. We believe that the Assistant Secretary's conclusions on this matter is correct and, therefore, no change in the Order is warranted in this regard. 1975 FLRC Report, p. 42 (emphasis supplied).

At page 43-44 of its Report, the FLRC restates the rule as follows:

The parties to exclusive recognition have an obligation to "negotiate" rather than to "consult" on negotiable issues unless they mutually have agreed to limit this obligation in any way. (Emphasis supplied.)

Applying the above principles to the facts at hand, I conclude: that the change in work hours reflected in the new watch schedules was not integrally related to and consequently not determinative of the staffing patterns of the Respondent; that the purpose of the change was merely to minimize overtime under FLSA standards; and that being a matter affecting working conditions, the proposed watch schedule was a negotiable item within the meaning of Section 11(a) of the Order. See Southeast Exchange Region of the Army and Air Force Exchange Service Rosewood Warehouse, Columbia, South Carolina, A/SLMR No. 656.

It is not disputed that there is a difference between the obligation to negotiate and the obligation to consult, the former requiring a good faith effort to reach agreement, and the latter requiring only genuine consideration of opposing viewpoints before making a determination. Thus in agreeing "to consult" prior to implementing changes affecting the working conditions referred to in Article 5, Section 2, and in agreeing pursuant to Article 33, Section 1, that the basic watch schedule would not be changed without "prior consultation", both parties, the Complainant as well as the Respondent, stipulated to something less than the negotiation required under the Order.

Prior to the 1975 FLRC Report, it was held that similar provisions in a negotiated agreement did not constitute a clear and unmistakable waiver of a right granted under the Order. See NASA, Kennedy Space Center, A/SLMR No. 223. The question of waiver may not be determinative of the case at hand, however, in view of the Council's exception for mutual agreements to limit the obligation to negotiate.

Complainant contends, in effect, that even if the provisions of Article 5 and 33 constituted a waiver, Respondent is estopped from asserting any such waiver because of an alleged representation by Respondent's Deputy General Counsel to the effect that he would not permit his client to assert a waiver of Complainant's rights under the Order. The evidence as to the making of the alleged representation and as to reliance thereon by Complainant is conflicting and inconclusive. But assuming that there was no effective waiver, can we change an express agreement to consult into an implied agreement to negotiate?

Aside from possible proscription under the Parol Evidence Rule, the discussions of Articles 5 and 33 held in April, 1975, did not in fact alter the terms that had been tentatively agreed upon and that were embodied in the executed agreement. In Article 5, the nature of the obligation in respect to matters in conflict with the agreement and those not specifically covered by the agreement is plainly differentiated in Sections 1 and 2 respectively. If the parties meant consultation to be the same as negotiation, there would be no purpose in having two separate sections. In Article 33, Section 1, the nature of the obligation of prior consultation is spelled out in considerable detail, leaving no doubt that the parties contemplated something less than negotiation. There was no ambiguity in the written provisions, and the evidence as to the conversations in April, 1975, falls far short of proving a bilateral agreement to modify those provisions, which clearly limited the obligation to negotiate.

All in all, I must conclude that Complainant has failed to establish by a fair preponderance of the credible evidence that Respondent failed to discharge its obligations with respect to the proposed watch schedule changes under the provisions of the negotiated agreement between the parties or under the provisions of the Order as construed by the Federal Labor Relations Council. Considering the testimony as to the changes made in the proposed watch schedules after conferring with union facility representatives at the Atlanta Tower and the Baltimore Tower, and as to the facility chief's calling a meeting "to negotiate" the implementation of FLSA at the Atlanta Air Route Control Center, there might even be some question whether Complainant has sustained the burden of proving that Respondent failed to negotiate.

Going behind the legalisms that customarily becloud the real center of controversy, it is not unreasonable to infer from the evidence adduced that the basic problem is not the new watch schedules per se. Without impugning the motives of anyone, it is apparent that the requests for documentation were purely tactical and that the question of what time an air traffic controller reported for work on a given day was only incidental to the prime question of how much overtime he was to be paid. While the gravamen of this proceeding is said to be Respondent's alleged failure to negotiate or consult on the changed schedules, the heart of the dispute appears to be its failure to pay for more than six minutes of overtime for duty familiarization. While the quantum of overtime compensation is understandably a matter of grave concern to both parties, it is not within the purview of the Order. I find no violation of Section 19(a)(1) or Section 19(a)(6).

In view of the foregoing conclusions on the merits, and in view of the unsatisfactory state of the record with respect to the precise nature of the grievances filed and the relief requested therein, I find it neither necessary nor appropriate to make a determination or recommendation on the issue of whether consideration of this case as an unfair labor practice is precluded by Section 19(d) of the Order.

RECOMMENDATION

Upon the foregoing Findings of Fact and Conclusions of Law, I recommend that the complaint herein be dismissed in its entirety.

SUMMARY OF DECISION AND ORDER OF THE ASSISTANT SECRETARY
PURSUANT TO SECTION 6 OF EXECUTIVE ORDER 11491, AS AMENDED

SMITHSONIAN INSTITUTION,
NATIONAL ZOOLOGICAL PARK
A/SLMR No. 993

This case involved an unfair labor practice complaint filed by the American Federation of Government Employees, Local 185, AFL-CIO (AFGE) alleging essentially that the Respondent violated Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order by implementing a change in the interpretation of the Respondent's regulations concerning enforcement by unit employees of the Respondent's policy regarding the public consumption of alcohol on the Respondent's premises, without giving the AFGE notice and an opportunity to bargain over the impact and implementation of the change.

The Administrative Law Judge found that the Respondent had not violated Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order. He concluded, among other things, that the AFGE had notice and ample opportunity to bargain on the impact and implementation of the change in the interpretation of enforcement policy, but had not requested such bargaining. Accordingly, the Administrative Law Judge recommended that the complaint be dismissed in its entirety.

Noting particularly the absence of exceptions, the Assistant Secretary adopted the findings, conclusions and recommendations of the Administrative Law Judge and ordered that the complaint be dismissed.

DECISION AND ORDER

On August 3, 1977, Administrative Law Judge William B. Devaney issued his Recommended Decision and Order in the above-entitled proceeding, finding that the Respondent had not engaged in the unfair labor practices alleged in the complaint and recommending that the complaint be dismissed in its entirety. No exceptions were filed to the Administrative Law Judge's Recommended Decision and Order.

The Assistant Secretary has reviewed the rulings of the Administrative Law Judge made at the hearing and finds that no prejudicial error was committed. The rulings are hereby affirmed. Upon consideration of the Administrative Law Judge's Recommended Decision and Order and the entire record in this case, and noting particularly that no exceptions were filed, I hereby adopt the Administrative Law Judge's findings, conclusions and recommendations. 1/

1/ Under the circumstances herein, I find it unnecessary to pass upon the conclusion of the Administrative Law Judge, set forth on page 9 of his Recommended Decision and Order, that because the memorandum of April 13, 1976, did not, in his view, involve matters within Section 11(a) of the Order, there would be no obligation to bargain concerning its impact. In this regard, however, it is noted the Administrative Law Judge found, in fact, that the Complainant was given sufficient notice of the purported change but failed to request bargaining on impact and implementation.

ORDER

IT IS HEREBY ORDERED that the complaint in Case No. 22-7450(CA) be, and it hereby is, dismissed.

RECOMMENDED DECISION AND ORDER

Statement of the Case

This case arises under Executive Order 11491, as amended (hereinafter also referred to as the "Order"). It was initiated by a charge filed on, or about, June 15, 1976, and a Complaint filed on August 30, 1976 (Asst. Sec. Exh. 1). Notice of Hearing issued January 24, 1977 (Asst. Sec. Exh. 2), pursuant to which a hearing was duly held before the undersigned on March 29, 1977, in Washington, D.C.

Local (also referred to as "Lodge") 185 is the exclusive bargaining representative of all employees of the National Zoological Park Police Division, except supervisory positions of Captains, Lieutenants and Sergeants, and a collective bargaining agreement was duly entered into on November 1, 1967, pursuant to E.O. 10988, the predecessor to the Order, and is still in full force and effect.

The Complaint alleged violations of Sections 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order as the result of two actions: a) Implementing a change on April 13, 1976, in the interpretation of Agency Regulations concerning enforcement by unit employees of Respondent's public alcohol consumption policy without giving Local 185 reasonable notice of the proposed change or the opportunity to negotiate; and b) the establishment of a work shift in violation of Article XXI of the Agreement of November 1, 1967; however, the issue of shift change was not included in the Acting Regional Administrator's letter of January 24, 1977 (Asst. Sec. Exh. 3) and Complainant announced at the hearing that the allegation concerning the shift change was no longer involved. The matter of shift change was not litigated and will, therefore, be deemed to have been abandoned.

All parties were represented, were afforded full opportunity to be heard, to examine and cross-examine witnesses, to introduce evidence bearing on the issues and briefs, timely filed, have been carefully considered. Upon the basis of the entire record, including my observation of the witnesses and their demeanor, I make the following findings, conclusions and recommendations:

FINDINGS

1. The April 13, 1976, Memorandum.

On April 13, 1976, Captain Middleton, Chief of the Zoological Park Police Force, issued the following memorandum to all members of the Zoological Park Police Force:

"Subject: Public Drinking (Beer)
Enforcement Policy

"The panda house roof cafe is dispensing beer in clear plastic containers with a 'mug logs'. Some patrons, after making purchases, are wandering away from the area of the cafe into the buildings or to other areas of the Park.

"Until further notice, police officers will not pursue public drinking statues unless an obviously marked bottle or can is displayed or individual(s) is (are) unquestionable inebriated. (Here, I am sure FONZ personnel would not continue to serve a patron in that condition.)

"Mike Gill, FONZ, gave assurance that signs would be obtained cautioning patrons to restrict their movements to the cafe area while imbibing their beverage (beer)." (Comp. Exh. 1)

2. Complainant's Position Prior to Filing the Charge on June 15, 1976

Officer Ellerbe, President of Local 185 in April, 1976, testified that prior to April 13, Chief Middleton called him in and told him that a memorandum, such as that issued on April 13, 1976, would be coming out in a couple of days; that Chief Middleton told him the contents of the memorandum; that he, Ellerbe, told Chief Middleton he would have to talk to the men and see what they say; and that he, Ellerbe, talked to the men and they objected to the contents of the memorandum, or, more correctly, they objected to "pop stops" for the sale of beer in the Park. Officer Ellerbe stated that he did not ask Chief Middleton to negotiate when told of the content of the forthcoming memorandum nor after April 13, 1976, when he first saw the memorandum for the reason that Chief Middleton stated that he, Middleton, would get back to Officer Ellerbe.

Officer Smith, Vice President of Local 185 in April, 1976, and President at the time of the hearing, testified that on April 29, 1976, after the bimonthly meeting with management he contacted Mr. Doyle, Special Assistant to Dr. Reed, Director of the Zoo, and asked Mr. Doyle what he intended to do with the memorandum of April 13, 1976; that Mr. Doyle stated that he might revise it or do away with it; that he, Doyle, would get back to him (Smith), but never did. Mr. Smith stated that he made no other attempt to negotiate this matter because he had been president only about one month at the time of the hearing on March 29, 1977. 1/

1/ A meeting was held on March 11, 1977, at which ground rules for initiating Beer drinking on the premises, to begin about April 1, 1977, were discussed and a memorandum was furnished by Respondent. Although Mr. Smith's testimony is not a model of clarity, it appears that the membership of Local 185 still objects to the sale of beer and seeks in 1977 what is sought (Continued)

3. Respondent's Position Prior to the Charge of June 15, 1976.

Chief Middleton stated that he did not recall discussing the subject matter of the April 13, 1976, memorandum with Officer Ellerbe prior to issuance of the actual memorandum; that he had no discussion with Officer Ellerbe whatever with respect to the beer drinking after the issuance of the April 13, 1976, memorandum, although he did have discussions with Officer Ellerbe about the shift situation (which is no longer involved); that there was never any request by Complainant after issuance of the April 13, 1976, memorandum for a meeting to negotiate or bargain about the impact of the memorandum; that he did not have discussion with Officer Smith on, or about April 29, 1976, about the memorandum; however, Chief Middleton stated that Mr. Doyle told him that Officer Smith had spoken to him (Doyle) and stated that he (Smith) wanted the memorandum withdrawn. Indeed, Chief Middleton stated quite forthrightly that he made no attempt to negotiate with Complainant concerning the April 13, 1976, memorandum because he "thought it was a non-negotiable item."

Regular monthly labor-management meetings were held on April 29 (for which Complainant prepared an agendum on April 12) and on June 24 (for which Complainant prepared an agendum on June 14) and it is conceded, as shown by the agenda, by the minutes of union meeting, and by the testimony, that neither the memorandum of April 13, 1976, nor its subject matter was discussed, or asked to be discussed, at either the April 29, or June 24, 1976, regular monthly labor-management meeting.

4. Position of Parties After the Charge Had been Filed.

On July 7, 1976, Complainant and Respondent met in an effort to resolve the issue raised in the charge concerning the April 13, 1976, memorandum. Officer Ellerbe indicated that he again expressed objection to selling beer at "pop stops" because of the presence of children; But, when pressed as to the Union's demand, stated,

"Well, we asked them to get something with Mr. Ripley's name on it relieving us in 1976, namely, something signed by the Secretary of the Smithsonian Institution, which would protect the police officers from action, or inaction, as the result of compliance with Chief Middleton's order.

from the responsibility of being sued or charged or whatever it might be." (Tr. 1-64) 2/

Chief Middleton testified that Complainant objected because it "was not right to encourage people to walk around drinking " (Tr. 1-97) and that,

"My general concept of their position was that they questioned the authority to issue the regulation. It appeared to me that someone was making a moral judgment about whether or not it was right or wrong for the serving of beer." (Tr. 1-98)

* * * *

"As I recall the concerns that were discussed at that meeting centered upon whether or not the authority was there, whether or not the - it seemed to me, the Secretary's authority to supercede D.C. regulations or my authority to issue regulations." (Tr. 1-113)

CONCLUSIONS

Section 11(a) of the Order provides, in part, that an agency and a labor organization accorded exclusive recognition,

"... shall meet ... and confer ... with respect to personnel policies and practices and matters affecting working conditions. ..."

But Section 11(b) of the Order provides, in part, that,

"... the obligation to meet and confer does not include matters with respect to the mission of an agency. ..."

Respondent's decision concerning the sale of beer to the public did not involve personnel policies and practices or

2/ The reporter does not indicate any reason for the unorthodox method of numbering the pages of the transcript with the number "1" preceding the actual page number.

matters affecting working conditions. In Department of Defense, Air National Guard, Texas Air National Guard, Camp Mabry, Austin, Texas, A/SLMR No. 738 (1976), the Assistant Secretary stated, in part, as follows:

"... agency management's control of the consumption of alcoholic beverages at government facilities does not fall within the ambit of those personnel policies and practices and matters affecting working conditions which are contemplated by Section 11(a) of the Order."

Of course, in the Texas Air National Guard case, supra, there was a restriction on the use of alcoholic beverages at parties by unit employees; whereas in the present case the decision to sell beer at the Panda House Roof facility concerned the sale of beer to the public, not to unit employees. Moreover, the decision concerned the mission of Respondent, in this instance a facet of the operation of the Zoological Park. Not only did the decision not involve personnel policies and practices or matters affecting working conditions of unit employees but it was, in any event excluded from the obligation of Section 11(a) to meet and confer by Section 11(b) of the Order as a matter respecting the mission of Respondent.

This is not dispositive of the matter, however, as the memorandum of April 13, 1976, instructed unit employees as follows:

"Until further notice, police officers will not pursue public drinking statutes unless an obviously marked bottle or can is displayed or individual(s) is (are) unquestionably inebriated ..."

Respondent contends that such instruction was pursuant to the reserved rights of management as set forth in Section 12(b) of the Order, Section 12(b) provides, in part, as follows:

"(b) management officials of the agency retain the right, in accordance with applicable laws and regulations --

"(1) to direct employees of the agency;

(5) to determine the methods, means, and personnel by which such operations are to be conducted; ..."

There can be no doubt that Respondent's memorandum of April 13, 1976, directed its employees within the meaning of Section 12(b) (1) of the Order and that it thereby determined the methods and means by which unit employees would conduct its operations within the meaning of Section 12(b)(5) of the Order. In short, Respondent had authorized the sale of beer in plastic containers at its Panda House Roof Cafe and its memorandum of April 13, 1976, in effect, with regard to beer purchased by the public at the Cafe instructed its police officers not to bother patrons who had purchased beer and had left the Cafe area with the plastic container unless an individual was unquestionably inebriated. Respondent had not authorized patrons to bring beer onto Zoo premises and the reference in the memorandum to "an obviously marked bottle or can" simply emphasized that beer in cans or bottles was not authorized.

In its brief, Complainant asserts that the memorandum of April 13, 1976, was "a unilateral decision by a lower level management official to change the application of a public law ... and this change caused a change in the working conditions of the Police Officers." (Comp. Brief, Point I).

Clearly, the memorandum of April 13, 1976, referred to "public drinking statutes"; ^{3/} but Chief Middleton, who wrote the memorandum, very credibly testified that he had reference only to the Regulations of the National Zoological Park which, in pertinent part, provides that, "... consumption of intoxicating beverages on the premises is prohibited unless officially authorized." (Comp. Ex. 2, 36 C.F.R. § 520.8); and that the consumption of beer on the premises had been officially authorized.

Accordingly, the instructions contained in the memorandum of April 13, 1976, were in accordance with applicable laws and regulations and were issued pursuant to the reserved rights of management as set forth in Section 12(b) of the Order. While it is well established that notice and opportunity to bargain on impact of a decision pursuant to a reserved right of management may be required, AFGE Local 1940 and Plum Island Animal Disease Laboratory, Dept. of Agriculture, Greenport, N.Y., FLRC No. 71A-11, 1 Decisions and Interpretations of the Federal Labor Relations Council 100 (1971); U.S. Department of Air Force, Norton Air Force Base, A/SLMR No. 261 (1973); but such obligation exists only if there is impact on employees in the sense that personnel policies and practices and matters affecting working conditions are involved. Department of the Navy, Norfolk, Naval Shipyard, A/SLMR No. 805 (1977).

^{3/} At the hearing, I indicated that, from prior experience, I was aware that whether any particular law of the District of Columbia extended to a wholly segregated Federal enclave was not always clear or readily determined. See, in this regard, 40 U.S.C. § 193 n - x. But even if it were assumed that some D.C. Law applied, as the memorandum, at most, simply instructed unit police officers that they should not enforce ("pursue") such statutes unless an obviously marked bottle or can is displayed or individual(s) is (are) unquestionably inebriated, there was no change in the application of a public law and for the purpose of this decision we need go no further.

Obviously, the instruction to police officers that they should not arrest patrons of the Zoo who, having purchased beer, wandered away from the Cafe area with the plastic containers, did not concern personnel policies or practices or, directly affect working conditions of unit employees. From the testimony of Officer Ellerbe and Chief Middleton, it is apparent that Complainant strongly opposed the sale of beer to the public at what it termed "pop stops" which Complainant recognized was not a matter over which it had any right to negotiate. Thus, although Officer Smith first told Mr. Doyle, on April 29, 1976, that he wanted the memorandum withdrawn, at the meeting of July 7, 1976, Complainant sought "something with Mr. Ripley's name on it". That is, Complainant challenged Chief Middleton's authority to issue the memorandum of April 13, 1976, and asserted that their working conditions were affected because they feared they might be sued.

Section 11(a) of the Order creates no right to negotiate the authority vested by Respondent in its Chief of the National Zoological Park Police and Complainant's expressed "fear" of personnel liability is without basis. First, the Police Manual provides, in part:

"Section 2-4. Members of the police force shall promptly obey all orders coming from a superior officer ... The person who obeys the order will not be held in any way responsible for disobedience of any orders previously issued.

"Section 2-5. Each member of the police force shall be held responsible for the proper performance of the duties assigned him and for strict adherence on his part to the rules and regulations adopted from time to time for the proper administration of the police force. Only direct and positive orders to the contrary, by an officer of higher rank, shall relieve a member from performance of his responsibilities as set forth above." (Res. Exh. 4).

Second, the memorandum of April 13, 1976, constituted policy of Respondent and was issued pursuant to the authority of Captain Middleton as Chief of the National Zoological Park Police. Third, action by any officer in carrying out official policy of Respondent would make such action the action of Respondent. Fourth, the memorandum of April 13, 1976, did not direct the performance of any act; but, rather instructed forbearance in the enforcement of its drinking regulation unless specified conditions existed (i.e., intoxication or display of an obviously marked bottle or can). Consequently, I conclude that the memorandum of April 13, 1976, did not involve personnel policies and practices and matters affecting working conditions within the meaning of Section 11(a) of the Order and there was no obligation to give notice and opportunity to bargain on impact. Department of Defense, Air National Guard, Texas Air National Guard, supra; Department of the Navy, Norfolk Naval Shipyard, supra.

Moreover, if there were an obligation to give notice and opportunity to negotiate concerning impact, the record shows that prior to April 13, 1976, Officer Ellerbe, then President of Local 185, was informed of the intended memorandum. Accepting Officer Ellerbe's testimony that Chief Middleton told him that he (Middleton) would get back to him (Ellerbe) as a valid reason for Officer Ellerbe's omission of the item from the agenda prepared on April 12, 1976, for the April 29 labor-management meeting (I specifically do not find that any such statement was made after issuance of the April 13, 1976, memorandum in view of Chief Middleton's testimony, which was wholly credible, that he had no discussion with Officer Ellerbe, or any other representative of Local 185, about the memorandum after its issuance, which testimony was confirmed by the testimony of Officer Ellerbe) and further accepting Officer Smith's statement to Mr. Doyle that he (Smith) wanted the memorandum of April 13, 1976, withdrawn, nevertheless, the record is clear that Complainant never requested a meeting to negotiate impact, not even in the agenda it prepared on June 14, 1976, the day before it filed the charge herein. Indeed, it was not until the meeting of July 7, 1976, to discuss the charge that Complainant, for the first time suggested that it wanted "something with Mr. Ripley's name on it." As Complainant had ample opportunity to request bargaining on the impact of the decision both prior to its implementation and prior to the filing of the charge herein but never requested bargaining on the impact of the decision, Respondent did not refuse to consult, confer, or negotiate with respect to the impact of its decision. Department of Air Force, Vandenberg Air Force Base, A/SLMR No. 350 (1974); Department of Air Force, Norton Air Force Base, A/SLMR No. 261 (1975); Alabama National Guard, A/SLMR No. 660 (1976).

RECOMMENDATION

Having found that Respondent has not engaged in certain conduct prohibited by Sections 19(a)(1) and (6) of Executive Order 11491, as amended, I recommend that the Complaint herein be dismissed in its entirety.

SUMMARY OF DECISION AND ORDER OF THE ASSISTANT SECRETARY
PURSUANT TO SECTION 6 OF EXECUTIVE ORDER 11491, AS AMENDED

HEADQUARTERS, U.S. ARMY MATERIEL DEVELOPMENT AND READINESS COMMAND
A/SLMR No. 994

This case involved an unfair labor practice complaint filed by the National Federation of Federal Employees, Local 1332, Independent (Complainant) alleging that the Respondent violated Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order by failing to comply with terms of an oral agreement to furnish vacancy lists to the Complainant in connection with a proposed reorganization and reduction in force.

The Administrative Law Judge concluded that there was no "meeting of the minds" between the parties and, therefore, no such agreement existed. Under these circumstances, he recommended dismissal of the complaint.

The Assistant Secretary adopted the Administrative Law Judge's findings, conclusions and recommendation and ordered that the complaint be dismissed.

RECOMMENDED DECISION

Statement of the Case

This is an unfair labor practice proceeding in which a hearing of record was held pursuant to Executive Order 11491, as amended. The complaint was filed on May 28, 1976 charging Respondents with violations of Sections 19(a)(1) and 19(a)(6) for failing to comply with an oral agreement to furnish Complainant lists of certain vacant positions which resulted from a reorganization and reduction in force. The parties were represented by counsel at the hearing and briefs were submitted.

Findings of Fact

In July 1975 Local 1332 of the National Federation of Federal Employees, the union, learned that a major reorganization involving large cutbacks in personnel was to be undertaken by Headquarters, U.S. Army Material Development and Readiness Command (DARCOM). Realizing the effect that a reduction-in-force would have on union members, a local vice president wrote the Civilian Personnel Officer requesting immediate action in five areas, including a freeze on all placements from outside the Headquarters, consultation on any exceptions to the freeze and a list of vacancies as they occur. As a result a meeting took place between the union and management on August 26, 1975. At issue in the present proceeding is whether there was an oral agreement made at this meeting that management would furnish the vacancy lists.

On September 3, management gave the union a draft of a proposed "freeze letter," in which the procedures to be used in the reorganization were set forth. Management suggested that another meeting be held to finalize the proposals. Such meeting did take place on September 4 and management noted changes in the draft letter in a memorandum on September 5, stating the draft incorporated the union suggestions considered acceptable.

There were meetings between the parties over the next several months including a quarterly consultation meeting in December 1975. On February 12, 1976 the union issued a news release outlining its position. The following day, February 13, management furnished the union a listing of positions under recruitment since November 1, 1975 with a promise of another list to be furnished. On February 20 a pre-complaint charge was filed. Subsequently management met with and furnished the union a statement of the number of positions filled from September 26, 1975 to February 29, 1976 with a list of individuals assigned. The parties then met on March 30, 1976 to try to resolve the pre-complaint letter and a letter was sent by management the following day regarding agreements reached. The letter did not include an agreement to furnish the lists in issue. On April 2 and 13 the union pointed out the omission which was corrected on April 19.

On October 5, 1976 the Acting Regional Administrator dismissed the complaint of May 28, 1976 finding that if there had been an agreement, such agreement would be invalid under the Executive Order because management would have bargained away Section 12(b) rights. A request for review of the dismissal of the complaint was granted on April 21, 1977.

Discussion and Conclusions

The Federal Labor Relations Council has established that the determination to fill or not to fill vacant positions is a retained management right under Section 12(b)(2) of the Order. National Council of OEO Locals and Office of Economic Opportunity, FLRC No. 73A-67, 2 FLRC 293. Section 12(b) establishes rights expressly reserved to management officials under any bargaining agreement. The Section is mandatory and the rights may not be relinquished or deleted. Tidewater Virginia Federal Employees Metal Trades Council and Naval Public Works Center, Norfolk, Virginia, FLRC No. 71A-56, 1 FLRC 431. Thus, if the alleged oral agreement of August 26, 1975 provided for negotiation as to which positions were to be retained and filled it would not be a valid agreement.

In its brief the union contends that management determined the "position criticality" and it was agreed on August 26 that management would advise the union of the designated positions so that the union could determine if any employees of the activity could qualify for the jobs. The union says that the reason the provision was not reduced to writing in the September letter, as were the other agreements, was because the letter was drafted for distribution to managers who had no need for such information. In support of the agreement the union offered the testimony of three union officials. However, witness Pilewicz characterized the meeting as a "donnybrook" and indicated several times in his testimony that management did not respond as if there was an agreement. He pointed out that he protested the omission of the item from the "freeze letter" because the omission indicated that the proposal had not been agreed upon and that management replied that there was no obligation for it to comply with the proposal. Witness Goodman, also testified as to the oral agreement but added that he understood management would take "our proposals and our suggestions under consideration and get back with us." Neither witness Pilewicz or Goodman support union's argument.

Only witness Kern gave testimony that entirely supports the argument that an oral agreement was reached on August 26 with no misunderstanding that the union was asking for more than the right to comment on jobs designated as critical by management. He said the oral agreement had never been negotiated to his knowledge and the only dispute was over whether it would be included in the letter of September 25.

The union also relays for support of its position on minutes taken at the August 26 meeting which has management responding to a union question on information about critical jobs as follows:

"We will inform you and I will ask your opinion. But somebody has to make the final determination. Those areas are within my authority."

These apparently edited minutes were taken by the union. Assuming their accuracy, the language used does not indicate a complete agreement, instead it indicates a preoccupation by management with the responsibility to designate critical positions. This, standing alone, indicates that there was no meeting of the minds.

Management contends that the August 26 meeting was a preliminary meeting where proposals were made with the intent that the parties would meet again. Such meetings did take place and some union suggestions were accepted and some rejected in the "freeze letter." Management says that they first knew of the union's position after the pre-complaint charge was filed and that as a result of the March 30, 1976 meeting it was agreed that lists of positions determined to be critical would be furnished. Three management officials testified that no oral agreement had been reached on August 26 and two union officials were unable to recall such agreement. Union Vice President Tashjian, whose memorandum precipitated the meeting, said that the parties reached a general understanding that there should be a further meeting to work out details and that it was suggested that some kind of an agreement would be drawn so that the second meeting would cover all points of discussion.

By definition, if the parties reached an agreement, there was a mutual arrangement or the parties were in accord. That did not happen in this case. Events subsequent to the August 26 meeting clearly show a lack of a meeting of the minds. The weight of evidence indicates that management left the meeting with the impression that the union wanted to exercise the right reserved to management to select the positions to be retained as critical to the agencies operations.

The union contention that the agreement on union participation in filling critical positions was not put in the "freeze letter" of September 25, 1975 because the distribution was to be to managers who did not need to know, is thin at best. On the first page of that letter all other aspects of filling such positions are set forth and logic dictates that had an agreement for union participation been reached it would have been included. Also, expressly setting out who determines criticality supports the view that it was management's understanding that the union was seeking to participate in these determinations. Then too, it was not established that the letter was to have limited distribution as claimed by the union and, in fact, it appears to have been widely distributed.

In view of the above it is found that there was no oral agreement as the result of the meeting of August 26, 1975 between the union and management and the complaint of alleged violations, which hinge upon that agreement, should be dismissed.

RECOMMENDATION

On the basis of the foregoing Findings and Conclusions it is recommended that the Assistant Secretary dismiss the complaint.

UNITED STATES DEPARTMENT OF LABOR
ASSISTANT SECRETARY FOR LABOR-MANAGEMENT RELATIONS
SUMMARY OF DECISION AND ORDER OF THE ASSISTANT SECRETARY
PURSUANT TO SECTION 6 OF EXECUTIVE ORDER 11491, AS AMENDED

DEPARTMENT OF THE TREASURY,
INTERNAL REVENUE SERVICE,
NEW ORLEANS DISTRICT
A/SLMR No. 995

This case involved an unfair labor practice complaint filed by the National Treasury Employees Union and Chapter 6, NTEU, alleging that the Respondent violated Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order by failing to notify the NTEU and give it the opportunity to negotiate over a change in the existing practice of allowing Revenue Officers employed in the Collection Division to perform certain official duties at their respective homes.

The Administrative Law Judge found that the Respondent had engaged in conduct violative of Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order. In this regard, he concluded that under the Order the Respondent was not obligated to bargain with respect to its decision. However, the Administrative Law Judge found that the Respondent was required to give the NTEU reasonable notice prior to the implementation of the change. Since the failure to negotiate and give reasonable notice involved only bargaining over procedures for implementation and impact of a basic decision, the Administrative Law Judge did not include in his recommended order a status quo ante remedy.

The Assistant Secretary adopted the Administrative Law Judge's findings, conclusions and recommendations. He noted that the Complainant excepted to the Administrative Law Judge's failure to recommend a return to the status quo ante in his proposed order. The Assistant Secretary found that, under the particular circumstances of the case, a status quo ante remedy was appropriate. Thus, he ordered the Respondent to cease and desist from the conduct found violative of the Order and that it take certain affirmative actions.

DECISION AND ORDER

On October 12, 1977, Administrative Law Judge Burton S. Sternburg issued his Recommended Decision and Order in the above-entitled proceeding, finding that the Respondent had engaged in certain unfair labor practices and recommending that it cease and desist therefrom and take certain affirmative actions as set forth in the attached Administrative Law Judge's Recommended Decision and Order. Thereafter, the Complainant filed exceptions with respect to the Administrative Law Judge's Recommended Decision and Order.

The Assistant Secretary has reviewed the rulings of the Administrative Law Judge made at the hearing and finds that no prejudicial error was committed. The rulings are hereby affirmed. Upon consideration of the Administrative Law Judge's Recommended Decision and Order and the entire record in the subject case, including the Complainant's exceptions, I hereby adopt the Administrative Law Judge's findings, conclusions and recommendations, except as modified herein.

Pursuant to Section 6(b) of Executive Order 11491, as amended, and Section 203.26(b) of the Regulations, the Assistant Secretary of Labor

1/ In its exceptions, the Complainant sought a return to the status quo ante as a remedy for the unfair labor practices found herein. Under the particular circumstances of this case, and noting that the Respondent still allows, upon request, some Revenue Officers to perform official duties at their respective homes, I find that a status quo ante remedy is appropriate for the type of violation found herein.

for Labor-Management Relations hereby orders that the Department of the Treasury, Internal Revenue Service, New Orleans District, shall:

1. Cease and desist from:

(a) Instituting a change in the location where Revenue Officers, who are represented exclusively by the National Treasury Employees Union, Chapter 6, perform their daily duties without first notifying the National Treasury Employees Union, Chapter 6, and affording such representative the opportunity to meet and confer, to the extent consonant with law and regulations, on the procedures which management will observe in implementing such change, and on the impact the change will have on the employees adversely affected by such action.

(b) In any like or related manner interfering with, restraining, or coercing employees in the exercise of their rights assured by Executive Order 11491, as amended.

2. Take the following affirmative actions in order to effectuate the purposes and policies of Executive Order 11491, as amended:

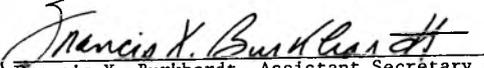

(a) Rescind the order instituting the change in the location where Revenue Officers perform their daily duties that became effective November 22, 1976.

(b) Upon request by the National Treasury Employees Union, Chapter 6, meet and confer, to the extent consonant with law and regulations, concerning the procedures used in implementing any decision to prohibit, contrary to past practice, employees from performing their official duties at their homes and the impact of any such change on adversely affected employees.

(c) Post at all Department of Treasury, Internal Revenue Service, New Orleans, facilities and installations copies of the attached notice marked "Appendix" on forms to be furnished by the Assistant Secretary of Labor for Labor-Management Relations. Upon receipt of such forms, they shall be signed by the Director of the New Orleans District and shall be posted and maintained by him for 60 consecutive days thereafter, in conspicuous places, including all bulletin boards and other places where notices to employees are customarily posted. The Director shall take reasonable steps to insure that such notices are not altered, defaced, or covered by any other material.

(d) Pursuant to Section 203.27 of the Regulations, notify the Assistant Secretary, in writing, within 30 days from the date of this order as to what steps have been taken to comply herewith.

RECOMMENDED DECISION AND ORDER

Statement of the Case

Pursuant to a complaint filed on March 8, 1977, under Executive Order 11491, as amended, by the National Treasury Employees Union and Chapter 6, NTEU (hereinafter called the Union or NTEU) against the Department of the Treasury, Internal Revenue Service, New Orleans District (hereinafter called the Activity or Respondent), a Notice of Hearing on complaint was issued by the Regional Administrator for the Kansas City, Missouri Region on June 20, 1977.

The complaint alleges that the Respondent violated Sections 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Executive Order by virtue of its actions in unilaterally cancelling the existing practice of allowing revenue officers employed in the collection division to perform their official duties at their respective homes.

A hearing was held in the captioned matter on July 20, 1977, in New Orleans, Louisiana. All parties were afforded full opportunity to be heard, to examine and cross-examine witnesses and to introduce evidence bearing on the issues involved herein.

Upon the basis of the entire record, including my observation of the witnesses and their demeanor, I make the following findings of fact, conclusions and recommendations.

Findings of Fact

The Union is the exclusive representative of Respondent's revenue officers assigned to the Collection Division of the New Orleans District Office. The revenue officers' primary duties are to collect delinquent taxes and returns. These duties require the revenue officers to spend most, if not all, of their working hours out in the field away from the New Orleans District Office.

Due to the fact that the revenue officers were out in the field most of the time and found it more convenient in terms of time and contacts to make their appointments with prospective clients prior to first checking in on a daily basis with the New Orleans District Office, the practice of working directly out of the revenue officers' respective homes rather than the official Internal Revenue Office became an established mode of operation. According to the record, the practice of working out of the revenue officers' own homes had been in effect at least since 1969. Further, according to the record, the revenue officers would only report to the Internal Revenue Office once or twice a week for purposes of picking up assignments, etc.

On November 22, 1976, all the revenue officers were informed by their respective group supervisors that,

"effective immediately," the practice of the revenue officers working out of their respective homes was to cease. No prior notice of the aforementioned order was given to the Union.

According to Robert Phillips, Chief of the Collection Division, who authorized the order curtailing the practice of working at home, he did so immediately upon discovering the existence of such practice since he believed, among other things, that the presence of the employees and government owned vehicles around the employees' homes during the daytime would give the neighbors the wrong impression of the Agency. Additionally, he was of the opinion that the revenue officers involved could work more efficiently and productively at the official New Orleans District Office due to the availability of more research materials and information. Mr. Phillips did acknowledge, however, that despite the November 22nd order, group supervisors were still empowered to continue to authorize at home work on a case by case basis. Thus, it appears that if a particular case involved a tax delinquent located closer to a revenue officer's home rather than the office, then the revenue officer would be allowed to work the particular case from his home as had been the practice prior to November 22.

Although the November 22 order did not result in a change in the revenue officers actual duties it did in fact change the methods by which such duties were to be accomplished and accordingly, had an impact on the employees working conditions.

Discussion and Conclusions

While Section 11(a) of the Executive Order generally imposes upon an Agency the obligation to meet and confer with the certified Union with respect to changes in personnel policies and practices and matters affecting working conditions of unit employees, Sections 11(b) and 12(b) of the Order make it clear, however, that the initial decision on certain specified subjects does not fall within the Agency's general bargaining obligation. As to these latter excepted subjects, the Assistant Secretary has concluded that the exclusive representative should be afforded the opportunity to meet and confer, to the extent consonant with law and regulations, as to the procedures management intends to observe in effectuating its decision on the excepted subject, and as to the impact of such decision on those employees adversely affected. Failure to give reasonable notice to the exclusive representative prior to implementation of a decision on an excepted subject is violative of Sections 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order. Federal Railroad Administration, A/SLMR No. 418; Social Security Administration, Bureau of Hearings and Appeals, A/SLMR No. 828.

Section 12(b) of the Order provides that management officials of the agency retain the right to "(5) determine the methods, means, and personnel by which such operations are to be conducted." Section 11(b) of the Order provides that "the obligation to meet and confer does not include matters with respect to the technology of performing its work"

It seems clear that the Respondent's decision as to where the employees are to perform their respective jobs falls within the above quoted language of Sections 11(b) and 12(b) of the Executive Order. Accordingly, I find that the Respondent was not obligated or required to bargain with the Union with respect to its initial decision concerning the cessation of the practice by the unit employees of working at home rather than at Respondent's office.

As noted above, Respondent was required, however, under the Order to give the Union reasonable notice of its decision prior to implementing same so that the Union could have ample opportunity to explore fully the decision prior to its implementation and decide whether or not it desired bargaining with respect to the impact and/or the manner of implementation. Federal Railroad Administration, supra. In this latter regard, the record reveals that Respondent ordered the immediate cessation of the practice of working at home without any prior notification to the Union.

Accordingly, in the absence of any evidence of an overriding exigency which would have required immediate action, Respondent's action in not giving the Union ample advance notice of its decision so that the Union could request, if desired, negotiations and/or discussions concerning the manner of implementation of the decision and/or the impact on unit employees affected constituted a violation of Section 19(a)(6) of the Order. Further, Respondent's action in the above respect tends to interfere with, restrain, or coerce employees in the exercise of their rights assured by the Order and, therefore, also constitutes a violation of Section 19(a)(1) of the Order. Social Security Administration, Bureau of Hearing and Appeals, supra.

While I would normally recommend as a remedy a return to the status quo ante by rescinding the order which caused the immediate cessation of the practice of working at home, I note that in other cases involving similar changes, the Assistant Secretary has seen fit to merely issue an order providing for bargaining, upon request, over procedures for implementation and impact on adversely affected employees and prohibiting any similar future changes without notification and bargaining. Department of Treasury, Internal Revenue Service, Manhattan District, A/SLMR No. 841. Accordingly, a return to the status quo ante will not be included in my recommended order.

Recommendation

Having found that the Respondent has engaged in conduct prohibited by Sections 19(a)(1) and (6) of Executive Order 11491, as amended, I recommend that the Assistant Secretary adopt the following order.

RECOMMENDED ORDER

Pursuant to Section 6(b) of Executive Order 11491, as amended, and Section 203.26 of the Regulations, the Assistant Secretary of Labor for Labor-Management Relations hereby orders that the Department of the Treasury, Internal Revenue Service, New Orleans District shall:

1. Cease and desist from:

(a) Instituting a change in the location where Revenue Agents perform their daily duties without first notifying the National Treasury Employees Union, Chapter 6, and affording such representative the opportunity to meet and confer, to the extent consonant with law and regulations, on the procedures which management will observe in implementing such change, and on the impact the change will have on the employees adversely affected by such action.

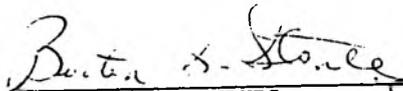

(b) In any like or related manner interfering with, restraining, or coercing employees in the exercise of their rights assured by Executive Order 11491, as amended.

2. Take the following affirmative actions in order to effectuate the purposes and policies of Executive Order 11491, as amended:

(a) Upon request by the National Treasury Employees Union, Chapter 6, meet and confer, to the extent consonant with law and regulations, concerning the implementation of the decision to prohibit, contrary to past practice, employees from performing their official duties at their homes and the impact of such change on adversely affected employees.

SUMMARY OF DECISION AND ORDER OF THE ASSISTANT SECRETARY
PURSUANT TO SECTION 6 OF EXECUTIVE ORDER 11491, AS AMENDED

GENERAL SERVICES ADMINISTRATION,
REGION 3,
WASHINGTON, D.C.
A/SLMR No. 996

This case involved an unfair labor practice complaint filed by the American Federation of Government Employees, AFL-CIO, Local 2151, (Complainant) alleging that the Respondent violated Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order based on its unilateral change in established terms and conditions of employment by not implementing a grievance settlement agreement, which was reached under the parties' negotiated grievance procedure, authorizing environmental differential pay for "high work."

The Administrative Law Judge concluded that the Respondent had not violated Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order when it rescinded the grievance settlement agreement. In his view, the Respondent properly rescinded the settlement agreement on the ground that a unilateral mistake of fact was made by the Respondent.

Contrary to the Administrative Law Judge, the Assistant Secretary found that the Respondent violated Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order when it unilaterally withdrew its authorization for "high work" environmental differential pay, thereby rescinding the parties' grievance settlement agreement in the matter. The Assistant Secretary viewed the grievance settlement agreement as having the same standing as an arbitration award, and, as such, constituted an extension of the parties' negotiated agreement and an established term and condition of employment. The Assistant Secretary found further that the Civil Service Commission's (CSC) verbal response to the Respondent's request for an interpretation of "high work" did not constitute a CSC policy interpretation that the settlement agreement reached by the parties was invalid under the pertinent provisions of the Federal Personnel Manual (FPM), but rather was a possible interpretation of the guidelines established by the FPM and, therefore, could not serve as a basis for rescinding the grievance settlement agreement.

Accordingly, the Assistant Secretary ordered that the Respondent cease and desist from the conduct found violative of the Order and that it take certain affirmative actions.

DECISION AND ORDER

On September 1, 1977, Administrative Law Judge George A. Fath issued his Recommended Decision in the above-entitled proceeding, finding that the Respondent had not engaged in the unfair labor practices alleged in the complaint and recommending that the complaint be dismissed in its entirety. 2/

The Assistant Secretary has reviewed the rulings of the Administrative Law Judge made at the hearing and finds that no prejudicial error was committed. The rulings are hereby affirmed. Upon consideration of the Administrative Law Judge's Recommended Decision and the entire record in the subject case, I hereby adopt the Administrative Law Judge's findings, conclusions, and recommendation, only to the extent consistent herein.

The complaint herein alleged, in essence, that the Respondent violated Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order when it unilaterally changed an established term and condition of employment by not implementing a grievance settlement agreement, which was reached under the parties' negotiated grievance procedure, authorizing environmental differential pay for "high work."

The Administrative Law Judge concluded that the Respondent had not violated Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order when it rescinded the instant grievance settlement agreement. In his view, the Respondent properly rescinded the settlement agreement on the ground that a unilateral mistake of fact was made by the Respondent.

1/ The name of the Complainant appears as amended at the hearing.

2/ The Complainant filed untimely exceptions to the Administrative Law Judge's Recommended Decision which were not considered.

The essential facts of the case, which are not in dispute, are set forth, in detail, in the Administrative Law Judge's Recommended Decision, and I shall repeat them only to the extent necessary.

The record reveals that during the times material herein, the Respondent and the Complainant have been parties to two negotiated agreements, including the current agreement, covering employees in the bargaining unit for which the Complainant is the exclusively recognized bargaining representative. 3/ Each agreement contains certain provisions authorizing additional pay for employees exposed to various degrees of hazards, physical hardships, and working conditions of an unusual nature at the Respondent's facilities. Such payments are authorized by statute and by the implementing regulations of the Civil Service Commission, hereinafter called CSC, which are found in the Federal Personnel Manual Supplement 532-1, hereinafter referred to as FPM. The relevant directives appear in Sub-Chapter 8-7 and Appendix J of the FPM Supplement, which are incorporated by reference in the current negotiated agreement. The FPM indicates that the situations listed in Appendix J, which contains a schedule of specific differential rates and categories for employees working under adverse conditions, are illustrative only, and the parties may negotiate additional coverage for local situations or negotiate additional categories not included in Appendix J.

The instant grievance, initially filed with the Buildings Manager of the Central Heating Plant on May 3, 1974, cited Article 23 of the then existing negotiated agreement, which became Article 24-Environmental Differential Pay - of the current negotiated agreement, and alleged that employees in the Central Heating Plant were entitled to environmental differential pay for "dirty work." Thereafter, the parties engaged in prolonged negotiations concerning the resolution of the grievance.

On or about May 20, 1975, as a result of the above noted grievance, the Respondent initiated a study of hazardous working conditions at the Central Heating Plant. This study was conducted in September, October, and November 1975. On September 1, 1975, in a letter to the Acting Director, Management Operations Division, the Complainant expanded the grievance to include the categories of "hot work" and "toxic chemicals." The grievance was moved to Step 3 of the parties' negotiated grievance procedure 4/ on October 1, 1975, after the parties were unable to resolve the matter at the District Heating Field Office level. On October 8, 1975, the Acting Director, Management Operations Division, in a letter

3/ The current negotiated agreement was effective August 19, 1975.

4/ Article XXI of the agreement provides, in pertinent part:

Section 5. Step 3 If the grievance is not settled at the Buildings Manager level, the Union representative may, within seven (7) working days, forward the grievance to the Buildings Manager who will expedite it through channels to the Director, to the Complainant concerning resolution of the instant grievance at Step 3, stated, "if the study indicates that certain employees in the Central Heating Plant are eligible for hazardous duty pay, employee claims will be honored including claims for retroactive pay" 5/

On February 26, 1976, the Compensation Branch of the Respondent, in its REPORT ON THE WORKING CONDITIONS OF PERSONNEL IN THE CENTRAL HEATING PLANT, HEATING OPERATION AND TRANSMISSION AREA, determined, among other things, that ". . . a payment of 25 percent differential for actual exposure is warranted for work on the roof of the Central Plant in accordance with the criteria for high work of working on any structure at least 100 feet above the ground." 6/ Subsequently, on March 8, 1976, the Respondent's Regional Personnel Officer, hereinafter called RPO, sent a memorandum to the Regional Commissioner, Public Buildings Service, hereinafter called RCPBS, and a copy to Complainant, in which he stated that "as a result of the [Compensation Branch's] study, we have authorized payment of differentials to GSA wage employees at the Central Plant who are exposed to the specific working conditions for which differentials have been authorized." 7/ Thereafter, on March 15, 1976, that part of the grievance remaining which pertained to environmental differential pay for "dirty work," "hot work," and "toxic chemicals" was arbitrated and subsequently denied.

4/ Management Operations Division, for further consideration. The Director, Management Operations Division, will review the grievance and give the Union representative his written answer within ten (10) working days after receipt of the grievance.

Section 6. Step 4 If the grievance is not satisfactorily settled at the Director, Management Operations Division level, the Union may refer the matter to Arbitration. All time limits in this article may be extended by mutual consent.

5/ As noted above, the Respondent's Compensation Branch reviewed the exposure of all personnel in the Central Heating Plant to hazardous working conditions. At the time the study was conducted, the Complainant requested, and Respondent agreed, that the study review not only the exposure of employees to "dirty work," "hot work" and/or "toxic chemicals," but also to "high work."

6/ The Report further determined that payment of a differential to employees for exposure to "dirty work," "hot work" and/or "toxic chemicals" was not warranted.

7/ On page 7 of his Recommended Decision, the Administrative Law Judge inadvertently referred to the date of the grievance settlement agreement as May 8, 1976, instead of March 8, 1976. This inadvertence is hereby corrected.

The record further reveals that the RPO, in response to comments from the RCPBS, reconsidered his previously announced payment authorization for "high work" environmental differential pay and obtained from the CSC a verbal interpretation of "high work" as the term is used in FPM Supplement 532-1, Appendix J (2)(a). As a result, on June 28, 1976, in a memorandum to the RCPBS, with a copy sent to the Complainant, the RPO rescinded his authorization for "high work" environmental differential pay.

After the Complainant filed the pre-complaint charge in this matter on July 8, 1976, the Respondent, on July 12, 1976, rescinded its June 28, 1976, decision not to pay the environmental differential and asked the Complainant ". . . to meet and confer with appropriate agency representatives and to bring to our attention any information which you feel should be considered in making our final decision." The parties subsequently met but were unable to resolve their different viewpoints regarding the use of mid-term contract negotiations to settle this matter. Consequently, on August 17, 1976, the RPO, in a memorandum to the RCPBS, with a copy sent to the Complainant, concluded that environmental differential pay for "high work" performed at the Central Heating Plant could not be authorized.

The Respondent contends, among other things, that (1) the issue of environmental differential pay for "high work" was not part of the original grievance in this matter and, therefore, the grievance settlement was not a product of the negotiated grievance procedure; (2) a grievance settlement, unlike an arbitration award, is not an extension of a negotiated agreement; (3) the Respondent, by law, was required to withhold payment of the environmental differential when it concluded that conditions at the Central Heating Plant did not meet the CSC's interpretation of "high work" as the term is used in FPM Supplement 532-1, Appendix J (2)(a); and (4) no unilateral change in the terms and conditions of employment occurred because no personnel practice had been established since no environmental differential payments had been made. On the other hand, the Complainant contends, among other things, that (1) "high work" became part of the instant grievance when the Respondent's Compensation Branch personnel included it in their study of the Central Heating Plant at the request of the Complainant's representative; and (2) the grievance settlement became an extension of the parties' negotiated agreement and, therefore, it could not be unilaterally changed by the Respondent.

Under the particular circumstances herein, I find, contrary to the Administrative Law Judge, that the Respondent violated Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order when it unilaterally terminated its authorization for environmental differential pay for "high work" for certain employees represented by the Complainant herein. Thus, when the Respondent, in agreement with the request by Complainant, included "high work" in its study of exposure of Central Heating Plant personnel to hazardous working conditions, it, in effect, agreed to include "high work" as an integral part of the grievance which was the catalyst for conducting the study. 8/ Therefore, when the Respondent issued its report, finding that environmental differential pay was warranted for those employees engaged in "high work," and subsequently notified the Complainant that such payments were authorized, the Respondent was, in effect, offering a partial settlement of the grievance, which was accepted by the Complainant.

It has been held previously that a valid arbitration award constitutes an extension of the parties' negotiated agreement, which may be modified only by the mutual agreement of the parties, and that a unilateral termination or alteration of such award constitutes a violation of the Order. 9/ In my view, a grievance settlement agreement reached by the parties in the operation of their negotiated grievance procedure has the same standing as an award by an arbitrator, and, in effect, such agreement constitutes an extension of the parties' negotiated agreement and an established term and condition of employment. In my view, to hold otherwise would be to denigrate the negotiated grievance process. Thus, neither party would be confident in attempting resolution of grievances short of arbitration if the other party could, with impunity, alter or refuse to honor a grievance settlement. Such a result would not effectuate the purposes and policies of the Order which, in my view, are aimed at encouraging parties to bilaterally resolve their differences short of litigation before a third party.

Nor am I persuaded to a contrary result by the Respondent's argument that it was required by law to withhold payment of the environmental differential as a result of the verbal opinion solicited by the Respondent from the CSC. Thus, there is no showing that the CSC's response to Respondent's inquiry was intended to reflect a CSC policy interpretation that the settlement reached by the parties herein was invalid under the pertinent provisions of the FPM. Rather, noting the informal nature of the inquiry, I find that the response of the CSC merely reflected a possible interpretation of the guidelines established by the FPM, and was not intended to reflect a CSC policy interpretation in this specific case. 10/

8/ In reaching this conclusion, it was noted that the Respondent earlier allowed the grievance to be expanded to include the categories of "hot work" and "toxic chemicals," and that the October 8, 1975, letter from Respondent's Acting Director, Management Operations Division, to the Complainant, concerning the resolution of the grievance at Step 3 of the grievance procedure, did not limit the Respondent's offer to pay any environmental differential found warranted by the study.

9/ See Naval Air Rework Facility, Pensacola, Florida, 6 A/SLMR 67, A/SLMR No. 608 (1976).

10/ See Naval Air Rework Facility, Pensacola, Florida, cited above.

Applying these principles to the instant case, I conclude that the Respondent, by its action of June 28, 1976, rescinding its authorization to pay environmental differential pay for "high work," unilaterally terminated the partial settlement of a grievance which was the product of the parties' negotiated grievance procedure in violation of Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order. 11/

ORDER

Pursuant to Section 6(b) of Executive Order 11491, as amended, and Section 203.26(b) of the Regulations, the Assistant Secretary of Labor for Labor-Management Relations hereby orders that:

The General Services Administration Region 3, Washington, D.C., shall:

1. Cease and desist from:

(a) Refusing to implement the grievance settlement agreement of March 8, 1976, reached under the negotiated grievance procedure contained in the negotiated agreement with the American Federation of Government Employees, AFL-CIO, Local 2151, the exclusive bargaining representative of its employees.

(b) Changing terms and conditions of employment resulting from grievance settlement agreements reached pursuant to the terms of a negotiated agreement with the American Federation of Government Employees, AFL-CIO, Local 2151, or any other labor organization certified as the exclusive bargaining agent of its employees, unless there is mutual agreement to change such terms and conditions of employment.

(c) In any like or related matter interfering with, restraining, or coercing its employees in the exercise of their rights assured by Executive Order 11491, as amended.

2. Take the following affirmative actions in order to effectuate the purposes and policies of Executive Order 11491, as amended:

11/ Inasmuch as the Respondent, under the circumstances herein, could not, without the consent of the Complainant, change the terms and conditions of employment established by the grievance settlement agreement, it follows that the Respondent could not absolve itself of its unfair labor practice by thereafter affording the Complainant an opportunity to meet and confer on the impact of this improper action. Accordingly, I find that the Complainant's rejection of the Respondent's request for mid-term contract negotiations on this matter, after being notified by the Respondent of its unilateral action, does not require a contrary result.

(a) Reinstate the grievance settlement of March 8, 1976, and, to the extent consonant with law, regulations, and decisions of the Comptroller General, reimburse each of the affected employees all monies withheld from them since November 1, 1970, 12/ by reason of the refusal to pay the environmental differential authorized pursuant to the grievance settlement agreement regarding "high work."

(b) In the future, abide by grievance settlement agreements reached under negotiated grievance procedures contained in any negotiated agreement with the American Federation of Government Employees, AFL-CIO, Local 2151, or any other labor organization certified as the exclusive bargaining agent of its employees.

(c) Post at its facility at the Central Heating Plant, Washington, D.C., copies of the attached notice marked "Appendix" on forms to be furnished by the Assistant Secretary for Labor-Management Relations. Upon receipt of such forms, they shall be signed by the Regional Administrator, General Services Administration, Region 3 and shall be posted and maintained for 60 consecutive days thereafter, in conspicuous places, including all bulletin boards and other places where notices to employees of the Central Heating Plant are customarily posted. The Regional Administrator shall take reasonable steps to insure that such notices are not altered, defaced, or covered by any other material.

(d) Pursuant to Section 203.27 of the Regulations, notify the Assistant Secretary, in writing, within 30 days from the date of this order as to what steps have been taken to comply herewith.

Dated, Washington, D.C.

March 2, 1978

Francis X. Burkhardt, Assistant Secretary of
Labor for Labor-Management Relations

12/ In the March 8, 1976, memorandum from the RPO to the RCPBS, with a copy of the Report of the Compensation Branch attached, the RPO stated that "payments may be made retroactively to the first pay period beginning on or after November 1, 1970, to eligible GSA wage employees who were exposed to the authorized conditions at the Central Plant from that date to present." In view of the above determination by the Respondent, November 1, 1970, was considered the appropriate date on which reimbursement should commence for the affected employees.

On August 10, 1976, Local 2151, American Federation of Government Employees, AFL-CIO (hereinafter called the Union) filed a complaint against General Services Administration, Region 3 (hereinafter called the Respondent) charging that management officials of the Respondent violated Sections 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order by willfully withholding authorized payments of 25% environmental differential to certain employees who have [been] and are working on the roof of the Central Heating Plant in Washington, D.C. The issue as stated by the Regional Administrator and upon which the hearing was conducted is as follows:

Whether the Respondent violated Sections 19(a)(1) and (6) of Executive Order 11491, as amended, by failing to meet and confer in good faith with the American Federation of Government Employees, District 14 when, on June 28, 1976, it unilaterally rescinded certain portions of the grievance settlement/environmental differential pay; authorization of March 8, 1976.

The following findings, conclusions and recommendations are based upon the entire record, and include credibility determinations based on the observation of witnesses, their demeanor, and evaluation of their testimony.

Findings of Fact

The Union is the exclusive bargaining representative of the non-supervisory employees of Respondent. There is a labor-management agreement between the parties effective August 19, 1975. Through Union demand for environmental differential pay predates the effective date of this agreement, it was placed in evidence by the parties and relied on as controlling their rights and duties in this case.

In a letter dated May 3, 1974, addressed to Respondent, Lawrence Clark, Shop Steward, citing Article XIII, Section 1 of the existing Agreement, requested payment to the employees of environmental differential pay. As authority for the request, Mr. Clark quoted the agreement: "The employer agrees to pay environmental differential to employees in the unit when such differential is authorized by FPM Supplement 532-1."

RECOMMENDED DECISION

This case arises under Executive Order 11491, as amended (hereinafter called the Order). A Notice of Hearing on Complainant was issued on January 6, 1977 by the Regional Administrator for Labor-Management Relations for the Philadelphia

The record indicates that the subject matter of Clark's letter was discussed by the parties for over a year.

In a letter dated September 1, 1975, addressed to Respondent, Clark detailed the "hazardous working conditions" at the plant. This report of conditions arose out of a meeting between the Union and Respondent. There was no mention of differential pay for work on the roof of the plant.

In reply to the Clark letter, the Respondent informed the Union that it was conducting a study of conditions at the plant, and "if the study indicates that certain employees are eligible for hazardous duty pay, employees claims will be honored, including claims for retroactive pay in accordance with Appendix J (FPM Supplement 532-1) 1/ and the availability of records."

A detailed study, dated February 26, 1976, reported by the Compensation Branch of Respondent, in pertinent part, contains the following recommendation: "... that a payment of 25 percent differential for actual exposure is warranted for work on the roof of the Central Heating Plant in accordance with the criteria for high work of working on any structure at least 100 feet above the ground."

1/ 2. High Work.

- a. Working on any structure at least 100 feet above the ground, deck, floor or roof, or from the bottom of a tank or pit;
- b. Working at a lesser height:
 - (1) If the footing is unsure; or the structure is unstable; or
 - (2) If safe scaffolding, enclosed ladders or other similar protective facilities are not adequate (for example, working from a swinging stage, boatswain chair, a similar support; or
 - (3) If adverse conditions such as darkness, steady rain, high wind, icing, lightning or similar environmental factors render working at such height(s) hazardous.

The study group recommended against payment of environmental differential pay for dirty work, exposure to chemicals in the chemical storage room and chemical tanks. It recommended further study of employees exposure to hot work and coal dust.

On March 8, 1976, the Respondent transmitted the report to the Union and stated: "As a result of this study, we have authorized payment of differentials to GSA wage employees at the Central Plant who are exposed to the specific working conditions for which differentials have been authorized."

The parties moved the differential pay dispute, as over "dirty work" framed by the study and the Union letters of May 3, 1974 and September 1, 1975 into arbitration. The case was heard in arbitration on March 15 and 16, 1976. The arbitrator denied the Union grievances in issue.

On June 28, 1976, the Respondent voided the authorization to pay a 25 percent environmental differential for wage employees of the Central Plant when they perform work on the roof on the ground that the roof is surrounded by a wall and, therefore, work on the plant roof is not hazardous. In a letter to the Union dated July 12, 1976, the Respondent rescinded the letter (decision) of June 28, 1976, and stated that it was reconsidering the "original determination in this matter." Respondent invited the Union to meet and confer before it took any final action.

On July 16, 1976, in reply to the management letter the Union stated its position: "The settlement reached under the grievance procedure became an extension of the Labor-Management Agreement and is a part thereof" The Union asked for Respondents views on why the Agreement should be reopened at this time.

On July 26, the Respondent wrote to the Union and set out in detail the reasons for denying the differential pay. It pointed out that conditions on the roof had not been sufficiently considered in making the authorizations. It further stated:

- (1) There is a 5-foot wall on the west end of the roof and a 2 foot wall on the east end.
- (2) Most of the work on the roof is performed within an area surrounded on all sides by a 30-foot wall.

(3) In the area surrounded by the 30-foot wall there are enclosed ladders and permanent catwalks that were found to be stable.

(4) The U. S. Civil Service Commission has provided an informal interpretation of the "high work" section of Appendix J to the effect that, in measuring heights, the level to which an employee might fall would be the criterion. Under the circumstances this level appears to the plant roof and not the ground as previously thought.

The parties met on August 4, 1976 to discuss the rescission. The matter was concluded on August 17, 1976, when the Respondent wrote: "After careful consideration of the union's views, we have concluded that under the provisions of Appendix J, FPM Supplement 532-1, environmental differential pay for high work at the Central Heating Plant is unwarranted and therefore cannot be authorized."

The complaint duly followed the impasse.

Issue

The issue as framed by the Regional Commissioner is as follows:

Whereer the Respondent violated Sections 19(a) (1) and (6) of Executive Order 11491, as amended, by failing to meet and confer in good faith with the American Federation of Government Employees, District 14 2/ (sic) when, on June 28, 1976, it unilaterally rescinded certain portions of the grievance settlement/environmental differential pay authorization of March 8, 1976.

Conclusions

The issue as framed by the Regional Commissioner and addressed by the parties is misconceived. The issue presented by this case is whether the Respondent had a right (duty) to rescind its commitment to pay environmental differential pay for high work on the roof of the Central Heating Plant because of a mistake of fact.

2/ This is a misnomer. The proper party is Local 2151.

If the Respondent had a right to rescind the agreement based on a mistake of fact, the question of whether or not the Order was violated is not reached.

The study group understood the height of the roof of the plant to be 130 feet above the ground. It applied Appendix J, which authorizes environmental differential pay for work on any structure at least 100 feet above the ground, deck, floor or roof, or from the bottom of a tank or pit. Not considered was the fact that the roof of the plant is surrounded by a protective wall, and there is no hazard to the employees attendant upon height alone.

When the Respondent became aware of the mistake it took action to rectify the error. In doing so it invited the Union to confer and to offer any facts which might alter the proposed rescission. The record does not contain evidence that the Union responded directly to the question submitted to it by Respondent. Instead, the evidence is that the Union took an intractable position that the settlement became a part of the Labor-Management Agreement and was unchangeable.

The Union's position is opportunistic and legally unacceptable. It seeks to take unfair advantage of Respondent by insisting on environmental differential pay for high work where clearly it is not authorized. There is no hazard shown. The Union does not present an arguable case for application of Appendix J, "high work" to the conditions on a roof surrounded by a wall. Further, the Union does not consider or assess the affect of a mistake of fact on its position. The Respondent had a right to void the high work pay authorization, and it did so. Once the settlement was legally voided, it was dead for all purposes and could not be resurrected by making it an extension of the Agreement as the Union contends. Whether or not intended, the Union successfully diverted attention from the real issue mistake of fact. It focused on the fact of settlement alone without regard to the absurdity of the substance of the settlement, and thereupon builds its case on an irrelevancy.

UNITED STATES DEPARTMENT OF LABOR
ASSISTANT SECRETARY FOR LABOR-MANAGEMENT RELATIONS
SUMMARY OF DECISION AND ORDER OF THE ASSISTANT SECRETARY
PURSUANT TO SECTION 6 OF EXECUTIVE ORDER 11491, AS AMENDED

At the time the Respondent offered high work differential pay for work on the roof of the Central Heating Plant, the Union must have known that no hazard was presented by the height of the roof because of the surrounding wall. It was certainly aware of the requirements of Appendix J of the Federal Personal Manual. Yet, there is no evidence that it either disclosed the facts or questioned the accuracy of Respondent's conclusions on the matter of height. In accepting the authorization for high pay knowing the inherent deficiencies of the in Respondent's premises, the Union took a calculated risk that the settlement might be avoided. Under these circumstances, the Union's complaint that it was deprived of an opportunity to arbitrate high work pay cannot be taken seriously. While other maxims in Equity may be more appropriate, it is sufficient here to say simply, "He who seeks equity must do equity."

Under the circumstances of this case, work on the roof of the Central Heating Plant is hardly more hazardous than living (working) on the penthouse of a ten story building. This is not to say that work on the roof of the Plant is never dangerous, but speculation on such possibilities is not necessary to a decision in this case. The definitions of hazards on the roof of the Central Heating Plant, within the meaning of Appendix J, are best left to future dealings between the parties.

The legal principle applicable to this case is simple and indisputable: An agreement can be rescinded, at the option of a party, upon mistake of fact whether the mistake be unilateral or mutual. Here, the Respondent properly rescinded the settlement agreement of May 8, 1976 authorizing environmental pay on the ground of a unilateral mistake of fact.

Recommendation

Upon consideration of the issues, evidence, and arguments of the parties, it is recommendation that the charges against the Respondent of violation the Order be dismissed.

U.S. ENVIRONMENTAL PROTECTION AGENCY,
REGION III
A/SLMR No. 997

This case involved an unfair labor practice complaint filed by the American Federation of Government Employees, Local 3631, AFL-CIO (AFGE) alleging that the Respondent violated Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order by establishing and implementing a safety committee (which included unit employees) at the Respondent's Annapolis Field Office without affording the AFGE an opportunity to meet and confer concerning the establishment and implementation of the committee or its impact on unit employees. The Respondent contended that its obligation to meet and confer concerning the establishment of the committee and its implementation and impact was negated by an "emergency" situation which required the closing of the Laboratory.

The Administrative Law Judge found that there was no "emergency" situation which would have precluded, under Section 12(b) of the Order, the Respondent's obligation to meet and confer concerning the establishment of such committee, which included unit employees and, thus, the Respondent's failure to meet and confer constituted a violation of Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order.

The Assistant Secretary adopted the Administrative Law Judge's findings, conclusions, and recommendations and issued an appropriate remedial order which included the disestablishment of the existing Committee. He also imposed certain bargaining obligations on the Respondent with respect to the actions of the previously established Committee and in the event of the establishment of any new safety committee which included unit employees.

DECISION AND ORDER

On November 29, 1977, Administrative Law Judge David W. Pelkey issued his Recommended Decision and Order in the above-entitled proceeding, finding that the Respondent had engaged in the unfair labor practices alleged in the complaint and recommending that it cease and desist therefrom and take certain affirmative actions as set forth in the attached Administrative Law Judge's Recommended Decision and Order. Thereafter, the Complainant filed exceptions with respect to the Administrative Law Judge's Recommended Order.

The Assistant Secretary has reviewed the rulings of the Administrative Law Judge made at the hearing and finds that no prejudicial error was committed. The rulings are hereby affirmed. Upon consideration of the Administrative Law Judge's Recommended Decision and Order and the entire record in the subject case, including the exceptions filed by the Complainant, I hereby adopt the Administrative Law Judge's findings, conclusions and recommendations as modified herein.

ORDER

Pursuant to Section 6(b) of Executive Order 11491, as amended, and Section 203.26(b) of the Rules and Regulations, the Assistant Secretary of Labor for Labor-Management Relations hereby orders that the Environmental Protection Agency, Region III, shall:

1. Cease and desist from:

(a) Refusing to meet and confer with the American Federation of Government Employees, Local 3631, AFL-CIO, on the implementation and impact of any recommendations of the Annapolis Field Office Safety Committee which have been adopted and put into effect.

(b) Establishing an Annapolis Field Office Safety Committee, which includes unit employees, without first meeting and conferring with the American Federation of Government Employees, Local 3631, AFL-CIO, or any other exclusive representative, concerning the establishment of such committee.

(c) In any like or related manner, interfering with, restraining, or coercing employees in the exercise of their rights assured by Executive Order 11491, as amended.

2. Take the following affirmative actions in order to effectuate the purposes and policies of Executive Order 11491, as amended:

(a) Disestablish the presently constituted Annapolis Field Office Safety Committee.

(b) Upon request, meet and confer with the American Federation of Government Employees, Local 3631, AFL-CIO, with respect to the implementation and impact of any recommendations of the Annapolis Field Office Safety Committee which have been adopted and put into effect.

(c) Prior to establishing a safety committee which includes unit employees, meet and confer with the representatives of the American Federation of Government Employees, Local 3631, AFL-CIO, or any other exclusive representative, with respect to the establishment of such committee, the procedures for its implementation, and its impact on unit employees.

(d) Post at its U.S. Environmental Protection Agency, Region III, facilities, copies of the attached notice marked "Appendix" on forms to be furnished by the Assistant Secretary of Labor for Labor-Management Relations. Upon receipt of such forms, they shall be signed by the Regional Administrator, Region III, and shall be posted and maintained by him for 60 consecutive days thereafter, in conspicuous places, including all bulletin boards and other places where notices to employees are customarily posted. The Regional Administrator shall take reasonable steps to insure that such notices are not altered, defaced, or covered by any other material.

(e) Pursuant to Section 203.27 of the Regulations, notify the Assistant Secretary, in writing, within 30 days from the date of this order as to what steps have been taken to comply herewith.

RECOMMENDED DECISION AND ORDER

Background

In an Amended Complaint filed on June 3, 1977, Complainant alleged that Respondent had engaged in violations of Subsections 19(a)(1) (hereafter 19(a)(1)) and 19(a)(6) (hereafter 19(a)(6)) of Executive Order 11491, as amended (the Order). By its terms, 19(a)(1) provides that an agency's management shall not interfere with, restrain or coerce an employee in the exercise of the right, freely and without fear of penalty or reprisal, to form, to join and to assist a labor organization; or to refrain from any such activity. By its terms 19(a)(6) provides that an agency's management shall not refuse to consult, to confer or to negotiate with a labor organization by refusing to meet with, at reasonable times, and to confer with, in good faith, with respect to personnel policies and practices, and matters affecting general working conditions.

The basis of Complainant's allegation that Respondent violated the Order is reflected in so much of the Amended Complaint as reads:

"During the second half of 1976, a Safety Committee was set up and made to function at the Annapolis Field Station, without Union input."

A Notice of Hearing on Complaint issued on June 21, 1977, and, on August 2 and 3, 1977, I conducted hearings on the Complaint in accordance with the provisions of 5 U.S.C. 554. At the beginning of such hearings, the parties adopted and submitted the following issues for resolution:

- A) Whether, in the establishment and implementation of a safety committee at Annapolis, Maryland, consideration of membership of the committee was effected without meeting and conferring with Complainant, in violation of Subsections 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order.
- B) Whether, in connection with the establishment and implementation of the safety committee at Annapolis, Maryland, Respondent did not afford Complainant a timely opportunity to negotiate the impact of the establishment and implementation of the safety committee, in violation of Subsections 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order.

Such issues will be discussed and resolved in connection with my consideration of the pertinent facts I find to be established as a result of my examination and evaluation of the entire record established herein. The facts found to be established follow.

Findings of Fact

- 1) At all pertinent times, Complainant was the exclusive representative of Respondent's non-professional employees.
- 2) A June 8, 1976, Environmental Protection Agency occupational safety and health manual required formation of a safety committee, composed of management and employee representatives, to advise management on employee safety and health matters and to recommend improvement of policies and procedures for its safety and health program.

3) On July 28, 1976, representatives of Respondent and Complainant met to discuss the safety and health program. Employee participation in the program, to include representation from Complainant, was included in the discussion.

4) Complainant, in an August 10, 1976, written communication, addressed the subject of the basis on which its committee representative would be determined.

5) On August 17, 19 and 20, 1976, an Occupational Health Program Manager evaluated, for health hazards, the laboratory work environment at Respondent's Annapolis, Maryland, Field Office (Laboratory).

6) The Manager's findings, set forth in a written report to a Chief, Occupational Safety and Health, identified several environmental hazards considered to constitute immediate and serious challenges to specific and to overall well-being of a worker in the laboratory. His general recommendation was that an in-depth industrial hygiene/occupational health survey be conducted at the laboratory "as soon as possible."

7) On August 20, 1976, the agency's Assistant Administrator for Planning and Management suspended all laboratory operations at the Laboratory "because of unsafe working conditions." He nominated members of his Occupational Safety and Health Staff to assist Respondent's Administrator "in establishing the conditions under which laboratory operations may be safely resumed."

8) On August 24, 1976, the Laboratory Director told his Chief, Chemistry Section, to appoint a safety committee composed of representatives from each operating section. Reportedly, the committee was then to be designed to effect a more safety-conscious atmosphere than had existed in the past; to assist in effecting correction of deficiencies that had been revealed; to be a "contract point" in connection with future inspections; and to assist in the accomplishment of physical examinations of workers at the Laboratory.

9) In connection with the establishment and implementation of the committee and its functions, and although formation of such a committee had been discussed at the July 28 meeting, Respondent gave Complainant no opportunity to discuss the membership of the committee or the impact of the implementation of committee activity on workers represented by Complainant.

10) In an August 25, 1976, report, an Acting Chief, Occupational Safety and Health Staff, identified "lack of proper housekeeping" as the most obvious problem at the Laboratory. He made several suggestions designed to effect proper housekeeping. He recommended that the Laboratory be kept "closed" until certain deficiencies were corrected and another inspection was accomplished.

11) September and November 1976 progress reports dealt with corrections of identified hazards and contained recommendations as to dates on which Laboratory operations could be resumed.

12) On November 12, 1976, the agency's Assistant Administrator for Planning and Management authorized "limited resumption of Laboratory operations." Such operations were undertaken.

13) The Laboratory safety committee held its first meeting on November 23, 1976. Minutes of that meeting were designated for distribution to all Laboratory employees on November 29.

14) All Laboratory operations were resumed on or about December 1, 1976.

15) Representatives of Complainant and Respondent discussed the committee at a December 14, 1976, meeting. Minutes of the meeting state: "This is a HQ matter and we are awaiting HQ reaction."

16) In a January 31, 1977, memorandum, Respondent invited Complainant to designate a unit member (one who worked at the Laboratory was suggested) to serve on the committee. The invitation indicated that, because the committee was established under emergency conditions, the invitation had not been tendered at an earlier date.

Discussion

Respondent acknowledges that it gave Complainant no opportunity to participate in the formation of the safety committee and the implementation and impact of its activities until January 1977. Further, Respondent acknowledges that, under other than the situation that existed on August 24, 1976, it had a obligation to afford Claimant the opportunity so to participate or an obligation to grant a request that Complainant be given the opportunity to participate prior to such formation and implementation.

However, Respondent submits that formation and implementation attended a situation at the Laboratory wherein environmental conditions constituted such serious hazards to the health of workers as to require suspension of laboratory activities, and one wherein suspension of laboratory activities rendered the Laboratory incapable of accomplishment of its mission. Respondent submits that the situation existed from the day laboratory activities were suspended until the day they were resumed. Respondent adopts the posture that the formation and implementation were required as a result of the development and recognition of an emergency situation at the Laboratory that dictated corrective action within a time-frame that reasonably precluded consultation and/or negotiation with Complainant relative thereto.

In connection with the foregoing, Respondent references Section 12(b)(6) of the Order. That provision announces the proposition that, even though a matter is one that is subject to a labor-management agreement under the Order, management retains the right to take whatever actions are necessary to carry out the mission of an agency in emergency situations. Respondent proposes that, because of the emergency situation at the Laboratory, formation of the committee and implementation of its activities, without participation by Complainant, were necessary to enable the Laboratory to carry out its mission.

Were I, contrary to fact, to find that the need for formation of the committee was dictated by the emergency situation existing on August 24, 1976, I would not find Respondent's proposal, so far as it relates to organization and implementation and impact of activities, to be decisionally persuasive. I adopt Complainant's submission that, so far as health hazards were concerned, no emergency situation existed after laboratory activities were suspended on August 20. Further, I attach significant decisional weight to so much of the Laboratory Director's testimony as reflected his opinion that negotiation on the implementation and impact of the committee, between the date the Laboratory "closed" and the date it "reopened," would have caused no significant delay in reopening. My evaluation of the foregoing and my review and evaluation of all other record evidence are found to be supportive of the finding that the actions and inactions of Respondent, relative to implementation and impact of the activities of the committee, were so without reason and excuse as to constitute an unfair labor practice. I so conclude.

I find Respondent's proposal, that the formation of the committee was dictated by the emergency situation existing on August 24, 1976, to be without merit. Examination and evaluation of the record, in a light I consider to reflect most favorably upon Respondent, result in my acceptance of the proposition that formation of the committee was occasioned, but not dictated, by recognition of, what reasonably was considered to be, an emergency situation.

The record reveals that formation of a safety committee, membership of which was to include employee representatives, was dictated by the requirements of the agency's June 8, 1976, occupational safety and health manual. The record reveals that, on July 28, 1976, Respondent was aware of the mandate to form such a committee and knew that Complainant was exclusive representative of its non-professional employees. My evaluation of the foregoing and my review and evaluation of all other record evidence are found to be supportive of the finding that the actions and inactions of Respondent, relative to formation of the committee, were so without reason and excuse as to constitute an unfair labor practice. I so conclude.

The foregoing conclusions follow recognition and evaluation of Respondent's argument that the complaint should be dismissed because, after Complainant was notified of establishment of the committee, it failed to advise Respondent that negotiation was desired. Assuming, for the purpose of argument, Complainant's obligation to advise, I read the record of events attending the July 28, 1976, meeting as establishing the argument to be without merit.

Recommendation

Having found that Respondent has engaged in conduct that is violative of Sections 19(a)(1) and 19(a)(6) of Executive Order 11491, as amended, I recommend that the Assistant Secretary, to effectuate the purposes and policies of that Order, adopt the Recommended Order that follows.

Recommended Order

Pursuant to Section 6(b) of Executive Order 11491, as amended, and Section 203.26(b) of the Regulations, the Assistant Secretary of Labor for Labor-Management Relations hereby orders that U.S. Environmental Protection Agency, Region III (EPA-3) shall:

1. Cease and desist from:

a) Establishing and implementing the activities of a Safety Committee at its Annapolis Field Station without notifying Local 3631 of American Federation of Government Employees and affording such representative the opportunity to meet and confer on the establishment and implementation and impact of the activities of the committee.

b) In any like or related manner, interfering with, restraining, or coercing employees in the exercise of their rights assured by Executive Order 11491, as amended.

2) Take the following affirmative actions in order to effectuate the purposes and policies of Executive Order 11491, as amended:

a) Notify Local 3631 of American Federation of Government Employees that it will, upon request, meet and confer in good faith on the establishment and implementation and impact of the activities of a Safety Committee at its Annapolis Field Office.

b) Post at its U.S. Environmental Protection Agency, Region III, facilities, copies of the attached notice marked " Appendix" on forms to be furnished by the Assistant Secretary of Labor for Labor-Management Relations. Upon receipt of such forms, they shall be signed by the Regional Administrator, Region III, and shall be posted and maintained by him for 60 consecutive days thereafter, in conspicuous places, including all bulletin boards and other places where notices to employees are customarily posted. The Regional Administrator shall take reasonable steps to insure that such notices are not altered, defaced, or covered by any other material.

c) Pursuant to Section 203.27 of the Regulations, notify the Assistant Secretary, in writing, within 30 days from the date of this Order, as to what steps have been taken to comply herewith.

INTERNAL REVENUE SERVICE
A/SLMR No. 998

INTERNAL REVENUE SERVICE

This case involved an unfair labor practice complaint filed by the National Treasury Employees Union, Chapter 8, et al. (NTEU) alleging that the Respondent had violated Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order by unilaterally declaring terminated 61 provisions of the parties' expired Multi-District Agreement. This was done after the Complainant declared negotiations for a new agreement to be at impasse and announced its intention to request the services of the Federal Service Impasses Panel. The Respondent defended its action by asserting that the cancelled provisions represented "institutional benefits" accruing to the Complainant as an institution, arising solely from the agreement and, therefore, not surviving the expiration thereof. The Respondent also urged that the complaint be dismissed for failure to name an appropriate respondent, contending that because the bargaining relationship between the Respondent and the NTEU existed at the district office level, the district offices were indispensable parties to this complaint.

The Administrative Law Judge concluded that only certain specific provisions of the agreement expired automatically when the agreement ended. Except for those items, he found that the items cancelled by the Respondent had become terms or conditions of employment which could not be changed unilaterally after expiration of the agreement. He noted further the requirement that such terms may not be changed after impasse is reached without giving the NTEU an opportunity to invoke the services of the Federal Service Impasses Panel. The Administrative Law Judge also concluded that where, as here, agency management above the organizational level of exclusive recognition is responsible for improper conduct, it commits a violation of Section 19(a)(6) as well as Section 19(a)(1) of the Order.

The Assistant Secretary adopted the Administrative Law Judge's findings, conclusions and recommendations with respect to those provisions of the negotiated agreement which the Administrative Law Judge found had survived the agreement and had, therefore, been improperly terminated by the Respondent. Accordingly, he ordered that the Respondent cease and desist from the conduct found violative of Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order and that it take certain affirmative remedial actions.

DECISION AND ORDER

On October 6, 1977, Administrative Law Judge Milton Kramer issued his Recommended Decision and Order in the above-entitled proceeding, finding that the Respondent had engaged in certain unfair labor practices and recommending that it cease and desist therefrom and take certain affirmative actions as set forth in the attached Administrative Law Judge's Recommended Decision and Order. Thereafter, the Respondent and the Complainants filed exceptions and supporting briefs with respect to the Administrative Law Judge's Recommended Decision and Order.

The Assistant Secretary has reviewed the rulings of the Administrative Law Judge made at the hearing and finds that no prejudicial error was committed. The rulings are hereby affirmed. 1/ Upon consideration of the Administrative Law Judge's Recommended Decision and Order and the entire record in the subject case, including the exceptions and supporting

1/ Among other things, the Respondent excepted to the consideration of post-complaint conduct and the remedy thereto recommended by the Administrative Law Judge. I find, in agreement with the Administrative Law Judge, that such evidence was properly considered as background with respect to the alleged unfair labor practice herein. Cf. National Labor Relations Board, Region 17, 3 A/SLMR 427, 429-430, A/SLMR No. 295 (1973), and Professional Air Traffic Controllers Organization, MEBA, AFL-CIO, A/SLMR No. 878 (1977). Further, the fact that the Respondent's subsequent misconduct flowed directly from the unfair labor practices alleged in the complaint and found herein makes it appropriate to specifically remedy such conduct.

briefs filed by the parties, I hereby adopt the findings, conclusions 2/ and recommendations 3/ of the Administrative Law Judge.

ORDER

Pursuant to Section 6(b) of Executive Order 11491, as amended, and Section 203.26(b) of the Regulations, the Assistant Secretary of Labor for Labor-Management Relations hereby orders that the Internal Revenue Service shall:

1. Cease and desist from:

(a) Making unilateral changes in personnel policies and practices after the expiration of a negotiated agreement containing such personnel policies and practices in the absence of a bargaining impasse or, if a bargaining impasse exists, without affording the National Treasury Employees Union, Chapter 8, et al., or any other exclusive representative, the opportunity to invoke the services of the Federal Service Impasses Panel at a time prior to the implementation of such changes.

(b) In any like or related manner interfering with, restraining, or coercing employees in the exercise of their rights assured by Executive Order 11491, as amended.

2. Take the following affirmative actions in order to effectuate the purposes and policies of Executive Order 11491, as amended:

(a) Proceed to grievance-nonadvisory arbitration in any case in which the past refusal to do so was predicated upon the expiration of the Multi-District Agreement between the Internal Revenue Service and the National Treasury Employees Union, Chapter 8, et al., upon appropriate request, within 21 days after the date of this order.

2/ Under the circumstances, the provision for advisory arbitration expired upon the termination of the parties' negotiated agreement. Compare Internal Revenue Service, Brookhaven Service Center, A/SLMR No. 859 (1977) in which final arbitration was found to continue as a term and condition of employment after the expiration of a negotiated agreement, absent agreement of the parties that arbitration terminates or in the event of a post-impasse change. Absent contract language to the contrary, dues withholding also would have expired. See Internal Revenue Service, Ogden Service Center, et al., A/SLMR No. 806 (1977). However, the agreement herein specifically provided for the continuation of dues withholding for 56 days after the termination of the agreement.

3/ While the Administrative Law Judge inadvertently failed to make a specific finding that the Respondent violated Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order, it is clear from a reading of his Recommended Decision and Order that the Administrative Law Judge intended to make such a finding. Cf. California National Guard, State Military Forces, Sacramento, California, 4 A/SLMR 103, 105, A/SLMR No. 348 (1974). This inadvertance is hereby corrected.

(b) To the extent consonant with law and regulations, restore all benefits, including annual leave, denied due to unilateral changes in personnel policies and practices after the expiration of the May 3, 1974, negotiated agreement, for the period November 8, 1975, to December 23, 1975.

(c) Post at the District Offices of the Internal Revenue Service that were parties to said Multi-District Agreement, copies of the attached notice marked "Appendix" on forms to be furnished by the Assistant Secretary of Labor for Labor-Management Relations. Upon receipt of such forms, they shall be signed by the Director of each said District Office and shall be posted and maintained by him for 60 consecutive days thereafter, in conspicuous places, including all places where notices to employees are customarily posted. Said Directors shall take reasonable steps to insure that such notices are not altered, defaced, or covered by any other material.

(d) Pursuant to Section 203.27 of the Regulations, notify the Assistant Secretary, in writing, within 30 days of the date of this order as to what steps have been taken to comply herewith.

RECOMMENDED DECISION AND ORDER

Preliminary Statement

This case arises under Executive Order 11491 as amended. It was initiated by a complaint filed January 10, 1977 alleging a violation of Sections 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Executive Order. The violation was alleged to consist of the Respondent unilaterally declaring terminated 61 provisions of an expired Multi-District agreement when the Complainant advised the Respondent that negotiations were at an impasse and that it intended to request the services of the Federal Service Impasses Panel.

The Respondent filed a response to the complaint in which it stated that the provisions of the agreement that were cancelled were those that concern benefits or duties accruing directly to the Complainant as an institution, which benefits and duties arose solely from the negotiated agreement and did not survive the expiration of the agreement. The response argued that the cancellation of such rights of the union therefore was not in violation of the Executive Order.

On April 14, 1977 the Acting Regional Administrator issued a Notice of Hearing to be held in Washington, D.C. on May 31, 1977. Pursuant to an Order Rescheduling Hearing, a hearing was held in Washington on June 15, 1977. Both parties were represented by counsel. They introduced a stipulation and joint exhibits. The Complainant offered in evidence thirteen exhibits, the authenticity of which the Respondent conceded, but the admissibility of which the Respondent opposed. Eleven of them were received in evidence. Neither party offered any witnesses and both waived closing argument. Both sides filed briefs.

FACTS

1. On June 8, 1976, the Internal Revenue Service acting on behalf of 57 IRS District Offices throughout the United States, and the National Treasury Employees Union acting on behalf of its chapters and joint councils that represented unit employees of IRS in those 57 offices, began negotiations on a successor collective bargaining to replace the Multi-District Agreement covering approximately 30,000 employees in the aforementioned 57 IRS District Offices.

2. The agreement sought to be negotiated would be the third such multi-unit agreement between the parties and was to be known as Multi-District Agreement III (MDA III).

3. The parties met and negotiated on approximately 40 separate occasions between June and September 1976 in an effort to reach agreement.

4. The expiration date of MDA II was August 3, 1976. On July 28, 1976 the parties were still in negotiation on MDA III and they extended MDA II to September 3, 1976. On August 27, 1976 they again extended it subject to either party filing a request with the Federal Service Impasses Panel. The August 27 agreement extended MDA II "until such time as the Union invokes Impasse as provided for in Executive Order 11491, as amended" and further provided:

"... Each party reserves the right, subsequent to the termination of 'mediation' or the termination of direct negotiations between the parties, to serve upon the other party in writing a five-day notice of termination of this extension agreement. The agreement will then terminate at midnight of the fifth (5th) calendar day after receipt by either party of a notice of termination. The Union agrees to give the the Employer five (5) days notice in writing prior to exercising its right to invoke the Impasse Procedures referred to above. ..."

5. On November 2, 1976, NTEU National President, Vincent L. Connery, informed the Commissioner of the Internal Revenue Service, Donald C. Alexander, that NTEU was terminating the August 27 extension and informed him that it would be proceeding to the Federal Service Impasses Panel by filing a request with PSIP after five days as provided in the August 27 extension agreement.

6. By letter dated November 5, 1976 Billy J. Brown, IRS Director of Personnel, acknowledged the NTEU communication of November 2 and informed NTEU President Connery that IRS considered the contract terminated and that the termination ended the "institutional benefits" to the Union contained in the contract. A list of the "institutional benefits" was attached. It stated also that other benefits in the agreement that accrue to individual employees would continue in effect. 1/

7. On November 8, 1976 NTEU by letter to Commissioner Alexander charged IRS with violating Sections 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Executive Order by its letter of November 5, 1976.

8. On November 8, 1976 NTEU by letter to Commissioner Alexander requested a meeting with IRS to discuss the IRS letter of November 5, 1976 and its attachment.

9. On November 19, 1976 a meeting was held by representatives of IRS and NTEU to try to resolve the issues raised by the IRS letter of November 5, 1976 and the NTEU unfair-labor-practice charge of November 8, 1976. No agreement was reached.

10. On December 7, 1976 the IRS Director of the Personnel Division by letter informed the NTEU National President of the IRS final decision that no violation of the Executive Order had occurred.

11. On December 17, 1976 NTEU President Connery executed the complaint in this case and the same day NTEU General Counsel Tobias mailed it to the Area Director. It was filed January 10, 1977.

12. On December 23, 1976 the parties agreed that effective that date MDA II would again become effective immediately "until the implementation date of the Multi-District III agreement" which had been negotiated and was pending ratification. MDA III was ratified and became effective May 1, 1977, replacing the reinstated MDA II.

13. During the period MDA II was not in effect preceding the effective date of MDA III, November 8 to December 23, 1975, the Respondent denied to the Complainant what it considered "institutional benefits" of MDA II. Thus administrative time to stewards was denied on three occasions, 2/ IRS denied permission to post a union publication on a bulletin board, 3/ it denied permission to hold a chapter meeting in an IRS meeting room, and it held grievances not subject to arbitration if the grievance was filed during that period although arbitration was not invoked until after MDA II was reinstated on December 23, 1976. 4/

I. The Proper Parties

I. The Agency contends that the complaint should be dismissed because not filed against the proper parties, i.e., the exclusive recognition is by 57 separate District Offices which have the bargaining relationship, either certified or recognized, and they are indispensable parties, while the complaint here is against the National Internal Revenue Service.

The conduct complained of was directed by the National IRS which also engaged in the negotiations on behalf of the District Offices. It was the National IRS office that declared the "institutional benefits" terminated at the expiration of MDA II, and determined its consequences.

2/ C. Exhs. 2, 4, 11.
3/ C. Exh. 9.
4/ C. Exhs. 3, 5, 6, 7, 8.

A priori, and on the authority of several decisions of the Assistant Secretary, 5/ an agency need not have a bargaining relationship with a union to commit a violation of section 19(a)(1) of the Executive Order. Just about anyone could be guilty of interfering with, restraining, or coercing an employee in the exercise of his rights assured by the Executive Order. So at most this position of the Respondent could plausibly have been directed only to dismissing the complaint with respect to its 19(a)(6) aspect, -- for whatever purpose that would have served.

But since the decision of the Federal Labor Relations Council in Naval Air Rework Facility, Pensacola, Florida and Secretary of the Navy and American Federation of Government Employees, AFL-CIO, Local 1960, FLRC No. 76A-37 (May 4, 1977) and of the Assistant Secretary in the same case on remand, A/SLMR No. 873 (August 4, 1977), it is settled that agency management above the organizational level of exclusive recognition commits a violation of section 19(a)(6) as well as 19(a)(1) when it is responsible for the improper conduct alleged.

The complaint should not be dismissed for failure to name the appropriate respondent.

II. The Merits

II. The Respondent contends that for the period MDA II expired and was not extended or reinstated by agreement, it expired "in its entirety, and nothing is left." 6/ It concedes, however, that the terms of the agreement that were required subjects of bargaining became established working conditions and could not be changed unilaterally without bargaining for their rescission. It takes the position that the provisions of the agreement it declared of no effect were only those that conferred "institutional benefits", i.e., benefits to the union which existed only because of the existence of the agreement. The Assistant Secretary has addressed himself to this problem or related problems at least three times.

In U.S. Army Corps of Engineers, Philadelphia District and American Federation of Government Employees, Local 902, AFL-CIO, A/SLMR No. 673 (June 23, 1976), the parties engaged in good faith bargaining until they reached impasse. Neither party invoked the services of the Federal Service Impasses Panel. The Assistant Secretary said that in such situation the agency had the right unilaterally to change existing conditions of employment which change did not exceed the scope of the change it proposed during the negotiations. The agency did make a change that did not exceed the scope of what it proposed. However, it did so abruptly without notice to the union in time to give it "ample opportunity" to invoke the services of the Panel. The union then invoked the services of the Panel and filed a complaint under the Executive Order. The Assistant Secretary held that such conduct by the agency violated Sections 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Executive Order. The reason it was found to be such a violation was that the union must be given an opportunity to invoke such services and if it does "it will effectuate the purposes of the Order to require that the parties must, in the absence of an overriding exigency, maintain the status quo and permit the processes of the Panel to run its course before a unilateral change in terms or conditions of employment can be effectuated."

It is observed that in the instant case the Complainant was under contractual obligation to give the Respondent five days notice of its intent to invoke the services of FSIP. ^{7/} It did so on November 2, 1976, and only three days later, before the Complainant could lawfully carry out its intent, the Respondent by letter of November 5 advised the Complainant that what it considered "institutional benefits" conferred by the agreement were no longer in effect. ^{8/} (It is observed also that among what the Respondent designated as "institutional benefits" no longer in effect was the right of an employee to invoke arbitration of a grievance if he was unsuccessful in the preceding four steps of processing the grievance as provided in the agreement.)

Internal Revenue Service, Ogden Service Center, et al. and National Treasury Employees Union, NTEU Chapter No. 066, et al., A/SLMR No. 806 was decided March 1, 1977, after the critical events in this case, and the parties did not have the benefit of its teaching to guide their conduct

So far as the issues in that case are relevant to the issues in this case, the material facts are the same in both cases except that that case did not involve the question of resort to FSIP. The agreement that expired in that case was a Multi-Center Agreement (MCA) instead of a Multi-District Agreement. The Internal Revenue Service declared certain provisions of MCA no longer in effect. Among them were provisions for administrative leave for union representatives to prepare grievances, posting on bulletin boards, permission to the union to address new employees and training classes, and the allowance of appeals of grievances to arbitration. The Administrative Law Judge recommended that the unilateral termination of such arrangements upon expiration of the agreement be held not violative of the Executive Order. In disagreement with the ALJ the Assistant Secretary held:

^{8/} Exh. J 6.

"... the unilateral elimination of those agreement provisions characterized by the Respondent as 'institutional benefits' accruing to the union qua union was violative of Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order. Thus, in my view, only those rights and privileges which are based solely on the existence of a written agreement -- e.g., checkoff privileges -- in effect, terminated with the expiration of a negotiated agreement. On the other hand, other rights and privileges accorded to exclusive representatives continue in effect until such time as they as they are modified or eliminated pursuant to negotiations or changed after a good faith bargaining impasse has been reached. Under these circumstances, I find that the Respondent Service Centers' unilateral elimination of other agreement provisions related to the NTEU's rights, such as posting privileges, etc., constituted an improper unilateral change in personnel policies and practices in violation of Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order." [Footnotes omitted.]

A still later decision of the Assistant Secretary involving essentially the same parties, is Department of the Treasury, Internal Revenue Service, Brookhaven Service Center and National Treasury Employees Union and Chapter 099, NTEU, A/SLMR No. 859, decided June 29, 1977. In that case the underlying facts were the same as in A/SLMR No. 806, i.e., the same MCA had expired. The Respondent had refused arbitration as the last step in grievance procedure because of its position that with the expiration of the agreement that provision had become inoperative as an "institutional benefit" of the expired agreement. The Assistant Secretary held:

"... arbitration is not one of those rights or privileges uniquely tied to a written agreement which terminates upon the expiration of a Federal sector negotiated agreement. Rather ... arbitration, once agreed upon by the parties as the final step for the settling of disputes arising under a negotiated agreement, continues thereafter as a term and condition of employment . . ."

The Assistant Secretary added a footnote that this holding did not mean that an activity could not unilaterally change a condition of employment if such change did not exceed the scope of its proposals in prior negotiations and the parties had bargained to impasse over such proposal and the matters had not been submitted to FSIP, citing U.S. Army Corps of Engineers, Philadelphia District, supra.

I conclude that very little contained in an expired agreement expires with the agreement automatically other than the dues withholding provisions. The provisions the Respondent asserted were no longer effective after expiration are set forth in the attachment to Joint Exhibit 6. It would unreasonably prolong this Recommended Decision to discuss them serially. The complaint describes them as some 61 separate provisions in the "MDA II". On the basis of the decisions discussed above, I conclude that only Article 34, providing for advisory arbitration of adverse actions which the Complainant concedes expired with the expiration of the agreement; ^{9/} the last sentence of Article 35, Section 3(A), authorizing the union to initiate a grievance when it believes it has been denied a right under the agreement; Article 37, providing for a Labor-Management Relations Committee consisting of representatives of the union and representatives of Management; and Article 38, providing for dues withholding, expired with the expiration of the agreement. ^{10/} I do not consider those provisions to be included in the phrase

^{9/} Plaintiff's brief, p. 12, fn. 4.

^{10/} Article 35, Section 3B, providing that the Union would have the right to be present at formal discussions between an employee and management concerning a grievance, survives not because it is a provision of the agreement but because it is mandated by the last sentence of Section 10(e) of the Executive Order.

"terms or conditions of employment" as used in U.S. Army Corps of Engineers, Philadelphia District, supra, and hence not within the interdiction of that case against an agency unilaterally changing a contract provision after impasse without giving the union an opportunity to invoke the services of the Federal Service Impasses Panel. Also, Article 39, setting forth the duration and termination of the agreement, became obsolete with its expiration.

III. The Remedy

The complaint complains of "some 61 separate provisions in the" MDA that were unilaterally cancelled. The charge preceding the complaint charged a violation of Sections 19(a)(1) and (6) in the Respondent announcing its intention to ignore 61 provisions of the expired agreement.

The Respondent objected to the admission in evidence of eleven Complainant exhibits showing eleven instances of the Respondent carrying out its announced intention, on the ground that they postdated the original charge and in most cases the complaint. I do not believe it would further the purposes of the Order or the Regulations to require a charge and complaint to sustain an unfair labor practice allegation when an agency announces its intention to commit an unfair labor practice and then to require another charge and complaint to permit the complainant to show each instance of the agency carrying out its announced intention. Such evidence is not so much evidence of an additional unfair labor practice but is more in the nature of evidence of the damages flowing from the originally alleged unfair labor practice.

Some of the instances of improperly carrying out the announced unlawful intention are irreparable, such as denying bulletin posting and denying space for a union meeting, except insofar as ordering the Respondent to desist from such conduct in the future should the same situation arise again may be considered remedial. The denial of administrative leave to a steward to discuss a grievance or present it, which was authorized by the agreement but denied on the ground that "institutional benefits" had terminated is remediable if the steward took annual leave, by restoring such leave. The refusal to proceed to arbitration with a grievance can be remedied to the extent that the Respondent can be ordered to proceed to arbitration upon request of the Complainant made within 21 days ^{11/} of the date of the order in this case.

^{11/} The period allowed for invoking arbitration in MDA II. Jt. Exh. 1, Art. 36, Section 8.

RECOMMENDATION

Accordingly, I recommend that the Assistant Secretary order the Respondent to cease and desist similarly to the cease and desist order in A/SLMR No. 806, order the Respondent to restore annual leave charged to employees when administrative leave was authorized by the agreement but denied because of the expiration of MDA II, and order the Respondent to proceed to arbitration if requested by the Complainant within 21 days in any case in which the past refusal to do so was predicated on the expiration of MDA II.

A proposed Order so ordering is attached hereto as Attachment A, and a notice to be posted is attached hereto as Appendix A.

Dated: October 6, 1977
Washington, D.C.

Pursuant to Section 6(b) of Executive Order 11491, as amended, and Section 203.26(b) of the Regulations issued thereunder, the Assistant Secretary of Labor for Labor-Management Relations orders that the Internal Revenue Service shall:

1. Cease and desist from:

(a) Making unilateral changes in personnel policies and practices after the expiration of a negotiated agreement containing such personnel policies and practices in the absence of a bargaining impasse over such policies and practices.

(b) In any like or related manner interfering with, restraining, or coercing its employees in the exercise of rights assured by Executive Order 11491, as amended.

2. Take the following affirmative actions in order to effectuate the purposes and policies of Executive Order 11491, as amended:

(a) Restore annual leave charged to employees when administrative leave was authorized by the Multi-District Agreement dated May 3, 1974 between it and the National Treasury Employees Union but denied because of the expiration of that Agreement.

(b) Upon request of said Union or its chapters within 21 days after the date of this order, proceed to arbitration in any case in which the past refusal to do so was predicated on the expiration of said Agreement.

(c) Post at the District Offices of the Internal Revenue Service that were parties to said Multi-District Agreement, copies of the attached notice marked "Appendix A" on forms to be furnished by the Assistant Secretary of Labor for Labor-Management Relations. Upon receipt of such forms they shall be signed by the Director of each said District Office and shall be posted and maintained by him for 60 consecutive days thereafter, in conspicuous places, including all places where notice to employees are customarily posted. Said Directors shall take reasonable steps to insure that such notices are not altered, defaced, or covered by other material.

(d) Pursuant to Section 203.27 of the Regulations, notify the Assistant Secretary, in writing, within 30 days of the date of this Order, what steps have been taken to comply herewith.

Case No. 20-06138(CA)

AMERICAN FEDERATION OF GOVERNMENT

DECISION AND ORDER

This case involved an unfair labor practice complaint filed by the American Federation of Government Employees, Local 3631, AFL-CIO (AFGE) alleging that the Respondent violated Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order by (1) unilaterally implementing a reduction-in-force (RIF) involving a unit employee without bargaining on the implementation of the RIF and its impact on that employee, and (2) by refusing to furnish information sought by the AFGE in furtherance of its determination of whether the employee in question was a unit member. The Respondent contended that the subject employee was a management official and, thus, not within the AFGE's exclusively recognized unit.

The Administrative Law Judge found, and the Assistant Secretary concurred, that the Respondent violated Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order by refusing information relevant and necessary to the AFGE in performance of its representational duties. The Administrative Law Judge also found that the Respondent had not violated the Order by refusing to meet and confer on the implementation of the RIF and its impact on the subject employee. In the Administrative Law Judge's view, "determination of...[an employee's] status was a condition precedent to the ripening of Respondent's obligation (or the absence thereof) to negotiate the impact of the RIF." In this connection, he found that the Respondent's expressed willingness to seek the Assistant Secretary's determination of the employee's status "satisfied its then obligation" to meet and confer.

The Assistant Secretary noted, contrary to the Administrative Law Judge, that an agency acts at its peril when it unilaterally determines the unit status of employees and acts in accordance with such determination. He also noted that, in fact, no petition was filed seeking unit clarification under the Assistant Secretary's Regulations concerning the status of the employee in question. Thus, the refusal to meet and confer on the impact and implementation of the RIF on the employee involved would be violative of the Order if the employee, in fact, was within the bargaining unit. The Assistant Secretary reviewed the duties of the employee in question and concluded that the employee was not a management official and, therefore, was within the AFGE's exclusively recognized unit. Thus, the Respondent's refusal to bargain over the implementation of the RIF and its impact on the employee involved was found to be violative of Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order.

Accordingly, the Assistant Secretary issued an appropriate remedial order.

On November 21, 1977, Administrative Law Judge David W. Pelkey issued his Recommended Decision and Order in the above-entitled proceeding, finding that the Respondent had engaged in certain unfair labor practices alleged in the complaint and recommending that it cease and desist therefrom and take certain affirmative actions as set forth in the attached Administrative Law Judge's Recommended Decision and Order. Thereafter, the Complainant filed exceptions with respect to the Administrative Law Judge's Recommended Decision and Order.

The Assistant Secretary has reviewed the rulings of the Administrative Law Judge made at the hearing and finds that no prejudicial error was committed. The rulings are hereby affirmed. Upon consideration of the Administrative Law Judge's Recommended Decision and Order and the entire record in the subject case, including the Complainant's exceptions, I hereby adopt the Administrative Law Judge's findings, conclusions and recommendations, to the extent consistent herewith.

The Administrative Law Judge found, and I agree, that the Respondent violated Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order by refusing to furnish relevant and necessary information to the Complainant concerning an employee "reached" in a reduction-in-force procedure (RIF) who, the Respondent claimed, was a management official, but whom the Complainant contended was an employee within the unit. ^{1/} The Administrative Law Judge found further that the Respondent had not violated Section 19(a)(1) and (6) by refusing to meet and confer with the Complainant concerning the implementation of the RIF and its impact on the adversely affected employee. In this regard, he concluded "that determination of... [an employee's] status was a condition precedent to the ripening of Respondent's obligation

^{1/} The Respondent did not file exceptions to any part of the Administrative Law Judge's Recommended Decision and Order.

(or the absence thereof) to negotiate the impact of the RIF" and that the Respondent's willingness to seek the Assistant Secretary's determination of the employee's status, as indicated by the record, "reasonably satisfied its then obligation under the Order." 2/ I disagree.

It is well established that an agency acts at its peril when it unilaterally determines the unit status of employees and acts in accordance with such determination. 3/ Thus, the refusal to meet and confer on the impact and implementation of the RIF on the employee involved herein would be violative of the Order if the employee, in fact, was a member of the bargaining unit. 4/ I must, therefore, make a determination as to the employment status of the subject employee in order to determine if the Respondent's refusal to meet and confer on the implementation and impact of the RIF was violative of the Order.

The record indicates that at the time of the RIF the subject employee, Mr. T. P. Gorman, was employed as a GS-301-15 Program Management Specialist in the Office of the Regional Administrator and performed job functions involving studies relating to data processing programs, including tracking and information retrieval systems. Gorman's duties were undertaken pursuant to the direction and under the supervision of the Regional Administrator and his subordinate, the Deputy Regional Administrator. The record reveals, that Gorman performed his studies within established guidelines, that he submitted his recommendations to his supervisor, and that, in fact, his recommendations were frequently rejected.

Under these circumstances, I find that the subject employee was not a management official within the meaning of the Order. Thus, in my view, the evidence establishes that Gorman served as an expert or resource person rendering information and recommendations with respect to implementing existing policies, as distinguished from actively participating in, or influencing effectively, the ultimate determination of what policy with respect to personnel, procedures, or programs should be. 5/

2/ Although the Respondent expressed a willingness to seek a determination of the employee's status through the procedures provided under the Order and the Assistant Secretary's Regulations, in fact, no petition seeking unit clarification was filed in this connection. It should be noted that it is not necessary that other parties concur in seeking such a determination through the Assistant Secretary's procedures, as implied by the Administrative Law Judge. Further, in my view, the Respondent's proposal relative to submitting the eligibility question to the Assistant Secretary for resolution and its commitment relative to action following such review would not absolve it from its bargaining obligations should it, as here, act in accordance with its erroneous conclusion.

3/ See U.S. Marine Corps Air Station, El Toro, 5 A/SLMR 606, A/SLMR No. 560 (1975), FLRC No. 75A-115 (1976).

As Gorman was not a management official and, consequently was included within the exclusively recognized unit, I find, contrary to the Administrative Law Judge, that the Respondent's failure to meet and confer concerning the implementation and impact of the RIF on Gorman was violative of Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order.

Accordingly, I shall modify the Administrative Law Judge's Recommended Order to include the additional violation found herein and issue an appropriate remedial order.

ORDER 6/

Pursuant to Section 6(b) of Executive Order 11491, as amended, and Section 203.26(b) of the Regulations, the Assistant Secretary of Labor for Labor-Management Relations hereby orders that the Environmental Protection Agency, Region III, shall:

1. Cease and desist from:

(a) Refusing to furnish, upon request by the American Federation of Government Employees, Local 3631, AFL-CIO, the employees' exclusive representative, such information as is necessary and relevant to enable it to perform its representational duties.

(b) Instituting a reduction-in-force procedure involving T. P. Gorman, or any other adversely affected employee represented exclusively by the American Federation of Government Employees, Local 3631, AFL-CIO, without notifying the American Federation of Government Employees, Local 3631, AFL-CIO, and affording it the opportunity to meet and confer, to the extent consonant with law and regulations, concerning the implementation of such procedure and its impact on adversely affected employees.

5/ See Department of the Air Force, Arnold Engineering Development Center, Air Force Systems Command, Arnold Air Force Station, Tennessee, 2 A/SLMR 83, A/SLMR No. 135 (1972).

6/ The record indicates that Mr. Gorman has appealed his reduction-in-force (RIF) pursuant to a statutory appeal procedure. In Department of the Interior, Bureau of Reclamation, Yuma Projects Office, Yuma, Arizona, FLRC No. 74A-52 (1976), the Federal Labor Relations Council held that, under Section 19(d) of the Order, the existence of a statutory appeal procedure, such as that utilized by Mr. Gorman, precludes the Assistant Secretary from disposing of such issues as the propriety of the RIF, or fashioning such attendant remedies as reevaluation of the layoff or reinstatement, in an unfair labor practice proceeding. In my opinion, the principles enunciated by the Council in the Yuma case are equally applicable herein and I have fashioned my remedial order accordingly.

(c) In any like or related manner, interfering with, restraining, or coercing employees in the exercise of their rights assured by Executive Order 11491, as amended.

2. Take the following affirmative actions in order to effectuate the purposes and policies of Executive Order 11491, as amended:

(a) Upon request, furnish such information as is necessary and relevant to the American Federation of Government Employees, Local 3631, AFL-CIO, to enable it to perform its representational duties.

(b) Upon request, meet and confer with the American Federation of Government Employees, Local 3631, AFL-CIO, to the extent consonant with law and regulations, on the impact of any prior reduction-in-force on T. P. Gorman, or any other adversely affected employee represented exclusively by such representative.

(c) Notify the American Federation of Government Employees, Local 3631, AFL-CIO, of any intended reduction-in-force procedures and afford such representative the opportunity to meet and confer, to the extent consonant with law and regulations, concerning the implementation of such procedures and their impact on adversely affected employees.

(d) Post, at its U.S. Environmental Protection Agency, Region III facilities, copies of the attached notice marked "Appendix" on forms to be furnished by the Assistant Secretary of Labor for Labor-Management Relations. Upon receipt of such forms they shall be signed by the Regional Administrator and shall be posted and maintained by him for 60 consecutive days thereafter, in conspicuous places, including all bulletin boards and other places where notices to employees are customarily posted. The Administrator shall take reasonable steps to insure that such notices are not altered, defaced, or covered by any other material.

(e) Pursuant to Section 203.27 of the Regulations, notify the Assistant Secretary, in writing, within 30 days from the date of this order as to what steps have been taken to comply herewith.

RECOMMENDED DECISION AND ORDER

In an Amended Complaint filed on June 17, 1977, Complainant alleged that Respondent had engaged in violations of Subsections 19(a)(1) (hereafter 19(a)(1)) and 19(a)(6) (hereafter 19(a)(6)) of Executive Order 11491, as amended (the Order). By its terms, 19(a)(1) provides that an agency's management shall not interfere with, restrain or coerce an employee in the exercise of the right, freely and without fear of penalty or reprisal, to form, to join and to assist a labor organization; or to refrain from any such activity. By its terms, 19(a)(6) provides that an agency's management shall not refuse to consult, to confer or to negotiate with a labor organization by refusing to meet with, at reasonable times, and to confer with, in good faith, with respect to personnel policies and practices, or other matters affecting general working conditions.

The alleged violations of the Order arise out of a reduction-in-force action Respondent effected involving an employee whose status as a management official (as determined by Respondent) was challenged by Complainant.

A Notice of Hearing on Complaint issued on June 17, 1977, and, on August 2 and 3, 1977, I conducted hearings on the Complaint in accordance with the provisions of 5 U.S.C. 554. During the hearings, the parties adopted and submitted the following issues for resolution:

A) Whether Respondent violated Subsections 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order on December 7, 1976, by refusing to supply relevant and necessary information to Complainant in connection with a determination of whether T. P. Gorman was a management official.

B) Whether Respondent violated Subsections 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order by unilaterally declaring that T.P. Gorman was a management official and hence excluded from the exclusive unit.

C) Whether Respondent violated Subsections 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order by refusing to bargain with Complainant concerning the procedures to be utilized in, and the adverse impact of, a reduction-in-force involving T.P. Gorman.

Such issues will be discussed and disposed of in connection with my consideration of the pertinent facts I find to be established as a result of my examination and evaluation of the entire record developed herein. The facts, found to be established, follow.

Findings of Fact

1) At all pertinent times, Complainant was the exclusive representative of Respondent's non-professional employees.

2. Among Respondent's employees was one T.P. Gorman, who, beginning May 20, 1973, was a GS-15 Program Management Specialist. As such a specialist, Gorman served as a special assistant to the Regional Administrator in the accomplishment of a variety of special studies and projects and in the representation of the Regional Administrator in contacts with states in the region.

3) As a consequence of an agreement between the concerned parties, Gorman had been found eligible to vote as a non-professional in the May 26, 1976, representation election. No probative record evidence references an agreement, at the time of the election, as to whether Gorman was a management official.

4) During 1975 and 1976, Gorman was given three work assignments by the Deputy Regional Administrator. Each assignment required application of Gorman's technical knowledge and expertise in the field of automatic data processing.

5) On October 18, 1976, Gorman was notified that he had been "reached for release" from his position under reduction-in-force (RIF) regulations. He was offered a position as a GS-12 Computer Systems Analyst. He did not accept the position.

6) Respondent did not give Complainant prior notification of issuance of the RIF notice to Gorman.

7) On November 5, 1976, and by way of a notice of intention to file an unfair labor practice charge, Claimant requested a meeting with Respondent. The meeting was requested for the purpose of effecting an informal resolution of Complainant's charge that, by failing to confer, consult and negotiate with it with respect to the impact of the RIF on Gorman, Respondent effected a violation of the Order.

8) On November 9, 1976, Complainant and Respondent met pursuant to Complainant's request. At the meeting and as a result thereof:

A) Respondent adopted the position that it had no obligation to negotiate with Complainant relative to the impact of the RIF on Gorman because, as a management official, he was not a member of the unit Complainant represented.

B) Complainant adopted the position that it could produce evidence to establish that Gorman was a member of the unit.

C) At the meeting, Respondent offered Gorman's position description to Complainant as assistance in effecting a determination that Gorman was a management official. Complainant refused access to the document for that purpose.

D) Respondent proposed that its position be reviewed by the Department of Labor (DOL) and that, if DOL determined that Gorman was a member of the unit, the RIF action would be cancelled. As an alternate, Respondent proposed negotiation of the impact that the RIF had on the unit.

E) Complainant proposed that Respondent's position be reviewed by the Civil Service Commission (CSC). As an alternate, Complainant proposed negotiation of the impact of the RIF on Gorman.

9) The record does not establish submission of the position for review by DOL prior to November 20, 1976. It establishes CSC's election not to review the position prior to that date.

10) The record does not establish either that Complainant accepted the proposal to negotiate the RIF impact on the unit, or that Respondent accepted the proposal to negotiate the RIF impact on Gorman.

11) On November 11, 1976, and at Gorman's request and pursuant to his suggestions, the Gorman position description was amended to include documentation reflecting details of the work assignments that he accomplished during 1975 and 1976.

12) Pursuant to RIF procedures, Gorman was separated on November 20, 1976.

13) Complainant and Respondent met on December 7, 1976, relative to the Gorman matter. Respondent proposed that the position description determined management official status. Complainant proposed that the criteria set forth in A/SLMR No. 135 and an examination of the duties performed governed the determination. At the meeting, Respondent denied Complainant access to such records as reflected duties that had been performed by Gorman.

Discussion

Issue: Whether Respondent violated 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order on December 7, 1976, by refusing to supply relevant and necessary information to Complainant in connection with a determination of whether Gorman was a management official.

Respondent admits that, on December 7, there was information in its files that would have been helpful to Complainant in effecting a determination of whether Gorman was a management official. Further, Respondent admits that it refused access to the position description and other information at the December 7 meeting. However, Respondent submits that the denial of access was justified.

In support of the submission, Respondent asserts that it offered Complainant access to and use of the Gorman position description and the agency's manual on labor-management relations at the November 9 meeting; that Complainant refused the offer; and that, by December 7, Respondent "was tired of playing games."

I find the submission to be without merit. I evaluate the record as establishing that Complainant considered the duties performed by Gorman, as opposed to duties prescribed by his position description, to be persuasive, if not controlling, in determining whether he was a management official. Its reference to and reliance upon Department of the Air Force, Arnold Engineering Development Center, Air Force Systems Command, Arnold Air Force Station, Tennessee, A/SLMR No. 135, is found to constitute a reasonable basis for its "did do" versus "should do" position. Accordingly, I believe that "did do" information was relevant and necessary.

I note that, as of November 9, Gorman's position description was a "should do" document that was not reflective of "did do" information. I note that, on that date, Respondent was in possession of the latter information. I note that "did do" information was not incorporated in the description until November 11, two days after Respondent's offer of access to and use of the document. The ineluctable conclusion is that the information offered on November 9 was not the information that was relevant and necessary to Complainant's inquiry. Accordingly, by its refusal to accept and use that information, Complainant did not effect a rejection of relevant and necessary information.

I evaluate the record as establishing that, on December 7, Complainant requested and Respondent denied access to information that included a position description in which was incorporated "did do" information that was relevant and necessary. Respondent's lack of capacity, properly for "playing games" under the Order, resulted in its violation of the rules of the "game."

Conclusion: Respondent's December 7, 1976, refusal to supply relevant and necessary information to Complainant violated the Order.

Issue: Whether Respondent violated 19(a) (1) and (6) of the Order by unilaterally declaring that Gorman was a management official and hence excluded from the exclusive unit.

I consider Complainant as having abandoned the issue in the course of the August 3 hearing. During Complainant's cross-examination of a witness who was involved in the RIF action, the following conversational exchange took place between the examiner and me:

"Judge Pelkey: Okay. Whether or not they were accurate in declaring him a management official is not one of the issues you submitted here.

"Dr. Langford: Respondent violated 19A1 and 19A6 by unilaterally declaring --

"Judge Pelkey: By unilaterally declaring that he was a management official, not whether it was right but whether they were right in unilaterally declaring it. That's what you submitted to me. Isn't it?

"Dr. Langford: Yes. Making that unilateral determination that he was a management official, we have no objection. If he was not, then the Assistant Secretary of Labor held that management proceeds at its peril in doing this" (Transcript: Page 2-31, Lines 13-25; Page 2-32, Line 1).

Dr. Langford's last statement referenced the decision in U.S. Naval Weapons Station, Seal Beach, California, Department of the Navy, A/SLMR No. 827. That decision reflected the propositions A) that a unilateral determination of status is within an agency's authority and B) that the agency acts in peril of violation of the Order if that determination is erroneous.

In connection herewith, I note that Section 10(b) of the Order provides that a unit, such as is involved herein, shall not include any management official. It also provides that questions involving "the appropriate unit and related issues may be referred to the Assistant Secretary for decision." Further, Section 6(a) of the Order directs the Assistant Secretary of Labor for Labor-Management Relations to decide questions "as to the appropriate unit...and related issues submitted for his consideration."

I read the posture adopted by Complainant as being reflective of a determination that the parties' dispute relative to Gorman's status should have been the subject of a petition filed for the purpose of clarifying that status.

Conclusion: No decisional purpose will be served by a determination of whether Respondent's unilateral declaration constituted a violation of the Order.

Issue: Whether Respondent violated 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order by refusing to bargain with Complainant concerning the procedures to be utilized in, and the adverse impact of, a reduction-in-force involving Gorman.

My examination and evaluation of the record are found to be supportive of the determination that there is substantial persuasive evidence to support the finding that Respondent did not so refuse to bargain with Complainant. I so find.

I recognize the fact that the RIF action was initiated without notification to or solicitation of input by Complainant. I believe that no significant purpose is to be served by a determination of the propriety thereof. Rather, I find decisional persuasion in the circumstances and events attending Complainant's November 5 request and the November 9 meeting.

I find that each party's position relative to Gorman's status was reasonably supportable. I find that determination of that status was a condition precedent to the ripening of Respondent's obligation (or the absence thereof) to negotiate the impact of the RIF. I find that Respondent's proposal relative to DOL review and its commitment relative to action following such review reasonably satisfied its then obligation under the Order. I find that Complainant's refusal to concur in and to participate in action on the proposal was not reasonably supportable. Finally, I find that Respondent's actions attending Complainant's subsequent proposal that Gorman's status be reviewed by CSC reflected a willingness to effect a resolution of the dispute existing between the parties relative thereto.

Conclusion: Respondent did not refuse to bargain with Complainant concerning the procedures to be utilized in, and the adverse impact of, the Gorman RIF in violation of the Order.

Recommendations

Upon the basis of the foregoing findings and conclusions, I recommend that so much of the Amended Complaint as alleges Respondent's violations of Subsections 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order:

A) by unilaterally declaring that T.P. Gorman was a management official and hence excluded from the exclusive unit, and

B) by refusing to bargain with Complainant concerning the procedures to be utilized in, and the adverse impact of, a reduction-in-force involving T.P. Gorman be dismissed.

Having found that Respondent, by refusing to supply relevant and necessary information to Complainant on December 7, 1976, in connection with a determination of whether T.P. Gorman was a management employee, has engaged in conduct that is violative of Subsections 19(a)(1) and (6) of Executive Order 11491, as amended, I recommend that the Assistant Secretary, to effectuate the purposes and policies of that Order, adopt the following Recommended Order.

Recommended Order

Pursuant to Section 6(a) of Executive Order 11491, as amended, and Section 203.26(a) of the Regulations, the Assistant Secretary of Labor for Labor-Management Relations orders that, so far as it alleges Respondent's violations of Subsections 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order:

A) by unilaterally declaring that T.P. Gorman was a management official and hence excluded from the exclusive unit, and

B) by refusing to bargain with Complainant concerning the procedures to be utilized in, and the adverse impact of, a reduction-in-force involving T.P. Gorman, the Amended Complaint be, and the same is hereby, dismissed.

Pursuant to Section 6(b) of Executive Order 11491, as amended, and Section 203.26(b) of the Regulations, the Assistant Secretary of Labor for Labor-Management Relations hereby orders that U.S. Environmental Protection Agency, Region III, shall:

1) Cease and desist from:

a) Withholding or failing to provide, upon request by American Federation of Government Employees, Local 3631, any information relative to its determination of whether T.P. Gorman was a management official, which information is necessary to enable Local 3631 to discharge its obligation as the exclusive representative to represent effectively all employees in the exclusively recognized unit.

b) Interfering with, restraining or coercing its employees in the exercise of their rights assured by the Executive Order by denying Local 3631 information necessary to enable such labor organization, as the exclusive representative, to discharge its obligation to represent effectively all employees in the exclusively recognized unit.

c) In any like or related manner interfering with, restraining, or coercing its employees in the exercise of their rights assured by Executive Order 11491, as amended.

2) Take the following affirmative actions in order to effectuate the purposes and policies of Executive Order 11491, as amended:

a) Upon request, make available to Local 3631 all information relevant to its determination of whether T.P. Gorman was a management official, which information is necessary to enable the Local to discharge its obligations as the exclusive representative to represent effectively all employees in the exclusively recognized unit.

b) Post, at the Region III office facilities, copies of the attached notice marked "Appendix" on forms to be furnished by the Assistant Secretary of Labor for Labor-Management Relations. Upon receipt of such forms they shall be signed by the Regional Administrator and shall be posted and maintained by him for 60 consecutive days thereafter, in conspicuous places, including all bulletin boards and other places where notices to employees are customarily posted. The Administrator shall take reasonable steps to insure that such notices are not altered, defaced, or covered by any other material.

c) Pursuant to Section 203.27 of the Regulations, notify the Assistant Secretary, in writing, within 30 days from the date of this Order, as to what steps have been taken to comply herewith.

PURSUANT TO SECTION 6 OF EXECUTIVE ORDER 11491, AS AMENDED

SHEPPARD TECHNICAL TRAINING CENTER,
3750th AIR BASE GROUP,
SHEPPARD AIR FORCE BASE, TEXAS
A/SLMR No. 1000

This case involved a joint petition for clarification of unit filed by the Activity and the National Federation of Federal Employees, Independent, Local 779, (NFFE) seeking to clarify the unit eligibility of several groups of employees. The Activity contended that two groups of employees are management officials and that the remaining groups are supervisors within the meaning of the Order. The NFFE, which is the exclusive representative of certain employees of the Activity, contended that none of the employees in question are management officials or supervisors and, therefore, they all are eligible for inclusion within its recognized unit.

The Assistant Secretary found that the employees asserted to be management officials are not management officials within the meaning of the Order. He also found that incumbents in five of the remaining groups are supervisors within the meaning of Section 2(c) of the Order. The other groups of employees were found to be eligible to be included in the existing unit.

The Assistant Secretary clarified the unit accordingly.

DECISION AND ORDER CLARIFYING UNIT

Upon a petition duly filed under Section 6 of Executive Order 11491, as amended, a hearing was held before Hearing Officer Joel D. Reed. The Hearing Officer's rulings made at the hearing are free from prejudicial error and are hereby affirmed.

Upon the entire record in this case, including a brief filed by the Activity, the Assistant Secretary finds:

The Activity, Sheppard Technical Training Center, 3750th Air Base Group, Sheppard Air Force Base, Texas, and the National Federation of Federal Employees, Independent, Local 779, herein called NFFE, are joint petitioners herein seeking to clarify the unit eligibility of various groups of employees. 1/ The Activity contends that two groups of employees

1/ At the hearing in this matter, the parties agreed on the unit eligibility of three groups of employees. There is no record evidence that the stipulations with respect to these groups were improper. It should be noted that such stipulations, in the context of a unit clarification petition, are viewed as motions to amend the petition to delete and, in effect, withdraw the petition as to the stipulated employees. Under these circumstances, I grant the motions to amend and, therefore, find it unnecessary to clarify the status of the three groups of stipulated employees. Cf. Overseas Private Investment Corporation, A/SLMR No. 917, (1977); U.S. Department of Transportation, St. Lawrence Seaway Development Corporation, A/SLMR No. 839 (1977); and New Jersey Department Of Defense, 1 A/SLMR 587, A/SLMR No. 121 (1971).

are management officials and that the remaining groups are supervisors within the meaning of the Order. The NFFE, which is the exclusive representative of certain employees of the Activity, contends that the employees in question are neither management officials nor supervisors and that, therefore, they are eligible for inclusion within its unit. 2/

The Activity is one of four technical training centers of the Air Training Command of the Air Force. Its mission is primarily to provide training to officers, noncommissioned officers, and airmen who study basic and advanced fields, ranging from pharmacy to power production and from aircraft maintenance to budget and data systems.

Group 1: Training Specialists (Instructor and/or Measurement Personnel)

This group consists of three positions whose incumbents are alleged to be management officials. 3/ The incumbents are involved in the instruction and/or measurement functions of the two Sheppard Air Force Base Schools. Group 1 incumbents monitor the application of directives from the Air Training Command regarding training policies. They suggest modification of teaching techniques and otherwise make recommendations within the existing training policies and accepted practices of the command. Although virtually all of their recommendations regarding instruction within the foregoing context are accepted by the Section Chief involved, Group 1 incumbents do not have the authority to direct changes regarding training policy.

Under the foregoing circumstances, I find that the incumbents of Group 1 are not management officials within the meaning of the Order. Thus, although the Group 1 incumbents exercise discretion and independent judgment in their recommendations to modify teaching techniques, the record shows that such recommendations are consistent with existing command training policies. The evidence establishes that the Group 1 incumbents do not have the authority to make or influence effectively Activity policies with respect to personnel, procedures, or programs. Rather, they serve as experts or resource persons rendering resource information or recommendations with respect to the implementation of existing policies. 4/ Accordingly, I find that the incumbents in Group 1 positions should be included in the exclusively recognized unit.

2/ The NFFE was granted recognition for the unit herein on February 12, 1965. The unit description contained in the present negotiated agreement between the parties indicates that the unit is composed of all General Schedule employees serviced by the Central Civilian Personnel Office at Sheppard Air Force Base, Texas, excluding management officials, supervisors, employees engaged in civilian personnel work other than those in a purely clerical capacity, employees serving in temporary, time-limited appointments, and all personnel located at Vance Air Force Base, Oklahoma.

3/ The joint petitioners stipulated that only a limited number of representative witnesses from each group would be called to testify at the hearing, and that unit eligibility would be determined on the basis of the testimony of such representative witnesses.

Group 2: Training Specialists (Branch Advisors)

This group consists of 18 positions 5/ whose incumbents are alleged to be management officials. Each incumbent is assigned to a branch within the 3700th Technical Training Wing and each branch is responsible for a specific area of instruction.

Branch Chiefs and their Branch Advisors work as a team. While the Branch Chief is concerned primarily with military matters, one of the major duties of the Branch Advisor is to advise the Branch Chief on training and technical problems referred by instructors and supervisory personnel. Branch Advisors monitor the in-service training program for instructors and schedule such training. They monitor all training literature written by branch personnel, including workbooks, study guides, plans of instruction, lesson plans, and other course control documents, for conformity to Air Training Command regulations. Although the Branch Advisor advises the Branch Chief and the latter's instructor supervisors concerning training matters, and such recommendations are generally accepted by the Branch Chief, the record reveals that such recommendations are within the existing training policies and accepted practices of the command.

Under the foregoing circumstances, I find that the incumbents in Group 2 are not management officials within the meaning of the Order. Thus, although the Group 2 incumbents exercise discretion and independent judgment in their recommendations regarding training, training literature, and technical problems, the record shows that such recommendations are consistent with existing command training policies. The evidence establishes that Group 2 incumbents do not have the authority to make or influence effectively Activity policies with respect to personnel, procedures, or programs. Rather, they serve as experts or resource persons rendering resource information or recommendations with respect to the implementation of existing policies. Accordingly, I find that the incumbents in Group 2 positions should be included in the exclusively recognized unit.

5/ One position in Group 2 is vacant. Under these circumstances, I make no finding at this time regarding any future incumbent's unit eligibility. See Army and Air Force Exchange Service, Golden Gate Exchange Region, Storage and Distribution Branch, Norton Air Force Base, California, 2 A/SLMR 424, 425, A/SLMR No. 190 (1972).

Group 3: Instructor Supervisors

This group consists of 27 positions whose incumbents are alleged to be supervisors. Group 3 incumbents are in charge of at least 8 to 10 military and civilian personnel and, in this regard, responsibly assign the work of these employees. They also have made effective recommendations with respect to intrablock or shift transfers affecting employees under their supervision.

Under these circumstances, I find that Group 3 incumbents are supervisors within the meaning of Section 2(c) of the Order as the evidence establishes that they have the authority to transfer and assign employees, or to effectively recommend such actions utilizing independent judgment. Accordingly, I shall exclude them from the exclusively recognized unit.

Group 6: 6/ Supervisors of Clerical Positions

This group consists of 11 positions whose incumbents are alleged to be supervisors. The record shows that Group 6 incumbents maintain and make entries on Air Force Form 971, which is the supervisor's record of employee actions; also, they approve leave and sign time cards. There is no record evidence, however, that the incumbents exercise independent judgment in assigning or directing the work of employees. In this connection, the record reflects that employees establish their own work priorities and that the assigning and direction of their work is of a merely routine or clerical nature. Further there is no evidence that the incumbents have the authority to transfer, suspend, lay off, recall, promote, discharge, reward or discipline employees, or to adjust their grievances, or effectively to recommend such action.

As the evidence is insufficient to establish that Group 6 incumbents exercise any supervisory authority requiring the use of independent judgment, or have the authority to effectively recommend such action, I find that they are not supervisors within the meaning of Section 2(c) of the Order, and should be included in the exclusively recognized unit.

Group 7: Supervisors of Accounting Clerks

This group consists of eight positions whose incumbents are alleged to be supervisors. Group 7 incumbents also maintain and make entries on Air Force Form 971, are the rating officials for employee appraisals, approve leave, and maintain, but do not sign, time cards. There is no record evidence, however, that they exercise independent judgment in assigning or directing the work of employees, or make effective recommendations with respect to awards or transfers. Further, there is no evidence that Group 7 incumbents have the authority to suspend, lay off, recall, promote, discharge, or discipline employees, or to adjust their grievances, or effectively to recommend such action.

6/ As indicated above at footnote one, the parties herein stipulated as to the unit eligibility of three groups of employees. These three groups constituted groups 4, 5, and 12.

As the evidence does not establish that Group 7 incumbents either exercise supervisory authority requiring the use of independent judgment, or effectively recommend such action, I find that they are not supervisors within the meaning of Section 2(c) of the Order, and should be included in the exclusively recognized unit.

Group 8: Supervisors of Clerical-Typing Positions

This group consists of seven positions whose incumbents are alleged to be supervisors. Group 8 incumbents are in charge of at least three or more employees and the record reveals that they responsibly assign the work of these employees. The evidence also establishes that Group 8 incumbents have exercised the authority, utilizing independent judgment, to hire employees.

Under these circumstances, I find that Group 8 incumbents are supervisors within the meaning of Section 2(c) of the Order as they have the authority, utilizing independent judgment, to hire and assign employees. Accordingly, I shall exclude them from the exclusively recognized unit.

Group 9: Supervisors with less than three subordinates

This group consists of nine positions whose incumbents are alleged to be supervisors. Group 9 incumbents are in charge of one or two employees, and the record reveals that they responsibly assign the work of these employees. In addition, the evidence establishes that they have exercised the authority, utilizing independent judgment, to discipline employees, and have made effective recommendations to hire employees.

Under these circumstances, I find that Group 9 incumbents are supervisors within the meaning of Section 2(c) of the Order as they have the authority to discipline and assign employees, and have effectively recommended the hiring of employees. Accordingly, I shall exclude them from the exclusively recognized unit.

Group 10: Supervisors of Military Medical Technicians

This group consists of six positions whose incumbents are alleged to be supervisors. Group 10 incumbents are in charge of at least three or more employees, and the record reveals that they responsibly assign the work of these employees and have made effective recommendations with respect to hiring and transferring employees.

Under these circumstances, I find that Group 10 incumbents are supervisors within the meaning of Section 2(c) of the Order as they have the authority to hire, transfer and assign employees, or to effectively recommend such actions utilizing independent judgment. Accordingly, I shall exclude them from the exclusively recognized unit.

Group 11: Supervisors with less than three appropriated fund civilian employees

This group consists of six positions whose incumbents are alleged to be supervisors. Group 11 incumbents are in charge of varying combinations of employee categories, including military, civilian nonappropriated fund employees, and civilian appropriated fund employees. Group 11 incumbents responsibly assign the work of these employees. In addition, the record reveals that they have exercised the authority, utilizing independent judgment, to discipline employees and have made effective recommendations to hire and discharge employees.

Under these circumstances, I find that Group 11 incumbents are supervisors within the meaning of Section 2(c) of the Order as they have the authority to hire, discharge, assign, and discipline, or to effectively recommend such actions utilizing independent judgment. Accordingly, I shall exclude them from the exclusively recognized unit.

ORDER

IT IS HEREBY ORDERED that the unit of exclusive recognition sought to be clarified herein, represented by the National Federation of Federal Employees, Independent, Local 779, and described in the present negotiated agreement between the parties, be, and it hereby is, clarified by including in said unit the incumbents in positions in Groups 1, 2, 6, and 7 above, and by excluding from said unit the incumbents in positions in Groups 3, 8, 9, 10, and 11 above.

ASSISTANT SECRETARY FOR LABOR-MANAGEMENT RELATIONS
SUMMARY OF DECISION AND ORDER OF THE ASSISTANT SECRETARY
PURSUANT TO SECTION 6 OF EXECUTIVE ORDER 11491, AS AMENDED

INTERNAL REVENUE SERVICE
A/SLMR No. 1001

This case involved an unfair labor practice complaint filed by the National Treasury Employees Union (NTEU), in behalf of certain of its chapters, alleging essentially that the Respondent violated Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order by refusing to furnish the NTEU with a summary of the statistical data obtained by the Respondent's Personnel Division, in accordance with instructions to agencies from the U. S. Civil Service Commission (Commission) with regard to the Commission's inauguration of a new method for developing classification standards for all General Schedule positions, i.e. the Factor Evaluation System (FES). The Commission requested the agencies to apply the applicable Draft Standards in their review of field offices, on a trial basis, to a representative sample of positions.

The Respondent contended that the complaint should be dismissed as the matter involved disagreement over the interpretation of the parties' negotiated agreement and, therefore, should be resolved through the negotiated grievance procedure provided therein, that the data requested is a privileged interagency communication, and that the complaint was moot because the deadline for comments had passed.

The Administrative Law Judge concluded that, under the circumstances of the case, the Complainant was not precluded from filing an unfair practice complaint rather than seeking a determination of its rights through the grievance procedures of the negotiated agreement. He found further that for the NTEU to have soundly based input in the decision-making process of the Commission's adoption of final occupational standards under FES and to represent the interests of affected employees with specific reference to potential reclassification thereunder, the knowledge of the results of the test application was necessary and relevant. With regard to the Respondent's contention that the complaint should be dismissed as moot, the Administrative Law Judge found that the FES is still in the process of implementation and that it had not yet resulted in the actual reclassification of any positions. Consequently, there is still opportunity for some input in the ultimate decision on the grade level of particular positions. He noted also that the data, which is necessary and relevant, would not become privileged merely because it was sent by one government agency to another. He concluded, therefore, that the Respondent violated Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order by its refusal to furnish specific data which he had examined in camera.

The Assistant Secretary adopted the Administrative Law Judge's findings, conclusions and recommendations, and ordered that the Respondent cease and desist from conduct found violative of the Order and that it take certain affirmative actions.

DECISION AND ORDER

On December 5, 1977, Administrative Law Judge Robert J. Feldman issued his Recommended Decision and Order in the above-entitled proceeding, finding that the Respondent had engaged in the unfair labor practices alleged in the complaint and recommending that it cease and desist therefrom and take certain affirmative actions as set forth in the attached Administrative Law Judge's Recommended Decision and Order. Thereafter, the Respondent filed exceptions and a supporting brief with respect to the Administrative Law Judge's Recommended Decision and Order.

The Assistant Secretary has reviewed the rulings of the Administrative Law Judge made at the hearing and finds that no prejudicial error was committed. The rulings are hereby affirmed. Upon consideration of the Administrative Law Judge's Recommended Decision and Order and the entire record in the subject case, including the Respondent's exceptions and supporting brief, I hereby adopt the Administrative Law Judge's findings, conclusions and recommendations.

ORDER

Pursuant to Section 6(b) of Executive Order 11491, as amended, and Section 203.26(b) of the Regulations, the Assistant Secretary of Labor for Labor-Management Relations hereby orders that the Internal Revenue Service shall:

1. Cease and desist from:

(a) Withholding or failing to provide, upon request by the National Treasury Employees Union, copies of the following summary data compiled in the 1976 Internal Revenue Service Review of Drafts of Proposed

FES Occupational Standards: the summary of Impact Data for the five standards test-applied and reviewed; and the Assessment and Summary Data comprising Part IV of Experimental CSC Form 1249 as submitted to the U. S. Civil Service Commission for each position at each office or facility of the Service to which a test application was made, which information is necessary and relevant to the exclusive representative's discharge of its representational obligations.

(b) In any like or related manner interfering with, restraining, or coercing its employees in the exercise of their rights assured by Executive Order 11491, as amended.

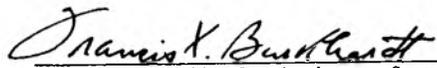

2. Take the following affirmative actions in order to effectuate the purposes and policies of Executive Order 11491, as amended:

(a) Upon request, make available to the National Treasury Employees Union, copies of the following summary data compiled in the 1976 Internal Revenue Service Review of Drafts of Proposed FES Occupational Standards: the summary of Impact Data for the five standards test-applied and reviewed; and the Assessment and Summary Data comprising Part IV of Experimental CSC Form 1249 as submitted to the U. S. Civil Service Commission for each position at each office or facility of the Service to which a test application was made, which information is necessary and relevant to the exclusive representative's discharge of its representational obligations.

(b) Post at the Office of the Internal Revenue Service, Washington, D. C., copies of the attached notice marked "Appendix" on forms to be furnished by the Assistant Secretary of Labor for Labor-Management Relations. Upon receipt of such forms they shall be signed by the Commissioner of the Internal Revenue Service, and shall be posted and maintained by the Commissioner for 60 consecutive days thereafter, in conspicuous places, including all bulletin boards and other places where notices to employees are customarily posted. The Commissioner shall take reasonable steps to insure that such notices are not altered, defaced, or covered by any other material.

(c) Pursuant to Section 203.27 of the Regulations, notify the Assistant Secretary, in writing, within 30 days from the date of this order as to what steps have been taken to comply herewith.

WE WILL NOT in any like or related manner interfere with, restrain, or coerce our employees in the exercise of their rights assured by Executive Order 11491, as amended.

WE WILL, upon request, make available to the National Treasury Employees Union, copies of the following summary data compiled in the 1976 Internal Revenue Service Review of Drafts of Proposed FES Occupational Standards: the summary of Impact Data for the five standards test-applied and reviewed; and the Assessment and Summary Data comprising Part IV of Experimental CSC Form 1249 as submitted to the U. S. Civil Service Commission for each position at each office or facility of the Service to which a test application was made, which information is necessary and relevant to the exclusive representative's discharge of its representational obligations.

RECOMMENDED DECISION AND ORDER

This is an unfair labor practice proceeding in which a formal hearing of record was held pursuant to Executive Order 11491, as amended (hereinafter referred to as "the Order") and 29 CFR Part 203.

Respondent Internal Revenue Service (IRS) is charged with violating Sections 19(a)(1) and 19(a)(6) of the Order by refusing to furnish to Complainant National Treasury Employees Union (NTEU) a summary of the statistical data obtained by Respondent's personnel division on Civil Service Commission (CSC) Form 1249 in

1. On May 3, 1974 (effective August 3, 1974), a collective bargaining agreement, referred to as the Multi-District Agreement (MDA), was entered into between Respondent IRS, representing 57 specifically identified district offices (all but one of the IRS District Offices then extant) as the Employer, and Complainant NTEU, representing its local chapters holding exclusive recognition in each of such 57 district offices as the Union.

2. Article 13 of the MDA provides as follows:

Section 1. The Union may make recommendations and present supporting evidence concerning the adequacy and equity of a standardized position description or position classification standard. The Employer agrees to review the presentation and advise the Union of the results of its review.

Section 2. The Employer agrees to inform the Union as soon as possible when significant changes will be made in the duties and responsibilities of positions held by employees in the unit due to reorganization or when changes in position classification standards result in classification changes or when changes will be made in position classification standards which could result in classification changes. The Employer further agrees to furnish the Union copies of proposed classification standards for Bargaining Unit jobs referred to the Employer by the Civil Service Commission for comment.

Section 3. The Employer agrees that the position description for each position will accurately reflect the actual duties of the employee filling that position.
(The above provision is also included in MDA III, effective May 1, 1977)

3. Pursuant to the Job Evaluation Policy Act of 1970 (Pub. L. No. 91-216, 84 Stat. 72), the Civil Service Commission inaugurated in December, 1975, a new method, called the Factor Evaluation System (FES), for developing classifications standards and classifying most of the positions on the General Schedule. It was anticipated that full implementation would take place over the next five years.

4. Early in 1976, the Treasury Department received from the CSC and turned over to IRS for review and comment the first eight Drafts of Proposed Occupational Standards, consisting of the following:

Mail and File Series	GS-305
Clerk-Stenographer and Reporter	GS-312
Secretary Series	GS-318
Clerk-Typist and Transcriber Series	GS-322
Accounting Technician	GS-525
Nurse Series	GS-610
Dental Therapy Technician	GS-681
Mechanical Engineer	GS-830

5. The covering letter and accompanying instructions for the above Draft Standards included among other things: a request that each agency with a significant number of positions in the occupation review the applicable Draft Standard by applying it on a trial basis to a representative sample of positions; a suggestion that in planning the time frame for the review, consideration be given to communication with unions (in accordance with local policy or negotiated agreement); directions to complete experimental CSC Form 1249, "Standards Review Data Sheet", to which there is to be attached both the present position description and a revised description in the factor/format in each case in which the position is evaluated at a higher or lower grade as a result of the trial application, or is point-rated by use of the primary standard; a list of items to be included in agency reports to the CSC, among which were total positions in the occupation, total sampled, projected total of positions with grade changes (how many up and how many down), number of potential matches, a Form 1249 for each sample position evaluated by the draft standard (including necessary attachments), and other appropriate information. There was notice that comments on the draft standards and any comments on the system would be due not later than July 19, 1976.

6. IRS distributed the standards to all of its seven regions, and test applications were made in a total of twenty IRS offices (4 regional offices, 11 district offices and 5 service centers). Each office had at least one occupation which was evaluated at all grade levels (applications were limited to the first five proposed occupational standards, since those for the nurse series, dental therapy technician and mechanical engineer were clearly of insufficient prevalence in the IRS).

7. On May 21, 1976, the Director of the IRS Personnel Division forwarded to NTEU copies of the eight proposed CSC

Occupational Standards (as well as copies of the CSC instructional guides), with the request that any comment by the Union on the adequacy or equity of the Draft Standards be sent to IRS not later than June 18, 1976.

8. On June 14, 1976, the National President of NTEU advised te Acting Director of the IRS Personnel Division of the Union's position that the results of the IRS review must also be furnished to NTEU in order that it might properly weigh the equity and adequacy of the Standards, specifically requesting "a summary of the statistical data, obtained by the Personnel Division on CSC Form 1249 in its review of field office applications of the CSC standards to actual positions".

9. On July 8, 1976, the Director of IRS Personnel Division, referring to Sections 1 and 2 of Article 13 of the MDA, informed the National President of NTEU that because of the tentative form of the proposed Standards, no changes in classification had been authorized, and that consequently IRS considered that it was not obliged to furnish the information requested, and it declined to do so.

10. On or about July 19, 1976, the IRS Personnel Division forwarded to the CSC through Treasury the completed 1249 Forms it had received from the regional offices. The narrative comments that had been requested were sent to CSC on or about July 23, 1976.

11. NTEU had at least three employees who received CSC training in FES classification qualifying them to interpret the trial application data requested.

12. Under date of July 6, 1976, NTEU requested IRS to furnish the same summary of statistical data under the Freedom of Information Act (5 U.S.C. § 552 as amended). On September 2, 1976, such request was refused by the Commissioner of Internal Revenue. NTEU did not seek judicial review of that administrative determination.

13. By letter dated September 8, 1976, NTEU charged IRS with violating Sections 19(a) (1) and 19(a) (6) of the Order by refusing to furnish the summary of statistical data requested. On October 18, 1976, IRS denied the charge.

14. The Complaint herein was filed on November 4, 1976. After the response of IRS was filed, containing a motion to dismiss for lack of standing, an amended complaint dated December 7, 1976, was filed alleging that the full name of the party filing the complaint is "National Treasury Employees Union on behalf of each Chapter listed in Appendix A of MDA".

15. IRS has continued to withhold from NTEU any and all of the information that it furnished to CSC pertaining to the proposed occupational standards under FES or the test applications thereof to positions in the IRS.

16. In February, 1977, the CSC circulated copies of the classification standards for the Mail and File Series, GS-305, and the Nurse Series, GS-610, developed under FES and approved by the CSC Standards Division. Recipients were cautioned, however, that such standards should not be used as a basis for any personnel action until official notification for their use has been given by the CSC. Since revisions had been made in the draft FES standards originally furnished and in the instructions for applying them, agencies, unions and organizations were provided with an opportunity for a second review of the first eight FES standards before they are printed in final form. Objections to the revised standards were requested to be submitted for consideration by the Director of the CSC Bureau of Policy and Standards.

CONCLUSIONS OF LAW

Respondent's challenge to Complainant's lack of standing to bring and maintain this proceeding is no longer viable. The amended complaint makes it perfectly clear that NTEU brings the proceeding in a representative capacity, which is consonant with the party designations of the MDA, and no evidence has been adduced to indicate that anything in the NTEU constitution or by-laws would inhibit such procedure. See Internal Revenue Service Washington, D.C., A/SLMR No. 831 (1977). With respect to the contention that because of an alleged absence of national recognition or national consultation rights, an unfair labor practice must be brought at the local level instead of the national level, it should be noted that in the principal cases relied upon by Respondent on this point, the Assistant Secretary expressly declined to pass upon the administrative law judge's finding to that effect. Department of the Treasury, Internal Revenue Service and National Treasury Employees Union, A/SLMR No. 550, Note 2 (1975); Internal Revenue Service and National Treasury Employees Union, A/SLMR No. 731, Note 1 (1976). Any question in this regard has been clearly resolved by the decision of the Federal Labor Relations Council holding that when the Assistant Secretary finds acts or practices which constitute unfair labor practices by "agency management", as defined in Section 2(f) of the Order, the Order provides no basis for drawing artificial distinctions between organizational levels of such agency management so as to relieve them of the responsibility for their acts which would otherwise be violative of the Order. Naval Air Rework Facility, Pensacola, Florida, and Secretary of the Navy, Washington, D.C., FLRC No. 76A-37 (1977). See also Internal Revenue Service and National Treasury Employees Union, Chapter 8, et al., No. 22-7717(CA), Kramer, ALJ (October 6, 1977).

Respondent also contends that this is a disagreement over interpretation of a negotiated agreement, and therefore should be resolved through the grievance procedure provided therein, instead of in the context of an unfair labor practice. It should be noted, however, that although the complaint refers to Article 13 of the MDA, the basic allegation is that Respondent's refusal to furnish the requested summary of statistical data violated Sections 19(a)(1) and 19(a)(6) of the Order. The issue is whether the refusal interfered with or restrained the Union in the exercise of its right and responsibility under Section 10(e) of the Order to represent the interests of all employees in the unit. Whether the same act or omission on the part of Respondent may also constitute a breach of contract may well be determinable under a grievance procedure, but that circumstance does not preclude an unfair labor practice. Under Section 19(d) of the Order, issues which can be raised under a grievance procedure may, in the discretion of the aggrieved party, be raised under that procedure or the complaint procedure, but not under both. No grievance procedure having been instituted with respect to the withholding of the information in question, Complainant has elected to go the unfair labor practice route despite the guidelines contained in Article 35, Section 1 B of the MDA, the wording of which clearly indicates that its provisions are permissive rather than mandatory. Respondent has withdrawn the defense that in view of the Union's prior request under the Freedom of Information Act, the issues herein can properly be raised under an appeals procedure and are hence barred under Section 19(d).

It is further contended that the complaint should be dismissed as moot because the deadline for comments has long since passed, and that the data requested should not be disclosed because it is a privileged inter-agency communication. Neither of these positions is tenable. Only one of the five Draft Occupational Standards tested by the IRS has been revised and resubmitted for further consideration. FES is still in the process of implementation and it has not yet resulted in the actual reclassification of any positions. Consequently, there is still opportunity for some input in the ultimate decision on the grade level of particular positions. Although there is some exemption in the Freedom of Information Act [5 U.S.C. § 552(b)] with respect to certain inter-agency communications, the notion that a document not otherwise privileged by law may be withheld from examination by a labor organization merely because it was sent by one government agency to another is singularly lacking in both authority and merit. I agree that the Civil Service Commission is not agency management with respect to IRS employees, but that merely reinforces the conclusion reached above in connection with standing that agency management in the context of this proceeding is IRS at the national level. All that was requested by NTEU was a summary of statistical data obtained solely by IRS employees. Nothing is sought from the Commission, which is not a party to this proceeding.

Coming finally to consideration of the merits of the complaint, there are three elements that should be weighed: (a) the nature and extent of the information requested; (b) whether such information is necessary and relevant to the Union's exercise of rights or discharge of obligations under the Order; and (c) whether there is any valid reason for withholding such information.

A. Identification of the Data Requested

In its letter of June 14, 1976 (Jt. Ex. G) NTEU requested "a summary of the statistical data, obtained by the Personnel Division on CSC Form 1249 in its review of field office applications of the CSC Standards to actual positions ..." The amended complaint (Asst. Secretary's Formal Ex. 1) states that "NTEU requested information collected by IRS on CSC Form 1249 concerning the classifications". It is apparent from the documents submitted to me in camera (Respondent's Exs. C and D for identification) that clarification of the specific data requested is in order. Reference to the introduction or instructional guides to the Factor Evaluation System of position classification and to Experimental Form 1249 attached thereto discloses only two items that correspond to the NTEU request: the general information to be included in the agency's Report to the Civil Service Commission (Ex. E, p. 11) and Part IV of Form 1249 entitled "Assessment and Summary Data". We are not concerned with anyone's comments on FES or on the Draft Standards, which, being neither requested nor necessary in the performance of any Union function, were properly withheld. Consequently, with the exception of the table of Impact Data appearing on the first page of Exhibit C, none of the material submitted for in camera inspection is found to be responsive to the request or to be sufficiently comparable to the specific data or information requested so as to constitute an acceptable substitute therefor. Cf. Department of Justice, Immigration and Naturalization Service, A/SLMR No. 902 (1977). In considering the information refused, we are concerned solely with the Impact Data above referred to and, with respect to each position in each office or facility of the IRS to which a test application of Draft FES Standards was made, the Assessment and Summary Data required in answer to Part IV of Form 1249.

B. Necessity and Relevance of the Data Requested

In determining whether the above-defined data is necessary and relevant, we find guidance in the Assistant Secretary's recent expression of the view that to enable a labor organization to intelligently perform its bargaining duties, it is not required that the documents sought be the sole basis for proposals, or that they form the basis for fixed, final proposals, before they become necessary and relevant. See Department of Justice, Immigration and Naturalization Service, supra, at p. 2. To have any soundly based input into the decision-making process that will eventuate in the Civil Service Commission's adoption of final occupational standards under FES, and to represent the interests of affected employees with respect to potential reclassification thereunder, there can be little doubt that knowledge of the results of the test applications is essential. The Union has the right and corresponding obligation under the Order to participate in administering and policing the terms of the negotiated agreement so as to fairly and adequately represent the interests of all employees in the unit, as well as to meet and confer with the agency with respect to personnel policies and practices. In the performance of those functions, with specific reference to the impact of potential reclassification inherent in adopting FES, the data requested is clearly necessary and relevant. See Department of Defense, State of New Jersey, FLRC No. 73A-59, Report No. 71 (1975); Department of Health, Education and Welfare, Social Security Administration, Kansas City Payment Center, Bureau of Retirement and Survivors Insurance, A/SLMR No. 411 (1974).

C. The Existence of Valid Reasons for Denying the Request

Although Respondent has advanced numerous defenses, technical and otherwise, to the complaint, it has, in my view, failed to come forward with any valid reason for refusing the information requested. In this day and age of free access to information and virtually unlimited discovery in both the public and private sectors, the old cry of "fishing expedition" is a bit hollow. It seems to me, especially in the context of maintaining sound labor-management relations, that a refusal to disclose pertinent statistical data to a union without some legitimate reason therefor should not be sustained. See General Services Administration, Region 3, A/SLMR No. 734 (1976).

Additionally, it should be noted that the results of the test applications in IRS are not otherwise available to NTEU without unnecessary duplication of effort and undue expense. The statistical data circulated by the CSC comprises the consolidated results of all agencies and cannot provide the specific results of the IRS tests which are needed to fairly assess potential reclassification of the employees represented by NTEU. As to any waiver of rights on the part of the Union, it must be borne in mind that a waiver is an intentional relinquishment of a known right, so that the omission from Article 13 of the MDA of any reference to specific summaries of data obtained in connection with a projected factor evaluation system hardly meets the requirements of a clear and unmistakable waiver. See NASA, Kennedy Space Center, Florida, A/SLMR No. 223 (1972).

In view of all of the foregoing, I conclude that Respondent's refusal to provide the Complainant with the information contained in (a) the Impact Data table and (b) the Assessment and Summary Data comprising Part IV of Experimental CSC Form 1249 for each position at each office or facility of the IRS at which test applications were made is in violation of Sections 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order.

RECOMMENDATION

Having found that Respondent has engaged in conduct violative of Sections 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order, I recommend that the Assistant Secretary adopt the order hereinafter set forth, which is designed to effectuate the policies of the Order.

RECOMMENDED ORDER

Pursuant to Section 6(b) of Executive Order 11491, as amended, and Section 203.26(b) of the Regulations, the Assistant Secretary of Labor for Labor-Management Relations hereby orders that the Internal Revenue Service, shall:

1. Cease and desist from:

(a) Withholding or failing to provide, upon request by National Treasury Employees Union, copies of the following summary data compiled in the Internal Revenue Service Review of Drafts of Proposed FES Occupational Standards: the summary of Impact Data for the five standards test-applied and reviewed; and the Assessment and Summary Data comprising Part IV of Experimental CSC Form 1249 as submitted to the Civil Service Commission for each position at each office or facility of the Service to which a test application was made.

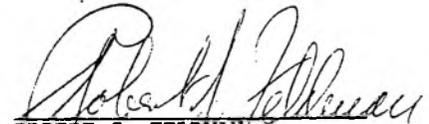

(b) In any like or related manner interfering with, restraining, or coercing its employees in the exercise of rights assured by Executive Order 11491, as amended.

2. Take the following affirmative actions in order to effectuate the purposes and provisions of the Executive Order:

(a) Upon request, make available to National Treasury Employees Union copies of the following summary data compiled in the Internal Revenue Service Review of Drafts of Proposed FES Occupational Standards: the summary of Impact Data for the five standards test-applied and reviewed; and the Assessment and Summary Data comprising Part IV of Experimental CSC Form 1249 as submitted to the Civil Service Commission for each position at each office or facility of the Service to which a test application was made.

(b) Post at the Office of the Internal Revenue Service Washington, D.C. copies of the attached notice marked "Appendix" on forms to be furnished by the Assistant Secretary of Labor for Labor-Management Relations. Upon receipt of such forms they shall be signed by the Commissioner of Internal Revenue, and they shall be posted and maintained by him for 60 consecutive days thereafter in conspicuous places, including all places where notices to employees are customarily posted. The Commissioner shall take reasonable steps to insure that such notices are not altered, defaced, or covered by any other materials.

(c) Pursuant to Section 203.27 of the Regulations, notify the Assistant Secretary in writing within 20 days from the date of the Order as to what steps have been taken to comply therewith.

UNITED STATES DEPARTMENT OF LABOR
ASSISTANT SECRETARY FOR LABOR-MANAGEMENT RELATIONS
SUMMARY OF DECISION AND DIRECTION OF ELECTION
OF THE ASSISTANT SECRETARY
PURSUANT TO SECTION 6 OF EXECUTIVE ORDER 11491, AS AMENDED

DEPARTMENT OF THE INTERIOR,
U.S. GOVERNMENT COMPTROLLER FOR GUAM,
TRUST TERRITORY OF THE PACIFIC ISLANDS
A/SLMR No. 1002

This case involved a representation petition filed by the American Federation of Government Employees, Local 1689, AFL-CIO (AFGE) seeking an election in a unit consisting of all professional and nonprofessional employees of the U.S. Government Comptroller's Office, Guam, Trust Territory of the Pacific Islands. The Activity contended that the professional employees, who are auditors, should be excluded from the unit for the reason that they are managerial employees and/or supervisors within the meaning of the Order and that the proposed unit is not appropriate for the purpose of exclusive recognition under the Order as it will not promote effective dealings and efficiency of agency operations.

The Assistant Secretary found that the claimed unit is appropriate for the purpose of exclusive recognition under the Order. In this regard, he noted that the claimed employees share a clear and identifiable community of interest as they enjoy common overall supervision, common personnel policies and practices, similar working conditions, essentially similar job classifications, skills and duties, and share the same area of consideration for promotion and competitive area for reduction in force procedures.

He also found that such unit would promote effective dealings and efficiency of agency operations. In making this determination he noted the unique auditing function given to the Comptroller of Guam under the Organic Act of Guam, and the fact that due to the Activity's extreme distance from its supervisory and servicing offices the Comptroller exercises substantial discretion and effective control over matters affecting the general working conditions of employees and personnel practices and policies.

With respect to the Activity's contention that all of the auditors should be excluded from the unit as managerial officials, the Assistant Secretary found that these employees are not management officials within the meaning of the Order. In this regard, he concluded that, although the auditors are involved to some degree in policy formulation with respect to the various activities audited, they are not involved with policy formulation within the Activity.

As to the Activity's contention that the auditors at the GS-11, GS-12 and GS-13 levels should be excluded from the unit as supervisory employees in that they spend a substantial portion of their time acting as Auditors-in-Charge (AIC) for individual audits, the Assistant Secretary found that while an auditor is acting as the designated AIC, and possesses indicia of supervisory authority, he is a supervisor within the meaning of Section 2(c) of the Order and should be excluded from the unit. However, when the auditors are performing as a member of an audit team, and are not acting as AICs, they should be included in the unit. As a result, the Assistant Secretary found that the voting eligibility of employees classified as Auditors GS-11, GS-12, and GS-13 should be determined by their status at the time of the election.

Accordingly, the Assistant Secretary ordered an election in the unit found appropriate.

Petitioner

DECISION AND DIRECTION OF ELECTION

Upon a petition duly filed under Section 6 of Executive Order 11491, as amended, a hearing was held before Hearing Officer Dale L. Bennett. The Hearing Officer's rulings made at the hearing are free from prejudicial error and are hereby affirmed.

Upon the entire record in the case, including the brief filed by the Activity, the Assistant Secretary finds:

1. The labor organization involved claims to represent certain employees of the Activity.
2. In its petition, the American Federation of Government Employees, Local 1689, AFL-CIO, hereinafter called AFGE, seeks an election in a unit consisting of all professional and nonprofessional employees of the U.S. Government Comptroller's Office, Guam, Trust Territory of the Pacific Islands, excluding management officials, employees engaged in Federal personnel work in other than a purely clerical capacity, and supervisors. The Activity takes the position that the claimed professional employees, who are auditors, should be excluded from the unit for the reason that they are managerial employees and/or supervisors within the meaning of Executive Order 11491, as amended. Further, it contends that the proposed unit is not appropriate for the purpose of exclusive recognition under the Order as it will not promote effective dealings and efficiency of agency operations.

The Activity, a component of the Department of Interior, is charged with audit responsibilities for the Government of Guam, the Government of the Trust Territories of the Pacific Islands and the Government of the Northern Marianas. Headquartered in Guam, it has a sub-office in Saipan, and services a geographical area of approximately 3 million square miles. The Activity is under the administrative supervision of the Office of the Director of Territorial Affairs, hereinafter called ODOTA, which is a component of the Department of the Interior.

Both the ODOTA and the Personnel Office of the Secretary of the Interior, hereinafter called Personnel Office, which services the Activity, are located in Washington, D.C. The Activity's auditing responsibilities are derived from the Organic Act of Guam, as amended, hereinafter called the Act, which provides for a civil government for the Island of Guam. Section 9-A(a) of the Act requires the Secretary of Interior to appoint from within the Department of Interior, a Comptroller for Guam, who shall not be part of the Guam Government. The Activity's audit functions are required to be conducted so as to improve the efficiency and economy of programs of the Government of Guam and discharge Congress' responsibility to insure that the substantial revenues which are converted into the Treasury of Guam are properly audited and accounted for. The Activity performs both the traditional fiscal type of audit as well as a management type audit. The fiscal audit is basically an audit of the governmental entities' financial statement, similar to the financial audit of a private concern by an independent certified public accountant, and the management type audit is to assure that the Government, in performing its duties, does so in an economical and efficient manner. Besides performing audits for the Government of Guam and the Trust Territories of the Pacific Islands, the Activity will, at the request of other agencies of the U.S. Government, perform audits of their respective grant funds utilized in Guam and the Trust Territories.

The Comptroller is responsible for the day-to-day activities of the auditors and audits within his office, and is assisted by two Supervisory Auditors, GS-14. Due to the extreme distances between Guam and Washington, D.C., which hampers close communications between the Comptroller and the ODOTA, the Comptroller has a great deal of discretion in handling the mission of his office. The Comptroller works closely with his Supervisory Auditors in designating Auditors-in-Charge, hereinafter called AIC, and assigning auditors 1/ to perform specified audits under a schedule which the Comptroller has prepared. While the ODOTA and the Personnel Office have final approval authority on personnel actions, the record reveals that the recommendations of the Comptroller in the areas of hiring, promoting, disciplining, rewarding, discharging and reassigning employees are effective. The Supervisory Auditors have general supervision over the audits and the individual auditors assigned to their supervision.

When an audit is conducted, one of the auditors, normally a GS-11, 12 or 13, 2/ is selected as the AIC and, as such, he has complete control and responsibility for that audit. In many instances, one of the other auditors may be designated to work for him, or he may have auditors of the activity being audited working with him. After a preliminary survey of problems, the AIC writes an audit plan and assigns subordinate auditors to particular tasks. If a written report is required, the AIC will prepare and sign it. The AIC also works closely with the management being audited, suggesting solutions to any problems that the audit has disclosed. While conducting the audit, the AIC has the authority to grant leave and transfers, handle grievances, institute disciplinary actions, effectively recommend employees for merit promotions and prepare performance evaluations of all his subordinates. The AIC also has the responsibility for training new auditors and works closely with them in order to build their expertise.

1/ At the hearing the parties stipulated that all Auditors, GS-5 through GS-13, were professional employees.

2/ The record indicates that the GS-13's function as the AIC about 78 percent of their time, the GS-12's function as the AIC about 68 percent of their time and the GS-11's function as the AIC about 35 percent of their time.

When they are not functioning as the AIC, the auditors perform audits under the direction of another AIC, conducting various phases of the audit as directed by the AIC under guidelines established by the General Accounting Office. The record discloses that at the time of the hearing herein there was only one nonprofessional employee in the claimed unit, who is a clerical employee performing clerical work for the auditors, as well as handling other clerical functions in the Comptroller's office.

The employees of the Activity enjoy common personnel policies and practices and labor relations policies established and administered by the ODOTA and the Personnel Office. Essentially all the employees in the claimed unit enjoy similar working conditions, have similar job classifications, skills and duties, and share the same areas of competition for promotion and reduction in force.

Based on the foregoing circumstances, I find that the unit sought in the subject case is appropriate for the purpose of exclusive recognition under the Order. Thus, the record reflects that the claimed employees sought enjoy common overall supervision, common personnel policies and practices, similar working conditions, essentially similar job classifications, skills and duties, and share the same area of consideration for promotion and competitive area for reduction in force procedures. Consequently, I conclude that the employees assigned to the office of the U.S. Government Comptroller for Guam, Trust Territory of the Pacific Islands, share a clear and identifiable community of interest.

With regard to whether the proposed unit will promote effective dealings and efficiency of agency operations, noted particularly is the unique auditing function given to the Comptroller of Guam under the Organic Act of Guam and the effective control of the Comptroller with respect to the day-to-day operations of the Activity. While the Activity, headquartered in Guam, is under the administrative supervision of the ODOTA and serviced by the Personnel Office, both of which are located in Washington, D.C., normal close supervision and servicing at such extreme distances would appear to be highly difficult and costly. Thus, although ODOTA and the Personnel Office have final approval authority on personnel actions, the record is clear that based, in part, on the extensive distances involved, the Comptroller's personnel and managerial recommendations are ordinarily accepted by higher authority and that he exercises substantial discretion and effective control over the Activity's day-to-day operations and personnel actions. Accordingly, as there is substantial and effective control of personnel policies and practices and other matters affecting the general working conditions of employees in the petitioned for unit at the organizational level at which recognition is sought herein, in my view the claimed unit will promote effective dealings and efficiency of agency operations.

Eligibility Issues

The Activity contends that all of the auditors should be excluded from the unit as management officials. In this regard, the record reveals that during the course of their assigned audits, they work with the management being audited in formulating policy which will alleviate problems discovered by the audits. While the record indicates that the auditors are involved in some degree in policy formulation with respect to the various activities audited, they are not involved with policy formulation within the Activity. Accordingly, as the auditors do not participate in the formulation or determination of Activity policies, I find that they are not management officials within the meaning of the Order. 3/

The Activity also contends that the auditors at the GS-11, GS-12, and GS-13 levels should be excluded from the unit as supervisory employees. In this regard, the record reveals that they spend a substantial portion of their time acting as the designated AIC for individual audits, and, when so acting, the Activity alleges they are authorized to perform and exercise supervisory duties. As noted above, the record reveals that the AIC has complete control and responsibility for the audit to which he is assigned and possesses the authority to assign work, grant leave and transfers, handle grievances, initiate disciplinary action, effectively recommend employees for merit awards and promotions, train new auditors, and prepare performance evaluations for all subordinates employed by the Activity.

Under these circumstances, I find that when an auditor is acting as the designated AIC for an individual audit, he is a supervisor within the meaning of Section 2(c) of the Order, and should be excluded from the unit. However, since the record indicates that none of the employees in the disputed classifications spend all of their time as a designated AIC, but rather spend, in some cases, significant portions of their time as members of an audit team doing the same work as the other auditors in the unit, I find that when they are not acting as AICs, they should be included in the unit found appropriate herein. Accordingly, these employees should be deemed eligible to vote in the election ordered herein providing that they are not in a supervisory status at the time of the election. Therefore, I find that the voting eligibility of employees classified as Auditors GS-11, GS-12, and GS-13 should be determined by their status at the time of the election. 4/

Accordingly, I find that the following employees constitute a unit appropriate for the purpose of exclusive recognition within the meaning of Section 10 of Executive Order 11491, as amended:

All professional and nonprofessional employees of the U.S. Government Comptroller's Office, Guam, Trust Territory of the Pacific Islands, excluding all management officials, employees engaged in Federal personnel work in other than a purely clerical capacity, and supervisors as defined in the Order.

It is noted that the unit found appropriate includes professional employees and that the Assistant Secretary is prohibited by Section 10(b)(4) of the Order from including professional employees in the unit with employees who are not professionals unless a majority of the professional employees votes for inclusion in such a unit. Accordingly, the desires of the professional employees as to inclusion in the unit with nonprofessional employees must be ascertained. I shall, therefore, direct separate elections in the following groups:

Voting Group (a): All professional employees of the U.S. Government Comptroller's Office, Guam, Trust Territory of the Pacific Islands, excluding all nonprofessional employees, management officials, employees engaged in Federal personnel work in other than a purely clerical capacity, and supervisors as defined in the Order.

Voting Group (b): All nonprofessional employees of the U.S. Government Comptroller's Office, Guam, Trust Territory of the Pacific Islands, excluding all professional employees, management officials, employees engaged in Federal personnel work in other than a purely clerical capacity, and supervisors as defined in the Order.

The employees in the nonprofessional voting group (b) will be polled whether or not they desire to be represented by the American Federation of Government Employees, Local 1689, AFL-CIO.

4/ Cf. Department of Transportation, United States Coast Guard Support Center, Third District, Governors Island, New York, A/SLMR No. 785 (1977), and Department of Interior, Bureau of Land Management, District Office, Lakeview, Oregon, 2 A/SLMR 516, A/SLMR No. 212 (1972).

The employees in the professional voting group (a) will be asked two questions on their ballots: (1) whether or not they wish to be included with the nonprofessional employees for the purpose of exclusive recognition, and (2) whether or not they wish to be represented for the purpose of exclusive recognition by the American Federation of Government Employees, Local 1689, AFL-CIO. In the event that the majority of the valid votes in voting group (a) are cast in favor of inclusion in the same unit as the nonprofessional employees, the ballots of voting group (a) shall be combined with those of voting group (b).

Unless a majority of the valid votes of voting group (a) are cast for inclusion in the same unit as the nonprofessional employees, they will be taken to have indicated their desire to constitute a separate unit, and an appropriate certification will be issued indicating whether or not the American Federation of Government Employees, Local 1689, AFL-CIO was selected by the professional employee unit.

The unit determination in the subject case is based, in part, then upon the result of the election among the professional employees. However, I will now make the following findings in regard to the appropriate unit:

1. If a majority of the professional employees votes for inclusion in the same unit as the nonprofessional employees, I find that the following employees will constitute a unit appropriate for the purpose of exclusive recognition within the meaning of Section 10 of the Order:

All professional and nonprofessional employees of the U.S. Government Comptroller's Office, Guam, Trust Territory of the Pacific Islands, excluding all management officials, employees engaged in Federal personnel work in other than a purely clerical capacity, and supervisors as defined in the Order.

2. If a majority of the professional employees does not vote for inclusion in the same unit as the nonprofessional employees, I find that the following groups of employees constitute separate units appropriate for the purpose of exclusive recognition within the meaning of Section 10 of the Order: 5/

5/ As noted above, the record indicates that the Activity employs only one nonprofessional employee. If at the time of the election herein there is only one nonprofessional employee, and if a majority of the professional employees votes for a separate unit, the remaining unit of one nonprofessional employee cannot be certified. See Report On A Ruling No. 44, where it was found "that units of more than one employee were contemplated by the Order and consequently . . . a single employee unit is not appropriate for the purposes of collective bargaining." Accordingly, in the event that there is only one nonprofessional employee, and a majority of the professional employees does not vote for inclusion in the nonprofessional unit, the Area Administrator is directed to dismiss the petition as to the nonprofessional employee unit.

March 9, 1978

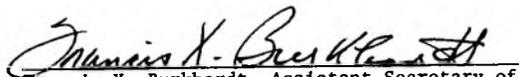

a. All professional employees of the U.S. Government Comptroller's Office, Guam, Trust Territory of the Pacific Islands, excluding all nonprofessional employees, management officials, employees engaged in Federal personnel work in other than a purely clerical capacity, and supervisors as defined in the Order.

b. All nonprofessional employees of the U.S. Government Comptroller's Office, Guam, Trust Territory of the Pacific Islands, excluding all professional employees, management officials, employees engaged in Federal personnel work in other than a purely clerical capacity, and supervisors as defined in the Order.

DIRECTION OF ELECTION

An election by secret ballot shall be conducted among the employees in the units found appropriate as early as possible, but not later than 60 days from the date below. The appropriate Area Administrator shall supervise the election, subject to the Assistant Secretary's Regulations. Eligible to vote are those in the units who were employed during the payroll period immediately preceding the date below, including employees who did not work during that period because they were out ill, or on vacation or on furlough, including those in the military service who appear in person at the polls. Ineligible to vote are employees who quit or were discharged for cause since the designated payroll period and who have not been rehired or reinstated before the election date. Those eligible shall vote whether or not they desire to be represented for the purpose of exclusive recognition by the American Federation of Government Employees, Local 1689, AFL-CIO.

SUMMARY OF DECISION AND ORDER OF THE ASSISTANT SECRETARY
PURSUANT TO SECTION 6 OF EXECUTIVE ORDER 11491, AS AMENDED

DEPARTMENT OF THE NAVY,
PUGET SOUND NAVAL SHIPYARD
A/SLMR No. 1003

This case involved an unfair labor practice complaint filed by the Coppersmiths' Local 463, AFL-CIO, (Complainant) alleging that the Respondent violated Section 19(a)(1), (2), (3), and (6) of the Order by holding unauthorized meetings with unit employees over matters related to personnel policies and procedures and general working conditions concerning work assignments involving the coppersmith craft, and by discouraging membership in a labor organization while assisting another labor organization.

In agreement with the Administrative Law Judge, the Assistant Secretary found that the Respondent had violated Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order when it met with unit employees on March 24, 1976, without first notifying the exclusive representative and giving it the opportunity to be represented at such meeting, as the meeting constituted a formal discussion within the meaning of Section 10(e) of the Order.

However, the Assistant Secretary found, contrary to the Administrative Law Judge, that the Respondent did not violate Section 19(a)(2) and (3) of the Order, nor had its conduct constituted an independent violation of Section 19(a)(1).

Accordingly, the Assistant Secretary issued a remedial order for the Section 19(a)(1) and (6) violations he had found.

DECISION AND ORDER

On August 17, 1977, Administrative Law Judge Ben H. Walley issued his Recommended Decision and Order in the above-entitled proceeding, finding that the Respondent had engaged in the unfair labor practices alleged in the complaint and recommending that it cease and desist therefrom and take certain affirmative action as set forth in the attached Administrative Law Judge's Recommended Decision and Order. Thereafter, the Respondent filed exceptions to the Administrative Law Judge's Recommended Decision and Order.

The Assistant Secretary has reviewed the rulings of the Administrative Law Judge made at the hearing and finds that no prejudicial error was committed. The rulings are hereby affirmed. Upon consideration of the Administrative Law Judge's Recommended Decision and Order and the entire record in this case, including the exceptions filed by the Respondent, I hereby adopt the Administrative Law Judge's findings, conclusions, and recommendations, only to the extent indicated herein.

This case arose as a result of a complaint filed by the Sheet Metal Workers' International, Coppersmiths' Local No. 463, AFL-CIO, (Complainant), an affiliate of the exclusive representative, the Bremerton Metal Trades Council, alleging that the Respondent violated Sections 19(a)(1), (2), (3), (5) and (6) of the Order 1/ by having unauthorized meetings with unit employees over matters related to personnel policies and procedures and general working conditions concerning work assignments involving the coppersmith craft, and by discouraging membership in a labor organization while assisting another labor organization.

1/ The Section 19(a)(5) allegation was dismissed by the Regional Administrator and, therefore, was not considered by the Administrative Law Judge.

On March 24, 1976, Melvin Chandler, Superintendent of Shop 56 at the Respondent Shipyard, called a meeting with employees rated as coppersmiths for the purpose of discussing, among other things, their general working conditions and assignment of work. Neither the Complainant, nor the Bremerton Metal Trades Council (BMTC), the exclusive representative of both the coppersmiths' and pipefitters' crafts, as well as other crafts represented in the locals which comprise the BMTC at the Respondent Shipyard, were notified or given an opportunity to represent their members at this meeting. 2/ At the meeting, Chandler discussed the future of the coppersmiths' trade and indicated that some 40 percent of the coppersmiths had requested transfers to the pipefitters' craft, that there had been a noticeable decline in the work historically performed by the coppersmiths, that there were limited promotional opportunities for members of the coppersmith craft, and that members of the coppersmith craft could, upon request, transfer to the pipefitter rating. 3/

A second meeting was held on April 14, 1976, at the request of the Complainant for the purpose of discussing why the March 24, 1976, meeting had been held. The Respondent explained that the March 24 meeting was held because of an order from the Civil Service Commission which required the Respondent to verify all job descriptions and to give the coppersmith employees the opportunity to ask any questions they might have with regard to the impact upon them. A third meeting was held on April 27, 1976, at which time the Respondent once again gave the coppersmiths the opportunity to transfer to a pipefitter rating if they so desired.

I agree with the Administrative Law Judge's conclusion that the Respondent violated Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order with respect to the March 24, 1976, meeting with its employees. Thus, this meeting involved a discussion between management and unit employees concerning personnel policies and practices and other matters affecting general

2/ The record reveals that among the coppersmiths attending this meeting were several officials of the Complainant and a member of the BMTC. The evidence establishes that these employees attended as coppersmith employees and were not invited to the meeting by the Respondent as representatives of the unit employees.

3/ In his Recommended Decision and Order, the Administrative Law Judge finds or infers that the discussions held by management encouraging a transfer from the coppersmith rating to the pipefitter rating actually involved a suggestion that members of the Coppersmiths' Local acquire membership in the Pipefitters' Local. (See e.g. the last paragraph on page 7 of the Recommended Decision and Order.) It is clear from the complaint and the record herein that the meetings and discussions which form the basis of the complaint concerned the propitiousness of transfer from one craft to another, rather than a direct encouragement to transfer from one union local to another.

working conditions and, as such, constituted a formal discussion between management and employees within the meaning of Section 10(e) of the Order. As the Respondent did not afford the Complainant prior notification of such a meeting and an opportunity to be represented therein, I find that it violated Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order. 4/

However, under the particular circumstances herein, I reject the conclusions of the Administrative Law Judge with respect to his findings that the Respondent also violated Sections 19(a)(2) and (3) of the Order and his finding of an independent Section 19(a)(1) violation. With respect to the Section 19(a)(2) allegation, I find no evidence to support the contention that the Respondent encouraged or discouraged membership in a labor organization by discrimination against employees in regard to their hiring, tenure, promotion, or other conditions of employment because of their membership in the Coppersmiths' Local. Thus, at the March 24 meeting, the Respondent only encouraged the coppersmiths to change their rating to a pipefitter rating because of changing work requirements and the problems arising as a result thereof and did not suggest they change union membership. 5/ The coppersmiths could conceivably have changed their ratings and still remained members of the Complainant. Indeed, the record indicated that some pipefitters were members of the Complainant. Furthermore, and as indicated above, the employees of the Complainant's Local and the Pipefitters' Local were both affiliate members of the same exclusive representative, the BMTC. Thus, there is no evidence that the coppersmith employees were discriminated against because of membership in the Coppersmiths' Local. Consequently, I shall dismiss the Section 19(a)(2) portion of the complaint.

With regard to the Section 19(a)(3) allegation, I find no evidence that the Respondent improperly attempted to sponsor, control, or otherwise assist a labor organization not having equivalent status. The record clearly establishes that the coppersmiths were given the opportunity to change ratings, not unions. Further, the coppersmiths, if they did transfer to the pipefitter rating, would continue to be represented by the same exclusive representative of the Respondent's employees, the BMTC. Therefore, I also shall dismiss the Section 19(a)(3) portion of the complaint.

4/ The Administrative Law Judge found no such violation of Section 19(a)(1) and (6) in connection with the meetings of April 14 and April 27, and no exceptions were filed with respect to this determination.

5/ See footnote 3, above.

With respect to the Administrative Law Judge's finding of an independent Section 19(a)(1) violation based on alleged economic coercion of coppersmith employees, I find, contrary to the Administrative Law Judge, that such form of coercion, if it did exist, does not constitute an interference with those rights which are accorded employees under the Order, absent evidence that anti-union considerations are involved. Thus, while economic coercion may be a threat to an employee's financial well being, standing alone, it would not constitute interference with employee rights assured under the Order. 6/ As there is no record evidence that the Respondent's actions were based on the union membership or affiliation of the affected employees, I find no independent violation of Section 19(a) (1) of the Order and shall dismiss this portion of the complaint.

ORDER

Pursuant to Section 6(b) of Executive Order 11491, as amended, and Section 203.26(b) of the Regulations, the Assistant Secretary of Labor for Labor-Management Relations hereby orders that the Department of Navy, Puget Sound Naval Shipyard shall:

1. Cease and desist from:

(a) Conducting formal discussions between management and employees or employee representatives concerning grievances, personnel policies and practices, or other matters affecting general working conditions of employees in the exclusively recognized unit without giving the employees' exclusive representative the opportunity to be represented at such discussions by its own representative.

(b) Interfering with, restraining, or coercing its employees by failing to provide the employees' exclusive representative the opportunity to be represented at formal discussions between management and employees or employee representatives concerning grievances, personnel policies and practices, or other matters affecting general working conditions of employees in the exclusively recognized unit.

2. Take the following affirmative actions in order to effectuate the purposes and policies of the Executive Order:

(a) Notify the employees' exclusive representative of, and give it the opportunity to be represented at, formal discussions between management and employees or employee representatives concerning grievances, personnel policies and practices, or other matters affecting general working conditions of employees in the exclusively recognized unit.

6/ Cf. Office of Economic Opportunity, Region V, Chicago, Illinois, 3 A/SLMR 668, A/SLMR No. 334 (1973).

(b) Post at its facility at Department of the Navy, Puget Sound Naval Shipyard, copies of the attached notice marked "Appendix" on forms to be furnished by the Assistant Secretary of Labor for Labor-Management Relations. Upon receipt of such forms, they shall be signed by the Commanding Officer, Department of the Navy, Puget Sound Naval Shipyard and they shall be posted and maintained by him for 60 consecutive days thereafter, in conspicuous places, including all places where notices to employees are customarily posted. The Commanding Officer shall take reasonable steps to insure that such notices are not altered, defaced, or covered by any other material.

(c) Pursuant to Section 203.27 of the Regulations, notify the Assistant Secretary in writing within 30 days from the date of this order as to what steps have been taken to comply herewith.

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED that the complaint in Case No. 71-3805(CA), insofar as it alleges violations of Sections 19(a)(2) and (3) and an independent violation of Section 19(a)(1) be, and it hereby is, dismissed.

Recommended Decision and Order

Statement of the Case

Pursuant to a Complaint filed on June 3, 1976, by Sheet Metal Workers' International Association, Copper-smiths Local #463, AFL-CIO, Bremerton Washington, against Puget Sound Naval Shipyard, Department of the Navy, Bremerton, Washington, a Notice of Hearing on said Complaint was issued on March 4, 1977, by the Regional Administrator for Labor-Management Services Administration, San Francisco Region, U. S. Department of Labor, and a hearing was held before the undersigned on March 28, 1977, in Bremerton, Washington.

The Complaint was filed pursuant to the provisions of Executive Order 11491, as amended, and the Complaint alleges a breach of said Order, particularly Section 19(a), Subsections (1), (2), (3), (5) and (6), as follows:

On March 24, 1976 Mr. Melvin Chandler, Pipe-Copper Shop Superintendent called an unauthorized meeting, interfered with, restrained and coerced the Coppersmiths in exercise of their rights, by informing them they had two (2) days to transfer to the Pipefitters craft as their craft was being eliminated, and further that they had no chance for advancement or promotion in the Coppersmith craft. On April 27, 1976 he called an additional unauthorized meeting and further informed the Coppersmith employees by signing a memo you can get a Form 50 to transfer to Pipefitters, repeating again this was the only way to advance or be promoted. As to the question what happens to the bona fide apprentices, no answer was given. Those meetings were held by Mr. Chandler without ever any consultation with either the certified bargaining agent, the Bremerton Metal Trades Council Representatives or its affiliated Copper-smiths, Local Union #463.

After investigation and on February 10, 1977, the Regional Administrator advised Complainant that he had found no basis for further proceedings on the alleged violation of Section 19 (a)(5), dismissed that allegation and advised that such dismissal did not affect the remaining allegations of the Complaint (Asst. Sec. Exhibit 1(b)).

Before: BEN H. WALLEY
Administrative Law Judge

At the hearing on March 28, 1977, all parties were afforded full opportunity to be heard, to offer, examine and cross-examine witnesses and to introduce evidence considered relevant to their respective positions in the premises.

After hearing the testimony of the witnesses and observing their demeanor, having reviewed the exhibits and based upon the entire record, I make the following Findings of Fact, Conclusions and Recommendations.

Findings of Fact

1. An Agreement (hereinafter referred to as Agreement) negotiated under Executive Order 11491, as amended (herein called the Order), covering the parties hereto, was entered into on June 5, 1975 by and between Bremerton Metal Trades Council, AFL-CIO, Bremerton, Washington, (hereinafter referred to as Council), and Puget Sound Naval Shipyard, Department of Navy, Bremerton, Washington (hereinafter referred to as Employer-Respondent), and at all times material to the issues involved said Agreement was in full force and effect.

2. The Preamble to the agreement recites, among other things, that:

The Council is composed of affiliated local unions of National or international organizations. Those affiliated locals having members employed in the Shipyard are listed in Appendix 1 hereto.

1/ It is at this point I observe that the Complaint was not filed by Bremerton Metal Trades Council, but by Coppersmiths Local 463, an organization affiliated with the Council and incorporated in the Agreement and listed in Appendix 1 thereto. Respondent raised this objection in its Brief for the first time. The record is silent as to any objections made during the administrative process to resolve the problem. There were no objections made at the time of the hearing. Therefore, I conclude the Complainant has standing to file the Complaint.

Appendix 1 lists the named Complainant (Exhibit J-1, page 103).

Article one, Section 1 of said agreement provides:

The Employer hereby recognizes that the Council is the exclusive representative of all employees in the unit as defined in Section 2 below and the Council hereby recognizes the responsibility of representing the interests of all such employees.

"Employees in the unit as defined in Section 2 below" includes all employee members of the Coppersmiths, Local 463 (Exhibit J-1, page 1 and 2).

3. On March 24, 1976, there was a meeting of Coppersmiths held pursuant to request of Melvin J. Chandler, Superintendent of Shop 56, for reasons stated as follows:

A. Basically there were several reasons for the March 24 meeting. I will enumerate them. One, I had about, I would say close to 40 per cent of the population of the copper-smith trade request a transfer to the pipe shop; two (sic), I had quite a few rebuttals from I.R.O. of coppersmith applications to other positions, which they turned them down because they said they were not qualified; and three, I thought I was acting for the good of the people involved. Those are the main reasons. (TR. page 131)

4. The notice of the aforesaid meeting was informal and was transmitted to the employees (Coppersmiths) by their foremen on instructions from Mr. Chandler. There were a total of eighteen Coppersmiths present. Some of those in attendance, in addition to being Coppersmiths by craft, were officers of Local 463 and one a member of the Council. Too, there were two foremen from the pipefitters' shop in attendance. However, it was brought out in testimony that each member attending did so as an employee and not as an officer of his union nor as a member or representative of the Council.

5. There was conflicting testimony as to what actually transpired at the meeting on March 24, 1976.

Generally, the witnesses for Complainant testified that Mr. Chandler effectually advised those present that the trades of Coppersmiths and pipefitters were so closely related that there wasn't any reason to have two crafts and that the Civil Service Commission, or some higher authority, was eliminating the Coppersmiths' rate; that promotional opportunities for Coppersmiths were limited, if existent at all; if anyone present desired to transfer to pipefitters he would assist in processing their request; and, that those desiring a transfer had two days within which to make the request. Mr. Chandler, the only witness for Employer that attended the meeting, testified that he called the meeting; advised those present the purpose of the meeting; discussed the decline in work normally performed by Coppersmiths; the limited chances for promotions; and, the fact that about 40% of the Coppersmiths had asked for a transfer. However, he specifically denied that he had used the time limitation of "two days." Instead, he said "five days" and we will get back together. Too, he said at no time did he discuss "the elimination of the Coppersmith rate." Mr. Clifton Craycraft, Foreman, Copper-smith, generally corroborated the testimony of Mr. Chandler.

6. Cross-examination of the witnesses did not remove the apparent inconsistent views of what actually transpired at the March 24, 1976 meeting. Particularly there remains unresolved: (1) the time within which a decision to make a request for transfer should be made; and (2) whether the "Coppersmiths' rate" would be eliminated. Regardless of these inconsistencies, for reasons herein-after stated, I find it unnecessary to resolve them.

7. It has been admitted that a meeting was called on March 24, 1976, to discuss the future of the "Coppersmiths' trade;" that some 40% of the Coppersmiths had requested transfers to pipefitters' craft; and that there had been a noticeable decline in the work historically performed by Coppersmiths. There were some 16 members of the Coppersmiths present and all witnesses for Complainant testified that they attended as employees (and not as officials of their own union or as members of the "Council"), and this was not refuted. It is a further fact that those present were advised that if they desired to transfer to the pipefitters' union they could make a request, in writing, and he, Mr. Chandler, would process the request through Personnel Operations Division. The results obtained by this offer is the reason I have concluded that it is immaterial whether they were given "two days" or a "few days" within which to decide on making the request to transfer.

8. Immediately following the offer of assistance in making a transfer, several of those in attendance contacted officers of the Coppersmiths' Union and members of the Council to find out what was going on. As a result of these contacts management was advised of the concern and a meeting was arranged for and held on April 14, 1976, to explain to the Coppersmiths the problems involved and the reasons for the action taken by Mr. Chandler on March 24, 1976. Explanations by Respondent were made at the April 14, meeting by Richard Blakey, Head of Personnel Operations Division, and Al McFall, Head of Employee-Management Relations Division and Administrator of the Labor-Relations Program. Mr. Blakey explained that they were only complying with OCMM Notice 12532, dated 6 February 1976 (Respondent Exhibit 1), which required verification of job descriptions and the "general purpose of that particular meeting (April 14) was to outline to the union and to the membership that was in attendance at that point in time the basic reason behind our initial request for the revised job description and to give those individuals an opportunity to ask any questions they might have as regards the impact upon them" (TR. 168). It was developed through this witness that the revision of the "job description" had been in process for some time and all parties, Coppersmiths, pipefitters and Council members had been involved. Too, Blakey testified that the final effort had not been implemented and that it is "not anticipated that they (Coppersmiths) will lose their rating, so long as they are performing Coppersmiths' duties" (TR. page 176). This testimony was basically corroborated by Mr. McFall except he observed: "The meeting started to turn into a representation of a hearing and I had to interject that this was for the purpose of having Mr. Blakey explain the various reasons for the actions that had been taken, it was not a hearing." (TR. 180).

9. On April 27, 1976, a third meeting was held, being the second meeting with Mr. Chandler and the Coppersmiths. In response to inquiry, Mr. Chandler stated the purpose of that meeting as follows:

A. In between the two meetings and after the April 14 meeting, the production officer called me to his office and told me that I should proceed with my actions as far as transferring the people who wanted to be transferred from coppersmith to pipefitter, and do it right away. I also met with Mr. Blakey, and he told me the same thing, and that was the main purpose of the April 27 meeting. (TR. page 137)

He further testified:

A. Well, I might add that after the first meeting, I let all the people stay in the conference room to have any discussion that they wanted to, and on the April 27 meeting, it was a very short meeting, it lasted less than five minutes I would say, and I told them at that time that all I was going to do was to give the people who wanted to the opportunity to say they wanted to transfer to a pipefitter rating just by merely giving me a handwritten memo assigning it and so stating that they wanted to change over. (TR. page 138)

This meeting produced results complained about and on that date (April 27), five (5) coppersmiths requested a transfer (Claimant's Exhibit 4) and during the year of 1976 a total of twelve (12) were suspended for withdrawing authorization to withhold dues (Claimant's Exhibit 5). The transfer of these twelve (12) members of Local 463, Coppersmiths, to the pipefitters' union reduced the membership from twenty-six (26) to fourteen (14) members.

Conclusions

A. The meeting on March 24, 1976, called by Mr. Chandler, was held for the primary purpose of discussing the plight of the individual members of Coppersmiths' Local 463. There was testimony to suggest that the action was required by the "Civil Service Commission or some higher authority" but because of the discussion at the meeting, the results ultimately obtained and the manner in which it was done, it appears to be and I so find that it was because of the paucity of the kind of work existing at the shipyard traditionally performed by Coppersmiths and the problems arising as a result thereof. This necessitated a discussion of the "hiring, tenure, promotion, or other conditions of employment" within the meaning of Section 19(a)(2) of the Order. To aid, if not solve the problems, Mr. Chandler pointed to the pipefitters' union and offered to process any written request to transfer (to the pipefitters' union). The offer to assist in the "transfer" would be beneficial to the pipefitters' union (by increasing membership) and equally, if not more so, detrimental to Coppersmiths' Local 463 (by a corresponding loss in membership), within the provisions of Section 19 (a)(3) of the Order. Because of the casual but effective mention of the sheer numbers, the normally expected attrition, the limited, if not prohibitive, chance of promotions, and the quota system in effect, those in attendance could very vividly see the gloomly picture of the future. This was economic coercion in its simplest form and within Section 19(a)(1) of the Order.

B. The meeting of April 14, 1976, was to "outline to the Union and to the membership that was in attendance at that point in time the basic reason behind our initial request for the revised job description and to give these individuals an opportunity to ask any questions they might have as regards the impact upon them" (TR. page 168). "This was for the purpose of having Mr. Blakey explain the various reasons for the actions that had been taken, it was not a hearing" (TR. page 180). Thus, the meeting was in response to the concerns expressed about the meeting of March 24, 1976, but it was not responsive to those concerns. The explanations made were that what had been done was required by the Civil Service Commission. Yet, the directive was cancelled and never put into effect. The "impact upon them" was considered only secondarily, if at all, and the "purpose" of the meeting of March 24, 1976, remained the primary consideration.

C. On April 27, 1976, after a call from the production officer, a Captain Martin, who instructed Mr. Chandler to proceed to transfer "the people who wanted to be transferred from Coppersmiths to pipefitter, and do it right away," and after having "met with Mr. Blakey, and he told me the same thing," a meeting was held and "it was a very short meeting, it lasted less than five minutes I would say, and I told them that all I was going to do was to give the people who wanted to the opportunity to say they wanted to transfer to a pipefitter rating just by merely giving me a handwritten memo assigning (sic) it and so stating that they wanted to change over" (TR. page 138). Following this meeting and during the year of 1976, twelve Coppersmiths summarily transferred to pipefitters, without following prescribed personnel procedures, by making a simple request.

D. The meeting of March 24, 1976, was a "discussion between management and employees ... concerning grievances, personnel policies and practices, or other matters affecting ... employees in the unit" and was considerably more than a counseling session as discussed in Department of Defense, National Guard Bureau, Texas Air National Guard, A/SLMR No. 336, FLRC No. 74A-11. Too, it was considerably more than an "investigative" meeting found to exist in and excluded from the provisions of Section 10(e) of the Order in Internal Revenue Service, Washington, D. C., Assistant Secretary Case No. 224056(CA), FLRC No. 74A-23. Therefore, I conclude that the meeting of March 24, 1976, was a "formal discussion" within the meaning of Section 10(e) of the Order, and the failure to give the employees (Coppersmiths) an opportunity to be represented constituted a violation of Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order and was an unfair labor practice. Also, this meeting dealt with the limited opportunities for promotions and other conditions of employment within the meaning of Section 19(a)(2) of the Order.

E. The meeting of April 14, 1976, was a "formal discussion" within the meaning of Section 10(e) of the Order and all proper parties were present. However, it appears to have been a pro forma meeting only inasmuch as the meeting of March 27, 1976, was called because Captain Martin directed Mr. Chandler to proceed with his actions to "transfer" those making the request, "and do it right away," which was confirmed by Mr. Blakey. Thus, the transfer of those Coppersmiths in a manner inconsistent with personnel policy procedures and without regard to the impact on the union or its members was contrary to the provisions of Section 19(a)(3) of the Order. Previous requests to "transfer" to pipefitters had been denied by the Industrial Relations Office (I.R.O.) and the method used was nothing more than a unilateral act of command classification in total disregard of the rights of Coppersmiths' Local 463 and a gross departure from Respondents' own personnel policies and procedures.

Based upon the foregoing findings of fact and conclusions, and therein having found that the Respondent has engaged in certain conduct prohibited by Section 19(a)(1), (2), (3) and (6) of Executive Order 11491, as amended, I shall recommend that an order be entered directing the Respondent to cease and desist therefrom and take specified affirmative actions set forth below designed to effectuate the policies of said Order.

Recommended Order

Pursuant to section 6(b) of Executive Order 11491, as amended, and section 203.26(b) of the Regulations, the Assistant Secretary of Labor for Labor-Management Relations hereby orders that Puget Sound Naval Shipyard, Department of the Navy, Bremerton, Washington shall:

1. Cease and desist from:

A. Coercing, encouraging and/or assisting any employee who is a member of Sheet Metal Workers' International Association (Coppersmiths, Local 463), to transfer membership to Sheet Metal Workers' Local 274 or to Pipefitters Local 631; or

B. Meeting with employee members of Coppersmiths, Local 463 for the purpose of discussing with them the promotional opportunities within their trade, or the elimination of the Coppersmiths craft or trade, or that the similarity of the pipefitters trade and the Coppersmiths trade is such as to render it unnecessary to maintain both trades at the shipyard, without first giving the affected unions (Coppersmiths, Sheet Metal and/or Pipefitters) an opportunity to be represented at such discussions; or

C. Aiding or otherwise assisting any employee member of Coppersmiths, Local 463 in processing any request, in writing or otherwise, to transfer to pipefitters, sheet metal or any other trade in circumvention of the established and operating personnel procedures applicable to all "transfers" of employees at the shipyard; or

D. Refusing to consult, confer, or negotiate with the Coppersmiths, the pipefitters, the Council or any other affected representative concerning the aforesaid matters as required by the Agreement and the Order.

2. Take the following affirmative action in order to effectuate the purposes and provisions of the agreement and Executive Order 11491, as amended:

A. Post at its facility at Puget Sound Naval Shipyard, Bremerton, Washington, copies of the attached notice marked "Appendix" on forms to be furnished by the Assistant Secretary of Labor for Labor-Management Relations. Upon receipt of such forms, they shall be signed by Admiral F. F. Manganaro, RADM, USN, and shall be posted and maintained by him for sixty (60) consecutive days thereafter, in conspicuous places, including all bulletin boards and other places where notices to employees are customarily posted. The Admiral shall take reasonable steps to insure that such notices are not altered, defaced, or covered in whole or in part by other material.

B. Notify Pay Roll Section, or other appropriate section, that, effective immediately, union dues will no longer be deducted from the pay of the following named employees if still employed: Peter F. Brown, Donald A. Palmer, Gerald H. Stocks, Robert L. Prindle, Alexander A. Contreras, Travis L. Boswell, Michael O. Hamren, Roger C. Turner, Elsworth A. Severson, Michael W. Napper, Albert L. Harlan, Dennis J. Hood. Also any other employees, if any, who have transferred from Coppersmiths Local 463 to any other union with the aid of the Activity in circumvention of its established personnel procedures. Such notice shall advise the individuals named and affected that the refusal to withhold dues will remain in effect until such time as each has effected his own transfer, unaided by management, to a union, if he so desires, according to the by-laws of such union and according to the established personnel policies and procedures applicable to all employees, and after execution of a proper request to withhold dues.

C. Pursuant to Section 203.27 of the Regulations, notify the Assistant Secretary, in writing, within twenty (20) days from the date specified in the letter transmitting the forms aforesaid as to what steps have been taken to comply herewith.

Dated on the 17th day of August 1977.

UNITED STATES DEPARTMENT OF LABOR
ASSISTANT SECRETARY FOR LABOR-MANAGEMENT RELATIONS
SUMMARY OF DECISION AND ORDER OF THE ASSISTANT SECRETARY
PURSUANT TO SECTION 6 OF EXECUTIVE ORDER 11491, AS AMENDED

INTERNAL REVENUE SERVICE,
CHICAGO DISTRICT OFFICE
A/SLMR No. 1004

This case involved an unfair labor practice complaint filed by the National Treasury Employees Union (NTEU) and NTEU Chapter 10, alleging that the Respondent violated Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order by (1) refusing to make available to a union representative a statistical analysis of supervisory evaluations prepared in connection with a promotion action, and (2) in connection with an unrelated promotion action, refusing to make available to a union representative the evaluative material considered during the selection process. In both instances, the material was sought by the Complainant in its capacity as the representative of non-selected employees in grievance proceedings pertaining to the respective promotion actions.

The Assistant Secretary concluded that the record failed to establish, in the first instance, that the statistical analysis was necessary and relevant to the processing of the grievance. He noted that the parties had stipulated that neither the evaluation panel nor the selecting official in any way relied on the statistical analysis in making their selections. To that extent, the Complainant had not shown that the statistical analysis had any demonstrable impact on the selection process which was the subject of the grievance. The particular grievance therein alleged "a failure on the part of the Ranking Panel to properly evaluate the candidates presented to them." Each of the grievant's specific arguments stated that the ranking panel had not properly interpreted his supervisory evaluations. The Assistant Secretary found, however, that the statistical analysis dealt only with the supervisory evaluations themselves and not with the panel's interpretations of the evaluations which led to its rankings. He concluded, therefore, that the Complainant had failed to show that the information contained in the statistical analysis was necessary for it to process the grievance, which was the express reason the statistical analysis was sought. The Assistant Secretary noted, moreover, that the Complainant had in its possession all the data upon which the analysis was based.

Under these circumstances, the Assistant Secretary concluded that the Respondent had no obligation under the Executive Order to provide the Complainant with the statistical analysis it had requested and he ordered that the complaint in this regard be dismissed.

With regard to the second allegation, the Assistant Secretary noted that in Department of the Treasury, Internal Revenue Service, Milwaukee, Wisconsin, A/SLMR No. 974 (1978), he had found that an employee's right to privacy of his records must be balanced against the conflicting rights in each case. The Assistant Secretary further noted that where, as here, the conflicting rights are broad and involve the paramount public interest of an exclusive representative's right to adequately perform its representational functions, of having the Federal government operate within its merit promotion system equitably, and of encouraging the use of nondisruptive grievance procedures, he had determined that the mere identification of the subject of certain documents is not a violation of privacy so significant as to bar disclosure of the material and that the identified employee(s) would still have the right to have the documents sanitized so as to omit any sensitive or damaging personal material.

Under these circumstances, the Assistant Secretary concluded that the information sought herein, which he found to be necessary and relevant to the performance of the Complainant's representational function, should have been disclosed to the Complainant. Accordingly, he found that the Respondent violated Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order by refusing to make available to the Complainant the evaluation material used in connection with the selection for promotion in the second allegation herein. Therefore, he ordered the Respondent to cease and desist from the conduct found violative and to take certain affirmative actions.

DECISION AND ORDER

This matter is before the Assistant Secretary pursuant to Regional Administrator R. C. DeMarco's Order Transferring Case to the Assistant Secretary of Labor in accordance with Section 203.5(b), 203.7(a)(4) and 206.5(a) of the Assistant Secretary's Regulations.

Upon consideration of the entire record in the subject case, including the parties' stipulation of facts, accompanying exhibits and briefs, the Assistant Secretary finds:

The complaint herein alleges that the Respondent violated Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of Executive Order 11491, as amended, by (1) refusing to make available to a union representative a statistical analysis of supervisory evaluations prepared in connection with a promotion action, and (2) in connection with an unrelated promotion action, refusing to make available to a union representative the evaluative material considered during the selection process. In both instances, the material was sought by the Complainant in its capacity as representative of non-selected employees in grievance proceedings pertaining to the promotion actions. The stipulation treats the two alleged unfair labor practices as separate "counts."

Count I

The Respondent refused to produce the statistical analysis requested by the Complainant on the grounds that it had provided the latter with all appropriate information relating to the grievance at issue, and that further, the statistical analysis was an "intra-management" document.

The undisputed facts, as stipulated by the parties, are as follows:

In October 1976, a number of vacancies for GS-12 Revenue Agent positions were announced by the Respondent in Vacancy Announcement 76-119. There were approximately 100 qualified candidates for these positions. Each candidate was evaluated by his or her immediate supervisor and each one also appeared before a ranking panel consisting of three management officials. The ranking panel considered each candidate's promotion appraisal, past experience and training, relevant incentive awards, and such other relevant material as it deemed necessary, and assigned a total score for each applicant. The panel also prepared a written narrative statement reflecting the consensus of panel opinion and judgment of the applicants' ability to perform in the position for which they were being considered as compared with the other applicants. The ranking panel's judgment constituted 40 percent of the total score of an applicant, the other 60 percent being the score given by the supervisor on the promotion appraisal. The total scores determined which candidate would be rated highly qualified or best qualified according to cut-off scores assigned by the ranking panel for that position. As a result of this process, a number of vacancies for the GS-12 Revenue Agent positions were filled.

On December 22, 1976, the Complainant sought, on behalf of non-selected candidates for the GS-12 Revenue Agent position, information related to the selection process. On January 28, 1977, the information sought, including supervisory and ranking panel evaluations of all the candidates, was provided to the Complainant. On February 17, 1977, a non-selected candidate, John Cora, filed a grievance alleging various violations of the parties' negotiated agreement in the selection process. His grievance was taken through all four steps of the negotiated grievance procedure and arbitration was invoked on June 9, 1977.

After it had received the information sought as a result of its original request, the Complainant informally learned that after the ranking panel had completed its duties, the chairman had prepared a statistical analysis of the promotion evaluations submitted by the supervisors of the candidates in connection with Vacancy Announcement 76-119. The promotion evaluations prepared by the supervisors had consisted of ten factors, ranging from "Examination Planning and Scheduling" to "Cooperation." For each of these factors, the employee being evaluated was rated on a scale from "1- Considered to be failing to meet normal requirements of successful operation" to "5- Considered to materially exceed accepted standards." The evaluation also provided space for a short narrative comment to be made by the supervisor.

The chairman's statistical analysis reflected both the total number and the percentage of the numerical ratings given on all the evaluations received in connection with Vacancy Announcement 76-119. He appended to this statistical analysis a memorandum containing some general comments about the evaluation appraisals. 1/ The analysis was prepared at the request of the selecting official, who requested similar analyses in connection with all GS-12 and GS-13 promotion actions within his division so that he could determine whether the managers in his division were following Internal Revenue Service requirements for the preparation of employee evaluations. A copy of the analysis prepared in this case was sent to the selecting official. The parties stipulated that he did not refer to the analysis in selecting individuals for promotion.

On March 3, 1977, pursuant to the Freedom of Information Act (FOIA), 5 U.S.C. §552, the Complainant requested all quantitative and qualitative analyses of the supervisory appraisals and ranking panel scores prepared in connection with Vacancy Announcement 76-119. This request was denied by the Respondent based on its contention that such information was exempt from disclosure pursuant to the FOIA. On March 18, 1977, the Complainant appealed this determination to the National Office of the Internal Revenue Service. Simultaneously, it requested the information pursuant to Executive Order 11491, as amended, in order to represent Cora in his grievance. This latter request was rejected by the Respondent on May 24, 1977, on the grounds that the Complainant had received all the appropriate information related to Cora's grievance and that the statistical analysis was an "intra-management" document. On May 4, 1977, the Complainant was given the document at issue herein pursuant to its FOIA request. 2/

1/ His comments included the following:

In general the (promotion evaluations) for the Division were well done citing specifics to justify ratings. Generally, the appraisal folders were found to be adequate, however in some instances there was little documentation to support the.... narrative.

The panel's task in evaluating the potential of the agents was at times complicated by a lack of current history records. There are still some folders that contain outdated information (job visits, workload reviews, etc.), or non-authorized documents (fraud referral reports, signout registers). In addition, managers should assure that all evaluative information is in the employee's records prior to submission of the file to Personnel.

2/ From the record it is not clear whether a determination actually was made that the FOIA required release of the document. However, even assuming that production was required under the FOIA, such a conclusion would not be determinative as to whether the document was necessary and relevant for the processing of a grievance under the parties' negotiated grievance procedure.

It has been previously held that agency management must provide an exclusive representative with information it seeks which is necessary and relevant for the performance of its representational functions, and that evaluation materials considered in the course of a promotion action, such as were submitted to the Complainant herein, are necessary and relevant to the effective processing of a grievance which questions the selection process. 3/ The issue here is whether the statistical analysis of the supervisory evaluations, the subject of the instant complaint, also was necessary and relevant to the Complainant's performance of its representational obligations.

In my view, the record fails to establish that the statistical analysis was necessary and relevant to the processing of the grievance herein. Thus, the parties have stipulated that neither the evaluation panel nor the selecting official in any way relied on the statistical analysis in making their selections. To that extent, the Complainant has not shown that the statistical analysis had any demonstrable impact on the selection process which is the subject of the grievance. The Cora grievance alleged a "failure on the part of the Ranking Panel to properly evaluate the candidates presented to them." Each of the grievant's specific arguments stated that the ranking panel had not properly interpreted his supervisory evaluations. However, the statistical analysis, including the chairman's remarks, noted above at footnote 1, dealt only with the supervisory evaluations themselves, and not with the panel's interpretation of the evaluations which led to its rankings. Therefore, in my judgment, the Complainant has failed to show that the information contained in the statistical analysis was necessary for it to effectively process the Cora grievance, which was the express reason the statistical analysis was sought. Moreover, the Complainant had in its possession all the data upon which the analysis was based. 4/

Under all of these circumstances, I conclude that the Respondent had no obligation under the Executive Order to provide the Complainant with the statistical analysis it had requested. Accordingly, I shall order that Count I of the instant complaint be dismissed.

Count II

The Respondent refused to make available to a Union representative the evaluative material reviewed by, used by and/or made available to the ranking panel in the promotion action outlined in the second "count" of the complaint herein. The refusal was on the ground that any released material concerning the selected candidate could be easily identified, where,

3/ Department of Defense, State of New Jersey, 3 FLRC 284, FLRC No. 73A-59 (1975).

4/ The Complainant, although acknowledging that it had the data in its possession, asserted that reconstructing the analysis would have been time consuming. However, it has not been established that the work required to reconstruct the analysis from the available data would have placed an undue burden on the Complainant.

as here, there were only two highly qualified candidates, and thereby would invade the selected candidate's right to the privacy of her records.

The undisputed facts of this matter, as stipulated by the parties, are as follows:

On July 29, 1976, Vacancy Announcement 76-79 was posted for a position as an Audit Accounting Aide, GS-4, in the Respondent's Waukegan, Illinois, facility. There were three applicants. Two were found to be highly qualified, and one of these two candidates, Ms. Bonita Howe, was selected. The Complainant requested the evaluation material considered by the ranking panel in the course of this selection. The request was made in connection with the Complainant's duty to represent the employees in the unit. The Respondent declined to supply the materials, as noted above, on the ground that since there were only two individuals involved, sanitization would not protect the privacy of the selected candidate. Subsequently, a grievance was filed by the Complainant on behalf of Ms. Fredricks pursuant to the parties' negotiated grievance procedure, the grievance was carried to the fourth step, and arbitration was then invoked.

In Department of the Treasury, Internal Revenue Service, Milwaukee, Wisconsin, A/SLMR No. 974 (1978), I found that an employee's right to privacy of his records must be balanced against the conflicting rights in each case. And where, as here, the conflicting rights are broad and involve the paramount public interest of an exclusive representative's right to adequately perform its representational functions, of having the Federal government operate within its merit promotion system equitably, and of encouraging the use of nondisruptive grievance procedures, I have determined that the mere identification of the subject of certain documents is not a violation of privacy so significant as to bar disclosure of the material and that the identified employee(s) would still have the right to have the documents sanitized so as to omit any sensitive or damaging personal material.

Under these circumstances, I conclude that the information sought herein, which I find to be necessary and relevant to the performance of the Complainant's representational function, should have been disclosed to the Complainant. Accordingly, by refusing to make available to the Complainant the evaluation material used in connection with the selection for promotion made pursuant to Vacancy Announcement 76-79, I find that the Respondent violated Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order.

ORDER

Pursuant to Section 6(b) of Executive Order 11491, as amended, and Section 203.26(b) of the Regulations, the Assistant Secretary of Labor for Labor-Management Relations hereby orders that the Internal Revenue Service, Chicago District Office, Chicago, Illinois, shall:

1. Cease and desist from:

(a) Refusing to permit the National Treasury Employees Union, Chapter 10, access to such documents and materials as are necessary and relevant to the National Treasury Employees Union's processing of a grievance regarding the selection process for the GS-4 Audit Accounting Aide vacancy for which Vacancy Announcement 76-79 was posted.

(b) In any like or related manner, interfering with, restraining, or coercing employees in the exercise of their rights assured by Executive Order 11491, as amended.

2. Take the following affirmative actions in order to effectuate the purposes and policies of Executive Order 11491, as amended:

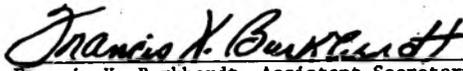

(a) Upon request, permit the National Treasury Employees Union, Chapter 10, access to such documents and materials as are necessary and relevant to the National Treasury Employees Union's processing of a grievance regarding the selection process for the GS-4 Audit Accounting Aide vacancy for which Vacancy Announcement 76-79 was posted.

(b) Post at its facility at the Internal Revenue Service, Chicago District Office, Chicago, Illinois, copies of the attached notice marked "Appendix" on forms to be furnished by the Assistant Secretary of Labor for Labor-Management Relations. Upon receipt of such forms, they shall be signed by the District Director, Internal Revenue Service, Chicago District, Chicago, Illinois, and shall be posted and maintained by him for 60 consecutive days thereafter in conspicuous places, including all places where notices to employees are customarily posted. The District Director shall take steps to ensure that notices are not altered, defaced, or covered by any other material.

(c) Pursuant to Section 203.27 of the Regulations, notify the Assistant Secretary, in writing, within 30 days from the date of this order as to what steps have been taken to comply herewith.

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED that Count I of the complaint in Case No. 50-15459(CA) be, and it hereby is, dismissed.

UNITED STATES DEPARTMENT OF LABOR
ASSISTANT SECRETARY FOR LABOR-MANAGEMENT RELATIONS
SUMMARY OF SECOND SUPPLEMENTAL DECISION AND ORDER
OF THE ASSISTANT SECRETARY
PURSUANT TO SECTION 6 OF EXECUTIVE ORDER 11491, AS AMENDED

DEPARTMENT OF THE ARMY,
FORT McPHERSON, GEORGIA
A/SLMR No. 1005

On May 28, 1976, the Assistant Secretary issued his Supplemental Decision and Order in A/SLMR No. 655, finding that a Department of Army reorganization did not so thoroughly combine and integrate the American Federation of Government Employees, AFL-CIO, Local 81 (AFGE Local 81) unit, located at Fort Gillem, Georgia, with the Petitioner, the American Federation of Government Employees, AFL-CIO, Local 1759's unit, located at Fort McPherson, Georgia, so as to require a finding that the AFGE Local 81's unit had lost its separate identity. On June 2, 1977, the Federal Labor Relations Council (Council) set aside the Assistant Secretary's Supplemental Decision in the instant case and remanded the case for reconsideration in light of the principles enunciated in its Decision on Appeal (FLRC No. 76A-82).

In light of the principles enunciated by the Council in its Decision on Appeal, the Assistant Secretary found that those employees who had been represented by the AFGE Local 81 at Fort Gillem and who had been administratively transferred to Fort McPherson, have accreted into the AFGE Local 1759's unit, which remains appropriate for the purpose of exclusive recognition.

Accordingly, the Assistant Secretary ordered that the unit represented by the AFGE Local 1759 be clarified consistent with his Second Supplemental Decision and Order.

SECOND SUPPLEMENTAL DECISION AND ORDER

On November 26, 1975, the Assistant Secretary issued his Decision and Remand in the above captioned case in A/SLMR No. 586, finding that the record did not provide an adequate basis upon which to determine the appropriateness of the clarification action sought by the petition filed by the American Federation of Government Employees, AFL-CIO, Local 1759, hereinafter called AFGE Local 1759. 1/ Accordingly, he remanded the case to the appropriate Assistant Regional Director (now called Regional Administrator) for the purpose of securing additional evidence in accordance with his Decision. Thereafter, on May 28, 1976, the Assistant Secretary issued his Supplemental Decision and Order in A/SLMR No. 655, finding, in essence, that a Department of Army reorganization did not so thoroughly combine and integrate the employees formerly represented exclusively by the American Federation of Government Employees, AFL-CIO, Local 81, hereinafter called AFGE Local 81, 2/ located at Fort Gillem, with the AFGE Local 1759's unit, located at Fort McPherson, so as to require a finding that the AFGE Local 81's unit had lost its separate identity.

On June 2, 1977, the Federal Labor Relations Council, hereinafter called Council, issued its Decision on Appeal from the Assistant Secretary's Supplemental Decision (FLRC No. 76A-82). The Council concluded, "that the Assistant Secretary's standard for resolving questions as to the appropriate unit which arise in the context of a claimed accretion is inconsistent with the purposes of the Order, especially those reflected in Section 10(b), and that his application of that standard in the instant case must be set aside." In its Decision, the Council set forth certain principles which it deemed were applicable to the subject case. Among other things, the Council stated that "where a reorganization results in an issue as to whether a previously existing unit continues to be appropriate, or whether the employees in that previously existing unit have accreted into another unit, appropriate unit determinations must equally satisfy each of the 10(b) criteria in recognition of and in a manner fully consistent with purposes of the Order, including the dual objectives of preventing further fragmentation of bargaining units as well as reducing existing fragmentation, thereby promoting a more comprehensive bargaining unit structure." It noted also that a finding of accretion is not dependent upon thorough physical integration of the employees at issue into the existing unit and should not turn solely on whether the previously existing unit has lost its separate identity and the employees in such unit have lost their separate and distinct community of interest.

1/ AFGE Local 1759 sought to clarify its exclusively recognized unit at Fort McPherson, Georgia, so as to include all nonsupervisory and nonprofessional employees who are currently employed by Fort McPherson, but are located physically at Fort Gillem, Georgia, formerly the Atlanta Army Depot.

2/ On July 1975, AFGE Local 81 issued a disclaimer of interest for the unit of employees it had represented at Fort Gillem.

Upon the entire record in this case, including those facts developed at the initial and reopened hearings, the Assistant Secretary finds:

In accordance with the policy enunciated by the Council, I am constrained to find that the Fort Gillem employees formerly represented by the AFGE Local 81 have accreted into the unit at Fort McPherson represented exclusively by the AFGE Local 1759. Thus, although the employees formerly represented by the AFGE Local 81 remain physically separate, they have the same mission and overall supervision as the employees at Fort McPherson, and all the employees at the two locations are now serviced by a single personnel office located at Fort McPherson. Further, both Fort Gillem and Fort McPherson have one area of consideration for merit promotions and the same competitive area for reductions-in-force. Therefore, I conclude, the employees of Fort McPherson and Fort Gillem now share a community of interest. Moreover, the parties' assert, and I agree, that inclusion of the employees formerly represented by the AFGE Local 81 in the aforementioned unit at Fort McPherson, which will result in a more comprehensive bargaining unit, will promote effective dealings and efficiency of agency operations. Noted particularly in this latter regard is the fact that the employees at Fort McPherson and Fort Gillem are serviced by the same personnel office and that they are in the same area of consideration for promotions and in the same competitive area for reduction-in-force.

Accordingly, I find that those employees who had been represented by the AFGE Local 81 at Fort Gillem and who have been administratively transferred to Fort McPherson have accreted into the AFGE Local 1789's unit, which I find remains appropriate for the purpose of exclusive recognition. I shall, therefore, order that the unit represented by the AFGE Local 1759 be clarified to include those employees who had been represented by the AFGE Local 81 at Fort Gillem. 3/

3/ See Naval Training Center, Orlando, Florida, A/SLMR No. 988 (1978).

ORDER

IT IS HEREBY ORDERED that the unit for which the American Federation of Government Employees, AFL-CIO, Local 1759 was accorded exclusive recognition on December 9, 1963, at Fort McPherson, Georgia, be, and it hereby is, clarified by including in said unit those employees formerly in the unit for which the American Federation of Government Employees, AFL-CIO, Local 81, was accorded exclusive recognition on December 1, 1964, at the Atlanta Army Depot, Forest Park, Georgia, now called Fort Gillem, Georgia.

DECISION AND ORDER

On July 20, 1977, Administrative Law Judge William Naimark issued his Recommended Decision and Order in the above-entitled proceedings, dismissing the complaint against Respondent Army and Air Force Exchange Service, Europe, hereinafter called AAFES, finding that the Respondent U.S. Army, Europe and Seventh Army, hereinafter called USAREUR, had engaged in certain unfair labor practices and recommending that it cease and desist therefrom and take certain affirmative actions as set forth in the attached Administrative Law Judge's Recommended Decision and Order. Thereafter, the Complainant and both Respondents filed exceptions and supporting briefs with respect to the Administrative Law Judge's Recommended Decision and Order.

The Assistant Secretary has reviewed the rulings of the Administrative Law Judge made at the hearing and finds that no prejudicial error was committed. The rulings are hereby affirmed. Upon consideration of the Administrative Law Judge's Recommended Decision and Order and the entire record in the subject cases, including the Complainant's and the Respondents' exceptions, I hereby adopt the Administrative Law Judge's findings, conclusions, and recommendations, only to the extent consistent herewith.

This proceeding involved two unfair labor practice complaints filed by the American Federation of Government Employees, Local 2348, AFL-CIO, (AFGE). One complaint alleged, in essence, that the Agency, U.S. Army Europe and Seventh Army (USAREUR) violated Section 19(a)(1) of the Order by its action in issuing regulation 690-84 and making such regulation binding upon the Army and Air Force Exchange Service, Europe (AAFES). The regulation contained, among other things, reduction-in-force (RIF) procedures applicable to U.S. citizens employed by the AAFES which allegedly were contrary to RIF procedures contained in the negotiated agreement between AFGE and AAFES. The second complaint alleged essentially that the AAFES violated Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order by conducting a RIF action affecting employees represented exclusively by the AFGE in violation of the provisions of the negotiated agreement between the AAFES and the AFGE.

The Administrative Law Judge found that USAREUR, in directing and requiring the implementation of Regulation 690-84 by AAFES-Europe, violated Section 19(a)(6) and (1) of the Order as it required AAFES to disregard the RIF procedures established under the negotiated agreement between the AAFES and the AFGE. The Administrative Law Judge also found that the AAFES did not violate Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order as it made an effort to be exempted from the provisions for RIF within Regulation 690-84 and implemented said regulations only on direct command from the USAREUR.

The Assistant Secretary found, contrary to the Administrative Law Judge, that the actions of the USAREUR were not violative of the Order. In this regard he noted that by virtue of a regulation which the AAFES and the AFGE incorporated into their negotiated agreement, the USAREUR had the authority to issue Regulation 690-84 and to require the AAFES to implement its provisions in conducting a RIF action affecting employees exclusively represented by the AFGE and that, therefore, said actions did not result in an improper unilateral modification of the terms and conditions as established in the negotiated agreement between AAFES and the AFGE.

Accordingly, the Assistant Secretary ordered that the complaints be dismissed in their entirety.

The complaint in Case No. 22-6599(CA) alleges essentially that the USAREUR violated Section 19(a)(1) of the Order by its action in issuing and enforcing a regulation binding upon the AAFES containing, among other things, reduction-in-force (RIF) procedures applicable to U.S. citizens employed by the AAFES which were contrary to RIF procedures contained in the negotiated agreement between the AAFES and the American Federation of Government Employees, Local 2348, AFL-CIO, hereinafter called AFGE. The complaint in Case No. 22-6601(CA) alleges essentially that the AAFES violated Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order by conducting a RIF action affecting employees represented exclusively by the AFGE in violation of the provisions of the negotiated agreement between the AAFES and the AFGE. 1/

The essential facts in the case, which are not in dispute, are set forth, in detail, in the attached Administrative Law Judge's Recommended Decision and Order, and I shall repeat them only to the extent necessary.

On October 27, 1971, the AFGE was certified as the exclusive bargaining representative of the regular U.S. citizen civilian employees employed by the AAFES at Munich, Germany. The AAFES (Europe), which is part of the Army and Air Force Exchange Service, a nonappropriated fund instrumentality, employs approximately 200 hourly paid plan (HPP) employees and 300 local national (LN) employees. 2/

On March 25, 1974, the AFGE and the AAFES executed a negotiated agreement which was in effect at all times material herein. Among other things, this agreement contained the following provisions:

Article IV, AUTHORITY, LEGAL AND REGULATORY APPLICATIONS

Section 2. In the administration of all matters covered by this agreement, officials and employees are governed by existing or future laws and the regulations of appropriate authorities, including policies set forth in AAFES Personnel Regulations; by published agency policies and regulations in existence at the time the agreement was approved; and by subsequently published agency policies and regulations required by law or by the regulations of appropriate authorities, or authorized by the terms of a controlling agreement at a higher agency level.

1/ On July 30, 1976, the Regional Administrator dismissed the 19(a)(5) allegations in both complaints. No request for review of the Regional Administrator's action was filed with the Assistant Secretary.

2/ Throughout the proceedings herein, the parties utilized the term HPP to refer to U.S. citizens employed by the AAFES and the term LN to refer to local national employees, or non-U.S. citizens, employed by the AAFES. The parties also utilized the term LN to refer to positions which are administratively designated as local national positions. To further confuse the matter, the record reveals that approximately 25 to 30 percent of the LN positions are held by U.S. citizens. For the purpose of this decision, however, the term HPP refers to AAFES employees who are U.S. citizens and the term LN refers to employees who are non-citizens.

Article XIV, REORGANIZATION AND REDUCTION IN FORCE

Section 2. Notwithstanding the provisions of Article IV, it is agreed that the provisions of AR 60-21/AFR 147-15, on reduction-in-force (RIF) in effect at the time of a reduction-in-force action shall apply. 3/

The USAREUR is a military command under Headquarters, U.S. European Command. As part of its mission, it is responsible for establishing policies and negotiating tariff agreements with trade unions throughout the Federal Republic of Germany covering wages and other conditions of employment for local nationals (German employees). In 1973, representatives of the USAREUR and the Federal Republic of Germany met to discuss RIF procedures involving LN's throughout West Germany. While no written agreement was reached, the representatives arrived at an understanding that, in the event of a RIF, LN's would be given preference over HPP's occupying positions designated, or set aside, for LN's. To implement the understanding reached with the representatives of the Federal Republic of Germany, the USAREUR issued Regulation 690-84 on June 18, 1974. Among other things, the regulation, in Section III, Paragraph 12, provides, in pertinent part: (1) Selection for RIF applies when some but not all LN positions in a competitive area are canceled; (2) incumbents of these positions who are not LN's, including HPP's, will be separated without competitive procedures; and (3) employees in these categories, including HPP's, have no retention credit or displacement rights.

Subsequent to the issuance of Regulation 690-84, there were numerous communications between the AAFES and the USAREUR concerning the implementation of the regulation and its impact on AAFES employees. The AAFES took the position that the implementation of the regulation would violate the retention rights of AAFES HPP employees established under the terms of the negotiated agreement, and that if the AAFES applied the

3/ Prior to June 18, 1974, RIF actions involving unit employees were implemented under Chapter IV, Section I, Paragraphs 4-11, 4-12, 4-13, 4-14, and 4-15 of AR 60-21/AFR 147-15. It was noted that Chapter I, Section IV, Paragraph 1-29 of AR 60-21/AFR 147-15 provides:

" Treaties and overseas command policy. Employees in overseas foreign areas will be subject to the terms and conditions of applicable treaties, agreements, laws, and over sea command policies as well as to this regulation; (see however 5 U.S.C. 8172 and 8173)." (emphasis supplied) regulation to those employees in a RIF situation, it would result in discrimination and deprivation of the rights of HPP employees without proper basis. The USAREUR, on the other hand, took the position that the policy reflected in Regulation 690-84 had been agreed upon and approved by the Department of the Army and the Civil Service Commission, and that it would not impair retention rights of HPP employees in LN positions in RIF situations. The USAREUR also pointed out that to exempt AAFES employees from a RIF policy applicable to all HPP employees in LN positions would be an act of discrimination, and that headquarters would not consider a request to exempt such personnel from the new RIF policy.

In February 1975, the AAFES was required to initiate a RIF action involving positions designated for LN's. Under the provisions of Regulation 690-84, by which the RIF was implemented, certain LN's were retained in preference to HPP's. On April 3, 1975, the AFGE's local president engaged in discussions with representatives of the AAFES concerning the RIF. At that time, the AFGE was formally notified by the AAFES that the latter had conducted the RIF pursuant to Regulation 690-84, that it was required to do so by virtue of a command policy, and that some HPP's would be displaced by LN's. On April 29, 1975, the AFGE wrote to the AAFES and requested that it renegotiate the matter of retention rights of U.S. citizen employees during a RIF. The AFGE objected to the RIF procedure as set forth under Regulation 690-84, contending that the RIF should be conducted pursuant to the provisions set forth in AR 60-21/AFR 147-15. On June 3, 1975, the AAFES responded that the Commander-in-Chief of the USAREUR had determined which personnel should receive preference during the RIF involving the employees of the AAFES, and that there was no latitude for renegotiating retention rights of those U.S. citizens involved in the RIF.

The AFGE asserts that the action of the AAFES in implementing a RIF affecting employees in the bargaining unit utilizing the provisions of Regulation 690-84, rather than the provisions of AR 60-12/AFR 147-15, as incorporated by reference in the parties' negotiated agreement, constituted a unilateral breach of the provisions of the negotiated agreement in violation of Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order. Further, it contends that the actions of the USAREUR in promulgating Regulation 690-84 and ordering the AAFES to utilize the procedures contained therein in implementing a RIF action affecting bargaining unit employees constituted an unwarranted interference with the bargaining relationship between the AFGE and the AAFES in violation of Section 19(a)(1) of the Order.

In essence, the USAREUR and the AAFES take the position that Regulation 690-84 was an overseas command policy which the USAREUR was authorized to issue and with which the AAFES, as a subordinate command, lawfully complied. In this regard, both Respondents assert that such actions constituted neither a breach of the negotiated agreement nor an interference with the bargaining relationship and, thus, were not violative of the Order. The Respondents argue that the provisions of Article XIV, Section 2 of the negotiated agreement were never intended by the parties to exempt the provisions of the agreement from ". . . subsequently published agency policies and regulations required by law or by the regulations of appropriate authorities, . . ." and that for the AAFES to do so would be contrary to law and Section 12(b) of the Order. Further, they argue that, even assuming that the negotiated agreement could be so interpreted and enforced, the agreement incorporates AR 60-21/AFR 147-15 in its entirety, including Chapter I, Section IV, Paragraph 1-29, which provides that employees in overseas foreign areas are covered by ". . . applicable treaties, agreements, laws, and over sea command policies. . . ."

In his Recommended Decision and Order, the Administrative Law Judge, applying the principles enunciated by the Federal Labor Relations Council in Naval Air Rework Facility, Pensacola, Florida, etc., FLRC No. 76A-37 (1976), found that by its conduct herein the USAREUR violated Section 19(a)(6) and (1) of the Order, but that the AAFES, by engaging in the ministerial act of obeying the directives of the USAREUR, did not violate the Order. In reaching this conclusion, the Administrative Law Judge rejected the arguments and contentions of the Respondents, as set forth above. He reasoned that in negotiating and approving the provisions of Article XIV, Section 2 of the negotiated agreement, the parties intended to exempt the RIF provisions of AR 60-21/AFR 147-15 not only from the provisions of Article IV of the agreement, but also from the provisions of Chapter I, Section IV, Paragraph 1-29 of AR 60-21/AFR 147-15.

In their exceptions, both Respondents essentially reiterated their contentions and arguments made to the Administrative Law Judge. The AFGE excepted to the failure of the Administrative Law Judge to find that the action of both the USAREUR and the AAFES, in promulgating and implementing Regulation 690-84, constituted a violation of Public Law 92-12 and, thus, constituted a violation of the Executive Order.

Contrary to the Administrative Law Judge, I find that, under the particular circumstances set forth above, the actions of the USAREUR, in promulgating and requiring the AAFES to implement the provisions of Regulation 690-84, did not violate Section 19(a)(6) and (1) of the Order. Thus, in Article XIV of the negotiated agreement between the AAFES and the AFGE, the parties specifically incorporated by reference the provisions of AR 60-21/AFR 147-15 with respect to RIF matters, which necessarily included Chapter I, Section IV, Paragraph 1-29 of AR 60-21/AFR 147-15. As noted above, Chapter I, Section IV, Paragraph 1-29 of AR 60-21/AFR 147-15 provides, in part, that, "Employees in overseas foreign areas will be subject to the terms and conditions of applicable treaties, agreements, laws and over sea command policies . . ." Under these circumstances, from a reading of AR 60-21/AFR 147-15 in its entirety, I conclude that employees located in overseas foreign areas, such as those involved in the instant case, were subject to overseas command policies of the USAREUR, an overseas command. Consequently, in my opinion, the actions of the USAREUR in issuing an overseas command policy - i.e. - Regulation 690-84 - and requiring the implementation of the provisions thereof by the AAFES in the latter's conducting a RIF action affecting employees exclusively represented by the AFGE, did not result in an improper unilateral modification of the terms and conditions established in the negotiated agreement between the AAFES and the AFGE, as such agreement was made expressly subject to overseas command policies. 4/ Accordingly, I shall order that both complaints herein be dismissed in their entirety.

ORDER

IT IS HEREBY ORDERED that the complaints in Case Nos. 22-6599(CA) and 22-6601(CA) be, and they hereby are, dismissed.

RECOMMENDED DECISION AND ORDER

Statement of the Case

Pursuant to a Notice of Consolidated Hearing on Complaints issued on August 13, 1976 by the Acting Regional Administrator for Labor-Management Services of the U.S. Department of Labor, Philadelphia Region, a hearing was held in these cases 1/ before the undersigned on November 11, 1976 at Munich, Germany.

This proceeding was initiated under Executive Order 11491, as amended (herein called the Order). Individual complaints were filed by American Federation of Government Employees, Local 2348, AFL-CIO (herein called Complainant) on January 8, 1976 against U.S. Army, Europe and Seventh Army (herein called Respondent USAREUR) in Case No. 22-6599(CA), and against Army and Air Force Exchange Service, Europe (herein called Respondent AAFES-Europe) in Case No. 22-6601(CA).

The complaint in 22-6599 alleged a violation by USAREUR of 19(a)(1) and (5) of the Order based on its (a) refusing to accord appropriate recognition to Complainant as the exclusive bargaining representative of U.S. civilian employees of AAFES-Europe, and (b) refusing to permit AAFES-Europe to exempt such employees from a reduction-in-force (RIF) policy outlined in USAREUR regulation 690-84, thus causing the implementation of such policy which denied U.S. citizen employees their rights to RIF procedures applicable to U.S. citizen - all in violation of the negotiated agreement between Complainant and AAFES.

The complaint in 22-6601 alleged a violation by AAFES-Europe of 19(a)(1), (5) and (6) of the Order based on a refusal to bargain with Complainant, as the exclusive bargaining representative of AAFES employees re the retention rights of U.S. citizens during a RIF so as to afford

these employees no less rights for retention than those extended to local nationals. 2/

All parties were represented at the hearing, were afforded full opportunity to be heard, to adduce evidence, and to examine as well as cross-examine witnesses. Thereafter the parties filed briefs which have been duly considered.

Upon the entire record in these cases, from my observation of the witnesses and their demeanor, and from all of the testimony and evidence adduced at the hearing, I make the following findings of fact, conclusions and recommendations:

Findings of Fact

1. Respondent AAFES-Europe, which is part of the Army and Air Force Exchange Service - a nonappropriate fund instrumentality - has its headquarters in Munich, Germany.

2. Respondent AAFES-Europe employs about 200 hourly pay plan (HPP) employees and 300 local national (LN) employees. The HPP employees occupy positions designated as local national (LN) positions. 3/

3. On or about October 27, 1971 Complainant was certified as the collective bargaining representative of AAFES-Europe's regular U.S. citizen civilian employees at Munich, Germany. The represented unit consists of the hourly pay plan employees, and Complainant does not represent the local national, German employees of AAFES-Europe.

4. At all times material herein Complainant and Respondent AAFES-Europe have been and still are parties to a collective bargaining agreement covering the U.S. citizen civilian employees who are employed by said respondent at 2/ On July 30, 1976 the Regional Administrator dismissed the 19(a)(5) allegations in both complaints.

3/ The term "LN" usually refers to local national German employees, or non-U.S. citizens employed by AAFES-Europe. It also refers to positions held by bargaining unit employees which are administratively designated as local national positions. Moreover, some German national citizens also occupy LN positions within AAFES-Europe. Approximately 25-30 percent of the LN positions thereat are held by Americans.

Munich, Germany. 4/ The aforementioned agreement contains, inter alia, the following provisions:

Article IV, AUTHORITY, LEGAL AND REGULATORY APPLICATIONS

"Section 2. In the administration of all matters covered by this agreement, officials and employees are governed by existing or future laws and the regulations of appropriate authorities, including policies set forth in AAFES Personnel Regulations; by published agency policies and regulations in existence at the time the agreement was approved; and by subsequently published agency policies and regulations required by law or by the regulations of appropriate authorities, or authorized by the terms of a controlling agreement at a higher agency level."

Article XIV, REORGANIZATION AND REDUCTION IN FORCE

"Section 2. Notwithstanding the provisions of Article IV, it is agreed that the provisions of AR 60-21/AFR 147-15, on reduction-in-force in effect at the time of a reduction-in-force action shall apply."

5. At all times material herein, and prior to June 18, 1974, the reductions in force (RIFs) involving the unit employees herein were implemented under paragraph 4-11, 4-12, 4-13, 4-14, and 4-15 of AR 60-21/AFR 147-15. These paragraphs deal with the RIF procedures caused by the loss of LN positions occupied by U.S. citizen employees, and provision is made therein for such RIFs to be handled on a competitive basis among the HPP employees who are U.S. citizens. 5/ The latter employees, under the procedures

4/ The applicable contract was effective from its date of approval, March 25, 1974, for a two year period.

5/ The contract between the parties did not spell out a procedure for reductions in force.

established in AR 60-21, competed only among themselves when a reduction in force occurred. 6/

A further provision in AR 60-21/AFR 147-15 refers to employees in overseas areas and states as follows:

"1-29. Treaties and overseas command policy. Employees in overseas foreign areas will be subject to the terms and condition of applicable treaties, agreements, laws, and over sea command policies as well as to this regulation; (see however 5 U.S.C. 8172 and 8173."

6. Respondent USAREUR is a military command under Headquarters, U.S. European Command. It is responsible for negotiating tariff agreements, covering wages and conditions of employment for local nationals (German employees), with the German trade unions throughout the Federal Republic of Germany (FRG), and to establish policy in that regard.

7. On August 23, 1953 a NATO status of Forces agreement was executed which provided in Article IX for local civilian labor requirements. It made no provision for a RIF of either German nationals or U.S. employees. Neither did it require that U.S. citizens be bumped non-competitively by German nationals who occupy a position which is abolished.

8. In order to establish a complete policy in respect to labor relations, representative of USAREUR and FRG met in 1973 to discuss a reduction in force procedure involving local nationals. While no written agreement was reached between them, the representatives arrived at an understanding that German nationals would be given preference over U.S. citizen employees occupying local national positions during a reduction in force.

9. As part of its responsibility as an overseas command, and in implementation of the understanding reached with FRG, the USAREUR issued a revised Regulation 690-84 on June 18, 1974. It contained a separate section entitled Section III - RIF PROCEDURE. Paragraph 12 entitled "Selection for RIF", 6/ The abolition of a position held by a German national did not cause a RIF among the U.S. citizen employed by AAFES-Europe. Germans only bumped Germans in a reduction in force.

provides, inter alia, (a) that selection for RIF applies when some LN positions in a competitive are cancelled; (b) incumbents of positions who belong to certain categories, including that of U.S. employee, will be separated for RIF without competitive procedures; (c) employees in said certain categories, including that of U.S. employee, have no retention credit or displacement rights.

10. A letter 7/ dated May 24, 1974 was written by Colonel Joe D. Pettigrew, OSAF, Deputy Commander, to the Commander in Chief of Respondent USAREUR referring to the proposed new RIF procedures. Pettigrew pointed out that implementation of the RIF policy would violate rights of the HHP employees of AAFES; that the U.S. employees would be deprived of retention rights under AR 60-21/AFR 147-15; that if AAFES applied such policy to those employees, it would result in unreasonable discrimination and the taking of regulatory rights without any proper basis.

11. This letter was replied to on July 15, 1974 by a reply 8/ from representative of the Commander in Chief wherein he stated that the policy had been agreed upon and approved by the DA and the Civil Service Commission; that it would not impair retention rights of LN employees in RIF situations; that to exempt AAFES employees from the RIF policy applicable to all LN employees of the U.S. Forces would be an act of discrimination; and headquarters could not consider a request to exempt EES personnel from the new RIF policy.

12. On August 6, 1974, Arthur J. Gregg, Brigadier General USA, Commander wrote a letter 9/ to Brigadier General Vincent De P Gannon, USAEUR, in which AAFES renewed a request that it be relieved from the provisions of Regulation 690-84 applicable in a reduction in force. General Gregg commented therein that AAFES felt any future RIF would cause it to violate AR 60-21/AFR 147-15.

7/ Respondent USAREUR Exhibit 1, Attachment 2.

8/ Respondent USAREUR Exhibit 1, Attachment 3.

9/ Respondent USAREUR Exhibit 1, Incl. 6.

13. General Gannon replied 10/ to the foregoing letter under date of September 5, 1974 wherein he stated that USAREUR did not believe there was a conflict between the two regulations; that the need to RIF U.S. citizens to place local nationals should be a rare occurrence; that the new policy must be continued since it helped to reduce friction with the German government re the increased use of locally-hired U.S. citizens.

14. In early 1975 Respondent AAFES-Europe undertook a RIF which resulted in reducing both U.S. citizen employees and local nationals. The RIF, which was carried out pursuant to 690-84, enabled certain German nationals to bump American citizen employees. Record testimony reveals, and I find, that under 690-84 German national employees of Respondent AAFES-Europe were given preference over and replaced certain Americans occupying local national (LN) positions. The U.S. citizen employees were thus displaced non-competitively in accordance with said regulations.

15. On April 3, 1975 Chester J. Cole, president of Complainant engaged in discussions with management representatives re the RIF undertaken by AAFES-Europe. At that time the union was formally notified by management that it had initiated the reduction in force pursuant to 690-84; that it was required to do so by virtue of a command policy; and that some U.S. citizen employees would be displaced by local national employees.

16. On April 29, 1975 the Complainant wrote Respondent AAFES-Europe and requested it renegotiate the matter of retention rights of U.S. citizen employees during a reduction in force. The union objected to the RIF procedure as set forth under 690-84, and it contended the reductions in force should be conducted pursuant to the provisions set forth in AR 60-21/AFR 147-15.

17. Under date of June 3, 1975 AAFES-Europe replied in writing to the union's request. It stated that the Commander in Chief of USAREUR determined which personnel should receive preference during a RIF in Germany involving the employees of AAFES-Europe. The reply stated, further, there was no latitude for renegotiating the retention rights of U.S. citizen during a reduction in force.

10/ Respondent USAREUR's exhibit 1, Incl. 7.

18. It is provided under Section 106 of Public Law 92-12, 85 Stat. 348, 355; 5 U.S.C. 7151nt. (September 28, 1971) as follows:

"Unless prohibited by treaty, no person shall be discriminated against by the Department of Defense, or by any officer or employee thereof, in the employment of civilian personnel at the facility or installation operated by the Department of Defense in any foreign country because said person is a citizen of the United States or is a dependent member of the Armed Forces of the United States...."

Conclusions 11/

In respect to Respondent AAFES-Europe, the Complainant contends that the implementation of Regulations 690-84 in 1975 constituted a unilateral change in the collective bargaining agreement - all in violation of said respondent's obligation to bargain under Sections 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order.

In respect to Respondent USAREUR, the Complainant maintains that the issuance by it of such regulation, and causing the unilateral change of the agreement by directing AAFES to follow 690-84, was an unwarranted interference with the bargaining relationship between Complainant and AAFES and violative of Section 19(a)(1).

11/ In its brief respondent USAREUR seeks a dismissal of the complaint on the ground that neither the charge filed on November 14, 1975, nor the complaint filed on January 8, 1976, was timely under 203.2(a)(2) and 203.2(b)(3) of the Rules and Regulations. The motion to dismiss is denied. The Assistant Secretary has held that this procedural deficiency must be raised in a timely manner with the Area Administrator during the investigation of the complaint and prior to issuance of Notice of Hearing. It does not appear that it was so raised herein. See Defense General Supply Center, A/SLMR No. 821; New York Army and Air National Guard, Albany, N.Y., A/SLMR No. 441.

Although the essential facts are not in dispute by the parties, a sharp controversy exists with regard to: (a) the validity of Regulation 690-84 under applicable law; (b) whether said regulation was issued by an "appropriate authority" in accordance with both Section 12(a) of the Order and Article IV, Section 2; of the agreement between the parties; (c) the effect of the terms and provisions of Article XIV of the said contract, as well as Section IV (1-29) of AR 60-12/AFR 147-15, on whether the change in the RIF procedures resulting from Regulation 690-84 constituted a proper and lawful modification of such procedures, (d) whether Respondent USAREUR may properly be charged with a 19(a)(1) violation since it had no bargaining relationship with Complainant.

(a) It is urged herein that 690-84 violates existing law in that it runs counter to Public Law 92-12; 85 Stat. 348, 355. This statute forbids discriminations by the Department of Defense of civilian personnel employed in a foreign country by reason of an individual's status as a citizen of the United States, except as required by treaty. Since the regulation of 1974 explicitly prefers German nationals over U.S. citizen employees, and is allegedly not warranted under the NATO Status of Forces Agreement, it is deemed by Complainant to be unlawful. Further, its implementation by respondents is alleged to be, a fortiori, violative of the Order.

While the regulation may violate the aforesaid statute, I do not consider it my function to pass upon its validity. Administrative agencies do not have jurisdiction to pass upon the constitutionality of congressional enactment. Oestereich v. Selective Service System, et al. 415 U.S., at 368. Moreover, administrative regulations have the force of law and can only be invalidated by a proper court. Paul v. U.S., 371 U.S. 245. The Complainant herein is obliged to challenge the validity of 690-84 at the proper forum - a court of law - rather than seek a determination in that regard during an administrative proceeding. Thus, I render no decision as to whether said regulation violated existing law. Further, I reject Complainant's argument that its implementation constitutes a violation of the Order solely because it is an invalid regulation.

(b) It is argued by Complainant that 690-84 is not, under Section 12(a) of the Order, a regulation of an "appropriate authority" and therefore it could not properly issue as an effective modification of the existing contract between the parties. In support of this argument the union cites Department of Navy, Supervisor of Shipbuilding, Conversion and Repair, Pascagoula, Mississippi, A/SIMR No. 390.

Under Section 12(a) officials and employees, in the administration of contractual terms, are governed by existing or future laws and regulation of appropriate authorities, including policies set forth in the Federal Personnel Manual. The respondent in the Pascagoula case, supra, insisted it was under no obligation to consult with the bargaining agent re the implementation of a higher level instruction. However, the Assistant Secretary held that "appropriate authority" under 12(a) refers to an authority outside the agency rather than a higher echelon within the same agency. Hence respondent in the cited case could not find justification for its unilateral modification of the negotiated agreement based on its implementation of a higher level instruction within the agency. Under this ruling the Respondent AAFES-Europe would find no protection under 12(a) of the Order.

Note, however, is taken of Bureau of Indian Affairs, Indian Affairs Data Center, Albuquerque, New Mexico, A/SIMR No. 341. In that case the parties, in incorporating the language of Section 12(a) of the Order in its contract, specified that in administering contractual matters the employer and union would be governed by existing or future laws, executive orders, and policies set forth in the FPM and regulations of the Department of the Interior, Bureau of Indian Affairs, Indian Affairs Data Center, which maybe applicable. The Bureau of Indian Affairs, with the approval of the Secretary of Interior, announced a policy of extending Indian preference to training and filling vacancies. Notification was sent to the Data Center in Albuquerque, N.M. The Assistant Secretary held there was no obligation by the Data Center to bargain over the policy in view of (a) the language in the negotiated agreement to be bound by future regulation policies of the Department of Interior, Bureau of Indian Affairs, Indian Affairs Data Center, (b) the change in personnel practices was not an act over which the activity had any control.

Unless other considerations prevail, I would conclude that, under the Bureau of Indian Affairs case, supra, the Complainant herein has, in effect, waived the protection afforded by 12(a) of the Order and subjected itself to Regulation 690-84. In the case at bar, the parties agreed under Article IV, Section 2 of their contract to be bound by regulations of appropriate authorities, including policies set forth in AAFES personnel regulations. The record supports the conclusion that, as a command policy applicable to the unit employees herein, Regulation 690-84 was deemed to be an AAFES Personnel Regulation. Accordingly, under Article IV, Section 2 of the contract between Complainant and AAFES-Europe, the union might not ordinarily challenge the implementation of 690-84 since it agreed to be bound by future AAFES regulations.

(c) Complainant, however, adverts to the language in Article XIV of the contract herein which specifically states that, notwithstanding Article IV, the provisions of AR 60-21/AFR 147-15 on reduction in force in effect at the time of a reduction in force action shall apply. The latter regulation sets forth detailed provisions, under 4-12 thru 4-15, which specify the "RIF procedures" to be followed in the event of a reduction in force. Thus it would appear the parties intended that, although subsequent personnel regulations would be binding upon the employees as those of an appropriate authority, they desired the RIF provisions in AR 60-21/AFR 147-15, to apply in the event of a reduction in force. The logical conclusion to be drawn from the language in Article IV is that the specified RIF procedures in the said AR 60-21 were to survive and control when employees became separated from their employment. The effect of Article XIV is to bar a waiver by Complainant of 12(a) and not render 690-84 a regulation by an appropriate authority.

In an attempt to negate this conclusion, Respondent AAFES-Europe lays stress on Section 1-29 of AR 60-21/AFR 147-15 which bespeaks of employees in oversea foreign area. This section declares that such employees will be subject to the "terms and conditions of applicable treaties, agreements, laws and oversea command policies as well as to this regulation". It is argued by this respondent that USAREUR is an oversea command and that the retention rights provision and RIF procedures of regulation 690-84 were a policy of said command. Hence, it is urged that, pursuant to Section 1-29 of AR 60-21, the policy which favored German nationals over U.S. citizen employees in a reduction in force - as expressed in Regulation 690-84 is controlling herein.

The aforesaid argument is predicated on the premise that all future command policies will displace or supersede the provisions of AR 60-21 with respect to oversea employees. I do not, however, construe the language in 1-29 thereof as having that effect. The said regulation, AR 60-21/AFR 147-15, contains certain numerous provisions dealing with employment as well as programs for employees. While the parties may have desired to declare that such provisions would yield to subsequent policies, I agree with Complainant that an exception was carved out in respect to a reduction in force. Where such an event occurs, the parties apparently preferred to utilize the specific procedures spelled out in AR 60-21, and I do not conclude that any exception was made in respect to oversea employees. The language contained in 1-29 does not, in my opinion, constitute a limitation upon the procedures to be followed in a reduction in force as spelled out in AR 60-21 and agreed to in Article XIV of the contract.

In the case at bar Respondent AAFES-Europe was bound, under its agreement with Complainant, to observe the RIF procedures spelled out in AR 60-21/175-15. Under these circumstances this respondent was not at liberty to ignore their procedures absent a bilateral modification of the agreement. The implementation of 690-84 without meeting and conferring with Complainant was therefore a unilateral modification of the 1974 agreement herein in respect to the RIF procedures. Contrary to the recognized provisions in force and effect, it preferred to German nationals over American citizens during a separation from employment. Such a unilateral modification, which I have concluded draws no support from either the contract or AR 60-21/175-15, is violative of the Order.

The factual situation herein is similar to that which prevailed in Colorado Air National Guard, et. al, A/SLMR No. 758. The negotiated agreement therein provided that in conducting a RIF the procedures would be "in accordance with DMA Reg. 2-3 pending revision. A supplemental agreement will be negotiated." No revision of that regulation was made nor did the parties execute a supplemental agreement. A RIF was conducted by the activity which, instead of following DMA Reg. 2-3 re reduction in force adhered to the procedures set forth in National Guard Bureau's Technical Personnel Pamphlet 910 (TFF-910). ^{12/} This conduct by the activity was held to be a unilateral change in the terms of the agreement and a breach of an obligation to negotiate - all in violation of 19(a)(1) and (6). See also Small Business Administration, Richmond, Virginia, District Office, ^{12/} The National Guard Bureau was not deemed an appropriate authority under 12(a) of the Order since it was not an authority outside the agency.

A/SLMR No. 674. Moreover, unless AAFES-Europe is exculpated from responsibility for its actions by virtue of its merely following directions without choice, as hereinafter discussed, the unilateral change would be a violation of 19(a)(6) and (1) of the Order.

(d) A serious issue is presented as to the responsibility of Respondent USAREUR for the unilateral modification by AAFES-Europe at the direction of USAREUR of the reduction in force procedures. Further, in view of the fact that the implementation of 690-84 was at the direction and command of USAREUR, a corollary issue is posed as to whether Respondent AAFES-Europe may be found to have violated the Order.

Prior hereto the Assistant Secretary has determined that conduct by an activity resulting, through the direction of the agency, in a unilateral modification of terms and conditions of employment warranted finding that the activity violated 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order whereas the agency was in violation of only 19(a)(1) thereof. This was based on the premise that the agency had no collective bargaining relationship with the union. See Naval Air Rework Facility et. al, A/SLMR No. 608 and cases cited above. Upon appeal of the Naval Air Rework case, supra, the Federal Labor Relations Council ^{13/} enunciated its views with respect to a distinction between alleged 19(a)(1) and (6) violations when conduct is attributed to agency management at a higher level within the agency than the level of exclusive recognition. The Council concluded that when acts and conduct constitute a refusal to bargain as required by the Order, such acts may properly be found violative of 19(a)(6) regardless of the organizational level of the member of agency management who committed the violative conduct. Recognizing that the obligation, under Section 11(a), to meet and confer is applicable only where there is a bargaining relationship. The Council declared this does not mean that certain acts and conduct of a higher level may not be a predicate for finding 19(a)(6) when such conduct violates that Section. Thus, where agency management initiates unlawful conduct - as in directing the activity in Naval Air Rework, supra, to terminate differential pay to employees awarded by as arbitrator - the obligation to negotiate is breached by the acts and conduct of agency management and may properly provide a basis for a 19(a)(6) violation.

^{13/} FLRC No. 76A-37, May 4, 1977.

Applying the holding and rationale as expressed by the Council in FLRC No. 76A-37, I am constrained to find that the acts and conduct of USAREUR in directing and requiring the implementation of 690-84 by AAFES-Europe violated Section 19(a)(6) and (1) of the Order. 14/ This respondent initiated the unlawful conduct and was directly responsible for the disregard and modification of the RIF procedures set forth in AR 60-21/175-15. The granting of preference to local nationals over U.S. citizen employees during the 1975 RIF resulted directly from USAREUR's command. Although the latter had no bargaining relationship with Complainant this factor does not militate against a finding of an unfair labor practice involving a unilateral change in the terms and conditions of employment. Determinative herein is the language of the Council in the Naval Air Rework case as follows:

"Where he (Assistant Secretary) finds that an act or conduct constitutes an unfair labor practice and that the individuals who committed the act use agency management, there is no basis in the order to draw artificial distinctions between organizational levels of such agency management so as to relieve them of the responsibility for their acts which would otherwise be violative of the Order."

Accordingly, and in conformance with the rationale expressed by the Council in the cited case, I conclude the obligation to negotiate herein was breached by reason of USAREUR's unlawful conduct.

14/ While I am aware that no allegation of 19(a)(6) was made against Respondent USAREUR, the Council has concluded that acts of agency management at a higher level of an agency's organization may provide the basis for finding a violation of any part of Section 19(a). Moreover, no 19(a)(6) allegation was present in the Complaint in Naval Air Rework, supra, but the Council nevertheless found the agency to have violated this section of the Order. To this extent the Council has obliterated any distinction between the levels where, at least, the activity was charged with a 19(a)(6) violation. Further, although the Department of Defense is, in truth, the agency, I find the status of the USAREUR command equitable therewith and part of agency management.

In respect to the responsibility of an activity which has complied with directions from agency management, the Council in Naval Air Rework, supra, concluded that a violation would not lie against such activity solely on the basis of its ministerial actions in implementing such directions. The apparent theory behind such conclusion is that where the activity has no choice but to follow directives from agency management at a higher level, the "agency management" at a lower organizational level where the recognition unit exists should not be penalized for compliance therewith. In the cited case the Council found no violation by the facility (activity) in terminating the differential pay of employees at the instance of the Navy Department.

Upon review of the facts herein, I am persuaded that, based upon the Council's decision in the Naval Air Rework case, Respondent AAFES-Europe should not be found to have violated 19(a)(6) or (1) of the Order. The record establishes that this respondent protested in a series of letters to USAREUR that the implementation of Regulation 690-84 was discriminatory against U.S. citizen employees and in contravention of the RIF procedures agreed upon and set forth in AR 60-21/147-15. It requested that this activity, to which Regulation 690-24 applied specifically, be excepted from its provisions re RIF that conflicted with the established procedures. However, USAREUR replied that it disagreed with AAFES-Europe's determinations, and did not, in any event, anticipate many U.S. citizen employees being displaced by local nationals. The command refused to exempt the activity herein from the application of 690-84, and directed the implementation of the changed RIF procedures. Thus, Respondent AAFES-Europe had no choice in the matter. In implementing the new regulation and preferring local national employees over U.S. citizen employees, it was, in my opinion, engaged in a ministerial act no less than that pursued by the activity in Naval Air Rework, supra. Accordingly, I conclude that Respondent AAFES-Europe has not, under the recent decision of the Council in the cited case, violated Sections 19(a)(6) and (1) of the Order.

Remedy

A further issue is presented as to the proper remedy herein. Any order providing for reinstatement of U.S. citizen employees to positions held by them prior to the RIF, as well as an award of back pay lost, is opposed by respondents. In support of such opposition it is contended that the Council has held in Department of the Interior, Bureau of Reclamation, Yuma Projects Office Arizona, FLRC No. 74A-52, such relief is prohibited under Section 19 (d) of the Order. The cited case involved a unilateral change of competitive procedures governing a reduction in force. It was held by the Council that since there was a RIF appeals procedure, the employees affected by the reduction in force could properly raise the issue of whether it was carried out in compliance with CSC regulations. Moreover, this was the exclusive procedure to raise that issue and the appropriate remedies including restoration of employees to previous positions with back pay. Respondent AAFES-Europe maintains that AR 60-21/AFR 147-15 contains an appeals procedure which therefore, under 19(d), requires a denial of such remedies to any affected American employees herein.

An examination of said regulation, which sets forth the RIF procedures, convinces me that no such appeals procedure exists as is envisaged by 19(d). While it is true that 60-21 provides for a right of appeal in 3-35, this refers to appeals after a determination of a grievance by a hearing examiner. Under 3-39 of the regulation, which specifies matters that are not grievable, the issues raised in this proceeding are not subject to the grievance procedure. Rather are they, as stated in 3-29(20), matters that may be submitted to the Commander of AAFES in a request for review under 3-28 of the regulation.

The request for review procedure under 60-21/AFR 147-15 is not, in my opinion, an established appeals procedure which conforms with CSC regulations. No provision is made for any hearing or appellate consideration except by the same individual, i.e. the Commander, who was responsible for the implementation of the newly adopted RIF procedures under 690-84. I do not view such review, under 3-38 of 60-21/AFR 147-15, to be an appeal procedure which would render 19(d) operative and thus bar relief for U.S. employees who were affected by the reduction in force.

Moreover, the Assistant Secretary has, in respect to 19(d), drawn a distinction between an issue involving whether a regulation was properly applied and one concerned as to which regulation governed a reduction in force. He concluded that if the issue before him dealt with which regulation should be applicable in a RIF, the Yuma case strictures were not binding. Thus, assuming arguendo, these were a proper appeals procedure herein, since the remedial order was limited to directing that the appropriate regulation be followed in a RIF, Section 19(d) would not act as a bar thereto.

Accordingly, I shall recommend a remedy consistent with the scope of violations found to have occurred. In addition to requiring corrective action re the directive that 690-84 be implemented without being mutually agreed to by the parties, I shall recommend that U.S. citizen employees adversely affected by the improper application of such regulations be reinstated and made whole for any less of monies occasioned thereby. See Colorado Air National Guard, et. al, supra.

RECOMMENDATION

Having found that Respondent AAFES-Europe was engaged in a ministerial act, and followed the directive issued by Respondent USAREUR, in implementing the RIF provisions of Regulation 690-84 unilaterally during the term of the agreement between the parties, I shall recommend to the Assistant Secretary that the complaint in Case No. 22-6601 be dismissed in its entirety.

Having found that Respondent USAREUR, in directing and ordering the implementation by AAFES-Europe, of the RIF provisions of 690-84 unilaterally during the term of the agreement between the parties, which granted preference to U.S. citizen employees over local national employees in a reduction in force, I shall recommend to the Assistant Secretary that he adopt the following order designed to effectuate the policies of the Order.

RECOMMENDED ORDER

Pursuant to Section 6(b) of Executive Order 11491, as amended, and Section 203.25(b) of the Regulations, the Assistant Secretary of Labor for Labor Management Relations hereby orders that the United States Army Europe and Seventh Army shall:

1. Cease and desist from:

- (a) Ordering or directing that the Army and Air Force Exchange Service Europe unilaterally implement the RIF provisions of Regulation 690-84 which grant preference to local national employees over U.S. citizen employees in any reduction in force at the headquarters, McGraw Kaserne, Munich, Germany during the term of the negotiated agreement between the Army and Air Force Exchange Service, Europe and American Federation of Government Employees, Local 2348, AFL-CIO unless such implementation is mutually agreed to by the said parties in a supplemental agreement to the negotiated agreement.

(b) In any like or related manner interfering with, restraining, or coercing its employees in the exercise of rights assured by Executive Order 11491, as amended.

2. Take the following affirmative actions in order to effectuate the purposes and policies of the Order:

(a) Rescind in writing its order and directive to the Army and Air Force Exchange Service, Europe that it unilaterally implement the RIF provisions of Regulation 690-84 which grant preference to local national over U.S. citizen employees in any reduction in force at the headquarters, McGraw Kaserne, Munich, Germany, during the term of the negotiated agreement between the Army and Air Force Exchange Service, Europe and American Federation of Government Employees, Local 2348, AFL-CIO unless such implementation is mutually agreed to by the parties in a supplemental agreement to the negotiated agreement.

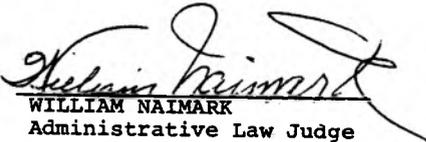

(b) Order and direct the Army and Air Force Exchange Service, Europe to abide by the RIF provisions contained in AR 60-21/AFR 147-15 in any reduction in force, and reconsider in accordance with such regulation all reduction in force actions taken since July 18, 1974 at headquarters, McGraw Kaserne, Munich, Germany during the term of the agreement between the Army and Air Force Exchange Service, Europe and American Federation of Government Employees, Local 2348, AFL-CIO.

(c) Order and direct that Army and Air Force Exchange Service, Europe to reinstate any U.S. citizen employees who was adversely affected by the improper application of Regulation 690-84 in any reduction in force since July 18, 1974 at headquarters, McGraw Kaserne, Munich, Germany, and make him whole for any loss of monies occasioned by such improper reduction in force consistent with the RIF provisions and procedures set forth in AR 60-21/AFR 147-15.

(d) Post at the headquarters of Army and Air Force Exchange Service, Europe, McGraw Kaserne, Munich, Germany, copies of the attached notice marked "Appendix" on form to be furnished by the Assistant Secretary of Labor for Labor-Management Relations. Upon receipt of such forms, they shall be signed by the Commander in chief, or his representative, and they shall be posted and maintained by him for 60 consecutive days thereafter, in conspicuous places, including all bulletin boards and other places where notices to employees are customarily posted. The Commander in chief, or his representative, shall take reasonable steps to insure that such notices are not altered, defaced or covered by any other material.

(e) Pursuant to Section 203.27 of the Regulations, notify the Assistant Secretary, in writing, within 30 days from the date of this order as to what steps have been taken to comply therewith.

Case No. 40-7829(CA)

NATIONAL TREASURY EMPLOYEES UNION AND NATIONAL TREASURY EMPLOYEES UNION, CHAPTER 50

Complainant

DECISION AND ORDER

This case involved an unfair labor practice complaint filed by the National Treasury Employees Union and National Treasury Employees Union, Chapter 50 (Complainant) alleging that the Respondent violated Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order by failing to bargain over the procedures used to cure a staffing imbalance, which involved the transfer of unit employees, and on the impact and implementation of this decision on adversely affected employees. The Complainant alleged an additional violation of Section 19(a)(1) and (6) based upon the Respondent's refusal to furnish it with information concerning the staffing imbalance. The Respondent contended that it was under no obligation to bargain inasmuch as the transfers were voluntary and there was no resulting adverse impact; that the parties' negotiated agreement provided procedures for solving staffing imbalances; and that it had no obligation to furnish the requested information.

On December 6, 1977, Administrative Law Judge William Naimark issued his Recommended Decision and Order in the above-entitled proceeding, finding that the Respondent had engaged in certain unfair labor practices and recommending that it cease and desist therefrom and take certain affirmative actions as set forth in the attached Administrative Law Judge's Recommended Decision and Order. Thereafter, the Respondent filed exceptions with respect to the Administrative Law Judge's Recommended Decision and Order.

The Administrative Law Judge found that the Respondent was obligated to bargain on the procedures used and the impact of the transfer on adversely affected employees and that its failure to do so constituted a violation of Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order. Similarly, the Administrative Law Judge found that there existed an obligation to furnish the information requested and that, while this information was, for the most part, supplied, it was not given to the Complainant until after the transfers had occurred. Finally, the Administrative Law Judge determined that the parties' negotiated agreement did not constitute a waiver of any bargaining obligation involved herein.

The Assistant Secretary has reviewed the rulings of the Administrative Law Judge made at the hearing and finds that no prejudicial error was committed. The rulings are hereby affirmed. Upon consideration of the Administrative Law Judge's Recommended Decision and Order and the entire record in the subject case, including the exceptions filed by the Respondent, I hereby adopt the Administrative Law Judge's findings, conclusions and recommendations.

The Assistant Secretary adopted the findings, conclusions and recommendations of the Administrative Law Judge and ordered that the Respondent cease and desist from the conduct found violative of the Order and that it take certain affirmative actions.

ORDER

Pursuant to Section 6(b) of Executive Order 11491, as amended, and Section 203.26(b) of the Regulations, the Assistant Secretary of Labor for Labor-Management Relations hereby orders that the Department of the Treasury, Internal Revenue Service, Greensboro District Office, shall:

1. Cease and desist from:

(a) Instituting a reassignment or transfer of employees represented exclusively by the National Treasury Employees Union, Chapter 50, or any other exclusive representative of its employees, without affording such representative the opportunity to meet and confer, to the extent consonant with law and regulations, on the procedures which management will observe in implementing such reassignment or transfer, and on the impact the reassignment or transfer will have on adversely affected employees in the exclusively recognized unit.

(b) Refusing or failing to furnish, upon request by the National Treasury Employees Union, Chapter 50, or any other exclusive representative of its employees, any information bearing upon reassignment, transfer or any other condition of employment which is relevant and necessary to enable the National Treasury Employees Union, Chapter 50, or any other exclusive representative, to discharge its obligation as the exclusive representative to represent effectively all employees in the exclusively recognized unit.

(c) In any like or related manner interfering with, restraining, or coercing its employees in the exercise of their rights assured by Executive Order 11491, as amended.

2. Take the following affirmative actions in order to effectuate the purposes and policies of Executive Order 11491, as amended:

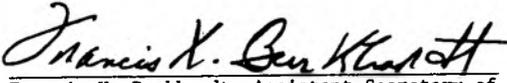

(a) Upon request by the National Treasury Employees Union, Chapter 50, or any other exclusive representative of its employees, meet and confer, to the extent consonant with law and regulations, on the procedures which management will observe in implementing a reassignment or transfer, and on the impact such reassignment or transfer will have on adversely affected employees in the exclusively recognized unit.

(b) Upon request, make available to the National Treasury Employees Union, Chapter 50, or any other exclusive representative of its employees, any information bearing upon reassignment, transfer or any other condition of employment which is relevant and necessary to enable the National Treasury Employees Union, Chapter 50, or any other exclusive representative, to discharge its obligation as the exclusive representative to represent effectively all employees in the exclusively recognized unit.

(c) Post at its facility at the Internal Revenue Service, Greensboro District Office, copies of the attached notice marked "Appendix" on forms to be furnished by the Assistant Secretary of Labor for Labor-Management Relations. Upon receipt of such forms, they shall be signed by the District Director and shall be posted and maintained by him for 60 consecutive days thereafter, in conspicuous places, including all bulletin boards and other places where notices to employees are customarily posted. The District Director shall take reasonable steps to insure that such notices are not altered, defaced, or covered by any other material.

(d) Pursuant to Section 203.27 of the Regulations, notify the Assistant Secretary, in writing, within 30 days from the date of this order as to what steps have been taken to comply herewith.

RECOMMENDED DECISION AND ORDER

Statement of the Case

Pursuant to a Notice of Hearing on complaint issued on April 13, 1977 by the Regional Administrator for Labor-Management Service Administration, U.S. Department of Labor, Atlanta Region, a hearing was held before the undersigned on May 26, 1977 at Greensboro, North Carolina.

The proceeding was initiated under Executive Order 11491, as amended (herein called the Order). It was based on a complaint filed on January 21, 1977 by National Treasury Employees Union and National Treasury Employees Union Chapter 50 (herein called Complainants) against Department of the Treasury, Internal Revenue Service, Greensboro Area Office (herein called Respondent). It was alleged in said complaint that Respondent violated Sections 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order by (a) refusing to negotiate, on or about September 8, 1976, with Complainant NTEU Chapter 50 over the impact and implementation of a procedure in curing the imbalance of Revenue officers' staffing throughout the North Carolina District; (b) refusing to furnish information as requested by said Complainant on August 9, 1976 regarding the staffing imbalance of Revenue officers throughout the North Carolina District.

Respondent filed a response to the Complaint herein on February 16, 1977. It denied the commission of any unfair labor practice and contended therein that (a) no obligation to bargain over the impact existed since the parties had agreed upon the procedures which were embodied in their negotiated agreement, (b) since no duty to bargain existed, there was no concomitant obligation to furnish the information requested. In respect to the request for information by Complainant, it was also contended that the latter had made no effort to obtain such data on its own behalf, and that the union had an effective means of communicating with employees to secure at least part of such information sought from Respondent.

Both parties were represented at the hearing, were afforded full opportunity to be heard, to adduce evidence and to examine as well as cross-examine witnesses. Thereafter, briefs were filed which have been duly considered. 1/

Upon the entire record in this case, from my observation of the witnesses and their demeanor, and from all of the testimony and evidence adduced at the hearing, I make the following findings, conclusions and recommendations:

1/ In its brief Complainant moved to correct the transcript as follows: Joint Exhibit No. 1 should be recorded as August 4, 1976 rather than August 20, 1976; on page 33, line 22, strike the word "beginning" and insert the word "treating". The motion is granted to the extent requested.

Findings of Fact

1. At all times material herein National Treasury Employees Union (NTEU), Chapter 50, has been, and still is, the exclusive bargaining representative of Respondent's professional and non-professional employees.

2. At all times since May 3, 1974 the Complainants herein and Respondent have been parties to a collective bargaining agreement covering the aforesaid unit of employees. The said agreement, which is multi-district by its terms, applies to all such unit employees who are employed at different Districts throughout the United States. Respondent's District Office at Greensboro includes offices located at various cities in North Carolina. About 125-135 Revenue officers are attached to the Greensboro District office.

3. The collective bargaining agreement contains several provisions concerning reassignments or transfers.

(a) In Article 7 thereof, entitled "Promotions/ other Competitive Actions", a procedure is established for the filling of vacant positions by promotion, reassignment or transfer to ensure that placement are done on an equitable and fair basis. This article sets forth details re publishing vacancy announcements, submission of applications therefor by employees, and the manner in which best qualified candidates shall be submitted. However, by its terms - Section 2B(7) - said Article 7 excepts from its coverage the filling of a position by lateral reassignment prior to a determination that the vacancy will be filled by competitive action.

(b) Under Article 14 of the agreement the Respondent agreed to provide certain facilities and services to the union. Pursuant thereto Respondent provided the union bargaining agent with a meeting place, made available 1/3 of each bulletin board at the various posts of duty for the use of the union, allowed the distribution of union literature on the premises at specified times, and furnished the union a list of employees semi-annually with monthly revisions of new and separated employees.

(c) The agreement also contains a provision regarding transfers. Under Article 28, entitled "TRANSFERS and ASSIGNMENTS" it is provided as follows:

"Section 1.

Transfer and reassignments will not be used in lieu of discipline. When an involuntary transfer or reassignment is necessary due to a staffing imbalance, the employee at the affected post of duty with the least IRS length of service who meets the position requirements will be transferred.

Section 2.

A. The Employer agrees that where an employee has been transferred due to abolition of his position, he will be given preference, if that position is reestablished within one year and he applies for the position within fifteen (15) days after written notification to him of its reestablishment.

B. It is in the interest of the Government to return an employee who applies to his former position at Government expense whenever possible.

C. If there are two or more applicants for the reestablished position, the applicant with the greater IRS length of service who meets the job requirements will have preference.

Section 3.

The employer agrees to give affected employees fifteen (15) days and when possible thirty (30) days written notification of reassignments to a different post of duty."

4. On August 3, 1976 ^{2/} Edward Phelps, Chief of Respondent's Collection Division, called Rachel Allred, President of NTEU Chapter 50, to attend a meeting on that date. The meeting was attended by both of those individuals as well as by Jerry Keith, Chief of Personnel and David Cohen, union steward.

^{2/} Unless otherwise specified, all dates hereinafter mentioned are in 1976.

At said meeting the union officials were told by management that the Collection Division in North Carolina had an imbalance of Revenue officers which Respondent was taking steps to cure; that there were 16 extra Revenue officers in North Carolina; and that management intended to visit the various posts of duty to encourage officers to voluntarily transfer to the Jacksonville, Florida District. The union president asked if employees could go elsewhere than Florida, but the employer informed her there was no other choice. Moreover, management stated that a letter would go out the next day to employees re this matter. No discussion ensued regarding a retention register or other procedures, but Allred did remark that employees should be allowed to transfer to a location other than Florida.

5. A memo dated August 4 was distributed by Respondent to all Revenue officers of the Greensboro District informing them of the fact that a staffing imbalance existed. A copy was also furnished the union representative. The memo recited the fact that there were 16 extra Revenue officers in the Greensboro District, and that officers would be reassigned from the Greensboro and Nashville, Tennessee Districts to the Florida District; that reassignment would be effected on a voluntary basis, but if an insufficient number of transfers resulted therefrom, the reassignments would be involuntarily made. The memo contained four questions and guideline answers which were furnished for the the employees' information. They were as follows: 3/

Q. How will individuals to be involuntarily transferred be identified?

A. The employee at the affected Post of Duty with the least Internal Revenue Service length of service who meets the position requirements will be transferred.

Q. Will the Service pay relocation expenses?

A. The Service will pay relocation expenses in this instance whether the transfer is voluntary or involuntary.

3/ These question and answers constitute, in effect, a recitation of Article 28 (Sections 1 and 2) of the collective bargaining agreement between the parties.

Q. If involuntary transfer, what are the possibilities of returning to my former Post of Duty?

A. An employee transferred due to abolition of his position will be given preference if that position is reestablished within one year and he/she applies for the position within 15 days after written notification is received by him/her of its reestablishment. It is in the interest of the Government to return an employee who applies to his/her former position at Government expense whenever possible.

The memo also provided a questionnaire for the employee to indicate whether or not he/she wished to voluntarily relocate in the Florida District. The employee was directed to submit the completed questionnaire to the Group manager by August 20.

6. By letter dated August 9, NTEU Chapter 50 advised Respondent that it desired to negotiate over the impact and implementation of procedures to be followed in curing the imbalance of Revenue officers, and that it would submit its proposals shortly. The union also requested management to "furnish all official information concerning this problem" to the NTEU representative.

7. On August 10 both Phelps and Keith advised union official Allred that, in respect to her letter of August 9, the matter of curing the Revenue officer imbalance - as to either the decision itself or the impact and procedures - was not negotiable.

8. By letter dated August 20, District Director Robert A. LeBaube advised Allred that the subject matter of staffing imbalance was covered by the multi-district agreement, and that he saw no need to negotiate concerning same.

9. On August 23 Allred replied to LeBaube's letter and reiterated its opinion that the matter was negotiable. Moreover, she stated that the union would submit its proposals shortly. Further, Allred renewed a request for information re the problems and facts relied upon by management in its decision. Specifically, the union asked for data as to the competitive levels affected, location and number of employees involved, the proposed effective date, and the underlying reasons for the actions.

10. On August 24, the union submitted its written proposals pertaining to the Revenue officer staffing imbalance. These were twofold: (a) the employer identify all vacant positions in the Greensboro District and fill them pursuant to Article 7 of the multi-district contract prior to making a determination to reassign employees to the Florida District as per Article 28, Section 1 of the contract, (b) no employee with a compelling reason for not inter-district transferring will be transferred. He/she will be assigned in this district with his/her consent to a position for which he/she is qualified which will last three months.

11. LeBaube replied to the aforesaid union letters on September 8. He restated that the multi-district agreement sets forth procedures for transfers and assignments due to staffing imbalance; that it allows the transfer of employees between posts of duty to resolve the imbalance; and that Respondent is in the process of filling all vacant positions in the Revenue officer category pursuant to Article 7 of the agreement. The letter further recited the fact that no action had been initiated re involuntary transfers. Moreover, LeBaube repeated management's refusal to negotiate the matter as requested by the union, but stated it would discuss any unresolved concerns of the union.

12. By letter dated October 5 addressed to Respondent, NTEU Chapter 50 repeated its request that management furnish it with the Revenue officers to be transferred to the Jacksonville, Florida District.

13. On November 19, Respondent furnished the union herein with a list 4/ of the Revenue officers, together with their posts of duty, who had expressed an interest in transferring to the Florida District.

14. As a result of voluntary transfers to the Jacksonville, Florida District no involuntary transfers were made to that office from Greensboro. Further, in order to fill the vacant positions at Florida, promotions were made and vacancies filled in accordance with Article 7 of the agreement. As a result thereof, no inter-district transfers were made and none was contemplated.

4/ Joint Exhibit 10. This Exhibit is not a legible copy of the names and addresses of such Revenue officers. Accordingly, I make no finding as to the exact number of such employees who expressed a desire to make the transfer.

15. Respondent indicated in a letter to the union, dated November 23, that involuntary transfers or reassignments on an intra-district basis, by virtue of a staffing imbalance, at various posts of duty will be made in accordance with Article 28 of the negotiated agreement. Since Respondent concluded that the procedures are specified in said Article 28, it informed the bargaining agent that it would not negotiate such transfers or reassignments.

Conclusions

Both parties agree that, in respect to the decision by Respondent to transfer Revenue officers from the Greensboro District to the Jacksonville, Florida District, no obligation exists under Sections 11(b) and 12 (b) of the Order to bargain with Complainant. However, contrary to Respondent, it is asserted by Complainant that an obligation existed to meet and confer as to the procedures to be followed, as well as the impact of the reassignment on those employees adversely affected. Further, Respondent contends it was under no obligation to furnish information requested by the union representative since (a) it had no obligation to bargain or negotiate at all; (b) Complainant had access to, and other means of obtaining, such information.

(1) It is urged by Respondent that since the transfer from the Greensboro District of Revenue officers were voluntary, no impact or implementation existed over which it was required to bargain. I do not agree. The obligation to negotiate concerning the effects of its actions does not, in my opinion, turn on whether the reassignments to Florida were compulsory or at the behest of the employees. In either instance the transfer could result in problems attendant upon a relocation, i.e., the expenses involved or resettlement difficulties - all of which affected the particular officers who transferred away from the Greensboro area. The fact that such employees voluntarily chose to relocate does not obliterate an impact upon them. The entire plan to reassign officers was initiated by Respondent and involved factors which clearly affected conditions of employment. In such a posture, Respondent was obliged to meet and confer with Complainant over the procedures and impact of the proposed reassignment. See Federal Railroad Administration, A/SLMR No. 418.

Moreover, the voluntary transfer of the employees herein has an impact upon those remaining in the Greensboro District. The competitive status of those who continued at that district, as well as their condition of employment in light of the reduced unit, are legitimate concerns of the bargaining agent. Accordingly, Respondent is obliged to meet and confer with the union herein as to the impact of its decision upon the officers who remained and did not transfer to the Florida District. See Department of the Army, U.S. Electronics Command, Fort Monmouth, New Jersey, FLRC No. 76A-101.

Respondent argues further that under Article 28 of the negotiated agreement the parties have agreed to the procedures to be invoked in the event reassignments are made. Thus, it insists that, under applicable law, there is no obligation to negotiate concerning matters, i.e., procedures, which have been embodied in the contractual arrangement. While an employer may be relieved from a duty to bargain in such circumstances, I do not agree that this principle of law applies in the instant case. Article 28 provides for transferring employees with the least tenure in the event of an involuntary transfer due to a staffing imbalance. No reference is made to voluntary transfers, nor are procedures delineated with respect thereto. Moreover, I do not read that provision as foreclosing any discussion concerning the subject of reassigning employees, but merely reciting which employees would be selected first in the event of an involuntary transfer. It was neither comprehensive as to the procedures to be followed, nor did it constitute a waiver by the union to compel bargaining, to the extent consonant with the law and regulations, as to the impact of its decision upon employees adversely affected. Cf. NASA Space Center, Kennedy Space Center, A/SLMR No. 223.

In the case at bar the Complainant has repeatedly requested that Respondent meet and confer as to the procedures to be followed in the reassignment of Revenue officers as well as the impact and implementation of the decision itself. 5/ Management continual refusal is, in light of the foregoing, a violation of its duty to bargain and violative of Sections 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order. See Department of the Navy, Naval Plant Representative Office, Baltimore, Maryland, A/SLMR No. 486; Federal Aviation Administration, National Aviation Facilities Experimental Center, Atlantic, New Jersey, A/SLMR No. 329.

5/. Respondent's argument that the union was, in reality, seeking to negotiate over the decision to reassign employees is rejected. Record facts reveal that Complainant recognized the right of management to reassign Revenue officers and was concerned about the procedures to be followed and the impact of the reassignment upon employees adversely affected.

(2) In conjunction with its request that the employer bargain re the impact and implementation of its decision to cure the imbalance of Revenue officers at Greensboro, Complainant sought information from Respondent on several occasions. On August 23, in particular, it requested data as to the competitive levels affected, the location and number of employees involved, the proposed effective date, and the reason for the actions. This information was, for the most part, furnished in November after the charge was filed against Respondent on September 23, and following a demand pursuant to the Freedom of Information Act.

It has been held by the Assistant Secretary, in conformance with the decisional law in the private sector, that a union is entitled to relevant information necessary for it to pursue its duties as the bargaining representative. Where the data is required to afford the representative an opportunity to make intelligent decisions in order to bargain with management, a refusal to supply it will be violative of 19(a)(6). Department of the Navy, Dallas Naval Air Station, Dallas, Texas, A/SLMR No. 510. Respondent takes the position that the information desired by Complainant was not necessary to enable the union to carry out its representational functions; that the procedures were spelled out in the agreement, and no negotiations were required under the circumstances.

In view of the fact that Respondent was, in my opinion, required to meet and confer with Complainant re the impact and implementation of its decision to cure the staffing imbalance, I am constrained to conclude a concomitant obligation existed to furnish the data sought by the union herein. Details concerning the competitive levels, the location and number of employees involved, and the date contemplated for the reassignment were all relevant to an intelligent discussion of the reassignment and its effect upon employees. Any proposals made by Complainant would necessarily be made in light of the information requested by it. While the data was furnished to Complainant ultimately, it was not submitted until after the reassignments were made and the charge filed. It was only supplied pursuant to a request under the Freedom of Information Act. Accordingly, I do not view such submission by Respondent as indicative of a good faith effort to comply with its obligation under the Order. 6/ Cf. U.S. Department of Justice, Immigration and 6/ Respondent also maintains that Complainant had access to the information from other sources. Apart from the fact that I am not convinced the union could have obtained the data on its own, I do not believe that access thereto elsewhere relieves an employer from its obligation to furnish same to the bargaining agent.

Naturalization Service, A/SLMR No. 682. The refusal by Respondent to furnish the information sought by Complainant, prior to the reassignments and the filing of the charge herein, was violative of 19(a)(6) of the Order.

Further, the failure of Respondent to meet and confer with Complainant re the procedures and impact of the reassignments, as heretofore discussed, as well as the refusal to furnish the information requested, had a restraining influence upon the unit employees and a coercive effect upon their rights assured by the Order - all in violation of Section 19(a)(1) of the Order. Department of the Navy, Dallas Naval Air Station, Dallas, Texas, supra; Federal Railroad Administration, supra.

Recommendation

Having found that Respondent has engaged in certain conduct which is violative of Sections 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order, I recommend that the Assistant Secretary adopt the following order designed to effectuate the purpose of Executive Order 11491, as amended.

Recommended Order 7/

Pursuant to Section 6(b) of Executive Order 11491, as amended, and Section 203.26(b) of the Regulations, the Assistant Secretary of Labor for Labor-Management Relations hereby orders that the Department of the Treasury, Internal Revenue Service, Greensboro, North Carolina District Office shall:

1. Cease and desist from:

(a) Instituting a reassignment or transfer to different district offices of employees represented exclusively by National Treasury Employees Union, Chapter 50, or any other exclusive representative, without notifying the National Treasury Employees Union, Chapter 50, or any other exclusive representative, and affording such representative the opportunity to meet and confer, to the extent consonant with law and regulations, on the procedures which management

7/ Inasmuch as Respondent was not obliged to meet and confer re its decision to transfer Revenue officers and cure the staffing imbalance, I do not recommend a return to the status quo aute. It has been held by the Assistant Secretary that it would not effectuate the purposes of the Order to require such a remedy where the employer's failure was limited to a refusal to bargain over impact and implementation Department of the Treasury, Internal Revenue Service, Indianapolis Indiana, A/SLMR No. 909.

will observe in implementing such reassignment or transfer, and on the impact the reassignment or transfer will have on the employees adversely affected by such action.

(b) Refusing or failing to furnish, upon request by National Treasury Employees Union, Chapter 50, any information bearing upon reassignment or transfer of employees from the Greensboro, North Carolina District to any other district office, or any other condition of employment, which is necessary to enable National Treasury Employees Union, Chapter 50 to discharge its obligation as the exclusive representative to represent effectively all employees in the exclusively recognized unit.

(c) In any like or related manner, interfering with, restraining, or coercing its employees in the exercise of rights assured by Executive Order 11491, as amended.

2. Take the following affirmative actions in order to effectuate the purposes and provisions of Executive Order 11491, as amended:

(a) Notify the National Treasury Employees Union, Chapter 50, or any other exclusive representative, of any intended reassignment or transfer to different district offices of employees represented exclusively by National Treasury Employees Union, Chapter 50, or any other exclusive representative, and, upon request meet and confer in good faith, to the extent consonant with law and regulations, on the procedures which management will observe in implementing such reassignment or transfer and on the impact the reassignment or transfer will have on the employees adversely affected by such actions.

(b) Post at its facility at the Internal Revenue Service, Greensboro District office, Greensboro, North Carolina, copies of the attached notice marked "Appendix" on forms to be furnished by the Assistant Secretary of Labor for Labor-Management Relations. Upon receipt of such forms they shall be signed by the District Director and shall be posted and maintained by him for 60 consecutive days thereafter, in conspicuous places, including all bulletin boards and other places where notices to employees are customarily posted. The District Director shall take reasonable steps to insure that such notices are not altered, defaced, or covered by any other material.

(c) Pursuant to Section 203.26 of the Regulations, notify the Assistant Secretary, in writing, within 20 days from the date of this order, as to what steps have been taken to comply herewith.

WE WILL, upon request, furnish to National Treasury Employees Union, Chapter 50 all information bearing upon a reassignment or transfer of employees from the Greensboro, North Carolina District to any other district office, or any other condition of employment, which is necessary to enable National Treasury Employees Union, Chapter 50, to discharge its obligation as the exclusive representative to represent effectively all employees in the exclusively recognized unit.

UNITED STATES DEPARTMENT OF LABOR
ASSISTANT SECRETARY FOR LABOR-MANAGEMENT RELATIONS
SUMMARY OF DECISION AND DIRECTION OF ELECTION
OF THE ASSISTANT SECRETARY
PURSUANT TO SECTION 6 OF EXECUTIVE ORDER 11491, AS AMENDED

ALABAMA STATE MILITARY DEPARTMENT
A/SLMR No. 1008

This case involved a representation petition filed by the Association of Civilian Technicians (ACT) seeking a unit of all General Schedule and Wage Board technicians employed by the Alabama Army National Guard assigned to the southern half of the State. The petitioned for unit is coextensive with the unit for which the National Federation of Federal Employees, Local 1730 (NFFE Local 1730) is the incumbent exclusive representative. The Activity contended that the existing unit was not appropriate inasmuch as it had not led to effective dealings and efficiency of agency operations and that only a statewide unit of Army National Guard technicians would be appropriate for the purpose of exclusive recognition. The parties were also in dispute as to the eligibility of certain job classifications.

The record revealed that on the same date that NFFE Local 1730 was certified as the exclusive representative for a unit of National Guard technicians assigned to the southern portion of the State, the National Federation of Federal Employees, Local 1706 (NFFE Local 1706) was certified in an identical unit for the northern half of the State. These two Locals entered into a multi-unit agreement with the Activity in 1971. Thereafter, in 1973, the parties negotiated a second multi-unit agreement which never became effective. In 1976, NFFE Local 1706, and another NFFE local representing a statewide unit of Alabama Air National Guard technicians signed a multi-unit agreement with the Activity. While NFFE Local 1730 had been a party to these negotiations, its membership failed to ratify the proposed agreement. Thus, at the time the ACT filed the subject petition, there was no negotiated agreement covering the employees in the petitioned for unit.

The Assistant Secretary noted that since the evidence establishes that a history of collective bargaining exists and there is no evidence that the scope and character of the existing unit have changed by virtue of events subsequent to its initial certification, such unit continues to constitute an appropriate unit for the purpose of exclusive recognition.

With regard to the eligibility of certain job classifications, namely the positions of Examiner and Flight Instructor (Aircraft), the Assistant Secretary found that there existed insufficient evidence to warrant the exclusion of employees in these classifications on the basis that they exercise supervisory authority within the meaning of Section 2(c) of the Order or that they function as management officials.

Based on his findings, the Assistant Secretary directed an election in the unit found appropriate.

DECISION AND DIRECTION OF ELECTION

Upon a petition duly filed under Section 6 of Executive Order 11491, as amended, a hearing was held before Hearing Officer Robert F. Woodland, Jr. The Hearing Officer's rulings made at the hearing are free from prejudicial error and are hereby affirmed.

Upon the entire record in the subject case, including the brief filed by the National Federation of Federal Employees, 1/ the Assistant Secretary finds:

1. The labor organizations involved claim to represent certain employees of the Activity.
2. The Petitioner, Association of Civilian Technicians, hereinafter called ACT, seeks an election in a unit consisting of all General Schedule and Wage Board technicians employed by the Alabama Army National Guard assigned to the southern half of the State, excluding professional employees, management officials, employees engaged in Federal personnel work in other than a purely clerical capacity, and supervisors as defined by the Order. 2/ The petitioned for unit is coextensive with the unit for which the National Federation of Federal Employees, Local 1730, hereinafter called NFFE Local 1730, is the incumbent exclusive representative. The Activity contends that the existing unit is not appropriate inasmuch as it has not led to effective dealings and efficiency of agency operations and that only a statewide unit of Army National Guard technicians would be appropriate for the purpose of exclusive recognition. The parties also are in dispute as to the eligibility of certain job classifications.

1/ The Activity submitted an untimely brief which has not been considered.

The record reveals that on June 4, 1970, NFFE Local 1730 was certified as the exclusive representative in the petitioned for unit. On the same date, the National Federation of Federal Employees, Local 1706, hereinafter called NFFE Local 1706, was certified as the exclusive representative in an identical unit for the northern half of the State of Alabama. Both locals entered into a multi-unit negotiated agreement with the Activity in 1971. Thereafter, in 1973, the parties negotiated a second multi-unit agreement which was not approved by higher agency authority and which never became effective. 3/ At the time the ACT filed its petition herein, there was no negotiated agreement covering the employees in the petitioned for unit.

The Alabama Army National Guard is comprised of five major commands which also were in existence at the time the above noted bargaining units were certified. Two of the major commands are headquartered in the southern half of the State, although there are subordinate units of these commands located in the northern half. Similarly, with respect to the three major commands headquartered in the north, certain subordinate elements are located in the southern half of the State. For the most part, there is local supervision of the National Guard technicians. The Adjutant General of the Alabama National Guard is empowered by law to employ and manage the technicians within his jurisdiction. The Technician Personnel Manual issued by the State's Technician Personnel Office further prescribes that the Adjutant General has the authority to promote, reassign, detail, demote, separate and compensate technicians, and that this authority will not be redelegated. However, the record reveals that, in reality, the Technician Personnel Office is responsible for administering this authority uniformly with respect to all National Guard technicians within the State. Additionally, the record reveals that the military commanders and subordinate levels of supervision, as well as management

2/ The southern half of the State is defined as the counties of Sumter, Greene, Hale, Bibb, Chilton, Coosa, Tallapoosa, Chambers, and all counties south of these.

3/ In 1976, NFFE Local 1706 and NFFE Local 1445, which previously had been certified as the exclusive representative in a statewide unit of Alabama Air National Guard technicians, entered into a multi-unit negotiated agreement with the Activity. Although NFFE Local 1730 had been a party to these negotiations, its membership failed to ratify the proposed agreement and, therefore, its unit was not covered by the agreement.

officials, have the authority to recommend personnel actions. Labor relations matters are generally handled at the local level with the Technician Personnel Office providing assistance when necessary.

The evidence establishes that a history of collective bargaining exists in the petitioned for unit. Further, there is no evidence that the scope and character of the existing unit have changed by virtue of events subsequent to its initial certification. In this latter regard, the record reveals that the organizational structure of the Activity and the lines of authority have remained essentially as they existed when the petitioned for unit was initially certified, and that labor relations matters continue, for the most part, to be handled at the local level. Additionally, the evidence establishes that the incumbent exclusive representative, NFFE Local 1730, has actively engaged in the collective bargaining process as demonstrated by its past negotiated agreement with the Activity. Under these circumstances, I find that the petitioned for unit continues to constitute an appropriate unit for the purpose of exclusive recognition within the meaning of Section 10(b) of the Order.

Eligibility Issues

The parties are in dispute as to the eligibility of employees classified as Examiners and Flight Instructors (Aircraft). 4/

Examiners

The Activity contends that employees in this classification should be excluded from any unit found appropriate as either management officials, supervisory employees, or both. The record reveals that Examiners conduct examinations, inspections and inventories of Army and Air National Guard property and fiscal accounts and perform internal reviews of the United States Property and Fiscal Office (USPFO) functions. In this regard, Examiners review and appraise the adequacy and effectiveness of policies, systems, procedures, records and reports relating to the overall operation of the Activity, conduct physical inventories of Federal property issued by the USPFO, and prepare reports based upon these examinations. Recommendations contained in the reports which result from such examinations are channeled through a Supervisory Accounting Technician to other supervisory levels. The record reveals that Examiners do not exercise supervisory authority over other employees, adjust grievances, or make recommendations with regard to hiring, firing, promotion, approval of leave, or the granting of awards.

Based on these circumstances, I find that there is no basis for the exclusion of Examiners from the petitioned for unit. In this regard, there is no evidence to indicate that Examiners are vested with the authority to make or effectively influence the making of policy with respect to personnel, procedures, or programs, which would justify their exclusion on the basis of being management officials. 5/ Nor is there evidence that they exercise supervisory authority within the meaning of Section 2(c) of the Order. Accordingly, I find that employees classified as Examiners should be included in the unit found appropriate.

4/ In addition, the parties entered into several stipulations concerning the eligibility of certain other job classifications. However, as there was no evidence adduced to support these stipulations, I shall not pass upon the unit eligibility of these classifications.

Flight Instructors (Aircraft)

Employees in the subject classification, in addition to their regular flight and test flight duties, are responsible for implementing a flight training and testing program. In the latter capacity, their duties involve evaluating aviators and determining whether or not they should remain on flight status. However, there is no evidence that in the performance of such duties the Flight Instructors' evaluations determine the promotion, demotion or dismissal of the aviators whom they evaluate. The record reveals that Flight Instructors may act as the Facility/Activity Commander in the latter's absence. However, in this regard, the evidence indicates that this occurs on an infrequent basis, and then only for short periods of time. Further, while acting in such capacity, Flight Instructors have not exercised the authority to hire, transfer, suspend, lay off, recall, promote, discharge, assign, reward or discipline other employees, or to responsibly direct them, adjust their grievances, or to effectively recommend such action.

Under these circumstances, I find insufficient evidence to warrant the exclusion of employees classified as Flight Instructors (Aircraft) from the petitioned for unit either as management officials or supervisors. Thus, while the employees in the subject classification evaluate other aviators and determine their fitness to remain on flight status, there is no evidence to indicate that such evaluation determines the continued employment status of such aviators. 6/ Further, the evidence establishes that although employees in the subject classification may act as the Facility/Activity Commander, such instances are sporadic, of short duration, and while so acting, such employees have not exercised supervisory authority within the meaning of Section 2(c) of the Order. Accordingly, I find that employees classified as Flight Instructors (Aircraft) should be included in the unit found appropriate.

Based on all of the foregoing circumstances, I find that the following employees constitute a unit appropriate for the purpose of exclusive recognition under Executive Order 11491, as amended:

All General Schedule and Wage Board technicians employed by the Alabama Army National Guard assigned to the southern half of the State, which includes the counties of Sumter,

UNITED STATES DEPARTMENT OF LABOR
ASSISTANT SECRETARY FOR LABOR-MANAGEMENT RELATIONS
SUMMARY OF DECISION AND ORDER OF THE ASSISTANT SECRETARY
PURSUANT TO SECTION 6 OF EXECUTIVE ORDER 11491, AS AMENDED

DIRECTION OF ELECTION

An election by secret ballot shall be conducted, as early as possible, but not later than 60 days from the date below. The appropriate Area Administrator shall supervise the election, subject to the Assistant Secretary's Regulations. Eligible to vote are those in the unit who were employed during the payroll period immediately preceding the date below, including employees who did not work during that period because they were out ill, or on vacation or on furlough, including those in the military service who appear in person at the polls. Ineligible to vote are employees who quit or were discharged for cause since the designated payroll period and who have not been rehired or reinstated before the election date. Those eligible shall vote whether they desire to be represented for the purpose of exclusive recognition by the Association of Civilian Technicians; by the National Federation of Federal Employees, Local 1730; or by neither.

Francis X. Burkhardt, Assistant Secretary of
Labor for Labor-Management Relations

AMERICAN FEDERATION OF GOVERNMENT EMPLOYEES,
AFL-CIO, LOCAL 32
A/SLMR No. 1009

This case involved a complaint filed by Karen Boyd against Local 32, American Federation of Government Employees, alleging violations of 29 CFR 204.2, Bill of Rights of members of labor organizations.

The Administrative Law Judge concluded that the union had violated 29 CFR 204.2 by thwarting members' duly petitioned requests to have an investigative committee set up to consider charges of certain misconduct on the part of union officers, by branding legitimately petitioned meetings illegal, by refusing to recognize actions taken by members at a special membership meeting to set up an investigative committee, and by threatening to expel members if they persisted in their efforts concerning the investigative committee. The Administrative Law Judge recommended that the union be ordered to cease and desist from committing the above actions and from not holding elections or permitting meetings duly petitioned by local union members from being held in accordance with the local's constitution and bylaws.

The Assistant Secretary noted that the complaint alleged three separate violations of 29 CFR 204.2. The first allegation was that the Respondent labor organization had violated Section 204.2 by the failure to conduct an annual election of delegates to the National Capital Area Department of the American Federation of Government Employees (AFGE) in April 1976, as required by the local's constitution and bylaws. The Assistant Secretary ordered that this portion of the complaint be dismissed because the matter was moot due to the conduct of an election of delegates in June 1977 under the provisions of the newly amended constitution and bylaws of Local 32 and because this allegation was a matter that should have been brought under Section 204.29, Election of Officers, rather than under Section 204.2.

7/ Although the petitioned for unit did not specifically exclude military advisors and guards, and as the parties made no argument to the contrary, I find that the unit determined to be appropriate herein should continue to exclude employees classified as military advisors and guards, thereby conforming to the unit recognized in the Certification of Representative issued to NFFE Local 1730 in 1970.

The second allegation was that the Respondent labor organization had violated Section 204.2 by denying members the right to establish a committee of investigation and to have that committee report its recommendations to the membership. The Assistant Secretary concluded that the refusal of the local president to recognize motions properly made at membership meetings and to accept the report from the investigative committee established at a special meeting violated members' rights under Sections 204.2(a)(1) and (2) to participate in meetings and to express their views upon any business properly before the meetings. The Assistant Secretary specifically noted that it was unnecessary to reach the question of whether the Bill of Rights grants members the right to call special meetings.

The third allegation was that members were threatened with expulsion from membership for their activities in connection with the investigative committee in violation of Section 204.2. The Assistant Secretary held that members' right of free speech guaranteed by Section 204.2(a)(2) was violated by the threats contained in the Executive Council report which indicated that continued "unauthorized" activity in connection with attempts to bring charges against certain local officers could be the basis for expulsion.

DECISION AND ORDER

On November 9, 1977, Administrative Law Judge Rhea M. Burrow issued his Recommended Decision and Order in the above-entitled proceeding, finding that the Respondent labor organization had violated Section 204.2(a)(2) of the Regulations implementing Section 18 of Executive Order 11491, as amended. No exceptions were filed to the Administrative Law Judge's Recommended Decision and Order.

The Administrative Law Judge concluded that the Respondent labor organization had violated 29 CFR 204.2(a)(2) by thwarting members' duly petitioned requests to have an investigative committee set up to consider charges of certain misconduct on the part of union officers, by branding legitimately petitioned meetings illegal, by refusing to recognize actions taken by members at a special membership meeting to set up an investigative committee, and by threatening to expel members if they persisted in their efforts concerning the investigative committee. The Administrative Law Judge recommended that the Respondent labor organization be ordered to cease and desist from committing the above actions and from not holding elections or permitting meetings duly petitioned by local union members from being held in accordance with the local's constitution and bylaws.

The Assistant Secretary has reviewed the rulings of the Administrative Law Judge made at the hearing and finds that no prejudicial error was committed. The rulings are hereby affirmed. Upon consideration of the Administrative Law Judge's Recommended Decision and Order and the entire record in the subject case, I adopt the findings, conclusions, and recommendations of the Administrative Law Judge, to the extent consistent herewith.

This case involved three alleged violations of 29 CFR 204.2^{1/}, Bill of Rights of members of labor organizations. The first allegation in the complaint was that the Respondent labor organization had violated Section 204.2 by the failure to conduct an annual election of delegates to the National Capital Area Department of the American Federation of Government Employees (AFGE) in April 1976, as required by the local's constitution and bylaws. The record indicates that the local's constitution and bylaws were violated by the failure to conduct an annual election of delegates. However, this matter has become moot due to the conduct of an election of delegates in June 1977 under the provisions of the newly amended constitution of Local 32.

1/29 CFR 204.2 provides in part:

- a)(1) Equal rights. Every member of a labor organization shall have equal rights and privileges within such organization to nominate candidates, to vote in elections or referendums of the labor organization, to attend membership meetings and to participate in the deliberations and voting upon the business of such meetings, subject to reasonable rules and regulations in such organizations' constitution and bylaws.
- a)(2) Freedom of speech and assembly. Every member of any labor organization shall have the right to meet and assemble freely with other members; and to express any views, arguments or opinions; and to express at meetings of the labor organization his views, upon candidates in an election of the labor organization or upon any business properly before the meeting, subject to the organization's established and reasonable rules pertaining to the conduct of meetings: Provided, That nothing herein shall be construed to impair the right of a labor organization to adopt and enforce reasonable rules as to the responsibility of every member toward the organization as an institution and to his refraining from conduct that would interfere with its performance of its legal or contractual obligations.

Furthermore, it should be noted that the allegation that the local's constitution and bylaws were violated by the failure to hold a timely election is a matter that should properly have been brought under Section 204.29, Election of Officers, rather than under Section 204.2. The requirement that a union conduct its officer elections in accordance with the provisions of its constitution and bylaws is contained in Title IV of the Labor-Management Reporting and Disclosure Act of 1959, as Amended, which was incorporated by reference in Section 204.29 of the Regulations implementing Section 18 of the Order. The United States Supreme Court has established in Calhoon v. Harvey, 379 U.S. 134 (1964), that allegations of violations of Title IV may not be the basis for a complaint under the Bill of Rights. Accordingly, for the above reasons, I shall order that this part of the complaint be dismissed.

The second allegation was that the Respondent had violated Section 204.2 by denying members the right to establish a committee of investigation and to have that committee report its recommendations to the local membership. The evidence indicates that the local president refused to permit a motion to set up an investigative committee to be brought before the August 5, 1976, special membership meeting which had been called for the purpose of establishing such a committee. The local officers and Executive Council refused to recognize the legality of the August 11 special meeting at which an investigative committee was established. At the August 23 and September 27 regular membership meetings, the president refused to permit a report from the investigative committee to be presented to the members and refused to recognize a properly made motion to establish another investigative committee.

Sections 204.2(a) (1) and (2) provide, in part, that members have equal rights to participate in the deliberations and voting upon the business of membership meetings and the right to express their views at membership meetings upon any business properly before the meetings, subject to the organization's established and reasonable rules pertaining to the conduct of meetings. The evidence indicates that the motions to establish an investigative committee were properly made and therefore should have been permitted.

AFGE National Representative Harry F. Rager represented the Respondent at the hearing on this complaint and his February 16, 1977, report to AFGE 14th District National Vice-President Major H. Travis was presented as the official position of AFGE. In his report he indicated that the August 11 special meeting was chaired by the 3rd Vice-President, and at the hearing he stated that "The Council was in error if they disapproved this meeting." (p. 26). Therefore, since representative for the Respondent has recognized the validity of such a special meeting, the investigative committee selected at this meeting would appear to have been properly chosen under the provisions of the local and national constitutions and entitled to report to the membership at a subsequent meeting.^{2/}

The preponderance of the evidence indicates that the actions of the presiding officer in refusing to accept properly made motions to establish an investigative committee at the August 5, August 23, and September 27 meetings and in refusing to accept a report from the investigative committee at the August 23 and September 27 meetings, were more than mere procedural errors. I find that these actions constitute a violation of members' rights under Sections 204.2(a) (1) and (2) to participate in meetings and to express their views upon any business properly before the meetings.

The third allegation was that members were threatened with expulsion from membership for their activities in connection with the investigative committee. The report of the Executive Council which was read at the August 23 membership meeting indicated that continued "unauthorized" activity connected with the attempts to bring charges against certain local officers could be the basis for expulsion. While no overt action was taken to discipline any member, the threat contained in the Executive Council report constituted interference with the members' right of free speech guaranteed by Section 204.2(a)(2). See Allen v. Local 92, Iron Workers, 47 LRRM 2214 (N.D. Ala. 1960).

^{2/} It is unnecessary to reach the question of whether the Bill of Rights grants members the right to call special meetings. See Yanity v. Benware, 376 F.2d 197 (C.A.2 1967).

ORDER

Pursuant to 29 CFR 204.91 implementing the Standard of Conduct provisions of Section 18 of the Order, the Assistant Secretary of Labor for Labor-Management Relations hereby orders that AFGE Local 32, AFL-CIO, Civil Service Commission, 1900 E Street, N. W., Washington, D. C., shall:

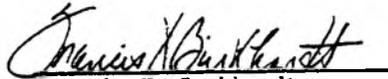

1. Cease and desist from:
 - (a) Refusing to permit members to participate in the meetings of the Local and to express their views upon business properly before the meetings including the consideration of charges against officers of the local, subject to the local's established and reasonable rules pertaining to the conduct of such meetings.
 - (b) Threatening members with expulsion from membership for exercising their rights of free speech, including their right to participate in establishing an investigative committee.
 - (c) In any like or related manner interfering with, restraining, coercing or threatening its members with expulsion by reason of exercising their rights assured by Executive Order 11491, as amended.
2. Take the following affirmative actions in order to effectuate the purposes and policies of Executive Order 11491, as amended:
 - (a) Post on the bulletin boards provided for AFGE Local 32 union members at U.S. Civil Service Commission facilities located in Washington, D. C., and particularly at 1900 E Street, Northwest, copies of the attached notice marked

"Appendix" on forms to be furnished by the Assistant Secretary for Labor-Management Relations. Upon receipt of such forms they shall be signed by the AFGE Local Union President and shall be posted and maintained by her for sixty (60) consecutive days thereafter in conspicuous places, including all places where notice to members of the Union are customarily posted. The President shall take steps to insure that such notices are not removed, altered, defaced, or covered by any other material.

- (b) Pursuant to Section 204.92 of the Regulations, notify the Assistant Secretary in writing within thirty (30) days from the date of this Order as to what steps have been taken to comply herewith.

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED that the portion of the complaint alleging a violation of Section 204.2 by the failure of the Respondent labor organization to conduct an annual election of delegates to the National Capital Area Department of AFGE in April 1976, as required by the local's constitution and bylaws, be, and it hereby is, dismissed.

RECOMMENDED DECISION AND ORDER

This is a Standards of Conduct proceeding in which a formal hearing of record was held on July 6, 1977, 1/

1/ A hearing on May 17, 1977, was scheduled but recessed at the preconference stage for the purpose of exploring the positions of the parties by reason of additional information offered and resolution of their differences if possible, without formal litigation. When later advised that no resolution was possible, hearing was scheduled and held.

pursuant to Executive Order 11491, as amended (hereafter referred to as the Order). In a complaint dated October 18, 1976, the Complainant alleged in substance that her rights under Section 18 of the Executive Order had been violated by the undemocratic behavior and abuse of parliamentary procedure by Martha Frazier, Beatrice Osbia and Jerry Calhoun of AFGE Local 32 wherein they thwarted four attempts on August 5, August 11, August 23, and September 27, 1976, of members of Local 32 to establish a Committee of Investigation, a right provided under Article XIV, Section 3 of the AFGE Constitution 2/; it was also alleged that there was a threat of expulsion from membership in the union for pursuit of the investigation requested by 21 members of the union as evidenced by minutes of the Executive Council meeting on August 20, 1976, and read at the union meeting on August 23, 1976 3/; it was further alleged that the internal channels for establishing the democratic process to investigate the allegations signed by 21 members on July 19, 1976, do not function because of the undemocratic behavior of the above named members.

2/ Article XIV, Section 3 relating to Offenses, Trials, Penalties and Appeals provides: "Charges may be proffered by the National President, the Executive Council, the National Vice President having jurisdiction over the local of which the accused is a member, or by a committee of investigation of the local. Any member may bring charged by first filing them with the local of which the accused is a member and the charges shall be investigated by a committee of investigation of the local. If the committee of investigation finds provable cause, and cannot settle the matter informally, it shall cause charges to be served upon the accused by registered or certified mail, at his last known address, and the local of which the accused is a member shall also be served at its office or address of its highest ranking officer and shall contain an allegation of facts describing the nature of the offences charged."

3/ Section 18 of the Order provides in part as follows: "Section 18. Standards of Conduct for labor organizations (a) An agency shall accord recognition only to a labor organization that is free from corrupt influences and influences opposed to basic democratic principles. Except as provided in paragraph (b) of this section, an organization is not required to prove that it has the required freedom when it is subject to governing requirements adopted by the organization or by a national or international labor organization or federation of labor organizations with which it is affiliated, or in which it participates, containing explicit and detailed provisions to which it subscribes calling for -

The implementing Regulation 29 CFR §204.2 of Section 18 of the Order referred to as "Bill of Rights of Members of Labor Organizations" provides in part:

"(a)(1) Equal rights. Every member of a labor organization shall have equal rights and privileges within such organization to nominate candidates, to vote in elections or referendums of the labor organization, to attend membership meetings and to participate in the deliberations and voting upon the business of such meetings, subject to reasonable rules and regulations in such organization's constitution and bylaws.

"(a)(2) Freedom of speech and assembly. Every member of any labor organization shall have the right to meet and assemble freely with other members; and to express any views, arguments or opinions; and to express at meeting of the labor organization his views, upon candidates in an election of the labor organization or upon any business properly before the meeting, subject to the organization's established and reasonable rules pertaining to the conduct of meetings. Provided, that nothing herein shall be construed to impair the right of a labor organization to adopt and enforce reasonable rules as to the responsibility of every member toward the organization as an institution and to his refraining from conduct that would interfere with its performance of its legal or contract obligations..."

Upon the basis of the entire record, including my observation of the witnesses and their demeanor and briefs submitted by or on behalf of the respective parties, I make the following recitation of facts, findings, conclusions and recommendations.

Background Information

There was an election of officers for AFGE Local 32 4/ held in April 1975 at which time Henry Reddick was named as President; Martha Frazier, 1st Vice President; 5/ Inez Conley, 2nd Vice President 6/ and Jerry Calhoun, 3rd Vice President. Othella Poole was elected Chief Shop Steward and Delegates elected to the National Capital Area Department were: Henry Reddick, Rosalie Gordon, Martha Frazier and Beatrice Osbia. Members of the Advisory Committee were Rosalie Gordon, Past President; Beatrice Osbia and Jack Brennan.

At a March 1976 membership meeting of AFGE Local Union 32, Complainant along with a member of other union stewards expressed the opinion that under Section 4(b) of the Local Constitution NCAD delegates should be elected annually in April rather than every two years; when the issue was not resolved at the March meeting they were told to write the National President. 7/ The stewards also protested to no avail the announcement made at the March 1976 meeting that delegates to the National Convention will be elected on April 30, at the same time that delegates to the 14th District Caucus are elected. This was stated to be unfair under Section 4(c) of the Local Constitution bylaws which provided that: "Delegates and alternates to the National Convention shall be elected at least 30 days prior to each convention of AFGE." President Webber in a letter dated May 5, 1976 to Major H. Travis, AFGE National Vice President stated it appears that the April 30, 1976 election of delegates and alternates to the National AFGE Convention would not be unreasonable in view of the one year membership qualification for candidacy; he also expressed opinion that delegates and alternates to the NCAD should be elected annually under the constitution and bylaws as amended and that unless the Local

7/ Section 4(b) of the bylaws to the Local Constitution states: "Delegates and alternates to the District of Columbia Department shall be elected annually at the regular meeting for the month of April (unless some other date has been fixed at a previous meeting."

had fixed another date elections should be conducted annually during the regular April membership meeting. He further stated: "Accordingly, if after an investigation you find no other such data was fixed, I suggest that you advise the Local to conduct an election of delegates and alternates to the NCAD as soon as possible." 8/ President Webber also stated that the constitution and Bylaws of Local 32 had many deficiencies and major revision was suggested. 9/

AFGE National President Webber died shortly thereafter and was succeeded by Dennis Garrison; Kenneth Blaylock was later named as President.

At a meeting on May 29, 1976, Local 32, AFGE voted to endorse Russell Binion as National Vice President and to instruct the delegates to work actively in his behalf and to cast all 299 votes for him. According to the report of action unchallenged at the hearing, delegate Beatrice Osbia was Major Travis' Campaign Manager and stated she would not be able to actively work to the election of Russell Binion but would relinquish her position as Major Travis' Campaign Manager. However she subsequently published a Notice that she would continue to serve as Chairperson of Major Travis' Campaign Committee through the end of the 14th District Caucus on May 28, 1976. She was also at the time running herself for election to the Woman's Advisory Committee of the National Office.

At the June 1976 meeting of Local 32 the question of representation of NCAD was brought up. The position of the Executive Committee had not been ascertained or clarified since President Webber had advised two months earlier that an election of delegates should have been held in April and NCAD should be notified of Local 32's position and representation. It was also stated by President Frazier, that, unless business of importance arises, there will be no further meetings until September.

8/ Complainant Exhibit No. 8.

9/ Copies of President Webber's letter of May 5, 1976 to Major Travis were sent to Martha Frazier, Karen Boyd and N. R. Kershaw. The latter was not identified during the hearing.

On July 19, 1976, 21 members of AFGE Local 32 petitioned Martha Frazier, President, Rosalie Gordon and Beatrice Osbia, Committee Advisory Members for a special meeting to be held on August 5, 1976 for the purpose of presenting charges against the President and the named Advisory Committee members and calling attention of the membership to the violations which have occurred to our local constitution and to the National Constitution of AFGE. 10/ A summary as to what happened at the August meetings is indicated in a letter to Major Travis dated October 26, 1976. 11/

It was stated that "...petitions for two special meetings were submitted by more than enough local members to constitute a quorum. The first meeting was chaired by Ms. Frazier. At that meeting, Ms. Frazier refused to accept a motion to set up an Investigation Committee to review the charges against Ms. Osbia, Ms. Gordon and herself. In view of this, a second meeting was petitioned for August 11. Ms. Frazier was on leave and Louis Ray, 3rd Vice President, chaired the meeting. It was decided at that time that there was sufficient evidence to warrant establishment of an Investigation Committee and a motion to this effect was passed.

"At the August monthly membership meeting we were told that the Executive Committee decided that the Investigation Committee set up at the second Special Meeting was 'ad hoc' and illegal; its findings, if any, unacceptable. A point of order was made followed by a motion asking the President to hand over the chair because she was personally involved in the charges to be investigated. The motion passed 11 to 5 but was ignored by the President despite numerous protests by the membership...."

Findings

1. The Complainant, Karen Boyd is and was at all times material herein, a member of AFGE Local 32, AFL-CIO union, the exclusive representative for all non-professional Wage Grade and General Schedule employees and all professional General Schedule employees in the U.S. Civil Service Commission Central Office located in the Washington, D.C., metropolitan area.

10/ For specific alleged violations see Complainant Exhibit No. 4.

11/ Complainant Exhibit No. 15.

2. Section 4(b) of the bylaws to the AFGE Local Constitution provided that: "Delegates and alternates to the District of Columbia Department shall be elected annually at the regular meeting for the month of April..." There had been no other date fixed by the Local to alter the mandatory requirements and there is no claim it is in conflict with the National Constitution or bylaws. There was no annual election of delegates or alternates by AFGE Local 32 in 1976 or April 1977.

3. The President and officials in AFGE had notice from Complainant and others at the March 1976 membership meeting that an election of delegates and alternates to the District of Columbia Department (NCAD) should be held in April 1976 in accordance with its local constitution and bylaws.

4. No action was taken by AFGE, Local 32 officials and the matter was addressed by the Complainant to the AFGE National President who concluded that such election should be held annually and a copy of such notice was furnished to the AFGE Local 32 Union President in May 1976.

5. In July 1976 Complainant along with 20 other union members petitioned AFGE President of Local 32 to call a meeting on August 5, 1976 for the purpose of presenting charges against her and certain named advisory committee members and calling attention to the membership to local and National Constitutional Violations. 12/ At the August 5, 1976 meeting President Frazier refused to entertain any motions regarding the charges. 13/

12/ Section 1(a) of the bylaws to the Local Constitution provides - "A regular meeting of this lodge shall be held as far as practicable on the fourth Monday of every month. However, at any meeting the date of a future meeting or meetings may be changed, or such meetings may be dispensed with by a two-thirds (2/3) vote of the members present. Special meetings may be called by the Executive Council. A special meeting shall be called by the President upon petition of at least ten (10) members of the lodge. General notice to all members shall be given three (3) days in advance of any special meeting."

13/ Transcript p. 117 (testimony of Mary Workman, whom I find to be a credible and reliable witness) in this proceeding.

6. At a subsequent duly petitioned meeting on August 11, 1976 by Complainant and a quorum of other AFGE Local 32 members the meeting was held as scheduled and chaired by Vice-President Louis Ray, the President, the other higher Vice Presidents being absent. At the meeting an investigative committee was authorized and members elected were Mary Workman, Larry Smith and Earline McNeal.

7. At two later meetings one in August and the other in September 1976, the earlier being the regular August membership meeting the investigative committee was thwarted by Respondent from presenting its charges or making a report of its investigation to the membership. A council report read at the regular monthly August meeting reflected that the council had met and branded the investigative committee elected at the August 11 meeting as "ad hoc" and not permitted if not authorized by the council; that the August 11, 1976, meeting was illegal; and, any further unauthorized activities surrounding internal problems could be the basis for expulsion of such members.

8. The council is not an avenue for request, or approval for a duly petitioned membership business meeting by 10 or more members of the local union.

9. The respective meetings in August and September 1976 by Complainant and others were duly petitioned by more than 10 members and it was mandatory under the bylaws for the President to call and hold such meetings. The council had no right to interfere or preclude the investigative committee from making its report or proceeding with its charges in an orderly fashion based on business transacted at a duly petitioned meeting.

10. The business affairs of Respondent Local 32 were conducted in a loosely coordinated manner with little regard to rights of members under the adopted constitution and bylaws.

11. The Respondents disregarded the mandate of the bylaws to the local constitution by not holding an annual election for NCAD delegates in April 1976 and by denying members the right to establish a committee of investigation and to have that committee report its findings and recommendations as to why its officials refused to follow the constitution and bylaws of Local 32.

12. The threat of expulsion from the union for attempting to set up an investigative committee to investigate charges that its officers were not holding elections as required and abusing and failing to recognize the rights of union members at membership meetings was a violation of union members rights under the Bill of Rights provisions of 29 CFR Section 204.2.

13. AFGE Local 32 adopted a new constitution and bylaws in June or July 1977, that is currently before the National AFGE, AFL-CIO for ratification. The terms of NACD delegates are one year.

Discussion and Evaluation

Under Section 18(d) of the Order the Assistant Secretary has been directed to prescribe regulations effectuating the Standards of Conduct of Labor Organizations and Management. Pursuant to the Order Bill of Rights regulations of members of labor organizations (29 CFR §204.2) have been promulgated to assure particularly that all union members have equal rights and freedom of speech and assembly. These rights within the organization include ... "the right to nominate candidates, to vote in elections or referendums of the labor organizations, to attend membership meetings and to participate in the deliberations and voting of such meetings, subject to reasonable rules and regulations in such organization's constitution and bylaws." It is also provided that "Every member of any labor organization shall have the right to meet and assemble freely with other members; and to express any views, arguments or opinions; and to express at meetings of the labor organization his views, upon candidates in an election of the labor organization or upon any business properly before the meeting, subject to the organization's established and reasonable rules pertaining to the conduct of meetings..."

At the time Complainant made inquiry of union officers at its March 1976 membership meeting as to election of delegates to the NCAD, the bylaws to the local constitution provided that such delegates were to be elected annually at the April general meeting. The provision was clear and unambiguous and needed no interpretation by the National organization. Even so, President Webber informed the President of Local 32 as to the requirements in May 1976, leaving no reasonable basis for Respondents to conclude that such delegates were elected for other than a one year term despite failure of the Local to conduct annual elections in 1971 and 1973. He also suggested an election be held as soon as possible.

At four either duly petitioned or regular membership meetings in August and September 1976, local union officers arbitrarily by refusing to entertain or consider meetings by Complainant and others successfully thwarted them from establishing a committee of investigation and have it report its findings to the membership; further a council report read by Beatrice Osbia at the August meeting threatened Complainant and others with expulsion from the union if they persisted in their investigative efforts of bringing charges against local officers.

The Complainant sought redress within the Local organization and at the National level but was not ever provided an answer to her complaints and inquiries until the beginning of the hearing on May 17, 1977. I recessed that hearing for the purpose of having the parties consider the answer submitted on behalf of the Local by Major Travis as a satisfactory offer of settlement.

No agreement was reached and a full hearing was subsequently held. I conclude that there was a reasonable basis for the complaint in this case without any satisfactory offer of settlement.

The Standards of Conduct Labor-Management Relations decisions under Section 18 of the Order and applicable Regulations promulgated thereunder provide little precedent for determining the issues herein involved. However, the Labor-Management Reporting and Disclosure Act of 1959, as amended, (29 U.S.C.A. §411) contains the identical provisions as those in 29 CFR §204.2(a)(b) and courts have passed on many decisions under Section 411. Generally, it has been held that by becoming a member of a union, the worker in effect, makes contract to be governed by the Constitution and bylaws and rules of the organization. (Smith v. General Truck Drivers, Warehouseman and Helpers Union Local 467 of San Bernardino and Riverside Counties, D.C. Cal. 1960, 181 F. Supp. 14). In the same case it was held that courts will not interfere with internal affairs of unions except in rare cases of fraud or illegality. In a later case it was held that the Bill of Rights provisions under Section 411 guarantee basic rights relating to internal affairs of the union. (Lucas v. Kenny, D.C. Ill. 1963, 220 F. Supp. 188). In enacting this Section (411), Congress sought to protect union members in their relationship to union by adopting measures to insure provision of democratic processes in conduct of union affairs and procedural due process to members subjected to discipline. (Tincher v. Piasecki, C.A. Ind. 1975, 520 F. 2d. 912. This chapter protects the union members right to discuss union affairs, and whether a particular action constitutes "discipline" within the meaning of this chapter is to be determined by its practical effect. Morrissey v. National Maritime Union, D.C. N.Y. 1975, 397 F. Supp. 659. A court should not hesitate to find a union in violation of statutory requirements if the union utilizes a vaguely worded prohibition of action contrary to the best interests of the union in order to chill a union member's freedom of speech through constant disciplinary action. Ritz v. O'Donnell, D.C. D.C. 1976, 413 F. Supp. 1365. In actions against unions under this chapter, determination whether a union member has exhausted intra-union remedies must be made on state of facts in each particular case. Woods v. Local Union No. 613 of International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers, D.C. Ga. 1975, 404 F. Supp. 110.

The decisions do not clearly delineate the line of demarcation as to what constitutes a standards of conduct violation under the "Bill of Rights" provisions of 29 CFR §204.2. It is evident that as of May 1976, officers of AFGE Local 32 had been made aware by the AFGE National President that their NCAD delegates under the local constitution and bylaws were to be elected annually at their April monthly meeting and that an election should be held immediately.

One of the chief purposes of the Bill of Rights regulations is to protect union members against possible overreaching by union officials; other purposes include the stopping of objectionable conduct by those in positions of trust and to protect democratic processes within union organizations and to permit local affairs to be governed by local members under democratic processes. As to the four duly petitioned and regular meetings held in August and September 1976, the conduct and actions by local union officers were obvious attempts to thwart and suppress the democratic process of members seeking by legitimate means to bring proper business matters before the membership for consideration. Such action coupled with the threat of expulsion from membership of Complainant and others approved by the council was not in the best interests of the union and had a chilling effect on Complainant and others participating in the effort to have legitimate charges brought before the membership. The actions and threat of expulsion from membership transcended the bounds of permissible conduct and constituted a violation of the standards of conduct provisions of 29 CFR 204.2(a)(2).

It must be noted that not only was an election of NCAD delegates not held in accordance with the constitution and bylaws in 1976, but none was held at the regular time provided for holding elections in April 1977.

The adoption of a new constitution and bylaws in June or July 1977 with election of new officers has most probably rendered moot the basis upon which the complaint herein was based. However, when given the opportunity of considering the position of Major Travis, Executive Vice-President of the National Union who filed the answer on behalf of the Union, such were not accepted by local union officials and it was insisted there had been no violation. Such is contra to Major Travis' findings and recommendations and the evidence in the case. The Respondents at the hearing did not refute the allegations in the complaint or otherwise explain or present reasons for denying the Complainant and others a forum to consider their legal requests made in accordance with the constitution and bylaws, they were required to administer. Hence, the Complainant and others were denied their procedural due process rights.

While dismissal of the complaint was seriously considered on the basis of the issues having become moot after the new constitution and bylaws were adopted and new officers and delegates elected, the type of conduct here involved is susceptible to recurrence and there was blatant denial of any violation having been committed, even after Major Travis submitted his report. Under the circumstances a remedy to apprise the membership that there was a violation of the Standards of Conduct provision under 29 CFR §204.2(a)(2) and of their rights is deemed advisable.

By reason of the foregoing, I conclude that the Respondents violated 29 CFR §204.2(a)(2) implementing Section 18 of Executive Order 11491 when they refused and thwarted Complainant's duly petitioned requests to have an investigative committee set up to consider charges of certain misconduct on the part of union officers, branded legitimately petitioned meetings illegal, refused to recognize action taken by members at the August 12, 1976 meeting, and threatened Complainant and others with expulsion from membership if they persisted in their efforts.

Recommendation

Having found that the Respondent AFGE Local 32, AFL-CIO engaged in conduct which violated the Standards of Conduct provisions of Section 204.2(a)(2) implementing Section 18 of the Order, I recommend that the Assistant Secretary adopt the following Order designed to effectuate the policies of Executive Order 11491, as amended.

RECOMMENDED ORDER

Pursuant to 29 CFR 204.91 implementing the Standard of Conduct provisions of Section 18 of the Order, the Assistant Secretary of Labor for Labor Management Relations hereby orders that AFGE Local 32, AFL-CIO Civil Service Commission, 1900 E Street, N.W., Washington, D.C., shall

(1) Cease and desist from

(a) Not holding elections or permitting meetings duly petitioned by local union members from being held in accordance with the local constitution and bylaws;

(b) Attempting to thwart efforts by members of Local 32 to present to the membership legitimate investigative charges for consideration;

(c) Branding as ad hoc and illegal actions taken at a meeting and specifically petitioned for in accordance with the constitution and bylaws;

(d) Threatening members with expulsion from membership for having participated in efforts to set up an investigative committee and a meeting petitioned in accordance with the constitution and bylaws;

(e) In any like or related manner interfering with, restraining, coercing or threatening its members with expulsion by reason of exercising their rights assured by Executive Order 11491, as amended.

2. Take the following affirmative action in order to effectuate the purposes of Executive Order 11491, as amended:

(a) Post on the bulletin boards provided for AFGE Local 32 union members at U.S. Civil Service Commission facilities located in Washington, D.C. and particularly at 1900 E Street, Northwest, copies of the attached notice marked "Appendix" on forms to be furnished by the Assistant Secretary for Labor-Management Relations. Upon receipt of such forms they shall be signed by the President of the AFGE

Local Union President and shall be posted and maintained by him for sixty (60) consecutive days thereafter in conspicuous places including all places where notice to members of the Union are customarily posted. The President shall take reasonable steps to insure that such notices are not removed, altered, defaced, or covered by any other material.

(b) Pursuant to Section 204.92 of the Regulations, notify the Assistant Secretary in writing within thirty (30) days from the date of this Order as to what steps have been taken to comply herewith.

UNITED STATES DEPARTMENT OF LABOR
ASSISTANT SECRETARY FOR LABOR-MANAGEMENT RELATIONS
SUMMARY OF DECISION AND DIRECTION OF ELECTION OF THE ASSISTANT SECRETARY
PURSUANT TO SECTION 6 OF EXECUTIVE ORDER 11491, AS AMENDED

FEDERAL AVIATION ADMINISTRATION,
OAKLAND AIRWAY FACILITIES SECTOR,
OAKLAND, CALIFORNIA
A/SLMR No. 1010

This case involved a petition filed by the Professional Airways Systems Specialists (PASS) seeking an election in a unit of all unrepresented nonprofessional employees of the Airway Facilities Sector, Oakland, California. The Activity contended that the unit sought is inappropriate under Section 10(b) of the Order as the employees involved do not share a community of interest separate and distinct from other Federal Aviation Agency employees and that such unit would lead to fragmentation and would not promote effective dealings and efficiency of agency operations. It also contended, as did the Intervenor, National Association of Government Employees (NAGE), that the petitioned for unit should be included in the existing nationwide unit represented by the NAGE or remain unrepresented.

In 1971, as a result of a national Airway Facilities reorganization, the Oakland Airway Facilities Sector and the San Jose Sector were merged into what became known as the Oakland Sector. This reorganization combined some 55 employees exclusively represented by the National Association of Broadcast Employees and Technicians (NABET), employees represented by the NAGE at the San Jose Moffet Sector Field Office, and a number of unrepresented employees. In 1976, all of the employees at the Oakland Sector, except those for which the NABET was the exclusive representative and for which unit there was an agreement bar, were included in NAGE's nationwide unit as a result of the election ordered in Federal Aviation Administration and Federal Aviation Administration, Eastern Region, 5 A/SLMR 776, A/SLMR No. 600 (1975). After the PASS filed its petition in the instant proceeding, the NABET disclaimed interest in further representing the employees in the unit.

The Assistant Secretary found that the claimed unit was appropriate for the purpose of exclusive recognition. In this regard, he noted that the petitioned for unit was, in effect, a residual unit of all unrepresented nonprofessional employees of the Activity who share a clear and identifiable community of interest, and that such employees share a common mission, common overall supervision, generally similar job classifications and duties, and enjoy uniform personnel policies and practices and labor relations policies. He also found that such unit would promote effective dealings and efficiency of agency operations and would prevent further fragmentation of units at the Activity. In this regard, he noted that the claimed residual unit of all unrepresented employees had a prior bargaining history, and that such unit would lessen the potential for further fragmentation of units and would promote effective dealings as the unit would be consistent with the established bargaining experience of the parties. The Assistant Secretary noted also that to hold, as contended by the Activity and the NAGE, that the claimed employees should be unrepresented or added to the NAGE'S nationwide unit without an election, would, in effect, deny such employees who had been exclusively represented previously in a viable unit, the opportunity to freely elect a new exclusive representative in the identical unit.

In addition, the Assistant Secretary ordered that the claimed employees be included within the NAGE's nationwide unit should they select that labor organization as their exclusive representative in the election he directed.

Accordingly, the Assistant Secretary ordered an election in the unit found appropriate.

DECISION AND DIRECTION OF ELECTION

Upon a petition duly filed under Section 6 of Executive Order 11491, as amended, a hearing was held before Hearing Officer George R. Sakanari. The Hearing Officer's rulings made at the hearing are free from prejudicial error and are hereby affirmed.

Upon the entire record in this case, including briefs submitted by the Activity and the Professional Airways Systems Specialists, hereinafter called PASS, the Assistant Secretary finds:

1. The labor organizations involved claim to represent certain employees of the Activity.

2. In its amended petition, the PASS seeks an election in a unit of all unrepresented nonprofessional employees of the Airway Facilities Sector, Oakland, California. 1/ The Activity contends that the unit sought is inappropriate under Section 10(b) of the Order as the employees involved do not share a community of interest separate and distinct from other Agency employees and that such unit would lead to fragmentation and would not promote effective dealings and efficiency of agency operations. Further, it contends that the employees in the petitioned for unit should be included in the existing nationwide unit represented by the NAGE or remain unrepresented. The NAGE takes the position that the sought unit is inappropriate and that such employees should be included in its nationwide unit.

1/ The unit description in the original PASS petition appeared to include Activity employees already exclusively represented by the National Association of Government Employees, hereinafter called NAGE.

The mission of the Federal Aviation Administration (FAA) is to provide a safe and expeditious flow of aircraft in the national airspace system. The Western Region of the FAA is headed by a Regional Director. Under his jurisdiction is the Western Region's Airway Facilities Division, which is composed of four branches: the Program and Planning Branch, the Maintenance Engineering Branch, the Maintenance Operations Branch, and the Establishment Engineering Branch. The Division also contains 15 sectors, of which the Activity is one, each headed by a Sector Manager who is responsible to the Division Chief. The mission of the Activity, and all airway facilities sectors, is to maintain and operate all national airspace system facilities within the sector, assuring that performance is within established tolerances of accuracy and meets operational requirements of availability and reliability; to maintain environmental support facilities and equipment; and to effectively manage available resources.

On May 10, 1971, the National Association of Broadcast Employees and Technicians, hereinafter called NABET, was certified as the exclusive representative of a unit consisting of all employees of the Airway Facilities Sector, Oakland International Airport, Oakland, California, excluding employees engaged in Federal personnel work in other than a purely clerical capacity, professional employees, management officials, Technicians-in-Depth, Training Relief Technicians, and supervisors and guards as defined in Executive Order 11491. Previously, in 1966, NAGE Local R12-22 was granted exclusive recognition for some 10 maintenance technician employees at the Airway Facilities' San Jose Moffett Sector Field Office. At that time and until late 1971, the San Jose Sector was an adjacent but separate Sector from the Oakland Sector.

In late 1971, as part of a national Airway Facilities reorganization, the Oakland Airway Facilities Sector and the San Jose Sector were merged into what is now the Oakland Sector. It appears from the record that, as a result of this reorganization, the Oakland Sector included some 55 employees exclusively represented by the NABET, the employees represented by the NAGE at the San Jose Moffett Sector Field Office, and a number of unrepresented employees.

The history of bargaining within the Airway Facilities Division of the FAA reveals that there are sectorwide units, in some instances less than sectorwide units, and regionwide units. On December 18, 1975, the Assistant Secretary issued a Decision and Direction of Elections in Federal Aviation Administration and Federal Aviation Administration, Eastern Region, 5 A/SLMR 776, A/SLMR No. 600 (1975), finding that either a regionwide, a nationwide, or a sectorwide unit of Airway Facilities Division employees may be appropriate for the purpose of exclusive recognition under the Order. It appears from the record that as a result of the election ordered in A/SLMR No. 600 all of the Oakland Sector employees, except those in the NABET's exclusively recognized unit, were included in the NAGE's nationwide unit. ^{2/} With respect to the petitioned for unit herein, the record reveals that the PASS filed its petition on April 4, 1977, for the employees in the NABET's exclusively recognized unit and that, on April 19, 1977, the NABET disclaimed any interest in further representing the employees in its unit.

The record reveals that the claimed unit of employees formerly represented by the NABET is composed of approximately 40 of the some 94 employees of the Oakland Sector. The majority of employees in the claimed unit are classified as Electronic Technicians, GS-0856 series. Such employees are responsible for the operation of equipment such as radar, nav aids, data processing, and communication systems so that the safety of air travel will not be compromised. The qualifications for such employees are established on a nationwide basis by the FAA, and all employees engaged in such functions must be certified based on these standardized qualifications. Further, the technical handbooks utilized by such employees have been developed nationally to provide uniformity in the maintenance of equipment nationally.

The record reflects that, consistent with the FAA policy of delegating authority with respect to personnel and labor relations matters to the lowest possible level, the authority for such matters has been delegated to the Regional Director, subject to FAA guidelines. The area of consideration for promotions involving technicians may be confined to an individual sector, but may be regionwide or nationwide in scope.

^{2/} At the time of the filing of the petitions which resulted in the Decision and Direction of Elections in A/SLMR No. 600, the employees in the claimed unit herein were included in the NABET's exclusively recognized unit which was subject to an agreement bar. Therefore, the employees in the petitioned for unit were expressly excluded from the units found appropriate therein.

With regard to the Activity's bargaining history within the Oakland Sector, the record reveals that the Activity negotiated an agreement with the NABET for the employees in the claimed unit with an effective date of August 1972. The NABET agreement has been automatically renewed since 1972 and was in effect up until April 19, 1977, when, as noted above, the NABET disclaimed interest in representing the covered employees. There is no evidence that since the effective date of the NABET agreement that there has been a significant alteration in the agency's operations or any change in the mission or functions of the employees in the unit sought which would effect the previously established appropriateness of such unit. 3/

Based on all the foregoing circumstances, I find the claimed unit of all unrepresented employees of the Activity is appropriate for the purpose of exclusive recognition. 4/ Thus, the petitioned for unit is, in effect, a residual unit of all unrepresented nonprofessional employees of the Activity who share a clear and identifiable community of interest. Further, all of the unrepresented employees of the Activity share a common mission, common overall supervision, generally similar job classifications and duties, and enjoy uniform personnel policies and practices and labor relations policies. I find also that such unit will promote effective dealings and efficiency of agency operations and will prevent further fragmentation of units at the Activity. Thus, where, as here, the petitioned for employees constitute a residual unit of all unrepresented employees and, indeed, such employees have a prior bargaining history, in my view, such a unit will lessen the potential for further fragmentation of units and will promote effective dealings as it is consistent with the established bargaining experience of the parties. 5/ Further, to hold, as contended by the Activity and the NAGE, that the claimed employees should be unrepresented, or added to the NAGE's nationwide unit

3/ As indicated above, the abortion of the negotiated agreement between the Activity and the NABET was not attributable to any change in the scope of the bargaining unit, effective dealings, or efficiency of agency operations. Rather, the NABET disclaimed interest in further representing the unit.

4/ Cf. Department of Transportation, Federal Aviation Administration, O'Hare Airway Facility Sector, Chicago, Illinois, A/SLMR No. 927 (1977).

5/ As noted above, there has been a long bargaining history in the petitioned for unit and no evidence that such unit has failed to promote effective dealings and efficiency of agency operations.

without an election, would, in effect, deny such employees who have been exclusively represented previously in a viable unit, the opportunity to freely elect a new exclusive representative in the identical unit. 6/

Accordingly, I find that the following residual unit, previously represented by the NABET, is appropriate for the purpose of exclusive recognition under Section 10(b) of Executive Order 11491, as amended:

All employees of the Airway Facilities Sector, Oakland, California, excluding all professional employees, employees in current exclusively recognized units, employees engaged in Federal personnel work in other than a purely clerical capacity, management officials, and supervisors as defined in Executive Order 11491, as amended.

In view of the NAGE's clear intention to have the unit found appropriate included within its existing nationwide unit, I find that the employees in such unit should be afforded the opportunity to choose whether or not they wish to become part of the existing nationwide unit represented by the NAGE. Accordingly, if a majority of the employees in the unit found appropriate votes for the NAGE, they will be taken to have indicated their desire to be included in the existing nationwide unit represented by that labor organization and the appropriate Area Administrator will issue a certification to that effect. If, on the other hand, a majority of the employees votes for the PASS, they will be taken to have indicated their desire to be included in the separate residual unit found appropriate and the appropriate Area Administrator will issue a certification to that effect.

DIRECTION OF ELECTION

An election by secret ballot shall be conducted among the employees in the unit found appropriate as soon as possible but not later than 60 days from the date below. The appropriate Area Administrator shall supervise the election, subject to the Assistant Secretary's Regulations. Eligible to vote are those in the unit who were employed during the payroll period immediately preceding the date below including employees who did not work during that period because they were out ill or on vacation or on furlough, including those in the military service who appear in person at the polls. Ineligible to vote are employees who quit or who were discharged for cause since the designated payroll period and who have not been rehired or reinstated before the election date.

6/ In any event, as indicated below, should the claimed employees select the NAGE as their exclusive representative in the unit found appropriate, such unit will be added to the NAGE's nationwide unit.

Those eligible shall vote whether they desire to be represented for the purpose of exclusive recognition by the Professional Airways Systems Specialists, the National Association of Government Employees, or no labor organization.

UNITED STATES DEPARTMENT OF LABOR
ASSISTANT SECRETARY FOR LABOR-MANAGEMENT RELATIONS
SUMMARY OF DECISION AND ORDER OF THE ASSISTANT SECRETARY
PURSUANT TO SECTION 6 OF EXECUTIVE ORDER 11491, AS AMENDED

Because the unit found appropriate is substantially different than that originally petitioned for, I direct that the Activity, as soon as possible, shall post copies of a Notice of Unit Determination, which shall be furnished by the appropriate Area Administrator, in places where notices are normally posted affecting the employees in the unit found appropriate. Such notice shall conform in all respects to the requirements of Section 202.4(b) and (c) of the Assistant Secretary's Regulations. Further, any labor organization which seeks to intervene in this matter must do so in accordance with the requirements of Section 202.5 of the Assistant Secretary's Regulations. Any timely intervention will be granted solely for the purpose of appearing on the ballot.

A/SLMR No. 1011

This case involved an unfair labor practice complaint filed by the Service Employees International Union, Local 556, AFL-CIO (Complainant) alleging that the Respondent violated Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order by failing to bargain in good faith and by unilaterally altering the wording of a provision of an Article in a proposed negotiated agreement after a final accord was purportedly reached on such provision.

Subsequent to the time that representatives of the Complainant and the Respondent signed Article 18 of the proposed negotiated agreement, the Complainant notified the Respondent of an alleged discrepancy between the provisions of the signed Article and the notes the Complainant had taken at a prior negotiating session. Thereafter, the Respondent offered to negotiate on the alleged discrepancy. However, the Complainant insisted that the Article be changed to reflect the position indicated by its notes and no satisfactory agreement or resolution of differences was reached.

The Administrative Law Judge found no evidence in the record which would warrant reformation or modification of the Article in dispute. He noted also that the Respondent had offered to and, in fact, did meet and confer with the Complainant on the alleged discrepancy but that it was the Complainant which was inflexible. Accordingly, he found that the Respondent did not violate Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order.

Noting particularly the absence of exceptions, the Assistant Secretary adopted the findings, conclusions and recommendation of the Administrative Law Judge, and ordered that the complaint be dismissed.

DECISION AND ORDER

On January 5, 1978, Administrative Law Judge Rhea M. Burrow issued his Recommended Decision in the above-entitled proceeding, finding that the Respondent had not engaged in the unfair labor practices alleged in the complaint and recommending that the complaint be dismissed in its entirety. No exceptions were filed to the Administrative Law Judge's Recommended Decision.

The Assistant Secretary has reviewed the rulings of the Administrative Law Judge made at the hearing and finds that no prejudicial error was committed. The rulings are hereby affirmed. Upon consideration of the entire record in the subject case, and noting particularly that no exceptions were filed, I hereby adopt the Administrative Law Judge's findings, conclusions, and recommendation. 1/

This is an unfair labor practice proceeding in which a formal hearing of record was held on July 20, 1977, in Honolulu, Hawaii pursuant to Executive Order 11491, as amended (hereinafter referred to as the Order). The Respondent was charged with violating Sections 19(a) (1) and (6) of the Order by failing to bargain in good faith and unilaterally altering the wording of a provision of a collective bargaining agreement after a final accord was purportedly reached upon such provision. 1/ Upon the basis of the entire record, 2/ including the evidence adduced, timely brief, my observation of the witnesses and judgment of their credibility, I make the following findings, conclusions and recommendations.

Findings of Fact

1. Complainant, Services Employees International Union, Local 556 AFL-CIO, is and was at all times material herein, the authorized collective bargaining representative to the unit consisting of all nonsupervisory employees, including off duty military personnel, of the Billeting Non Appropriated Fund Activity, 15th Air Force Base Wing, Hickam Air Force Base, Hawaii.

2. From about early November 1976, through February 1977, the parties were engaged from time to time in negotiating a collective bargaining agreement.

1/ The specific complaint is set forth as follows: "The above named activity has engaged in conduct violative of Sections 19(a)(1) and (6) in that Mr. Robert J. Rosen, Chief negotiator for the activity has failed to bargain in good faith. During negotiations on December 17, 1976, agreement was reached by the parties on the content of Article 18, Section 3. On January 5, 1977, Article 18 was signed off by the parties. Upon final proof reading of the negotiated agreement by the Union negotiators, it was found that the content of Article 18, Section 3 as it was signed off, did not conform to the agreement reached on December 17, 1976. Mr. Rosen refuses to abide by the agreement reached on December 17 and denies the existence of such agreement. Mr. Rosen also refused to disclose the Activity's notes on negotiations when the parties met on February 14, 1977 to attempt to informally resolve the complaint.

2/ The 15th Air Force Base Wing letter of March 16, 1977, with attachments, addressed to Mr. Dale Bennett, Area Administrator of the Honolulu Office of the LMSA and the Department of Labor request of March 4, 1977 are pursuant to a stipulation of the parties dated August 10, 1977 made a part of the Assistant Secretary's Exhibits.

3. One of the items under consideration and occasionally discussed by the parties, concerned Article 18 of a proposed agreement relating to "Disciplinary Actions," Section 3 of Article 18 pertained to "...situations where the disciplinary actions consists of a written reprimand..." After various proposals and counterproposals or changes the parties finally on January 5, 1977 signed Article 18 of the proposed agreement including Section 3, thereof which read

"Section 3. In situations where the disciplinary action consists of a written reprimand, the reprimand will be issued within 10 workdays of the preliminary discussion unless the union representative is notified of circumstances which would make its issuance impractical. The letter of reprimand will specify the infraction of regulations or the improper conduct, or the action which prompted it and where possible, state the time and place of occurrence. The letter will inform the employee that he may grieve the reprimand at Step 2 under the negotiated procedure." 3/

4. The Complainant Union maintains that "preliminary discussions" contained in Article 18, Section 3, were not mentioned in the negotiating session with the Activity on December 17, 1976, or on January 5, 1977, when Complainant signed Article 18, Section 3, containing the sentence: "In situations where the disciplinary action consists of a written reprimand, the reprimand will be issued within 10 workdays of the preliminary discussion unless the union representative is notified of circumstances which makes its issuance impractical."

Katy Mikasa, business agent for Complainant and one of its negotiators testified that the matter of preliminary discussions was raised with reference to more severe disciplinary actions such as suspensions and removals but not in connection with written reprimands. Gregory Elliott, Vice President of Local 556, testified that the matter of preliminary discussion was raised only in connection with severe disciplinary actions and not in connection with letters of reprimand. Robert Rosen, Respondent's Labor Relations Specialist, testified from notes he took at the December 17, 1976 meeting with Complainant and stated that the term preliminary discussion was mentioned with regard to Article 18, Section 3. His note in shorthand was stated to read:

3/ Management's counterproposal dated December 17, 1976, read: "In situations where the disciplinary action consists of a written reprimand, the reprimand will be issued in a timely manner. The letter of Reprimand will specify the infraction of regulations or the improper conduct, or the action which prompted it and where possible, state the time and place of occurrence. The letter will inform the employee that he may grieve the reprimand at Step 2 of the negotiated agreement."

"Must have discussion and then add in Section 3 the previous provision I read about ten work days."

While the testimony between the parties is conflicting, I find that the notes taken by Robert Rosen contemporaneous with the December 17, 1976 meeting more accurately reflect the elements of discussion at that meeting. This is especially so, since preparation and negotiated changes fell within his realm to present at the ensuing meeting for consideration and/or adoption.

5. Despite previous proposals and counterproposals regarding Article 18, Section 3, this section was signed without comment or protest by both Complainant and Respondent representatives on January 5, 1977.

6. The methods and procedures utilized in formalizing Article 18, Section 3, presented to the Union for consideration on January 5, 1977, was not different from those of other sections of the proposed agreement reached by the parties.

7. The alleged discrepancy by Complainant relating to the term preliminary discussion contained in Article 18, Section 3 and signed by the parties on January 5, 1977, was initially called to Respondent Rosen's attention on January 24, 1977.

8. Even after Article 18, Section 3 was signed, the Respondent offered to negotiate after the alleged discrepancy was called to its attention but no satisfactory agreement or resolution of differences in position was reached.

Discussion and Conclusions

Section 19 of Executive Order 11491 relates to Unfair Labor Practices and provides in part, as follows:

(a) Agency management shall not -

(1) interfere with, restrain, or coerce an employee in the exercise of the rights assured by this Order;

(6) refuse to consult, confer, or negotiate with a labor organization as required by this Order.

The same obligation as is imposed upon Agency management in Section 19(a)(6) is also imposed on a labor organization by Section 19(b)(6).

The documentary and oral evidence clearly establishes that there had been several prior discussions relating to Article 18, Section 3, before the parties signed and signified their approval of its provisions on January 5, 1977. The parties who acknowledged, signed and negotiated Article 18 of the proposed Agreement on January 5, 1977, were the same as those who had participated in the previous discussions and were thus intimately aware of previous differences between the Union and Management Activity. Under such circumstances it was their duty and responsibility to carefully read and consider the language contained in the provisions of Article 18 before signifying their approval.

U.S. Civil Service Commission's Office of Labor Management Relations Information Guide (OLMR Info. Guide No. 7528 dated July 8, 1975) states:

Where agreement has been reached on the substantive provisions of the contract, the refusal to consider changes or additions to such agreements at this point does not constitute bad faith bargaining in violation of Section 19(a)(6). Obviously, the negotiations must have some form of finality; reconsideration of previously resolved matters, absent mutual assent, does not permit such finality.

More important than the provision of the cited guideline, the Assistant Secretary for Labor Management Relations in Community Service Administration, A/SLMR No. 749 stated with reference to the disputed version which appeared in a draft copy of Amendment 11, initialed at an earlier date by the parties that:

"While I agree with the Administrative Law Judge that where the language of an agreement clearly does not reflect what the parties agreed to it may be reformed, I do not view the evidence herein as clearly establishing that the language appearing in the final printed version of Amendment 11 did not reflect the parties agreement. Thus, reformation of an agreement is a remedy accorded by courts of equity to parties only where the agreement fails through fraud or mutual mistake to express the real agreement or intention of the parties. In this regard, two rules have been firmly established in equity to avoid needless disputes: First, that the burden is on the complaining party to prove the mutual mistake, or the mistake of one party and the deceit, fraud, or other inequitable conduct of the other upon which he relies for a modification or avoidance of the agreement; and, second, that in view of the written record of the terms of the agreement, a preponderance of the evidence is insufficient, and nothing less than evidence that is plain and convincing beyond reasonable controversy will constitute such proof as will warrant a modification or reformation of a written agreement." 4/

The evidence in the instant case establishes that Complainant's agents Mikasa and Elliott were experienced in negotiating contracts; they were present at the several drafting sessions when Article 18, Section 3, was discussed and on January 5, 1977 when it was signed by them. Further, by Complainant's own testimony it was disclosed that because of the nature of the billeting services, it is often more than a month before an incident, particularly with reference to lost articles is discovered. To insist on language Complainants now claim was agreed to, would make the Section ambiguous and perhaps unenforceable. In view of the past position of management in the drafting sessions, I do not find that Complainant has shown there was mutual mistake, or other mistake of one party coupled with deceit, fraud, or other inequitable conduct of the other upon which it relied as a basis for a modification, change, or avoidance of the agreement. Further, in view of the written record of the terms of Article 18, Section 3, the evidence is not so plain and convincing beyond reasonable controversy as would constitute proof sufficient to warrant modification or reformation of the terms of Article 18, Section 3. 5/ Further, when Respondent offered to confer, consult and negotiate with respect to Article 18, Section 3, when the alleged discrepancy was called to its attention almost three weeks after the Section had been signed by the parties, Complainants' position was inflexible, it insisted that Section 3 be changed or adopted to reflect the position indicated by its notes rather than the signed version of January 5, 1977. If there was any refusal to consult, confer or negotiate in good faith regarding Article 18, Section 3, in this proceeding, the record does not establish it was on the part of the Respondent.

From the foregoing, I conclude that:

- (1) the Respondent did not refuse to consult, confer, or negotiate with a labor organization as required by this Order;
- (2) the Respondent did not interfere with, restrain, or coerce an employee in the exercise of the rights assured by this Order.
- (3) The Complainant has not sustained its burden of proving by a preponderance of the evidence that the Respondent violated the provisions of Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order.

RECOMMENDATION

Upon the basis of the above findings, conclusions, and the entire record, I recommend to the Assistant Secretary that the complaint in Case No. 73-933(CA), be dismissed in its entirety.

DECISION AND ORDER

This matter is before the Assistant Secretary pursuant to Regional Administrator Hilary M. Sheply's order transferring case to the Assistant Secretary of Labor in accordance with Section 203.5(b), 203.7(a)(4) and 206.5(a) of the Assistant Secretary's Regulations.

Upon consideration of the entire record in the subject case, including the parties' stipulation of facts, accompanying exhibits and briefs, the Assistant Secretary finds:

The complaint herein alleges that the Respondent violated Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of Executive Order 11491, as amended, when its agent, the Naval Air Systems Command, hereinafter called NASC, directed the realignment of its field activities at Lakehurst, New Jersey, without prior national consultation with the National Federation of Federal Employees, hereinafter called NFFE or Complainant.

The undisputed facts, as stipulated by the parties, are as follows:

The NFFE was granted national consultation rights by the Department of the Navy, a primary national subdivision of the Department of Defense, on May 25, 1971, in accordance with Section 9(a) of the Order and implementing instructions of the Federal Labor Relations Council, hereinafter called the Council. Administration of the Respondent's national consultation rights program has been delegated to the Office of Civilian Personnel, the Respondent in the subject case.

This case involved an unfair labor practice complaint filed by the National Federation of Federal Employees (NFFE) alleging that the Respondent violated Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order when its agent, the Naval Air Systems Command (NASC), directed the realignment of its field activities at Lakehurst, New Jersey, without prior national consultation with the NFFE, which held national consultation rights with the Department of the Navy.

Based on the stipulation of facts, accompanying exhibits, and briefs filed by the parties, the Assistant Secretary held that the Respondent's failure to notify the NFFE of the proposed substantive change in personnel policy violated Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order as it deprived the NFFE of its right under Section 9(b) to comment on the proposed change. He concluded further that the Respondent violated Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order by not affording the Complainant the opportunity to consult on the impact and implementing procedures of the change. In reaching the conclusion that the Respondent improperly failed to give notice to the Complainant, the Assistant Secretary found that the proposed change involved a substantive personnel policy within the meaning of the Regulations of the Federal Labor Relations Council.

Accordingly, the Assistant Secretary ordered the Respondent to cease and desist from the conduct found violative and to take certain affirmative actions.

In an Office of the Assistant Secretary of Defense News Release dated March 17, 1976, the Secretary of the Navy proposed management actions designed to improve overall fleet readiness through reductions in overhead and support costs. Among the proposed actions was a study for possible termination of air operations and consolidation of the remaining support functions at the Naval Air Engineering Center, Lakehurst, New Jersey, in Fiscal Year 1977. Approximately 13 military and 59 civilian jobs were to be affected. Thereafter, in a memorandum to the Chief of Naval Material, 1/ dated April 5, 1976, the Chief of Naval Operations, hereinafter called CNO, who is directly responsible to the Secretary of the Navy, nominated the Naval Air Station, Lakehurst, New Jersey, along with two other Naval activities, as "candidate realignment proposals." In this connection, the CNO referenced as the basis for his nominations the news release of the Secretary of the Navy, and reduced ceilings on support personnel required by the Department of Defense.

In a memorandum dated May 25, 1976, the Chief of the NASC directed the consolidation of the three commands at Lakehurst--the Naval Air Test Facility, the Naval Air Station, and the Naval Air Engineering Center--in order to effectuate the personnel reduction required by the April 5 memorandum from the CNO. 2/ The consolidation of support services was directed to be effectuated on October 1, 1976, the beginning of the Fiscal Year, and was to involve the reduction of 59 civilian positions as stated in the Secretary of the Navy's news release of March 17, 1976.

Findings and Conclusions

The central issue herein is whether the action taken at Lakehurst involved a substantive change in a personnel policy about which the Respondent was obligated to consult within the meaning of Section 9(b) of the Executive Order. 3/ The Respondent's position is that even assuming arguendo that the

- 1/ The Respondent's motion to correct the name of the "Naval" Material Command from "Navy" Material Command as it appears in the stipulation of facts is hereby granted.
- 2/ The NASC is a subordinate command of the Department of the Navy assigned to the Naval Material Command which, in turn, is directly responsible to the CNO.
- 3/ In its brief, the Respondent argued, among other things, that the instant complaint should be dismissed because it specified the actions of the NASC, rather than the Department of Defense (the Agency), or the Department of the Navy (the primary national subdivision), as being violative of the Order. In my view, the complaint herein is adequate as it names the Department of the Navy, Office of Civilian Personnel, as the Respondent and the Secretary of the Navy as the person to contact, and as the Complainant's clear thrust in specifying the NASC memorandum in its complaint was to point out an act of an agent of the primary national subdivision involved. It is noted, in this regard, that the Complainant was not given notice of the Secretary of the Navy's news release, nor was there any evidence that it knew of the CNO's implementing memorandum, except by reference in the NASC memorandum. Moreover, the Respondent's statement in its brief that the May 25 memorandum "...was a communication implementing instructions from higher authority..." was considered to be an indication that it too viewed the NASC Chief's action as that of an agent of the CNO.

action taken at Lakehurst was directed by a primary national subdivision, such action was not a proposed substantive change in a personnel policy within the meaning of Section 9(b) of the Executive Order and Section 2412.1 of the Council's Rules and Regulations. 4/ The Respondent argues that the consolidation of facilities at Lakehurst was not a substantive personnel policy within the meaning of the Council's definition because it was a one-time change at a single facility that was required by the Agency's mission and its organizational needs. I disagree.

The specified action set forth by the May 25, 1976, NASC memorandum was the Complainant's first notice of an agency-wide proposal for consolidation of its support facilities as outlined in the Secretary of the Navy's news release which was being carried out at three widely dispersed Naval facilities through the CNO's memorandum. 5/ Consistent with Section 2412.1 of the Council's Rules and Regulations, such an agency-wide consolidation proposal clearly would create and define the conditions relating to employee and labor organization rights, such as competitive areas for reduction in force and unit definitions. Moreover, the proposal sets a definite course of action which was to be followed by subordinate echelons as exemplified in the NASC's implementing memorandum, and it was formulated within the discretionary authority of the Secretary of the Navy as the method by which he proposed to achieve the lowered ceilings required by the Department of Defense.

The Council's Rules and Regulations also require that the proposed change be substantive in nature, i.e., a "change in the established rights of employees or labor organizations or the conditions relating to such rights." In the instant case, the proposal by the Secretary of the Navy to consolidate support activities agency-wide necessarily will result in the displacement of employees. Thus, here, as in Secretary of the Navy, Department of the Navy, Pentagon, A/SLMR No. 924 (1977), I view such a displacement as a fundamental substantive change in personnel policy. Under these circumstances, I find that the Respondent's failure to notify the NFFE of a proposed substantive change in a substantive personnel policy violated

4/ Section 2412.1 reads, in part:

Substantive personnel policy means a standard or rule which (a) creates and defines rights of employees or labor organizations, including conditions relating to such rights; (b) sets a definite course or method of action to guide and determine procedures and decisions of subordinate organizational units on a personnel or labor relations matter; and (c) is formulated within the discretionary authority of the issuing organization and is not merely a restatement of a course or method of action prescribed by higher authority.

Substantive change in personnel policy means a change in the established rights of employees or labor organizations or the conditions relating to such rights.

5/ The other facilities are the Navy Publications and Printing Service Offices in Washington, D. C., and the Naval Electronics Laboratory Center/Naval Under-seas Center, San Diego, California.

Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order, as it deprived the Complainant of its right under Section 9(b) to comment on the proposed change. 6/

As I stated in Secretary of the Navy, Department of the Navy, Pentagon, cited above, Section 9(b) confers upon an agency an additional obligation, i.e., the obligation to consult with labor organizations holding national consultation rights over proposed substantive changes in personnel policy. However, this obligation is expressly limited by Section 9(b) to consulting over matters which would be negotiable and not reserved to management under the Order. In this regard, I agree with the Respondent that its decision dealing with the consolidation of support services and the resulting displacement of employees involves matters that are reserved to management under Section 11(b) and 12(b) of the Order, and no obligation exists to consult over the decision itself. However, I find that the Respondent was obligated to afford the Complainant prior notice of its proposed substantive change in a substantive personnel policy so as to afford the latter a reasonable opportunity to consult in person and present its views in writing regarding the impact and implementation of the proposed substantive change. 7/ Accordingly, I conclude that its failure to notify the Complainant and afford it the opportunity to consult on the impact and implementation of the proposed substantive change violated Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order.

ORDER

Pursuant to Section 6(b) of Executive Order 11491, as amended, and Section 203.26(b) of the Regulations, the Assistant Secretary of Labor for Labor-Management Relations hereby orders that the Department of the Navy, Office of Civilian Personnel, shall:

1. Cease and desist from:

(a) Failing and refusing to notify the National Federation of Federal Employees, pursuant to its national consultation rights under the Order, of a proposed substantive change in personnel policy that affects employees it represents, and provide it with an opportunity to comment on such proposed substantive change.

(b) Failing to provide an opportunity for the National Federation of Federal Employees to consult in person and to present its views in writing on a proposed substantive change in personnel policy.

(c) In any like or related manner interfering with, restraining, or coercing its employees in the exercise of their rights assured by Executive Order 11491, as amended.

2. Take the following affirmative actions in order to effectuate the purposes and policies of Executive Order 11491, as amended:

6/ Secretary of the Navy, Department of the Navy, Pentagon, cited above.

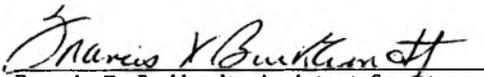

7/ See Tidwater Virginia Federal Employees Metal Trades Council and Naval Public Works Center, FLRC No. 71A-56 (1973).

(a) Upon request of the National Federation of Federal Employees, pursuant to its national consultation rights under the Order, consult with that organization, to the extent consonant with law and regulations, concerning the procedures used to implement the Agency's new consolidation of support services policy and the impact of the change in policy on the adversely affected employees.

(b) Post at units of all affected Department of the Navy facilities and installations where the Complainant is the exclusive representative copies of the attached notice marked "Appendix" on forms to be furnished by the Assistant Secretary of Labor for Labor-Management Relations. Upon receipt of such forms they shall be signed by the Director of the Office of Civilian Personnel and shall be posted and maintained for 60 consecutive days thereafter, in conspicuous places, including bulletin boards and other places where notices to employees are customarily posted. The Commanding Officer of each facility or installation shall take reasonable steps to insure that such notices are not altered, defaced, or covered by any other material.

(c) Pursuant to Section 203.27 of the Regulations, notify the Assistant Secretary, in writing, within 30 days from the date of the order as to what steps have been taken to comply herewith.

ASSISTANT SECRETARY FOR LABOR-MANAGEMENT RELATIONS
SUMMARY OF DECISION AND DIRECTION OF ELECTION OF THE ASSISTANT SECRETARY
PURSUANT TO SECTION 6 OF EXECUTIVE ORDER 11491, AS AMENDED

THE SMITHSONIAN INSTITUTION
A/SLMR No. 1013

This case involved a petition filed by the American Federation of Government Employees, AFL-CIO, Local 2463 (AFGE) seeking an election in a residual nationwide unit of all currently unrepresented nonprofessional General Schedule (GS) and Wage Grade (WG) employees of the Agency. The AFGE took the position that the petitioned for unit is inherently appropriate because it includes all unrepresented GS and WG nonprofessional employees of the Agency, nationwide. The Agency asserted, among other things, that the AFGE should have first consolidated its existing units at the Smithsonian before filing the petition herein.

The Assistant Secretary found that all the unrepresented GS and WG employees of the Agency, nationwide, constituted an appropriate unit for the purpose of exclusive recognition under the Order. In reaching this conclusion, he noted that employees in the claimed residual unit are engaged in a common mission, and are subject to similar personnel policies and practices established by Civil Service laws and by the Agency. Thus, the Assistant Secretary concluded that the petitioned for employees share a clear and identifiable community of interest. Moreover, he found that the claimed residual unit could reasonably be expected to promote effective dealings and efficiency of agency operations. With respect to the Agency's contention that the AFGE should have first consolidated its existing units at the Smithsonian before filing the petition herein, the Assistant Secretary noted that the determination of the appropriateness of the petitioned for unit in the instant case is a separate and independent determination from any determination of appropriateness under the unit consolidation procedures. He noted also that petitions for consolidation may be filed by agencies as well as labor organizations should the agency involved believe this appropriate in a particular situation.

Accordingly, the Assistant Secretary ordered an election in the unit found appropriate.

DECISION AND DIRECTION OF ELECTION

Upon a petition duly filed under Section 6 of Executive Order 11491, as amended, a hearing was held before Hearing Officer Daniel Francis Sutton. The Hearing Officer's rulings made at the hearing are free from prejudicial error and are hereby affirmed.

Upon the entire record in this case, including a joint statement filed by the parties after the hearing, the Assistant Secretary finds:

1. The labor organization involved claims to represent certain employees of the Agency.
2. The Petitioner, American Federation of Government Employees, AFL-CIO, Local 2463, hereinafter called AFGE Local 2463, seeks essentially an election in a residual nationwide unit of all currently unrepresented nonprofessional General Schedule (GS) and Wage Grade (WG) employees of the Smithsonian Institution. 1/ In this regard, it takes the position that the petitioned for unit is inherently appropriate because it includes all unrepresented GS and WG nonprofessional employees of the Agency nationwide. On the other hand, the Agency asserts that AFGE Local 2463 should have first consolidated its existing units at the Smithsonian Institution before filing the petition herein, and that the unit sought is inappropriate inasmuch as it does not bear a resemblance to the Agency's organizational structure.

The mission of the Smithsonian Institution is to foster the increase and diffusion of knowledge. Created by an Act of Congress in 1846, the Agency is currently a leading research center and museum complex which conducts scientific and scholarly research, administers national collections, and performs other educational public service functions. The chief executive officer of the Agency is the Secretary of the Smithsonian who is responsible for administering the day-to-day affairs of the Institution. Under him organizationally are the Under Secretary, Assistant Secretaries for Science, History and Art, Public Service, Museum Programs, and certain Administrative Officers, such as the General Counsel, Treasurer, Auditor, Director of Support Activities, Coordinator of Membership and Development, as well as over 60 bureaus and activities. In addition, the Agency has a number of boards and commissions.

1/ At the hearing, AFGE Local 2463 amended its petition seeking to represent "all currently unrepresented, appropriated fund, nonsupervisory, non-professional, General Schedule and Wage Grade employees of the Smithsonian Institution, nationwide."

The record discloses that the petitioned for unit consists of approximately 1,400 GS and WG employees located throughout the Agency within the United States. At present, AFGE Local 2463 represents exclusively some 1,073 GS and WG employees of the Agency. In this connection, the record shows that, within the United States, AFGE Local 2463 is the exclusive representative of units of the nonprofessional GS and WG employees in: the National Zoological Park, excepting park police, 2/ the Craft Services Division (formerly the Mechanical Services Division), the Photographic Services Division, the Protective Services Division, the Office of Exhibits Programs, and certain employees of the Office of Plant Services. All of AFGE Local 2463's units are covered by negotiated agreements with the Agency.

The Agency's GS and WG employees, including those employees in the petitioned for unit, are in the Civil Service, are subject to the rules and regulations of the Civil Service Commission, and have identical benefit, health and retirement plans, the same annual and sick leave accrual system and pay schedules. Further, they are covered by similar personnel policies and practices established by the Secretary of the Smithsonian and coordinated by the Agency's Personnel Office. In this latter regard, they share the same overall merit, equal opportunity and labor relations programs of the Agency and have similar occupational codes and classifications. The record reveals that the Personnel Office at the Agency provides advice, guidance and technical assistance in labor-management relations matters and that negotiated agreements are reviewed and given final approval by the Secretary of the Smithsonian Institution, or the Acting Secretary.

Based on all of the foregoing circumstances, I find that the petitioned for nationwide residual unit is appropriate for the purpose of exclusive recognition under the Order. Thus, the evidence demonstrates that employees in the claimed residual unit are engaged in a common mission, and are subject to similar personnel policies and practices established by Civil Service laws and by the Agency. Under these circumstances, I find that the employees in the petitioned for unit share a clear and identifiable community of interest.

2/ AFGE Local 185 has represented park police at the National Zoological Park since 1963.

Moreover, in my view, the petitioned for residual unit can reasonably be expected to promote effective dealings and efficiency of agency operations. Thus, in addition to the existence of uniform agency personnel policies and practices, it was noted that the Agency's Personnel Office gives advice and guidance in labor-management relations matters and that negotiated agreements are reviewed and approved by the Secretary of the Smithsonian. With respect to the Agency's contention that the unit is inappropriate because it does not bear a resemblance to the Agency's organizational structure, the record reflects that a number of the existing exclusively recognized units consist of divisions or offices whose employees are located physically at a number of different facilities of the Agency and that this has not hindered the Agency in the negotiation or administration of negotiated agreements. Therefore, the petitioned for unit of all the remaining unrepresented GS and WC employees will, in fact, prevent further fragmentation and will also, in my view, promote effective dealings and efficiency of agency operations. 3/

Accordingly, I shall order an election in the following unit which I find appropriate for the purpose of exclusive recognition under Executive Order 11491, as amended:

All the unrepresented General Schedule and Wage Grade employees of the Smithsonian Institution, nationwide, excluding management officials, professional employees, confidential employees, employees engaged in Federal personnel work in other than a purely clerical capacity and supervisors as defined in the Order.

DIRECTION OF ELECTION

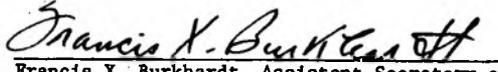

An election by secret ballot shall be conducted among employees in the unit found appropriate, as early as possible, but not later than 60 days from the date below. The appropriate Area Administrator shall supervise the election, subject to the Assistant Secretary's Regulations. Eligible to vote are those who are employed during the payroll period immediately preceding the date below, including employees who did not work during that period because they were out ill or on vacation or on furlough, including those in the military service who appear in person at the polls. Ineligible to vote are employees who have quit or were discharged for cause since the designated payroll period and who have not been rehired or reinstated before the election date. Those eligible shall vote whether or not they desire to be represented for the purpose of exclusive recognition by the American Federation of Government Employees, AFL-CIO, Local 2463.

3/ Regarding the Agency's contention that AFGE Local 2463 should seek to consolidate its existing units before petitioning for the remainder of the unrepresented nonprofessional GS and WC employees herein, it should be noted that the determination of the appropriateness of the petitioned for unit herein is a separate and independent determination from any determination of appropriateness under the unit consolidation procedures. Moreover, it is noted that petitions for consolidation of units (UC) may be filed by agencies as well as labor organizations should the agency involved believe this appropriate in a particular situation.

Case No. 40-7435(CA)

NATIONAL TREASURY EMPLOYEES
UNION AND NATIONAL TREASURY
EMPLOYEES UNION, CHAPTER 26

Complainant

This case involved an unfair labor practice complaint filed by the National Treasury Employees Union and National Treasury Employees Union, Chapter 26 (Complainant) alleging the Respondent violated Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order by denying the Complainant the right to be represented at a formal discussion within the meaning of Section 10(e) of the Order.

The Administrative Law Judge concluded the Respondent had not violated Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order. In his view, the meeting involved herein between management and unit employees was not a formal discussion within the meaning of Section 10(e) of the Order.

Contrary to the Administrative Law Judge, the Assistant Secretary found that the Respondent violated Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order. The Assistant Secretary concluded the meeting in question was a formal discussion within the meaning of Section 10(e) of the Order because part of the meeting concerned the discussion of three memoranda relating to personnel policies and practices and working conditions of employees in the unit. In reaching this conclusion, the Assistant Secretary did not view the scope of Section 10(e) of the Order so narrowly as to encompass only discussions concerning changes or proposed changes in personnel policies and practices or other matters affecting the general working conditions of employees in the unit. Rather, in his view, Section 10(e) requires the exclusive representative be afforded the opportunity to be represented at discussions between management and unit employees when the subject matter being discussed concerns personnel policies and practices and working conditions of bargaining unit employees. Thus, in the Assistant Secretary's opinion, the exclusive representative has a legitimate interest in representing the unit employees' interests regarding the terms and conditions of employment, including matters in an existing negotiated agreement. He noted that the exclusion of the exclusive representative from such discussions would result in bypassing the exclusive representative regarding the very matters for which it was chosen by the unit employees to act as their spokesman.

Accordingly, the Assistant Secretary ordered the Respondent to cease and desist from the conduct found violative of the Order and take certain affirmative actions.

DECISION AND ORDER

On October 31, 1977, Administrative Law Judge David W. Pelkey issued his Report and Recommendation in the above-entitled proceeding, finding that the Respondent had not engaged in the unfair labor practices alleged in the complaint and recommending that the complaint be dismissed in its entirety. Thereafter, the Complainant filed exceptions and a supporting brief with respect to the Administrative Law Judge's Report and Recommendation.

The Assistant Secretary has reviewed the rulings of the Administrative Law Judge made at the hearing and finds that no prejudicial error was committed. The rulings are hereby affirmed. Upon consideration of the Administrative Law Judge's Report and Recommendation and the entire record in the subject case, including the exceptions and supporting brief filed by the Complainant, I hereby adopt the Administrative Law Judge's findings, conclusions, and recommendation, only to the extent consistent herewith.

The complaint herein alleges, in essence, that the Respondent violated Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order when it failed to notify and afford the Complainant an opportunity to attend a meeting conducted by management with employees concerning personnel policies and practices affecting working conditions of employees in the unit. The Administrative Law Judge concluded that the Respondent had not violated Section

19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order as, in his view, the meeting in question, held on November 13, 1975, was not a formal discussion within the meaning of Section 10(e) of the Order. 1/

The essential facts of the case, which are not in dispute, are set forth, in detail, in the Administrative Law Judge's Report and Recommendation, and I shall repeat them only to the extent necessary.

The record reveals that a detachment of the Respondent's employees are assigned to, and perform their duties in, Columbia, South Carolina. These employees are under the direct supervision of the Group Manager-Employee Plans, hereinafter called the Group Manager, who is stationed at the Respondent's office in Atlanta, Georgia. Periodically, the Group Manager visits the detachment and conducts meetings with the employees there. On or about September 22, 1975, the Complainant and the Respondent executed a "Memorandum of Agreement" which provided, in part, that bargaining unit employees who perform their duties at a geographic location separated from the rest of the bargaining unit may be represented for certain purposes by a representative of the Complainant who is not normally associated with that bargaining unit.

On or about November 13, 1975, the Group Manager met with the employees in Columbia, South Carolina. Neither she, nor any other official of the Respondent, notified the Complainant about, or afforded the Complainant the opportunity to attend, the meeting. Although the subject matter of the meeting was not divulged to either the employees or the Complainant prior to the meeting, one of the employees requested that a representative of Complainant attend the meeting. The Group Manager, however, refused to allow the Complainant's representative to attend the meeting stating, in essence, that no changes in personnel policies and practices or other matters affecting working conditions were to be discussed. Thereafter, during the meeting with the employees, the Group Manager, among other things, distributed copies of three memoranda from the Respondent addressed to all employees. These memoranda were variously entitled, "Restoration of Annual Leave," "Open Season for Health Benefits - November 15 through December 31, 1975," and "Employee's Responsibilities in Timekeeping." She also discussed the subject matter of each of these memoranda with the employees during the meeting.

The Respondent contends, among other things, that the November 13 meeting was not a formal discussion within the meaning of Section 10(e) of the Order since the purpose of the meeting was not to announce or make any changes in personnel policies and practices, or other matters affecting general working conditions of employees in the unit. On the other hand, the Complainant asserts, among other things, that formal discussions under Section 10(e) of the Order are not restricted only to those meetings where changes are proposed in personnel policies and practices, or other matters affecting general working conditions of employees in the unit.

1/ Section 10(e) states, in pertinent part: "When a labor organization has been accorded exclusive recognition, it is the exclusive representative of employees in the unit and is entitled to act for and to negotiate agreements covering all employees in the unit. . . . The labor organization shall be given the opportunity to be represented at formal discussions between management and employees or employee representatives concerning . . . personnel policies and practices, or other matters affecting general working conditions of employees in the unit."

Contrary to the Administrative Law Judge, I find that, under the particular circumstances herein, the November 13 meeting was a formal discussion within the meaning of Section 10(e) of the Order. Thus, as indicated above, part of the meeting's agenda concerned three memoranda relating to annual leave, employee health benefits, and employee time-keeping responsibilities, clearly matters involving personnel policies and practices and working conditions of employees in the bargaining unit. In this regard, the record clearly reflects that the subject matter of the three memoranda was discussed at the meeting.

While formal discussions under Section 10(e), in many instances, have involved discussions between management and unit employees concerning proposed changes in existing personnel policies and practices and other matters affecting general working conditions of unit employees, 2/ I do not view the scope of Section 10(e) so narrowly as to encompass only discussions concerning changes or proposed changes in such matters. Rather, I view Section 10(e) as requiring that an exclusive representative be afforded the opportunity to be represented at discussions between management and unit employees where, as here, the subject matter being discussed concerns personnel policies and practices and working conditions of the employees in the bargaining unit. In such circumstances, the exclusive representative has, in my opinion, a legitimate interest in representing the interests of the unit employees with regard to their terms and conditions of employment, including matters in an existing negotiated agreement. The exclusion of the exclusive representative from such discussions, in effect, would result in the bypassing of the exclusive representative with regard to the very matters for which it was chosen by the unit employees to act as their spokesman.

Under these circumstances, because the November 13 meeting involved a discussion between management and unit employees concerning personnel policies and practices and matters affecting the employees' working conditions, I find that such a meeting constituted a formal discussion within the meaning of Section 10(e) of the Order. Accordingly, the Respondent's failure to notify and afford the Complainant the opportunity to be represented at the November 13 meeting constituted a violation of Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order.

ORDER

Pursuant to Section 6(b) of Executive Order 11491, as amended, and Section 203.26(b) of the Regulations, the Assistant Secretary of Labor for Labor-Management Relations hereby orders that the Internal Revenue Service, Atlanta District Office, Atlanta, Georgia, shall:

1. Cease and desist from:

(a) Conducting formal discussions between management and unit employees, or their representatives, concerning personnel policies and practices, or other matters affecting general working conditions of employees in the unit, without notifying and affording the National Treasury Employees Union, Chapter 26, the exclusive representative of its employees, or any other exclusive representative of its employees, the opportunity to be represented at such discussions.

(b) Interfering with, restraining, or coercing its employees in the exercise of their rights assured by the Order by failing to notify and afford the National Treasury Employees Union, Chapter 26, or any other exclusive representative of its employees, the opportunity to be represented at formal discussions between management and employees, or employee representatives, concerning personnel policies and practices, or other matters affecting general working conditions of employees in the unit.

(c) In any like or related manner interfering with, restraining, or coercing its employees in the exercise of their rights assured by Executive Order 11491, as amended.

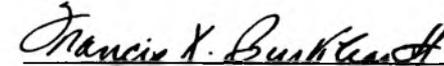

2. Take the following affirmative actions in order to effectuate the purposes and policies of the Executive Order:

(a) Notify the National Treasury Employees Union, Chapter 26 of, and afford it the opportunity to be represented at, formal discussions between management and unit employees, or their representatives, concerning personnel policies and practices, or other matters affecting general working conditions of employees in the unit.

(b) Post at its facilities at the Internal Revenue Service District Offices, located in Atlanta, Georgia, and Columbia, South Carolina, copies of the attached notice marked "Appendix" on forms to be furnished by the Assistant Secretary of Labor for Labor-Management Relations. Upon receipt of such forms, they shall be signed by the District Director, Internal Revenue Service, Atlanta, Georgia, and they shall be posted for 60 consecutive days thereafter, in conspicuous places, including all places where notices to employees are customarily posted. The District Director shall take reasonable steps to insure that such notices are not altered, defaced, or covered by any other material.

(c) Pursuant to Section 203.27 of the Regulations, notify the Assistant Secretary, in writing, within 30 days from the date of this order as to what steps have been taken to comply herewith.

Case No. 40-7435 (CA)

"The violations concern the failure of Internal Revenue Service to inform NTEU that a formal meeting was being held concerning personnel policies, practices and matter affecting working conditions. Additionally, the IRS violated 19(a)(6) of the Executive Order by refusing to consult, confer or negotiate with NTEU prior to the distribution of a memorandum entitled 'Employee's Responsibility in Timekeeping' at a group meeting conducted in Columbia, South Carolina on November 7, 1975."

The date should have read November 13, 1975.

Upon review of a Regional Administrator's dismissal of the complaint, the Assistant Secretary of Labor issued an April 11, 1977, determination. In pertinent part, the Assistant Secretary stated:

"Accordingly, your request for review, seeking reversal of the Regional Administrator's dismissal of the complaint with respect to the 'Timekeeping' memo, is denied. The remaining allegation of the complaint [i.e., with regard to whether the November 13, 1975, meeting was a formal discussion within the meaning of Section 10(e) of the Order] is hereby remanded to the Regional Administrator, who is directed to reinstate that portion of the complaint, and, absent settlement, to issue a notice of hearing."

Such a notice issued on April 29, 1977, and I conducted a hearing thereunder in Columbia, South Carolina, on June 14, 1977. The hearing was conducted in accordance with the provisions of 5 United States Code 554.

The last sentence of Section 10(e) of the Order reads:

"The labor organization shall be given the opportunity to be represented at formal discussions between management and employees or employee representatives concerning grievances, personnel policies and practices, or other matters affecting general working conditions of employees in the unit."

Report and Recommendation

Background

Complainant filed a complaint on June 22, 1976, in which it alleged that Respondents had engaged in activities in violation of Subsections 19(a)(1) and (6) of Executive Order 11491, as amended (Order). In part, the complaint stated:

At the hearing, the parties submitted the following issue for resolution:

Whether a November 13, 1975, meeting that a group manager held, with some of the employees she supervised, constituted a formal discussion within the meaning of Section 10(e) of the Order.

Complainant submitted that the meeting was a formal discussion because personnel policies and practices, and other matters affecting general working conditions, were discussed at the meeting. Respondents submitted that the meeting was not a formal discussion because no changes in personnel policies and practices, and other matters affecting general working conditions, were discussed at the meeting.

Such issue will be discussed and disposed of in connection with my consideration of the pertinent facts I find to be established as a result of my examination and evaluation of the entire record developed herein. The facts found to be established follow.

Findings of Fact

1) At all times pertinent hereto, a Multi-District Agreement (MDA) governed relationships between Internal Revenue Service (I.R.S.) representing 56 district offices and National Treasury Employees Union (NTEU) representing chapters holding exclusive recognition in those district offices. I.R.S. Atlanta District Office (ADO) was one such office. Chapter 26 was one such chapter. Chapter 55, of the Columbia, South Carolina, District Office (CDO) was another such chapter.

2) Some employees assigned to an Employees Plan/Exempt Organizations (EP/EO) Group in ADO performed their duties at an I.R.S. facility in Columbia, South Carolina. In this connection ADO was identified as the "key" district (the district charged with administrative responsibility attending an I.R.S. function). In this connection, CDO was identified as the "satellite" district (the district at which some key district employees accomplished administrative responsibilities attending an I.R.S. function).

3) The EP/EO key district employees who performed their duties at the satellite district were under direct supervision of a Group Manager (manager) located at ADO. During the period pertinent hereto, the manager visited and met with EP/EO employees at the satellite district periodically.

4) A September 22, 1975, Memorandum of Agreement executed by Director, Personnel Division, I.R.S., and National President, NTEU, provided, in part and with respect to processing grievances at Step 1, that key district employees at the satellite district could be represented by a satellite district union steward.

5) Prior to November 13, 1975, an ADO EP/EO employee (Hook) invited a CDO union official (Golden) to attend a meeting that the manager had scheduled for that date with EP/EO employees at the satellite district. At the time he extended the invitation, Hook was unaware of the subject(s) on the agenda for the meeting.

6) Neither the manager nor any representative of Respondents notified Complainant of the scheduled November 13 meeting.

7) Golden presented himself as Complainant's representative for attendance at the meeting. He was denied permission to attend by the manager.

8) At the June 14, 1977, hearing, Golden testified that the manager told him that he was being denied admission because she did not intend to discuss personnel policies and practices or other matters affecting working conditions. At the hearing, the manager testified that she told Golden that he was being denied admission because no changes in personnel policies and practices or other matters affecting working conditions were to be discussed.

9) Complainant was given no opportunity to be represented at the November 13, 1975, meeting.

10) The November meeting was attended by the manager, the five specialists who performed duties at the satellite district and the group clerk located at that district.

11) As of November 18, 1975, the manager submitted a report to her Division Chief that enumerated 41 items that were "discussed" at the meeting. The report was typed by a secretary at the key district from notes made by the manager and the satellite district clerk during the meeting.

12) One item related to the Regional Commissioner's October 23, 1975, memorandum to all region employees, the subject of which was "Restoration of Annual Leave." Substantively, the memorandum referenced relief afforded to employees, faced with leave forfeiture under certain conditions, by Public Law 93-181. It encouraged planned scheduling of leave to avoid forfeiture and set forth guidelines to be followed to effect permissible restoration of forfeited leave.

13) At the meeting, the manager gave each attendee a copy of the memorandum, paraphrased some of its contents, "highlighted" some conditions under which lost leave could be restored, and solicited proposed leave schedules for the remainder of the year. Among the participants, there was conversation "[a]s conversation goes at an informal meeting" but there were no questions relating to the memorandum posed by the specialists or the clerk and there was no assertion of a problem attending forfeited leave.

14) Another item related to the Health Benefits Coordinator's November 6, 1975, memorandum to all employees, the subject of which was "Open Season for Health Benefits - November 15 through December 31, 1975." Substantively, the memorandum advised employees of options open to them under health benefits plans during the specified period.

15) At the meeting, the manager gave each attendee a copy of the memorandum, invited their attentions to its contents, and suggested individual pursuit of questions relating to health benefits. No questions relating to the memorandum were posed by the specialists.

16) A third item related to an Administration Division Chief's November 7, 1975, memorandum to all employees, the subject of which was "Employee's Responsibilities in Timekeeping." Substantively, it referenced pay problems attributable to unfamiliarity with timekeeping procedures; it reminded employees of their responsibilities for leave approval, timecard accuracy, and errors in leave and earnings statements. It recommended that the timekeeper be consulted relative such matters.

17) At the meeting, the manager gave each attendee a copy of the memorandum; noted its contents; received comments from two attendees relative to time card errors; and tendered an unaccepted offer to assist one such attendee with his problem.

18) Other items "discussed" at the meeting have been treated by the parties hereto as technical matters not significantly concerning grievance, personnel policies and practices, or other matters affecting general working conditions.

Discussion

The unfair labor practice complaint is bottomed on the proposition that the November 13, 1975, meeting that the manager had with her group at the satellite district was a "formal meeting" that was "held concerning personnel policies, practices and matters affecting working conditions."

Relative to the "formal meeting" aspect of the proposition, I determine that the record contains a preponderance of and substantial evidence to support a finding that the meeting was "formal" in nature and form. I so find.

The meeting, identified as "Post of Duty Visit-Group Meeting," was one of a series of meetings that the manager conducted periodically with her group at the satellite district. A written record was made of matters that were covered at the meeting. The manager supplied her Division Chief with a written report on the meeting.

Relative to the aspect of the proposition that is concerned with the purpose of the meeting, I determine that the record contains a preponderance of and substantial evidence to support a finding that the meeting was not "held concerning personnel policies, practices and matters affecting working conditions." I so find.

Initially, I note that the record contains no probative evidence that, prior to the time thereof, the meeting was represented as one that would be concerned with any of the referenced subjects. Rather, Complainant's witnesses testified that, prior to the meeting, they had no knowledge of what was to be on the agenda. Witness Golden stated that, prior to the meeting, the manager represented that she did not intend to discuss such subjects. Witness Hook testified that, prior to the meeting, the manager told Golden that "technical matters" were to be subjects thereof. For Respondents, the manager testified that, prior to the meeting, she told Golden that changes in the referenced subjects would not be discussed at the meeting.

Secondly, I note the parties' submission that, of the more than 40 items on the agenda for the meeting, only the documents relating to A) restoration of annual leave, B) health benefits and C) timekeeping responsibilities concern grievances, personnel policies and practices and/or other matters affecting general working conditions. In connection therewith. I find no decisionally persuasive evidence of record to establish the fact that the meeting was scheduled for the significant purpose of discussion of the contents of those documents.

On brief and with reference to the documents relating to annual leave and timekeeping responsibilities, Complainant submits "that portions of the meeting...involved leave administration." In support thereof, Complainant notes that the annual leave memorandum involved a policy attending forfeiture of earned annual leave; notes that the policy constituted a matter that had an impact on all employees at the meeting; notes that the memorandum was distributed at the meeting; notes that, in connection with the distribution, the manager requested submission of leave requests; notes that the manager then had in her possession a document that was mentioned in the memorandum; and notes that there were matters relating to the memorandum that the manager could have discussed but did not discuss.

Further in support thereof, Complainant notes that the timekeeping memorandum effected recognition of leave and pay problems; notes the unique situation attending the physical separation of the satellite district group from the manager; notes Hook's testimony relative to a discussion of the memorandum's contents and his leave problems; and notes matters that the manager could have discussed but did not discuss.

Thereafter, Complainant concludes that "it is apparent that the meeting...was a 'formal meeting' within the purview of Section 10(e) of the Order."

I find that the submissions, notations and conclusions are not decisionally persuasive that the meeting was formal, that its significant purpose was discussion of the documents or that the documents were discussed.

I have heretofore dealt with the "formal meeting" aspect of the proposition on which the complaint is based. My examination and evaluation of the decisional persuasiveness of the evidence involving the annual leave and timekeeping responsibilities memoranda result in my determination that the record does not establish that the meeting was "held concerning personnel policies, practices and matters affecting working conditions."

I find that a preponderance of the credited evidence establishes that the meeting was held for the substantive purpose of discussion of technical problems by the manager and her group. I find that, in connection with accomplishment of that purpose, the manager elected to effect, and did effect, distribution to her group of three memoranda directed to all employees by the Regional Commissioner, the Health Benefits Coordinator and the Administration Division Chief. I find that, in connection with such distribution, there was no decisionally significant discussion of the contents of the memoranda.

My findings involve recognition and evaluation of each witness' testimony relative to statements made, questions asked, replies made, comments offered, and ideas exchanged relative to the memoranda at the meeting. Further, they involve recognition and evaluation of the fact that the written notes and report reflecting activities at the meeting indicate that there were discussions of the contents of the memoranda at the meeting.

I recognize Complainant's argument, on brief, that there was a violation under the Order if the referenced documents were distributed at the meeting without a discussion of the contents thereof. The submission is bottomed on the proposition that Section 10(e) is designed to preclude any distribution of documents that is accompanied by a prohibition against discussion of the contents of the documents. I find the submission and proposition to be without merit. They fail, properly, to recognize so much of the unambiguous language of the section as involves representation "at formal discussions ...concerning..." (underscoring supplied). I find no language in the section designed to control the act of distribution of written documents as tendered by Complainant.

It is my determination that the group manager's November 13, 1975, meeting with her group was not a formal discussion within the meaning of Section 10(e) of the Order. My determination is based on my finding that the meeting did not concern grievances, personnel policies and practices, or other matters affecting general working condition of employees in the unit.

In view of the foregoing, no decisional purpose will be served by a resolution of the issue relating to whether discussions of changes in personnel policies and practices, and other matters affecting general working conditions are dispositive in identifying formal discussions under Section 10(e).

UNITED STATES DEPARTMENT OF LABOR
ASSISTANT SECRETARY FOR LABOR-MANAGEMENT RELATIONS
SUMMARY OF DECISION AND ORDER OF THE ASSISTANT SECRETARY
PURSUANT TO SECTION 6 OF EXECUTIVE ORDER 11491, AS AMENDED

NATIONAL LABOR RELATIONS BOARD, REGION 17, and NATIONAL LABOR RELATIONS BOARD
A/SLMR No. 1015

This case involved an unfair labor practice complaint filed by David A. Nixon (Complainant) against the National Labor Relations Board, Region 17, and the National Labor Relations Board (Respondents). The complaint alleged, in substance, that the Respondents violated Section 19(a)(1), (2) and (4) of the Executive Order by virtue of their actions in according the Complainant an adverse performance appraisal on April 30, 1976, which was in retaliation for his pressing grievances under a negotiated agreement as well as for his filing complaints under the Executive Order.

The Administrative Law Judge found that the Complainant's exercise of his protected rights was not the basis for the adverse appraisal accorded the Complainant. In this connection, he found, in agreement with the appraisal, that although otherwise a competent attorney, the main reason for the Complainant's adverse rating was his inability to get along with others, his insensitivity in interpersonal relations, and the continual objections raised by the Complainant with respect to instructions given him. The Administrative Law Judge cited various instances, recounted in the appraisal, of the Complainant's behavior with respect to his opposition to supervision in case handling, as well as personality difficulties with his peers, as symptomatic of the appraisal's finding that he was unfit to be a supervisor. The Administrative Law Judge found as well that nowhere in the appraisal does it appear that any supervisor relied upon or gave consideration to the Complainant's processing of grievances or complaints during this evaluation period. Accordingly, he recommended that the complaint be dismissed in its entirety.

Noting particularly the absence of exceptions, the Assistant Secretary adopted the findings, conclusions and recommendation of the Administrative Law Judge and ordered that the complaint be dismissed.

DECISION AND ORDER

On November 3, 1977, Administrative Law Judge William Naimark issued his Recommended Decision and Order in the above-entitled proceeding, finding that the Respondents had not engaged in the unfair labor practices alleged in the complaint and recommending that the complaint be dismissed in its entirety. No exceptions were filed to the Administrative Law Judge's Recommended Decision and Order.

The Assistant Secretary has reviewed the rulings of the Administrative Law Judge made at the hearing and finds that no prejudicial error was committed. The rulings are hereby affirmed. Upon consideration of the Administrative Law Judge's Recommended Decision and Order, and the entire record in this case, and noting particularly that no exceptions were filed, I hereby adopt the Administrative Law Judge's findings, conclusions and recommendation.

RECOMMENDED DECISION AND ORDER

Statement of the Case

Pursuant to a Notice of Hearing on Complaint issued on February 23, 1977 by the Regional Administrator for Labor-Management Service of the U.S. Department of Labor, Kansas City Region, a hearing in this case was held before the undersigned on April 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 12, 13 and 14, 1977 at Kansas City, Missouri.

This proceeding arises under Executive Order 11491, as amended (herein called the Order). A complaint was filed on September 28, 1976 by David A. Nixon (herein called Complainant or Nixon) against the National Labor Relations Board and Region 17 of the National Labor Relations Board (herein called Respondents or the Board). The said complaint alleged, in substance, that Respondents prepared and rendered a discriminatory appraisal, dated April 30, 1976, of Complainant; that said adverse rating governed Complainant's eligibility for promotion, and was in retaliation for his pressing grievances under the collective bargaining agreement as well as his filing complaints under the Order; and that the test applied to Complainant in the appraisal was more onerous than applied to co-workers - all in violation of Sections 19(a)(1)(2) and (4) of the Order. Respondents filed an answer to the complaint on November 5, 1976, which essentially denied any discriminatory motivation behind the appraisal. The alleged disparate treatment of Complainant by Respondents was likewise denied.

Both parties were afforded full opportunity to be heard, to adduce evidence, and to examine as well as cross-examine witnesses. Thereafter, briefs were filed which have been duly considered. 1/

Upon the entire record herein, from my observation of the witnesses and their demeanor, and based on all the testimony and evidence adduced at the hearing, I make the following findings of fact, conclusion, and recommendations:

Findings of Fact

1. At all times material herein a collective bargaining agreement has existed between the General Counsel of the Board and the National Labor Relations Board union covering the professional employees (Examiners and Attorneys) employed in the Regional, sub-regional and resident offices of the Board.

2. Article VI of the aforesaid agreement provides for career development of employees under the responsibility of the Regional Director. Provision is made in said article for annual evaluations and appraisal interviews of unit employees, as well as discussion with an employee before any adverse recommendation is forwarded by a Regional Director to Washington. In respect to promotions of unit employees, provision is also made for review of the said evaluations and rating of such employees as "well qualified" or "not ready" for supervisory positions. Employees rated "well qualified" are to be placed on applicable competitive promotion registers.

1/ In his brief Complainant moved to correct the transcript in respect to certain errors contained therein. The motion is granted, and the transcript is corrected as set forth in the attachment herein marked "Appendix".

3. The collective bargaining agreement also contains a grievance procedure (Article XII) for the resolution of disputes over the interpretation or application of the agreement.

4. Complainant is employed by the Board as a GS-14 Field Attorney in the Kansas City, Missouri Regional Office. He was first hired by the agency in 1965 as a GS-9 attorney in the sub-regional office at Peoria, Illinois. In 1966 Nixon was promoted to a GS-11 and received a superior performance award in January 1967. During the latter year he was transferred to the Kansas City Office - Region 17 - where he has remained to this date. 2/ In the latter part of 1967 Complainant was promoted to a GS-12. Two interim appraisals of Nixon were accorded him on July 31, 1968 and August 8, 1968 respectively by his supervisor Robert Uhlig and Regional Attorney Thomas Hendrix. While the appraisal reflected that Nixon performed his duties in a competent manner, criticism was leveled toward him in respect to his relationships with the public and staff personnel. However, based on recommendations of his supervisors, Complainant was promoted to a GS-13 attorney in February 1969.

On November 4, 1970 Regional Director Thomas Hendrix and Regional Attorney Harry Irwig recommended that Nixon be rated not well qualified for a GS-14. Although both supervisory officials rendered adverse appraisals 3/ of this employee, their conclusions were predicated on his inability to get along with others and not upon his competency as an attorney.

2/ Complainant's supervisor in the Peoria Office, S. Richard Pincus, rendered an appraisal which complimented Nixon's performance and skills but indicated that he had difficulty in the area of "personal relations." Pincus commented that unnecessary friction was created between Complainant and others.

3/ These appraisals covered the period from November 1969 to November 1970.

Appraisals were subsequently accorded Complainant by both Hendrix and Irwig covering October 1970 - June 24, 1971. Relying on Irwig's appraisal of June 24, 1971, which recommended that Nixon not be rated well qualified for a GS-14 non-supervisory attorney, Hendrix concurred and adopted the conclusion of the Regional Attorney that this employee engaged in various altercations with staff attorneys and was remiss in certain aspects of case handling. 4/ Grievances were filed by the Union and Nixon on July 14, 1971 and August 3, 1971 respectively under the negotiated grievance procedure, wherein it was alleged that the rating procedure had not been in accordance with the contract. The grievance was found to be meritorious by Associate General Counsel John Irving, new appraisals were accorded Complainant, and the latter was promoted to a GS-14 non-supervisory attorney in February 1972.

Subsequent appraisals were accorded Complainant by both Hendrix and Irwig for the period June 1, 1971 - June 2, 1972. Once again references were made to Nixon's inability to get along with others, as well as accept criticism or follow instructions, and he was rated not well qualified for a GS-14 supervisory position. Appraisals were accorded Complainant on June 23, 1973 (referred to as the 1973 appraisal and covering June 1972 - June 1973); on June 14, 1974 (referred to as the 1974 appraisal and covering June 1973 - June 1974); on May 1, 1975 (referred to as the 1975 appraisal and covering June 1974 - May 1975); and on April 28, 1976 (referred to as the 1976 appraisal and covering April 1975 - April 1976). 5/ In each appraisal since June 1973, Complainant was faulted for poor workmanship and interpersonal relationships, as well as reluctance to accept criticism or follow instructions, and he was rated not well qualified for GS-14 supervisory position.

5. During his tenure with the Kansas City Regional Office, Nixon has frequently sought to protect his interests, as well as others, as employees of the Board. To this extent he has engaged in various acts of protected activity in the Regional office as follows:

4/ The appraisal conceded that the cited examples of poor performance by Nixon were of minor importance.

5/ An appraisal was, in fact, prepared by supervisor Herzog for the period April 26, 1975 - December 1, 1975 and by supervisor Gerald A. Wacknov for the period February 5, 1976 - April 28, 1976. Since Wacknov relied upon Herzog's adverse comments as foreclosing any recommendation to rate Nixon as well qualified for GS-14 supervisor, Complainant attacks Herzog's appraisal as being discriminatorily accorded.

(a) Since about 1972 Complainant has acted as chairperson of the "Committee to Implement Executive Order 11491." In that capacity he has communicated at various times with Felix Brandon, Director of Personnel for the Board regarding the Order and its revisions. Further, he has requested the Board to comply with the Order and state its policies how it would be implemented, and Nixon has, on occasion, posted notices on bulletin boards.

(b) Since 1970 Complainant has filed various grievances under the negotiated grievance procedure. In some instances these grievances were personal, i.e. (1) his grievance filed in October 1974 against Hendrix for being assigned to Herzog's team; (2) his grievance filed on October 10, 1975 against Hendrix for being charged with annual leave for October 6, 1975. In other instances Nixon filed grievances on behalf of other staff members which involved conditions of employment pertaining to them. Management was aware of Complainant's role in seeking implementation of the Order by the Board, and it was likewise cognizant of his having filed grievances under the contract.

(c) Upon being accorded adverse appraisal for the years 1972, 1973, 1974, and 1976, Complainant filed complaints against the Board and its Region 17 under the Order herein. He alleged discrimination in not being rated well qualified for a GS-14 supervisory position; and he contended that such discrimination was due to filing grievances under the collective bargaining agreement or unfair labor practice complaints under the Order. In the prior cases Complainant asserted the reasons advanced for denying him a rating of "well qualified" for supervisory attorney were pretextual in nature; that the true basis for such denial was his protected concerted activity as aforesaid. 6/

6/ Cases No. 60-3035 (A/SLMR No. 295 and 664 -1972 appraisal) and No. 60-3721 (A/SLMR No. 671 - 1974 appraisal) involved additional acts of alleged discrimination by the Board. In both of these cases and in No. 60-3449 (A/SLMR NO. 670 - 1973 appraisal) Nixon alleged disparate treatment visited upon him by the Board. The Assistant Secretary held, in all of the aforesaid cases, that legitimate considerations prevailed - based on Nixon's interpersonal relationships and personality problems - for not rating him well qualified for a GS-14 supervisory positions. In A/SLMR No. 671 he found a violation of 19(a)(1) and (4) based on adverse comments by

(d) In addition to the complaints filed against the Board alleging unfair labor practices based on discriminatory appraisals for the particular years, as aforesaid, Complainant filed a grievance under the contract based on an adverse appraisal accorded him for 1975. He contended therein that such appraisal was discriminatory and disparate, and that management's rating him as "not ready" for supervisory positions should be overturned. The matter proceeded to arbitration, and on January 28, 1977, arbitrator Anthony v. Sinicropi denied the grievance and sustained the decision of the Board wherein it concluded Nixon was not well qualified for a GS-14 supervisory position. 7/

6. Record facts show that field attorneys Richard Auslander, Ron Broun, John P. Hurley, William V. Johnson, Edward D. Pribble, and Gerald A. Wacknov - all in Region 17 - were rated well qualified for supervisory positions; that each employee was an official of the local union; and that Auslander and Wacknov were supervised and appraised by Herzog. Further, Auslander filed several grievances in 1973 and 1974, some of which were worked on by Nixon; that Auslander filed a grievance in 1973 prepared by Nixon and concerning the latter and two other attorneys; and that Auslander was rated well qualified for supervisory attorney thereafter.

7. In November 1969 Frederick C. Herzog became supervisor of Complainant. After a three week period, Nixon was re-assigned to work under another supervisor due to Herzog's inexperience. On October 15, 1974 Herzog was designated as Nixon's supervisor once again. Several discussions ensued between these two individuals. The supervisor suggested they attempt to get along, stating he would treat Nixon fairly. Herzog asked Nixon what he could do to show good faith in this respect. The latter requested that Herzog assign a new attorney to work with him so that, to refute the claim of Hendrix and Irwig, Nixon would show he could get along with others. The supervisor agreed to consider the idea, but latter rejected it as not being feasible or expedient. During these discussions Complainant commented that he saw no reasonable basis for trusting Herzog - that the latter was identified with management and part of the same group which had rendered unfavorable appraisals of the employee in the past.

8. The career development program, set forth in the collective bargaining agreement, is intended to provide means for identifying persons who are suitable for advancement by the Board. Further, it is designed to prepare employees for top positions as trial or investigative professionals and administrative posts. The keystone of the system is the annual appraisal which is composed of two parts: (a) Part I consisting of 20 evaluation factors dealing with such items as employee's performance, personal characteristics or traits, and abilities to deal with others, organize and plan work, delegate responsibility and direct others, accept responsibility, as well as train or develop others. Each factor has several accompanying descriptive comments, and the supervisor must check that comment along side every factor which most nearly reflects his assessment of the individual employee who is being appraised; (b) Part II consists of a narrative statement concerning the employee rated, and should include specific examples supporting an evaluation of the individual's progress, readiness for promotion, and potential within the agency.

9. The 1976 appraisal 8/ of Complainant, upon which his rating was based, consists of the marked or checked evaluation factors together with the narrative and its appendices prepared by supervisor Herzog. In respect to the evaluation factors checked by Herzog, they reflected adverse comments regarding Nixon's judgment, dependability, ability to get along with others, oral communication, ability to direct others, and acceptance of responsibility. The narrative portion of this appraisal specifies the particular cases wherein Nixon is faulted for either poor performance or causing difficulties involving interpersonal relationships. In summation Herzog concluded that certain aspects of Complainant's work were not correct - and that the employee is thus not performing as expected from a higher grade level. Further, he stated that Nixon requires detailed supervision, disregards routine operating procedures, does not accept normal supervision, and continues to have problems in getting along with others. In Herzog's opinion,

8/ Complainant's Exhibit 2.

Nixon was not properly ratable as well qualified for a supervisory position. As a result of this appraisal, and the concurrence therewith by Regional Director Hendrix, the Complainant was rated by the Board's review panel as "not ready" for a GS-14 supervisor or higher levels.

10. The narrative comment by Herzog in the 1976 appraisal referred to the various number of assigned cases to Nixon involving investigations of non-priority as well as priority unfair labor practice charges and representation positions, noticing representation matters for hearing, drafting of complaints, and litigation work performed by this employee. In connection therewith, reference was made to the number of days elapsing from the original date of assignment to Nixon of each case until the date he completed his handling of the matter. Except as noted infra, no criticism was leveled by Respondents against Nixon re the timeliness and quantity ^{9/} of his work, and Herzog commented that Complainant is very industrious and conscientious. The particular aspects of Nixon's work deemed incorrect by his supervisor, as well as criticism of his conduct, are referred to in the specific cases or matters mentioned in the narrative. These matters and the incidents which occurred are as follows:

(a) Paniplus Company 17-CA-6631

A regional agenda was held to consider this case on July 29, 1975 attended by Nixon and the supervisory staff. A decision was made to "Collyerize" ^{10/} this case, and Nixon pointed out that the case had a few unusual aspects, including an unclear provision in the contract, so that it might not serve as a good vehicle for arbitration. It was agreed that Nixon would draft a memo with the recommended language for the Collyer letter. ^{11/}

^{9/} The narrative comment alludes to the fact that Nixon's work show remarkable improvement in these areas. While Complainant deems this a negatively implied criticism, I do not agree. Moreover, except as specifically noted, no fault is found in Nixon's timeliness or quantity of case handling. Accordingly, I make no adverse finding in this regard.

^{10/} This term refers to a policy whereby certain cases would be deferred to the grievance and arbitration procedure of an existing collective bargaining agreement. In such instances no complaint would issue.

^{11/} Revised guidelines were issued by the General Counsel re "collyer" letters to be issued.

On July 31, 1975 Herzog approved the second paragraph of the Collyer letter prepared by Nixon and noted in writing that footnotes 1 and 2 set forth in the "Collyer -Revised Guidelines" were inapplicable. The supervisor then spoke to Complainant, in the presence of local union president Eric Wagner. He told Nixon that the letter omitted a paragraph required by the established guideline, and that the requisite language had been changed. After advising Nixon that the Collyer letter was incorrect, Herzog left the document with the Complainant and returned to his office. Later Nixon went to Herzog's office, said he can't find any error and that it comports with the decision made at the agenda. Herzog disagreed that it was in accordance with the agenda decision. The Complainant remarked he didn't like the way Herzog tossed the paper at him and spoke in such cavalier tones. The discussion became somewhat heated, Nixon's voice became loud, and both individuals were pointing fingers at each other. The supervisor said he wanted it done properly ^{12/}, and that Nixon should sit down and stop pointing his finger. The latter remarked he was asserting his rights, that nobody tells him when he can gesture, whether to sit or stand, or how to talk.

Wagner, who became worried that Nixon might be fired, asked Herzog if he could talk to Nixon. The supervisor assented, saying he just wants the Collyer letter to issue. Wagner called Nixon at home, telling him that if Nixon changed the letter, the matter would be forgotten. Complainant became real angry, saying the letter was tailored to fit this case. Wagner told Nixon it was a real bad situation. The next day Wagner brought the letter in final form to Herzog, but changed "respondent" to "charged employee". The supervisor wrote Nixon a memo to the effect that he would let it go.

Several days later Wagner and Herzog discussed the incident again. The union official was concerned that Complainant would be fired and inquired if it would be in Nixon's appraisal. The supervisor stated that he has recommended adverse action be taken against Nixon but Regional Director Hendrix disagreed; that the incident would not be in the appraisal if Wagner assured Herzog the Complainant understood his conduct was not allowed in a business office. No such assurance was made.

^{12/} Nixon's testimony indicates he made an issue as to whether Herzog found the Collyer letter incorrect or was told by Regional Attorney Irwig it was faulty. Since it is apparent that the supervisor conveyed the idea that the letter was not properly prepared, the factual issue raised by Complainant needs no resolution.

(b) Admiral Merchants Motor Freight - 17CA6566
Inland Center - 17CA6577

Complainant drafted dismissal letters 13/ in both of these cases. In each instance the language employed by Nixon appeared on a single page and required extensive modifications. Quite a few lines were stricken by the supervisor, and the latter added language as well as revised the particular wording employed by Nixon. In his narrative comment Herzog stated that the editing was excessive, particularly on routine work, and typified required modification of Nixon's work.

(c) IBEW, Local 265 (Ed Peeks Electric Co.)

During his investigation of this priority case, involving a secondary boycott, Nixon obtained an affidavit from the charging party's production superintendent on June 5, 1975. He wrote a memo on June 6, 1975 to Hendrix and Herzog recommending dismissal of the charge based on lack of merit. His supervisor, Herzog, wrote a memo to the file on June 9, 1975 concurring with the recommendation but suggested that Nixon's affidavit taking technique would be improved. Specifically, he noted that (1) there was no commerce data therein; (2) the description of the physical layout could be more specific; (3) picket sign language should have been included in the affidavit; (4) it was not clearly stated where the "reserved" gate was placed; and (5) details were needed re crossing picket line. Nixon wrote a memo to the file on the same date explaining that the affiant was not familiar with the details which Herzog stated were necessary, and the company attorney agreed to submit the commence date; that the physical layout as given was sufficient to decide the merits of the case; that the criticism re the "reserved" gate is ill founded and is plain from any fair and reasonable reading of the affidavit; that Nixon does not require a witness to record his knowledge and recollection of matters encompassed within his affidavit.

The record also shows that Nixon did not impart this information directly to Herzog, nor did he write a memo to the file explaining the absence of this information.

13/ Complainant's Exhibit 2, Attachments B and C.

Neither did Herzog discuss these deficiencies with Nixon or inquire of the latter the reason for such absence. 14/

(d) Northern States Beef 17RC7731

On May 21, 1975 Nixon was assigned this case for decision writing 15/ with a draft to be due on June 2, 1975. Criticism was leveled against him for submitting the draft 15 days late and for various errors contained therein. He was faulted for: (1) using the wrong form for the decision; (2) inserting the name of the intervening union in the caption; (3) failing to insert the names of the Petitioner and Intervenor in the direction of election as choices to be selected as the bargaining representative by employees; (4) extensive corrections in the draft of the decision itself. 16/

(e) Fremont Manufacturing Company 17CA6688

Complainant was called upon to prepare, in this case, a written response to the company's motion seeking answers to its interrogatories. The draft was approved by Richard Auslander, acting supervisor, who gave it to Herzog, acting Regional Attorney. The latter told Auslander the draft was not satisfactory since it did not "get to the point", did not cite the lead case in opposition to the motion, and did not state that discovery proceedings were inapplicable to Board matters. Herzog referred to a prior case handled by Jill Brown wherein she drafted such a response, he gave Auslander a copy thereof and said that is how he wanted Nixon's response to be drafted.

14/ This case was filed on June 3, and the case file was turned in to Herzog by Nixon on June 6 (Friday) at approximately 4:45 p.m. Although Respondents contend it took 6 days to complete the investigation - since Herzog could not review it till Monday - I do not conclude that Nixon is subject to criticism therefor. The record establishes that Respondents did not fault him for timeliness and I make no finding that Nixon was remiss in this respect.

15/ During the evaluation period Nixon was not required to write any other Decision and Directions of Elections than this one.

16/ No denial was made by Nixon as to the errors alleged in respect to his draft of this decision. He adverts, however, to several decisions drafted by other field attorneys which required considerable revisions; and that, nevertheless, these individuals were rated well qualified for supervisory positions. Reference will hereinafter be made to these decisions as well as Nixon's contention with regard thereto.

Auslander spoke to Nixon and told him the draft was unacceptable, and that Herzog wants him to follow the response of Jill Brown as a guide. Nixon replied that his draft was all right; that it was hard to accept Herzog's in place of his own. Whereupon Auslander advised Herzog of his difficulty in getting Nixon to accept Jill Brown's response as a sample, and he asked Herzog to speak to Nixon in regard to the matter. Latter Herzog spoke to Nixon as requested. The latter inquired if it was terribly wrong. Herzog replied in the negative but stated it was not what he wanted, and that the form used by Jill Brown should be followed. It was resubmitted by Nixon as requested.

(f) Harmon Industries, Inc. 17CA6753

This case was investigated by Complainant herein, and an agenda was held when he was not in the regional office. A decision was reached to issue complaint subject to obtaining additional information, and Auslander - who was supervising Nixon at the time - wrote a memo advising Nixon of that decision. Upon his return Complainant spoke to Auslander who agreed that perhaps the information wasn't really necessary. Nixon asked him to write a dissent, which Auslander agreed to consider doing but finally just wrote a memo which was characterized by Nixon as a "whitewash". The latter told his supervisor it was one of the best investigations he conducted; that Irwig was trying to retaliate after the decision of Administrative Law Judge Devaney in Case No. 60-3721. Nixon and Auslander also discussed the advisability of interviewing the three witnesses at the plant, but Nixon was concerned about bypassing the employer's attorney. The supervisor then told Herzog he was having difficulty getting Nixon to pursue the investigation. Herzog spoke to Nixon who remarked it was not his style to skip counsel. Whereupon Herzog said the data could be obtained from the three rank and file employees, and no "skipping" of counsel was involved. The additional information was obtained. 17/

(g) Kustom Electronics 17RC7669

Complainant is faulted by Respondents for not setting this case for hearing until 12-13 days after the date it was due to be set.

17/ No criticism was directed to Nixon in respect to the quality of his investigation in the Harmon case.

This post-election matter involved 22 objections to a representation election and 47 challenged ballots of voters in the election. Record facts show it was assigned to Nixon on October 29, 1975 when he was out of town; that he returned on that date, but was again out of town on November 4, 5 and 12 investigating unfair labor practice cases; and that he was on leave November 7 and 10. There was some question as to whether one-half of the objections were timely and should have been made by the regional office. Nixon conferred with the attorneys involved in the matter on November 11.

On November 6 Herzog spoke to Nixon re issuing a Notice of Hearing. On November 10 and 11 they discussed whether to proceed since unfair labor practice charges had been filed. Herzog told Nixon to ascertain whether a request to proceed could be obtained, and if not, to proceed with the hearing. Record testimony indicates the language was prepared on November 12; that Nixon secured a date for the hearing and submitted it for typing at that time; and that he wrote a memo to the Assistant Regional Director on November 18, that the Notice of Hearing had not yet issued. The Notice of Hearing was thereafter issued on November 20.

(h) Day and Zimmerman 17RC7871

It is asserted that this case, originally assigned to Nixon, was transferred to another Board agent since Nixon failed to timely check the authorized cards or set the case for hearing. Record facts show, and I find, this matter was assigned to Nixon just prior to his going on approved annual leave; that he had spoken to the employer who advised him the firm would have an attorney; that Nixon left a message for the attorney to call him; that Nixon told his acting supervisor, Ward Summerville, he couldn't follow up on the matter since he was going on annual leave, but he would do as much as possible. Summerville told Nixon not to worry; that he would reassign the case and have someone else handle it. Nixon came in the office on that weekend, and he wrote a memo to Summerville advising that he had not heard from the attorney.

(i) R. L. Jones, 17CA6469, 17CB1459

In regard to the trial of these cases set for July 21, 1975, it was agreed beforehand that each case would be tried by a different attorney in the regional office - Nixon to try the CA case, and Ward Summerville to try the CB case. It was suggested that each act independently since both attorneys would be privy to information which, if exchanged, could result in a breach of ethics. Moreover, Nixon was concerned that his primary witness might be discredited by Summerville and thus prejudice the trial of the CA case. Both field attorneys agreed that a motion would be made to the Administrative Law Judge to proceed with the CA case first and then try the CB case afterward; that Summerville would make no appearance in the CA case but would be present at the hearing.

Just prior to the hearing Summerville sat at the counsel table next to Nixon. The latter, in a loud voice, said to Summerville, "what are you doing? - you're not in this case." Whereupon Summerville left the table with his files and told Herzog what happened - and he further stated he had been so embarrassed that he never wanted to try a case with Nixon again. Summerville returned to the courtroom and sat in a spectator's seat. Regional Attorney Irwig appeared at the hearing room and inquired why Summerville was not at the counsel table, Nixon replied that Summerville had no part in the CA case. Irwig said he belonged there and directed Nixon to make room for Summerville. The latter thereupon sat at the table, and some place was made available by Nixon for Summerville thereat. After the parties came to the hearing room, and they explained the contemplated procedure for trying both cases, Summerville moved away from the counsel table.

(j) Staff Meeting at the Regional Office on September 5, 1975

A meeting of the regional office staff was convened for September 5, 1975 as a result of the very poor record established by the region with respect to settlement of cases. Representatives from Washington were also present thereat. Associate General Counsel Joseph De Sio, who conducted the meeting, and Thomas M. Harvey, Assistant General Counsel. De Sio informed the staff that they contemplated instituting a system whereby weekly reports would be made by the professional re settlement efforts made by them in assigned cases. Several members of the staff spoke in response to this proposal. Wagner objected to management's effecting this plan without bargaining about it, and he stated it should have been negotiated. Field Attorney Broun also asserted it should have been discussed with the union. In reply thereto, De Sio said he disagreed; that the matter was a right belonging to management and hence was not a bargainable issue. Complainant spoke at the meeting and stated that De Sio was giving them a "fiat"; that while the staff was asked for their views, they were meeting a brick wall; that notification should have been given beforehand and the matter made a subject for collective bargaining. He inquired why management asked for their views if it was not attaching any weight to them.

Field Examiner Joseph M. Logan then spoke, remarking that Nixon was an independent contractor and did not speak for anyone but himself; that it was a shame that De Sio and Harvey had to come from Washington to listen to Nixon. Whereupon Complainant attempted to reply and De Sio cut him off from further comments. Nixon protested that Logan had not been stopped from further discussion, and De Sio stated that he was cutting off the whole discussion. 18/

After the foregoing remarks Nixon, who was seated to the right of Logan, stared at the latter which resulted in Logan saying "anytime". Nixon then replied "anytime what, Logan?". Both individuals repeated these words, and then Logan stated, "anytime, anyplace". Nixon asked "anytime, anyplace what, Logan?". At this point the meeting was concluded and Logan departed hastily from the room. As Logan reached the door, Nixon, who had been following him, remarked, "you better run, Logan." At this point Herzog placed his hand on Nixon's arm and told him that he was out of line. Nixon stated that Herzog didn't know what happened, and the latter replied he didn't have to know. Nixon remarked, anytime you grab me, you better know what happened, particularly if you are going to tell me that I am out of line".

Upon leaving the meeting several of the staff members - Harvey, Field Examiner Johnson, Supervisor Patton, Herzog and Complainant - met for a short time to discuss the matter. Complainant stated he would not file a grievance if management assured him it would be a "dead" issue and he wouldn't read about it in his next appraisal. No commitment was made. Upon leaving for lunch Nixon met Herzog in the hallway and the latter said he wanted to meet about the matter. Complainant replied he would meet but only with the predicate of a grievance; that he had been threatened by Logan, but had no desire to pursue this matter if he were assured it would not be noted in the next appraisal. Herzog agreed to 18/ The appraisal does not refer to or mention the fact that Nixon, Logan, or other employees spoke at this meeting and objected to management's effecting a new procedure without bargaining about the matter. Neither does it set forth, and purport to rely upon, the derogatory comments made by Logan to De Sio.

consider Nixon's terms, but later conveyed a message to Nixon that he should forget it. 19/

11. Case cards were kept by Herzog on the various matters handled by his team members. A memo written by him re Peek Electric Co., on June 23, 1975, reflected that Wagner of the union approached him that day; that he inquired re a memo written by Herzog to Nixon as to his technique in taking affidavits; and that Wagner advised Herzog the union would not file a grievance over the matter as Nixon requested of it.

12. Record facts reveal that management herein criticized at times, various work products of other field attorneys who have been rated well qualified for supervisory position. Thus, it is shown that John Hurley drafted four representation decisions, some of which contained many errors, and which required extensive revision; Richard Auslander, William Bevan, Ronald Broun, and Edward Pribble also drafted decisions of this type - all of which contained deficiencies similar to those present in Nixon's drafts and resulted in editing and modification by management. 20/

A draft of a dismissal letter was prepared by Auslander in Case No. 17 CB 1383 which involved an unfair labor practice charge against a union. Supervisor Herzog revised the essential clause therein, adding language and striking out phrases or words proposed by Auslander. Although the alterations were similar, in type, to those made in the drafts submitted by Nixon in the Admirals Merchants and Inland Center cases, they were not quite as extensive.

During his tenure as an acting supervisor in November and December 1975, Logan became involved in a dispute with Field Examiner Raymond Weghorst who was under his supervision. Logan concluded that Weghorst had mishandled a case in respect to its settlement and wrote a memo criticizing the examiner and his credibility. Weghorst also wrote a memo in explanation thereof, and the conflict between these 19/ Based on a conversation between Johnson and Herzog, it was understood by the former that the matter would be a "dead letter" and not be included in Nixon's appraisal. The record does not support a finding that Herzog agreed not to mention the incident in a forthcoming evaluation.

20/ Exhibits C26 thru C32(a) and C35.

individuals resulted in a grievance being filed by Nixon on Weghorst's behalf. 21/

13. Appraisals of seven other field attorneys in Region 17 rated well qualified revealed that, in some instances, certain of these individuals were faulted for deficiencies of performance or particular aspects of conduct. 22/ Thus, it appears that (a) one such attorney was not meeting time targets in the handling of his case assignments, and several cases were considerably beyond the median time fixed for completion of investigations and drafting complaints; (b) criticism was leveled against three of these staff attorneys for their untimely submission of drafts of decisions and directions of elections prepared by them. Moreover, drafted decisions submitted by two of the attorneys required reworking by them or their supervisors; (c) one of the seven colleagues was faulted for temperament which was described as sometimes giving the appearance of a negative or pessimistic outlook upon his work or life in general. The trait was not accorded undue emphasis, and the appraisal of such employee recited that it would appropriate for the supervisor to discuss with the individual his willingness to control this factor.

14. Except as heretofore indicated, all seven appraisal examined in camera reflect that each attorney performed excellent work in the handling of representation and unfair labor practice cases. Moreover, each field attorney was described as possessing different characteristics which the supervisor deemed supportive of the rating given for the attorney. Some of these were: (a) generating trust among professionals, (b) communicating clearly without appearing dogmatic, (c) accepting responsibility, (d) displaying willingness to undertake additional assignments and carry them out in a responsible fashion, (e) establishing 21/ Nixon contends that this conflict demonstrates the unprofessional conduct exhibited by Logan which precipitated a confrontation. Moreover, Logan was ultimately promoted to a supervisory examiner.

22/ These appraisals were furnished by Respondents at the Request of Complainant and submitted to the undersigned at the hearing. In accordance with the ruling of the Federal Labor Relations Council in FLRC No. 73A-53, the appraisals of these attorneys - who were either GS-13 or GS-14 - were examined in camera by the undersigned at the hearing. Further, mention was made on the record by him re criticisms directed in the appraisals toward those employees, who were unidentified, by their supervisors.

excellent personal and professional relations in the office, (f) displaying a willingness to discuss shortcomings and take steps to correct them.

15. Prior to leaving the Kansas City regional office Herzog completed the appraisals required by him as a supervisor. On or about December 30, 1975 Tom Harvey spoke to him re this completion and Herzog informed Harvey he had two more to finish, one of which was Nixon's appraisal; that he needed corroboration on some points if the case ever went to trial. Harvey told Herzog to inquire of other participants if they agree with the facts, and Herzog said he intends to do so. 23/

Contention of the Parties

It is contended by Complainant that Respondents violated Sections 19(a)(1), (2) and (4) of the Order by according him a discriminatory 1976 appraisal, which resulted in his being rated not well qualified for a GS-14 supervisory position. He asserts that the alleged deficiencies ascribed to his work performance, as well as criticisms of his personal traits, are pretextuous in nature. Complainant insists that Respondents harbor animus against him by virtue of his having filed and pressed both grievances under the contract and complaints pursuant to the Order; and that such activity, which is protected, prompted the adverse rating accorded him. Moreover, he contends, in support of the alleged discrimination that Respondents applied a disparate test to him - vis a vis other similary situated members of the staff - by imposing more onerous standards upon his performance than upon such other co-workers.

In denying that it has violated the Order, Respondents insists the 1976 appraisal of Nixon was based on his poor work performance and the existence of various personal traits or characteristics which are antithetical to being a supervisory field attorney. Respondents firmly aver that neither Complainant's pursuance of his right under the contract by filing grievances, or his filing of complaints under the Order, motivated the adverse evaluation. Further, it insists no disparate and discriminatory test in evaluating Nixon, more onerous than applied to other employees, was utilized in said appraisal by the supervisor.

23/ Summerville testified that certain information which he imparted to Herzog, reflecting credit upon Nixon during the Jones trial in excluding certain evidence, was not part of Nixon's appraisal by Herzog.

Conclusions

The Order herein is designed, inter alia, to protect employees who exercise certain right assured them thereunder. Thus, any action by an agency or activity undertaken to discourage or interfere with an employee's filing of grievances pursuant to a negotiated agreement, is destructive of such right and violative of 19(a)(1) of the Order. See Department of Defense, Arkansas National Guard, A/SLMR No. 53. Moreover, Section 19(a)(2) thereof specifically prohibits discrimination in regard to conditions of employment which encourages or discourages union membership. It is also violative of Section 19(a)(4) for agency management to discipline or discriminate against an employee based on his having filed a complaint under the Order. In the instant case Complainant asserts that Respondents were illegally motivated in rendering an unfavorable appraisal - all in violation of the foregoing provisions.

Alleged Discriminatory Motivation of Respondents

In support of his claim that management's actions reflected animus against him because he engaged in concerted and protected activities, Complainant particularly adverts to the following:

(a) Initially, he maintains that the letter 24/ dated December 18, 1974, which he received from Herzog, demonstrates animosity due to pursuing his rights under the Order. I do not agree. While it patently expressed Herzog's exasperation with Nixon re the latter's accusation against management, as well as the futile efforts to establish a constructive relationship with the employee, it does not contain express or implied threats to interfere with Nixon's concerted ation. Reference is made, it is true, to grievances filed by Complainant. However, the language employed by Herzog reflects he was desirous that Complainant separate his comments regarding case handling from matters relating to his grievances. In truth, Herzog stated therein that Nixon should file grievances or actions (sic) under the Order, but to refrain from harassing him. Further, the supervisor declared his concern that the counter exchange between them has resulted in the continuation of a personality conflict - all of which derogated from the processing of cases in the regional office. I view the aforesaid letter as an expression of discontent by Herzog with Nixon based upon the latter's assertions regarding his supervisor. It does not, in my opinion, indicate an attempt to thwart Complainant from filing grievances or complaints, nor does it reflect animus against Nixon for engaging in such actions.

(b) It is also argued that the findings of the Assistant Secretary in National Labor Relations Board et. al, A/SLMR No. 671, involving the same parties reveals animus toward Complainant for exercising protected activities under the Order. In the cited case the Respondents were found to have violated 19(a)(1) and (4) by basing an adverse 1974 appraisal of Nixon, in part, upon his notification of an intention to file an unfair labor practice complaint. Moreover, it was concluded that Respondents violated 19(a)(1) by adversely criticizing Nixon in the appraisal for filing grievances; and that the inclusion of comments, re Nixon's request to his Congressman for assistance in removing an administrative law judge from an earlier case by him against Respondents, was violative of 19(a)(1) and (4) of the Order. Respondents were ordered to reappraise Nixon without consideration of his filing grievance or a complaint. While any reliance there on in 1964 was manifestly improper, I am unable to conclude that this appraisal was, a fortiorari, illegally motivated. The remarks were made in the earlier case by a different individual, and, albeit Respondents are responsible for their utterance, they do not serve to show animus two years later toward Complainant. Moreover, a reappraisal was made of Nixon without reliance upon such protected activity, and no discrimination or interference was found with respect thereto. In the case at bar no such reference were made in the 1976 appraisal, and I am loath to conclude that the improper comments made in the earlier appraisal should be deemed operative herein so as to warrant the inference that the appraisal was predicated on a discriminatory motive.

(c) Complainant relies, in part, upon the case card in Peeks Electric, supra which was kept by Herzog. The latter made a notation that Wagner discussed with him the memo written by Herzog to Nixon re his affidavit - taking technique; and that, further, the union would not file a grievance over the matter as Nixon requested of it. It is contended that memorializing the fact that Nixon sought union assistance, and any reliance thereon, evinces discriminatory intent on the part of the supervisor. I disagree with such contention. Apart from the fact that it does not appear Herzog based his appraisal upon the information imparted to him that Nixon requested union assistance, the notations were merely a summary of the discussion between supervisor and the union president which were actually concerned with Nixon's technique in taking affidavits. The fact that Wagner volunteered the information that the union would not file a grievance as requested - which Herzog recorded on the case card - does not, in my opinion, render the recordation an inherently discriminatory act or reflect improper motive. Nixon cites Western Div. of Naval Facilities, A/SLMR No. 264 wherein a written notation in the personnel file that an employee was "active in the union" was held violative of the Order. However, that comment was specifically referable to the employee's unionism, and is distinguishable from a recitation that the union does not intend to file a grievance re a criticism made by management of an employee. Moreover, such a comment did not serve to establish, in the cited case, a discriminatory motive for refusing to transfer the complainant therein as alleged.

(d) To further his argument that the alleged deficiency of Nixon were pretextuous, he urges that management's failure to inform him of his unsatisfactory conduct at the Jones trial was probative evidence of a desire to use the incident in an adverse evaluation. Apart from the fact that Nixon was, in fact, informed that Respondent disapproved of his actions thereat, I cannot agree that management conspired to desist from notifying Nixon of its disapproval with such an intention in mind. Respondents were never averse to communicating their dissatisfaction to Complainant, and no record facts suggest they abstained from doing so in this instance in order to utilize the incident in a subsequent appraisal. Such an inference is not warranted and no basis exists therefor.

(e) Emphasis is also placed by Complainant upon the recitation in the appraisal of his conduct at the September 5, 1975 staff meeting. It is urged that such comments by Herzog abridged Nixon's protected rights since his conduct was intricably bound up with the exercise by him of such right; and that, further, the recital of the incident is per se violative of the Order.

It is noted by the undersigned that the remarks by acting supervisor Logan regarding Nixon, which were uttered at the meeting, were improper and may well be deemed an unwarranted interference with the complainant's protected activities, i.e. the right to voice himself re the negotiability of management's proposed new procedure. 25/ As an acting supervisor who represented management in that capacity, Logan overstepped his bounds in stating to Associate General Counsel De Sio, after Nixon spoke and suggested the new procedure was a bargainable matter, that Nixon was an independent contractor who spoke only for himself and should not be heeded. However, the appraisal itself makes no reference to the protestations offered by Nixon re the negotiability of the proposed procedure. It does not focus upon the exercise by him of his rights at the meeting or the fact that he voiced opposition to management's proposal. It is limited in scope to the challenging remarks by Nixon to Logan, i.e. "anytime what" and "you'd better run, buddy." The conclusion drawn by Herzog, as delineated in the appraisal, was that the conduct of Nixon was of a menacing nature which might lead to physical violence; and that the failure by Nixon to accept any responsibility therefor was worthy of criticism. 26/ As such, I do not construe the critical comment to be an indicia of discriminatory motivation. 27/

Criticism of Nixon's Work Performance and Conduct in 1976 Appraisal

The 1976 appraisal refers adversely to Nixon's work products and his interpersonal relationships with supervisors and other employees. Both factors are relied upon by management as being unsatisfactory in terms of performance by 25/ Since the complaint herein is limited to discrimination based on the appraisal itself, no finding or recommendation is made as to whether Respondents violated 19(a)(1) by reason of Logan's statements to Associate General Counsel De Sio at the September 5, 1975 meeting.

26/ Record facts reveal Logan's conduct to have been a precipitous factor in this confrontation and equally culpable. Except for the apology tendered by Logan and his admission of wrongdoing, management erred in faulting Nixon and not the acting supervisor. In sum, I would have grave reservations in accepting Nixon's conduct as supportive of the conclusion that he was not qualified for a supervisory attorney. Nevertheless, I do not view any disparate treatment between these employees as being bottomed upon discriminatory considerations.

27/ The case of Environmental Protection Agency, A/SLMR No. 136, cited by Complainant is clearly distinguishable. Comments by management in that case re the union president were directly critical of her union activities and her being the focal point of all troublemakers. Moreover, attempts [Cont'd]

Nixon, resulting in Respondents' rating him not ready for a supervisory position. Contrariwise, Complainant deems the criticisms pretextual, and insists they mask the true reason for such a rating - the actions of Nixon in filing grievances and unfair labor practice complaints.

(1) Reference is made in the 1976 appraisal herein to various cases in which Nixon allegedly drafted documents that were deficient in certain respects. Thus it appears revisions were necessary in certain dismissal letters prepared in Admiral Merchants Motor Freight and Inland Center cases involving unfair labor practices. Moreover, in the representation case of Northern States Beef, Nixon was faulted for errors in using the wrong form, failing to include the names of the unions in the direction of election, and using language considered inappropriate. In Fremont Manufacturing Co., an unfair labor practice case assigned to him, Nixon's draft of a response to requested interrogatories was deemed unacceptable in that it did not cite a "lead" case, failed in its directness, and should have followed language utilized in a prior case involving similar response. Finally, it is asserted in the appraisal that in Ed Peeks Electric Co., a priority case involving a secondary boycott, Nixon failed to obtain certain jurisdictional data and necessary information from the charging employer and to incorporate same in an affidavit taken by him - all of which resulted in his supervisor's faulting his technique in taking affidavits.

While I do not feel it incumbent upon me to substitute my judgment for that of the Respondents in appraising or evaluating the work of its field personnel, record facts do establish that many of the errors attributable to Complainant were either explainable or, in some instances, also committed by his colleagues. Thus, the in camera inspection of the seven appraisals submitted of other staff members, similarly situated, reveals that several of these professionals who were rated well qualified to be supervisors, also drafted decisions or documents requiring modifications and revisions; and that errors in phraseology or the use of language appeared therein. Though comparisons of such errors with these attributable to Nixon may show they were not so extensive as appeared in the latter's documents, the difference is one of degree. Moreover, Complainant was called upon to draft but one representation decision during the appraisal period, and it is questionable whether he should have been expressly faulted for his mistakes appearing in the Northern States Beef decision. In respect to the affidavit taken by Nixon in the priority case, record facts reflect he obtained all the relevant information which the superintendent possessed, and that the Employer's attorney agreed to furnish the additional information. Accordingly, it may well be that Complainant's technique in obtaining affidavits was not justifiably singled out as being below par in this instance.

27/ [Cont'd] were made to restrict her activities as union president, and she was harassed and intimidated because she intervened as a union official, on behalf of a unit employee. No such union animus is evident herein, nor do I find that Respondent retaliated against Nixon for his union or concerted activities.

Despite the fact that the foregoing deficiencies might not be sufficient in the minds of others to deny the rating sought by Nixon, I am not persuaded that advertence to them demonstrates they were, in fact, a pretext for the actual basis of such denial, i.e. the "concerted" activity undertaken by Nixon in the past. To the extent that other colleagues committed like mistakes or performed poorly, and were rated well qualified to be supervisors, there may well be some disparity of treatment toward Complainant. However, unless this disparity arises from an illegal motivation, it cannot be concluded that such treatment is evidentiary of a violation of the Order. The evidence herein does not support such a conclusion.

(2) The appraisal lays stress upon Nixon's conduct in his relations with supervisory personnel and other staff members. Record facts do support a finding that, in many instances, Complainant was argumentative and hostile; that he resisted supervision as well as directions and instructions given him; that his resistance, as aforesaid, was expressed in a challenging manner; and that he refused to accept responsibility for his actions. In the Panipus situation, supra, Nixon became somewhat incensed at the criticism regarding the "Collyer" language he drafted in the dismissal letter. Admittedly, he became loud and angry, confronted Herzog with pointed finger, and challenged the suggested changes to the point of Herzog's exasperation. The union president, Wagner, attested to the "bad" reaction of the Complainant. In the Fremont and Harmon Industries cases acting supervisor Auslander was compelled to complain to management that he was having difficulty persuading Nixon to follow instructions. Although Auslander told Nixon that Herzog wanted the response to interrogatories in the Fremont case to follow a past sample, Nixon continued to maintain his draft was sufficient. In Harmon Industries the Complainant herein continued to assert that the additional information, which Regional Attorney Irwig wanted in the case, was not necessary; that Irwig was merely retaliating for the finding of an unfair labor practice on A/SLMR No. 671. Nixon pressed Auslander strongly to write a dissent - since the latter was inclined to agree that the additional data was not a prerequisite to a determination - and labeled the memo which Auslander wrote as a "whitewash".

The continual objections raised by Complainant to instructions given him, coupled with an insistence that his performance and prepared documents were satisfactory, were so posited that any supervisor might well conclude Nixon refused to perform as directed. While he did ultimately adhere as instructed, it frequently required the intercession of other individuals.

Moreover, Nixon's behavior in the Jones case and at the staff meeting manifested a belligerent attitude toward both his fellow workers and supervision. Although his reluctance to allow Summerville to sit at the counsel table may have been justified in view of previous arrangements between them, Nixon's reaction to his colleague's presence was harsh and resentful. It resulted in embarrassment to Summerville, and displayed poor interpersonal relations. In respect to the staff meeting in September, I agree that Logan's remarks to Nixon more provocative. Nevertheless, one may easily conclude that such challenging phrases by Logan do not justify a threat in return. ^{28/} Management may have acted hastily in impugning blame to Nixon without learning all the facts, but it could well refuse to countenance the threatened remark by Nixon to Logan.

The foregoing actions of Nixon during the course of his work performance, as set forth in the instant appraisal, were the focal point of Respondents' reluctance to evaluate him as qualified for a supervisory position. Nowhere does it appear in the said appraisal, as it did in the 1974 appraisal, that any supervisor relied upon or gave consideration to Nixon's processing of grievances or filing complaints during this evaluation. Neither am I convinced, based on the record as a whole, that such considerations were responsible, in whole or in part, for such an adverse rating. I cannot agree with Complainant that Respondents' dissatisfaction with him stems from a desire to retaliate by virtue of his protected activities or the findings of the ^{28/} Emphasis is placed upon the fact that Logan had a confrontation with employee Weghorst in the past; that such conduct, together with Logan's actions at the meeting, showed that this individual interacted poorly. Since Logan was later rated well qualified to be a supervisor, Complainant argues it shows disparate treatment. The record does not show consistent traits of rebellion by Logan, and I cannot conclude, in any event, that any such treatment sprang from discriminatory motivation.

Assistant Secretary in A/SLMR No. 671. Contrariwise, I am persuaded that Respondents genuinely believed that rating Nixon qualified to be supervisor would be inimical to the best interests of the regional office.

In sum, the accusations leveled against Complainant in the appraisal re his personality traits do find support in the record herein. There is corroborative evidence that he has evinced continued resistance to directives and that Nixon's temperament has induced confrontation with his supervisors. Under such circumstances, Respondents could well conclude, as they did, that such characteristics would militate against rating Complainant well qualified for a GS-14 supervisory position. While Nixon seeks to immunize his conduct from critical evaluation, by reason of its concerted or union activity, I am constrained to conclude that he was faulted for his behavior and attitude in handling case assignments rather than for his actions in filing grievances or complaints. This conclusion is buttressed by the fact that other co-workers, who were rated well qualified to be supervisors or appointed acting supervisors, occupied positions as either president of the union or some other official beforehand.

Viewing Complainant's behavior in the context of the record facts herein, and taking into consideration the past history of cases wherein it was found that Nixon's conduct warranted Respondents' refusal to rate him well qualified to be a supervisor, I am not persuaded that the refusal by the Board in the case at bar sprang from illegal considerations. Accordingly, I conclude that the 1976 appraisal was not discriminatorily motivated and that Respondents did not violate Sections 19(a)(1)(2) and (4) of the Order as alleged.

RECOMMENDATION

Having found that Respondents have not engaged in conduct prohibited by Sections 19(a)(1)(2) and (4) of Executive Order 11491, as amended, it is hereby recommended that the complaint herein be dismissed in its entirety.

UNITED STATES DEPARTMENT OF LABOR
ASSISTANT SECRETARY FOR LABOR-MANAGEMENT RELATIONS
SUMMARY OF DECISION AND DIRECTION OF ELECTION
OF THE ASSISTANT SECRETARY
PURSUANT TO SECTION 6 OF EXECUTIVE ORDER 11491, AS AMENDED

VETERANS ADMINISTRATION
A/SLMR No. 1016

This case involved a petition for consolidation of units filed by the National Association of Government Employees Union (NAGE) seeking to consolidate 19 units for which certain of its constituent local chapters are the current exclusive representatives at 15 Veterans Administration (VA) hospital facilities. Through the subject petition, the NAGE sought to establish a consolidated unit consisting of all the professional and nonprofessional employees employed in the Department of Medicine and Surgery who it represents exclusively. The VA contended, essentially, that the proposed consolidated unit was not appropriate because it did not meet the criteria established by Section 10(b) of the Order.

The Assistant Secretary noted that in its review of appeals from certain of the Assistant Secretary's decisions involving consolidation of units, the Federal Labor Relations Council (Council) construed the Assistant Secretary's establishment of a presumption in favor of consolidation "---as a recognition and affirmation of the strong policy in the Federal labor-management relations program of facilitating consolidation---." Based on the facts and policy considerations involved, the Assistant Secretary found that the proposed consolidated unit was appropriate for the purpose of exclusive recognition under the Order. Thus, he found that the unit sought essentially included all nonprofessional employees at the various hospitals involved, and the employees shared a common mission, essentially similar job classifications and working conditions, and similar labor relations practices in accordance with the VA's delegation of authority. He also noted that the VA and the NAGE had negotiated separate agreements covering the various units at the individual activities involved herein and that many of the subjects included in such agreements are dealt with uniformly. Under these circumstances, he concluded that the employees in the petitioned for consolidated unit share a community of interest and that this more comprehensive bargaining unit would promote effective dealings and efficiency of agency operations consistent with the policy of the Order.

Accordingly, he directed an election in the consolidated unit found appropriate.

Case No. 22-07730(UC)

NATIONAL ASSOCIATION OF GOVERNMENT EMPLOYEES

Petitioner

DECISION AND DIRECTION OF ELECTION

Upon a petition duly filed under Section 6 of Executive Order 11491, as amended, a hearing was held before Hearing Officer Bridget Sisson. The Hearing Officer's rulings made at the hearing are free from prejudicial error and are hereby affirmed.

The Petitioner, National Association of Government Employees, herein called NAGE, filed the instant petition seeking to consolidate 19 units at 15 Veterans Administration (VA) hospital facilities for which certain of its constituent locals are the current exclusive representatives. Through the subject petition, the NAGE seeks to establish a unit consisting of all the employees represented by the NAGE in the VA's Department of Medicine and Surgery. The NAGE represents the nonprofessional employees of the Department of Medicine and Surgery in the units set forth in Appendix I; the professional and nonprofessional employees in the units set forth in Appendix II; and the professional employees in the units set forth in Appendix III.

The VA contends that the proposed consolidated unit is not appropriate for the purpose of exclusive recognition because it does not meet the criteria established by Section 10(b) of the Order as it is not geographically or administratively coherent and, therefore, would not promote effective dealings and efficiency of agency operations and it is based solely on the extent of organization in the Agency's Department of Medicine and Surgery. On the other hand, the NAGE argues that the consolidation would merge 19 separate units into one thereby curtailing the need for excessive time spent at the bargaining table, could eliminate redundancy and would effectuate a more efficient bargaining process, and would enable the parties to negotiate a master agreement as well as supplemental agreements covering activities below the level of recognition.

The VA is engaged in a complete program for eligible veterans. It is divided for administrative purposes into three major departments, a National Cemetery system, 1/ and other administrative components. The Department of Medicine and Surgery, one of the three departments, provides medical care and treatment for veterans. This includes extensive medical education and research programs as well as the operation of hospitals and clinics. The proposed consolidated unit constitutes all of the units represented by the NAGE within this department. In this connection, the NAGE represents essentially all the nonprofessional employees at the particular facilities involved, two units of registered nurses, and two units which include professional as well as nonprofessional employees.

Although the record reveals that the hospitals may specialize in various types of medical care, the basic medical care engaged in by all hospitals is similar, as is the maintenance of such hospitals. In addition, the employees covered by the subject petition have essentially similar job classifications and working conditions. In this regard, the record shows that in the nonprofessional category, there are employed in the hospitals, among others, administrative, clerical, maintenance, and security employees. Within the professional category, there are, among others, nurses, doctors, and dentists.

Each of the hospitals is headed by a Hospital Director who has been delegated and effectively exercises day-to-day authority with respect to such matters as hiring, firing, transfer, promotion, reduction-in-force procedures, the resolution of grievances, and other matters affecting employee interests. The Hospital Directors negotiate the labor agreements for their facilities, subject to the approval of the Chief Medical Director of the Department of Medicine and Surgery. Hospital Directors report, through the Associate Deputy Chief Medical Director for Operations, to the Chief Medical Director of the Department of Medicine and Surgery in Washington, D.C. The record reveals that only a few employees transfer to other activities and are assigned temporary details.

In its review of appeals from certain of the Assistant Secretary's decisions involving the consolidation of units, 2/ the Federal Labor Relations Council, hereinafter called Council, construed the Assistant Secretary's establishment of a presumption in favor of consolidations "---as a recognition and affirmation of the strong policy in the Federal labor-management relations program of facilitating consolidation---." The Council noted further that such affirmation accurately reflects the Council's 1975 Report and Recommendations to the effect that the Assistant Secretary should be mindful of facilitating the consolidation of existing units which conform to the appropriate unit criteria contained in Section 10(b) of the Order.

Based on the foregoing facts and policy considerations, I find that the petitioned for consolidated unit is appropriate for the purpose of exclusive recognition under the Order. Thus, as indicated above, the unit sought encompasses all the employees within the Department of Medicine and Surgery represented by the NAGE which, in effect, includes essentially all the nonprofessional employees at the various hospitals involved. All the employees within the petitioned for consolidated unit share a common mission, essentially similar job classifications and working conditions, and similar labor relations practices in accordance with the VA's delegation of authority. Moreover, although the record shows that the VA and the NAGE have negotiated separate agreements covering the various units at the individual activities involved herein, many of the subjects included in such agreements are dealt with uniformly, including, among others, such subjects as evaluation of performance, annual ratings, training, position classification, equal employment opportunity, leave, health and safety. Under all of these circumstances, I find that the employees in the petitioned for consolidated unit, which includes essentially all the nonprofessional employees at the particular facilities involved, share a community of interest.

I find further that the petitioned for consolidated unit will promote effective dealings and efficiency of agency operations. Thus, the record reflects that all personnel and administrative authority for the VA lies with the Administrator of the VA. In this connection, the Agency's Central Personnel Office (CPO) develops agency policy on matters relating to personnel, which is set forth in the VA Personnel Manual and which is disseminated to the field, and the various facilities must implement those policies locally within that framework. The CPO also advises the field facilities on recruitment and placement of individuals in categories difficult to recruit and has prepared recruitment bulletins or advertising to be placed in publications. It also provides advice on the administration of the wage programs and salary. With respect to labor-management relations, the record reveals that the labor relations operations division of the CPO includes approximately six labor relations specialists. It advises the field facilities on labor relations matters and also provides advice to the Chief Medical Director of the Department of Medicine and Surgery in connection with approval of negotiated agreements. Although the CPO has only occasionally become directly involved in local negotiations, the record reveals that when its involvement has become necessary and it has been called upon, the staff has entered into local negotiations.

The evidence establishes that locally negotiated agreements or amendments to original agreements are sent to the labor relations operations division of the CPO for review, and the latter, in turn, forwards the agreements to the various specialty areas which return the agreements with their comments. The labor relations operation division then prepares memoranda either approving or disapproving the agreement involved, or approving with exceptions to certain agreement provisions. The final approval of negotiated agreements for the Department of Medicine and Surgery is made by the Chief Medical Director. Further, field activities must promptly notify the CPO when requests are made to negotiate new agreements, or to change existing ones; when requests are made to use the services of the Federal Mediation and Conciliation Service or the Federal Service Impasses Panel; when negotiability appeals are to be made to the Council; or when questions of grievability are raised with the Assistant Secretary. In addition, where negotiated agreements provide for automatic renewal upon notice, such notices may not issue without the approval of the CPO.

Under these circumstances, although the VA contends that the respective Hospital Directors have provided active input into the negotiated agreements, with the central office staff merely acting in a review capacity, and that the VA will be unable to continue to do this should the Assistant Secretary approve the consolidation, in my opinion, the evidence does not establish that the VA would have to substantially change its current labor relations procedures if the proposed consolidation is effectuated. Thus, it could, as before, utilize its field personnel and use their input as the basis for negotiations. Further, the establishment of such unit would not preclude the continued delegation to Hospital Directors of certain authority, such as the resolution of grievances. 3/ In addition, as indicated above, the evidence shows that the current agreements between the NAGE and the VA are essentially similar in many instances thereby evincing the commonality of interests throughout the units sought by the NAGE herein. Consequently, in my view, the proposed consolidation will not necessarily require a wholly new organizational entity for the purpose of negotiating agreements and will not necessarily affect the VA's decision making authority with respect to all matters affecting employee terms and conditions of employment. 4/

3/ Cf. AFGE Council of Prison Locals, FLRC No. 76A-38 (1977).

4/ It is noted that although the VA contends that some 28 "Medical Districts" might constitute separate appropriate units in a consolidation, the record indicates that the districts, which are not fully operative, provide only a mechanism for cooperation between hospitals in the districts, including the allocations of funds to the hospitals in the district, the placement of new programs, services, etc. and that their purpose is to provide health care to veterans within a given geographic area. They have not been established with authority over the hospitals in the districts or for the purpose of negotiating agreements. Thus, the "District Medical Director," who is also a

Based on these factors, including particularly the centralization of personnel functions and policies at the national level, I find that the proposed consolidated unit will promote effective dealings. Further, I find that as the proposed consolidated unit, covering all the employees represented by the NAGE in the Department of Medicine and Surgery, will provide for bargaining in a single unit rather than in the existing 19 bargaining units, it will promote a more comprehensive bargaining unit structure and will, therefore, promote the efficiency of the Agency's operations, and is consistent with the policy of the Order set forth above. 5/

Accordingly, I find that the petitioned for consolidated unit, consisting of professional and nonprofessional employees as set forth in Appendices I, II, and III, is appropriate for the purpose of exclusive recognition under Executive Order 11491, as amended. 6/

The VA requested that in the event the proposed consolidated unit was found to be appropriate an election be held to determine whether or not the employees involved desire to be represented in the proposed consolidated unit by the NAGE. As noted above, the unit found appropriate includes professional employees. However, the Assistant Secretary is prohibited by Section 10(b)(4) of the Order from including professional employees in a unit with nonprofessional employees unless a majority of the professional employees votes for inclusion in such a unit. Accordingly, the desires of the professional employees as to the inclusion in a unit with nonprofessional employees must be ascertained. I shall, therefore, direct that separate elections be conducted in the following voting groups:

- 4/ a Hospital Director of one of the hospitals in the district, brings together directors of the facilities for planning and development purposes. The record reveals that the districts have only small administrative staffs with no personnel staff at the district level.
- 5/ The fact that the proposed consolidated unit applies only to existing units in the Department of Medicine and Surgery and, therefore, includes and excludes similarly situated employees does not render such unit inappropriate inasmuch as it is noted that consolidation procedures apply only to situations where there is no question concerning representation and the unit herein meets the criteria specified in Section 10(b) of the Order and will promote a more comprehensive bargaining unit structure. See FLRC No. 77A-88, cited above in footnote 2.
- 6/ Insofar as the actual state of the exclusively recognized units set forth in Appendices I, II, and III at the time of the consolidation election may differ, if at all, from the unit found appropriate herein, such unit descriptions should be so modified.

Voting Group (a): all the professional employees in the units set forth in Appendices II and III.

Voting Group (b): all the nonprofessional employees in the units set forth in Appendices I and II.

Employees in the nonprofessional voting group (b) will be polled whether they desire to be represented for the purpose of exclusive recognition in the proposed consolidated unit by the National Association of Government Employees.

Employees in the professional voting group (a) will be asked two questions on their ballots: (1) whether they desire to be represented for the purpose of exclusive recognition in the proposed consolidated unit by the National Association of Government Employees, and (2) whether or not they desire to be represented in a separate consolidated professional unit if the proposed consolidated unit is approved by a majority of all the employees voting.

The valid votes cast by all the eligible employees will be tallied to determine if a majority of the valid votes have been cast in favor of the proposed consolidated unit. If a majority of the valid votes have not been cast in favor of the proposed consolidated unit, the employees will be taken to have indicated their desire to continue to be represented in their current units of exclusive recognition. If a majority of the valid votes are cast in favor of the proposed consolidated unit, the ballots of the professional employees in voting group (a) will then be tallied to determine whether they wish to be included in the same consolidated unit with the nonprofessional employees. Unless a majority of the valid votes of voting group (a) are cast for inclusion in the same consolidated unit as the nonprofessional employees, the professional employees will be taken to have indicated their desire to constitute a separate consolidated professional unit, and an appropriate certification will be issued by the Area Administrator.

The unit determination in the subject case is based, in part, then, upon the results of the election among the professional employees. However, I will now make the following findings in regard to the appropriate unit:

1. If a majority of the professional employees does not vote for inclusion in the same unit as the nonprofessional employees, I find the following units appropriate for the purpose of exclusive recognition within the meaning of Section 10 of the Order:

- (a) All professional employees in the units set forth in Appendices II and III.

- (b) All nonprofessional employees in the units set forth in Appendices I and II.

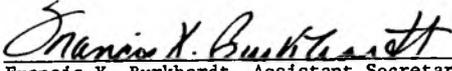

2. If a majority of the professional employees votes for inclusion in the same consolidated unit as the nonprofessional employees, I find the following unit appropriate for the purpose of exclusive recognition within the meaning of Section 10 of the Order:

All General Schedule and Wage Grade professional and nonprofessional employees in the units set forth in Appendices I, II and III.

DIRECTION OF ELECTION

An election by secret ballot shall be conducted among the employees in the voting groups described above, as early as possible, but not later than 60 days from the date below. The appropriate Area Administrator shall supervise the election, subject to the Assistant Secretary's Regulations. Eligible to vote are those in the voting groups who were employed during the payroll period immediately preceding the date below, including employees who did not work during that period because they were out ill, or on vacation or on furlough, including those in the military service who appear in person at the polls. Ineligible to vote are employees who have quit or were discharged for cause since the designated payroll period and who have not been rehired or reinstated before the election date. Those eligible shall vote whether or not they desire to be represented for the purpose of exclusive recognition in the proposed consolidated unit by the National Association of Government Employees.

UNITED STATES DEPARTMENT OF LABOR
ASSISTANT SECRETARY FOR LABOR-MANAGEMENT RELATIONS
SUMMARY OF DECISION AND ORDER OF THE ASSISTANT SECRETARY
PURSUANT TO SECTION 6 OF EXECUTIVE ORDER 11491, AS AMENDED

OCCUPATIONAL SAFETY AND HEALTH REVIEW COMMISSION
A/SLMR No. 1017

This case involved an unfair labor practice complaint filed by American Federation of Government Employees, Local 12, AFL-CIO (AFGE) alleging that the Respondent violated Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order by refusing to meet and confer in good faith with regard to the implementation of a plan to relocate the office space of various unit employees, and by bypassing the AFGE by negotiating directly with unit employees on the impact of the relocation plan outside the presence of union representatives. The Respondent contended that none of the alleged actions constituted a violation of the Order.

In agreement with Administrative Law Judge, the Assistant Secretary found that the Respondent violated Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order by refusing to provide information relevant to the Respondent's relocation decision and by its continuing refusal to negotiate on the matter of the implementation of the relocation and the impact on employees adversely affected by such action. Noting the lack of exceptions by the AFGE, he further found, in agreement with the Administrative Law Judge, that the Respondent did not improperly bypass the AFGE in violation of Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order by having discussions with the unit employees without AFGE representatives present. Accordingly, the Assistant Secretary issued an appropriate remedial order for the violations found herein.

DECISION AND ORDER

On January 11, 1978, Administrative Law Judge Salvatore J. Arrigo issued his Recommended Decision and Order in the above-entitled proceeding, finding that Respondent had engaged in certain unfair labor practices and recommending that it take certain affirmative action as set forth in the attached Administrative Law Judge's Recommended Decision and Order. Thereafter, the Respondent filed exceptions and a supporting brief with respect to the Administrative Law Judge's Recommended Decision and Order and the Complainant filed an answering brief. 1/

The Assistant Secretary has reviewed the rulings of the Administrative Law Judge made at the hearing and finds that no prejudicial error was committed. The rulings are hereby affirmed. Upon consideration of the entire record in this case, including the Respondent's exceptions and supporting brief and the Complainant's answering brief, I hereby adopt the Administrative Law Judge's findings, conclusions and recommendations.

ORDER

Pursuant to Section 6(b) of Executive Order 11491, as amended, and Section 203.26(b) of the Regulations, the Assistant Secretary of Labor for Labor-Management Relations hereby orders that the Occupational Safety and Health Review Commission shall:

1/ The Administrative Law Judge recommended dismissal of that portion of the complaint alleging that the Respondent improperly bypassed the Complainant in violation of Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order by having discussions with unit employees without affording the Complainant the opportunity to be present. No exceptions were filed with respect to this determination by the Administrative Law Judge.

1. Cease and desist from:

(a) Relocating unit employees without first notifying the American Federation of Government Employees, Local 12, AFL-CIO, the exclusive representative of its employees, and affording it a reasonable opportunity to meet and confer, to the extent consonant with law and regulations, on the procedures to be used in effectuating the decision to relocate and on the impact such decision will have on employees adversely affected by such action.

(b) Withholding or failing to provide, upon request by the American Federation of Government Employees, Local 12, AFL-CIO, any information concerning the relocation of employees which is relevant and necessary to enable the American Federation of Government Employees, Local 12, AFL-CIO, to discharge its obligation as the exclusive representative to represent effectively all employees in the exclusively recognized unit.

(c) In any like or related manner interfering with, restraining, or coercing employees in the exercise of their rights assured by Executive Order 11491, as amended.

2. Take the following affirmation actions in order to effectuate the purposes and policies of Executive Order 11491, as amended:

(a) Notify the American Federation of Government Employees, Local 12, AFL-CIO, or any other exclusive representative of its employees, of any future decision to relocate personnel prior to its effectuation and afford it a reasonable opportunity to meet and confer, to the extent consonant with law and regulations, on the procedures to be used in effectuating the decision and on the impact such decision will have on employees adversely affected by such action.

(b) Provide, upon request by the American Federation of Government Employees, Local 12, AFL-CIO, any information concerning the relocation of employees which is relevant and necessary to enable the American Federation of Government Employees, Local 12, AFL-CIO, to discharge its obligation as the exclusive representative to represent effectively all employees in the exclusively recognized unit.

(c) Post at the facilities of the Occupational Safety and Health Review Commission copies of the attached notice marked "Appendix" on forms to be furnished by the Assistant Secretary of Labor for Labor-Management Relations. Upon receipt of such forms, they shall be signed by the Chairman, and shall be posted and maintained by him for 60 consecutive days thereafter, in conspicuous places, including all bulletin boards and other places where notices to employees are customarily posted. The Chairman shall take reasonable steps to insure that such notices are not altered, defaced, or covered by any other material.

(d) Pursuant to Section 203.27 of the Regulations, notify the Assistant Secretary, in writing, within 30 days from the date of this order as to what steps have been taken to comply herewith.

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED that the complaint, insofar as it alleges that the Respondent violated Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order by negotiating directly with unit employees be, and it hereby is, dismissed.

RECOMMENDED DECISION AND ORDER

Preliminary Statement

This proceeding arises under the provisions of Executive Order 11491, as amended (hereinafter referred to as the Order). Pursuant to the Regulations of the Assistant Secretary of Labor for Labor-Management Relations (hereinafter referred to as the Assistant Secretary), a Notice of Hearing on Complaint issued on March 24, 1977 with reference to alleged violations of Sections 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order. The complaint, filed on January 27, 1977 by American Federation of Government Employees, Local 12, AFL-CIO (hereinafter referred to as the Union or Complainant), alleged that the Occupational Safety and Health Review Commission (hereinafter referred to as the Activity or Respondent), violated the Order by refusing to meet and confer in good faith with regard to the implementation of a plan to relocate various office spaces of unit employees and bypassing the Union by negotiating directly with unit employees on the impact of the relocation plan outside the presence of Union representatives.

At the hearing held on May 16, 17 and July 14, 1977 the parties were represented and afforded full opportunity to adduce evidence and call, examine and cross-examine witnesses. Respondent made oral argument and both parties filed briefs. ^{1/}

Upon the entire record in this matter, my observation of the witnesses and their demeanor and from my evaluation of the evidence, I make the following findings of fact and conclusions of law:

Chronology of Events

On September 16, 1976 the Union was certified as the exclusive collective bargaining representative of all professional and nonprofessional employees of the Activity excluding Administrative Law Judges, management officials, confidential employees, employees engaged in Federal personnel work in other than a purely clerical capacity and supervisors as defined in the Order. The unit encompassed approximately 100 employees.

^{1/} During the hearing on May 17 the parties agreed to informally settle the case. The settlement consisted of the Activity sending a letter to the Union addressing the matters set forth in the complaint and the Union's submission of a letter of withdrawal to the appropriate authority. The hearing was adjourned indefinitely during which time the Activity sent the required letter to the Union. However, the Union refused to execute the withdrawal request alleging that the Respondent refused it use of the Activity's copying facilities to make duplicates of the settlement letter for submission with the withdrawal request. The Union moved that the hearing be reopened and the Activity opposed challenging the Union's recitation of the facts in this regard. I granted the Union's motion and denied the Activity's motion to forward the "settlement" to the Assistant Regional Administrator. I hereby reaffirm my rulings.

Around this same time, the Activity decided it would abolish a rarely used courtroom in order to provide more space in an effort to alleviate the overcrowding which existed in some of its offices. ^{2/} Although the specific details had not been worked out, it was decided at this time to relocate the library to the courtroom space and relocate various staff employees. Pursuant thereto, between September 24 and 28, 1976 the Activity submitted to the General Services Administration (GSA) various requests that construction and alteration work be authorized to accommodate staff relocation. However, according to the Activity's Assistant Executive Secretary, the construction plans could be and indeed were modified before actual work began since the work authorization requests were not final until early November 1976 at which time they were authorized by GSA and certified by the Activity. Actual construction under the work authorizations commenced on November 4, 1976. Employees began to be relocated between November 5 and 10.

With regard to the decision to move the library to the courtroom space, sometime in late September 1976 a management representative informed the librarian, a unit employee, that the library would be relocated and presented the librarian with a room sketch and asked her to give her comments and recommendation as to how the library furniture and shelving should be arranged. The librarian complied with this request and discussed the matter with management on numerous occasions thereafter.

The librarian informed Janice Xaver, the Union's designated Spokeperson, of the possible future relocation of the library. Further, through rumor Xaver heard that the courtroom was going to be used for some other purpose. Accordingly, on September 30, 1976 Xaver sent a memorandum to Lane Gaebler, the Activity's Executive Director, indicating the Union's concern over "...several actions management has taken or apparently is planning to take, which involve changes in working conditions..." Xaver went on to state that the Union believed that "...management should affirmately seek to confer with...(the Union)...concerning such proposed changes while they are still in the planning stage rather than attempting to promulgate the changes and having...(the Union) ...protest." ^{3/} Xaver concluded by requesting a meeting, as soon as possible, to discuss six items including the "physical relocation of offices on the 4th floor" and "(a)ny other proposed changes...." By October 5, 1977, no response to this request was received by the Union and on that day another request for a meeting was sent to Gaebler by Xaver.

^{2/} The Activity's operations were housed on the 4th, 6th, 7th and 11th floors of a privately owned building.

^{3/} This sentiment was previously expressed during a Union-Activity meeting conducted on September 16.

On October 8, 1976, Xaver and Gaebler met. Both were accompanied by another representative of their respective organizations. The Union representatives indicated they understood the Activity planned to physically relocate various offices and expressed the view that anything concerning the relocation was negotiable. The Union stated that any kind of plan or proposal which affects working conditions was a negotiable matter and the Activity should have the Union's input and proposals and negotiate on how the change would occur and the effects thereof before any such plan was implemented. Gaebler responded that there were no definite plans to relocate at that time, no plans to show the Union and therefore nothing to talk about.

On October 13, 1976 Gaebler called Xaver by telephone and told her that management had decided to proceed with a relocation and management had visited the four offices involved and talked with the employees who were affected by the plan. 4/ Xaver asked which offices were involved and was told the Office of Information, Gaebler's staff, the library and the Chief Administrative Law Judge's office. 5/

Around this same time Paul Wallace, Counsel to the Commission and "titular head" of the Information Office, approached William Wheat, an employee in the Information Office, and asked him the whereabouts of the Director of Information. On being informed that the Director was not present, Wallace asked Wheat to go to the Executive Director's Office to look at the proposed plans for relocating the Information Office and "see what he thought" of them. At the Executive Secretary's office Wheat was shown a blueprint of the Activity's fourth floor covered by a transparent overlay on which proposed office space was penciled in. Wheat never made known his reactions to the plan to anyone in management. In any event, the plan was not implemented and at some undisclosed time a second floor plan relocating the Information Office to the seventh floor was shown to Information Office employees by the Director of Information. The employees discussed the plan with the Director and the plan was modified by constructing an additional wall and installing another telephone extension before the relocation occurred.

On October 20, 1976 Union Spokesperson Xaver met with Stanley Schwartz, the Activity's designated liaison for day-to-day relations with the Union. Xaver took the position that any matters dealing with the relocation of office space was a negotiable subject and requested to negotiate on the matter including being shown any diagrams or blueprints which would indicate the Activity's specific plans. Xaver indicated that the Union needed this information to form their counterproposals to management's proposals on the subject. Schwartz stated that he thought management was going to take the position that the relocation was non-negotiable and related that management personnel had already met with employees on the matter and indicated he thought that was all management was required to do. Xaver expressed her opposition to the Activity's meeting with employees to discuss the relocation. Schwartz contended it was reasonable for management to talk to employees to discuss the subject. Schwartz gave, as an example, a situation on his own staff where Schwartz had to resolve a dispute concerning employees choosing the offices to which they would be assigned. 6/

Xaver and Schwartz met again on October 27, 1976. The meeting was arranged to discuss various items which were the topics of the October 20 meeting. At this time Xaver again requested to see the diagrams and blueprints of the relocation and asked to negotiate on the matter. Xaver stated that the Union already had grounds for an unfair labor practice charge because the Activity had refused to negotiate with the Union and met with employees without giving the Union the opportunity to be present. Schwartz acknowledged that the Activity had met with the employees and "shown them all the furniture" and expressed his belief that this was all the Activity was required to do.

Around this same time Xaver noticed filing cabinets being removed from the Activity's Executive Secretary's office and was told by some employees that the Judge's bench had been removed from the hearing room. Accordingly, on October 29, 1976 the Union filed with the Activity the unfair labor practice charge from which these proceedings arise.

Positions of the Parties

The Union contends that the Activity violated the Order by its failure to furnish the Union information necessary to negotiate on the relocation; by its failure to meet and confer on matters concerning the implementation and impact of the relocation; and by its discussing the relocation with unit employees outside the presence of the Union. The Activity denies that any of its actions constituted a violation of the Order and specifically contends that no violation of the Order occurred since management did not finally decide on a particular floor plan for the relocation until early November 1976. Therefore, the Activity urges, there was no obligation to negotiate with the Union on the matter until that time, which was subsequent to the filing of the charge.

Discussion and Conclusions

Under the provisions of Section 11(b) and 12(b) of the Order the Activity was privileged to unilaterally decide on relocating certain of its unit employees without negotiating with the Union on that decision. 7/ However, the Activity nevertheless was obligated to afford the Union the opportunity to meet and confer in good faith, to the extent consonant with law and regulation, on the procedures to be utilized in effectuating the decision and on the impact such decision would have on employees adversely affected by such action. 8/

In the case herein the decision to relocate some of the employees was made sometime in mid-September when it was decided to eliminate the courtroom to make available more office space. While that decision was final, the Activity had not completely decided on how that decision would be implemented in all requests. I find it was at this point that the obligation to inform the Union of the decision to relocate arose and upon request, bargain on matters concerning implementation and adverse affect to the extent that the Activity's plans were formulated.

7/ See Social Security Administration, Bureau of Hearings and Appeals, A/SLMR No. 828; U.S. Department of Transportation, Federal Highway Administration, Vancouver, Washington, A/SLMR No 612.

8/ Social Security Administration, supra.

The Union, at all times since at least September 30, 1976 made a broad continuing demand on the Activity to bargain on the relocation to whatever extent the action was negotiable. This request was met on October 8 with a false denial that a decision had been made to relocate employees and a refusal to produce whatever plans were available at the time. On October 13, 1976 the Activity informed the Union of its decision to proceed with a relocation. However, in response to further Union requests on October 20 and 27 for information and negotiation on the subject, the Activity took the position that the matter was not negotiate and provided the Union with no information on the relocation.

I conclude that the Activity was obliged to provide the Union what information it had at the time of demand, even though it had not yet decided on precisely where all employees would ultimately be located. I further conclude that the Activity never had any intention to provide the Union with information or plans or to negotiate with the Union relative to the relocation at any time material hereto. Accordingly, I conclude the Activity violated Sections 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order by its continuing refusal to provide information relevant to the relocation and by its continuing refusal to negotiate on the matter of implementation of the relocation and impact on employees adversely affected by such action. 9/

With regard to the Activity's discussion of matters with employees outside the presence of Union representatives, a threshold requirement to establish a violation of the Order by management's dealing directly with a unit employee is that the matter under consideration must relate to the collective bargaining relationship. 10/ By the specific provisions of Sections 11(b) and 12(b), the Order substantially circumscribes the realm of negotiable matters and sets out privileged areas of management functions.

9/ The Activity's November 30, 1976 response to the Union's October 29 unfair labor practice charge, supra, invites the Union to advise the Activity of an adverse impact so the parties "may meet...to seek a proper solution." I find that meeting at this juncture, without the Activity having provided relevant information and bargained about implementation, in these circumstances, would have been futile.

10/ See generally Department of the Navy, Naval Air Station, Fallon, Nevada, FLRC No. 74A-80 (November 14, 1975), Report No. 87 and National Aeronautics and Space Administration (NASA), Washington, D.C., FLRC No. 74A-95 (October 24, 1975), Report No. 84;

Section 11(b) of the Order provides, in relevant part:

"...the obligation to meet and confer does not include matters with respect to the mission of an agency; its budget; its organization; the number of employees; and the numbers, types, and grades of positions or employees assigned to an organizational unit; work project or tour of duty; the technology of performing its work; or its internal security practices. This does not preclude the parties from negotiating agreements providing appropriate arrangements for employees adversely affected by the impact of realignment of work forces or technological change."

Section 12(b) provides:

"management officials of the agency retain the right, in accordance with applicable laws and regulations-

- (1) to direct employees of the agency;
- (2) to hire, promote, transfer, assign, and retain employees in positions within the agency, and to suspend, demote, discharge, or take other disciplinary action against employees;
- (3) to relieve employees from duties because of lack of work or for other legitimate reasons;
- (4) to maintain the efficiency of the Government operations entrusted to them;
- (5) to determine the methods, means, and personnel by which such operations are to be conducted; and
- (6) to take whatever actions may be necessary to carry out the mission of the agency in situations of emergency...."

Thus, in my view, by operation of the Order, decisions involving Section 11(b) and 12(b) management prerogatives are to be treated as though they do not relate to the collective bargaining relationship except as to the implementation and adverse impact of those decisions. Therefore, I conclude that conversations with employees relative to the privileged aspects of Sections 11(b) and 12(b) matters may be conducted outside the presence of a union without running afoul of the unfair labor practice proscriptions of the Order. On the other hand, conversations with unit employees relative to implementation and the adverse impact of those decisions would have to be judged by a different standard. Further, while I have concluded that the relocation itself was not negotiable, the Federal Labor Relations has held that certain matters which might arise by virtue of a relocation are negotiable. In its decision in National Treasury Employees Union Chapter No. 010 and Internal Revenue Service, Chicago District, FLRC No. 74A-93 (February 24, 1976), Report No. 98, the Council found negotiable union proposals concerning the location of employees and the maintenance of adequate lighting. In that same decision, the Council declared non-negotiable specific proposals regarding office space and the location of office equipment and telephones.

In the case herein the precise nature of the conversations between agency management and unit employees must be evaluated to determine whether the discussions related to legitimate matters of Union concern, or otherwise. The record evidence reveals that conversations occurred between management and the librarian at which time the librarian's opinion was solicited as to the arrangement of library furniture and shelving; between management and employees where general opinions about office layout and furniture were sought; and between management and employees where the changes were discussed after which some employees suggestions were incorporated into the relocation plans. While the Activity's representative Schwartz acknowledged resolving a dispute between employees over office selection, the testimony in this regard, as with the instances mentioned above, is conclusionary and devoid of essential facts and details necessary to determine the exact nature and context of the conversation. Accordingly, I find, that the record evidence is insufficient to establish that the Activity's discussions with employees encompassed matters which the Activity was obligated to bargain with the Union. I therefore will recommend dismissal of the allegation that the Activity violated the Order by conducting meetings with employees and bypassing the Union.

Recommendations

Having found that Respondent has engaged in conduct violative of Sections 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order through its failure to provide relevant information to the Union and negotiate with the Union with regard to the implementation of the relocation and the impact upon employees adversely affected, I recommend that the Assistant Secretary adopt the order as hereinafter set forth which is designed to effectuate the policies of the Order. As to all other allegations, I recommend the complaint be dismissed.

Order

Pursuant to Section 6(b) of Executive Order 11491, as amended, and Section 203.26(b) of the Regulations, the Assistant Secretary of Labor for Labor-Management Relations hereby orders that the Occupational Safety and Health Review Commission, shall:

1. Cease and desist from:

(a) Relocating unit employees without notifying American Federation of Government Employees, Local 12, AFL-CIO, the exclusive representative, and affording it a reasonable opportunity to meet and confer, to the extent consonant with law and regulations, on the procedures to be used in effectuating the decision and on the impact such decision will have on employees adversely affected by such action.

(b) Withholding or failing to provide, upon request by American Federation of Government Employees, Local 12, AFL-CIO, any information relevant to the relocation of employees, which information is necessary to enable American Federation of Government Employees, Local 12, AFL-CIO, to discharge its obligation as the exclusive representative to represent effectively all employees in the exclusively recognized unit.

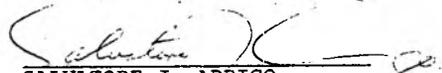

(c) In any like or related manner interfering with, restraining, or coercing employees in the exercise of their rights assured by Executive Order 11491, as amended.

2. Take the following affirmative action in order to effectuate the purposes and policies of Executive Order 11491, as amended:

(a) Notify the American Federation of Government Employees, Local 12, AFL-CIO, or any other exclusive representative of the employees, of any future decision to relocate personnel prior to its effectuation, and upon request, make available to such representative any information relevant to the relocation and afford such representative the opportunity to meet and confer in good faith, to the extent consonant with law and regulations, on the procedures to be utilized in effectuating the decision and on the impact such decision will have on the employees adversely affected by such action.

(b) Post at the facilities of the Occupational Safety and Health Review Commission, copies of the attached notice marked "Appendix" on forms to be furnished by the Assistant Secretary of Labor for Labor-Management Relations. Upon receipt of such forms, they shall be signed by the Chairman, and shall be posted and maintained by him for 60 consecutive days thereafter, in conspicuous places, including all bulletin boards and other places where notices to employees are customarily posted. The Chairman shall take reasonable steps to insure that such notices are not altered, defaced, or covered by any other material.

(c) Pursuant to Section 203.27 of the Regulations, notify the Assistant Secretary, in writing, within 30 days from the date of this order as to what steps have been taken to comply herewith.

DECISION AND ORDER

This case involved a petition for clarification of unit filed by the Occupational Safety and Health Review Commission (OSHRC) seeking to clarify whether OSHRC Commissioners' staff attorneys, and staff attorneys in OSHRC's Office of Central Review, should be excluded from the exclusively recognized unit represented by the American Federation of Government Employees, Local 12, AFL-CIO (AFGE). The OSHRC contended that the Commission's integrity as an impartial adjudicatory body would be jeopardized by potential conflicts of interest that the attorneys could face in reviewing cases involving AFL-CIO affiliated unions, and petitioned to have them excluded from the AFGE unit under Section 3(d) of the Order.

Upon a petition duly filed under Section 6 of Executive Order 11491, as amended, a hearing was held before Hearing Officer Daniel F. Sutton. The Hearing Officer's rulings made at the hearing are free from prejudicial error and are hereby affirmed.

The Assistant Secretary concluded that the attorneys should not be excluded from the unit. In this regard, he found that the Occupational Safety and Health Act of 1970 was not a "labor-management relations law" within the meaning of Section 3(d) and that the conflicts of interest that Section 3(d) was intended to eliminate were not present here. He also noted that there was no contention, nor any basis to find, that the employees at issue should be excluded as supervisors or management officials, or under any other exclusionary category set forth in Section 10(b) of the Order.

Upon the entire record in this case, the Assistant Secretary finds:

Accordingly, the Assistant Secretary ordered the petition dismissed.

The Activity-Petitioner, herein called OSHRC or "the Commission," filed a petition for clarification of unit to determine whether the OSHRC Commissioners' staff attorneys and staff attorneys in OSHRC's Office of Central Review should be excluded from the exclusively recognized unit represented by the American Federation of Government Employees, Local 12, AFL-CIO, herein called AFGE. 1/ The OSHRC contends, among other things, that its integrity as an impartial adjudicatory body would be jeopardized by potential conflicts of interest faced by the employees at issue when reviewing cases involving unions affiliated with the AFL-CIO, if those employees were represented by the AFGE. 2/ The OSHRC maintains that,

1/ The AFGE was granted exclusive recognition on September 16, 1976, for a unit of professional and nonprofessional employees at the OSHRC, with the standard exclusions. Administrative Law Judges also were expressly excluded from the unit.

2/ The parties stipulated that between three and four percent of the cases reaching the OSHRC involve labor organizations as intervenors. The percentage of cases actually involving AFL-CIO affiliates as intervenors was not specified.

notwithstanding the amount of supervision the attorneys receive, their present role in the decision-making process is considerable and places them in a position to bring about decisions favorable to AFL-CIO affiliates. Thus, the Commission seeks to have the employees at issue excluded from the unit 3/ as "employees engaged in administering a labor-management relations law" under Section 3(d) of the Order. 4/

The OSHRC, created by the Occupational Safety and Health Act of 1970, is a three-member adjudicatory body which resolves disputes arising between private employers and the Secretary of Labor regarding employer compliance with Federal safety and health standards. The Commission is not connected with the Department of Labor. Its hearings are conducted by an independent panel of Administrative Law Judges whose decisions are subject to discretionary review by the OSHRC Commissioners.

Cases which are before the OSHRC are screened by its Office of Central Review (OCR), whose staff attorneys, one of the groups at issue herein, recommend either further review or dismissal. These recommendations are subject to at least one level of supervisory review before submission to the OCR Chief Counsel, who, in turn, transmits those cases recommended for review to the Chief Counsel of each Commissioner. Cases are then assigned to the Commissioner's staff attorney, who prepares an agenda memorandum recommending final disposition. Each memorandum goes through a supervisor and the Commissioner's Chief Counsel, and then reaches the Commissioner. After an oral agenda, the case is returned to a staff attorney who drafts a final decisional memorandum. At each level of the decision-making process, attorneys, supervisors, chief counsels, and the Commissioners can disagree, either orally or in writing, with a proposed case disposition.

Based on the circumstances herein, I conclude that the employees in question should not be excluded from the existing bargaining unit. In this regard, I find that the Occupational Safety and Health Act of 1970 is not a "labor-management relations law" within the meaning of Section 3(d) of the Order, in that the primary mission of OSHA is to regulate safety and health standards. Its mission does not involve the administration of a labor-management relations law as that term is utilized in the Executive Order. The purpose of the Section 3(d) prohibition is to protect against potential conflicts of interest which could be faced by Federal employees responsible for administering provisions of labor relations programs if they were represented by a labor organization which competes with other labor organizations for benefits under such programs. 5/ In my view, no such potential conflict

3/ I have been advised administratively that these employees were eligible to vote in the representation election which was held in June 1976. There is no evidence that their voting status was challenged at that time.

4/ Section 3(d) of the Order provides "Employees engaged in administering a labor-management relations law or this Order shall not be represented by a labor organization which also represents other groups of employees under the law or this Order, or which is affiliated directly or indirectly with an organization which represents such a group of employees."

5/ See Section L. of the Study Committee's Report and Recommendations (August 1969).

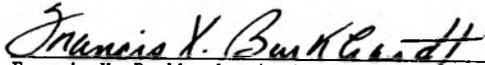

is present here, especially in view of the limited number of cases reaching the OSHRC involving labor organizations as intervenors in general and AFL-CIO affiliates as intervenors in particular.

Accordingly, I shall order that the petition herein be dismissed. 6/

FRATERNAL ORDER OF POLICE, FEDERAL

DECISION AND DIRECTION OF ELECTION

In this case, the Fraternal Order of Police, Federal Law Enforcement Officers, Lodge 5-F, (FOP) filed a representation petition seeking an election in a unit of all police and detectives employed by the Activity. The Activity and the American Federation of Government Employees, Local 1603, AFL-CIO, (AFGE) took the position that the petition was, in effect, an attempt to sever the claimed employees from the activity-wide unit represented exclusively by the AFGE. While conceding that such employees were excluded from the activity-wide unit description contained in their current negotiated agreement, they contended that such exclusion was due to a mutual mistake which had been corrected. Assuming arguendo that the claimed employees were unrepresented, the Activity and the AFGE contended that the petitioned for unit was inappropriate because the claimed employees do not share a separate and distinct community of interest, and such a unit would not promote effective dealings and efficiency of agency operations.

Upon a petition duly filed under Section 6 of Executive Order 11491, as amended, a hearing was held before Hearing Officer Daryl F. Stephens. The Hearing Officer's rulings made at the hearing are free from prejudicial error and are hereby affirmed.

The Assistant Secretary concluded that the unit of guards and detectives sought in the petition was appropriate for the purpose of exclusive recognition. In this connection, he noted that the petitioned for employees were not included in the AFGE's existing exclusively recognized unit as there were no employees in their job classifications at the time AFGE was granted exclusive recognition. He noted also that they were specifically excluded from the AFGE's unit in the parties' current agreement, and there was no evidence that they had been effectively represented by the AFGE, or that the parties had sought to amend their agreement with respect to the exclusion of guards.

Upon the entire record in this case, including briefs submitted by the Activity and the Intervenor, the American Federation of Government Employees, Local 1603, AFL-CIO, herein called AFGE, the Assistant Secretary finds:

Noting that the claimed employees are employed in the Security Department of the Activity and that they perform similar and related work under similar working conditions and under the same position classification, the Assistant Secretary found that the petitioned for unit constituted both a functionally distinct grouping of employees within the meaning of Section 10(b) of the Order, and a residual unit of all the unrepresented nonprofessional employees of the Activity. Under these circumstances, he concluded that the claimed employees share a community of interest which is separate and distinct from other employees of the Activity and that such a unit would prevent further fragmentation thereby promoting effective dealings and efficiency of agency operations.

1. The labor organizations involved claim to represent certain employees of the Activity.

2. The Petitioner, Fraternal Order of Police, Federal Law Enforcement Officers, Lodge 5-F, hereinafter called FOP, seeks an election in a

1/ The name of the Activity appears as amended at the hearing.

Accordingly, the Assistant Secretary ordered that an election be conducted among the employees in the unit found appropriate.

unit consisting of all police officers and detectives of the Naval Air Test Center/Naval Air Station, Patuxent River, Maryland, excluding professional employees, management officials, employees engaged in Federal personnel work in other than a purely clerical capacity, and supervisors as defined in the Order. Both the Activity and the AFGE contend that the claimed employees currently are included in an activity-wide unit represented exclusively by the AFGE, and, therefore, the subject petition is, in effect, an attempt to sever the claimed employees from such unit. In this regard, while the Activity and the AFGE concede that the claimed employees are expressly excluded from the activity-wide unit description contained in their current negotiated agreement, they contend that such exclusion was due to a mutual mistake which has been corrected. Assuming arguendo that the claimed employees are unrepresented, the Activity and the AFGE contend that the petitioned for unit is inappropriate because the claimed employees do not share a separate and distinct community of interest and such a unit will not promote effective dealings and efficiency of agency operations.

The petitioned for employees are located in two of the three branches of the Activity's Security Department, which is under the operational direction of the Commanding Officer of the Naval Air Station (NAS). The latter, in turn, is responsible for maintaining and operating facilities and for providing services and material support to the head of the Activity, the Commanding Officer of the Naval Air Test Center (NATC), whose mission essentially is to perform tests and evaluations of the Naval aircraft system.

On July 7, 1966, the AFGE was granted exclusive recognition under Executive Order 10988 for a unit comprised of all employees of the Activity, excluding supervisory and professional employees. In 1968, a civilian detective was hired, the first employee hired in the category at issue herein. Thereafter, another detective was hired in 1970 and a police division was created in the latter part of 1972 to replace the military police who had performed the security and police functions. The Activity and the AFGE negotiated two agreements during this period, dated January 17, 1968, and July 5, 1972, both of which retained the general unit definition as noted above with no specific mention made of police officers or detectives in either agreement. However, in their current three-year agreement dated October 25, 1974, the parties added guards to the exclusionary portion of their unit definition. 2/

Both the AFGE and the Activity agree that the claimed employees were considered by them to be excluded from the unit until the February 6, 1975, amendment of Executive Order 11491 which they contend caused them to reconsider such exclusion. However, there is no evidence that either party subsequently attempted to amend the agreement with respect to such exclusion or to take any other action to reflect a change in the scope of the unit.

2/ The record indicates that the parties agreed to this exclusion in order to conform to the Section 10(b)(3) requirement of Executive Order 11491, in effect at that time, that guards could not be included in units with non-guards. On February 6, 1975, the Order was amended revoking that section of the Executive Order.

The record reveals that police officers hired after 1974 had received the impression from their orientation that they could not join or be active in a union. In this connection, there is no evidence that the AFGE represented any of the police or detectives in a grievance matter. 3/ Although the record indicates that one police officer who transferred from another job in the unit was retained on dues withholding until he became a supervisor, he testified that he took no part in union activities and, in fact, believed that he no longer could participate in such activities after he became a police officer.

Under the foregoing circumstances, I find that the petitioned for employees are not included in the AFGE's existing exclusively recognized unit. Thus, there were no employees in the job classifications covered by the subject petition at the time the AFGE was granted recognition. In fact, guards are specifically excluded from the AFGE's unit in the parties' current negotiated agreement, and there is no evidence that they have been effectively represented by the AFGE, or that the parties sought to amend their agreement with respect to the exclusion of guards.

In this context, the employees sought are the only unrepresented employees of the Activity, other than professional employees who were excluded from the unit at the time that exclusive recognition was granted. As noted above, organizationally, the petitioned for employees are located in two of the three divisions of the Security Department which provides overall security for the entire Patuxent complex. 4/ Both the police and the detectives have the same classification and are involved in law enforcement and insuring the security of the complex. The police are engaged in patrol duty, in guarding the physical security of the complex and in enforcing its regulations and the law. The detectives spend the majority of their time in investigations involving crimes, security, and traffic violations. Both the detectives and the police process cases involving criminal violations and major traffic violations. The police perform the initial investigation and the detectives perform the follow-up. Both may also be involved in stake-outs or surveillance activities. While only the police wear uniforms, both police and detectives carry guns and are empowered to detain suspects. The detectives do not work shifts, as do the 3/ While the issue of contracting out of certain service functions, such as police work, was discussed at several regular monthly union meetings, no negotiations on this issue took place which would have affected the claimed employees.

4/ The three divisions are Administrative, Investigative, and Police. The Administrative Division is comprised of clerical employees, and one clerical employee is employed in each of the other divisions.

police; however, they have rotating 24 hour duty responsibilities which may require them to be on the base premises at all hours.

Based on the foregoing, I find that the claimed unit of police and detectives is appropriate for the purpose of exclusive recognition. Thus, the unit sought is, in effect, a residual unit of all unrepresented nonprofessional employees of the Activity. Moreover, such a unit, consisting of all employees of the Activity engaged in security functions, constitutes a functionally distinct group of employees within the meaning of Section 10(b) of the Order, which provides, among other things, for the establishment of units on a functional basis. 5/ Consequently, I find that the employees in the petitioned for functional unit share a community of interest which is separate and distinct from other employees of the Activity. Further, such a residual unit of the Activity's unrepresented nonprofessional employees will, in my view, promote effective dealings and efficiency of agency operations as it will reduce the possibility of further fragmentation by establishing only one additional unit for the remaining unrepresented nonprofessional employees of the Activity. 6/

I shall, therefore, direct an election in the following unit:

All police officers and detectives of the Naval Air Test Center/Naval Air Station, Patuxent River, Maryland, excluding professional employees, management officials, employees engaged in Federal personnel work in other than a purely clerical capacity and supervisors as defined in the Order.

In view of the AFGE's clear desire to represent the claimed employees as part of its existing unit, I find that the employees in the unit found appropriate should be afforded the opportunity to choose whether or not they wish to become part of the existing unit represented by the AFGE. 7/ Accordingly, if a majority of the employees in the unit found appropriate votes for the AFGE, they will have indicated a desire to be included in the existing activity-wide unit represented by the AFGE and the appropriate Area Administrator will issue a certification to that effect. If, on the other hand, a majority of the employees votes for the FOP, they will be taken to have indicated a desire to be included in the unit found appropriate, and the appropriate Area Administrator will issue a certification to that effect.

DIRECTION OF ELECTION

An election by secret ballot shall be conducted among employees in the unit found appropriate as early as possible, but not later than 60 days from the date below. The appropriate Area Administrator shall supervise

Eligible to vote are those in the unit who were employed during the payroll period immediately preceding the date below, including employees who did not work during that period because they were out ill or on vacation or on furlough, including those in the military service who appear in person at the polls. Ineligible to vote are employees who have quit or were discharged for cause since the designated payroll period and who have not been rehired or reinstated before the election date. Those eligible shall vote whether they desire to be represented for the purpose of exclusive recognition by the Fraternal Order of Police, Federal Law Enforcement Officers, Lodge 5-F; by the American Federation of Government Employees, Local 1603, AFL-CIO; or by neither labor organization.

DECISION AND ORDER

This case involved two unfair labor practice complaints filed by the American Federation of Government Employees, Local 1931, AFL-CIO (AFGE). One complaint alleged, in essence, that the Respondent violated Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order by issuing an official "instruction" which changed working conditions relating to the operation of certain government-owned vehicles without first giving the Complainant an opportunity to negotiate on the matter, and on the impact and implementation of the alleged change. The second complaint alleged that the Respondent violated Section 19(a)(1) and (6) by issuing an official "note" to accomplish the same change.

On January 30, 1978, Administrative Law Judge Randolph D. Mason issued his Recommended Decision and Order in the above-entitled proceeding, finding that the Respondent had not engaged in the unfair labor practices alleged in the complaints and recommending that the complaints be dismissed in their entirety. No exceptions were filed to the Administrative Law Judge's Recommended Decision and Order.

The Administrative Law Judge found that the Respondent had not violated Section 19(a)(1) and (6) and recommended that the complaints be dismissed. In reaching this conclusion, he found that there was insufficient evidence to establish that the Respondent's instruction or note had any impact upon the bargaining unit employees. He also noted that the Respondent had cancelled both the instruction and the note.

The Assistant Secretary has reviewed the rulings of the Administrative Law Judge made at the hearing and finds that no prejudicial error was committed. The rulings are hereby affirmed. Upon consideration of the Administrative Law Judge's Recommended Decision and Order and the entire record in these cases, and noting particularly that no exceptions were filed, I hereby adopt the Administrative Law Judge's findings, conclusions and recommendations.

At the hearing, the Complainant raised a second issue relating to an alleged change in working conditions regarding the use of government vehicles. The Administrative Law Judge declined to consider the merits of this issue because it was not raised in the complaint, as required by the Assistant Secretary's Regulations.

ORDER

Noting particularly the absence of exceptions, the Assistant Secretary adopted the findings, conclusions and recommendations of the Administrative Law Judge and ordered that the two complaints be dismissed.

IT IS HEREBY ORDERED that the complaints in Case Nos. 70-5700(CA) and 70-5701(CA) be, and they hereby are, dismissed.

RECOMMENDED DECISION AND ORDER

This proceeding was heard in San Francisco, California, on October 28, 1977, and arises under Executive Order 11491, as amended. Pursuant to the Regulations of the Assistant Secretary of Labor for Labor-Management Relations (hereinafter called the Assistant Secretary) a Notice of Consolidated Hearing on Complaints was issued on September 6, 1977, and on October 14, 1977, an Order Rescheduling Hearing was issued. These cases were initiated by separate complaints, both of which were filed on March 18, 1977, by the American Federation of Government Employees, Local 1931, AFL-CIO (hereinafter the "Union"). Each of the complaints, one of which was amended without objection at the hearing, simply alleged that the Naval Weapons Station, at Concord, California, (hereinafter the "respondent") violated sections 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Executive Order by issuing certain instructions.

The only issue properly presented for decision is whether or not the respondent violated sections 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order by unilaterally changing the policies relating to the operation of government-owned vehicles equipped with catalytic converters without affording the complainant a meaningful opportunity to negotiate on the matter, and by failing to afford complainant the opportunity to negotiate on the impact and implementation of any change in such policies. The Union raised a second issue at the hearing relating to the use of government vehicles for transportation to and from lunch. For the reasons set forth in section two of the Conclusions of Law, the latter issue was not raised in a timely manner and must be dismissed.

At the hearing all parties were given an opportunity to examine and cross-examine witnesses, to submit documentary evidence, and to present oral arguments. After the hearing, both parties filed briefs which were duly considered. In light of the entire record in this case, I submit the following Findings of Fact and Conclusions of Law.

Findings of Fact

At all times pertinent hereto the respondent recognized the Union as the exclusive representative of certain employees specified in Article I of the parties' collective bargaining agreement dated March 19, 1974.

Before: RANDOLPH D. MASON
Administrative Law Judge

On January 17, 1977, the respondent's Commanding Officer issued "Wpnsta Concord Instruction 11240-8F" relating to the assignment and operation of government-owned vehicles. This Instruction cancelled and superseded Instruction 11240-8E, dated April 8, 1976. Both Instructions were applicable to all military and civilian personnel working at the respondent Activity. The January 17 Instruction was identical to the earlier Instruction in all respects with the exception of paragraph 7(f), which was added by the new Instruction. The fact that paragraph 7(f) constitutes the only addition to the earlier Instruction is highlighted by an "A)" (symbolizing the word "addition") appearing in the left-hand margin next to the new paragraph. The new paragraph reads as follows:

f. Drivers of Vehicles having catalytic converters are prohibited from operating the vehicles within 100 feet of fuel storage areas and transfer operations [where fuel is transferred from one container to another], except service stations, where low-lying accumulations of flammable vapors or hazardous ignition combustible material sources are present. In addition such vehicles will not be parked over any grassy areas or unpaved surfaces which could be considered to be "oil-soaked." These restrictions are noted on the dashboards of vehicles which are so equipped.

Paragraph 5(a) is identical in both the old and new Instructions, and reads in part as follows:

(1) Use of Government-owned vehicles will be limited to authorized personnel on official business. The term "Official Business" shall not include the transportation of officers and employees between home and work. Transportation to or from lunch areas is also prohibited except in cases when officers and employees are engaged in field work, the character of whose duties makes such transportation necessary and then only when approved by the head of the department concerned.

The respondent admittedly failed to provide the Union with an opportunity to consult or confer with respect to paragraph 7(f) of the January 17 Instruction.

On February 16, 1977, the respondent received a telegraphic message from higher headquarters which stated, in pertinent part, as follows:

A. Catalytic converter equipped vehicles may be operated within ammunition/explosives areas, but will not be permitted to stand or park within 50 feet of any structure containing ammunition/explosives or any outside facility containing such commodities.

B. Vehicles equipped with catalytic converters will not be used for transporting ammunition/explosives.

C. Vehicles equipped with catalytic converters will not be permitted to stand or park in areas where vegetation or other combustible materials beneath the vehicle may catch fire from converter heat.

D. Catalytic converter equipped vehicles may operate within the general POL areas but not stand or park within 50 feet of any fuel storage tank, pump, or dispensing unit.

G. Commanding Officers/Commanders/Officers-in-Charge will ensure that military guards civilian police and applicable staff agencies take necessary measures to assure adherence to the above restrictions.

In compliance with the above telegraphic message, the Acting Commanding Officer issued "WPNSTA CONCORD NOTE 8020" dated February 18, 1977. A copy of the above telegraphic message was attached to Note 8020. The Note stated that the message contained a new policy regarding the use of vehicles equipped with catalytic converters. Again, the respondent admittedly did not provide the Union with an opportunity to consult or confer with respect to the substance, implementation, or impact of the new policy.

On March 2, 1977, the Union filed pre-complaint charges against the respondent with respect to the January 17 Instruction and Note 8020, respectively. Immediately thereafter, the Acting Commanding Officer met with the President of the Union to discuss the charges. At this meeting, the Union proposed that if the respondent would cancel the new Instruction and Note 8020, the Union would withdraw the charges. The Acting Commanding Officer agreed to rescind these documents. On March 9, 1977, the same officer sent a memorandum to the President of the Union stating that the Instruction and Note in question "are being cancelled" and that this was his "final decision." The Administration Department was then ordered to publish and distribute the appropriate cancellation notices. The Administration Department was able to effectuate a formal cancellation of Note 8020 on March 17, 1977, but for some reason was unable to formally cancel the January 17 Instruction until April 5, 1977. Meanwhile, the Union had filed the complaints in the instant proceeding with the Department of Labor on March 18, 1977.

The formal cancellations of the Instruction and Note were distributed to all appropriate supervisory personnel. In addition, the respondent's employees were informed of the cancellations in a military publication entitled "Plan of the Day." That publication stated that the regulations had been changed with respect to the use of government-owned vehicles equipped with catalytic converters, and that the only "restriction" regarding these vehicles was to ensure that these vehicles received regular tune-ups.

The evidence of record fails to prove that the Instruction and Note had any impact upon the bargaining unit employees with respect to the operation of government vehicles equipped with catalytic converters. In this regard, there were no more than three of these vehicles that might have been available to the unit employees. However, these three vehicles may have been assigned to supervisors, Marine Guards, or other military personnel, and may not have been available to the bargaining unit employees during the period in question.

Conclusions of Law

1. The first issue presented for decision is whether the respondent violated section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Executive Order by refusing to consult, confer, or negotiate with the Union regarding the substance, impact and implementation of the January 17, 1977, Instruction and the February 18, 1977, Note. Both of these documents required that government-owned vehicles equipped with catalytic converters be parked a specified distance from certain buildings. Respondent had been informed that catalytic converters have a tendency to overheat and pose a fire hazard when parked near fuel vapors or other combustible materials.

On March 2, 1977, the Union filed its pre-complaint charge. Immediately thereafter, the Commanding Officer met with the Union President and agreed to rescind the offending documents. Also, the Commanding Officer wrote a memorandum to the President of the Union on March 9, 1977, in which he stated that the documents "are being cancelled" and that this was his "final decision." Due to administrative delays, the February 18 Note and the January 17 Instruction were not formally rescinded by appropriate publication until March 17 and April 5, 1977, respectively.

In response to the respondent's argument that the above rescissions rendered this issue moot, the Union argued that the policy set forth in the Instruction and Note was still in effect after the documents were rescinded. In this regard, the Union President pointed to the fact that one of the signs imposing parking restrictions on vehicles equipped with catalytic converters was still posted subsequent to the above rescissions. Apparently this sign, which was on one of the field buildings, stated that such vehicles should be parked more than 50 feet from the building. I do not view respondent's inadvertent failure to remove this sign as a continuation of the policy in question. The Union and the employees were informed that the former parking restrictions had been cancelled.

Respondent argues that no violation of the Executive Order occurred in this case because the Union has failed to prove that either the Instruction or the Note had any impact whatsoever upon the unit employees. I agree with the Respondent in this regard and consider this to be the most important reason why this aspect of the complaint should be dismissed. During the period in question, there were only three vehicles equipped with catalytic converters on the entire Naval Weapons Station that might conceivably have been available to the unit employees. However, it is quite possible that all of these vehicles were assigned to supervisors or military personnel, and that no unit employee would have had an opportunity to drive any of these vehicles during the period that the parking restrictions were in effect. When these circumstances are coupled with the fact that respondent cancelled the offending documents, it cannot be said that the respondent violated the Executive Order.

2. At the hearing the Union raised a further objection to the January 17, 1977, Instruction. Paragraph 5(a) of the Instruction prohibited employees from using government vehicles for transportation to and from lunch. As previously indicated, this Instruction merely reiterated the language of previous instructions in this regard. On its face, the only change in prior policy made by the January 17 Instruction related to the catalytic converter issue. In spite of the longstanding published rule prohibiting the use of government vehicles for transportation to and from lunch, the Union argued at the hearing that certain supervisors had allowed a contrary practice to be established. The Union contends that the January 17 Instruction "changed" the practice established by the supervisors.

I need not consider the merits of this issue. In the first place, the issue was not raised in the complaint. That document merely alleged that the respondent should have consulted and conferred with the Union regarding the issuance of the Instruction. The latter document merely added a paragraph regarding catalytic converters. Therefore, it was perfectly reasonable for the respondent to have concluded after reading the complaint that the only issue in the case related to catalytic converters.

At the hearing, the respondent's attorney stated that he was completely surprised and unprepared to litigate the issue regarding transportation to and from lunch. This attorney had represented the respondent during the entire proceeding before the Department of Labor. The Union President admitted that he had not raised this issue with the respondent's attorney. However, the President did state that he had raised the issue with the Commanding Officer at the informal level. I believe that the President was mistaken on this point, and I credit the testimony of the Commanding Officer to the effect that this issue was never previously raised by the Union.

The Union did not comply with section 203.3(a)(3) of the regulations of the Assistant Secretary because the complaint did not contain a clear and concise statement of the facts constituting the alleged unfair labor practice in question. The respondent would have had no way of knowing that the "transportation to lunch" issue would be raised, and it would be patently unfair to force the respondent to litigate this issue at this time. 1/

Recommendation

Having concluded that the respondent did not violate sections 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order, I hereby recommend that the complaints filed in this case be dismissed in their entirety.

1/ I have considered the affidavit the Union President filed with the Area Director stating, in part, that the employees were no longer able to use government cars to go to the EM club while working overtime in remote areas. Although a copy of this affidavit was ultimately sent by the Government to the respondent's representative prior to the hearing, this was not an appropriate means of raising a new issue. The Union admittedly did not raise the issue with the respondent's representative. However, even assuming arguendo that the Union properly raised an issue regarding transportation to and from the EM club while working overtime, the evidence of record does not prove a violation of the Order. Even if the President's supervisor had allowed this practice to be established in spite of the Activity's outstanding instruction to the contrary, the supervisor admittedly never changed the practice even after the January 17 Instruction.

PURSUANT TO SECTION 6 OF EXECUTIVE ORDER 11491, AS AMENDED

DEPARTMENT OF TRANSPORTATION,
FEDERAL AVIATION ADMINISTRATION,

A/SLMR No. 1021

This case involved a petition for consolidation of units filed by the American Federation of Government Employees, AFL-CIO, Local 2282 (AFGE) seeking to consolidate seven units for which it is the current exclusive representative. The proposed consolidated unit would consist of nonprofessional or Wage Grade employees in seven of the Activity's 16 organizational divisions. The record revealed that employees in two other divisions were represented by other labor organizations, with the remainder of the employees unrepresented. The Activity opposed the proposed consolidated unit on the basis that it did not meet the unit criteria contained in Section 10(b) of the Order. In this regard, it argued that while each of the divisions, considered individually, had a separate community of interest, the employees in the proposed unit, which was limited to only a portion of the Activity's employees, did not share a clear and identifiable community of interest which was separate and distinct from the unrepresented employees. The Activity further contended that future organizational attempts with regard to the unrepresented employees could result in a fragmented unit structure which would artificially divide employees, and that effective dealings had already been achieved as evidenced by the negotiated agreements between the parties.

In reviewing previous Assistant Secretary decisions in the area of unit consolidation, the Federal Labor Relations Council (Council) construed the Assistant Secretary's establishment of a presumption in favor of consolidations as "a recognition and affirmation of the strong policy in the Federal labor-management relations program of facilitating consolidation" and noted that this affirmation accurately reflected the policy guidelines concerning consolidation enunciated in the Council's 1975 Report and Recommendations. In this context, and based upon the facts of this case, the Assistant Secretary found that the petitioned for unit was appropriate for the purpose of exclusive recognition inasmuch as it satisfied the criteria contained in Section 10(b) of the Order. He noted that the employees in the unit sought enjoyed a clear and identifiable community of interest in that they shared a common mission, common overall supervision and uniform personnel policies and practices. He further found that as all employees were serviced by the same personnel office which also handled labor relations matters for each of the divisions in which the AFGE held recognition, the proposed consolidated unit would promote effective dealings and efficiency of agency operations. Similarly, he noted that the consolidated unit which would provide for bargaining in one, rather than the existing seven units, would promote a more comprehensive bargaining unit structure, thereby reducing fragmentation.

Accordingly, the Assistant Secretary directed an election in the consolidated unit found appropriate.

DECISION AND DIRECTION OF ELECTION

Upon a petition duly filed under Section 6 of Executive Order 11491, as amended, a hearing was held before Hearing Officer A. Jack Lewis. The Hearing Officer's rulings made at the hearing are free from prejudicial error and are hereby affirmed.

The Petitioner, American Federation of Government Employees, AFL-CIO, Local 2282, herein called AFGE, seeks to consolidate seven existing units for which it is the current exclusive representative at the Federal Aviation Administration's (FAA's) Aeronautical Center, Oklahoma City, Oklahoma. ^{1/} These seven units include the Wage Grade employees in the Facility Support Division (formerly Plant Engineering), and the nonprofessional employees in the following organizational divisions: Accounting and Audit, Administrative Services, Data Services, FAA Depot, Airmen and Aircraft Registry (formerly Flight Standards Technical Division), and the FAA Management Training School, located in Lawton, Oklahoma.

The Activity contends that the proposed consolidated unit is inappropriate inasmuch as it does not meet the unit criteria contained in Section 10(b) of the Order. With respect to community of interest, the Activity argues that because each division has a separate mission and supervisory hierarchy, it is axiomatic that the employees in each division would have a separate community of interest. On the other hand, in the Activity's view, the employees in the proposed consolidated unit, which is limited only to a portion of the Activity's employees, do not share a clear and identifiable community of interest which is separate and distinct from some 600 other employees who are currently unrepresented but who would otherwise be eligible for inclusion in the type of unit the AFGE is seeking. The Activity further argues that future organizational attempts with regard to its currently unrepresented employees could result in a fragmented unit structure which would artificially divide the employees at the Activity, and that effective dealings have already been realized by virtue of the fact that the AFGE and the Activity have entered into negotiated agreements. Finally, the Activity requests that an election be held if the consolidated unit is found to be appropriate.

The Aeronautical Center is an intermediate field organization of the FAA with operating, research and support functions, national in scope, which are not required to be performed in the central office, and which are not susceptible of assignment to, or division among, the regions as regional operating programs. The Center is comprised of 16 organizational components, including the seven divisions noted above in which the AFGE represents certain employees. ^{2/} Those divisions which provide support not only for the Activity, but for the entire FAA, report directly to the Director of the Center, who maintains overall responsibility for the management of the operating, research and support functions. The remainder of the divisions, which give primary support to the Center itself, report to the Director through an Executive Officer, who is responsible for directing and coordinating the administrative support services of the Activity and for providing technical guidance in internal administration to the program divisions. Each division has its own internal organizational structure and supervisory hierarchy, with the head of the division exercising the authority to hire, fire, award and promote the employees assigned to that division.

The record reveals that certain divisions provide services to others. For example, the Personnel Management Division implements personnel policies and practices established by the Agency with respect to all Activity employees, and establishes and implements personnel policies which are designed to meet the particular needs of the Activity. This Division also handles labor relations matters at the Activity and, in this connection, the record indicates that during contract negotiations, a labor relations specialist from the Division serves as chairperson of the negotiating sessions.

The evidence establishes that the AFGE and the Activity have entered into separate negotiated agreements for each of the seven divisions. An examination of these agreements indicates that they have been limited, for the most part, to a dues withholding provision and the establishment of a grievance procedure. Monthly labor-management meetings are held in each of the divisions, although the record reveals that the local president of the AFGE is only permitted to attend the meetings for the division in which he is employed.

^{2/} Employees in two other divisions are represented by other labor organizations with the employees in the remaining divisions currently unrepresented.

All employees of the Activity are covered by the Agency's merit promotion plan as well as its adverse action and grievance appeals procedures. Division heads are authorized to act as the deciding official in cases of minor adverse actions, while the Director performs this same function with regard to major adverse actions, although the latter can redelegate this authority. Both the Director and division heads, as well as the Executive Officer, can render final decisions on formal agency grievances. The area of consideration in filling vacancies is Activity-wide, although, in some instances, the area of consideration may be broader.

In reviewing the Assistant Secretary's decisions concerning the consolidation of units, 3/ the Federal Labor Relations Council (Council) construed the Assistant Secretary's establishment of a presumption in favor of consolidations ". . . as a recognition and affirmation of the strong policy in the Federal labor-management relations program of facilitating consolidation. . . ." The Council noted further that such affirmation accurately reflects the Council's 1975 Report and Recommendations that the Assistant Secretary be mindful of facilitating the consolidation of existing units which conform to the appropriate unit criteria contained in Section 10(b) of the Order. In this context, and based upon the foregoing circumstances, I find that the proposed consolidated unit is appropriate for the purpose of exclusive recognition under Executive Order 11491, as amended, in that it meets the three unit criteria set forth in Section 10(b).

Contrary to the Activity's assertion, I find that the employees in the unit sought, consisting of all employees currently represented by the AFGE in a number of existing bargaining units within the Activity, enjoy a clear and identifiable community of interest in that they share a common mission, common overall supervision, and uniform personnel policies and practices. 4/ Further, I find that the proposed unit consolidation will promote effective dealings and efficiency of agency operations. Particularly noted in this latter regard is the fact that all employees are serviced by the same personnel office, which also handles labor relations for each of the divisions in which the AFGE holds recognition. Moreover, considering the scope of the agreements which have thus far been negotiated by the parties, it seems reasonable to conclude that the Activity could realize more effective dealings by bargaining in one consolidated unit. Similarly, the petitioned for consolidated unit, which provides for bargaining in a single, rather than in the existing seven bargaining units, will reduce unit fragmentation and promote a more comprehensive bargaining unit structure, which is consistent with the policies of the Order.

3/ See e.g. Education Division, Department of Health, Education and Welfare, Washington, D.C., A/SLMR No. 822 (1977), FLRC No. 77A-88 (1978).

4/ Cf. U.S. Department of Health, Education and Welfare, Social Security Administration, Bureau of Field Operations, Region V, Area IV, Cleveland, Ohio, 6 A/SLMR 481, A/SLMR No. 706 (1976), FLRC No. 76A-151 (1977). Cf. also Education Division, Department of Health, Education and Welfare, Washington, D.C., cited above, in which the Council, quoting from its 1975 Report and Recommendations, stated that "(t)he procedure for consolidating a labor organization's existing exclusively recognized units should have application only to situations where there is no question concerning the representation desires of the employees who would be included in a proposed consolidation."

Accordingly, I find that the following employees constitute a unit appropriate for the purpose of exclusive recognition under Executive Order 11491, as amended:

All employees of the Federal Aviation Administration, Aeronautical Center, Oklahoma City, Oklahoma, assigned to the Facility Support Division, Accounting and Audit Division, Administrative Services Division, Data Services Division, FAA Depot, Airmen and Aircraft Registry and the FAA Management Training School, located in Lawton, Oklahoma, excluding all professional employees, General Schedule employees assigned to the Facility Support Division, confidential employees, management officials, employees engaged in Federal personnel work in other than a purely clerical capacity, and supervisors as defined in the Order. 5/

DIRECTION OF ELECTION

An election by secret ballot shall be conducted among employees in the unit found appropriate, as early as possible, but not later than 60 days from the date below. The appropriate Area Administrator shall supervise the election, subject to the Assistant Secretary's Regulations. Eligible to vote are those in the unit who were employed during the payroll period immediately preceding the date below, including employees who did not work during that period because they were out ill or on vacation or on furlough, including those in the military service who appear in person at the polls. Ineligible to vote are employees who have quit or were discharged for cause since the designated payroll

5/ There appears to be some ambiguity as to whether or not guards were intended to be included in the proposed consolidated unit inasmuch as several of the certifications or grants of recognition held by the AFGE specifically exclude guards, while others are silent as to their inclusion or exclusion. As noted in Education Division, Department of Health, Education and Welfare, cited above, proposed consolidated units are limited to, and/or defined by, the parameters of the existing exclusively recognized units at the time of the filing of a consolidation petition. Accordingly, the unit found appropriate herein should conform to the unit descriptions of the current exclusively recognized units.

DEPARTMENT OF HEALTH, EDUCATION

RETIREMENT AND SURVIVOR'S INSURANCE
A/SLMR No. 1022

This case involved an unfair labor practice complaint filed by the National Council of Social Security Payment Center Locals, American Federation of Government Employees, (AFGE), AFL-CIO, (Council) alleging essentially that the Respondent violated Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order by its refusal to negotiate over the impact and implementation of an employee performance assessment program prior to its institution. The Respondent argued that the Complainant lacked authority to request negotiations and, in the alternative, if the Complainant had such authority, it had not demonstrated a desire to bargain at the proper level.

The Administrative Law Judge found, based on correspondence between Respondent and the National President of the AFGE, that the National Office of the AFGE was the exclusive representative of the employees in the bargaining unit. Under these circumstances, he concluded, in effect, that the Council was without bargaining authority in this matter. Therefore, the Administrative Law Judge recommended that the complaint be dismissed.

While the Assistant Secretary agreed with the conclusion reached by the Administrative Law Judge, he did so for different reasons. Contrary to the Administrative Law Judge, he found that the Council was a proper party to request negotiations since it was, at a minimum, recognized by the Respondent as the agent of the National Office of the AFGE and had standing to act on behalf of the exclusive representative. However, the Assistant Secretary further found that no violation of the Order occurred since, in his view, the Respondent's contention that consultation take place at the local, rather than Bureau-level, was no more than a good faith interpretation of the parties' negotiated agreement and did not constitute an improper refusal to bargain. He also found that the Council had not established by a preponderance of the evidence that the Respondent had failed to fulfill its obligation to bargain at the local level.

Accordingly, the Assistant Secretary ordered that the complaint be dismissed in its entirety.

DECISION AND ORDER

On November 1, 1977, Administrative Law Judge John W. Earman issued his Recommended Decision in the above-entitled proceeding, finding that the Respondent had not engaged in the unfair labor practices alleged in the complaint, and recommending that the complaint be dismissed in its entirety. Thereafter, the Complainant filed exceptions and a supporting brief with respect to the Administrative Law Judge's Recommended Decision.

The Assistant Secretary has reviewed the rulings of the Administrative Law Judge made at the hearing and finds that no prejudicial error was committed. The rulings are hereby affirmed. Upon consideration of the Administrative Law Judge's Recommended Decision and the entire record in the subject case, including the Complainant's exceptions and supporting brief, I hereby adopt the Administrative Law Judge's findings, conclusions and recommendations, only to the extent consistent herewith.

The complaint herein alleges that the Respondent violated Section 19(a)(1), (2) and (6) of the Order by its refusal to negotiate over the impact and implementation of an individual performance assessment program prior to its institution. 1/

1/ The Notice of Hearing, the Administrative Law Judge's Recommended Decision and the briefs of the parties make no reference to an alleged Section 19(a)(2) violation. Hence, it appears that such allegation was either withdrawn or dismissed prior to the hearing in this matter.

The essential facts of the case are set forth, in detail, in the attached Administrative Law Judge's Recommended Decision, and I shall repeat them only to the extent necessary.

The Respondent has six Program Service Centers located throughout the Nation. At each Program Service Center there is a local union affiliated with the American Federation of Government Employees, AFL-CIO, (AFGE) which is a member of the National Council of Social Security Payment Center Locals (Council). The exclusive representative of the Respondent's employees is defined in Article I of the parties' negotiated agreement as "the National Office of the American Federation of Government Employees, AFL-CIO (National Council of Social Security Payment Center Locals), hereinafter referred to as the Council." 2/ This negotiated agreement was signed by the parties on March 15, 1974, and was extended by them in 1976 to March 15, 1977. 3/

2/ Specifically, Article I of the parties' negotiated agreement states:

The Bureau of Retirement and Survivor's Insurance of the Social Security Administration (DHEW), hereinafter referred to as the Bureau, in a letter dated June 10, 1969, signed by the Bureau Director, has recognized the National Office of the American Federation of Government Employees, AFL-CIO (National Council of Social Security Payment Center Locals), hereinafter referred to as the Council, as the exclusive representative for a unit consisting of all nonsupervisory employees (including professionals) in the Social Security Administration Program Centers."

3/ The negotiated agreement, among other things, provides:

Article 2 Council - Bureau Relations at the National and Local Level

* * * * *

Section e - The Bureau will consult with the Council on matters within the authority of the Bureau Director relating to personnel policies, practices, and working conditions.

The Program Center will consult with its respective Local on matters within the authority of the Regional Representative relating to personnel policies, practices, and working conditions.

The parties agree to initially consider and, to the extent possible, settle each matter of business between the Bureau and the Council at the point nearest its origin, and at the lowest level of management where there is authority for a decision. Matters will ordinarily not be considered at higher levels until reasonable effort has been made to reach agreement at such lower level.

As indicated above, the Council alleged, essentially, that Respondent violated Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order by instituting an individual performance assessment program and refusing to negotiate on the impact of the system on employee working conditions. In reply, the Respondent contends that the Council lacked bargaining authority, that if the Council had the authority, it had not shown its desire to bargain, and that the only bargaining which could take place, by virtue of a past practice between the parties, would occur at the end of the term of the Master Agreement.

The instant dispute centers around a decision in December 1975, by the Acting Director of the Respondent to improve employee production and efficiency, and his drafting of a paper on managing employee workloads which included an individual employee assessment system. This paper was furnished to the Council for comment in December 1975. In its January 1976, response, the Council objected to the new program, stating that the matter of employee "workload management" was an appropriate matter for bargaining at the Bureau level. On March 12, 1976, the Respondent replied to the Council enclosing an advance copy of the former's final paper on workload management, which was in the process of being distributed to the Respondent's Program Centers. The Respondent stated that the Bureau-level paper was meant only to constitute a broad framework within which each Program Service Center would work out its own workload management plan, and that the Bureau expected the management staffs of the six Program Service Centers to consult with the respective locals of the Council in developing and implementing the specific details of their respective individual assessment systems. During the summer and early fall of 1976, the individual Payment Service Center developed and implemented their respective employee assessment programs.

Based on correspondence sent to the Respondent by the National President of the AFGE, the Administrative Law Judge concluded that the National Office of the AFGE has considered itself to have exclusive recognition with the Respondent. He reasoned that the past practice of the parties with regard to bargaining supported this view since the National Office of the AFGE, not the Council, had requested and headed all negotiations with the Respondent concerning a new Master Agreement.

3/ Article 24 Reviewing Performance Requirements . . .

* * * * *

Section c - The Bureau agrees that if the Program Center decides to review or revise any performance requirement for positions in the unit, the Local shall be given the opportunity to comment prior to the issuance of such new or revised requirements. . .

* * * * *

Section e - The Bureau agrees to consult with the Council prior to issuing any new or revised performance requirements for positions in the unit.

The Administrative Law Judge also found that the use of the term "confer and consult" in the parties' negotiated agreement 4/ was not understood by the parties to include bargaining between the Council and the Respondent concerning mid-contract changes in personnel policies and practices. Under these circumstances, he concluded, in effect, that the Council was without bargaining authority in the matter and recommended dismissal of the instant complaint.

While I concur in the recommendation by the Administrative Law Judge that dismissal of the instant complaint is warranted, I do so for different reasons. Thus, contrary to the Administrative Law Judge, I find that the Council was a proper party to request negotiations in this matter. As noted above, the parties' negotiated agreement identifies the exclusive representative as the "National Office of the American Federation of Government Employees, AFL-CIO (National Council of Social Security Payment Center Locals), hereinafter referred to as the Council." 5/ Furthermore, a February 1969, letter sent by the National Office of the AFGE to the Respondent requesting recognition closes with the sentence, "Therefore the National Office of the American Federation of Government Employees is the bargaining agent for this Council" (emphasis supplied). The record also shows that all correspondence by the Respondent which was intended to serve as notice to the exclusive representative of the Respondent's intention to institute the new personnel practice involved herein was addressed to the Council, not the National Office of the AFGE.

Under these circumstances, I find that the parties' negotiated agreement, coupled with the Respondent's course of conduct, noted above, serves to establish, at a minimum, that the Council was recognized by the parties as the agent of the National Office of the AFGE for purposes of representing the employees within the unit. Consequently, I conclude that the Council was a proper party to request negotiations in this matter and to file the subject complaint.

With regard to the gravamen of the complaint, the Council asserts that the Respondent's "workload management," including the individual employee assessment system, was a matter appropriate for bargaining at the Bureau level. The Respondent, on the other hand, contends, as noted

4/ Article 2 Council - Bureau Relations at the National and Local Level

Section a - It is understood that representatives of the Bureau and Council shall meet semiannually on a scheduled basis on dates which are mutually satisfactory to both parties to confer and consult with respect to personnel policies and practices or other matters affecting general working conditions as permitted within the meaning and intent of Executive Order 11491, as amended.

5/ The actual letter of recognition by the Respondent was not admitted into evidence at the hearing in this matter.

in its memorandum of March 1976, that the Bureau-level paper constituted only a broad framework within which each Program Service Center would develop its own workload management plan, including whatever changes in employee assessment they felt necessary. 6/ Further, the Respondent asserts, relying on the provisions of Article 2 and Article 24 of the parties' negotiated agreement, that this was a matter appropriate for bargaining at the Program Service Center level and, in this regard, it notes that it had advised both the Council and the Program Service Centers that it expected that the management staff of each of the Centers would consult with the respective locals of the Council in developing and implementing the specific details of their respective plans and systems.

As noted above, Articles 2 and 24 of the parties' negotiated agreement provide, in essence, that matters relating to personnel policies and practices and working conditions, within the authority of the Regional Representative, including performance requirements for positions within the unit, will be matters for consultation between the Program Service Center and the local involved, and that such matters would be settled at the lowest level of management where there is authority for a decision. In this context, I find that the Respondent's contention that consultation between management and the Council take place at the Program Service Center level reflected a good faith interpretation of the rights and obligations of the parties under their negotiated agreement, and did not, standing alone, constitute an improper refusal to bargain in good faith. 7/ Further, in view of the absence in the record of evidence that the appropriate locals of the Council requested and were denied the right to bargain with their respective Program Service Centers, I find that the Council has not established by a preponderance of the evidence that the Respondent failed to fulfill its obligation to bargain with regard to the contents and implementation of the individual Program Service Center plans.

Accordingly, I shall order that the complaint herein be dismissed.

6/ Only the Respondent's memorandum was introduced into evidence at the hearing. The Bureau guidelines which originally were attached to the memorandum were not introduced. In this context, the Bureau's characterization of its paper as merely a broad framework within which each Program Service Center would develop its own program stands un rebutted.

RECOMMENDED DECISION

Statement of the Case

This is an unfair labor practice proceeding in which a hearing of record was held pursuant to Executive Order 11491, as amended. The Complaint was filed on February 10, 1977 charging Respondent with violating Sections 19(a)(1) and 19(a)(6) by instituting an individual performance assessment program and refusing to negotiate the impact of the system on working conditions. Both parties were represented by counsel at the hearing and briefs were submitted.

In its very able brief Complainant argues that the National Council of Social Security Payment Centers Local has exclusive recognition for the non-management employees and that the Bureau of Retirement and Survivor's Insurance should have negotiated the impact of an individual performance assessment system on bargaining unit employees. Respondents contend that the Council lacks bargaining authority, that, if the Council had the authority, it had not shown its desire to bargain and that the only bargaining, by past practice, takes place at the end of the term of the Master Agreement.

Findings of Fact

The Bureau of Retirement and Survivor's Insurance, Social Security Administration, Department of Health, Education and Welfare, the Respondents in this matter have six Programs Service Centers located throughout the nation. At each Program Service Center there is a union local affiliated with the American Federation of Government Employees, AFL-CIO, which are members of and represented by the National Council of Social Security Payment Center Locals.

In a letter to the Commissioner, Social Security Administration, dated February 27, 1969, the National President of AFGE, stated that the National Executive Council had approved the constitution of the Council for Social Security Administration Payment Center Locals and that exclusive recognition will be granted to AFGE rather than the Council. In summary he says:

"Therefore the National Office of the American Federation of Government Employees is the bargaining agent for this Council."

The reply from the Director, Bureau of Retirement and Survivor's Insurance, dated June 10, 1969, with Department concurrence, gave formal notice that the National Office of the American Federation of Government Employees, AFL-CIO (Council of Social Security Payment Center Locals) was granted exclusive recognition for a unit consisting of all non-supervisory employees in the Social Security Payment Centers. The Master Agreement here involved, which is dated March 15, 1974, refers to the June 10, 1969 letter and is signed by the National President of AFGE and the six Presidents of the Local unions of which four also signed in their capacity as officers of the Council. The Agreement provides that the Bureau will consult with the Council on matters within the authority of the Bureau Director while a Program Center will consult with its respective local on matters within the authority of the Regional Representative on personnel matters. It was the practice under the Agreement for the Council or the Locals to consult with the Bureau or Program Center by written comments or discussions of proposals and meetings between the union and management.

In August 1975 the Northeast Program Service Center asked the Local for comments on a proposed individual assessment system. This was a system to closely monitor the amount and quality of production of individual employees. The Local replied with comments but urged that the Program Service Center meet and confer with the Local on the matter.

The new Acting Director of the Bureau in attempting to improve the Bureau's work product drafted a paper on managing workloads which included an individual assessment system. The paper was furnished the Council on December 29, 1975 for comment. The Council responded on January 27, 1976 prefacing its comments by saying that workload management is appropriate for bargaining rather than merely comment on proposed drafts of plans. This position was expressed to management over the next several months.

In January 1976 the Bureau and the AFGE worked out a memorandum of understanding as a preliminary to commencing negotiations on a new agreement in February. At the request of the National President of AFGE the memorandum was nullified and the 1974 agreement extended one year, in accordance with its terms. The request discussed an understanding as to official time which was not in the agreement and expressed the expectation that any difficulties arising over the interpretation of the agreement would be resolved under the procedures as provided in the agreement.

On March 12, 1976 the Bureau commented upon the Council's concerns about the assessment plan as expressed in its memorandum of January 1976. The Bureau noted that it was the intent for each Program Center to work out its own workload management plan within the framework of the Bureau plan and that each Center was expected to consult with its respective Local in developing and implementing the details of their individual assessment system. The Program Centers proceeded to do so.

The Director, Contract Negotiation Department, AFGE gave notice on October 22, 1976 that, in accordance with the provisions of Article 35 of the Master Agreement, they wished to renegotiate the Agreement. Those negotiations have reached an impasse.

On November 5, 1976 a complaint was made by memorandum to the Bureau, however, the complaint herein was filed on February 10, 1977.

In 1975 the Federal Labor Relations Council made its Report and Recommendations on the Executive Order in which it said that it believed confusion has developed over the apparent interchangeable use of the terms "consult," "meet and confer" and "negotiate." The FLRC went on to say that parties to exclusive recognition have an obligation to "negotiate" rather than to "consult" on negotiable issues unless they have mutually agreed to limit this obligation. ^{1/}

Respondent's motion made at the hearing to admit into evidence the Assistant Secretary's Formal Exhibits is denied since ample evidence was introduced by the parties.

Discussion and Conclusions

There is no question that prior to the FLRC Report the Bureau and the Council never engaged in mid-term negotiations under the agreement. The practice had been to exchange ideas both in writing and at the semi annual meetings provided in the Agreement. A request for mid-term negotiations was first made concerning the individual assessment system. However, long standing practice does not negate the Council's rights to bargain if it is the recognized exclusive representative of the employees. ^{2/}

The concept of negotiation set forth in Section 11 of the Executive Order contemplates that a labor organization have exclusive recognition in order to participate in bargaining. Neither Section 11 of the Executive Order or the FLRC Report confers the right to bargain on a labor organization that does not have exclusive recognition. The question then is whether the Council has been granted exclusive recognition by the Bureau? It is found that it has not.

In his letter of February 27, 1969 the National President of AFGE simply states "Moreover the recognition will be granted to the AFGE rather than Council" (emphasis added) Nothing could be clearer, however, the Master Agreement muddled the waters somewhat by including the

^{1/} The interpretation did not result in a change or amendment of the Executive Order.

Council in parenthesis after naming the National Office of the AFGE as the organization recognized to be the exclusive representative in 1969. A fair reading of the Agreement shows the Council was denied bargaining powers through the use of the terms "confer" and "consult" as they were then understood. Also, the first signatory for labor on the Agreement was the National President of AFGE.

In withdrawing the AFGE request for renegotiation of the Agreement at the first renewal date in 1976 the National President used the following significant language:

"..., should there be any difficulty arising over the interpretation or application of the Agreement, we believe it in our best interest to protect a long standing relationship. I would, therefore, expect us to resolve these difficulties under the procedures as provided in the Agreement."

Such language is especially significant when viewed against the background of the FLRC Report and the proposed Workload Management Program. By the use of this language under these circumstances and considering past practice, it is evident that the National Office of AFGE did not believe that the Council had exclusive recognition or it would have indicated that difficulties could be resolved under the Executive Order.

In addition to the above the National Office of AFGE requested negotiations in accordance with the agreement on the 1977 renewal date. This also shows that the AFGE still considers itself to have the exclusive recognition. It would appear that only the Council feels that it has exclusive recognition with the resulting powers to negotiate under the Agreement.

Respondents argument that the Council has not shown its desire to bargain is not substantiated by the facts and is moot in light of the decision. The claim that bargaining only takes place at the end of the agreement is contra to the FLRC Report and Recommendation where the exclusive bargaining unit is involved.

RECOMMENDATION

On the basis of the foregoing Findings and Conclusions it is recommended that the Assistant Secretary dismiss the complaint.

Case No. 42-4030 (RO)

LOCAL 1897, AMERICAN FEDERATION OF GOVERNMENT EMPLOYEES, AFL-CIO

Petitioner

DECISION AND ORDER

This case involved a petition filed by Local 1897, American Federation of Government Employees, AFL-CIO (AFGE) seeking to represent a unit of all professional employees assigned to the United States Air Force Regional Hospital, Eglin Air Force Base, Florida. The Activity contended that to establish a unit of only hospital professionals would result in needless fragmentation of the professional employee complement at Eglin Air Force Base which would be inconsistent with the policies enunciated by the Federal Labor Relations Council. The Activity further contended that the proposed unit would hamper, rather than promote, effective dealings and efficiency of agency operations.

Applying the three criteria set forth in Section 10(b) of the Order the Assistant Secretary found that the unit sought was not appropriate for the purpose of exclusive recognition. In this regard, he noted that although the evidence established that the sought unit herein consisting of all civilian professional employees of the Activity is a functional grouping of all of its professional employees and that these employees enjoy a clear and identifiable community of interest separate and distinct from all other professional employees of the Armament Development and Test Center (ADTC), such a unit would lead to the artificial fragmentation of the professional employees of the ADTC and would not promote effective dealings or efficiency of agency operations.

In this latter regard, he noted that the Activity is but one of the several divisions of ADTC, and, as such, the 18 employees in the claimed unit share with the approximately 700 other Eglin Air Force Base professional employees, common overall supervision, essentially uniform personnel policies and practices initiated and implemented by the same Civilian Personnel Office and common labor relations policies and practices established and implemented by the same Civilian Personnel Officer and his labor relations staff. He also noted the 11 year bargaining history of the nonprofessional employee unit currently represented exclusively by the AFGE encompassing all nonprofessional employees of the ADTC at the Base, including the nonprofessional employees of the Activity.

Accordingly, since the claimed unit did not satisfy equally each of the three criteria set forth in Section 10(b) of the Order, the Assistant Secretary ordered that the petition be dismissed.

Upon a petition duly filed under Section 6 of Executive Order 11491, as amended, a hearing was held before Hearing Officer Danny L. Curry. The Hearing Officer's rulings made at the hearing are free from prejudicial error and are hereby affirmed. Upon the entire record in the subject case, including the brief filed by the Activity, the Assistant Secretary finds:

1. The labor organization involved claims to represent certain employees of the Activity.
2. The Petitioner, Local 1897, American Federation of Government Employees, AFL-CIO, hereinafter called AFGE, seeks an election in a unit composed of all professional employees assigned to the United States Air Force Regional Hospital, Eglin Air Force Base, Florida, excluding all nonprofessional employees, management officials, employees engaged in Federal personnel work in other than a purely clerical capacity, and supervisors.

The Activity contends that to establish the claimed unit composed solely of professionals at the Hospital would result in needless fragmentation which would be inconsistent with the policies of the Order. It further asserts that a unit composed only of Hospital professionals, as opposed to an Activity-wide unit of all professionals at Eglin Air Force Base, would impede, rather than promote, effective dealings and efficiency of agency operations.

The Activity is a division of the Armament Development and Test Center, hereinafter called ADTC, located at Eglin Air Force Base. The mission of the ADTC is to plan, conduct and manage programs for the development, testing and acquisition of air armaments. The employee complement of the ADTC consists of both military and civilian personnel. Its civilian complement consists of approximately 3,000 nonprofessional employees and approximately 700 professional employees.

Since September 30, 1966, the AFGE has represented a Base-wide unit of all nonprofessional civilian employees of the ADTC, including those employed by the Activity. There is currently in effect a negotiated agreement executed by the parties on March 6, 1975, which by its terms is effective for a period of three years with provision for automatic renewal for three year terms thereafter. The professional civilian employees of the ADTC, consisting of doctors, nurses, attorneys, dentists, engineers, accountants, scientists and meteorologists, are currently unrepresented.

The mission of the Activity is to provide medical care for all authorized personnel, provide services for other military hospitals in the region on a referral basis, and also act as a teaching facility. It is under the direction of a Hospital Commander, who has authority over the day-to-day operations of the Activity, but who receives functional supervision and direction from the Air Force Chief Surgeon, and administrative support and direction from the Base Commander. The Hospital Commander has the authority to set hours of work, tours of duty, and authorize transfers and leave pursuant to policies established for the hospital.

The petitioned for unit, consisting of the 18 civilian professional employees working at the Activity, includes the job classifications of Dental Officer, Clinical Nurse, Medical Technologist and General Medical Officer. 2/ With the exception of several employees who are stationed at the Hurlburt Field Dental Facility, which is a branch of the Activity located 16 miles away, all of the employees work in the hospital on the Base and have no contact with the other non-hospital professionals working at the Base except in cases where medical care is being provided. The nurses work three eight hour rotating shifts seven days a week, while the other employees in the hospital work a normal 40 hour week.

The record discloses no evidence of interchange or transfer of employees in the petitioned for unit and the other professional employees of the ADTC as the various skills and training required do not allow movement from one professional classification to another. The Activity's professionals are under the immediate supervision and direction of the Activity's supervisors and the overall supervision of the Base Commander. Unlike the other ADTC professional employees, the Activity's professional employees are required to wear uniforms, maintain their professional licenses, and continue their medical education and training.

2/ The parties stipulated that all of these employees are professionals.

All the civilian employees of ADTC are serviced by the Base Civilian Personnel Office and are governed by essentially the same personnel regulations, policies and practices. 3/ The Civilian Personnel Officer and his labor relations staff, under authority delegated to him by the Base Commander, are responsible for handling all civilian labor relations activities for the Base.

Based on all the foregoing circumstances, I find the petitioned for unit is not appropriate for the purpose of exclusive recognition under Section 10(b) of the Order. Thus, in my view, although the evidence establishes that the sought unit herein consists of a functional grouping of all civilian professional employees of the Activity, and that such employees enjoy a clear and identifiable community of interest separate and distinct from all other professional employees of the ADTC, it further establishes that such unit will not promote effective dealings or efficiency of agency operations. 4/ In this latter regard, it was noted that the Activity is but one of several divisions of the ADTC, and, as such, the 18 professional employees in the claimed unit share with the approximately 700 other ADTC professional employees, common overall supervision, essentially uniform personnel policies and practices established and implemented by the same Civilian Personnel Office, as well as common labor relations policies and practices initiated and implemented by the same Civilian Personnel Officer and his labor relations staff. Also noted was the effective dealings demonstrated by the 11 year collective bargaining history of the unit represented exclusively by the AFGE, encompassing all nonprofessional employees of the ADTC at the Base, including the nonprofessional employees of the Activity. Under these circumstances, I find that the petitioned for unit will not promote effective dealings or efficiency of agency operations but, rather, will lead to the artificial fragmentation of the professional employees of the ADTC.

3/ The record reveals that the Activity has certain policies in the area of leave that are peculiar to the Activity because of the nature of the Activity's operations.

4/ The Federal Labor Relations Council stated in Defense Supply Agency, Defense Contract Administration Services Region (DCASR), San Francisco, California, Defense Contract Administration Services District (DCASD), Salt Lake City, Utah, et al., FLRC Nos. 75A-14, 75A-128, and 76A-9 (1977) that:

Before the Assistant Secretary may find that a proposed unit is appropriate for purpose of exclusive recognition under the Order, he must make an affirmative determination that the proposed unit satisfies equally each of the three criteria contained in Section 10(b). That is, he must consider equally the evidence going to each of the three criteria and, as required by Section 10(b), find appropriate only units which not only insure a clear and identifiable community of interest, but also promote effective dealings and efficiency of agency operations.

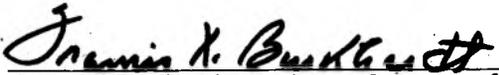

April 21, 1978

Accordingly, since the claimed unit does not satisfy equally each of the three criteria set forth in Section 10(b) of the Order, I find that the unit sought herein by the AFGE is not appropriate for the purpose of exclusive recognition under the Order, and I shall order the instant petition be dismissed.

ORDER

IT IS HEREBY ORDERED that the petition in Case No. 42-4030(RQ) be, and it hereby is, dismissed.

PURSUANT TO SECTION 6 OF EXECUTIVE ORDER 11491, AS AMENDED

VETERANS ADMINISTRATION,
NORTH CHICAGO VETERANS HOSPITAL,
NORTH CHICAGO, ILLINOIS
A/SLMR No. 1024

This case involved unfair labor practice complaints filed by Local 2107, American Federation of Government Employees, AFL-CIO, (AFGE) alleging that the Respondent violated Section 19(a)(1), (2) and (4) of the Order by its actions with respect to Dr. Oksana Mensheha beginning with alleged interference with her duties as a shop steward, infringement upon her protected right to join and assist a labor organization, discrimination against her because of union activities, and culminating with her improper termination, in part, because of asserted union animus, and, in part, as a reprisal for the filing of a prior unfair labor practice complaint. The Respondent contended that Dr. Mensheha was discharged for valid reasons unrelated to her union activities.

The Administrative Law Judge found that the Respondent violated Section 19(a)(1), (2) and (4) of the Order. In reaching this determination, he noted numerous instances of actions on the part of the Respondent directed at Dr. Mensheha, and other active members of the AFGE, which established the Respondent's union animus and discriminatory motive in terminating Dr. Mensheha. In addition, the Administrative Law Judge noted the timing of, and the lack of justifiable reasons for, Dr. Mensheha's termination by the Respondent. Under these circumstances, the Administrative Law Judge recommended that the Respondent reinstate Dr. Mensheha and make her whole for any loss of income she had incurred.

The Assistant Secretary adopted the findings, conclusions, and recommendations of the Administrative Law Judge. In this regard, he noted that but for the exercise of her rights assured under the Order, Dr. Mensheha would not have been discharged. Further, the Assistant Secretary noted that the issue of Dr. Mensheha's discharge was not barred by Section 19(d) of the Order since the only "appeals" procedure available to Dr. Mensheha did not provide for third-party review of the Respondent's action. Accordingly, the Assistant Secretary ordered that Respondent cease and desist from the conduct found violative of the Order, and that it take certain affirmative actions.

DECISION AND ORDER

On October 26, 1977, Administrative Law Judge William B. Devaney issued his Recommended Decision and Order in the above-entitled proceedings, finding that the Respondent had engaged in certain unfair labor practices and recommending that it take certain affirmative actions as set forth in the attached Administrative Law Judge's Recommended Decision and Order. Thereafter, the Respondent filed exceptions and a supporting brief with respect to the Administrative Law Judge's Recommended Decision and Order and the Complainant filed an answering brief.

The Assistant Secretary has reviewed the rulings of the Administrative Law Judge made at the hearing and finds that no prejudicial error was committed. 1/ The rulings are hereby affirmed. Upon consideration of the entire record in the subject cases, including the

1/ In its exceptions, the Respondent moved for a new hearing before a new Administrative Law Judge based on its contention that certain conduct and statements by the Administrative Law Judge at the hearing indicated that he was biased against the Respondent and raised serious doubts as to whether he would be able or willing to fairly weigh the evidence. Upon evaluating the entire record herein, I conclude that the conduct of the Administrative Law Judge did not constitute bias, or in any way prejudice the Respondent in this matter. Accordingly, the Respondent's Motion is hereby denied.

Respondent's exceptions and supporting brief and the Complainant's answering brief, I hereby adopt the Administrative Law Judge's findings, 2/ conclusions and recommendations.

In agreement with the Administrative Law Judge, and for the reasons set forth in his Recommended Decision and Order, I find that by its action of December 17, 1976, in terminating the employment of Dr. Oksana Mensheha, a Staff Ophthalmologist, the Respondent violated Section 19(a)(1), (2) and (4) of Executive Order 11491, as amended. Thus, I conclude, based upon a review of the entire record herein, that, but for the exercise of her rights assured under the Order, Dr. Mensheha would not have been discharged.

In reaching the foregoing disposition, I find that the issue of Dr. Mensheha's discharge was not barred by Section 19(d) of the Order. In this regard, I take official notice of the provisions of Title 38 of the United States Code, under which Dr. Mensheha was employed. Among other things, Title 38 provides for the establishment of a Disciplinary Board to ". . . determine, upon notice and fair hearing, charges of inaptitude, inefficiency or misconduct . . ." of certain employees, including physicians, employed under Title 38. 3/ Under the provisions of Section 4110 of Title 38, when the Disciplinary Board sustains the charges involved, it recommends suitable disciplinary action to the Administrator of the Veterans Administration, whose decision in the matter is final. Employees, including physicians, employed under Title 38 of the United States Code, are not covered by the Civil Service Appeals Procedure set forth in Federal Personnel Manual Supplement, Part 752. 4/

It has been previously held that the term "appeals procedure" as set forth in Section 19(d) of the Order 5/ is not intended to encompass "appeals" procedures which do not provide for third-party review of an agency action. 6/ Consequently, since, as indicated above, third-party

2/ The Respondent excepted to certain credibility findings made by the Administrative Law Judge. In Navy Exchange, U.S. Naval Air Station, Quonset Point, Rhode Island, 2 A/SLMR 377, A/SLMR No. 180 (1972), the Assistant Secretary held that as a matter of policy he would not overrule an Administrative Law Judge's resolution with respect to credibility unless the preponderance of all the relevant evidence established that such resolution clearly was incorrect. Based on a review of the record herein, I find no basis for reversing the Administrative Law Judge's credibility findings.

3/ See 38 U.S.C. 4110.

4/ See Federal Personnel Manual Supplement, Chapter 752-1, Subchapter S2-4.

5/ Section 19(d) of the Order provides, in pertinent part: "Issues which can properly be raised under an appeals procedure may not be raised under this section"

6/ See Department of the Air Force, Offutt Air Force Base, A/SLMR No. 784 (1977), FLRC No. 77A-22 (1977).

review is not provided for under Title 38, I find that Section 19(d) does not preclude consideration of the issue of Dr. Mensheha's termination under the unfair labor practice procedures of the Order.

ORDER

Pursuant to Section 6(b) of Executive Order 11491, as amended, and Section 203.26(b) of the Regulations, the Assistant Secretary of Labor for Labor-Management Relations hereby orders that the Veterans Administration, North Chicago Veterans Hospital, North Chicago, Illinois, shall:

1. Cease and desist from:

(a) Discharging or otherwise discriminating against employees with regard to hiring, tenure, promotion, or other conditions of employment, in order to discourage membership in, or activities on behalf of, Local 2107, American Federation of Government Employees, AFL-CIO, or any other labor organization.

(b) Discharging or otherwise discriminating against employees because they have filed a complaint, have had a complaint filed on their behalf, or have given testimony under the Executive Order.

(c) In any like or related manner interfering with, restraining, or coercing employees in the exercise of their rights assured by Executive Order 11491, as amended.

2. Take the following affirmative actions in order to effectuate the purpose and policies of Executive Order 11491, as amended:

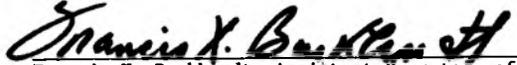

(a) Offer Dr. Oksana Mensheha immediate and full reinstatement to her former position or, if that position no longer exists, to a substantially equivalent position, without prejudice to her seniority or other rights and privileges, and make her whole, consistent with applicable laws and regulations, for any loss of income she may have suffered by reason of its discrimination, by paying to her a sum of money equal to the amount which she would have earned or received from the date of her discharge to the date of the offer of reinstatement, less any amount earned by such employee through other employment during the above noted period.

(b) Take all action, including the immediate unqualified recommendation of the Chief of Surgery of the North Chicago Veterans Hospital, to insure that it unqualifiedly and affirmatively recommends that Dr. Oksana Mensheha's name be restored to the faculty roster of the Chicago Medical School.

(c) Post at its facilities at the North Chicago Veterans Hospital, North Chicago, Illinois, copies of the attached notice marked "Appendix" on forms to be furnished by the Assistant Secretary for Labor-Management Relations. Upon receipt of such forms they shall be signed by the Hospital Director of the North Chicago Veterans Hospital and shall be posted and maintained by him for 60 consecutive days thereafter in conspicuous places, including all places where notices to employees are customarily posted. The Hospital Director shall take reasonable steps to insure that such notices are not altered, defaced, or covered by any other material.

(d) Pursuant to Section 203.27 of the Regulations, notify the Assistant Secretary, in writing, within 30 days from the date of this order as to what steps have been taken to comply herewith.

Before: WILLIAM B. DEVANEY
 Administrative Law Judge

This case arises under Executive Order 11491, as amended (herein also referred to as the "Order"). It was initiated by charges filed on, or about, September 29, 1976, and December 17, 1976, a complaint filed on December 28, 1976, alleging violations of Sections 19(a)(1), (2) and (6), Case No. 50-15408(CA) (Asst. Sec. Exh. 1) and a complaint filed January 21, 1977, alleging violations of Sections 19(a)(1) and (4) of the Order (Asst. Sec. Exh. 2). By Order dated March 8, 1977 (Asst. Sec. Exh. 3) the cases were consolidated and Notice of Hearing issued March 8, 1977, on the 19(a)(1), (2), (4) and (6) alleged violations of the Order (Asst. Sec. Exh 4) and scheduled the hearing for Room 717, Chicago Area Office, Federal Office Building, 230 South Dearborn Street, Chicago, Illinois. By letter dated May 4, 1977, the Assistant Regional Administrator, Mr. LeRoy L. Bradwish changed the location of the hearing to Room 12, Building 131, North Chicago Veterans Hospital, North Chicago, Illinois. Pursuant to the Notice of Hearing and the letter of May 4, 1977, a hearing was duly held before the undersigned in North Chicago, Illinois, on May 10, 11 and 13, 1977. The allegation relating to Section 19(a)(6) of the Order was withdrawn at the hearing.

The alleged violations of the Order (Sections 19(a)(1), (2) and (4)) concern Dr. Oksana Mensheha, beginning with alleged interference with the performance of her duties as a Shop Steward, alleged infringement of her protected right to join and assist a union, alleged discrimination against her because of her union activities and culminating with her alleged unlawful termination on December 17, 1976, in part because of asserted union animus and in part as a reprisal for the prior unfair labor practice charge.

All parties were represented by able counsel, were afforded full opportunity to be heard, to examine and cross-examine witnesses, to introduce evidence bearing on the issues, and extremely comprehensive and helpful briefs, timely filed, have been received from both parties and have been carefully considered. Upon the basis of the entire record, including my observation of the witnesses and their demeanor, I make the following findings, conclusions and recommendation:

FINDINGS AND DISCUSSION

A. Dr. Mensheha

Dr. Mensheha received her M.D. degree at the University of Wisconsin in 1968, completed three years of residency in the University of Wisconsin Hospital in Madison, Wisconsin, was in private practice for two years in Kenosha, Wisconsin, completed a fellowship at Wills Eye Hospital in Philadelphia, Pennsylvania in ophthalmic pathology and retinal oncology, became Board Certified by the American Board of Ophthalmology and Otolaryngology in 1974, and began employment with the Veterans Administration Hospital in North Chicago, Illinois, in September, 1974, as Chief of the Ophthalmology Section. All persons concerned found Dr. Mensheha to be a highly competent physician and her professional competence was wholly unrelated to the termination of her services by Respondent.

Dr. Mensheha is married to a doctor, Lieutenant Commander Manhart, M.C.U.S.N., who is a member of the medical staff, United States Naval Center, Great Lakes, Illinois.

B. Affiliation of Hospital With Chicago Medical School

The North Chicago Veterans Hospital was formerly known as Downey Hospital and its primary mission had been to care for long-term chronic psychiatric patients. Its capability as a general hospital was characterized uniformly as a "first-aid" operation. Downey, over an extended period, experienced extreme difficulty in obtaining and retaining Board Certified psychiatrists. Downey had no medical school affiliation and it was concluded that an academic affiliation was the only solution to the recruitment of eligible or Board Certified interns and residents. Discussions about affiliation with the Chicago Medical School (The University of Health Sciences, Chicago Medical School) began about 1973 and affiliation with the Chicago Medical School was achieved. Neither, the terms of the affiliation nor its precise date was shown; however, the record shows that in the spring of 1975, the affiliation moved forward rapidly; that the North Chicago Hospital initiated its development into a general medical hospital as well as a psychiatric hospital; and that the affiliation brought to the Hospital 150 to 225 additional staff positions, plus funding for equipment and renovation of existing facilities.

C. Events Through September 2, 1975

The Hospital and the Medical School were integrated extensively by making Medical School department chairmen chiefs of Hospital services and by making Medical School faculty Hospital staff. Dr. William Schumer, who had been Chief of Surgery at the Westside Veterans Administration Hospital from 1967 to 1975 and Professor of Surgery at the University of Illinois, in March, 1975, was appointed Professor and Chairman of the Department of Surgery of the Chicago Medical School and Chief of Surgery of the North Chicago Veterans Administration Hospital. Ophthalmology is a section of the surgical service. Dr. Schumer had a very high regard for Dr. Mensheha's professional qualifications and ability and approximately April 11, 1975, recommended her for the Medical School faculty, to which she was duly appointed Assistant Professor. Indeed, if Dr. Schumer did not actually offer Dr. Mensheha the position of Chief of Ophthalmology of the Medical School, he invited her to apply for the position with his unqualified support because he "felt that she would be a tremendous asset to the program" and the clear implication was that the position was hers for the asking. Dr. Mensheha declined because she was married to a Navy man and the probability of transfer made it doubtful that she would remain long enough to justify acceptance of the duties as head of the Medical School Ophthalmology Department.

Although Dr. Schumer testified that he wanted Dr. Mensheha to remain as Chief of Ophthalmology, "even though she couldn't take the position of the Chief of Ophthalmology Department at the CMS", and there is no reason whatever to doubt his sincerity in April, 1975, circumstances soon changed Dr. Schumer's position.

There is no doubt that the Medical School affiliation caused concern among the old guard of the Hospital with changes in personnel, an increased demand for excellence in staff training and qualification, and a shift to becoming a general hospital. Some, including Dr. Mensheha, came to feel strongly that the Medical School was then running the Hospital. Such concerns prompted Dr. Mensheha to meet with Mr. Paul Kennedy, then Director of the Hospital, probably in late August, 1975. Mr. Kennedy's testimony concerning the meeting with Dr. Mensheha consists almost entirely of his sermonizing his remarks and sheds little or no light on what Dr. Mensheha said to Mr. Kennedy. Accordingly, Dr. Mensheha's testimony is the only direct testimony concerning her statements to Mr. Kennedy. In substance, Dr. Mensheha testified that she told Mr. Kennedy that some of the surgical staff were afraid for their positions and were unhappy; asked if "we might not be able to get a Chief of Surgery who would be primarily a V.A. Chief that we V.A. physicians could work through rather than somebody who was loyal to the Medical School"; asked if it were possible to make the ophthalmology and optometrist sections independent of the surgical service; and mentioned that she had heard that Dr. McDonald was thinking of quitting and that Dr. Miller had quit. Following Dr. Mensheha's statement of her recollection of her statements to Mr. Kennedy, Mr. Shochet, counsel for Respondent asked:

"Q. In other words, you approached Mr. Kennedy about replacing Dr. Schumer as Chief of Surgery?" (Tr. 169) and Dr. Mensheha responded:

"A. Or making ophthalmology autonomous"
(Tr. 170) 1/

Dr. Mensheha stated that Mr. Kennedy responded that it was not possible at that time to get a Chief of Surgery for the Hospital; but that the dual position was only temporary and that within six months (there was, so Dr. Mensheha reported that Mr. Kennedy stated, a six-month special dispensation from the V.A. to have the dual position) there would be two people, one to be Chief of Surgery for the Hospital and one to be Chairman of Surgery for the Medical School; that ophthalmology could not be autonomous as it was always under the surgical service in the V.A. system; and he had no comment on the rumors concerning Drs. McDonald and Miller.

Mr. Kennedy stated that he reported his conversation with Dr. Mensheha to Dr. Bogan, then Chief of Staff; but Mr. Kennedy's testimony is, again, of little or no value in determining what he told Dr. Bogan. Dr. Schumer testified that Dr. Bogan called him immediately after his conference with Mr. Kennedy and that Dr. Bogan stated that Mr. Kennedy had informed him that Dr. Mensheha "was complaining bitterly about me [Dr. Schumer], and he thought -- he said 'what's going on? What are the problems?'" Dr. Schumer stated that he told Dr. Bogan they should try to straighten this out right away and promptly called a meeting with Dr. Mensheha at which Dr. Bogan and Dr. McDonald were also present.

Dr. Schumer testified,

"Well, the only thing I remember about the meeting, of course, is that Doctor Mensheha became very angry. She became - she called me inept. She called me inept as an administrator. She called me inept as a surgeon. She said that I was not -- I was more interested in the school than I was in patient care. It really became a very difficult situation. (Tr. 580)

* * * *

1/ Later Dr. Mensheha stated,

"I requested we have someone to work through through who was loyal to V.A. If Dr. Schumer wanted to change his loyalty to the V.A., it was all right with me. I did not specifically request that we 'get rid of' Dr. Schumer." (Tr. 171).

The meeting became very difficult and charged, and, as a matter of fact, I got to the point where I made the statement to her that if she couldn't live with my policies and couldn't live with what I was doing, that maybe she ought to transfer or find another job.

"At that time, she said she wasn't going to quit. Apparently she did take this as I wanted to fire her at that time. (Tr. 581)

* * * *

"... I said, 'Oksana, if you can't work with me and if you feel so strongly against me that maybe the best thing to do is have you transferred or leave.' Actually transferred is what I was interested in.

"Oksana took that I was trying to fire her. She says, 'I am not going to leave.'

"Q. Did your voice become raised?

"A. I think I was a little angry after being called an inept -- what I characterized as an inept surgeon after I have been in there 20 years and have a reputation through the country. What bothered me more than anything else, was that I was taking into consideration the school over patient care. I tell you again, sir, that patient care to me is supreme, and thirdly, she called me an inept administrator which I have a little pride. I though I was a pretty good administrator. I was a little angry, I guess." (Tr. 668-669)

Dr. McDonald testified,

"In addition, there was discussions about whether Dr. Mensheha had ... questioned the professional competence of Dr. Schumer in discussions with the director of the hospital ... Dr. Mensheha did not raise her voice and scream and yell, and nobody else did. It was a very definite meeting, but it was not a screaming and yealling sensation or situation, and Dr. Mensheha was very tight, and obviously upset, and she said, 'yes, and I still think that you are ... that you are not a good doctor and you don't know how to take care of patients', and I froze when she said this. (Tr. 742-743)

* * * *

"... she did further state that in addition she still thought that Dr. Schumer was not ... a good doctor or was able to take care of patients, or did a good job in taking care of patients, and I do remember Dr. Schumer getting up and saying, 'Listen here young lady, this is a very bad thing to say' and so forth. (Tr. 743-744)

* * * *

"Dr. Schumer made an additional statement ... 'young lady, this is enough for me to believe you or fire you from your position because of these statement.'" (Tr. 744-745)

Dr. Mensheha testified that:

"A. Okay. At 12:30 I was called into Dr. Schumer's office in Building 50. I walked in alone to find Dr. Schumer and Dr. Bogan and Dr. McDonald there. Dr. Schumer asked me what I had discussed with Mr. Kennedy. I told him exactly what I had discussed with Mr. Kennedy. Dr. Schumer then proceeded to tell me what I had recounted before -- to shout at me about how he did not consider me to be loyal to him, and he -- I believe he said something about I shouldn't have gone to talk with the Director about this, and how dare I bypass the Chief of Staff, who at that time was Dr. Bogan, and then went into what I had said before. He said that 'I'll fire you. I've got three people to replace you with.'

"Q. ... isn't it a fact that you complained to Mr. Kennedy that Dr. Schumer was concerned with the Medical School and not with the V.A.?

"A. Yes. (Tr. 162)

* * * *

"Q. Didn't Dr. Schumer repeat those accusations to you during this meeting?

"A. No. He asked me to repeat to him what I had told Mr. Kennedy.

"Q. And he didn't repeat this about what you had allegedly said?

"A. No.

"Q. Didn't he complain to you about having gone to the Director without facing him first about the accusations about him and the Medical School?

"A. He complained to me about not having gone to Dr. Bogan first. I don't remember that he complained to me about not going to him first. He may have.

"Q. At this time he threatened to fire you?

"A. Yes.

"Q. Because you had complained to Mr. Kennedy about him?"

"A. I presume so.

"Q. And his loyalties -- where they lay between the Medical School and the V.A.?

"A. Sir, I don't know." (Tr. 163-164)

I did not find Mr. Kennedy either a credible witness or a convincing witness. His testimony concerning the chronology of events was so thoroughly contrary to established facts as to render his version of the succession of events wholly unreliable; his total inability to remember Dr. Mensheha's statements to him, or his discussion with Dr. Bogan concerning Dr. Mensheha's statements to him with regard to Dr. Schumer; and the substance of his testimony which, in some respects, was demonstrably contrary to fact and which, in other respects, was so improbable in light of all testimony as to be unworthy of belief in the absence of corroboration. For example, Mr. Kennedy asserted that Dr. Schumer met with him prior to his meeting with Dr. Mensheha and placed both meetings in September or October, 1975. As the meeting between Drs. Schumer, Bogan, McDonald and Mensheha, which followed Dr. Mensheha's meeting with Mr. Kennedy and resulted therefrom occurred on September 2, 1975, Mr. Kennedy's placing both of his meetings in September or October becomes questionable; but Mr. Kennedy's testimony that Dr. Schumer, in the meeting preceding the Kennedy-Mensheha meeting, referred to Dr. Mensheha's union activity is not possible as Dr. Mensheha testified that she did not join the union until sometime in September and had not become active as an "unofficial" steward until about October. On the one hand, Mr. Kennedy testified that Dr. Schumer, prior to the Kennedy-Mensheha meeting, discussed the removal of Dr. Mensheha as Chief of the Ophthalmology Section of the Hospital in order that Dr. James Bizzell, to whom he had made a commitment to be Chief of the Ophthalmology Department of the Medical School, could be appointed Chief of the Ophthalmology Section of the Hospital, while, on the other hand Mr. Kennedy testified that he told Dr. Mensheha, shortly thereafter, "... that I had heard from her supervisor that she was a very accomplished and good physician and certainly she had no cause for concern." Not only is such testimony inherently improbable but if true, Mr. Kennedy can only be complimented for his duplicity. Mr. Kennedy denied any further meeting with Dr. Schumer after the September 2, 1975, meeting between Drs. Schumer, Bogan, McDonald and Mensheha and, as found hereinafter, Dr. Schumer after the September 2, 1975, meeting did go to Mr. Kennedy and request that Dr. Mensheha's title as Chief of the Ophthalmology Section of the Hospital be rescinded or that she be let go. Without attempting to further recite the inconsistencies of Mr. Kennedy's testimony, suffice it to say that I do not credit any of Mr. Kennedy's uncorroborated testimony except as specifically noted.

On the other hand, I found Dr. McDonald a wholly credible witness and one who made every effort to be scrupulously fair, accurate, and complete in recounting the events of the September 2, 1975, meeting. Dr. Schumer's testimony concerning this meeting was wholly credible and was corroborated by the testimony of Dr. McDonald. Dr. Mensheha was, in most respects, also a very credible witness and her testimony, although she denied saying to Mr. Kennedy that Dr. Schumer was inept both as a surgeon and administrator and denied saying that Dr. Schumer's conduct was detrimental to the service and the Hospital (Tr. 162-163), was not wholly at odds with the testimony of Drs. Schumer and McDonald. Thus, Dr. Mensheha admitted that she complained to Mr. Kennedy that Dr. Schumer was concerned with the Medical School and not with the V.A.; that she had complained to Mr. Kennedy about Dr. Schumer; that she had approached Mr. Kennedy about replacing Dr. Schumer as Chief of Surgery. Her testimony was, to considerable extent, of a nature that in pleading would be denominated a negative pregnant. Accordingly, I find that on September 2, 1975, Dr. Mensheha acknowledged to Dr. Schumer, in the presence of Dr. McDonald (and Dr. Bogan who did not testify), her criticism of Dr. Schumer to Hospital Director Kennedy; that she stated, or implied by seeking his removal as Chief of Surgery, a critical regard for Dr. Schumer as a surgeon and as an administrator; and that Dr. Schumer stated, in effect, that her critical remarks about him were grounds for her removal.

I further find, as Dr. Schumer most credibly testified, that following the meeting with Dr. Mensheha he went to Hospital Director Kennedy and told him about the meeting and requested that Dr. Mensheha's title as Chief of the Ophthalmology Section of the Hospital be rescinded or, even, that Dr. Mensheha be let go. Mr. Kennedy took no action pursuant to Dr. Schumer's request beyond, perhaps, asking Dr. Bogan, Chief of Staff, to monitor the situation; however, I specifically reject Mr. Kennedy's testimony that he and/or Dr. Bogan was unaware of any dissatisfaction or concern on Dr. Schumer's part with Dr. Mensheha and that there was any discussion by Dr. Schumer with Mr. Kennedy up to that time about Dr. Bizzell.

Consequently, I conclude that on September 2, 1975, Dr. Schumer requested that the Hospital Director rescind Dr. Mensheha's title as Chief of the Ophthalmology Section of the Hospital and/or that Dr. Mensheha be terminated by Respondent; and that such request was wholly unrelated to any right protected by the Order.

D. Dr. Mensheha Joins the Union in September, 1975

Thereafter, Dr. Mensheha did become a member of Local 2107, American Federation of Government Employees, which has represented the non-management employees of the Hospital since at least the fall of 1974, the professional section of which encompasses physicians, degreed scientists and other medical professional employees but excluding nurses. Dr. Mensheha joined the Union sometime in September, 1975; by October, 1975, had unofficially become a steward; and was officially appointed a steward for the professional unit in February, 1976.

There can be no doubt that Dr. Mensheha's activity as an unofficial Union steward from October, 1975, and as an officially designated Union steward from February, 1976, was well known by Respondent and in particular by the supervisory personnel of the Hospital medical staff, including Dr. Schumer, by the Hospital Director Mr. Kennedy and his successors, Mr. Gathman who served as acting Director of the Hospital from Mr. Kennedy's departure until the new Director took over, and Ms. Marjorie R. Quandt who was appointed Director of the Hospital on May 16, 1976; and that her activity on behalf of the Union was well known by Respondent's Chief of Medical Services, Dr. John Chase; and by the Chicago Medical School, among others.

E. Grounds for Termination Unrelated to Protected Activity

It is equally clear that ample cause was shown for the termination of Dr. Mensheha for reasons wholly unrelated to her Union activity. After September 2, 1975, Dr. Mensheha's relations with Dr. Schumer were strained and barely civil; her relations with Dr. Bizzell, after he joined the Hospital as staff Ophthalmologist, were consistently strained, indeed bordered on open hostility; she was insubordinate; and she repeatedly by-passed the Chief of Surgery, Dr. Schumer and the Assistant Chief of Surgery, Dr. McDonald on critical administrative matters such as the budget for her section of the surgical service, and renewal of a sharing agreement with St. Theresa's Hospital, and equipment and supplies, as well as on other administrative matters; etc. It is recognized that Dr. Mensheha's reception of Dr. Bizzell was not entirely without cause; that prior to September, 1975, she felt that Dr. Schumer was interfering with the operation of the Ophthalmology section and after the September 2, 1975, confrontation with Dr. Schumer may well have feared that Dr. Schumer would not be overly sympathetic to her budget recommendations; and that she had previously had a disagreement with Dr. Schumer over disposition of fees received under the St. Theresa sharing agreement. Nevertheless, Dr. Mensheha, when she met Dr. Bizzell for the first time, in February, 1976, before he "came on board" told him:

"Dr. Schumer and I have had problems. I have not had any quarrel with you, and I don't intend to have any quarrel with you. Occasionally there are fireworks between Dr. Schumer and me. If you get caught in the fireworks, I'm sorry. I don't want to involve you in the quarrel. However, I'm the Chief of Ophthalmology at the V.A." (Tr. 176).

To say the least, the seeds of disharmony were aired even before Dr. Bizzell reported for duty and, as noted above, there were continuing incidents on the part of Dr. Mensheha which could have justified her termination by Respondent wholly apart from activity protected by the Order. The question to be decided is whether her termination was, in part, because of her union activity or because she filed an unfair labor practice charge or whether, as Respondent urges, her termination was solely for reasons unrelated to activity protected by the Order. It is obvious that despite the events of September 2, 1975, Respondent took no action against Dr. Mensheha. It is necessary, therefore, to examine the major incidents thereafter.

F. Major Incidents After March 29, 1976

The initial charge was filed on September 29, 1976, so that attention will be directed to the major incidents beginning with the six month period preceding the filing of the initial charge. Except for incidental background purposes, events prior to March 29, 1976, will not be further considered.

1. Kennedy Transferred to Boise, Idaho

In April, 1976, Mr. Kennedy was transferred from North Chicago to Boise, Idaho, as Director of the very much smaller Veterans Administration Hospital located there. Mr. Kennedy's testimony about this matter is quite interesting. He stated:

"It's been the experience of the Veterans Administration over the years that whenever a major change is taking place -- and certainly what occurred at North Chicago was a very major change -- that in addition to the real benefits and advantages of the crew (sic - that accrue), there is a great deal of unrest and unhappiness that's created, just simply because there are some changes, and I think invariably whoever the changing agent is -- in this instance, it was the Hospital Director, principally -- after two or three years, his -- there's been so much controversy and difficulties and friction that's occurred, that it is generally in everybody's best interest to move that individual along.

"Well, a couple of years after I was here, it was about that time for me to move on. I didn't particularly agree with that decision. I thought there was another year or so that I had to contribute here, but on the other hand, the Chief Medical Director [Dr. Chase] asked me to go to Boise ... And I could certainly understand his reasons for doing so, and after the changes, I agreed with it -- that it probably was time to move along ..." (Tr. 278-279)

When the Union learned of Mr. Kennedy's impending transfer its membership was most unhappy as relations with Mr. Kennedy had been good. Thus, on, or about, April 5, 1976, a delegation, including Dr. Mensheha, attended a council meeting of the City of North Chicago and during the question and answer period following the meeting, brought to the attention of the community the fact that Mr. Kennedy was about to be removed and to urge if anyone wished to express their support, letters, telegrams, or verbal support for Mr. Kennedy. On April 7, 1976, the Union met to discuss the matter further and voted to send three delegates to Washington for the dual purpose of: a) urging retention of Mr. Kennedy and b) stating the Union's concern about the North Chicago Hospital and requesting a full scale investigation of the Chicago Medical School at Veterans Administration Hospital, North Chicago. To this end, two rather long documents (Comp. Exh. 1 2/ and 2) were prepared. The chosen delegates were to go to Washington, D.C. on Monday, April 12. Over the week-end, Dr. Mensheha was selected as one of the three delegates (President John Reeves and Maxine Borcherding were the other delegates of Local 2107) and took emergency leave on Monday, April 2, 1976. The three representatives of Local 2107 met with Congressman Howard, an aide to Senator Proxmire and with Dr. Chase to whom they delivered the documents referred to above. The Veterans Administration Central Office did conduct an investigation (as did the FBI, GAO and Congress) which resulted in the discipline by Respondent on or about February 1, 1977, of four management officials, including Dr. Schumer (Dr. Schumer's discipline consisted of counselling by Director Quandt). On or about, April 16, 1976, Dr. Bogan was replaced as Chief of Staff and Dr. Lester Cohn, Chief of Medical Services since March, 1972, served as Acting Chief Of Staff from that time until April, 1977. 3/

2/ Complainant's Exhibit 1 when presented to Dr. John Chase, Veterans Administration's Chief Medical Director, on April 12, 1976, contained the signatures of the employees who had signed it. The signatures were cut off of other copies for the protection of employees.

3/ Dr. Cohn testified that he had been asked to take the position in March, 1976. Although Comp. Exhs. 1 and 2 contain highly critical comments about Dr. Bogan, his replacement as Chief of Staff does not appear to have resulted from the union's written statements of concern. Dr. Bogan remained as Assistant Chief of Staff for Education.

Respondent contends that "representation" of Hospital Director Kennedy was not protected activity under the Order, citing, Internal Revenue Service, Chicago District, A/SLMR No. 279, 3 A/SLMR 304 4/ (1973); and U.S. Department of The Treasury, Internal Revenue Service, Western Service Center, Ogden, Utah, A/SLMR No. 280, 3 A/SLMR 310 (1973). I do not agree with Respondent's contention and find nothing in the authorities cited and relied upon to support Respondent's position. Internal Revenue Service, Chicago District, supra, involved a grievance by a supervisor; designation by the supervisor of the president of the local union as his representative in the grievance proceeding; and the District Director's refusal to accept the union president as grievant's representative because the Union represented non-supervisory employees in the District. The Assistant Secretary ordered that the complaint be dismissed for the reason that, in agreement with the Administrative Law Judge, "Section 7(d)(1) of the Order does not confer any rights enforceable under Section 19 and that any rights flowing from Section 10(e) of the Order do not flow to supervisors." In this regard, see, also, U.S. Department of the Army, Transportation Motor Pool, Fort Wainwright, Alaska, A/SLMR No. 278, 3 A/SLMR 290 (1973). U.S. Department of the Treasury, Internal Revenue Service, Western Service Center, supra presented the identical substantive issue of law as the Chicago District case, supra, and the Assistant Secretary dismissed the complaint stating, "In my view, the principles expressed in Internal Revenue Service, Chicago District, A/SLMR No. 279, are equally applicable to the facts of the instant case. I find, therefore, in agreement with the Administrative Law Judge, that the Respondent's stated policy, of refusing to permit supervisors to be represented in grievance proceedings by a representative of the labor organization that represented employees supervised by the grievant-supervisor, was not violative of Section 19(a)(1) of the Order."

Section 1(a) of the Order provides, in part, that:

"(a) Each employee of the executive branch of the Federal Government has the right, freely and without fear of penalty or reprisal, to form, join, and assist a labor organization ... and each employee

4/ The decisions of the Assistant Secretary also appear in bound volumes entitled "Decisions and Reports on Rulings of the Assistant Secretary of Labor for Labor-Management Relations". When bound, decisions will be cited by volume and page number.

shall be protected in the exercise of this right. Except as otherwise expressly provided in this Order, the right to assist a labor organization extends to participation in the management of the organization and acting for the organization in the capacity of an organization representative, including presentation of its views to officials of the executive branch, the Congress, or other appropriate authority. ..."

Dr. Mensheha, and other individuals had the right to appear, on their own time, at the meeting of the City Council on behalf of the Union to announce the impending removal of Mr. Kennedy and to encourage expression of support for Mr. Kennedy by the public. Such appeals to the public are protected under Section 1(a) of the Order. Cf. Department of Transportation, Federal Aviation Administration, Las Vegas Control Tower, Las Vegas, Nevada, A/SLMR No. 796, n. 1 (1977); National Treasury Employees Union (Internal Revenue Service), A/SLMR No. 783 (1977). While all activity on behalf of a union may not be protected, it is clear that employees have a protected right to act for the organization and where, as here, the only activity was announcement at a public meeting that the present Hospital Director was about to be removed and public support for him was enlisted, there can be no doubt that such public appeal was constitutionally protected and any limitation imposed by Respondent violates the First Amendment and Section 19(a)(1) of the Order. Cf. Statement on Major Policy Issue, FLRC No. 76P-4 and National Treasury Employees Union, supra. The Order specifically protects the expression of the views of the Union to officials of the executive branch, the Congress, or other appropriate authority, and there is no basis to assert that the expression of its views in support of a Hospital Director are not fully protected. Recognizing that there are important differences between Section 7 of the National Labor Relations Act and Section 1 of the Order, the National Labor Relations Board has long recognized that employees may express in concert their views regarding the selection of their supervisors to the extent that it directly affects their working conditions, In the Matter of Phoenix Mutual Life Insurance Company, 73 NLRB 1463 (1947), enf'd, 167 F.2d 983 (7th Cir. 1948); In the Matter of Container Mfg. Co., 75 NLRB 1082 (1948), enf't denied on other grounds, sub. nom., Sax v. NLRB, 171 F.2d 769 (7th Cir. 1948); but a strike to coerce removal of a supervisor is not protected activity when the moving party acts out of personal resentment at discipline imposed by that foreman, Joanna Cotton Mills v. NLRB, 176 F.2d 749 (4th Cir. 1949), or is not to advance interests of employees, In the Matter of Fontaine Converting Works, Inc., 77 NLRB 1386 (1948); and under the Taft-Hartley amendments, a strike to compel employment, or re-employment, of a foreman, discharged because two supervisors were not required, violates 8(b)(1)(3) of LMRA, Laborers, Local 478 v. NLRB, 503 F.2d 192 (D.C. Cir. 1974), cert denied, 420 U.S. 926 (1975). Of course, here, nothing more than expression of views concerning Director Kennedy was involved and, as he was considered a moderating influence on the stress of affiliation changes and a Hospital Director with whom relations had been good, directly affected their working conditions.

Respondent further asserts that the statements of concern (Complainant's Exhibits 1 and 2) did not involve "personnel policies and practices and matters affecting working conditions"; but, although this is, indeed, the obligation concerning negotiation of agreements as set forth in Section 11 of the Order, the right to assist a labor organization, as set forth in Section 1(a) of the Order, is not so limited. To the contrary, Section 1(a) assures the right to act for the labor organization in the capacity of an organization representative "including presentation of its views to officials of the executive branch, the Congress, or other appropriate authority". Not only are Section 1 rights not limited to matters appropriate for negotiation, but the presentation of the labor organizations' views to officials of the executive branch, the Congress, or other appropriate authority is not directed exclusively at the negotiating process. There is no question that Dr. Mensheha, and the two other representatives who accompanied her to Washington, were duly selected representatives of Local 2107; were duly authorized to present the views of the union to officials of the executive branch and to members of Congress; and that the three representatives, including Dr. Mensheha did meet with Congressman Howard; and aide to Senator Proxmire; and with Dr. Chase to whom the statements of concern were presented and an investigation "of the activities of the Chicago Medical School at VA Hospital, North Chicago" was urged. As such activity was foursquare within the rights assured by Section 1(a) of the Order neither Veterans Administration, Wadsworth Hospital Center, Los Angeles, California, A/SLMR No. 449, 4 A/SLMR 758 (1974); nor Department of Transportation, Federal Aviation Administration, Las Vegas Control Tower, Las Vegas, Nevada, A/SLMR No. 796 (1977); cited and relied upon by Respondent, is in point.

2. Dean Falk's Telephone Call to Captain Elliott

On April 8, 1976, Doctor Marshall Falk, Dean of the Chicago Medical School called Captain Robert C. Elliott, Medical Corps, U.S. Navy and Director of Clinical Services at the Naval Center, Great Lakes, Illinois, and, in the course of his conversation, asked Capt. Elliott if he knew one of his staff doctor's wives had participated in a demonstration, either somethimes the night before or the preceding week. Capt. Elliott knew the doctor (Lt. Commander Manhart) and the wife (Dr. Mensheha) and told Dean Falk that he "felt it was none of the Navy's business and that the Navy would not have any influence or take any action on this." In the fall, at the dedication of the Medical School's Applied Health Science Building, a member of the Chicago Medical School faculty, Capt. Elliott did not remember who but believed it may have been Dr. Schumer or Dr. Cohn, "related a concern that Dr. Falk would deny that that conversation ever existed". Dr. Cohen testified that he had no such conversation with Capt. Elliott at the dedication and, further, that he knew of no telephone conversation by Dr. Falk until the charge was filed (September 29, 1976). Dr. Cohn testified that when he learned of the Falk call, from the charge, he called Capt. Elliott in October and made an appointment with him and went to Capt. Elliott's office. Capt. Elliott testified that Dr. Cohn "was quite concerned about the possibility that Marshall Falk would deny the phone call and that it would cause embarrassment to both the V.A. and the Chicago Medical School." Dr. Cohn testified that he had told Capt. Elliott that he was aware that there was an allegation to the effect that Dr. Falk had made a phone call to him regarding Dr. Mensheha and asked him what were the circumstances regarding that phone call. Dr. Cohn testified that Capt. Elliott stated that "and about half way through Commander Elliott stated that the Dean broke off from normal conversation and said -- I am trying to quote as nearly as I possibly can. 'By the way, you know, do you know that one of your staff physicians is married to one of the physicians at the VA Hospital who is one of the more ardent activists?' Commander Elliott told me that he responded by saying yes ...". Dr. Cohn stated that he never suggested to Commander (Captain) Elliott that he should deny such phone call and did not know that Dr. Falk denied making any phone call to Captain Elliott. I fully credit Captain Elliott's testimony; but in doing so, I must say that I also found Dr. Cohn to be a wholly credible witness and am convinced that Capt. Elliott's testimony about Dr. Cohn's concern about the possibility that Marshall Falk would deny the phone call, which I fully credit, was the reasonable and rational impression of Capt. Elliott in light of the prior statement to him at the dedication and in light of Dr. Cohn's visit to his office rather than a conflict in Dr. Cohn's testimony.

In any event, the significance is that Dean Falk did make a telephone call to Capt. Elliott in the course of which he made a statement which Capt. Elliott believed was intended as a request that he exert pressure on Commander Manhart to dissuade his wife, Dr. Mensheha, from union activity. Dean Falk was not an employee of Respondent; but when Respondent learned of the telephone call, and the record shows that by the time of the dedication Respondent had actual knowledge of the telephone call through Dr. Schumer, Chief of Surgery, and again in October, 1976, through Dr. Cohn, Acting Chief of Staff, Respondent ratified the request by its failure to repudiate it. Hamburg Shirt Corp., 156 NLRB 511 (1965).

3. Restriction on Leave Requests by Dr. Mensheha

Approximately a week after her trip to Washington, D.C. on April 12, 1976, Dr. Mensheha requested leave without pay. The request was made to Dr. Schumer who called and asked details as to the purpose of the leave, where she was going, etc. Dr. Mensheha had requested the leave to pick up ophthalmic instruments she had purchased for her own use from a doctor who was retiring and the doctor, who had stored them for her, was about to leave the state and had requested that she move them and had told her he would not be in on the weekend. Dr. Schumer further informed Dr. Mensheha that at any time in the future she wished any kind of leave she had to send him a memorandum giving all details and if more than one day of leave was requested he would send it to Personnel. Dr. Mensheha testified that the prior policy had been that the Service Chief approved leave for not more than two days and no supporting memorandum had ever been required; that Dr. Schumer's instructions to her were oral; and that Dr. Schumer never issued any memorandum to the same effect to all staff members.

4. Delorse Puder

Ms. Puder had been employed by the Hospital as a clerk-typist for nine years, and since 1972 in the ophthalmology clinic. The Position Description, originally issued in 1971 and re-issued in January, 1975, set forth considerable duties, in particular the adjusting, repairing, fitting and dispensing of eyeglasses, not normally performed by a clerk-typist. Dr. Seiller, then a consultant, in 1972 taught Ms. Puder the mechanics of fitting and adjusting glasses, some of the instructions having been given at Dr. Seiller's private office during periods of authorized leave for the purpose of such training. From 1972 until 1976, Ms. Puder had fit several hundred pairs of glasses each year without complaint or criticism by any doctor or patient. Shortly after Dr. Mensheha arrived she put in motion a more formalized training program for Ms. Puder and in November, 1974, a request for the American Association of Ophthalmology Home Study Course, Basic Course, was approved and Ms. Puder completed this course in 1975. In March, 1976, Dr. Mensheha submitted requests for Ms. Puder and Ms. Siddie, R.N., to take the Advanced Series Course. This request was approved on March 25, 1976, but the application forms had been mislaid and new forms had to be submitted on June 15, 1976. (Res. Exh. 6). Ms. Puder completed the advance series and received her certification in September, 1976.

There is no dispute that when Dr. Schumer reviewed the position description in early 1976 he noticed that the position description for Ms. Puder contained health delivery duties even though she was designated a clerk-typist; that in February 1976, he asked Dr. Mensheha what Ms. Puder was doing and that Dr. Mensheha said that Ms. Puder was, indeed, fitting glasses, etc.; that she had been trained on the job; that it was fully in accord with her position description; and that Ms. Puder had been doing this work quite satisfactorily for a number of years. Dr. Schumer's testimony is quite significant in view of the charge of insubordination on the part of Dr. Mensheha in February, 1976. 5/

"... I said 'you can't allow this to go on. You have got to have her stop this as much as possible.' (Tr. 588)

* * * *

"Q. What was her response?

"A. Her response was that she did not -- she felt that she should go on. She needed her and felt that she should go on.

"The point is, I said, 'all right. If you need a health technician, let's go into personnel for a health technician.'

"Q. What did she say to that?

5/ In his memorandum dated July 22, 1976, to Chief, Ophthalmology Section (Dr. Mensheha) thru Chief of Staff (Dr. Cohn), Dr. Schumer stated, in part,

"1. On February 10, 1976, I verbally and in writing informed you of the problem that existed with the performance of health technician's duties by Delorse Puder ... I, as well as the Hospital Director, Assistant Hospital Director, and Chief of Staff requested you to cease this practice." (Res. Exh. 11)

"A. I think we agreed at that time that we would do that. What was not recognized, I think, is that ... When you go in for a new position, you have to establish the new position first. ... (Tr. 589) (Emphasis supplied.)

On February 11, 1976, Dr. Schumer submitted a request to the Chairman, Position Management Committee re "Redescription of Position Description # 1090, Clerk-Typist, Ophthalmology Section, Surgical Service - GS 4/1" (Res. Exh. 9). The request stated, inter alis "since the present clerk typist has had no official training as a health aide, is not officially recognized as such and is not ethically or legally authorized to directly render patient" and requested:

"a) An Outpatient Health Aide should be provided to the Ophthalmology Clinic to perform the duties described in Position Description # 1090.

"b) The Clerk-Typist ... position # 1090 should be redescribed as proposed in the enclosed Position Description for clerk-typist. ..."

On February 18, 1976, the Position Management Committee took the following action:

"i. The Committee considered a request from the Chief, Surgical Service, for classification action on the redescription of the Secretary (Steno) position to the Chief of Surgical Service.

"RECOMMEND THAT THE CHIEF, SURGICAL SERVICE, BE ASKED TO CLARIFY WHY THIS REQUEST WAS SENT TO POSITION MANAGEMENT COMMITTEE.

"j. The Committee considered request from the Chief, Surgical Service, for an additional position for an Outpatient Health Aide for the Ophthalmology Clinic.

"RECOMMEND DISAPPROVAL" (Res. Exh. 17)

The recommendations were approved by Director Kennedy.

On March 3, 1976, Dr. Schumer assigned Ms. Puder to emergency duty in the Cardiovascular - Thoracic Section and Operating Room (Res. Exh. 7). On March 4, 1976, Dr. Mensheha filed a "Grievance" with the Hospital Director with respect to the "emergency duty" assignment of Ms. Puder (Res. Exh. 8); and on March 8, 1976, Director Kennedy met with Drs. Bogan (Chief of Staff), Schumer (Chief of Surgery) and Mensheha (Chief, Ophthalmology Section). The meeting concerned the assignment of Ms. Puder out of the Ophthalmology Clinic and the fitting of glasses, et al. by Ms. Puder. On cross-examination by Respondent, Mr. Kennedy testified:

"Q. Mr. Kennedy, in discussing that last meeting, do you recall during that meeting the subject of Miss Puder coming up again?

"A. Miss Puder?

"Q. Yes.

"A. Yes, right. I remarked, I believe, that she had been pulled out of the clinic by Dr. Schumer because he didn't really understand how busy the clinic was, and that was part of the concern of Dr. Mensheha and the agreement from Dr. Schumer that he would put her back in that clinic.

"Q. Do you recall discussing why Dr. Schumer had requested an additional position for health aide for the ophthalmology clinic?

"A. Yes. This was one of several positions that had been requested, and when the issue came up, I questioned why we needed an additional health aide down there, because it was my understanding that Mrs. Puder was doing some of that work, and this had been agreed to long before ...

"Q. What was Dr. Schumer's reply?

"A. Well, Dr. Schumer's reply at that time was, as I recall, was in favor of it, but previous to that, I don't think directly to me, but somewhere I'd heard that he had raised an issue about her not being qualified to do that kind of work, not being licensed or what have you.

"Q. Did he express a concern about her doing that kind of work during this meeting?

"A. No.

"Q. If you look at your memo again, directing your attention to Page 8, Paragraph 5. Could you refresh your recollection, please?

"A. Okay. Page 8, Paragraph 5 -- well, in the meeting he did, but at the end of the meeting, I say 'Drs. Bogen and Schumer both expressed support for this change.' That's redescribing the position description to fit all that Mrs. Puder was doing.

"Q. Did Dr. Schumer ask that she not continue this work until the position description was clear?

"A. Not that I recall." (Tr. 280-282)

Mr. Kennedy's testimony was corroborated by the testimony of Dr. Mensheha and, although Dr. Schumer at first stated that he did not recall the meeting of March 8, 1976, when shown Mr. Kennedy's memorandum stated that he remembered "that these were problems which were discussed between Bogan and I and Doctor Mensheha. Whether Mr. Kennedy was involved in these meetings I can't remember" (Tr. 601); and he admitted that when informed of the caseload in the Ophthalmology Clinic he returned Ms. Puder to the Clinic. Accordingly, I fully credit Mr. Kennedy's testimony as set forth above.

Dr. Schumer sent a position description which was a standard position description for a clerk-typist, to Dr. Mensheha for signature but, in the penultimate paragraph, stated, "If you have any revisions, or additions, please call me." (Res. Exh. 18). Dr. Mensheha did not sign Dr. Schumer's redescription but by memorandum dated March 19, 1976, submitted a position description for a Health Technician, GS-5, with secondary office duties (Res. Exh. 19). Dr. Schumer responded by memorandum dated March 22, 1976, in which he stated that Personnel had advised that the request to establish a Health Technician position must be submitted to the Position Management Committee; that the position of clerk typist will stand as set forth in the redescription forwarded March 10, 1976; instructed Dr. Mensheha, as immediate supervisor, to sign it as soon as possible; and that the cover page for the Position Description for a Health Technician had been retyped to show, inter alia, "Establish". By memorandum dated March 23, 1976, Dr. Mensheha responded that the reclassification was not a new position but, rather, an update and accurate description of the current position held by Ms. Puder. Dr. Mensheha further stated that her office staffing needs will increase and "An additional position of Clerk-Typist (Stenographer) is requested." (Res. Exh. 21)

On March 31, 1976, Mr. George G. Shepherd, Jr., Administrative Assistant to Chief of Staff, forwarded to Dr. Mensheha, through Dr. Schumer, a rewritten position description to "reflect the secretarial as well as limited technician duties that are now being performed by Mrs. Puder. If this ... is acceptable and accurately reflects what Mrs. Puder is doing and should be doing, please sign in the appropriate places and forward through channels to Personnel." (Res. Exh. 22). Respondent contends in its Brief that Dr. Mensheha had sent this position description to the Office of the Chief of Staff; that this document "establishes beyond doubt that Dr. Mensheha not only refused to obey an order ... but wilfully attempted to bypass him, to obtain her goal of upgrading Ms. Puder's duties by going behind his back. She did not have the courtesy to even tell Dr. Schumer that she was going to pursue this matter at a higher lever; she tried to sneak it through." (Respondent's Brief p. 11). The record does not support this assertion. First, Mr. Shepherd did not testify. Second, the "rewritten position description" does not follow the format of Dr. Mensheha's proposed position description (Res. Exhs. 19 and 21). Third, the language of Mr. Shepherd's memorandum itself, together with the attached position description which is without indication of grade, title, date and was not signed, indicates preparation by Mr. Shepherd. Fourth, the total absence of any testimony or evidence that Dr. Mensheha had any more knowledge of this document than Dr. Schumer, much less that Dr. Mensheha "wilfully attempted to bypass" Dr. Schumer. Fifth, action by Mr. Shepherd in "rewriting" the position description for Ms. Puder "to reflect the secretarial as well as limited technician duties that are now being performed by Mrs. Puder" was wholly consistent with the credited testimony of Mr. Kennedy concerning the support by the Chief of Staff (Dr. Bogan) at the March 8, 1976, meeting to redescribe the position "to fit all that Mrs. Puder was doing". Accordingly, I reject the contention of Respondent that Dr. Mensheha prepared Respondent's Exhibit 22.

On June 24, 1976, Director Quandt met with Drs. Cohn (Acting Chief of Staff), Schumer and Mensheha and Mr. Frank Gathman, Assistant Hospital Director. In the course of this meeting Ms. Puder was discussed and I find, as Ms. Quandt most credibly testified, that at that meeting Dr. Schumer stated, "I order you to have her stop" and that Dr. Mensheha responded "I will not" but because of Dr. Mensheha's interest in upward mobility, "she made a very neat statement. She said 'I will if you give her a GS 5'" (Tr. 701). While Director Quandt recognized that Dr. Mensheha had been insubordinate in that meeting, she did nothing about it. There is no question that Dr. Mensheha permitted Ms. Puder to continue to fit glasses until July 22, 1976, when Dr. Schumer issued a memorandum to Dr. Mensheha that:

"I am therefore directing that the use of this clerk-typist as health care technician be immediately discontinued." (Res. Exh. 11).

Although there is testimony that, following the June 24, 1976, meeting, Dr. Mensheha instructed Ms. Puder to stop fitting glasses, Ms. Puder's testimony on cross-examination, which I fully credit, was to the contrary. Mrs. Puder, on cross-examination testified that Dr. Mensheha, following Dr. Schumer's oral instruction, had, nevertheless, told Ms. Puder she "should continue [fitting glasses] because I was taking this course. She had rewritten my job description and she was in good hopes that this would go through. Then after she received the memo in writing, then she said no, and I showed Mrs. Siddle how to do it -- to the best of my knowledge." (Tr. 362).

Also, on July 22, 1976, Dr. Schumer submitted to Personnel a redescription of the clerk-typist job to eliminate the health care duties. (Res. Exh. 24). Dr. Bizzell wrote a memorandum to Dr. Schumer dated July 28, 1976, in which he stated he had observed Ms. Puder fitting glasses (Res. Exh. 25); however, in view of Ms. Puder's testimony on cross-examination, which I have fully credited, which is corroborated by the testimony of Dr. Mensheha, I reject Dr. Bizzell's memorandum and testimony, which I did not find convincing, that Ms. Puder fit glasses, except in course of instructing Mrs. Siddle, with either the knowledge or consent of Dr. Mensheha after July 22, 1976.

From all the evidence and testimony, I find no order or instruction by Dr. Schumer to Dr. Mensheha that Ms. Puder cease fitting glasses until June 24, 1976, in the meeting with Director Quandt. Clearly, on June 24, Dr. Schumer ordered Dr. Mensheha to instruct Ms. Puder to cease fitting glasses and Dr. Mensheha directly refused; but Respondent, through its Hospital Director took no action against Dr. Mensheha. Ms. Puder continued to fit glasses until July 22, 1976, when Dr. Schumer, in writing, directed that the use of this clerk-typist as health care technician "be immediately discontinued" and Dr. Mensheha complied fully with this directive.

Of course, the record shows that Dr. Schumer discussed the matter with Dr. Mensheha in February; that Dr. Schumer testified he told Dr. Mensheha, "you have got to stop this as much as possible"; that after Dr. Mensheha indicated that Ms. Puder's services were needed and she should go on, Dr. Schumer said "All right"; that he took the matter of a health technician to the Management Position Committee which, on February 18, 1976, recommended disapproval of the request; that on March 8, in a meeting with the then Hospital Director, Mr. Kennedy, it was agreed that Ms. Puder's position description should be redescribed to fit all the work that Mrs. Puder was doing; that in his memorandum of March 22, 1976, Dr. Schumer, while stating that the request to establish a Health Technician position must be submitted for approval, did not indicate that any change should be made in Ms. Puder's duties pending resolution of the classification requests; and on March 25, 1976, Dr. Schumer approved the advance home study course for Ms. Puder. Dr. Schumer's bureaucratic efficiency of converting the work of one into jobs for two (See, Dr. Mensheha's memorandum of August 26, 1976, Res. Exh. 27) and/or his motive for his harsh and inequitable treatment of a long time employee of Respondent are not proper concerns in this proceeding; but I find that Respondent's assertion that the multiple disciplinary action taken against Dr. Mensheha was because of her insubordination in refusing to comply with Dr. Schumer's orders to cease permitting Ms. Puder to fit glasses (the emphasis by Drs. Schumer and Bizzell on other health care duties, while authorized by Ms. Puder's 1971-1975 position description, was not convincing. See, Dr. Schumer's memorandum of August 24, 1976; (Cf. Dr. Mensheha's memorandum of July 23, 1976), was, in part, contrary to the record and in whole highly suspect as the actual motivation for the action subsequently taken against Dr. Mensheha. Dr. Mensheha was insubordinate on June 24, 1976, as she had been on September 2, 1975,; but Respondent, with full knowledge of her refusal on June 24, 1976, to comply with Dr. Schumer's direct order, took no action whatever and Dr. Schumer's written directive of July 22, 1976, was fully complied with.

5. Dr. Mensheha Directed to Resign from Union

Director Quandt testified that there was a discussion about Dr. Mensheha's union activity with Mr. Gathman and with Dr. Cohn, Acting Chief of Staff. As a result, Director Quandt concluded that Dr. Mensheha, as Chief of the Ophthalmology Section was a part of management and should not be active as far as functioning in a steward's role. Accordingly, Director Quandt instructed Mr. Gathman to inform Dr. Mensheha through the Chief of Staff, Dr. Cohn, and Dr. Schumer that, as a part of management, she should not function as a steward. Dr. Schumer, when called by Dr. Cohn, demurred and testified most credibly that "I was having some difficulties with Oksana at that time. I didn't want to have any more." Dr. Schumer asked Dr. Cohn to send him a memorandum stating what Dr. Cohn wanted him to do. Dr. Cohn did so on July 2, 1976 (Comp. Exh. 4) and Dr. Schumer transmitted the memorandum and requested Dr. Mensheha's "resignation to the union effective immediately" on July 6, 1976 (Comp. Exh. 3). In an undated letter, which Director Quandt testified was sent around July 20, 1976, and which Dr. Mensheha testified she received in August, 1976, Mr. Gathman, for Director Quandt, advised Dr. Mensheha:

"1. The memorandum dated July 6, 1976, from Dr. Schumer and the memorandum attached to it from Dr. Cohn are hereby rescinded. ... 6/

"2. Management is currently reviewing your status as a supervisor. Until this issue is resolved we will continue to treat you as a member of the bargaining unit. ...

"3. I appreciate the opportunity to deal with this matter informally and hope that you will agree with me to consider this resolved." (Comp. Exh. 5)

Respondent insisted at the hearing that Dr. Mensheha was not a supervisor during the relevant period of the complaint and, of course, Complainant asserts that Dr. Mensheha was not a supervisor during the relevant period of the complaint. While I stated at the hearing that I had grave reservations about her status, in view of Dr. Mensheha's testimony that she was a supervisor and that the record showed that she supervised a number of people (Tr. 245), the record does show that her responsibility had been curtailed long before she became a member of the Union, for example, blind rehabilitation was placed under Physical Medicine and Rehabilitation and the Ear, Nose and Throat Clinic was eliminated; that her authority to hire and fire, or to effectively recommend such action, was curtailed, 7/ if not eliminated; that her influence on budget recommendations had been curtailed; and that requests for supplies and equipment seldom

6/ I am aware that Director Quandt testified that she instructed Mr. Gathman to inform Dr. Mensheha through Drs. Cohn and Schumer that as a member of management she should not function as a union steward. The direction from Dr. Cohn was that she "cannot be a member of the union. Therefore, Dr. Mensheha must be directed to resign her position as a union member." (Comp. Exh. 4).

7/ That is, the power to decide. Dr. Mensheha testified she was directed to terminate Dr. Seiller; that Dr. Stilles was employed by Dr. Bizzell at the time she was Chief of Ophthalmology.

received favorable consideration without Dr. Bizzell's concurrence. Therefore, in view of Respondent's insistence that Dr. Mensheha was not a supervisor at any time relevant to this proceeding, I accept this representation by the parties that Dr. Mensheha was not a supervisor at any time relevant to this proceeding inasmuch as there is record support for this representation.

Complainant points to Mr. Kennedy's testimony (Tr. 267-269) as showing "the growing animus of management toward Dr. Mensheha's union activities" (Complainant's Brief p. 41). I have carefully considered Mr. Kennedy's testimony in this regard and do not credit it, in part, because his time sequence is contrary to the record, in part, because, as previously stated, I did not find Mr. Kennedy a credible or convincing witness, and in part because Dr. Schumer's testimony, which I found wholly credible concerning the by-laws matter, shows no union animus by Dr. Schumer in that regard. For example, Dr. Schumer testified that he attended only one meeting on the by-laws and that he agreed with some of Dr. Mensheha's suggestions.

There is a great deal of testimony, however, which does show general union animus, including incidents set forth above. Without attempting to catalogue all examples shown, the following further instances are noted. Dr. Mensheha testified that in the course of her handling the grievances of Dr. Pokral (Comp. Exh. 27) Dr. Cohn questioned her about the allegations of mismanagement of funds at the Hospital that had appeared in the newspapers and stated "Dr. Schumer thinks that you are the one who has brought the allegations to the notice of the newspapers, and he also holds you responsible for releasing them to other sources. He used the word 'presume'. He said, 'Dr. Schumer presumes that you're the one. ...'" (Tr. 100). Dr. Mensheha testified that she told Dr. Cohn she had not talked to any newspaper reporter but had discussed this with "the investigators and Congress and Representatives" (Tr. 100). It is assumed that by "Representatives", Dr. Mensheha meant other than a member of the U.S. House of Representatives (See, for example, Comp. Exhs. 1 and 2 which were delivered to Dr. Chase; and as noted above on April 12, 1976, the three Union delegates also talked to an aide of Senator Proxmire, as well as to Congressman Howard.

In the fall of 1976, Dr. Schumer stopped a nurse, Ms. Lynn Thomas, in the hallway and asked her to come into his office where another physician, Dr. Altner, was standing. Ms. Thomas testified:

"Dr. Schumer asked me if I was a union member or what connection I had with the union. I replied I was not a member and never had been a member and asked why he had asked me that. And he replied that he heard my name, the name Thomas, in a conversation. He was asking if I was a union member." (Tr. 371).

Mr. Maden Michael Djuricich, a neuro-biologist and neuro-chemist, at a union meeting had brought up a question concerning Dr. Schneider. Mr. Reeves, President of Local 2107, brought the matter to Director Quandt's attention by a letter. The Director replied that no action would be taken until the names of the people who made the complaint were disclosed. A few days later, Dr. Schneider called Dr. Saeed Gaballah, a bio-chemist and Vice President of Local 2107, to his office and accused him of writing the letter to Director Quandt. Dr. Gaballah stated that whether he had written the letter or whether some one else had, they were carrying out the provisions of the collective bargaining agreement with Respondent. Dr. Schneider responded that disciplinary action would be taken against any employee who did not go through proper channels on grievances. On August 24, 1976, Dr. Schneider issued a memorandum to all Laboratory Service Personnel (Comp. Exh. 25). A few days after the memorandum of August 24, 1976, had been issued, Mr. Djuricich came to Dr. Gaballah for union assistance, stating that Dr. Schneider had accused him of initiating the letter to Director Quandt, demanded to meet with him and threatened to discipline Mr. Djuricich if he did not come to his office without union representation. Dr. Schneider recanted and agreed to meet with Mr. Djuricich and his union representative and Dr. Gaballah met with Dr. Schneider and Mr. Djuricich as Mr. Djuricich's representative. Dr. Schneider stated that "Any complaints you have come first to him ... Then I will take it to the higher authorities." Dr. Gaballah stated that the collective bargaining agreement provided that the President of the Union may write directly to the Director about a problem that concerns more than one employee. Dr. Gaballah testified that Dr. Schneider stated:

"... all this business of the union raising problems and the publicity in the newspapers is very bad. He and Miss Quandt are determined to put a stop to that." (Tr. 311)

In early 1977, Dr. Gaballah was appointed as the Union's representative on the Hospital Research Committee and at the first session Dr. Gaballah attended, Dr. Schneider denounced Dr. Gaballah as "... a type of person I would not serve on a committee with. You have been saying lies about me and you shouldn't be sitting here with us" and Dr. Gaballah's membership on the Committee was subsequently withdrawn and he was replaced.

The most astounding incident involved a long term psychiatric patient, Rudolph Durso, and the patient's sister-in-law, Mrs. Doris Durso. Rudolph Durso had cataracts and had been treated for a long period time by Dr. Mensheha. Mr. Durso, because of his mental disorder, was difficult to communicate with but had developed a great confidence in Dr. Mensheha and had agreed to her performing the operation for removal of the cataracts. The operation was scheduled shortly before Dr. Mensheha's terminal date. The night before the scheduled date of the operation someone at the Hospital called Mrs. Durso and told her the operation was being cancelled "because they were letting Dr. Mensheha go". Mrs. Durso called the VFW and talked to a Mr. Demar and told him, that they had had such a hard time talking Rudy into getting the operation and that they still wanted it performed as scheduled. Mr. Demar called back and told Mrs. Durso not to worry, that the operation would proceed as scheduled and that Dr. Mensheha would perform the operation. Mrs. Durso testified:

"... A few minutes later I got a telephone call from Dr. -- I am scared. I am afraid I can't remember his name.

"Q. All right. Is it Schumer?

"A. Yes. From a man who said he was Dr. Schumer and that he was angry with me for calling the VFW. He said why did I do that, why did I call them instead of him. I said he called off the operation so why should I call him when I didn't feel that I could talk to him. So I called the VFW instead and they saw to it that Rudy did get his operation as planned.

"Q. Did Dr. Mensheha operate on your brother-in-law?

"A. Yes. I got to the hospital at 7:00 Tuesday morning and she, Dr. Mensheha, came in and walked down the hall with Rudy on the gurney or whatever it is called. After the operation she came back and told me everything was all right.

"Q. Did you again see Dr. Schumer?

"A. Yes. While Dr. Mensheha was operating it was the first time I had seen him.

"Q. I am sorry?

"A. He came into the room, closed the door and -- I guess I am just nervous -- he asked me what I knew about Dr. Mensheha's problem. I said I didn't know anything except that she was going to be let go on Friday. He told me that she was a trouble-maker and that she was interfering with two other doctors who -- I'm sorry, I'm shaking so bad -- that she was making these other two doctors lose their reputations. And then he said 'Well, don't worry about it. It is really not your problem, it is our problem.'" (Tr. 377-378).

Dr. Stiles, a staff opthamologist had a patient with a corneal ulcer which had not responded to treatment. On November 11, 1976, Dr. Stiles decided that the eye should be removed or eviscerated but the patient objected and loudly yelled that he did not want his eye taken out. A telephone consent was obtained from the patient's sister and the operation, to be performed by Dr. Bizzell, was scheduled for the following day. Ms. Elizabeth Siddle, a registered nurse assigned to the eye clinic, had been instructed to scrub for the operation but, aware of the patient's violent objection to the operation and the telephone consent obtained from the patient's sister, Ms. Siddle called her supervisor, Mrs. Santorum, and asked if she could refuse to scrub for the operation. Mrs. Santorum stated that she knew of no reason why Ms. Siddle could not decline to scrub for the operation, but to be safe to call Mr. McDonald in Medical Administration. Mr. McDonald, after checking with counsel for Respondent, advised Ms. Siddle that she must scrub because the operation "was to save the eye". Ms. Siddle corrected Mr. McDonald and told him it wasn't to save the eye but, rather, to remove it. Mr. McDonald called again and told Ms. Siddle that the operation would not be performed.

On November 17, 1976, Dr. Stiles came in for his regular appointment day and asked why the surgery had not been performed and Ms. Siddle told him that she had called her supervisor who had referred her to medical administration which cancelled the surgery. Dr. Stiles was upset and said that the patient would get S.O. (sympathetic ophthalmia) and if he did he intended to tell the sister why the surgery had not been performed. Dr. Mensheha was informed of the matter when Ms. Siddle sought medical references on the condition and Dr. Mensheha told Dr. Stiles that Ms. Siddle had mentioned the legality of the surgery but not whether the treatment was the correct one. Dr. Stiles became angry and refused to discuss the facts. Dr. Mensheha told Dr. Stiles that Ms. Siddle was not the person to discuss the mode of treatment. Dr. Stiles then told Ms. Siddle that she didn't have to scrub on his surgical cases any more. Dr. Bizzell, in his memorandum of November 19, 1976, to Director Quandt makes no identifiable reference to this matter but does state:

"6. Because of this demoralizing atmosphere, Dr. Stiles has mentioned to me the possibility of his leaving our staff. ..." (Res. Exh. 13).

Dr. Mensheha most credibly testified, however, that Director Quandt told her that "my presence in the eye clinic made the medical school people feel uncomfortable because they were afraid of discussing their misadventures in front of me in case I should take it to the papers or publicize it in some other way, and she also accused me of having gone to the library and doing research on the case that you mentioned." (Tr. 150).

G. Dr. James W. Bizzell

When Dr. Bizzell was first brought to the eye clinic, Dr. Schumer introduced him to Ms. Puder but not to Dr. Mensheha. In introducing himself to Dr. Mensheha, Dr. Mensheha testified that he identified himself as "Chief of Ophthalmology for the V.A. Hospital and Chairman of Ophthalmology for the Medical School." (Tr. 175). Dr. Mensheha told Dr. Bizzell very emphatically that "Dr. Bizzell, to the best of my understanding I am the Chief of Ophthalmology at the V.A. Hospital." (Tr. 176). Dr. Bizzell denied that he introduced himself in this manner but overall I did not find Dr. Bizzell a convincing witness and, therefore, fully credit Dr. Mensheha's testimony. With such an auspicious beginning, it is not surprising that Dr. Mensheha's attitude toward Dr. Bizzell was lacking in enthusiasm and shortly thereafter, on, or about, April 19, 1976, Dr. Bizzell made himself more obnoxious by arriving at the clinic with a desk and demanding admittance to an area designated for patient care to set up an office for himself. Dr. Mensheha, the Chief of Ophthalmology, had no office. For a staff ophthalmologist to barge in, without prior discussions with the Chief of the Section, with a desk and demand the use of space set aside for patient care predictably angered Dr. Mensheha and she refused to permit the desk to be placed in the newly remodeled examining rooms unless the rooms were reassigned as office space. Dr. Mensheha testified that Dr. Bizzell, as Chairman of Ophthalmology for the Medical School already had an office in Building 50. I specifically do not credit either Dr. Schumer's testimony or Dr. Bizzell's testimony that Dr. Bizzell was given an office in Building 50 either after, or because of, this incident. To the contrary, I fully credit Dr. Mensheha's testimony that Dr. Bizzell had such office as Chairman of Ophthalmology for the Medical School which is fully supported by the testimony of Dr. Bizzell concerning his work for the Medical School.

Very soon after Dr. Bizzell arrived for duty, on March 1, 1976, it became apparent to Dr. Mensheha that, both with regard to personnel and supplies, Dr. Bizzell's views were given controlling weight by Dr. Schumer. For example, Dr. Bizzell instructed Dr. Mensheha to "get rid of" Dr. Seiller and Dr. Bizzell hired Dr. Stiles while Dr. Mensheha was, at least in name, the Chief of Ophthalmology. On June 7, 1976, Dr. Ezdinli wrote Dr. Schumer a memorandum recommending Dr. Mensheha's appointment as a permanent member of the Tumor Conference (Res. Exh. 28) but Dr. Schumer appointed Dr. Bizzell instead.

Dr. Bizzell's "Log of Duty" (Comp. Exh. 29) is accorded little or no probative weight for the reason that Dr. Bizzell testified that he did not prepare the log and most of the entries by his secretary were, according to Dr. Bizzell, her own creations. Nor do I credit Dr. Bizzell's memorandum of July 28, 1976 (Res. Exh. 25) that he observed Ms. Puder fitting glasses on July 23, 1976. ^{8/} This assertion was directly contradicted by the testimony of Ms. Puder and Dr. Mensheha which testimony is credited. As previously found, when Dr. Schumer's memorandum was received on July 22, 1976, Dr. Mensheha instructed ^{8/} For present purposes it has been assumed, as stated or implied by Dr. Mensheha and Ms. Puder, that Dr. Schumer's memorandum (Res. Exh. 11) was received on July 22, 1976. Dr. Mensheha responded on July 23, 1976 (Res. Exh. 12); but, in any event, the record is clear that when the written instruction was received Dr. Mensheha instructed Ms. Puder to cease fitting glasses and Ms. Puder complied. The inference by Dr. Bizzell that Dr. Mensheha permitted this to continue after receipt of Res. Exh. 11 is contrary to the record and is rejected. If I am wrong as to the date of receipt of Res. Exh. 11, then it is unquestionably true that Dr. Bizzell saw Ms. Puder fitting glasses on July 23, 1976; but the inference drawn by Dr. Schumer (Comp. Exh. 7), and intended by Dr. Bizzell (Res. Exh. 25), that Dr. Mensheha permitted Ms. Puder to fit glasses after receipt of Res. Exh. 11 is contrary to the record and is rejected.

Ms. Puder to cease the fitting of glasses and Ms. Puder testified that she complied with two exceptions: a) in the course of instructing Ms. Siddle and b) on one occasion when a patient who had come from some distance and Dr. Bizzell had, when the the circumstances were explained to him, stated "I don't see you". If Ms. Puder fit glasses on any other occasion after July 22, 1976, it is clear that she did so without the knowledge or approval of Dr. Mensheha. Dr. Bizzell, by his memorandum of July 28, 1976, knowingly participated in a scheme, used by Dr. Schumer (See, Comp. Exh. 7), to create the impression of direct insubordination by Dr. Mensheha by her refusal to obey a written order which, as noted, was false as the record clearly shows that Dr. Mensheha complied with the directions contained in Dr. Schumer's memorandum of July 22, 1976, immediately upon receipt. There is no question, as noted hereinabove, that Dr. Mensheha on June 24, 1976, had refused the direct verbal order of Dr. Schumer to direct Ms. Puder to cease the fitting of glasses, which order was given in the presence of Hospital Director Quandt who took no action. Nor is there any question that Dr. Mensheha permitted Ms. Puder to fit glasses until the written order of Dr. Schumer was received on July 22, 1976.

Careful consideration has been given to Dr. Mensheha's conduct, for example, in attempting to record conversations but, while such conduct was destructive of the development of rapport, so was the conduct of Drs. Schumer and Bizzell, for example, with respect to the desk incident, the abrupt change in position by Dr. Schumer on the up-grading of Ms. Puder, the unilateral decision by Dr. Schumer on March 3, 1976, to assign Ms. Puder out of the eye clinic, etc.

CONCLUSIONS

As early as September 2, 1975, Dr. Mensheha's conduct would have justified her termination for reasons wholly unrelated to protected activity; but Respondent took no such action. Following Dr. Mensheha's activity as a union representative, and in particular after the events of April, 1976, and her active role as a union representative thereafter, a series of repressive actions were taken by Respondent because of Dr. Mensheha's protected activity. First, was Dean Falk's telephone call to Captain Elliott on April 8, 1976; next was Dr. Schumer's restriction on Dr. Mensheha's leave requests, a restriction which was not extended to any other physician. On June 18, 1976, Dean Falk, upon the recommendation of Dr. Schumer (Comp. Exh. 17) deleted Dr. Mensheha's name from the faculty roster of the Chicago Medical School 9/ and Respondent, through Dr. Schumer, notwithstanding her eminent professional qualification and her then status as Chief of Ophthalmology, informed Dr. Mensheha that she could no longer perform intraocular lens implant surgery because she was not then on a medical school staff, in reliance on a memorandum from Dr. Lawrence V. Foye, Jr., Deputy Chief Medical Director of Respondent's Central Office which stated, in part:

"1. Intraocular lens implant may be performed in thos Veterans Administration Hospitals with Ophthalmology Sections completely integrated with the counterpart Department or Division at an affiliated medical school." (Comp. Exh. 28).

Sometime prior to July 2, 1976, Director Quandt had a discussion with Mr. Gathman and Dr. Cohn about Dr. Mensheha's union activity and Director Quandt instructed Mr. Gathman to inform Dr. Mensheha, through Drs. Cohn and Schumer, that she should not function as a steward. Dr. Cohn's memorandum of July 2, 1976, which Dr. Schumer transmitted, as instructed, to Dr. Mensheha on July 6, 1976, requested her "resignation to the union effective immediately", Dr. Cohn's memorandum having stated "Persons who are classified in the management level cannot be members of a labor union." (Comp. Exh. 4). This order was later rescinded by Director Quandt by an undated memorandum (Comp. Exh. 5) which Dr. Mensheha testified she received in August, 1976. Director Quandt testified that the letter was sent around July 20, 1976; however, in view of Director Quandt's inability to fix a definite date, I fully credit Dr. Mensheha's testimony that she received Complainant's Exhibit 5 in August, 1976.

On June 23, 1976, during a discussion of a grievance concerning Dr. Pokral, Dr. Cohn questioned Dr. Mensheha about allegations of mismanagement of funds, such allegations having initially been presented by the union through its designated representatives, including Dr. Mensheha, to Dr. Chase, on April 12, 1976, and Dr. Cohn then stated that Dr. Schumer thinks [presumes] that you are the one who has brought the allegations to the notice of the newspapers and he also holds you responsible for releasing them to other sources", to which Dr. Mensheha replied that she had not talked to any newspaper reporter but had discussed the allegation with "the investigators and Congress and Representatives".

9/ Dr. Mensheha testified that prior to removal of her name from the faculty roster she had been demoted from Assistant Professor to Clinical Assistant Professor (Tr. 141); however the record does not show the date of this change in status.

On June 24, 1976, Dr. Mensheha, in the presence of Director Quandt, was insubordinate and did refuse to comply with the order of Dr. Schumer that she instruct Ms. Puder to cease fitting glasses; however, Director Quandt took no action. On August 26, 1976, Dr. Schumer issued his letter of Intent To Admonish. Dr. Mensheha replied by memorandum dated August 30, 1976, and Director Quandt on September 9, 1976, admonished Dr. Mensheha because "you disobeyed verbal and written orders issued by the Chief, Surgical Service to cease allowing your Clerk-Typist, Ms. Delorse Puder, to perform allied health duties."

Not only was the timing of this action suspicious, but most of the allegations were, on the record herein, false. Thus, Dr. Schumer testified that in February, 1976, he told Dr. Mensheha "you have got to have her stop this as much as possible" (emphasis supplied) and Dr. Schumer further testified that when Dr. Mensheha stated that she "needed her and felt that she should go on ... I said, 'All right. If you need a health technician, let's go into personnel for a health technician.'" The agreement of March 8, 1976, to upgrade Ms. Puder was wholly ignored. The record shows, contrary to Dr. Bizzell's assertion to the contrary, that Dr. Mensheha complied with the written order of Dr. Schumer of July 22, 1976, and that she did immediately order Ms. Puder to cease fitting glasses and that Ms. Puder complied, notwithstanding Dr. Mensheha's protest of July 23, 1976 (Res. Exh. 12). While Dr. Mensheha's conduct on June 24, 1976, was clearly insubordinate, no action was taken at that time and issuance of intent to admonish two months later and the Director's admonishment on September 9, 1976, concerning activity which had ceased on July 22, 1976, was highly suspicious.

On September 10, 1976, Dr. Schumer notified Dr. Mensheha that he was withholding a within-grade increase, due September 12, because her performance during the last year "has been unsatisfactory" (Comp. Exh. 12) which was sustained by the Director on September 23, 1976. The matters detailed in the Director's letter, Paragraphs I and III are factually correct; Paragraph II again refers to the Puder matter on which the letter of Admonishment was based; and Paragraph IV concerns Dr. Bizzell except sections G and H which concern destruction of records and Dr. Mensheha's complaint with respect thereto. There is no doubt that Dr. Mensheha's conduct was less than ideal; but it is equally clear that her reaction was provoked by the equally deplorable conduct of Drs. Bizzell and Schumer. Dr. Bizzell's "log" was, by Dr. Bizzell's own admission, largely a worthless figment of his secretary's imagination. Director Quandt very aptly summed up the situation when she testified that on June 24, 1976 in the meeting with Drs. Cohn, Schumer and Mensheha, and Mr. Gathman, she

"stated that I expected to have them function as adults and to correct any problem that did exist." (Tr. 700).

Regretably, Director Quandt did not take action to carry out her admonition.

On September 13, 1976, Dr. Schumer, with the approval of Director Quandt, rescinded Dr. Mensheha's appointment as Chief of Ophthalmology, effective September 17, 1976. Dr. Mensheha was retained as a staff ophthalmologist and Dr. Bizzell was named Chief, Ophthalmology.

On November 30, 1976, Director Quandt notified Dr. Mensheha that her appointment would be terminated at the close of business December 17, 1976 (Comp. Exh. 18). Director Quandt told Dr. Mensheha that her "peers" felt threatened by her presence and had accused Dr. Mensheha of going to the library, researching, and gathering references about a case that Dr. Stiles wanted to enucleate. Although Director Quandt stated that the letter of termination originated from her, she admitted requesting Dr. Bizzell's "log", a report from Dr. Bizzell and conferring with Drs. Cohn and Schumer on various occasions. Indeed, Director Quandt stated that Dr. Schumer had pointed out that he felt it would be necessary eventually to fire her, but Director Quandt could not fix the date of this discussion.

From April, 1976, some actions by Respondent against Dr. Mensheha because of her union activity were direct, such as Dean Falk's call to Captain Elliot, Dr. Schumer's restriction on her leave requests, Dr. Cohn's questioning her about concerted activity and his statement that Dr. Schumer held her responsible for disclosing allegations of mismanagement of funds at the Hospital. Other action was more subtle, such as the Puder matter. From agreement by Drs. Bogan (then Chief of Staff), Schumer, and Mensheha and then Hospital Director Kennedy on March 8, 1976, to up-grade Ms. Puder, Dr. Schumer, after

Dr. Mensheha's union activity in April, 1976, quite abruptly departed from this agreement. The grounds for the intent to admonish, and the admonishment by Director Quandt were more contrived than real, the only clear insubordination having occurred on June 24, 1976, and Director Quandt failed to take any action whatever when it took place in her presence. Dr. Mensheha having complied with Dr. Schumer's written order of July 22, 1976, it is both strange and highly suspicious that on August 26, 1976, such belated action was directed against Dr. Mensheha for precisely the action (allowing Ms. Puder to continue to fit glasses) which had ceased more than a month earlier and for which neither Dr. Schumer nor Director Quandt had taken any action on June 24, 1976, when Dr. Mensheha refused to obey the direct verbal order of Dr. Schumer that she order Ms. Puder to cease fitting glasses.

Some factors which led to Dr. Mensheha's termination present close questions as to whether there was unlawful motivation for her termination; but whatever doubt or reservation may have existed was wholly removed by Dr. Schumer's astounding, but most revealing, conduct with Mrs. Durso. Cancellation of the operation without consultation with Mrs. Durso showed little concern for the patient and the statement that "they were letting Dr. Mensheha go" suggests a deep seated hostility toward Dr. Mensheha. Dr. Schumer's telephone call to Mrs. Durso, after the intervention of the VFW, to berate her for "by-passing" him was strange; but Dr. Schumer's final act of coming to the waiting room, while Dr. Mensheha was performing the operation on her brother-in-law, to ask Mrs. Durso "what I knew about Dr. Mensheha" and to tell Mrs. Durso that "she [Dr. Mensheha] was a troublemaker and that she was interfering with two other doctors ... that she was making these other two doctors lose their reputations" not only emphasized Dr. Schumer's deep-seated hostility toward Dr. Mensheha but made it clear that his hostility was firmly rooted in Dr. Mensheha's protected activity under the Order. From the April 12, 1976, presentation by the Union delegation, including Dr. Mensheha, of problems at the Hospital to Congressman Howard, to an aide to Senator Proxmire and to Dr. Chase, a series of actions was taken against Dr. Mensheha, beginning with Dr. Schumer's restriction on her leave requests, a restriction not imposed on any other physician, and with Dean Falk's telephone call to Captain Elliott. Dr. Schumer gave no explanation of what he meant by "she was making these other two doctors lose their reputations" but the written statements presented to Dr. Chase on April 12, 1976 had been especially critical of Dr. Bogan and Dr. Kantor (Infectious Diseases Section, Medical Service). Although Dr. Mensheha did knowingly by-pass Dr. Schumer on the Ophthalmology budget; attempted to by-pass Dr. Schumer on equipment and supplies and renewal of the sharing agreement with St. Theresa Hospital; and, on June 24, 1976, pointedly refused to obey Dr. Schumer's direct verbal order to direct Ms. Puder to cease fitting glasses, no disciplinary action was taken at the time although Dr. Schumer wrote memoranda directing Dr. Mensheha to follow proper channels and Dr. Mensheha apologized and promised to do so. Indeed, the clearest act of insubordination on June 24, 1976, occurred in the presence of Director Quandt who took no action whatever. As noted, when Dr. Schumer issued his written instruction on July 22, 1976, Dr. Mensheha immediately complied and directed Ms. Puder to cease fitting glasses. That the notice of termination, issued November 30, 1976, effective December 17, 1976, was in part, if not wholly, motivated by Dr. Mensheha's protected union activity was made abundantly clear by Dr. Schumer's comments to Mrs. Durso in December, 1976, when Dr. Schumer termed Dr. Mensheha "a troublemaker". Moreover, the record shows a pervasive union animus throughout the Hospital including Dr. Schumer's interrogation of nurse Lynn Thomas, Dr. Schneider's questioning of Dr. Gaballah, Dr. Schneider's action against Mr. Djurecich, Dr. Schneider's comments about Dr. Gaballah's service on the Hospital Research Committee which led to Dr. Gaballah's replacement at the request of the Assistant Hospital Director. Accordingly, I conclude that Dr. Mensheha's termination was in part, if not wholly, motivated by her union activity 10/ in violation of Sections 19(a)(1) and (2) of the 10/ I am fully aware of Dr. Celedonio C. Barraneda's testimony concerning his conversations with Dr. Bogan, formerly Chief of Staff and presently Assistant Chief of Staff for Medical Education, in which Dr. Bogan told Dr. Barraneda that Dr. Mensheha was fired because "well, her union activity -- Dr. Chase fired her"; that Dr. Bogan initially said he would testify to this effect; that later Dr. Bogan told Dr. Barraneda that Dr. Mensheha was fired "Partly" because of her union activity; and, finally, that Dr. Bogan told Dr. Barraneda he would deny that Dr. Mensheha's discharge was unjustified and would deny that she was fired by Dr. Chase because of union activity.

While Dr. Barraneda was a most credible witness he frankly stated that Dr. Bogan, in their last conversation, asserted that Dr. Barraneda "misinterpreted" him. Dr. Barraneda's testimony, although hearsay, was not objected to by Respondent and, in any event, would have been admissible as an admission against interest. Nevertheless, Dr. Bogan denied to Dr. Barraneda that he had said precisely what Dr. Barraneda thought he had said. Because the direct testimony and evidence, including Dr. Schumer's statement to Mrs. Durso, clearly shows a discriminatory motive for Dr. Mensheha's discharge I have not (Continued)

Order. Veterans Administration, Biloxi Veterans Administration Center, A/SLMR No. 450, 4 A/SLMR 763 (1974); Department of the Army, U.S. Army Infantry Center, A/SLMR No. 515, 5 A/SLMR 325 (1975); see, also, U.S. Postal Service, Berwyn Post Office, Illinois, A/SLMR No. 272, 3 A/SLMR 252, 264 (1973). Indeed, Dr. Schumer's statement that Dr. Mensheha was a troublemaker was to use a term which has long been recognized as an euphemism for union supporter. The Huntington Hospital, Inc., 218 NLRB 51, 57 (1975).

Respondent, in effect, would neutralize the union animus of Dr. Schumer, and others, by contending that the decision to terminate Dr. Mensheha was made by Hospital Director Quandt as to whom no union animus was shown. The record does not entirely support the basic premise, namely, that Director Quandt was free of union animus, for it was Director Quandt who discussed Dr. Mensheha's union activity with Dr. Cohn and Mr. Gathman and instructed Mr. Gathman, through Drs. Cohn and Schumer, to order Dr. Mensheha to terminate her duties as steward (which, actually, resulted in a letter directing Dr. Mensheha to withdraw from the union entirely) and it was Director Quandt who told Dr. Mensheha on December 1, 1976, that her "peers" felt threatened by her presence, etc. But even if it were assumed that Director Quandt had no personal union animus or discriminatory motivation, the record is clear that Director Quandt's decision was based on recommendations by Dr. Schumer and by Dr. Bizzell, including Dr. Bizzell's "log", which Dr. Bizzell's testimony made clear was devoid of probative value. Certainly, Dr. Schumer was a supervisor within relied on Dr. Barraneda's testimony to establish unlawful motivation. Nevertheless, Dr. Barraneda's testimony, which was wholly unchallenged and wholly undenied, further shows unlawful motivation by Respondent in the discharge of Dr. Mensheha.

Dr. Breen's testimony that Director Quandt told her that Dr. Chase "had told her that the allegations could not be substantiated and that Dr. Chase had asked her [Director Quandt] to reprimand everybody involved in the allegation" was denied by Director Quandt who testified that Dr. Fitzgerald, Associate Deputy Chief Medical Director, directed her to take disciplinary action against four individuals found by the VA's investigation to have committed improprieties and specifically denied any action against people who instigated the investigation (Tr. 733). Accordingly, I do not credit Dr. Breen's testimony.

the meaning of the Order, his recommendation that Dr. Mehshaha be terminated was obviously within the scope of his employment, and Dr. Schumer was discriminatorily motivated in making his recommendation. Accordingly, the discriminatory motivation of Dr. Schumer is imputed to Director Quandt. Pepsi-Cola Bottling Co. v. NLRB, 312 F.2d 529 (3rd Cir. 1962. As the Court noted, in Pepsi-Cola Bottling Co., supra,

"To rule otherwise would provide a simple means for evading the Act by a division of corporate personnel functions."

Such conclusion is equally inescapable here in dealing with a discharge under the Order.

Dr. Mensheha's removal as Chief of Ophthalmology, on September 13, 1976, must, despite the discriminatory motivation for her discharge, be viewed apart from her discharge some two months later. Dr. Mensheha's conduct on September 2, 1975, had resulted in Dr. Schumer's request that the Hospital Director at that time rescind her title as Chief of the Ophthalmology Section and/or that Dr. Mehshaha be terminated for reasons wholly unrelated to any right protected by the Order. The record is clear that after September 2, 1975, relations between Dr. Schumer and Dr. Mensheha were strained and barely civil. Indeed, the die was probably cast when Dr. Mensheha declined consideration as Chief of the Department of Ophthalmology of the Medical School. Dr. Bizzell was then brought in as Chief of the Department of Ophthalmology of the Medical School and as a staff ophthalmologist. The record is clear that Dr. Schumer accorded Dr. Bizzell increasing control over the Ophthalmology Clinic. Whether Dr. Mehshaha's removal would have occurred in any event, certainly Dr. Mensheha's continued lack of cooperation as Chief of Ophthalmology with Dr. Bizzell as Chief of the Department of Ophthalmology of the Medical School, for example, by referring patients for consultation elsewhere; her open defiance of Dr. Schumer in administrative matters; and her direct insubordination to Dr. Schumer on June 24, 1976, etc. demonstrated an abject failure by Dr. Mensheha to improve relations with her Service Chief and her conduct, wholly unrelated to union activity, thoroughly compromised her functioning as Chief of Ophthalmology. Indeed, the record shows a pattern of conduct by her which could only further erode her relations, as Chief of Ophthalmology, with her Service Chief, Dr. Schumer. Dr. Schumer's statement that,

"... I think you will agree there is virtually no effective communication between you and me. There is no rapport between us on either a personal or professional level. This is not the place to argue who is at fault, obviously we each have opposing opinions on that. I am taking this action because I believe a fully integrated Surgical Service of mutually cooperative sections is essential for quality patient care." (Comp. Exh. 6) reflects accurately the state of their relations and his stated reason - "a fully integrated Surgical Service of mutually cooperative sections is essential for quality patient care" - neither suggests, nor is there any basis on the record to imply, discriminatory motivation because of Dr. Mensheha's union activity. Accordingly, on the record as a whole, I do not find any convincing evidence that Dr. Schumer's rescision of Dr. Mensheha's appointment as Chief of the Ophthalmology Sections of the Surgical Service was discriminatorily motivated.

Neither Dean Falk nor the Chicago Medical School is a party to this proceeding. Nevertheless, Dean Falk, in his letter of June 18, 1976, stated that he had deleted Dr. Mensheha's name from the faculty roster of the Chicago Medical School "Upon the recommendation of Dr. William Schumer, Professor and Chairman of the Department of Surgery". Unlike the rescision of Dr. Mensheha's appointment as Chief of the Ophthalmology Section, no basis or justification for Dr. Schumer's recommendation to Dean Falk was shown other than Dr. Schumer's discriminatory motivation because of Dr. Mensheha's union activity which was, of course, further emphasized by Dean Falk's own demonstrated union animus. In addition, this action, i.e., deletion of Dr. Mensheha's name from the faculty roster, was further seized upon by Respondent as the basis for imposing a limitation on Dr. Mensheha's professional activity which she was well qualified to perform. Although asserted in the complaint in Case No. 50-15408(CA), in its Brief Complainant does not contend that either the admonishment or the withholding of the within-grade increase constituted an independent violation of the Order and, under the circumstances, this issue has not been reached or decided. 11/

11/ Section 19(d) of the Order provides, in part,

"(d) Issues which can properly be raised under an appeals procedure may not be raised under this section. Issues which can be raised under a grievance procedure may, in the discretion of the aggrieved party, be raised under that procedure or the complaint procedure under this section, but not under both procedures. ..."

The Assistant Secretary, in Department of The Air Force, Offutt Air Force Base, A/SLMR No. 784 (1977), has held,

"... the term 'appeals procedure' as used in Section 19(d) of the Order is not intended to encompass nonstatutory 'appeals' procedures which do not provide for third-party review of an agency action.

See, also, Judge Dowd's analysis of 19(d) in Veterans Administration, Veterans Benefits Office, 3 A/SLMR 444, 449-453 (1973).

On the other hand, the second sentence of Section 19(d) assures an aggrieved party the right to utilize a grievance procedure or the complaint procedure but specifically prohibits raising the same issue under both procedures. The voluntary election to utilize a grievance procedure, with or without third-party review, is very different from removal of issues from the complaint procedure merely because the issue was subject to an appeals procedure. Thus, the second sentence of Section 19(d) quite clearly bars utilization of the complaint procedure where an aggrieved party has first elected a grievance procedure, not because third-party review has, or has not, been provided; but, rather, to prevent relitigation after a free choice of remedies. That third-party review is not germane to a discretionary election of remedy under the second sentence of Section 19(d) is implicit in Judge Dowd's analysis in Veterans Administration and consistent with Offutt Air Force Base, supra.

The record herein does not show the "grievance procedure" under which Dr. Mensheha filed her grievance, the parties having gone no further than establishing that "grievances" were filed and a decision issued as to each "grievance"; the record does not show that either issue was, or was not, subject to a third-party appeals procedure (see, for example, Federal Personnel Manual, Chapter 531, subchapter 4-9); and, as Complainant does not address the matter in its Brief, I specifically decline to decide the issue notwithstanding my strong predilection that consideration of these issues as independent violations of Section 19(a) of the Order is barred by Section 19(d) of the Order because Dr. Mensheha elected to utilize a grievance procedure in each instance and may not now resort to the complaint procedures of the Order.

The initial charge was filed on, or about, September 29, 1976, and Director Quandt's letter of termination issued November 30, 1976, effective December 17, 1976. The only direct indication that a violation of Section 19(a)(4) of the Order occurred stems from the fact that a charge was filed on September 29, 1976, and that Dr. Mensheha was unlawfully discharged thereafter, from which Complainant would draw the inference that Respondent disciplined or otherwise discriminated against Dr. Mensheha because a charge had been filed on her behalf. Weighing all factors, including Director Quandt's prior action to terminate Dr. Mensheha's union activity; the reliance by Director Quandt, for asserted justification for discharge, on factors such as lack of cooperation, by-passing her Service Chief, etc., which, as found, had an entirely proper relationship to her functioning as Chief of Ophthalmology but provided no justification for her termination as a staff ophthalmologist; and, of course, all factors which established unlawful and discriminatory motivation for Dr. Mensheha's termination in violation of Sections 19(a)(1) and (2) of the Order, I conclude, in agreement with Complainant, that the inference that Respondent violated Section 19(a)(4) is a proper inference. Moreover, I find that such inference is compelled by other considerations, including the timing of the termination, reliance on factors which were largely, if not wholly, unrelated to Dr. Mensheha's duties as staff ophthalmologist, union animus, Dr. Schumer's conduct with respect to the Durso matter, and Dr. Barraneda's testimony.

RECOMMENDATIONS

Having found that Respondent, Veterans Administration, North Chicago Veterans Hospital, engaged in conduct which was in violation of Sections 19(a)(1), (2), and (4) of the Executive Order, I recommend that the Assistant Secretary adopt the following order designed to effectuate the policies of Executive Order 11491, as amended:

RECOMMENDED ORDER

Pursuant to Section 6(b) of Executive Order 11491, as amended, and Section 203.26(b) of the Regulations, 29 C.F.R. § 203.26(b), the Assistant Secretary of Labor for Labor-Management Relations hereby orders that the Veterans Administration, North Chicago Veterans Hospital, shall:

1. Cease and desist from:

(a) Interfering with, restraining, or coercing its employees in the exercise of their rights assured by the Executive Order.

(b) Discouraging membership in a labor organization by discrimination in regard to hiring, tenure, promotion, or other conditions of employment.

(c) Disciplining or otherwise discriminating against an employee because he has filed a complaint or given testimony under the Executive Order.

(d) In any like or related manner interfering with, restraining or coercing its employees in the exercise of their rights assured by Executive Order 11491, or by discriminating against its employees in regard to hiring, tenure, promotion, or other conditions of employment because of their exercise of rights assured by Executive Order 11491, as amended, or by disciplining or otherwise discriminating against an employee because he has filed a complaint or has given testimony under Executive Order 11491, as amended.

2. Take the following affirmative actions in order to effectuate the purposes of Executive Order 11491, as amended:

(a) Offer immediate and full reinstatement to Dr. Oksana Mensheha as staff ophthalmologist at the North Chicago Veterans Hospital without prejudice to her seniority or other rights and privileges and make her whole, consistent with applicable laws and regulations, for any loss of pay she may have suffered, by reason of its discrimination, by paying Dr. Oksana Mensheha a sum of money equal to the amount she would have earned as wages from the date of her unlawful discharge to the date of the Respondent's offer of reinstatement.

(b) Take all action, including the immediate unqualified recommendation of the Chief of Surgery of the North Chicago Veterans Hospital, to insure that Respondent unqualifiedly and affirmatively recommends that Dr. Oksana Mensheha's name be restored to the faculty roster of the Chicago Medical School; and, until her name is restored to the faculty roster of the Chicago Medical School, Respondent shall not deny permission to Dr. Oksana Mensheha to perform any surgical procedure, including, but not limited to, Intraocular Lens Implant Surgery, for which she is professionally qualified, because she is not a member of the faculty of the Chicago Medical School.

(c) Post at its facilities at the North Chicago Veterans Hospital, North Chicago, Illinois, copies of the attached notice marked "Appendix" on forms to be furnished by the Assistant Secretary for Labor-Management Relations. Upon receipt of such forms they shall be signed by the Hospital Director of the North Chicago Veterans Hospital and shall be posted and maintained by him for 60 consecutive days thereafter in conspicuous places, including all places where notices to employees and to physicians are customarily posted. The Hospital Director shall take reasonable steps to insure that such notices are not altered, defaced, or covered by any other material.

(d) Pursuant to Section 203.27 of the Regulations, notify the Assistant Secretary in writing within 30 days from the date of this order as to what steps have been taken to comply herewith.

A/SLMR No. 1025

This case involved an unfair labor practice complaint filed by Local 1332, National Federation of Federal Employees (Complainant) alleging essentially that the Respondent had violated Section 19(a)(6) of the Order by failing to promptly furnish a written statement of position on a grievance, after agreeing to furnish such statement, and by denying the subsequently filed formal written grievance and refusing to process the matter to arbitration on the grounds that the formal written grievance was untimely filed.

The Administrative Law Judge found that the Respondent's conduct was not violative of Section 19(a)(6) of the Order. He concluded that the Respondent acted in good faith and attempted to cooperate with the Complainant in providing it with the statement of position relative to the grievance. He found further that, in the absence of bad faith or an intentional frustration of the grievance procedure in the negotiated agreement, the issue of whether the formal written grievance was untimely filed would be more appropriately dealt with by seeking a grievability or arbitrability determination pursuant to Section 13(d) of the Order than by utilizing the unfair labor practice provisions of the Order. Accordingly, he recommended that the complaint be dismissed in its entirety.

Noting particularly the absence of exceptions, the Assistant Secretary adopted the findings, conclusions and recommendation of the Administrative Law Judge and ordered that the complaint be dismissed.

RECOMMENDED DECISION AND ORDER

Statement of the Case

Pursuant to a Notice of Hearing on Complaint issued on September 28, 1977 by the Acting Regional Administrator for Labor Management Services Administration for the U.S. Department of Labor, Philadelphia Region, a hearing was held in Washington, D.C.

This proceeding was initiated under Executive Order 11491, as amended (herein called the Order) by the filing of a complaint on August 8, 1976 by Local 1332, National Federation of Federal Employees (hereinafter called the Union and Local 1332 NFFE) which alleged that U.S. Army Development and Readiness Command, Department of the Army, (hereinafter called the Respondent or USA DARCOM) violated Section 19(a) (6) of the Order by failing to promptly furnish, a written statement of position with respect to a grievance after agreeing to furnish such a written statement, even after a number of requests and then by denying the subsequently filed grievance because it was filed untimely and by refusing to process the matter to arbitration. USA DARCOM denied that they violated the Order.

The hearing was held before the undersigned in Washington, D.C. Both parties were represented at the hearing, were afforded full opportunity to be heard, to adduce evidence, and to examine and cross-examine witnesses. Both parties argued orally at the hearing and submitted post-hearing briefs, which have been duly considered.

Upon the entire record herein, from my observation of the witnesses and their demeanor, and from all of the testimony and evidence adduced at the hearing, I make the following findings, conclusion and recommendations:

Findings of Fact

1. At all times material herein Local 1332 NFFE was the collective bargaining representative for units composed of USA DARCOM's Headquarter's civilian employees.

2. At all times material herein Local 1332 NFFE and Headquarters USA DARCOM were parties to a collective bargaining agreement which contained, inter alia, a Grievance Procedure in Article XI and an Arbitration provision in Article XII.

3. During January of 1976 the Union believed that Respondent was violating certain terms of the collective bargaining agreement. 1/

1/ The dispute involved interpretation of Article XX Section F of the collective bargaining agreement, and involved the "mix" of military and civilian personnel. The precise issues and merits of the alleged contract violation is irrelevant to the disposition of the subject unfair labor practice case.

4. On February 16, 1977 the Union and DARCOM representatives met to discuss the Union's allegations of breach of contract. This meeting was held, pursuant to Article XI Section C, as part of the grievance procedure. It was a very short meeting because the DARCOM representatives were prepared to discuss just the Research and Development Directorate, but the Union wished to discuss the entire headquarters staff. The meeting was adjourned with the DARCOM representatives indicating that they would have to do some research and would communicate further with the Union.

5. The DARCOM Headquarters' Civilian Personnel Officer Philip Barbre, 2/ who had made the commitment at the February 16th meeting to research the matter and communicate further with the Union, looked into this matter, checked with his various supervisors and other DARCOM officials, and then asked Mr. Beverly Fleming, Chief of Management-Employee Relations, Civilian Personnel Office, Headquarters DARCOM, to set up a meeting with the Union to discuss the alleged contract breach. Accordingly a meeting was scheduled for March 16 between the DARCOM and Union representatives.

6. On March 16, 1977, prior to the meeting described above, Mr. Barbre dictated a memorandum which was a response to Union Executive Vice President Richard R. Goodwin and which set forth DARCOM's position with respect to the issues raised by the Union concerning to the military-civilian "mix."

7. The aforescribed memorandum was typed and Mr. Barbre brought it with him to the March 16 meeting at which the Union and DARCOM representatives met. The Union representatives were Mr. Goodwin, Mr. Girard and Mr. Haden and the DARCOM representatives were Mr. Barbre and Mr. Fleming. The parties discussed the military-civilian "mix" issue and the DARCOM representatives fully explained DARCOM's position and, because the table was wide, Mr. Barbre slid across the table to Mr. Goodwin the above described memorandum. Mr. Goodwin indicated that the management position was not acceptable and he indicated he needed a written position from DARCOM to take before the Union's Executive Board so that it can decide whether to go to the next, or, formal written, step grievance procedure. The representative also requested certain job descriptions. The meeting then adjourned.

2/ Mr. Barbre was the DARCOM official who was responsible for representing DARCOM in its day-to-day meetings with the Union.

The record testimony and evidence with respect to the above described March 16 meeting was quite contradictory, especially with respect to whether the DARCOM representatives gave Union representative Goodwin the memorandum setting forth DARCOM's position. The testimony of each of the witnesses indicated certain confusion on the part of each witness with respect to precisely what occurred at the meeting. All, however, seemed clear with respect to their respective version as to whether DARCOM gave Mr. Goodwin the memorandum setting forth DARCOM's position. I find that Mr. Goodwin did give Mr. Goodwin the memorandum because the Union representatives might not have noticed the memorandum, it might have been mixed up with Mr. Goodwin's other papers or have otherwise gone unnoticed, and because the DARCOM witnesses' testimony seemed more credible and consistent with the other established circumstances, e.g. The memorandum had been dictated and typed that day by Ms. Miranda. Further the Union's position seems to depend on the drawing of inferences that the DARCOM representatives prepared the memorandum sometime after the March 16 meeting and deliberately misdated it. The record does not sufficiently establish facts which would justify drawing such findings.

8. Subsequent to the meeting Union representative Girard called Mr. Barbre's office and left a message to have Mr. Barbre return the call. Mr. Barbre returned the call 3/ and Mr. Girard asked for a copy of the memorandum. Mr. Barbre advised Mr. Girard that Mr. Goodwin had already been given the original and copy of the memorandum. Mr. Girard replied that Mr. Goodwin had asked him to get a copy. Mr. Barbre replied he would provide the copy.

9. Mr. Barbre instructed a clerical assistant to provide a copy of the memorandum to Mr. Girard and to put it in the box in Mr. Fleming's office where the Union received its mail.

10. On March 24 Mr. Girard took an envelope, which he assumed contained the memorandum out of the Union box in Mr.

3/ There is some disparity in testimony whether Mr. Girard had to call three times before Mr. Barbre advised him to pick up the memorandum. This disparity is insignificant because in any event Mr. Girard spoke to Mr. Barbre and was advised to pick up the memorandum on March 24.

Fleming's office. This box had a number of documents and papers in it. The envelope Mr. Girard took was addressed to Mr. Goodwin. 4/ He took the envelope to Mr. Goodwin but apparently did not give it to Mr. Goodwin until sometime in April. 5/

11. Mr. Goodwin upon opening the envelope discovered it was not the copy of the memorandum, but was a different document. Instead of calling Mr. Barbre himself, he contacted Mr. Goodwin and told him to get the right document.

12. Mr. Barbre was advised that Mr. Girard had not receive the memorandum. Mr. Barbre advised Mr. Girard that Mr. Barbre was sorry that Mr. Girard had not received the memorandum, and that he would get it this time.

13. On April 21 Mr. Goodwin received the copy of the memorandum 6/ in question. There was apparently a buck slip attached signed by Mr. Barbre dated April 19.

14. By letter dated April 21, 1976 the Union filed a formal written grievance with the DARCOM, Headquarters Commander, General John R. Deane, pursuant to Section C Article XI of the collective bargaining agreement.

15. By letter dated May 5 the Union advised General Deane that because he had not responded to the grievance within 5 days the Union was revoking the Arbitration provisions set forth in Section Article XII of the agreement.

16. By letter dated May 6, 1976 and signed by General Kerwan, Chief of Staff of Headquarters DARCOM, the grievance was denied because it was filed untimely.

4/ Mr. Girard seemed somewhat confused as to whether the envelope was addressed to him or Mr. Goodwin.

5/ This April date was according to the testimony of Mr. Goodwin. Mr. Girard places the date he gave the letter to Mr. Girard as on or about March 24. I credit Mr. Goodwin on this point as his testimony seems more precise and Mr. Girard's testimony seemed quite confused.

6/ It was not clear if he received it by internal mail or whether it was picked up and delivered to him by a Union representative. It should be noted that the job descriptions that were requested at the March 16 meeting had been previously delivered with a covering memorandum dated March 26.

17. Mr. Goodwin wrote General Kerwan a letter dated May 11, 1976 in which he stated that the grievance was not untimely because, he alleged, the memorandum dated March 16, had been typed on April 19 and backdated.

18. DARCOCM apparently has refused pick an arbitrator because it takes the position the grievance was not timely filed.

19. Article XI Section C provides that the parties meet and attempt to solve grievances. If agreement can not be reached at such a meeting, the grieving party may within (5) five working days submit a formal written grievance to the other side. The other side has five days to respond to the grievance. If the matter can still not be resolved, it may be submitted to Arbitration pursuant to Article XII of the agreement.

Conclusions of Law

Based on the findings of fact set forth above, and noting the record contains no evidence to establish union animus on the part of DARCOCM, it is concluded that DARCOCM did not engage in a course of conduct or series of acts designed to undermine the Union's bargaining position or to frustrate the Union in acting in its representative capacity. Rather the record establishes that DARCOCM acted in good faith, and attempted to cooperate with the Union in dealing with the grievance concerning the military-civilian "mix" issue. At most DARCOCM can be said to have been ignorant of the fact that the Union was unaware it had received a copy of DARCOCM's March 16 memorandum 7/ and DARCOCM might not have acted as promptly as desirable in providing the Union with the requested copy of the memorandum. With respect to the latter point, however, the record establishes that the Union never advised DARCOCM that a copy of the memorandum was needed immediately and further when Mr. Barbre advised the Union representative that the Union already had a copy of the memorandum, the Union representative did not disabuse Mr. Barbre of this alleged mistake.

7/ The record does not establish that DARCOCM backdated the memorandum and does not establish that DARCOCM engaged in a course of conduct designed to deceive and mislead the Union.

In light of all of the foregoing therefore, it is concluded that DARCOCM did not engage in a course of conduct that violated Section 19(a)(6) of the Order.

Finally it is concluded that DARCOCM's refusal to process the grievance through the formal stages and to go to Arbitration, because DARCOCM contended the grievance was not filed timely, is not a violation of Section 19(a)(6).

It is concluded that, in the absence of some showing of bad faith or an intentional frustration of the grievance and arbitration procedure, interpreting the grievance and arbitration clauses of the Contract to determine whether the grievance and arbitration procedures are applicable or whether the Union is barred from following these procedures because of its untimeliness, are issues that are more appropriately dealt with and decided pursuant to Section 13(d) of the Order, by seeking a grievability and arbitrability determination, and not under the unfair labor provisions of the Order. Cf. Naval Air Research Facility, A/SLMR No. 849; and Army and Air Force Exchange Service, Dix-McGuire Consolidated Exchange, A/SLMR No. 700. 8/ A grievability and arbitrability proceeding is the appropriate proceeding for determining whether the Union's grievance concerning the military civilian "mix" is grievable under the collective bargaining agreement or whether it is not grievable because it is barred because it was untimely filed.

Accordingly it is concluded that by refusing to precede through the formal steps of the grievance procedure and to arbitration DARCOCM did not violate Section 19(a)(6) of the Order.

RECOMMENDATION

It having been concluded that Respondent did not violate Section 19(a)(6) of the Order by its general course of conduct or by refusing to further process a grievance filed by

8/ It is clear that if after a finding were made pursuant to Section 13(d) of the Order that the matter is arbitrable, the activity were then to refuse to proceed to arbitration, the activity would violate Section 19(a)(6) of the Order. SUMMARY OF DECISION AND ORDER OF THE ASSISTANT SECRETARY
PURSUANT TO SECTION 6 OF EXECUTIVE ORDER 11491, AS AMENDED

MARE ISLAND NAVAL SHIPYARD, VALLEJO, CALIFORNIA
A/SLMR No. 1026

This case involved an unfair labor practice complaint filed by the Federal Employees Metal Trades Council, AFL-CIO (Complainant) alleging essentially that the Respondent violated Section 19(a)(1) of the Order when a General Foreman made disparaging remarks to the Complainant's steward in the presence of another employee during the course of a discussion regarding a letter of warning issued by the Foreman to the employee.

The Administrative Law Judge concluded that the Respondent's conduct was violative of Section 19(a)(1). In this regard, he found that the Foreman's admitted statement to the effect that he did not recognize the steward "as a representative of anything or anyone" indicated disdain for the Union, and served to restrain employees in the exercise of their rights under the Order.

The Assistant Secretary adopted the Administrative Law Judge's findings, conclusions and recommendation. Accordingly, he ordered the Respondent to cease and desist from engaging in the conduct found violative of the Order and to take certain affirmative actions.

DECISION AND ORDER

On February 3, 1978, Administrative Law Judge Thomas Schneider issued his Recommended Decision and Order in the above-entitled proceeding, finding that the Respondent had engaged in an unfair labor practice and recommending that it take certain affirmative actions as set forth in the attached Administrative Law Judge's Recommended Decision and Order. Thereafter, the Respondent filed exceptions with respect to the Administrative Law Judge's Recommended Decision and Order.

The Assistant Secretary has reviewed the rulings of the Administrative Law Judge made at the hearing and finds that no prejudicial error was committed. The rulings are hereby affirmed. Upon consideration of the Administrative Law Judge's Recommended Decision and Order and the entire record in the subject case, including the Respondent's exceptions, I hereby adopt the Administrative Law Judge's findings 1/, conclusions and recommendation.

ORDER

Pursuant to Section 6(b) of Executive Order 11491, as amended, and Section 203.26(b) of the Regulations, the Assistant Secretary of Labor for Labor-Management Relations hereby orders that the Mare Island Naval Shipyard, Vallejo, California, shall:

1/ In reaching my determination herein, it was considered unnecessary to pass upon the Administrative Law Judge's finding that General Foreman Montalbano's statement to Union Steward Flores "must have been in response to a statement by Mr. Flores that he was a Union representative."

1. Cease and desist from:

(a) Making disparaging remarks to representatives of the Federal Employees Metal Trades Council, AFL-CIO, in the presence of other employees.

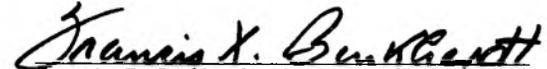

(b) In any like or related manner, interfering with, restraining, or coercing its employees in the exercise of their rights assured by Executive Order 11491, as amended.

2. Take the following affirmative actions in order to effectuate the purposes and policies of Executive Order 11491, as amended:

(a) Post at its facility at the Mare Island Naval Shipyard, Vallejo, California, copies of the attached notice marked "Appendix" on forms to be furnished by the Assistant Secretary of Labor for Labor-Management Relations. Upon receipt of such forms, they shall be signed by the Shipyard Commander, and shall be posted and maintained by him for 60 consecutive days thereafter, in conspicuous places, including all places where notices are customarily posted. The Shipyard Commander shall take reasonable steps to insure that such notices are not altered, defaced, or covered by any other material.

(b) Pursuant to Section 203.27 of the Regulations, notify the Assistant Secretary, in writing, within 30 days from the date of this order as to what steps have been taken to comply herewith.

RECOMMENDED DECISION AND ORDER

This is a proceeding brought under Executive Order 11491, as amended, by Federal Employees' Metal Trades Council, AFL-CIO (hereinafter "the Union") against The Department of the Navy, Mare Island Naval Shipyard, Vallejo, California (hereinafter "the Activity"). The Union asserts that the Activity through one of its general foremen, Angelo Montalbano, violated section 19(a)(1) of Executive Order 11491 by certain actions discussed below.

Statement of the Case

At all material times Mr. Felix H. Flores was a union steward working at the Activity. The Union represents the employees of the Activity for purposes of collective bargaining. A few days prior to December 10, 1976, Mr. Montalbano, the general foreman of shop 72 issued a letter of warning to five employees. This letter was prompted by Mr. Montalbano's observations regarding some work deficiencies occurring the night before the letter was issued. After issuing the letter to the five individuals, he discussed its contents with each of them individually, including Mr. Marvin Martin. Mr. Martin discussed the letter with his steward, Mr. Flores; Mr. Flores suggested that Martin and he should see Mr. Montalbano. Since Flores had an appointment to see Montalbano concerning another matter at 12 midnight at the beginning of the graveyard shift on December 10, 1976, he and Martin approached the area where Montalbano was at that time.

On some points the evidence is uncontradicted: when Martin and Flores approached Montalbano, he asked Flores for a pass; Montalbano changed his mind and said that he would see Flores and Martin without a pass; there was a meeting; and there was some shouting and heated interchange between Flores and Montalbano, including Montalbano saying to Flores, "I don't recognize you as a representative of anything or anyone."

On other points, there is considerable conflict in the testimony: whether the meeting lasted less than five minutes or more than twenty minutes; whether Mr. Flores or Mr. Montalbano raised his voice first; whether or not Mr. Flores and Mr. Montalbano went over the letter in detail paragraph by paragraph, and whether Mr. Montalbano shouted words such as, "I don't give a damn about the Union" or similar expressions of disdain for the Union.

The original complaint filed May 4, 1977, alleged violations of section 19(a) (1), (2), (3), (5) and (6) of the Executive Order in that Mr. Montalbano's alleged conduct was an unfair labor practice because it failed to allow Mr. Flores, a Metal Trades Council Steward, to represent a grieved employee of his unit. The amended complaint filed September 1, 1977, alleged essentially the same conduct, but alleged a violation only of subsection (1) of section 19(a).

Findings of Fact and Conclusions

The principal issue for decision is whether the remarks of Mr. Montalbano on December 10, in the presence of Mr. Flores and Mr. Martin, indicated disdain for the Federal Employees Metal Trades Council of Vallejo and would restrain employees from exercising their rights assured by the Executive Order and thereby violated section 19(a)(1) of the Order.

I find that there was a short discussion of the letter of warning followed by an increasingly heated exchange of remarks.

Since Mr. Montalbano admitted that he told Mr. Flores "that I didn't recognize him as the representative of anything or anyone," it must have been in response to a statement by Mr. Flores that he was a Union representative. Thus, even though Mr. Montalbano may not have said, "I don't give a damn about the Union," he did say something disdainful of the Union.

In Internal Revenue Service, Philadelphia Service Center, Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, A/SLMR No. 771, it was held to be a violation of § 19(a)(1) for a management employee to call a union steward a loud mouth and a trouble maker. The remarks by Mr. Montalbano were similar in nature, and similarly constitute a violation. Mr. Montalbano testified that Mr. Flores became belligerent first. I find that whatever provocation there was by Mr. Flores was minimal. Some abusive language is common in industrial negotiations. See U. S. Small Business Administration and American Federation of Government Employees, Local 2532, A/SLMR No. 631.

Mr. Montalbano's remarks must have had some restraining effect on Mr. Martin. My impression from Mr. Martin's demeanor and testimony is that he was susceptible to being easily restrained from seeking Union help. Here it was Mr. Flores' idea to meet with the general foreman. The meeting not only failed to accomplish anything for

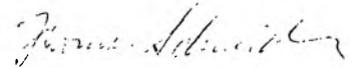

Mr. Martin, but resulted in a heated exchange which showed management disdain for the Union. Mr. Martin struck me as a person who was conscientious and who wanted to offend no one. After this incident he would be reluctant to seek Union help again.

There was a subsidiary issue adverted to during the hearing, namely whether a Mr. Willrich, who was a witness at the hearing before me, was given to understand that he would receive a shift change that he desired more quickly or easily by going directly to Mr. Montalbano without a Union representative's intervention. I find that Mr. Willrich was not at the meeting of December 10. He testified that he was not there and I believe that testimony. Since there was no evidence of any discriminatory treatment except at the meeting of December 10, I find that Mr. Willrich was not led to believe that he would get an easier resolution to his request by avoiding Union representation.

The Activity cites Department of the Navy, Mare Island Naval Shipyard, Vallejo, California, A/SIMR No. 646, as an analogous case. There the Administrative Law Judge held that the statement "I am not talking to you" addressed to certain union representatives at a meeting was simply an attempt to keep the meeting focused on another issue. The Administrative Law Judge characterized the incident as the breakdown of communications. Although in the instant case there was a breakdown of communications, we have the additional element of Mr. Montalbano making personal disdainful remarks concerning the Union.

Recommended Order

It is recommended that Respondent be directed by the Assistant Secretary to cease and desist from conduct which indicates disdain for the Federal Employees Metal Trades Council, AFL-CIO and to post a notice of its intent in the form attached as "Exhibit A" in conspicuous places at the shipyard, including all bulletin boards where notices to employees are customarily posted. Respondent should be directed to take reasonable steps to insure that such notices remain posted for 60 days and are not altered, defaced, or covered.

PURSUANT TO SECTION 6 OF EXECUTIVE ORDER 11491, AS AMENDED

INTERNAL REVENUE SERVICE AND
INTERNAL REVENUE SERVICE,
SOUTH CAROLINA DISTRICT OFFICE
A/SLMR No. 1027

This case involved an unfair labor practice complaint filed by the National Treasury Employees Union (NTEU) alleging that the Respondents violated Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order by implementing a procedure for the furlough of When Actually Employed (WAE) employees in the Internal Revenue Service's South Carolina District Office without notifying the NTEU, at a time when the procedures were being negotiated at the national level.

The Administrative Law Judge concluded that neither of the Respondents violated the Order. In this regard, he found that there was a duty to bargain on the procedures and impact of the decision to furlough, to the extent that this would not unreasonably delay or otherwise negate the decision, which is a reserved management right under Section 12(b)(3) of the Order. However, he found that, absent national recognition or national consultation rights, the Respondent Internal Revenue Service had no obligation to bargain or consult with the NTEU with respect to matters concerning local management decisions. Further, he found that the Respondent South Carolina District Office had met its obligation to notify the Complainant of its decision and afforded it the opportunity to bargain over impact and implementation. However, the Complainant failed to request such bargaining, apparently based on a mistaken belief that an agreement on furlough procedures had been reached at the national level. The Administrative Law Judge further found that the Complainant had failed to meet its burden of showing any intentional misrepresentation by agency management in this regard.

The Assistant Secretary adopted the Administrative Law Judge's findings, conclusions and recommendation, and ordered that the complaint be dismissed.

RECOMMENDED DECISION AND ORDER

Statement of the Case

This proceeding arises under Executive Order 11491, as amended (hereafter referred to as the Order). A Notice of Hearing was issued by the Acting Regional Administrator of the Labor-Management Services Administration, Atlanta Region, on October 8, 1976, based on a Complaint filed July 26, 1976. The Complainant alleges that Respondents violated Sections 19(a)(1) and 19(a)(6) of the Order by implementing an interim procedure for the furlough of When Actually Employed (WAE) employees in the Internal Revenue Services' South Carolina District Office without notifying the Complainant and at a time when these procedures were being negotiated at the national level.

A hearing was held in Columbia, South Carolina at which all parties were afforded a full opportunity to be heard, to adduce evidence and to examine and cross-examine witnesses. Post-hearing briefs have been submitted and given careful consideration. Based upon the entire record in this case, including the briefs and arguments of counsel, I make the following findings of fact, conclusions of law and recommendation.

Findings of Fact

Background

The following facts are not disputed. At all times material herein, NTEU was the exclusive bargaining representative for employees in separate units located in 56 of IRS' 58 District Offices. On October 10, 1975 a meeting was held at IRS' Washington, D.C. headquarters between the Director of the IRS' Taxpayer Service Division, other IRS personnel, Robert M. Tobias, General Counsel of NTEU, and Mr. J. Russell Bowden, Executive Vice President of NTEU. One purpose of the meeting was to inform Messrs. Tobias and Bowden of the IRS' decision to supplement its permanent workforce in the Taxpayer Service Division with a cadre of temporary WAE employees.

On December 4, 1975, NTEU National President Vincent L. Connery sent proposals to Billy J. Brown, Director of IRS' Personnel Division, relating to the Taxpayer Service Representative Program. Section 5 of these proposals specifically concerned the procedures to be used in furloughing WAE employees.

On January 30, 1976, Mr. Brown sent Mr. Tobias counter-proposals regarding the furlough and recall of WAE employees in the Taxpayer Service Division. At a meeting on February 13, 1976, representatives of the IRS and NTEU discussed the proposals and counterproposals.

On March 11, 1976, Billy J. Brown and Vincent L. Connery entered into a Memorandum of Agreement which, inter alia, established procedures for determining the order in which temporary employees were to be furloughed.

At all times relevant to the negotiations in question IRS National officials were acting as agents for their various District Offices and NTEU officials were acting as agents for the District Chapters of NTEU.

On February 23, 1976, the Internal Revenue Service's South Carolina District Office implemented a furlough procedure for that district. This action took place at a time when negotiations at the national level had yet to reach either impasse or agreement. Management furloughed seven employees on February 23, 1976 and one employee on March 4, 1976. Three of the employees who were furloughed on February 23, 1976 were recalled to duty status on February 29, 1976.

WAE employees

WAE employees were first used in the Taxpayer Service Division of the IRS' South Carolina District Office in 1974. They are trained to answer taxpayer inquiries at the Office's telephone and walk-in areas. Although the nature of their employment is strictly temporary, no set procedures have ever been formalized for determining the order in which these employees will be furloughed. The custom has been to simply furlough those with the least skills and training first. This procedure was used in 1974, when the need to furlough first arose, and again in 1975.

The decision to furlough is based on an evaluation of the overall workload and the need for assistance. At the beginning of the fiscal year, management prepares monthly and yearly schedules projecting the need for extra employees. These schedules are later reduced to weekly, daily and hourly schedules. The actual workload is then carefully monitored to determine the number of extra employees needed at any particular time.

In July 1975, a workload schedule was prepared in the South Carolina District Office for fiscal year 1976. Up until mid-February, 1976, this schedule was carried out as planned. However, on Wednesday, February 18, the Chief of the Taxpayer Service Division received a study showing "an almost sudden decline" in the volume of taxpayer inquiries and consequently in the need for additional help. Prompted by this study, she decided to begin furloughing the following Monday.

February 19 meeting

The crux of the controversy in this case centers around a February 19, 1976 meeting between Lyda Bryant, Chief of the Taxpayer Service Division in the South Carolina District Office, and Wayne Golden, President of NTEU Chapter 55. The meeting lasted only a few minutes and was called by Ms. Bryant to inform the Union of her decision to start furloughing WAE employees.

Mr. Golden's and Ms. Bryant's testimony concerning this meeting differ in several material respects. On the one hand, Ms. Bryant testified that, at this meeting, she told Mr. Golden that the workload had declined and consequently they would not need all the WAE employees. She also remembered explaining the procedures she devised for implementing her decision viz. that volunteers would be furloughed first with the rest being determined by training test scores. Though she testified she would have been receptive to suggested alternatives to this procedure, none were forthcoming from Mr. Golden, who simply stated he felt this was a fair way to handle the problem. At this meeting, Ms. Bryant reminded Mr. Golden that this whole topic was being discussed nationally, although they had a local situation which the Union should be aware of. Finally, Ms. Bryant testified that she mentioned the timing was short, and was "almost certain" she told Mr. Golden that the furloughs would commence the following Monday.

Mr. Golden testified that, at this meeting, Ms. Bryant told him only that the peak workload had passed, the furlough of WAE's would be forthcoming, and that this had all been discussed at the national level. He did not recall her explaining any specific, final procedure to be used, although he admitted she may have mentioned something about volunteers. Believing that the furlough procedures had been agreed upon at the national level, Mr. Golden responded that he would take no exception to the implementation of management's decision, but would reserve the right to request negotiations over the impact on employees. According to Mr. Golden, he never indicated that he thought the furlough procedures were fair, nor did Ms. Bryant ever mention when the furloughs would take effect. He maintains that Ms. Bryant simply said that they would be "forthcoming."

Based on this testimony and other evidence in the record, I find that, at this meeting, Ms. Bryant informed Mr. Golden of her decision to furlough WAE employees, told him the procedures she would use to implement this decision, and mentioned enough about the timing of this decision to make it clear that the impending furloughs were imminent. I also find that there was no intentional misrepresentation by management with respect to the effective date of this decision to furlough.

Furlough notices were prepared and issued Friday, becoming effective the following Monday. On Saturday, February 20, 1976, Mr. Golden received a letter from Vincent L. Connery, NTEU's National President, explaining that the Union and management had yet to reach agreement on furlough procedures for temporary employees, although negotiations were continuing.

On Monday, February 23, 1976, Mr. Golden called IRS' local personnel office. When informed that the furlough of WAE employees had already commenced, he requested that they delay further action until agreement could be reached at the national level. Despite this request, the furloughs continued. A national agreement establishing procedures for the furlough of WAE employees was signed on March 11, 1976.

Positions of the Parties

NTEU alleges that Respondents violated Sections 19(a) (1) and 19(a) (6) of Executive Order 11491, as amended, by furloughing WAE employees pursuant to a unilaterally established procedure without notice to the Union and at a time when negotiations on the furlough of WAE employees were taking place at the national level. NTEU also alleges that Respondents deliberately misled the Union into believing that the procedures instituted for the furlough of these employees had been agreed upon at the national level.

Respondents acknowledge that the complained of furlough took place. However, they contend: (1) they were not obligated to negotiate over the impact and implementation of this action because the furlough did not involve any change in Respondents' established practice regarding WAE employees; (2) any notice requirements due the Union were fulfilled when Chapter 55 President Wayne Golden was notified of the impending furlough on February 19, 1976, and (3) the reserved management right to furlough employees under Section 12(b) (2) of the Order may not be impeded by negotiations over impact and implementation.

Discussion and Conclusions

It is well-settled that, as a general proposition, an agency and a labor organization which has been accorded exclusive recognition must meet at reasonable times and confer in good faith with respect to personnel policies and practices and matters affecting the working conditions of unit employees. However, it is equally well-settled that management has no duty to bargain with respect to the exercise of those rights specifically reserved to management under Section 12(b) of the Order. 1/ Therefore, since Section 12(b) (3) gives management the right to relieve employees from duties because of lack of work or other legitimate reasons, Respondents' had no duty to bargain with respect to their decision to furlough WAE employees.

Notwithstanding this fact, however, management was required to notify the exclusive representative of its decision and provide the Union with an opportunity to meet and confer on the procedures management intends to observe in implementing this decision and on the impact on adversely affected employees. 2/

Respondents' contention that there was no duty to negotiate over the impact and implementation of its furlough decision is without merit. Respondents' maintain this obligation is obviated because there was no change in their established practice concerning WAE employees. However, the evidence indicates that a new furlough procedure was implemented in 1976, based on Ms. Bryant's assessment of Union proposals submitted just two months before. Accordingly I conclude that management's implementation of this furlough procedure constituted a sufficient change in personnel policies and practices to give rise to a duty to confer on furlough procedures and impact.

Respondents are correct in asserting that management's reserved right to furlough employees may not be impeded by negotiations over impact and implementation. However, the reservation of certain rights to management was not intended to bar all bargaining with respect to such matters; rather, bargaining on the procedures management will observe in the exercise of such rights is encouraged provided it does not interfere with the exercise of the rights themselves. 3/ Accordingly; I conclude management did have an obligation to bargain on the procedures and effects of its furlough decision to the extent this would not unreasonably delay or otherwise negate the decision itself.

This obligation to negotiate on procedures and impact runs only to the employee's exclusive representative. 4/ Here, the record indicates NTEU had exclusive recognition in only 56 of 58 District Offices. Therefore, absent some form of national recognition or national consultation rights, Respondent IRS (as opposed to Respondent IRS South Carolina District Office) had no obligation to bargain or consult with NTEU with respect to matters concerning local management decisions. 5/ Accordingly, I conclude that the Internal Revenue Service did not violate Sections 19(a)(1) or 19(a)(6) of the Order by failing to bargain with NTEU over the impact and implementation of the decision to furlough WAE employees at its South Carolina District Office.

Finally, it remains to be determined whether Respondent IRS South Carolina District Office succeeded in fulfilling its obligations under the Order. Management was not required to confer with the Union on its decision to furlough WAE employees. 6/ Nevertheless, it was required to notify NTEU of its decision and provide it with an opportunity to consult and confer on the impact and implementation of this decision. 7/

It has been held that the right to engage in a dialogue with respect to matters for which there is an obligation to meet and confer becomes meaningful only when agency management has afforded the exclusive representative reasonable notification of the decision and an ample opportunity to explore the matter prior to the agency's taking action. 8/ Here, the record indicates that NTEU, through its Local President, was notified of management's decision to furlough on February 19, 1976. Furthermore, the evidence indicates that at this same time the Union was provided with an opportunity to request bargaining on the impact and implementation of this decision. This it failed to do. In fact, Mr. Golden specifically stated that he was not interested in negotiating on the implementation of management's decision but only wished to reserve the right to negotiate on impact. In these circumstances the Activity, having received no objections to its plan, was free to implement it.

The parties clearly misunderstood each other. However the record contains no evidence of any intentional misrepresentation by agency management. While Ms. Bryant was not certain she told Mr. Golden precisely when the furloughs would occur, the evidence indicates it was made clear that they were imminent. And even if the situation was as Mr. Golden described it, the burden was clearly on the Union to inquire as to exactly when this action would take place. In these circumstances I cannot find that the Activity failed to fulfill its obligations under the Order. Accordingly, I conclude that Respondent IRS Southern District Office has not violated Sections 19(a)(1) and 19(a)(6) of the Order in connection with the implementation of its decision to furlough WAE employees.

RECOMMENDATION

In view of the foregoing findings of fact and conclusions of law, I recommend that the complaint herein be dismissed in its entirety.

SOCIAL SECURITY ADMINISTRATION,
BUREAU OF HEARINGS AND APPEALS

This case involved an unfair labor practice complaint filed by the American Federation of Government Employees, Local 3615, AFL-CIO (AFGE) alleging that the Respondent violated Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order when the Respondent's Chief Negotiator contacted the AFGE's Assistant Chief Steward concerning the reopening of stalled contract negotiations. The AFGE alleged that this action was an attempt to by-pass the exclusive representative and communicate directly with the employees regarding collective bargaining matters, or to undermine the status of the exclusive representative.

The Administrative Law Judge found that the chance encounter and ensuing conversation between the Respondent's Chief Negotiator and one of the Union's negotiators was neither an attempt by the Respondent to by-pass the AFGE and communicate directly with unit employees regarding collective bargaining matters nor to undermine the status of the exclusive representative. Accordingly, she recommended that the complaint be dismissed.

The Assistant Secretary adopted the findings, conclusions and recommendation of the Administrative Law Judge and ordered that the complaint be dismissed.

DECISION AND ORDER

On January 23, 1978, 1/ Administrative Law Judge Joyce Capps issued her Recommended Decision and Order in the above-entitled proceeding, finding that the Respondent had not engaged in the unfair labor practices alleged in the complaint and recommending that the complaint be dismissed in its entirety. Thereafter, the Complainant filed exceptions with respect to the Administrative Law Judge's Recommended Decision and Order.

The Assistant Secretary has reviewed the rulings of the Administrative Law Judge made at the hearing and finds that no prejudicial error was committed. The rulings are hereby affirmed. Upon consideration of the Administrative Law Judge's Recommended Decision and Order and the entire record in this case, including the Complainant's exceptions, I hereby adopt the Administrative Law Judge's findings, conclusions and recommendation. 2/

1/ The Recommended Decision and Order is inadvertently dated 1977.

2/ At the hearing, the Administrative Law Judge, upon motion of the Complainant, ordered that official time be granted to the Complainant's representative. No exceptions in this regard were filed by the Respondent. In the absence of exceptions, I find that the Administrative Law Judge's ruling should not be overturned. However, it should be noted that under Section 206.7(g) of the Assistant Secretary's Regulations only necessary witnesses are required to be granted official time for participation at hearings.

RECOMMENDED DECISION AND ORDER

Statement of the Case

Pursuant to the provisions of Executive Order 11491, as amended (hereinafter referred to as the Order), a complaint was filed on November 1, 1976, by the American Federation of Government Employees, Local 3615, AFL-CIO (hereinafter referred to as the Union, the Local, or Complainant), against the Social Security Administration, Bureau of Hearings and Appeals (hereinafter referred to as BHA or Respondent).

It is alleged in the complaint that on July 20, 1976, Mr. Julian Brownstein, Respondent's Chief Negotiator, approached Mr. James Marshall, an Assistant Chief Steward of the Local, concerning the re-opening of contract negotiations in contravention of the ground rules for contract negotiations and/or the directives of the President of the Local that only the President and/or her designee be contacted concerning contract negotiations.

The issues for determination are whether the action of Mr. Brownstein was an attempt (1) to by-pass the exclusive representative and communicate directly with unit employees regarding collective bargaining matters, or (2) to undermine the status of the exclusive representative in violation of Secs. 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order.

In accordance with the notice of hearing issued on February 22, 1977, by the Acting Regional Administrator for Labor-Management Services Administration, Philadelphia region, a hearing in this matter was held before me on April 18 and 19, 1977, in Washington, D. C. The excellent post-hearing briefs filed by the parties have been considered and are hereby made a part of the record.

The following occurrence and action taken is not relevant to the issues presented, but I feel some mention thereof should be made. All evidence in this case could not be presented on the first day of hearing (April 18), so all parties and attorneys were ordered to report back to court the next day (April 19). At that time Albert Carrozza, counsel for Complainant, moved that he be granted official time for that day of representation as well as for the following day. He stated that he had been required to take annual leave for his appearance on that day and he indicated his fear that he may not be permitted any type of leave the next day without an order to present to his timekeeper. After hearing argument on the point, it appeared that fairness required the entry of an order that Mr. Carrozza be granted official time for his necessary and ordered appearance on the two days of trial. It was late in the day on April 18 when the motion was heard and no typists were available. Therefore, an order to the above effect was written and signed by me and given to Mr. Carrozza for presentation to his timekeeper. No copy was made for the file. On April 19, 1977, counsel for Respondent assured me that Mr. Carrozza would be given official time for his appearances in accordance with my order.

Based upon the entire record herein and upon my observation of the demeanor of witnesses, I make the following findings of fact, conclusions of law, and recommendations:

Findings of Fact

In July, 1975, Local 3615 became the exclusive representative of the bargaining unit consisting of approximately 750 non-professional employees Grade 1 through 13 and eight medical doctors. There commenced very shortly thereafter negotiations concerning ground rules to govern the conduct of future contract negotiations. Douglas Kershaw was chief negotiator on the union team and Julian Brownstein was chief negotiator for the management team. The ground rules were executed on October 7, 1975, and entitled, "Memorandum of Understanding Governing the Conduct of the Negotiations for a Collective Bargaining Agreement." (ALJ Exhibit 1(F)). Art. III, Para. 6, of the ground rules reads as follows:

The Chief Negotiator for each party shall be the Chief Spokesman for his party and shall speak at his discretion. Other negotiators may speak only when recognized by their Chief Negotiator.

I find that said paragraph of the ground rules was written to insure that the negotiations at the bargaining table would be conducted in an orderly fashion. It also makes it clear that only the chief negotiators had authority to bind their teams on any matter being negotiated and that only they were permitted to state the positions of their respective teams. However, it sometimes happened that during discussions at the bargaining table members of both teams would speak to the issue under discussion without obtaining prior recognition from their chief negotiator. There is no question but that with respect to contract negotiations, including calling their teams to the negotiation table, all authority rested with the chief negotiators.

Kershaw is the national representative for AFGE and as such was actively involved in the work of 21 other locals in the District of Columbia area besides Local 3615. Understandably it was often difficult for someone to reach him directly by telephone. It was sometimes necessary for Brownstein to call Michael Cuthbertson (a member of the union negotiating team and vice-president of the local) or Evelyn Bethel (the president of the local) who would get in touch with Kershaw and convey the message that Brownstein wanted to talk with him. It was imperative that Kershaw have someone at BHA to receive and send written proposals and other materials from and to management. He designated Cuthbertson to serve in this conduit capacity in his absence to channel communications from management to him as necessary. Sometimes Cuthbertson initiated contact with Brownstein and sometimes it was the other way around. I specifically find that no one on the management team, including Brownstein, was aware of the communications procedure that Kershaw set up with his own team. ^{1/} Furthermore, it is clear that no particular line of communication from management to the union was established until August 6, 1976, in a letter from Ms. Bethel to Robert L. Trachtenberg, Director of BHA. (Claimant's Exhibit 2).

The labor relations climate was good at BHA prior to the ground rules negotiations, but by the time contract negotiations began in mid-February, 1976, relations had become strained. In late May, 1976, bilateral contact between the parties broke off and the union made a request for the services of the Federal Mediation and Conciliation Service. The parties began mediation sessions on June 2, 1976, and had additional mediation sessions on June 10 and 16, but were unable to resolve their differences. Negotiations remained at an impasse until ^{1/} E.g., Elizabeth Baker, a labor relations specialist at BHA who was a management negotiator during contract negotiations, often conversed with James Marshall in her office as well as his. She knew of no procedure or practice concerning who or in what order a particular member of the union could be contacted nor was there any prohibition against calling any particular person. She generally called Ms. Bethel first, but if she was not available she would contact Cuthbertson or Marshall.

September of 1976 when they went to the Federal Impasse Panel. The collective bargaining agreement was finally executed on December 10, 1976, and became effective on January 25, 1977. Kershaw and Brownstein served as chief negotiators throughout this entire period.

The incident described in the complaint occurred on July 20, 1976, at which time the parties were at an impasse and had not sat in negotiation for about a month. The persons involved in the incident were Marshall and Brownstein.

Marshall first became involved in Local 3615 activities the latter part of 1975 as assistant chief steward for the local. He was a member of the union team during ground rules negotiations but he was not a member of the negotiating team thereafter until June 2, 1976, when he was named by Kershaw as an associate negotiator. He was never removed from that position and no one was ever substituted in his place. He served as a negotiator at the three mediation sessions during June of 1976 and participated in negotiations when the parties went to the Federal Impasse Panel in September, 1976. On July 20, 1976, Marshall was working as a Senior Disability Analyst in BHA's Disability Branch under the supervision of Frank Smith, who was Section Chief of the Disability Branch.

Brownstein was Chief of BHA's Technical Administration Advisory Staff, Division of Appeals Operations. His work involved studies concerning the efficiency of the program administration within the Division of Appeals Operations. He had no supervisory authority whatsoever over the Disability Branch. Although he was part of management, he was in no position to influence careers and/or ratings of employees in the Disability Branch.

The two men worked in the same building -- Marshall on the third floor and Brownstein on the sixth floor. Starting in late 1975 or early 1976 up until July 20 Marshall and Brownstein had numerous informal conversations about labor-management relations in general. In these conversations there was never any mention of specific provisions of the contract being negotiated. All of these contacts were by chance when the men happened to meet in the hallway or on the street outside the building.

Marshall worked in Room 308 with nine other disability analysts. It is a room longer than it is wide. As one enters the room there are five desks lined up each side. The employees sit at their desks facing the door. There is a chair alongside each desk near the center aisle. Marshall's desk was the third desk back from the door on the right.

There was divergent testimony concerning the July 20 incident and no useful purpose would be served by summarizing all such evidence. What follows now is my findings from the testimony that I considered to be the most credible. Shortly after 1:00 p.m. Brownstein met Marshall by chance in the hallway outside Room 308 and they began speaking generally about the stand-still of negotiations. They were observed at this time by Frank Smith who was returning to his own office. They continued the conversation as they walked from the hall into Room 308 and sat down at Marshall's desk. Brownstein repeated several times his opinion that it was important for both sides to return to the bargaining table. Marshall stated several times that he had no authority to reconvene the union negotiating team. Brownstein was well aware that only Kershaw had that authority, but he repeatedly urged Marshall to at least convey to the union authorities that he thought negotiations should resume, which Marshall finally agreed to do. As Brownstein departed he told Marshall he would get back in touch with him. The entire conversation lasted approximately 15 minutes. Both men spoke in their normal tone of voice. The conversation was neither argumentative nor hostile.

The following day Brownstein went back to Marshall's office to see if he had "checked back with his people," to which Marshall responded that the union felt there was no point in going back to the negotiating table because "we have gone as far as we can go."

Conclusions of Law

The chance encounter and ensuing conversation between management's chief negotiator and one of the union's negotiators approximately a month after contract negotiations between the parties had come to a complete halt was not an attempt by Respondent to bypass the exclusive representative and communicate directly with unit employees regarding collective bargaining matters or to undermine the status of the exclusive representative.

In arriving at the aforesaid conclusion, consideration was given to Department of the Navy, Naval Air Station, Fallon, Nevada,

A/SLMR No. 587, wherein the Federal Labor Relations Counsel noted that the Order does not proscribe all communications with unit employees over matters relating to the collective bargaining relationship. Rather * * * only those communications which * * * amount to an attempt by agency management to bypass the exclusive representative and negotiate directly with unit employees, or which urge employees to put pressure on the representative to take a certain course of action, or which threaten or promise benefits to employees are violative of the Order. (Emphasis furnished.)

It is clear that the content, intent, and effect of the contact in the instant case cannot be equated with the violative actions set forth in the Fallon case. The encounter was not planned or contrived, but rather was impromptu. Marshall was not merely a unit employee, but was a union negotiator. Brownstein did not attempt to negotiate with Marshall, but only urged Marshall to relay a message to the union's spokesman that in his [Brownstein's] opinion it was important for both sides to resume negotiations that had been at a stand-still for almost a month. Brownstein did not urge Marshall to put pressure on the union's spokesman to take a certain course of action. More importantly, the conversation did not include any matter relating to terms and conditions of employment or any other matter that conceivably could be the subject of current or future negotiations. Contract negotiations had ceased altogether and Brownstein was merely making an effort to get the parties back to the bargaining table. The conversation was not hostile, loud, or argumentative on the part of either participant. No threats or promises of benefits were made or inferred. Brownstein's presence in Marshall's office cannot ipso facto be construed as coercive or threatening because he was in no position to either enhance or harm Marshall's career or to influence his professional ratings -- or indeed those of any employee in the Disability Branch.

Requesting a member of the union's negotiating team to relay a message to the person having authority to call the members of his team back to the bargaining table certainly cannot be construed as an attempt to undermine the exclusive representative.

April 26, 1978

The contact between Brownstein and Marshall on July 20, 1976, did not contravene any alleged line of communications protocol because no such procedure was ever established between the parties until almost three weeks later on August 6, 1976, in a letter from the president of the local to the Director of BHA. Even though it was expedient for the union's chief negotiator to set up a communications procedure among his own team members, management knew of no such procedure on July 20.

It is concluded that Respondent has not engaged in conduct violative of Sections 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order.

Recommendation

Based upon the foregoing findings of fact and conclusions of law, it is recommended to the Assistant Secretary that the complaint herein be dismissed in its entirety.

CHEMICAL SYSTEMS LABORATORY AND ARMAMENT RESEARCH AND DEVELOPMENT
COMMAND, CHEMICAL SYSTEMS LABORATORY
SUPPORT, ABERDEEN PROVING GROUND, MARYLAND
A/SLMR No. 1029

This case involved a petition filed by the Activity seeking to amend an existing certification and to clarify an existing bargaining unit represented by the National Federation of Federal Employees, Local 178 (NFFE).

The NFFE was certified as the exclusive representative for a unit of all full-time General Schedule, Wage Grade, and Wage Leader employees at Edgewood Arsenal, U.S. Army Munitions Command (ARMCOM), at Aberdeen. On March 20, 1977, ARMCOM was disestablished and its work divided between two new Commands. Its research and development function was assumed by the Armament Research and Development Command (ARRADCOM) with headquarters in Dover, New Jersey, and its logistics function was assumed by the Armament Material Readiness Command (ARRCOM), headquartered in Rock Island, Illinois. As a result of this reorganization, Edgewood Arsenal was disestablished. Most of its functions were reassigned to former Edgewood Arsenal employees in the newly created Chemical Systems Laboratory (CSL) and other former employees of Edgewood Arsenal were assigned to ARRADCOM as support personnel for the CSL. Most of the former Edgewood Arsenal employees remain physically at Aberdeen. The Activity-Petitioner contends that these former employees of Edgewood Arsenal who were reassigned to ARRADCOM components at Aberdeen constitute the unit for which the NFFE was certified, and by its AC petition it seeks to change the designation of the activity on the NFFE's certification to reflect the organizational changes brought about by the reorganization. In addition, it seeks to sever from the NFFE's unit the former Edgewood Arsenal employees who physically remain at Aberdeen but who have been reassigned to ARRCOM. The Activity-Petitioner contends in this regard that employees of the new Commands have separate missions, functions and policies, and, therefore, no longer share a community of interest. The NFFE agrees that its certification should be amended to reflect changes brought about by the reorganization, but it contends that the unit for which it was certified as the exclusive representative remains appropriate.

The Assistant Secretary found that the NFFE's certified unit continued to be appropriate for the purpose of exclusive recognition after the reorganization. In this regard, he noted particularly that the reorganization did not result in significant changes in the day-to-day terms and conditions of employment of the employees involved in that, for the most part, they continue to perform the same type of work under the same immediate supervision. Further, in view of the history of collective bargaining in the unit involved, both prior and subsequent to the reorganization, and the fact that the unit has remained generally intact following the reorganization, in the Assistant Secretary's view, to alter it in the manner sought by the Activity-Petitioner would not have the desired effect of enhancing effective dealings and efficiency of agency operations. Rather, the diminution of the scope of the existing bargaining unit and the establishment of a group of unrepresented employees, the result sought by the Activity-Petitioner herein, would tend to promote fragmentation and inhibit effective dealings and efficiency of agency operations. In this latter regard, it was noted particularly that both Commands continue to report to the same organizational command, U.S. Army Material Development and Readiness Command (DARCOM), and that the employees in the NFFE's unit continue to be serviced by the same Civilian Personnel Office.

Accordingly, the Assistant Secretary ordered that the NFFE's certification be amended to reflect the new designation of the activity involved.

DECISION AND ORDER AMENDING CERTIFICATION

Upon a petition duly filed under Section 6 of Executive Order 11491, as amended, a hearing was held before Hearing Officer Carol M. Rollins. The Hearing Officer's rulings made at the hearing are free from prejudicial error and are hereby affirmed.

Upon the entire record in this case, including briefs filed by both parties, the Assistant Secretary finds:

The National Federation of Federal Employees, Local 178, herein called NFFE, was certified in December 1970. In October 1972, the certification was amended to reflect that the NFFE is the exclusive representative for a unit of all full-time General Schedule (GS), Wage Grade (WG), and Wage Leader (WL) employees at Edgewood Arsenal, U.S. Army Munitions Command (ARMCOM), Aberdeen Proving Ground, Maryland. A three-year negotiated agreement between the parties became effective on February 10, 1976. Pending the outcome of the instant petition for clarification of unit (CU) and amendment of certification (AC), the parties have continued to apply this agreement to all the employees within its coverage.

Edgewood Arsenal was part of ARMCOM, headquartered at Rock Island, Illinois, until March 20, 1977, when ARMCOM was disestablished and its work divided between two new Commands. Its research and development function was assumed by the Armament Research and Development Command (ARRADCOM), with headquarters in Dover, New Jersey, and its logistics function was assumed by the Armament Material Readiness Command (ARRCOM), headquartered in Rock Island, Illinois. As a result of this reorganization, Edgewood Arsenal was disestablished. Most of its functions were reassigned to former Edgewood Arsenal employees in a newly created Chemical Systems Laboratory (CSL), a major component of ARRADCOM, located at Aberdeen. Other former employees of Edgewood Arsenal were assigned to ARRADCOM as support personnel for the CSL, or to an ARRCOM support group at Aberdeen for the purpose of providing logistical support for chemical items originally developed at the CSL.

By the instant AC petition, the Activity-Petitioner seeks to change the description of the activity on the NFFE's certification to reflect the organizational changes brought about by the reorganization. In addition, by the CU petition the Activity-Petitioner seeks to sever from the NFFE's unit those former Edgewood Arsenal employees who physically remain at Aberdeen but who have been reassigned to ARRCOM. In this regard, the Activity-Petitioner contends that because the former employees of the Edgewood Arsenal were reassigned to components of two separate Commands, with separate missions, functions and policies, a community of interest no longer exists between ARRADCOM and ARRCOM employees at Aberdeen. It also asserts that more effective dealings and more efficient agency operations will result from tailoring the NFFE's unit to reflect the changes resulting from the reorganization. The NFFE agrees that its certification should be amended to reflect changes brought about by the reorganization. It contends, however, that the unit for which it was certified as the exclusive representative remains appropriate as the changes resulting from the reorganization were purely administrative in nature and there has been no substantial change in the unit employees' working conditions or their work locations. In its view, the granting of the Activity-Petitioner's request would fragment its current unit, which has a history of stable and effective labor-management relations, both prior and subsequent to the reorganization.

The record reveals that most of the employees in the NFFE's existing unit continue to perform the same type of work, under the same immediate supervision, as prior to the disestablishment of Edgewood Arsenal. Thus, only some 24 of approximately 1500 employees were required to physically relocate to either ARRADCOM Headquarters at Dover, New Jersey, or to ARRCOM Headquarters at Rock Island, Illinois. As a result of the reorganization, some employees were moved to different locations within Aberdeen and are presently housed in buildings in which employees of both Commands are located. The degree of work interaction between employees of the two Commands is approximately the same as prior to the reorganization, with some employees of one Command having daily contact with employees of the other. The record reveals that the accomplishment of the mission of the ARRCOM support group at Aberdeen is facilitated by its location near the CSL, for which it provides logistical support.

The respective Commanders in Dover, New Jersey, and Rock Island, Illinois, have the authority to develop and implement personnel policies including hiring, firing, training and recruitment and to enter into negotiations with exclusive representatives for their respective employees. However, both Commanders are subject to Department of the Army and U.S. Army Material Development and Readiness Command (DARCOM) personnel and labor relations directives. There is no evidence of any significant difference in their treatment of such matters in regard to the employees currently represented by the NFFE. Further, there is no evidence that the continuing administration of the NFFE's negotiated agreement with agency management after the reorganization of March 20, 1977, has imposed any additional burdens upon the representatives of either Command than had been experienced by Edgewood Arsenal representatives prior to the reorganization. The record reveals, moreover, that both Commands are in the process of finalizing servicing agreements with the Civilian Personnel Office, Aberdeen, which, as a result of such agreements, will retain day-to-day responsibility for personnel and labor relations matters for all of the employees involved. In addition, the Aberdeen Proving Ground currently provides comptroller, financial services and legal services, as well as public affairs assistance, to both of the Commands located there.

While the employees in the NFFE's unit were in the same area of consideration for promotional considerations, and the same competitive areas for reduction in force prior to the reorganization, the employees assigned to each Command are now in separate areas of consideration and competitive areas. However, the record shows that the areas of consideration for promotional opportunities are frequently expanded in order to attract a sufficient number of qualified applicants for any given position, which, in effect, often places employees of the two Commands in the same area of consideration.

Under all of the above circumstances, I find that the NFFE's certified unit continues to be appropriate for the purpose of exclusive recognition after the reorganization. ^{1/} In this regard, noted particularly was the fact that the reorganization did not result in significant changes in the day-to-day terms and conditions of employment of the employees involved in that, for the most part, they continue to perform the same type of work under the same immediate supervision. Further, in view of the history of collective bargaining in the unit involved, both prior and subsequent to the reorganization, and the fact that the unit has remained generally intact following the reorganization, in my opinion, to alter it in the manner sought by the Activity-Petitioner would not have the desired effect of enhancing effective dealings and efficiency of agency operations. Rather, the diminution of the scope of the existing bargaining unit and the establishment of a group of unrepresented employees, the result sought by the Activity-

April 26, 1978

Petitioner herein, would, in my judgment, tend to promote fragmentation and inhibit effective dealings and efficiency of agency operations. In this latter regard, it was noted particularly that both Commands continue to report to the same organizational command, DARCOM, and that the employees in the NFFE's unit continue to be serviced by the same Civilian Personnel Office.

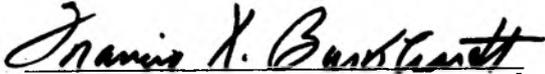

Accordingly, I shall amend the certification to reflect the new designation of the activity involved. ^{2/}

ORDER

IT IS HEREBY ORDERED that the Amended Certification of Representative issued on October 24, 1972, to the National Federation of Federal Employees, Local 178, be, and it hereby is, amended by changing the designation of the unit from "employees at Edgewood Arsenal, U.S. Army Munitions Command, Aberdeen Proving Ground, Maryland" to "employees of the U.S. Army Armament Research and Development Command (ARRADCOM) Chemical System Laboratory (CSL), the ARRADCOM support group for the CSL, and of the U.S. Army Material Readiness Command (ARRCOM) at Aberdeen Proving Ground, Maryland."

SUMMARY OF DECISION AND ORDER OF THE ASSISTANT SECRETARY
PURSUANT TO SECTION 6 OF EXECUTIVE ORDER 11491, AS AMENDED

DEPARTMENT OF THE NAVY,
NAVY COMMISSARY STORE REGION,
NORFOLK, VIRGINIA
A/SLMR No. 1030

This case involved an unfair labor practice complaint filed by the National Association of Government Employees, Local R4-45 (Complainant) alleging the Respondent violated Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order by unilaterally denying its employees their rest period provided for under the terms of the parties' negotiated agreement.

The Administrative Law Judge concluded the Respondent's memorandum, which stated its policy regarding rest periods for employees, constituted a unilateral abrogation of the parties' negotiated agreement and thereby violated Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order.

Under the particular circumstances of this case, the Assistant Secretary found that the complaint in this matter was filed untimely. The Complainant herein filed two pre-complaint charges alleging, in substance, the same unfair labor practice. It failed to file its complaint within the prescribed period of 60 days subsequent to the service of the Respondent's final written decision on the Complainant's initial pre-complaint charge. In the Assistant Secretary's view, the Complainant's second pre-complaint charge could not serve to extend the prescribed period of 60 days in the Regulations for the filing of a timely complaint. Moreover, the Assistant Secretary noted that, even assuming arguendo that the complaint had been timely, a contrary result would not be required as the action of the Respondent herein reflected its good faith interpretation of the parties' negotiated agreement as distinguished from a clear, unilateral breach thereof.

Accordingly, the Assistant Secretary ordered that the complaint be dismissed in its entirety.

^{2/} In view of the disposition herein, further proceedings on the CU aspect of the instant petition were considered to be unwarranted.

DECISION AND ORDER

On December 1, 1977, Administrative Law Judge Peter McC. Giesey issued his Recommended Decision and Order in the above-entitled proceeding, finding that the Respondent had engaged in the unfair labor practices alleged in the subject complaint and recommending that it cease and desist therefrom and take certain affirmative actions as set forth in the attached Administrative Law Judge's Recommended Decision and Order. Thereafter, the Respondent filed exceptions and a supporting brief with respect to the Administrative Law Judge's Recommended Decision and Order.

The Assistant Secretary has reviewed the rulings of the Administrative Law Judge made at the hearing and finds that no prejudicial error was committed. The rulings are hereby affirmed. Upon consideration of the Administrative Law Judge's Recommended Decision and Order and the entire record in the subject case, including the Respondent's exceptions and supporting brief, I hereby adopt the Administrative Law Judge's findings, conclusions, and recommendations, only to the extent consistent herewith.

The instant amended complaint alleges that the Respondent violated Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order by unilaterally denying its employees a rest period as provided for under the terms of the parties' existing negotiated agreement. 1/ In his Recommended Decision and

1/ Article IX, Section 6 of the negotiated agreement provides:

Rest periods of 15 minutes duration will be given within each 4 hours of continuous work at the discretion of the supervisor in charge. No rest period will be given until an employee has worked at least 1 hour except in case of an emergency.

Order, the Administrative Law Judge concluded that the Respondent's memorandum, dated November 12, 1976, which stated its policy regarding rest periods for employees, constituted a unilateral abrogation of the parties' negotiated agreement and thereby violated Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order.

The evidence establishes that the Complainant filed an unfair labor practice charge, dated November 8, 1976, alleging that on November 6, 1976, certain employees at the Respondent's Norfolk, Virginia, store were denied their rest period provided for under the parties' negotiated agreement. The Respondent issued its final decision on the charge, dated November 30, 1976, contending that under Article IX, Section 6 of the parties' negotiated agreement rest periods are given at the discretion of management depending on workload and productivity requirements. Thereafter, on January 26, 1977, Complainant filed a second unfair labor practice charge citing, in essence, the same type of conduct by the Respondent which was asserted to be violative of the Order in its November 8, 1976, charge. In addition, the second charge alleged, as a basis for the unfair labor practice, the issuance of a memorandum by the Respondent on November 12, 1976, setting forth the latter's interpretation of Article IX, Section 6 of the parties' negotiated agreement. The Respondent replied to the second charge on February 3, 1977, referring the Complainant to the Respondent's final decision of November 30, 1976, on the original charge. Subsequently, on February 16, 1977, the instant complaint was filed alleging that the Respondent had violated the parties' negotiated agreement since November 8, 1976, by unilaterally denying employees their rest period. On March 22, 1977, the complaint was amended alleging that the Respondent had violated Article IX, Section 6 of the parties' negotiated agreement since January 26, 1977. 2/

Under the particular circumstances of this case, I find that the subject complaint was untimely filed. Thus, as noted above, the Respondent on November 30, 1976, issued its final decision on the Complainant's initial pre-complaint charge. Under the Assistant Secretary's Regulations, the Complainant then had a period of 60 days after the date of service of such final decision within which to file a complaint. 3/ However, the Complainant did not file a timely complaint based on its

2/ The record reveals that the Respondent contended at all stages of the processing of the instant complaint that it had been filed untimely. Compare Veterans Administration Hospital, Charleston, South Carolina, 1 A/SLMR 400, A/SLMR No. 87 (1971).

3/ Section 203.2(b)(2) of the Assistant Secretary's Regulations states:

If a written decision expressly designated as a final decision on the charge is served by the respondent on the charging party, that party may file a complaint immediately but in no event later than sixty (60) days from the date of such service.

initial pre-complaint charge. Rather, it filed a second charge which, in essence, reiterated the first charge. Thereafter, Complainant filed the subject complaint, timely with regard to its second pre-complaint charge, but clearly untimely with regard to its first pre-complaint charge.

In my view, a complainant may not, in effect, extend the period for the filing of a timely complaint beyond the prescribed period of 60 days by filing a second pre-complaint charge which essentially reiterates the same allegations as its first pre-complaint charge. 4/ To hold otherwise would, in my view, render the 60 days timeliness requirement of Section 203.2(b)(2) of the Assistant Secretary's Regulations a nullity. Accordingly, based on the circumstances set forth above, I find the complaint herein to be untimely filed and shall, therefore, order that it be dismissed in its entirety. 5/

IT IS HEREBY ORDERED that the complaint in Case No. 22-07783(CA) be, and it hereby is, dismissed.

5/ Even assuming arguendo that the complaint herein was timely filed, in my opinion, the Respondent's position concerning rest periods for employees reflected essentially a good faith interpretation of the parties' negotiated agreement, as distinguished from a clear, unilateral breach of such agreement. Therefore, such a matter would be a proper subject for the parties' negotiated grievance procedure rather than the unfair labor practice procedures under the Order. RECOMMENDED DECISION AND ORDER

This is a proceeding brought under Executive Order 11491, as amended (hereafter, "the Order") by the labor organization representing respondent's employees in a unit appropriate for purposes of collective bargaining. The labor organization complains that respondent violated sections 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order */ by unilaterally denying employees a rest period which is required to be given under the terms of the collective bargaining agreement.

A hearing was held on September 1, 1977 in Norfolk, Virginia. Briefly, the record shows the following.

Statement of the Case

The facts are undisputed.

The collective bargaining agreement between the parties contains the following provision:

Rest periods of fifteen minutes duration will be given within each four hours of continuous work at the discretion of the supervisor in charge. No rest period will be given until an employee has worked at least one hour except in case of an emergency.

This provision was also contained in the collective bargaining agreement negotiated with the labor organization in 1972. In the current (1975) contract, by mutual agreement, the word "except" was substituted for "unless,".

In November, 1976, respondent disseminated the following memorandum to all supervisors and managers.

12 Nov 76

MEMORANDUM FOR ALL SUPERVISORS AND MANAGERS

Subj: Granting and denial of fifteen minute rest period; restatement of procedures for

Ref: (a) Agreement negotiated between this Command and NAGE R4-45

*/ Sec. 19. Unfair labor practices. (a) Agency management shall not-

(1) interfere with, restrain, or coerce an employee in the exercise of the rights assured by this Order;

(6) refuse to consult, confer, or negotiate with a labor organization as required by this Order.

1. Background. Several complaints alluding to violations of Section 6, Article IX of reference (a) have been received, primarily from the Norfolk and Oceana stores. The complaints are of the nature where a supervisor tells employees usually in an offensive manner "the break is up to me, if I don't feel like giving it, you won't get it."

2. Discussion

a. Section 6 Article IX of reference (a) provides that "Rest periods of fifteen minutes duration will be given within each four hours of continuous work at the discretion of the supervisor in charge. No rest period will be given until an employee has worked at least one hour except in case of an emergency."

b. In the past, effort was made on the part of some employees to "save the 15 minute break and move it to the lunch period." For an eight hour employee, this would mean 8 hours pay for not more than 7 1/2 hours work. Such a practice is not lawful. Just as an employer cannot require an employee to perform work or remain at the job site without his receiving pay, an employee is not entitled to draw salary or wages where the employer cannot require that employee to perform work. Such would be the case with automatic entitlement to a break.

3. Summary. The language in Section 6 of Article IX provides that a rest period will be given at the discretion of the supervisor. Thusly, under Section 6, the supervisor may grant the break or deny the break. The exercise of the supervisor's discretion must be based on work and productivity requirements. When based on these factors, the supervisor has every right and the duty to deny such a break where the denial is in the best interest of "getting the job done." However, should a supervisor deny a break spitefully, on personal whim, or as a substitute for appropriate disciplinary action, such a decision would be indefensible.

4. Action. Commissary Store Officers, and department heads will take all steps necessary to ensure that all supervisors comply with reference (a), specifically as explained in paragraph 3. For further information or discussion supervisors and managers are directed to contact the Labor/Employee Relations and Services Superintendent, Civilian Personnel Department, Building 3129, Naval Amphibious Base, Little Creek, at telephones 464-7222 and 464-7566

5. This memorandum is to receive wide dissemination. Commissary Store Officers reproduce and post immediately.

Officer in Charge

The implementation of policies set forth in the above memorandum, dated November 12, 1976, is the basis for the labor organization's complaint.

A number of supervisory employees testified that the rest period is given when the work load doesn't preclude it. Employees at one facility habitually miss their rest period on Tuesday mornings when stock is being received. On occasions when there is high absenteeism at a facility or when the pressure of a large number of shoppers precludes a rest period, according to bargaining unit members, various accommodations are made such as combining the rest period with the lunch period. These accommodations are apparently mutually satisfactory to local management and the supervised employees.

A union official who participated in negotiations which preceded the signing of the 1972 agreement in which the current article IX, section 6 appeared as article IX, section 7, testified that management had proposed that the verb "will" be modified to read "normally will". The labor organization rejected this proposal and prevailed in excluding it.

Findings of Fact and Conclusions of Law

Having considered the entire record including the testimony, exhibits and briefs of the parties and having observed the demeanor of the witnesses, I make the following findings of fact, conclusions of law and decision and order based thereon.

The facts are as set forth above.

Respondent argues that violations of a collective bargaining agreement based upon "differing and arguable" interpretations of the agreement cannot constitute violations of the Order. I agree. Were the instant matter based upon an arguable interpretation I would recommend dismissal of the complaint. It is not.

Thus, the memorandum of November 12, 1976 signed by a staff officer, makes the point on its face. While the provision of a 15 minute "break" is labeled "not lawful" in paragraph 2.b., the denial of a 15 minute break "spitefully, on personal whim" is labeled "indefensible" in paragraph 3 of the same memorandum. I note this circumstance because I regard the entire memorandum as a testimonial to the author's ignorance of both law and logic.

Moreover, considered in light of industrial reality, with which the memorandum indicates its author is unacquainted, such an interpretation of the contract clause in question indicates that management has bargained in bad faith as far back as 1975. Thus, section 6, formerly 7, plainly states its subject matter. It is unlikely in the extreme that a representative of any collective bargaining agent would negotiate to include in an agreement a section describing a daily term and condition of employment to be afforded employees only at the absolute and unreviewable discretion of management. If the wording of this section was thought by management to contain such terms, it has failed in its effort to mislead or "sandbag" the representatives of its employees by executing an agreement containing provisions which do not mean what they plainly state. I do not believe that this sly absurdity is what management intended. Nothing on this record indicates that the management officials who negotiated and signed the collective bargaining agreement acted other than in good faith.

Similarly the testimony of employees concerning the flexibility and cooperation of supervisors and unit members in implementing the rest period contract provision evidences both good faith and good will in supervisor-employee relations. The argument that evidence of employee cooperation is evidence of a waiver of a contractual right does not lie in respondent's mouth.

The unilateral interpretation of a contract by management in such a way as to cancel or write out obligations plainly set forth therein violates section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order. E. g., California National Guard, A/SLMR No. 348; Norfolk Naval Shipyard, A/SLMR No. 290. The record here demonstrates that respondent has done exactly that.

Recommendation

Having found that Navy Commissary Store Region, Norfolk engaged in conduct in violation of section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order by unilaterally violating the terms of the collective bargaining agreement in force, I recommend that the Assistant Secretary adopt the following order:

Recommended Order

Pursuant to Section 6(b) of Executive Order 11491, as amended and Section 203.36(b) of the Regulations, the Assistant Secretary for Labor-Management Relations hereby orders that Department of the Navy, Navy Commissary Store Region, Norfolk, Virginia, shall:

1. Cease and desist from:

(a) Unilaterally violating, whether by color or interpretation or otherwise, the collective bargaining agreement between it and National Association of Government Employees, Local R4-45.

(b) In any like or related manner interfering with, restraining or coercing its employees in the exercise of rights assured by Executive Order 11491, as amended.

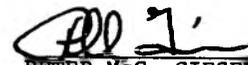

2. Take the following affirmative actions in order to effectuate the purposes and policies of the Order.

(a) Rescind the memorandum of November 12, 1976, reference N5-4:ssl 12711/4.

(b) Post at its Norfolk facilities at all places where notices to employees are usually posted, including but not limited to those places where the memorandum dated November 12, 1976, referred to supra, was posted, copies of the attached notice marked "Appendix" on forms to be furnished by the Assistant Secretary of Labor for Labor-Management Relations. Upon receipt of such forms, they shall be signed by the Officer in Charge and shall be posted and maintained by him for 60 consecutive days thereafter. The Officer in Charge shall take reasonable steps to insure that such notices are not altered, defaced or covered by any other material.

(c) Pursuant to Section 203.26 of the Regulations, notify the Assistant Secretary, in writing, within 20 days from the date of this Order, what steps have been taken to comply herewith.

A/SLMR No. 1031

This case involved an unfair labor practice complaint filed by the National Association of Government Employees, Local R1-195 (Complainant) alleging that the Respondent violated Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order by failing to bargain over a reduction-in-force (RIF). The Respondent contended that the Complainant was notified of the RIF action on September 3, 1976, and again on September 16, but that it made no request to bargain. It further contended that an October 6 letter to the Respondent, wherein the Complainant agreed to drop its unfair labor practice charge if the Respondent would rescind the RIF action and engage in meaningful consultation, did not constitute a request to bargain. Even assuming it did, however, the Respondent asserted that the parties met on October 13 to discuss the matter.

The Administrative Law Judge found that the Respondent timely notified the Complainant of the impending RIF action but that the Complainant made no request to negotiate on the impact or implementation of the decision. Accordingly, he recommended dismissal of the complaint.

Noting particularly the absence of exceptions, the Assistant Secretary adopted the findings, conclusions and recommendation of the Administrative Law Judge, and ordered that the complaint be dismissed.

RECOMMENDED DECISION AND ORDER

Statement of the Case

Pursuant to a complaint filed on November 24, 1976, under Executive Order 11491, as amended, by National Association of Government Employees Local R1-195 (hereinafter called the Union or NAGE) against the Transportation Systems Center, Cambridge, Massachusetts (hereinafter called the Respondent or Activity), a Notice of Hearing on Complaint was issued by the Regional Administrator for the New York Region on October 20, 1977.

The complaint alleges, in substance, that the Respondent violated Sections 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Executive Order by virtue of its actions in implementing a reduction-in-force without giving the Union timely notice and affording the Union an opportunity to request negotiations concerning the procedures to be utilized and the impact on unit personnel adversely affected.

Upon the basis of the entire record, including my observation of the witnesses and their demeanor, I make the following finding of fact, conclusions and recommendations.

Findings of Fact

On March 29, 1976, Dr. James Constantino, Director of the Transportation Systems Center in Cambridge, Massachusetts, received a memorandum from the Chief of Personnel, Department of Transportation, wherein he was informed that the authorized billets for full time employees at the Transportation Systems Center were reduced from 660 to 647. A copy of the memorandum was also sent to Mr. Vincent Early, President of National Association of Government Employees Local R1-195, the exclusive representative of the professional and non-professional employees at the Transportation Systems Center.

Thereafter, on various unspecified dates, Mr. Early held discussions with management representatives concerning the new personnel ceiling. According to Mr. Early's uncontroverted testimony, during the aforementioned discussions he was informed that Respondent was attempting to secure additional billets and that "Reduction-in-Force was a possibility, a very remote possibility."

On June 18, 1976, Dr. Constantino submitted a memorandum to the Assistant Secretary for Personnel wherein he outlined his problems both with regard to the new manpower ceiling and the "mix" of skills necessary to conduct the new programs being assigned to the Transportation Systems Center. Mr. Constantino, after discussing a hiring freeze and possible retraining efforts to acquire new skills within his existing staff, requested permission to conduct a reduction-in-force of 51 positions, and, then to increase the manpower ceiling by 31 positions. The new thirty one positions were to contain the skills necessary to conduct the new programs being assigned to the Transportation Systems Center. 1/

In response to the June 18th memorandum from Dr. Constantino, a survey team visited the Transportation Systems Center "to discuss and review TSC's project workload and related manpower requirements." On August 2, 1976, the Transportation Systems Center was briefed on the findings and conclusions of the survey team. The aforementioned findings and conclusions indicated that the Transportation Systems Center was not entitled to any additional billets and that a plan should be submitted with respect to how the Center intended to reach the new lower manpower ceiling. The new manpower ceiling was to be reached by September 30, 1976.

On September 3, 1976, Ms. Marcella Redel, the Personnel Officer at the Transportation Systems Center, met with Union President Early and informed him that a reduction-in-force was being planned and that permission for same was expected to be received shortly from Washington. Ms. Redel further informed Mr. Early that the Director would be in Washington, D.C. for discussions on September 8th and expected to have a definite answer on the reduction-in-force by then. Following his conversation with Ms. Redel, Mr. Early consulted by telephone that evening with Mr. Kenneth Lyons, National President of the National Association of Government Employees. Mr. Early and Mr. Lyons decided to take no action until they received further word from the Respondent concerning the reduction-in-force and then question why they were not consulted with respect to the decision to effect a reduction-in-force.

By memorandum dated September 10, 1976, Mr. William Heffelfinger, Assistant Secretary of Administration, formerly answered Director Constantino's June 18, 1976, memorandum and summarized all the intervening events and considerations concerning the impending RIF and requests for a higher manpower ceiling. The memorandum concluded with the suggestion that Director Constantino "proceed with all the preliminary planning necessary to conducting a RIF," but emphasized, however, that no actual RIF should take place prior to further consultation with, and approval from, Washington.

1/ A detailed 25 page analysis of Dr. Constantino's operations and proposals was attached to the June 18, 1976 memorandum.

On September 15, 1976, at about approximately 6 p.m., one hour after the official close of Respondent's office, Assistant Secretary Heffelfinger telephoned the Director of the Transportation Systems Center and gave formal authorization for the reduction-in-force. The next morning Ms. Redel unsuccessfully attempted to contact Mr. Early by telephone. Shortly thereafter, Ms. Redel telephoned Mr. Samuel Polcari, Vice-President of Local R1-195, and informed him that the decision to conduct the reduction-in-force had been received from Washington. Ms. Redel gave Mr. Polcari a list of the positions to be abolished and informed him that letters to the affected employees would be delivered to supervisors for personal distribution to the employees at nine o'clock the next morning, September 17, 1976.

On September 17, 1976, Mr. Early, pursuant to his request, was furnished a copy of the newly completed retention register. Further, according to the record testimony of Mr. Early, Respondent supplied all data relating to the reduction-in-force which was requested by Mr. Early.

Mr. Early made no request to meet and confer with the Respondent prior to the issuance of the reduction-in-force notices to the affected employees. In fact the only request concerning bargaining made by Mr. Early or the Union occurred on October 6, 1976, when Mr. Early delivered a letter to the Director of the Transportation Systems Center and offered to "withdraw the unfair labor charge" if the Director would "agree to rescind the reduction-in-force action and engage in meaningful consultation with the Union."

According to the record, the reduction-in-force was effective on October 22, 1976.

Discussion and Conclusions

The parties are in agreement that the Respondent was not obligated to consult and confer with the Union concerning its unilateral decision to effect a reduction-in-force. The parties are in further agreement that irrespective of the rights conferred upon management by Section 11(b) of the Order to unilaterally effect a reduction-in-force, Respondent is, however, required to give the Union timely notice of its decision in this regard so that the Union may request consultation and/or bargaining with respect to the procedures management intends to observe in choosing which employees were to be subject to the reduction-in-force. The Union contends that the Respondent failed to fulfill its obligations in this latter respect and thus violated Sections 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Executive Order.

The record reveals that the Union was first made aware on March 29, 1976, of the fact that the manpower ceiling was being reduced and that various alternative plans for reaching the new lower ceiling were to be considered. A reduction-in-force was one of the plans suggested as a possible alternative, albeit a remote one. Thereafter, the Respondent began working on different plans to change the manpower ceiling and to also obtain the production skills among its staff which it believed necessary to conduct the new programs being assigned to the Transportation Systems Center. When it appeared that a hiring freeze and a retraining program among the existing staff would not solve the problems at the Transportation Systems Center, the Director, on June 18, 1976, sought permission from the Department of Transportation in Washington to effect, among other things, a reduction-in-force. ^{2/} In response to Director Constantino's June 18th memorandum a survey team visited the Transportation Systems Center for purposes of discussing and reviewing the Transportation Systems Center's projected workload and related manpower requirements. On August 2, 1976, the survey team made it clear that the Transportation Systems Center was not entitled to any additional billets and that a plan should be submitted showing how the Transportation Systems Center intended to reach the new lower manpower ceiling.

^{2/} I find it to be clear from the record that while the Director was free to recommend various alternatives, including a reduction-in-force, a reduction-in-force could not be effected by the Director of the Transportation Systems Center without prior permission from the Department of Transportation in Washington.

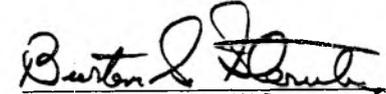

The record is silent with respect to what particular actions the Transportation Systems Center took between August 2 and September 3, 1976. However, and in any event, on September 3, 1976, Union President Early was informed by the Respondent that a reduction-in-force was being planned and that permission for same was expected to be received shortly from Washington, D.C. Mr. Early was further informed that the Director was to be in Washington, D.C. for discussions on September 8th and expected to have a definite answer on the reduction-in-force by then. Thereafter, following the exchange of various memoranda and telephone conversations between the Transportation Systems Center and Washington, formal authorization for the reduction-in-force was finally given to the Director of the Transportation Systems Center at about 6 p.m. on September 15, 1976. The next morning, September 16th, the Union was given notice that the reduction-in-force was in fact a reality. Also, on September 16th, the Union was given a list of the positions to be abolished and informed that letters to the affected employees would be delivered to supervisors for personal distribution to the employees at nine o'clock the following morning. The Union at no time requested a meeting for purposes of discussing the manner in which Respondent intended to implement its decision to effect a reduction-in-force.

Based upon the foregoing analysis and the record as a whole, I find that the Respondent did give the Union timely notice of the impending reduction-in-force. In reaching this conclusion I note, among other things, that while Respondent may have been working during the period March 29 - September 3, 1976, on a reduction-in-force as one of the alternatives to reaching the new lower manpower ceiling, any decision thereon could not be final since prior approval from Washington was always necessary. When final approval appeared to be imminent, Respondent immediately informed the Union. The Union, however, failed to take any action with respect to requesting consultation or negotiations as to the manner in which Respondent intended to implement its decision, but, opted instead, to await final decision on the matter and then inquire as to why the Union was not consulted on the decision to effect the reduction-in-force. When a final decision on the matter was announced on September 16, some fourteen days later, the Union, other than asking for certain information, again made no attempt to seek further negotiations either with respect to impact or implementation. Accordingly, I find insufficient basis for a 19(a)(1) and (6) finding and shall recommend that the complaint be dismissed in its entirety. 3/

Recommendation

It is hereby recommended that the complaint be dismissed in its entirety.

FEDERAL BUILDING, ANN ARBOR, MICHIGAN
A/SLMR No. 1032

This case involved a representation petition filed by the American Federation of Government Employees, AFL-CIO (AFGE) seeking an election in a unit of all employees of the Activity. The parties stipulated that the claimed unit was appropriate for the purpose of exclusive recognition. However, the Activity sought to exclude from the unit the secretaries to the two Assistant Regional Directors, the Administrative Technician, and an employee alleged to be serving as a temporary supervisor.

Noting particularly the parties' agreement with respect to the appropriate unit, the Assistant Secretary concluded that the claimed unit was appropriate for the purpose of exclusive recognition as the employees involved had a clear and identifiable community of interest and such unit will promote effective dealings and efficiency of agency operations. With respect to the eligibility questions, the Assistant Secretary found that the secretaries to the Assistant Regional Director should be included in the unit as the evidence regarding their current duties was insufficient to establish that they act in a confidential capacity to persons who formulate and effectuate management policies for the Activity in the field of labor relations. In this connection, he rejected as speculative an amendment to their position description made on the day of the hearing in this case and their designation as part of the management team made on the day preceding the hearing.

He also found that the Administrative Technician should not be excluded from the unit either as a confidential employee or as an employee engaged in Federal personnel work in other than a purely clerical capacity. In this regard, he found, with respect to the former, that the evidence concerning her current duties was insufficient to establish that she acted in a confidential capacity to a person who formulates and effectuates management policies in the field of labor relations. He rejected as speculative the same amendment to her position description and the same management team designation, as noted above with respect to the secretaries. The Assistant Secretary also found that the personnel-related activities engaged in by the employee in question were performed in a routine manner requiring little independent judgment on her part, and, therefore, were performed in a purely clerical capacity.

With respect to the final position in dispute, the Assistant Secretary concluded that the employee occupying the position of temporary task force leader was a supervisor within the meaning of Section 2(c) of the Order with respect to two part-time clerical employees who assist in the project. However, as the employee in question will return to his rank and file duties upon the completion of the project, the Assistant Secretary indicated that his eligibility should be determined by his status; i.e., he should be excluded from the unit while serving as a temporary supervisor and included in the unit when he returns to his rank and file status.

Accordingly, the Assistant Secretary ordered an election in the unit found appropriate.

DECISION AND DIRECTION OF ELECTION

Upon a petition duly filed under Section 6 of Executive Order 11491, as amended, a hearing was held before Hearing Officer Gregory A. Miksa. The Hearing Officer's rulings made at the hearing are free from prejudicial error and are hereby affirmed.

Upon the entire record in this case, including briefs submitted by the parties, the Assistant Secretary finds:

1. The labor organization involved claims to represent certain employees of the Activity.
2. The Petitioner, American Federation of Government Employees, AFL-CIO, herein called AFGE, seeks an election in a unit consisting of all professional and nonprofessional employees of the Activity, excluding management officials, employees engaged in Federal personnel work in other than a purely clerical capacity, confidential employees and supervisors as defined in the Order. 2/ The parties stipulated that the unit sought is appropriate. However, the Activity takes the position, which the AFGE disputes, that the secretaries to the two Assistant Regional Directors, the Administrative Technician, and an employee who is alleged to be serving as a temporary supervisor, should be excluded from such unit.

1/ The Activity's name appears as amended at the hearing.

2/ The unit appears essentially as amended at the hearing.

The Activity is one of seven regions of the Bureau of Outdoor Recreation, Department of Interior, which is responsible for planning, technical assistance, and administration of grants-in-aid performed through the States for the protection of natural resources for public use. The Activity is under the direction of a Regional Director who has full responsibility for carrying out its mission in his Region and who has authority for most personnel actions involving positions up to and including GS-11.

At the time of the hearing in this case, the Activity employed 41 permanent full-time employees out of an authorized 47 positions. Most of these employees are classified as Outdoor Recreation Planners, with the remainder being classified as administrative and support employees. All of the Activity's employees work in the same location and are subject to the same working conditions. In addition, they are subject to the same bureau-wide and department-wide personnel policies and practices administered by the Bureau of Outdoor Recreation's Personnel Office located in Washington, D. C. In this regard, the Regional Director is assisted by an Administrative Officer who acts as his liaison with the Washington, D. C. Personnel Office.

Under the foregoing circumstances, and noting particularly the agreement of the parties as to the appropriateness of the claimed unit, I find that the unit sought is appropriate for the purpose of exclusive recognition as the employees involved share a clear and identifiable community of interest and as such unit will promote effective dealings and efficiency of agency operations.

Eligibility Issues

Secretaries to the Assistant Regional Directors

As noted above, the Activity takes the position, contrary to the AFGE, that the secretaries to the two Assistant Regional Directors should be excluded from the unit as confidential employees. 3/ In this regard, the record reveals that prior to the filing of the subject petition neither of the secretaries in question had acted in a confidential capacity with respect to persons engaged in the formulation and effectuation of management policies in the field of labor relations. 4/ Thus, neither of the Assistant Regional Directors had been involved in the processing of grievances or in significant personnel actions in which their secretaries were utilized in a confidential capacity. The record reflects, however, that on the day before the hearing in this matter, the secretaries in question were informed that the Assistant Regional Directors and the Administrative Officer were designated by the Regional Director as the management negotiating team and that the secretaries would be part of the "management team." In addition, on the day prior to the hearing, the secretaries were required to attend a training session regarding their designation as part of the management team, and on the day of the hearing their position descriptions were amended as follows:

3/ The parties agreed that the secretary to the Regional Director should be excluded from the unit as a confidential employee.

Incumbent is responsible for typing/coordinating material such as grievances, evaluations, disciplinary actions including reprimands, admonishments, adverse actions, and incentive awards in order to assist the supervisor in performing his/her Employee Relations/Labor Relations responsibilities.

Under the particular circumstances of this case, I find that the evidence regarding the current duties of the secretaries in question is insufficient to establish that they presently act in a confidential capacity to persons who formulate and effectuate management policies for the Activity in the field of labor relations. In my view, their designation as part of the management team on the day before the hearing and the amendment of their position description by the Activity amounts only to speculation as to the scope of their future duties. Moreover, the evidence is insufficient to establish that their inclusion in the unit would work a hardship on the Activity with respect to the typing and coordination of labor relations matters, given the parties' agreement as to the exclusion of the Regional Director's secretary from the unit as a confidential employee.

Administrative Technician, GS-7

The Activity also took the position that the employee occupying the position of Administrative Technician, GS-7, in the Activity's Administrative Office should be excluded from the unit as a confidential employee and/or an employee engaged in Federal personnel work in other than a purely clerical capacity. In this connection, the Activity acted just prior to the hearing in this matter as in the case of the above-noted secretaries. Thus, it designated the Administrative Officer, the supervisor of the employee in question, as part of the management negotiating team on the day before the instant hearing, and on that same day requested the Administrative Technician's presence at a training session for the management team. The Activity also amended the Administrative Technician's position description on the day of the hearing, using the same language set forth above with respect to the two secretaries.

With respect to the current duties of the Administrative Technician, the record discloses that she is primarily engaged in maintaining the in-house personnel and other administrative files of the Activity and in performing the related duties of typing administrative memoranda and personnel actions that pass through the office. In this connection, the employee in question testified that the Administrative Officer did not always use her services for sensitive personnel matters. The record reflects that in performing her duties, the incumbent essentially follows the policies set by the Administrative Officer, who would be responsible for the initiation of any personnel actions not covered by set procedures.

Based on the foregoing, I find that the evidence regarding the current duties of the employee in question is insufficient to establish that she serves in a confidential capacity to a person engaged in the formulation and effectuation of management policies in the field of labor relations. In this regard, as indicated above, I view her recent designation as part of the "management team" and the amendment to her position description to be speculative rather than probative with respect to an appraisal of her current duties. Also, the record does not establish that the employee in question is engaged in Federal personnel work in other than a purely clerical capacity. Thus, the record reveals that in maintaining the local personnel and administrative files and in typing personnel actions, the performance of her duties is clerical in nature and requires little independent judgment on her part. 5/

Temporary Task Force Leader

With respect to the final disputed employee, the Activity takes the position that John Peine, who is classified as an Outdoor Recreation Planner, GS-12, is a temporary supervisor based on his current service as a temporary task force leader. In this connection, the Activity contends that Peine should be excluded from the unit only during the period in which he serves as temporary task force leader. The record reveals that Peine has been serving as a temporary task force leader under the supervision of the Deputy Director of the Bureau of Outdoor Recreation, and will continue to do so until the completion of a nation-wide survey of the Bureau's operation. In this regard, he coordinates the activities of one employee in each region of the Bureau. The evidence establishes that in the performance of his duties as a temporary task force leader he is assisted by two part-time employees located in Ann Arbor. 6/ Peine interviewed these two employees, hired them, assigns their work, and is the person responsible for handling their grievances and evaluating their performance. The Activity indicated that Peine is expected to complete his project by the beginning of April 1978. However, the Activity noted further that Peine's service as a temporary task force leader would not be completed until the Deputy Director of the Bureau was satisfied with the outcome of the project.

Under these circumstances, I find that Peine is a supervisor within the meaning of Section 2(c) of the Order while serving in his present capacity, as he performs supervisory functions with respect to the part-time employees under his direction. Accordingly, he should be excluded from the unit while serving in his temporary supervisory capacity. However, when he completes the project and returns to his rank and file duties, he should be included in the unit found appropriate. ^{7/}

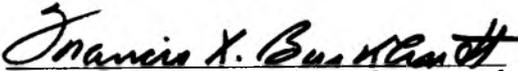

Accordingly, I find that the following employees constitute a unit appropriate for the purpose of exclusive recognition within the meaning of Section 10 of Executive Order 11491, as amended:

All employees of the Lake Central Region, Bureau of Outdoor Recreation, Department of Interior, Ann Arbor, Michigan, excluding professional employees, management officials, employees engaged in Federal Personnel work in other than a purely clerical capacity, confidential employees and supervisors as defined in the Order. ^{8/}

DIRECTION OF ELECTION

An election by secret ballot shall be conducted among employees in the unit found appropriate as early as possible, but not later than 60 days from the date below. The appropriate Area Administrator shall supervise the election, subject to the Assistant Secretary's Regulations. Eligible to vote are those in the unit who were employed during the payroll period immediately preceding the date below, including employees who did not work during that period because they were out ill, or on vacation or on furlough, including those in the military service who appear in person at the polls. Ineligible to vote are employees who have quit or were discharged for cause since the designated payroll period and who have not been rehired or reinstated before the election date. Those eligible shall vote whether or not they desire to be represented for the purpose of exclusive recognition by the American Federation of Government Employees, AFL-CIO.

DEPARTMENT OF THE NAVY,
PORTSMOUTH NAVAL SHIPYARD
A/SLMR No. 1033

This case involves a representation petition filed by the National Association of Government Employees, and its affiliated union the International Union of Government Employees (NAGE). The Activity and the Intervenor, the incumbent exclusive representative, the Federal Employees Metal Trades Council, AFL-CIO, asserted that the petition was filed untimely because it was filed after the Activity and the Intervenor had entered into a negotiated agreement. The NAGE contended, in this regard, that no agreement was in effect at the time its petition was filed on April 15, 1977, since the parties had agreed in their ground rules for negotiation that ratification by the Intervenor's membership was a condition precedent to any binding agreement and such ratification did not occur until May 25, 1977, after the filing date of the petition.

The Assistant Secretary found that the NAGE's petition was timely filed. In this connection, he noted that the ground rules agreed to by the Intervenor and Activity expressly provided that the Intervenor would not be bound by the provisions of the agreement until its membership had ratified the agreement. Under these circumstances, in the Assistant Secretary's view, the agreement, as initialed by the parties on April 7, 1977, did not constitute a bar as of the date of the NAGE's petition. Rather, consistent with the parties' express understanding, any agreement was not effective until membership ratification which did not occur until May 25, 1977. Accordingly, and noting the parties' agreement that there was no issue as to the appropriateness of the petitioned for unit, the Assistant Secretary directed that an election be conducted in the unit found appropriate.

DECISION AND DIRECTION OF ELECTION

Upon a petition duly filed under Section 6 of Executive Order 11491, as amended, a hearing was held before Hearing Officer William Koffel. The Hearing Officer's rulings made at the hearing are free from prejudicial error and are hereby affirmed.

Upon consideration of the entire record in the subject case, including briefs filed by the Petitioner and Intervenor, the Assistant Secretary finds:

1. The labor organizations involved claim to represent certain employees of the Activity.
2. The Petitioner, the National Association of Government Employees and its affiliated Union, the International Union of Government Employees, hereinafter called NAGE, seeks an election in a unit of:

All ungraded employees including apprentices and trainees, planners and estimators, progressmen, ship schedulers, shop planners and inspectors employed at the Portsmouth Naval Shipyard, and GS /General Schedule/ Physical Science Technicians in the Radiological Monitoring Division of the Radiological Control Office, Portsmouth Naval Shipyard, but excluding patternmakers, apprentice patternmakers and shop planner patternmakers, all other graded employees, managerial officials, employees engaged in Federal personnel work in other than a purely clerical capacity, guards, professional employees, and supervisors as defined in the Order.

The Intervenor, the Federal Employees Metal Trades Council, AFL-CIO, hereinafter called MTC, currently is the exclusive representative of the employees in the petitioned for unit. The parties agreed that the appropriateness of the unit is not at issue herein.

The Activity and the MTC assert that the provisions of a negotiated agreement, which had been initialed by representatives of the MTC and the Activity, constituted, in effect, a valid negotiated agreement which serves as a bar to the instant petition. On the other hand, the NAGE contends that its petition, filed on April 15, 1977, was timely because at the time it was filed the negotiated agreement between the MTC and the Activity was not a complete agreement binding on the parties as it had not been ratified by the membership of the MTC. Therefore, it did not constitute a bar to an election.

The record reveals that on November 5, 1976, the International Union of Government Employees filed a representation petition in Case No. 31-10581(RO) seeking an election in the same unit as is sought herein. Subsequently, the withdrawal of this petition was approved by the Regional Administrator on January 11, 1977. 1/ On January 24, 1977, the then existing agreement between the Activity and the MTC expired, and thereafter the parties commenced negotiations for a new agreement. The parties executed a written agreement concerning ground rules for negotiations on January 31, 1977. Among other things, this agreement provided that the parties would not be bound by a new negotiated agreement, or any part thereof, until it had been ratified by the membership of the MTC and approved by the Activity's Office of Civilian Personnel.

Negotiations commenced on February 4, 1977, and on April 7 the parties concluded negotiations by initialing all of the articles of a complete draft of an agreement. On May 25, 1977, the agreement was ratified by the membership and, subsequently, on June 8, the Shipyard Commander and the MTC signed the formal agreement.

Under the foregoing circumstances, I find that the subject petition was filed timely. Thus, the petition was filed on April 15, 1977, subsequent to the initialing of the agreement by representatives of the Activity and the MTC on April 7, but prior to the MTC membership ratification vote on May 25. As it is clear from the provisions of the negotiated ground rules executed by the parties on January 31 that the MTC would not be bound by the agreement until such agreement was ratified by its membership, I do not view the agreement, as initialed by the parties on April 7, to constitute a bar as of that date. ^{2/} Rather, consistent with the parties' express understanding, any agreement was not effective until membership ratification.

1/ Pursuant to Section 202.3(d) of the Assistant Secretary's Regulations, the MTC and the Activity had a period of 90 days from the date of the Regional Administrator's approval of the withdrawal of the petition in Case No. 31-10581(RO) free from rival claim within which to consummate a new agreement.

Accordingly, and noting the position of the parties herein that no issue exists as to the appropriateness of the petitioned for unit, I shall direct an election in the following unit, which I find to be appropriate for the purpose of exclusive recognition under Executive Order 11491, as amended:

All General Schedule Physical Science Technicians assigned to the Radiological Monitoring Division of the Radiological Control Office, and all Wage Grade employees, including apprentices and trainees, planners and estimators, progressmen, ship schedulers, shop planners and inspectors of the Portsmouth Naval Shipyard, Portsmouth, Virginia, excluding all professional employees, all other General Schedule employees, all patternmakers, apprentice patternmakers and shop planner patternmakers, management officials, employees engaged in Federal personnel work in other than a purely clerical capacity, guards and supervisors as defined in Executive Order 11491, as amended.

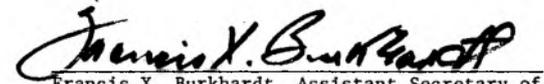

DIRECTION OF ELECTION

An election by secret ballot shall be conducted among the employees of the unit found appropriate as early as possible, but not later than 60 days from the date below. The appropriate Area Administrator shall supervise the election, subject to the Assistant Secretary's Regulations. Eligible to vote are all those in the unit who were employed during the payroll period immediately preceding the date below, including employees who did not work during that period because they were out ill, or on furlough, including those in military service who appear in person at the polls. Ineligible to vote are employees who quit or were discharged for cause since the designated payroll period and who have not been rehired or reinstated before the election date. Those eligible shall

^{2/} The Assistant Secretary's decision in Department of the Navy, Navy Exchange, Miramar, California, 6 A/SLMR 44, A/SLMR No. 602 (1976), was considered to be factually distinguishable. In that case, it was found that an agreement initialed prior to the filing of a petition constituted a bar to the processing of such petition. However, as distinguished from the instant case, in A/SLMR No. 602 there was no membership ratification requirement as a pre-condition to a binding agreement.

A/SLMR No. 1034

This case arose as a result of a complaint filed by the National Treasury Employees Union (NTEU) and NTEU Chapter 6 alleging that the New Orleans District of the Internal Revenue Service violated Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order by unilaterally denying the NTEU, contrary to past practice, the use of Activity typewriters and secretaries for the preparation of grievances and other union business "regardless of whether or not the employee utilized the facilities while on annual leave or leave without pay or before or after the normal workday or while on meal or free time."

The Administrative Law Judge found that the Respondent had violated Section 19(a)(1) and (6) by unilaterally terminating the past practice of allowing the NTEU to use Activity typewriters and the services of secretaries on a nonduty time to prepare grievances and union communications. In this regard, he noted that by allowing the use of typewriters and secretaries on nonduty time, the Activity had established a term and condition of employment which could not be unilaterally modified.

The Assistant Secretary adopted the Administrative Law Judge's findings, conclusions and recommendations noting the requirements set forth in Section 20 of the Order.

RECOMMENDED DECISION AND ORDER

Statement of the Case

Pursuant to a complaint filed on March 18, 1977, under Executive Order 11491, as amended, by the National Treasury Employees Union and NTEU Chapter 6 (hereinafter called the Union or NTEU) against the Department of the Treasury, Internal Revenue Service, New Orleans District (hereinafter called the Respondent or Activity), a Notice of Hearing on Complaint was issued by the Acting Regional Administrator for the Kansas City, Missouri, Region on June 13, 1977.

The complaint alleged, in substance, that the Respondent violated Sections 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Executive Order by unilaterally denying the Union, contrary to past practice, the use of government owned typewriters and secretaries for the preparation of grievances and other union business "regardless of whether or not the employee utilizes the facilities while on annual leave or leave without pay or before the start of the workday or after the end of the workday or while on meal break or free time".

A hearing was held in the captioned matter on July 19 and 20, 1977, in New Orleans, Louisiana. All parties were afforded full opportunity to be heard, to examine and cross-examine witnesses and to introduce evidence bearing on the issues involved herein.

Upon the basis of the entire record, including my observation of the witnesses and their demeanor, I make the following findings of fact, conclusions and recommendations.

Findings of Fact

The Union is the exclusive representative of the professional and non-professional employees in Respondent's New Orleans District. At the time of the events underlying the instant complaint the parties were subject to Multi-District Agreement Number II between the NTEU and the Internal Revenue Service. Section 3 of the Multi-District Agreement sets forth the amount of "administrative time" stewards may spend on "union-employer business", i.e. grievances and other matters set forth in, and/or arising under, the Agreement.

On September 3, 1976, Mr. James Gegenheimer, Union President, met with Mr. Robert Cutts, Director of Respondent's New Orleans District to discuss some problems concerning the use of the "administrative time" provided for in Multi-District Agreement Number II. The meeting adjourned with the understanding that Mr. Gegenheimer would have a meeting with his union officers and stewards to determine exactly what type of problems the union officials and stewards were having with the managers in the New Orleans District with respect to the use of "administrative time". Several days thereafter Mr. Gegenheimer met with the various union officials and discussed their respective problems. During the course of the meeting, union steward Vernon Vanderavoort informed Mr. Gegenheimer that around July 23, 1976, a manager had stopped a secretary from typing a grievance for him.

Following the meeting with the union officials, Mr. Gegenheimer met with Mr. William Works from Respondent's labor relations office on October 11, 1976, and presented several questions concerning the rights of the stewards and other union officials. Specifically, Mr. Gegenheimer wanted to know (1) whether the stewards could request secretaries to type grievances and other related union documents, (2) whether the union officials themselves could type the aforementioned documents and (3) whether secretaries could type the union newsletter on their free time. At the conclusion of the meeting, Mr. Works presented the Union's questions to Mr. Cutts, the Director of the New Orleans Region.

On October 19, 1976, Mr. Gegenheimer met Mr. Cutts. During the course of the meeting, which was also attended by various other union and management officials, Mr. Cutts gave his answer to the three questions propounded by Mr. Gegenheimer at the October 14, 1976 meeting. Mr. Cutts stated that union officers and stewards could not utilize Respondent's typewriters or secretaries or clerks for the purpose of typing any matter at anytime.

With respect to the practice prior to October 19, 1976, the uncontroverted testimony of various union officers and secretaries establishes that the Union had for many years utilized Respondent's typewriters and secretaries for typing grievances, union newsletters and other correspondence directed to management. These same witness further testified that secretaries on occasion had typed such union materials during their official duty hours when they had no official business to do. The aforementioned typing activities were conducted by the employees involved openly and without any attempt to conceal same from their fellow employees and the various management representatives or officials located in their respective work areas.

As to Respondent's knowledge of the typing activities of both the union officers and secretaries, Mr. Floyd Buras and Mr. Louis Koster, Group Managers and part of Respondent's supervisory team, acknowledged that they were and had been aware of the typing activities of the union representatives. Further according to Mr. Koster, it had always been IRS policy to allow the Union to use typewriters and secretaries to type grievances, etc., so long as the practice was not abused. The practice had been established years ago by Mr. Shockcor and

Mr. Usry, the two individuals who had preceded Mr. Cutts as District Directors. Lastly, according to the credited testimony of Mr. Koster, at a meeting of the management team in or around October 1976, a number of Respondent's managers or other supervisory personnel acknowledged that they had been aware of the fact that the Union had been utilizing both typewriters and secretaries to type grievances. Mr. Cutts, who had been a District Director for approximately one year, had no prior knowledge that the Union was utilizing Respondent's typewriters and secretaries for processing of grievances and other related union activities. However, upon discovering the practice, he immediately cancelled same since he was of the opinion that the use of such facilities was unrelated to working conditions or terms or conditions of employment.

In defense of its actions, Respondent submitted into evidence copies of Executive Order 11222 (Prescribing Standards of Ethical Conduct For Government Officers and Employees) and the Department of the Treasury's Minimum Standards of Conduct, 31 CFR Sec. 0.735-50.

31 CFR Sec. 0.735-50 provides:

Employees may not directly or indirectly use or allow the use of federal property of any kind for other than officially approved activities. They also have a positive responsibility to protect and conserve all Federal property including equipment and supplies, which is entrusted or issued to them.

Executive Order 11222 provies in pertinent part as follows:

Sec. 204. An employee shall not use Federal property of any kind for other than officially approved activities. He must protect and conserve all Federal property, including equipment and supplies, entrusted or issued to him.

The record establishes that the respective union representatives who engaged in the practice of using the Respondent's typewriters and/or secretaries to type union grievances etc., never formally requested permission to use same. However, on occasion the employees involved did inform their respective supervisors that they were going to do union or other unofficial typing.

DISCUSSION AND CONCLUSIONS

It is well established that Section 11(a) of the Executive Order imposes upon an agency the obligation to bargain with respect to any contemplated changes in terms and conditions of employment. It is further well established that the use of agency facilities and equipment by a union is a privilege and not a right; once granted however, such a privilege becomes, in effect, an established term and condition of employment which may not thereafter be unilaterally changed. Veterans Administration, Veterans Administration Regional Office, New York Region, A/SLMR No. 694; Internal Revenue Service, Office of the Regional Commissioner, Western Region, A/SLMR No. 473; Los Angeles Air Route Traffic Control Center, Federal Aviation Administration, A/SLMR No. 283.

In the instant case, admittedly, there was never any formal request by the Union to use the Agency's typewriters and/or secretaries to type union grievances or other communications between the Union and the Agency. Similarly, there was no formal permission given by the Agency for such activities. Notwithstanding the foregoing, I find that the record establishes that the utilization by the Union of typewriters and/or secretaries to type grievances and other union communications was permitted and in fact sanctioned by agency managers. Thus, I note the testimony of Group Managers Koster and Buras to the effect that they had been aware of the Union practice of utilizing both Agency typewriters and/or secretaries to type grievances and other union communications and that past Directors of the New Orleans District had made it clear that the Union was to be allowed such privileges.

Accordingly, having granted the Union the privilege of utilizing Agency typewriters and/or secretaries for the preparation of various union communications, grievances, etc., Respondent, in effect, established a term and condition of employment which it was not at liberty to thereafter unilaterally change.

Consistent with the foregoing, I find that when District Director Cutts announced on October 19, 1976, without any prior negotiations or consultation with the Union, that Union officers and stewards could not utilize Respondent's secretaries or typewriters for the purpose of typing any matter at anytime, Respondent engaged in conduct violative of Section 19(a)(6) of the Executive Order. Veterans Administration, Veterans Administration Regional Office, New York Region; Internal Revenue Service, Office of the Regional Commissioner, Western Region; Los Angeles Air Route Traffic Control Center, FAA, supra.

I further find that the aforementioned unilateral conduct necessarily had a restraining influence upon unit employees and a concomitant coercive effect upon their rights assured by the Executive Order in violation Section 19(a)(1).

Contrary to the contention of the Respondent, I do not find that Section 204 of Executive Order 11222 and Section 735-50 of the Department of Treasury's Minimum Standard of Conduct make the use by the union of typewriters and/or secretaries for the preparation of grievances and other communications to management illegal. While it is true that both sections, which are cited supra in the factual portion of the instant decision, bar the use of "Federal property of any kind for other than officially approved activities," the record, however, establishes that responsible officials of the Respondent did in fact implicitly approve of the Union's activities with respect to the utilization of the typewriters and secretaries.

As to Respondent's defenses based on waiver and Section 12(b) of the Executive Order, I find both to be without merit. The mere fact that Multi-District Agreement Number II contains no provision relative to the practice does not, standing alone, support a waiver. In order to support a waiver, there must have been at least some discussion of the subject involved prior to the execution of the contract. In the instant case the record is barren of any evidence indicating any discussion prior to the execution of Multi-District Agreement Number II of the Union's practice of utilizing the Respondent's typewriters and/or secretaries for the purpose of typing grievances and other union communications. In these circumstances it cannot be said that the Union waived its rights to continue its past practice of utilizing the Respondent's typewriters and/or secretaries. cf. NASA, Kennedy Space Center, Florida, A/SLMR No. 223. The provision in the Multi-District Agreement concerning "administrative time" is unrelated to the past practice involved herein.

Lastly, Respondent takes the position that inasmuch as Section 12(b) of the Executive Order vests in Respondent the exclusive right to direct both its employees and the use of its equipment, it was free to curtail the use of both the equipment and the secretaries by the Union without any prior consultation or negotiations. Again, had not the Respondent by its actions previously approved the Union's practice of utilizing the typewriters and secretaries as described herein, I would agree with Respondent's position. However, such is not the case. As noted above, once the privilege has been granted, it becomes a right, and as here a condition of employment, which cannot be unilaterally altered.

RECOMMENDED ORDER

Pursuant to Section 6(b) of Executive 11491, as amended, and Section 203.26 of the Regulations, the Assistant Secretary of Labor for Labor-Management Relations hereby orders that the U.S. Department of the Treasury, Internal Revenue Service, New Orleans District, New Orleans, Louisiana shall:

1. Cease and desist from:

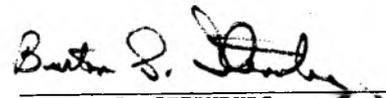

(a) Prohibiting the officers and stewards of the National Treasury Employees Union from using Agency typewriters and/or secretaries for purposes of typing grievances or other union communications as per past practice, or changing other like matters affecting the working conditions of unit employees, without first meeting and conferring with the National Treasury Employees Union, NTEU Chapter 6.

(b) In any like or related manner interfering with, restraining, or coercing employees in the exercise of their rights assured by Executive Order 11491, as amended.

2. Take the following affirmative actions in order to effectuate the purposes and policies of the Order.

(a) Post at all its facilities copies of the attached notice marked "Appendix" on forms to be furnished by the Assistant Secretary of Labor for Labor-Management Relations. Upon receipt of such forms they shall be signed by the Director of the New Orleans, Louisiana, District and shall be posted and maintained by him for 60 consecutive days thereafter, in conspicuous places, including all bulletin boards and other places where notices to all employees are customarily posted. The Director of the New Orleans District shall take reasonable steps to insure that such notices are not altered, defaced or covered by any other material.

(b) Pursuant to Section 203.27 of the Regulations, notify the Assistant Secretary in writing within 30 days from the date of this order as to what steps have been taken to comply herewith.

PURSUANT TO SECTION 6 OF EXECUTIVE ORDER 11491, AS AMENDED

DEPARTMENT OF THE NAVY,
NAVAL COMMUNICATION AREA
MASTER STATION, EASTPAC, HONOLULU
A/SLMR No. 1035

This case involved an unfair labor practice complaint filed by the Service Employees' International Union, Local 556, AFL-CIO (Complainant) alleging that the Respondent violated Section 19(a)(6) of the Order by failing to bargain over the impact on adversely affected unit employees of its decision to use volunteer bartenders to staff a newly created Acey-Deucey Lounge. The Complainant contended that bartenders who were employed in the Enlisted Mess, OPEN, a separate lounge located in the same building, and who were members of its exclusively recognized unit, suffered a loss in tips as a result of the use of volunteer bartenders.

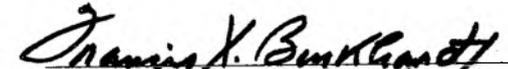

The Assistant Secretary adopted the Administrative Law Judge's conclusion that there was insufficient evidence to establish that the use of volunteer bartenders had a substantial impact on the personnel policies, practices and general working conditions of unit employees. Accordingly, he ordered that the complaint be dismissed in its entirety.

DECISION AND ORDER

On January 31, 1978, Administrative Law Judge Burton S. Sternburg issued his Recommended Decision and Order in the above-entitled proceeding, finding that the Respondent had not engaged in the unfair labor practice alleged in the complaint and recommending that the complaint be dismissed in its entirety. Thereafter, the Complainant filed exceptions with respect to the Administrative Law Judge's Recommended Decision and Order.

The Assistant Secretary has reviewed the rulings of the Administrative Law Judge made at the hearing and finds that no prejudicial error was committed. The rulings are hereby affirmed. Upon consideration of the Administrative Law Judge's Recommended Decision and Order and the entire record in the subject case, including the exceptions filed by the Complainant, I hereby adopt the Administrative Law Judge's findings, 1/ conclusions and recommendation.

In agreement with the Administrative Law Judge's conclusion, I find that, under the circumstances of this case, there was insufficient evidence to establish that the use of volunteer bartenders at the Acey-Deucey Lounge had a substantial impact on the personnel policies, practices and general working conditions of the unit employees and that, therefore, the Respondent was under no obligation to bargain in this regard.

1/ In reaching the disposition herein, it was considered unnecessary to pass upon the Administrative Law Judge's finding, on page 4 of his Recommended Decision and Order, that the Complainant had agreed that the Respondent was privileged under Sections 11(b) and 12(b) of the Order to unilaterally establish the Acey-Deucey Lounge and man it solely with volunteer bartenders.

Before: BURTON S. STERNBURG
 Administrative Law Judge

Pursuant to a complaint filed on July 26, 1977, under Executive Order 11491, as amended, by Service Employees' International Union, Local 556, AFL-CIO, (hereinafter called the Complainant or Union), against the Naval Communication Area Master Station, EASTPAC Honolulu (hereinafter called the Respondent or Activity), a Notice of Hearing on Complaint was issued by the Regional Administrator for the San Francisco, California Region on September 16, 1977.

The Complaint alleges that the Respondent violated Sections 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Executive Order by virtue of its actions in unilaterally establishing a first and second class petty officers' bar (Acey-Deucey Lounge) manned solely by volunteer bartenders without giving prior notice to the Union of such action and allowing negotiations relative to the impact of the new policy of using volunteer bartenders on bargaining unit members currently employed as bartenders in the existing enlisted men's club. 1/

A hearing was held in the captioned matter on November 17, 1977, in Honolulu, Hawaii. All parties were afforded full opportunity to be heard, to examine and cross-examine witnesses, and to introduce evidence bearing on the issues involved herein.

Upon the basis of the entire record, including my observation of the witnesses and their demeanor, I make the following findings of fact, conclusions and recommendations.

Findings of Fact

The Union is the exclusive representative of the employees working in the Enlisted Men's Club. On February 23, 1977, management of the Enlisted Men's Club was transferred from the Navy Exchange to the Naval Supply Department.

Following receipt of the first month's financial statement for the Enlisted Men's Club which indicated a net loss of some $3,000, the new management conducted an informal investigation of the Enlisted Men's Club and determined that they were spending too much money for labor. Thereafter, following a meeting sometime in April with the Union's president, management, in order to cut expenses, reduced the hours of work of a number of the employees.

1/ The Complaint also alleged an independent 19(a)(1) violation predicated upon certain coercive remarks allegedly made by Respondent's supervisory personnel to unit employees. However, at the start of the hearing, Complainant's counsel orally withdrew the independent 19(a)(1) allegation from the complaint.

During the course of the April meeting, the Union's president suggested that the establishment of a cocktail lounge solely for the use of first and second class petty officers might attract more patrons to the Enlisted Men's Club and produce additional revenue. The mechanics of operating such a lounge, however, were not discussed at that time.

During the latter part of April 1977, the Enlisted Men's Club Advisory Board, composed solely of management representatives, unanimously passed a motion to establish an "Acey-Deucey Lounge" for the exclusive use of first and second class petty officers. It was further determined that due to a shortage of funds the Acey-Deucey Lounge was to be manned solely by volunteer bartenders. The Acey-Deucey Lounge, housed in a separate room in the same building where the existing Enlisted Men's Club was located, opened in May 1977, using volunteer bartenders.

Thereafter, following various complaints from the Union concerning the legality of using volunteer bartenders, Respondent closed the Acey-Deucey Lounge for approximately ten days to consider the situation. ^{2/} Upon concluding that the use of volunteer bartenders was not in violation of any law, the Acey-Deucey Lounge was reopened. When the Lounge was first opened a sign advertised the fact that the bartenders were not paid and that their sole remuneration consisted of tips left by the patrons. In practice, however, any tips were put into a glass behind the bar and used by patrons to pay for drinks won in bar dice games from the bartenders. When the Acey-Deucey Lounge was reopened a new sign was posted which informed the patrons that all tips would be donated to Navy Relief. As of the date of the hearing, six dollars had been collected for the Navy Relief Fund.

The volunteer bartenders were all Acey Deucey Lounge patrons who had signed a posted roster indicating that they would tend bar on a particular date. If the volunteer failed to appear as promised, the bar would only open if another patron then present in the lounge decided to volunteer. Other than paydays, the Acey-Deucey Lounge was normally open only in the evenings. According to the record testimony, only about four regular patrons of the existing Enlisted Men's Club were attracted to the Acey-Deucey Lounge. The other patrons of the Acey-Deucey Lounge were first and second class petty officers who had not frequented the Enlisted Men's Club in the past.

^{2/} The record does not reflect the manner in which the Union submitted its complaints relative to the use of volunteer bartenders.

The paid bartenders located at the existing Enlisted Men's Club continued to work their scheduled shifts and, as in the past, continued to receive their set wages and any tips left by patrons. However, according to the testimony of bartender Martha Nepote, the tips dwindled from somewhere in the $35 range to about $15 per week. The record further reveals that Martha Nepote usually worked the afternoon shift at the Enlisted Men's Club.

Discussion and Conclusions

Both parties are in agreement that the Respondent was privileged under Sections 11(b) and 12(b) of the Executive Order to unilaterally establish the Acey-Deucey Lounge and man it solely with volunteer bartenders without any prior negotiations or consultation with the Union. The parties further agree that irrespective of any such privilege the Respondent was obligated to bargain over any possible impact on any employee adversely affected by Respondent's action with respect to the establishment of the Acey-Deucey Lounge.

Respondent, however, takes the position that there was no impact, and, accordingly, no obligation to bargain with the Union. In support of its position, Respondent points out that the existing bartenders, particularly Ms. Nepote, Complainant's only witness, suffered no decrease in hours of work or salary. Respondent further notes that the loss of tips should not be attributed solely to the opening of the Acey-Deucey Lounge since only four former patrons of the Enlisted Men's Club were shown to be customers of the Acey-Deucey Lounge which, as a general rule, was not open during the afternoons when Ms. Nepote usually tended bar at the Enlisted Men's Club. Lastly, according to Respondent, inasmuch as tips are not calculated as part of Ms. Nepote's wages they do not constitute a condition of employment over which Respondent has any control and over which it is obligated to bargain.

The Union, on the other hand, appears to take the position that Respondent is obligated to bargain over the impact of its decision to use volunteer bartenders in the Acey-Deucey Lounge. According to the Union, the reduction in tips establishes the adverse impact. The Union's post-hearing brief takes the position that the loss of tips was "a consequence of the use of volunteers."

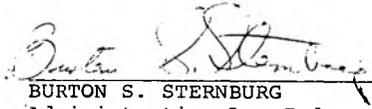

In agreement with the parties, I find that the decision to establish the Acey-Deucey Lounge and man it with volunteer bartenders is privileged under Section 12(b) of the Order. I further find that to the extent such decision substantially impacts adversely on unit personnel, Respondent is under an obligation to give timely notice to the Union, and upon request, bargain with the Union over such impact. Tidewater Virginia Federal Employees Metal Trades Council and Naval Public Works Center, Norfolk, Virginia, FLRC No. 71A-56, June 29, 1973. In the absence of any substantial impact there is of course no obligation to bargain. Norfolk Naval Shipyard, A/SLMR No. 805.

Section 11(a) describes the limited areas which are subject to the bargaining obligation on the part of agencies and exclusive representatives. It is not intended to embrace every issue which is of interest to agencies and exclusive representatives and which indirectly may affect employees. Rather, Section 11(a) encompasses those matters which materially affect and have a substantial impact on, personnel policies, practices and general working conditions. Department of Defense, Air National Guard, Texas Air National Guard, Camp Mabry, Austin, Texas, A/SLMR No. 738.

In the absence of any showing that manning of the Acey-Deucey Lounge with volunteer bartenders resulted in any significant change in working conditions of the unit employees, other than loss of some tips, I find insufficient basis to conclude that the use of volunteer bartenders in the Acey-Deucey Lounge had a substantial impact on the personnel policies, practices and general working conditions of the unit employees working in the Enlisted Men's Club. Accordingly, I further find that in the circumstances here disclosed Respondent was under no obligation to bargain with the Union. Department of Defense, supra.

RECOMMENDATION

It is hereby recommended to the Assistant Secretary that the complaint be dismissed.

DECISION AND ORDER

This matter is before the Assistant Secretary pursuant to Regional Administrator Benjamin B. Naumoff's Order Transferring Case to the Assistant Secretary of Labor in accordance with Sections 203.5(b), 203.7(a)(4) and 206.5(a) of the Assistant Secretary's Regulations.

Upon consideration of the entire record in the subject case, including the parties' stipulation of facts, accompanying exhibits and the Respondent's Motion to Dismiss filed in lieu of brief, 1/ the Assistant Secretary finds:

The complaint herein alleges that the Respondent violated Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order by refusing to grant official time to two of the Complainant's officers who attended a meeting called by a field representative of the Assistant Secretary for Labor-Management Relations for the purpose of discussing a pending representation petition filed by the Respondent. The Respondent takes the position that as the use of official time is not a right assured by the Order, and as it was under no obligation either by law or regulation to grant official time in the circumstances of this case, its refusal to grant official time was not

1/ The Motion to Dismiss, initially filed by the Respondent on March 18, 1977, was forwarded by the Regional Administrator to the Assistant Secretary for his consideration. In view of the disposition herein, however, I find it unnecessary to pass upon the Motion, although the arguments contained therein have been duly considered.

A/SLMR No. 1036

This case involved an unfair labor practice complaint filed by the American Federation of Government Employees, AFL-CIO, Local 1760 (Complainant) alleging that the Respondent violated Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order by refusing to grant official time to two of its officers who attended a meeting called by a representative of the Assistant Secretary for Labor-Management Relations for the purpose of discussing a representation petition filed by the Respondent in another proceeding. The Respondent contended that it was under no obligation to grant official time in these circumstances as the use of official time was not a right assured by the Order, and there was no other law or regulation which authorized its use.

The facts as stipulated by the parties indicated that the two union officials who attended the meeting were officers of the Complainant but were not employed by the Respondent. There was no negotiated agreement in effect between the Respondent and the Complainant.

On October 18, 1976, representatives of the Respondent and the Complainant met with a field representative of the Assistant Secretary for Labor-Management Relations to discuss a representation petition previously filed by the Respondent. Requests by the Complainant's representatives for official time for their attendance at the meeting were denied.

The Assistant Secretary concluded that the Respondent's conduct in denying official time to the two officials who appeared on behalf of the Complainant at the meeting in question was not violative of Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order. In this regard, he noted that it has been established that agencies are not obligated to make available on official time employees who act solely as union representatives. He also noted that the employees in question did not come within the ambit of Section 206.7(g) of the Assistant Secretary's Regulations as they were not necessary witnesses at a hearing and that there was no contractual obligation between the Respondent and the Complainant, nor evidence of a past practice, which would require the granting of official time in the circumstances of this case.

Accordingly, the Assistant Secretary ordered that the complaint be dismissed in its entirety.

violative of the Order. The Respondent also argues that the issue concerning the refusal to grant official time was previously raised by the Complainant which serves to bar the processing of the instant complaint. 2/

The undisputed facts, as stipulated by the parties, are as follows:

In June 1969, the Bureau of Retirement and Survivors Insurance (BRSI), a component of the Social Security Administration (SSA), granted exclusive recognition to the National Office of the American Federation of Government Employees (AFGE), AFL-CIO (National Council of Social Security Payment Center Locals) for a unit consisting of all nonsupervisory employees, including professionals, in the SSA Program Centers. A negotiated agreement entered into by the parties became effective on March 15, 1974, for a two-year period and, by its terms, was renewed for one additional year. Negotiations for a new agreement reached impasse and the parties agreed to extend their agreement pending resolution of such impasse. 3/ AFGE Local 1760, the Complainant herein, is a member of the National Council of Social Security Payment Center Locals. The two Union officials who allegedly were improperly denied official time at the meeting referred to in the instant complaint are officers of the Complainant and are employed by the BRSI.

On March 22, 1974, AFGE Local 1760 was certified as the exclusive representative in a unit of all nonsupervisory employees, excluding professionals, of the Program Review Field Staff, Bureau of Supplemental Security Income, SSA, co-located with the BRSI at the Northeastern Program Service Center, Flushing, New York. To date, the parties have not entered into a negotiated agreement covering such unit. Since early 1975, AFGE Local 1760 representatives have not been granted official time for meetings with representatives of the Respondent.

2/ The record reveals that the Complainant had previously filed an unfair labor practice charge regarding the failure to grant official time during the course of negotiations for a collective bargaining agreement. However, the pre-complaint charge was never pursued beyond that stage.

3/ This agreement, which does not cover the Respondent's employees, provides for the use of official time by representatives of the National Council of Social Security Payment Center Locals and affiliate Locals in certain situations affecting employees in the unit recognized by the BRSI. In March 1974, the Director of the BRSI issued a memorandum to the President of the AFGE National Council of Social Security Payment Center Locals concerning the use of official facilities and time, as governed by their negotiated agreement, by employees of the BRSI for servicing other components of the SSA. The memorandum indicated that, except as might otherwise be provided by existing higher level controlling regulations, the BRSI would not approve the use of its facilities or time for conducting labor-management relations activities which involved other bureaus.

On February 27, 1975, those activities previously handled by the Respondent's Office of Program Review were assigned to the newly created Office of Quality Assurance, Office of Management and Administration. AFGE Local 1760 remained the exclusive representative of the employees in the New York Office and also the employees in a Satellite Office which had been established in Boston. Subsequently, the Boston Satellite Office was re-established as a Regional Office and was removed from the administrative authority of the New York Office, whereupon the Respondent filed a representation petition, pursuant to the Assistant Secretary's Regulations, seeking to exclude the Boston employees from AFGE Local 1760's exclusively recognized unit. 4/

On October 18, 1976, following a request by a field representative of the Assistant Secretary for Labor-Management Relations, agents of both the Complainant and the Respondent met for the purpose of discussing the above-mentioned representation petition. Requests for official time by the two officials who appeared on behalf of the Complainant were denied by the Respondent, although the latter's representatives attended on official time.

FINDINGS AND CONCLUSIONS

In my view, the Respondent's conduct in denying official time status to the two officials who appeared on behalf of the Complainant at the meeting in question was not violative of Section 19(a)(1) and (6) of the Order. In determining those circumstances under which employees are entitled to official time, the Assistant Secretary has previously held that agencies are not obligated to make available on official time employees who act solely as union representatives, noting that in such capacity employees are, in effect, working for the union qua union. 5/ In reviewing the Yorktown case, cited above at footnote 5, the Federal Labor Relations Council (Council) found that there was no obligation under the Order for an agency to grant official time to union witnesses during their participation at formal unit determination hearings. However, the Council further stated that it would be consistent with the Order for the Assistant Secretary, under the authority vested in him by the provisions of Section 6(d) of the Order, to promulgate a regulation requiring that necessary witnesses be on official time for the period of their participation at formal hearings. Subsequently, the Assistant 4/ The unit was subsequently clarified by excluding the employees of the Boston Regional Office pursuant to an order of the Regional Administrator dated April 27, 1977.

SUMMARY OF DECISION AND ORDER CLARIFYING UNIT
OF THE ASSISTANT SECRETARY
PURSUANT TO SECTION 6 OF EXECUTIVE ORDER 11491, AS AMENDED

Secretary promulgated regulations providing, among other things, that employees who have been determined to be necessary as witnesses at a hearing shall be granted official time only for such participation as occurs during their regular work hours. ^{6/}

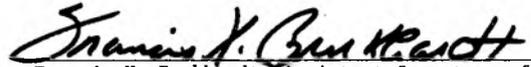

It is clear that the representatives of the Complainant involved herein were not necessary witnesses at a hearing, but rather appeared as the Complainant's representatives at a conference called by the Assistant Secretary's representative to discuss various aspects of a pending representation petition. Thus, clearly they did not come within the ambit of Section 206.7(g) of the Assistant Secretary's Regulations. Moreover, it was noted that the Complainant is not party to a negotiated agreement with the Respondent. ^{7/} Thus, the Respondent had no contractual obligation to grant official time to officials of the Complainant for the purpose of attending the conference involved herein. Nor is there any evidence that the Respondent, in the past, has ever granted official time to representatives of the Complainant for such a purpose.

Under these circumstances, I find that the Respondent was under no obligation to grant official time to the Complainant's representatives at the meeting in question, and, therefore, its refusal to do so was not violative of the Order. Accordingly, I shall order that the instant complaint be dismissed.

ORDER

IT IS HEREBY ORDERED that the complaint in Case No. 30-7652(CA) be, and it hereby is, dismissed.

Dated, Washington, D.C.
May 10, 1978

Francis X. Burkhardt, Assistant Secretary of
Labor for Labor-Management Relations

^{6/} Specifically, Section 206.7(g) of the Assistant Secretary's Regulations provides, in pertinent part:

Employees who have been determined to be necessary as witnesses at a hearing shall be granted official time only for such participation as occurs during their regular work hours and when they would otherwise be in a work or paid leave status. . . . (emphasis added)

^{7/} As indicated above, the Union representatives in question who attended the October 18 meeting are employed by the BRSI, not the Respondent. The BRSI and the Complainant have a negotiated agreement which, among other things, provides for official time for the Complainant's representatives, but only in the performance of representational activities affecting employees in the BRSI bargaining unit.

A/SLMR No. 1037

This case involved a petition for clarification of unit (CU) filed by the American Federation of Government Employees, Local 3705, AFL-CIO, (Petitioner) seeking to clarify whether or not the Secretary to the Director of Operations at the Activity should be excluded from its exclusively recognized unit as a confidential employee. The Petitioner contended that the Secretary to the Director of Operations was not a confidential employee in that the Director of Operations did not formulate and effectuate management policies in the field of labor relations. On the other hand, the Activity contended that the Secretary to the Director of Operations was a confidential employee.

The Assistant Secretary found that the Director of Operations, who is the Activity's designated Labor Relations Officer, is involved in the formulation and effectuation of management policies in the field of labor relations and that, as his Secretary serves him in a confidential capacity in these matters, she should be excluded from the exclusively recognized unit as a confidential employee. Accordingly, he clarified the exclusively recognized unit to exclude therefrom the Secretary to the Director of Operations.

DECISION AND ORDER CLARIFYING UNIT

Upon a petition duly filed under Section 6 of Executive Order 11491, as amended, a hearing was held before Hearing Officer Joseph D. White. The Hearing Officer's rulings made at the hearing are free from prejudicial error and are hereby affirmed.

Upon the entire record in this case, the Assistant Secretary finds:

The American Federation of Government Employees, Local 3705, AFL-CIO, hereinafter called AFGE, filed a petition for clarification of unit (CU) seeking to clarify whether or not the Secretary to the Director of Operations at the Consumer Product Safety Commission's Philadelphia Area Office, hereinafter called the Activity, should be excluded from its exclusively recognized unit as a confidential employee. In this regard, the AFGE contends that the Secretary to the Director of Operations is not a confidential employee in that the Director of Operations does not formulate or effectuate management policies in the field of labor relations but only gathers information for presentation to the Activity's Area Director for his review and decision. Conversely, the Activity contends that the Secretary to the Director of Operations is a confidential employee as she serves in a confidential capacity to the Director of Operations who is the Activity's designated Labor Relations Officer and participates in the formulation and effectuation of management policies in the field of labor relations.

The mission of the Activity is to protect the public against unreasonable risks of injury associated with consumer products, assist consumers in evaluating the comparative safety of consumer products, minimize conflicting state and local regulations, and promote research and investigation into the causes and prevention of product-related deaths, illnesses, and injuries. Organizationally, the Activity, which is headed by an Area Director, is subdivided into two Divisions, the Operations Division, in which the disputed position is located, and the Community Services Division.

The record reveals that subsequent to the filing of the AFGE's petition for an election, but prior to its certification as the exclusive representative of the Activity's employees, the Area Director designated the Director of Operations as the Activity's Labor Relations Officer who would be the responsible person for the AFGE to contact in all matters pertaining to labor relations at the Activity's facility. ^{1/} The Director of Operations has continued to serve in this capacity subsequent to the AFGE's certification. However, the Area Director has the ultimate authority and responsibility for the Activity's labor relations.

In accordance with his designation as the Activity's Labor Relations Officer, the Director of Operations met with the AFGE, prior to the representation election, on such matters as the eligibility of employees and the arrangements for the election. Thereafter, he prepared a memorandum for the Area Director detailing the above meeting, including alternative courses of action and his recommendations, which recommendations were followed. ^{2/} Subsequent to the AFGE's certification, the Director of Operations has, among other things, prepared for the Area Director's signature a letter to the AFGE concerning the disposition of an unfair labor practice charge; negotiated a memorandum of understanding on dues deductions with the AFGE which was approved by the Area Director; and prepared a memorandum on alternative courses of action and positions to be taken by management regarding the hearing on the instant CU petition. The record reveals that the Secretary to the Director of Operations has been responsible for the preparation and filing of all the above materials. It was also established that the Director of Operations will be responsible for negotiating an agreement with the AFGE and that his Secretary will be responsible for the preparation of all his reports dealing with management labor relations strategy in connection with the negotiations and for the maintenance of files and records with respect to such proceedings.

^{1/} The AFGE was subsequently certified on January 6, 1977, as the exclusive representative of all employees employed at the Activity, excluding professional employees, management officials, employees engaged in Federal personnel work in other than a purely clerical capacity and supervisors as defined in the Executive Order.

^{2/} Among other things, the Director of Operations recommended that his Secretary's ballot be challenged at the election and it was, in fact, the only ballot challenged by management. The record indicates that the challenge was never resolved as the ballot involved was not determinative of the results of the election.

May 11, 1978

Based on the foregoing circumstances, I find that the Director of Operations is involved in the formulation and effectuation of management policies in the field of labor relations and that, as his Secretary serves him in a confidential capacity in these matters, she should be excluded from the exclusively recognized unit as a confidential employee. ^{3/} Accordingly, I shall clarify the unit herein to exclude therefrom the Secretary to the Director of Operations.

ORDER

IT IS HEREBY ORDERED that the unit sought to be clarified herein, for which the American Federation of Government Employees, Local 3705, AFL-CIO, was certified as the exclusive representative on January 6, 1977, be, and it hereby is, clarified by excluding from such unit the Secretary to the Director of Operations.

PURSUANT TO SECTION 6 OF EXECUTIVE ORDER 11491, AS AMENDED

UNITED STATES DEPARTMENT OF AGRICULTURE,
ANIMAL AND PLANT HEALTH INSPECTION SERVICE, PLANT PROTECTION AND QUARANTINE
A/SLMR No. 1038

This case involved a petition for clarification of unit (CU) filed by the Federal Plant Quarantine Inspectors National Association seeking to clarify the status of approximately 60 employees classified as Supervisory Plant Protection and Quarantine Officers, (Tour Leader) GS-436-11. The Petitioner contends that these Supervisory Officers, currently excluded from the exclusively recognized unit, should be considered within the unit, because the basis on which they had been excluded (evaluation of employees) had been changed by Executive Order 11838 and, thus, they are not supervisors within the meaning of Section 2(c) of the Order, as amended. The Activity, on the other hand, maintains that Supervisory Officers have duties and responsibilities which identify them as supervisors under the Order.

The Assistant Secretary found that the Supervisory Officers are supervisors within the meaning of Section 2(c) of the Order inasmuch as they, as found in a prior proceeding, not only evaluate employees but also exercise independent judgment in directing employees. In addition, he noted the Supervisory Officers effectively recommend promotions and adjust employee grievances. Accordingly, he ordered that the CU petition in the instant case be dismissed.

DECISION AND ORDER

Upon a petition duly filed under Section 6 of Executive Order 11491, as amended, a hearing was held before Hearing Officer Daniel Francis Sutton. The Hearing Officer's rulings made at the hearing are free from prejudicial error and are hereby affirmed.

Upon the entire record in this case, including the briefs filed by the parties, the Assistant Secretary finds:

The Petitioner, the Federal Plant Quarantine Inspectors National Association, is currently the exclusive representative of a unit of all professional Plant Quarantine and Plant Pest Control Inspectors employed in or by the Activity. 1/ In this proceeding, the Petitioner filed a petition for clarification of unit (CU) seeking to clarify the status of approximately 60 employees classified as Supervisory Plant Protection and Quarantine Officers, (Tour Leader) GS-436-11, hereinafter called Supervisory Officers, who, it contends, should be considered to be included within the bargaining unit because they are not supervisors within the meaning of Section 2(c) of the Order. The Activity, on the other hand, maintains that employees in the contested classification have duties and responsibilities which identify them as supervisors under the Order.

1/ The exclusively recognized unit consists of all professional Plant Quarantine and Plant Pest Control Inspectors employed in or by the U.S. Department of Agriculture, Animal and Plant Health Inspection Service, Plant Protection and Quarantine Program, excluding all other employees, Supervisory Plant Quarantine Inspectors, employees engaged in Federal personnel work in other than a purely clerical capacity, management officials, guards and supervisors as defined in the Order.

The Animal and Plant Health Inspection Service (Service) of the United States Department of Agriculture was created to conduct regulatory and control programs to protect and improve animal and plant health for the benefit of man and his environment. In cooperation with state governments, the Service administers Federal laws and regulations pertaining to animal and plant health and quarantine, meat and poultry inspection, humane treatment of animals, as well as the control and eradication of pests and diseases.

The record shows that the position in dispute herein was created in the early 1950's, and that since its inception the duties and responsibilities of the employees in the contested position have not been substantially altered or changed despite a number of administrative reorganizations at the Activity. In this connection, even though the title of the contested position has undergone modification, 2/ Supervisory Officers continue to perform a variety of inspection and quarantine duties designed to prevent entry into the United States of disease causing infectious agents.

On September 1, 1964, the Petitioner was granted exclusive recognition under Executive Order 10988 for the unit involved herein. At that time the disputed position was considered part of the Petitioner's exclusively recognized unit. On April 26, 1974, pursuant to a CU petition filed by the Activity herein, the Assistant Regional Director (now called Regional Administrator) of the Labor-Management Services Administration issued his Report And Finding On Petition For Clarification Of Unit in Case No. 22-5173(CU), finding, in agreement with the position of the parties, that employees in the then entitled position of Supervisory Plant Quarantine Inspectors were supervisors within the meaning of the Order since such individuals "...use independent judgment in evaluating and directing employees with whom they work." On May 16, 1974, noting that no request for review of his Report And Finding had been filed, the Regional Administrator ordered that the existing unit be clarified to exclude such employees.

In the instant proceeding, the Petitioner notes that as a result of the amendments to Executive Order 11491, in Executive Order 11838, the evaluation of employee performance was removed as a sole basis for determining supervisory status. Under these circumstances, it contends Supervisory Officers should be included within the exclusively recognized unit as they do not perform any of the supervisory functions set forth in Section 2(c) of the current Executive Order. 3/ However, as noted

2/ The Supervisory Officers received their current designation as Supervisory Plant Protection and Quarantine Officers in July 1975.

3/ Section 2(c) provides: "'Supervisor' means an employee having authority, in the interest of an agency, to hire, transfer, suspend, lay off, recall, promote, discharge, assign, reward, or discipline other employees, or responsibly to direct them, or to adjust their grievances, or effectively to recommend such action, if in connection with the foregoing the exercise of authority is not of a merely routine or clerical nature, but requires the use of independent judgment."

above, the Regional Administrator, in determining that employees in the disputed classification were supervisors in Case No. 22-5173(CU), found not only that the employees in the classification at issue exercise independent judgment in evaluating subordinates, but also concluded that they exercise independent judgment in directing employees. 4/ In this latter regard, the record does not contain any newly discovered or previously unavailable facts or changed circumstances that have occurred since that time; nor do the parties contend otherwise. 5/ Moreover, the record demonstrates that the Supervisory Officers make the initial recommendations for employee promotions and that these recommendations are almost always followed. Further, the evidence establishes the Supervisory Officers adjust employee grievances. 6/

Based on all of the foregoing, I find that the Supervisory Officers are supervisors within the meaning of Section 2(c) of the Order inasmuch as they exercise independent judgment in directing employees and as they effectively recommend promotions and adjust employee grievances. As employees in the classification at issue are supervisors and are properly excluded from the exclusively recognized unit, I shall dismiss the petition herein.

ORDER

IT IS HEREBY ORDERED that the petition in Case No. 22-08076(CU) be, and it hereby is, dismissed.

- 4/ The evidence shows that Supervisory Officers continue to assign work to from 5 to 15 subordinates in a variety of settings where the Activity carries out its mission and continue to make independent judgments as to an employee's past experience, cargo expertise, export certification credentials and the interdiction rate in the assignment of jobs.
- 5/ In my view, it would not effectuate the purposes and policies of the Order to reconsider in this proceeding issues determined in a prior proceeding involving the same parties, absent some evidence of changed circumstances. Cf. Internal Revenue Service, Office of the Regional Commissioner, Southeast Region, A/SLMR No. 870 (1977), FLRC No. 77A-122.
- 6/ Although the Supervisory Officers have authority to adjust grievances, the Petitioner contends that this responsibility does not apply to "formal grievances" and, thus, this authority should not be considered as evidence of supervisory status. However, it has been held previously that an individual who possesses the authority to independently adjust grievances, formally or informally, is a supervisor within the meaning of Section 2(c) of the Order. DEPARTMENT OF TRANSPORTATION,
FEDERAL AVIATION ADMINISTRATION,
WILLIAM P. HOBBY AIRPORT TRAFFIC CONTROL TOWER (TRACAB),
HOUSTON, TEXAS
A/SLMR No. 1039

This case involved an unfair labor practice complaint filed by the Professional Air Traffic Controllers Organization (Complainant) alleging that the Respondent violated Section 19(a)(1), (2) and (4) of the Order by its termination of a probationary air traffic controller trainee, T. Laurence Stanley, because of his vigorous exercise of protected union rights.

In September 1975, Stanley had been assigned as a trainee controller to the Respondent's facility where he completed two (of five) training phases on November 7, 1975. Thereafter, he commenced a new and more difficult phase of his training.

On November 5, 1975, after having witnessed a mid-air collision, Stanley was asked to prepare a written statement concerning his account of the accident. A dispute arose over the contents of his statement, resulting in what Stanley considered to be harassment by the Respondent. Further, Stanley asserted that he requested, but was denied, union representation during several meetings held between himself and the Respondent's Chief concerning revisions of his statement. Stanley filed unfair labor practice charges on February 16 and March 18, 1976, and grievances under the negotiated grievance procedure on March 18 and 24, 1976. On April 29, 1976, Stanley's training supervisor recommended his termination as a probationary employee because of work deficiencies evidenced during his training and he was, in fact, terminated effective May 15, 1976.

The Administrative Law Judge found that the termination of Stanley as a probationary employee was not violative of the Order. In reaching this conclusion, she concluded that Stanley's termination was not for pretextual reasons and that, in this regard, the Complainant had failed to carry its burden of proving that the Respondent's motivation for terminating Stanley was for reasons violative of the Order, rather than for work related causes. Accordingly, the Administrative Law Judge recommended that the complaint be dismissed in its entirety.

The Assistant Secretary adopted the recommendation of the Administrative Law Judge and ordered that the complaint be dismissed.

DECISION AND ORDER

On October 19, 1977, Administrative Law Judge Joan Wieder issued her Recommended Decision and Order in the above-entitled proceeding, finding that the Respondent had not engaged in the unfair labor practices alleged in the complaint and recommending that the complaint be dismissed in its entirety. Thereafter, the Complainant filed exceptions with respect to the Administrative Law Judge's Recommended Decision and Order.

The Assistant Secretary has reviewed the rulings of the Administrative Law Judge made at the hearing and finds that no prejudicial error was committed. The rulings are hereby affirmed. Upon consideration of the Administrative Law Judge's Recommended Decision and Order and the entire record in the subject case, including the Complainant's exceptions, I hereby adopt the Administrative Law Judge's findings, conclusions 1/ and

1/ On page ten of her Recommended Decision and Order, the Administrative Law Judge concluded that to find a violation of Section 19(a)(4) of the Order the Complainant must have demonstrated that the termination of Stanley was due to the fact that he had filed an unfair labor practice "complaint" or had given testimony under the Order. As there was no evidence that any complaint, other than the subject complaint, had been filed or that testimony was given under the Order in any other proceeding prior to the filing of the subject complaint, the Administrative Law Judge recommended dismissal of the Section 19(a)(4) allegation. In recommendations, to the extent consistent herewith.

On page 15 of her Recommended Decision and Order, the Administrative Law Judge found that supervisor Hale did make a statement regarding Stanley's union activities as a potential interference with his progress at work. She concluded, however, that such statement was not coercive, threatening or intended to interfere with Stanley's protected rights but, rather, was more in the form of suggestion that if Stanley was to qualify as a journeyman controller he should devote more attention to training. I disagree. Thus, in my view, supervisor Hale's statement was coercive in nature in that it reasonably could have been perceived by Stanley as an indication that his protected union activity was a potential impediment to his advancement on the job. However, as the complaint herein contains no independent allegation of a Section 19(a)(1) violation with respect to this matter and as I have concluded, in agreement with the Administrative Law Judge, that the Complainant has failed to prove that Stanley's termination as a probationary employee was pretextual in nature and for other than good cause, I shall order that the complaint be dismissed in its entirety.

ORDER

IT IS HEREBY ORDERED that the complaint in Case No. 63-7028(CA) be, and it hereby is, dismissed.

Dated, Washington, D. C.

May 11, 1978

Francis X. Burkhardt, Assistant Secretary of
Labor for Labor-Management Relations

1/ this regard, she further concluded that only a violation of Section 19(a)(1) and (2) of the Order would be established if it were determined that the termination of Stanley was related to his filing of unfair labor practice "charges" or grievances. The Assistant Secretary has held previously that a pre-complaint charge filed in accordance with Section 203.2 of the Assistant Secretary's Regulations initiates the unfair labor practice procedures under the Order. See Department of the Treasury, IRS Chicago District, Request for Review No. 968 (1977), FLRC No. 77A-111 (1978). As the record reflects that two such unfair labor practice charges were filed on February 16 and March 18, 1976, a finding of a violation of Section 19(a)(4) of the Order would not have been precluded if it were found that Stanley's subsequent termination on May 15, 1976, had occurred as a result of his filing of these unfair labor practice charges.

Before: JOAN WIEDER
Administrative Law Judge

This proceeding, heard in Houston, Texas, on August 24 and 25, 1977, arises under Executive Order 11491, as amended (hereinafter referred to as the Order). Pursuant to the Regulations of the Assistant Secretary for Labor-Management Relations, a Notice of Hearing was issued June 10, 1977, by the Regional Administrator, United States Department of Labor, Kansas City Region, who also issued an amended Notice of Hearing on June 17, 1977. Counsel for the parties requested a postponement, and good cause having been shown, the Chief Administrative Law Judge, United States Department of Labor, issued on July 13, 1977, an Order rescheduling the hearing.

The proceeding was initiated by the filing of a complaint on September 30, 1976, by the Professional Air Traffic Controllers organization (hereinafter referred to as the Complainant or PATCO) 1/ against William B. Hobby, Air Traffic Control Tower operated by the Federal Aviation Administration (hereinafter referred to as Hobby or the Activity).

The complaint alleged that the Activity violated sections 19(a)(1), 19(a)(2) and 19(a)(4) of the Order when they separated Mr. T. Laurence Stanley from his position as Air Traffic Control Specialist Trainee due to management's displeasure with Mr. Stanley's vigorous exercise of his protected union rights.

At the hearing both parties were afforded full opportunity to be heard, to adduce evidence, to examine and cross-examine witnesses and to make oral argument. The opportunity to make oral argument was declined. Post-hearing briefs, received from both parties, have been given full consideration.

Upon the entire record in this case, including my observation of the witnesses and their demeanor, and from all the testimony and evidence adduced at the hearing, I make the following conclusions and recommendations:

1/ At all times material hereto the union has been the exclusive bargaining representative of all the Activity's Air Traffic Controllers excluding supervisory and managerial employees.

Findings of Fact

The William P. Hobby Air Traffic Control Tower is organizationally a part of the Federal Aviation Administration (FAA), Department of Transportation. M. T. Lawrence Stanley was assigned to Hobby TRACAB in September of 1975 as a probationary trainee. Prior to his assignment at Hobby, Mr. Stanley was first hired by the FAA in the last weeks of January, 1968. For approximately six months Mr. Stanley received training in Denver at a "Center" position. 2/ Desiring a "tower" 3/ position, he accepted a transfer to Colorado Springs, Colorado, in the middle or late summer of 1968. Mr. Stanley stated that he had no difficulties with his training but resigned in December of 1968, to return to school.

On June 8, 1975, Mr. Stanley was reemployed by the FAA as a probationary controller trainee at Shreveport, Louisiana, which Mr. Stanley indicated is the same type of facility as maintained by the FAA at Colorado Springs, a combined tower and radar control (Tracon). It was while Mr. Stanley was at Shreveport that he joined PATCO. Mr. Stanley indicated that he went through all the training phases quickly and without difficulty. Mr. Stanley did not get any facility's certification at the positions he completed in his training--flight data, clearance delivery, ground control and local control training. He was then transferred to Hobby TRACAB, which he states is a higher level facility. It appears from inference throughout the testimony that the higher level facilities have more air traffic.

Mr. Stanley testified that upon arrival at Hobby TRACAB he started training for flight data clearance delivery and noticed there was no formal training program with full-time training officers. He felt very much on his own, no one to take him under their wing and give trainees the necessary guidance. The next step was ground control training which he completed on November 6, 1975. Mr. Stanley stated that he finished flight data clearance delivery in approximately two weeks. However, Mr. Stanley was informed

2/ Mr. Stanley defined a center as a large facility separating aircraft operating under instrument flight rules between the terminals.

3/ Mr. Stanley defined a tower position as separating out traffic going in and around airport and terminal areas.

in the middle of October that he was making slow progress in ground control training; several suggestions were made for improvement, including improving his ability to accept constructive criticism.

On October 16, 1975, in a memorandum titled: "Confirmation of Performance Discussions," Assistant Chief Frank O. Mobley stated:

I informed you that you are making slow progress on ground control. Your working speed must increase during heavy traffic periods. Your attitude toward accepting constructive criticism must be improved. You informed me that your enthusiasm to check out in the facility had greatly diminished since you checked out on the Flight Data/Clearance Delivery position.

You have used 36 hours of your allotted time of 80 hours for checkout on Ground Control. To improve your progress toward checkout on Ground Control, I recommend you concentrate on the following subjects:

1. Learn to accept constructive criticism better and don't argue with your instructors.
2. Anticipate your traffic movements and initiate control action sooner.
3. Learn to work the Ground Control position without bothering the Local controller. Listen to what the Local controller is doing.
4. Continuous surveillance of airport area.
5. Monitor and analyze ground traffic.
6. Demonstrating effective control techniques.

I informed you that I would make available to you proper training to aid you in completing your training assignments. (Emphasis added)

Mr. Stanley acknowledged receipt of the performance report on October 17, 1975. He testified that there was a marked improvement in his performance after the critique of his training progress.

Mr. Stanley considered his treatment by the supervisory staff as similar to other employees up until November 6, 1975. On November 6, 1975, the facility experienced a mid-air collision which Mr. Stanley witnessed, although he was not on duty. He was requested to write a statement by the facility chief, Mr. Mapes, who specifically requested "that he describe what he saw." After Mr. Mapes made the request, the training supervisor, Mr. Hale, instructed Mr. Stanley to be careful of the facts recited in the statement. Mr. Stanley interpreted the request as requiring a generalized statement containing less than a complete recitation of the facts, in contemplation of possible future court proceedings.

Mr. Stanley prepared the statement and testified that he included a complete recitation of the facts as he remembered them. Mr. Stanley further testified that when he gave the statement to Mr. Mapes he requested a union representative. Mr. Stanley testified that he made the request for union representation pursuant to instructions he received from a PATCO representative at Shreveport, Louisiana. The instructions are contained on the back of all PATCO membership cards to the effect that if a member is involved in an air traffic accident, he is to request assistance from a PATCO representative. Mr. Stanley claims Mr. Mapes denied the requested union aid but that he, Mr. Mapes, would provide all the necessary help. Mr. Mapes then read the statement and indicated to Mr. Stanley that he was disturbed by certain statements containing factual allegations which Mr. Mapes wanted, according to Mr. Stanley, omitted. In particular, a statement that the accident occurred one mile from the tower was a major bone of contention.

Discussions involving revising the statement occurred several times during the next week. Initially, the discussions began pleasantly but devolved into what Mr. Stanley described as argument. Mr. Stanley stated he made several requests for union representation to Mr. Mapes. Mr. Mapes, on the other hand, testified that no union assistance was requested. Although Mr. Stanley stated he requested and was denied union assistance several times, and that he contacted a union official during the week that he was involved in revising his statement about the mid-air collision, there was no testimony from any union representative that any contact was, in fact, made. This is despite the fact that Mr. Stanley testified that he did contact the union representative and, furthermore, did file an Unfair Labor Practice charge alleging that he was denied the right to representation. Under the grievance procedure the union failed to seek review on the matter as provided in Article 7, Section 3 of the PATCO agreement. 5/

I credit the testimony of Mr. Mapes since the discussions regarding Mr. Stanley's accident report took place over a one-week period, sufficient to permit Mr. Stanley an opportunity to contact a union representative. Mr. Stanley testified that he did in fact contact a union representative; however, no representative of Complainant supported Mr. Stanley and no reason for such failure was presented. Further substantiation of this conclusion is that an Unfair Labor Practice charge was filed by Mr. Stanley based on the alleged denial by management of union representation, yet PATCO failed to proceed with the charge. This failure reflects, to some extent, Complainant's view of the merits and any other inference of the evidence. Accordingly, the alleged denial of union representation cannot be found to indicate anti-union bias by management.

Mr. Stanley attributes the changes in his treatment as controller trainee to management's dissatisfaction due to his unwillingness to readily modify his statement plus his requesting union representation prior to making any such modifications. As previously stated, Mr. Stanley indicated that one of the areas of dispute regarding the mid-air collision statement was the claim that visibility was one mile, and Mr. Mapes indicated that all that could be said accurately was that the markers over one mile from the tower were not visible while the markers within one mile from the tower were visible. This type of critique does not indicate a desire to obfuscate the facts, as alleged, or demonstrate anti-union animus. Rather, the critique and requests for modification are found to be the exercise of proper managerial functions of assuring the accuracy of a work product.

Mr. Stanley also testified that after November 6, 1975, the supervisory personnel at Hobby TRACAB harassed him and exhibited a lack of interest in training him. Mr. Stanley started the next phase of training the day after the mid-air collision. This third phase of training is at the local coordinator and local control positions, which are much more difficult than the preceding stages. In the training manual 50 hours are allocated to obtain proficiency as a local coordinator and 200 hours are given as a maximum to obtain proficiency as a local controller. The training program at these two positions is a combined effort. At the time he entered the training program Mr. Stanley stated that Mr. Mobley, an Assistant Chief, started making strong criticism of his performance and making remarks affecting his confidence, such as that Mr. Stanley should pay more attention to his job. Mr. Stanley further alleges that he suffered insults and that Mr. Mobley directed profanity at him in the first week of December, 1975. There is a further allegation that Mr. Mobley attempted to get Mr. Middlebrook, a journeyman controller who was training Mr. Stanley, to change a favorable training evaluation. Mr. Middlebrook unqualifiedly denied the allegation. It appears that Mr. Stanley misunderstood Mr. Middlebrook and Mr. Mobley's conversation which he had knowledge of third hand and therefore I credit Mr. Middlebrook's testimony. I find that Mr. Middlebrook and Mr. Mobley did discuss the evaluation but there was no attempt to induce Mr. Middlebrook to change that evaluation. I further find, as all the witnesses questioned on the point testified, that harsh, sarcastic, and ribald comments are often made in the tower, apparently as a means of alleviating tension, and are not personal attacks.

Another allegation is that the harassment Mr. Stanley experienced was exacerbated after he filed an Unfair Labor Practice charge against Messrs. Mapes and Mobley on or about February 16, 1976, regarding the alleged denial of union representation during the mid-air accident investigation. It was after the filing of that charge that Mr. Hale, the training officer, informed Mr. Stanley that up to that time, February 23, 1976, his performance was unsatisfactory and that if he did not improve within 30 days he would be terminated. Mr. Hale described approximately one-half dozen areas Mr. Stanley needed to concentrate on. The confirmation of performance discussion memorandum dated March 15, 1976, is attached hereto as Appendix 1. Generally, Mr. Stanley was informed that the discussion which was originally planned for January 23, 1976, prior to the filing of the Unfair Labor Practice charge, did not take place because Mr. Stanley became ill. It was rescheduled for the following day; however, Mr. Stanley did not return the following day and in the intervening time attended a training session at another airport. The deficiencies noted during the performance discussion indicated that Mr. Stanley was still having difficulty accepting constructive criticism, paying full attention to his duties, being able to concentrate on several aircraft or duties at the same time, communicating with the aircraft, and setting priorities for the landing and departing aircraft so that the sequence of the planes presented a logical safe order. It is also noted that the performance discussion referred to two journeymen controllers that Mr. Stanley felt were not doing a good job but were rather waiting merely for him to make a mistake rather than training him. Mr. Stanley contrasted this with his treatment at the Houston Inter-continental airfield where "he was pampered by a particular instructor." The reference to a single instructor indicates that Mr. Stanley desires to have the attention of one instructor only, as indicated in his letter of resignation from Colorado Springs facility (infra).

Complainants contend that the adverse training reports are not demonstrative of the lack of potential of becoming a fully qualified journeyman controller, considering the stage of Mr. Stanley's training. Mr. Stanley felt the poor performance report was a reprisal for filing the February 16, 1976, Unfair Labor Practice charge. Another Unfair Labor Practice charge was filed on March 18, 1976, by Mr. Stanley alleging denial of union representation at the discussion involving the February 23, 1976, performance discussion. This charge is not under consideration in the instant proceeding. However, it is noted that this charge did not proceed past the second step of the agreed grievance procedure. Similarly, a grievance filed on March 24, 1975, charged that the training program was deficient in preparing Mr. Stanley to qualify, and this grievance also did not go past the second step of the procedure.

The Hobby TRACAB training program, (Complainant's Exhibit No. 7) under which Mr. Stanley's apprenticeship occurred, states on page two:

The length of training time allowed shall not be the sole standard for evaluation of the training progress. Training will be terminated for a specialist when employee performance or progress is unsatisfactory in upgrade training based on the following:

a. Failure to meet requirements for successful completion of required achievement checks and examinations.

b. Failure to complete a phase of training within the time limit established unless valid justification exists for time extension.

c. Definite lack of journeyman potential.

d. Failure to obtain a required certificate rating. (Emphasis supplied)

The standards were known to Mr. Stanley. The assignment to training at local control or local coordinator positions, dated November 7, 1975, contains an acknowledgment signed by Mr. Stanley, dated November 13, 1975, that he was cognizant of the emphasis placed on meeting training schedules and satisfactory progress in training and failure to meet these standards would be grounds for termination of employment (See Exhibit FAA No. 16).

The decision to terminate Mr. Stanley's employment came when he had completed 48 hours and 27 minutes training at the coordinator's position out of the total of 50 hours, and 82 hours and 18 minutes at the local controller's position out of the total 200 allocated hours.

The training supervisor, Mr. Hale, on April 29, 1976, recommended termination of Mr. Stanley during probation. The recommendation was contained in a memorandum to the Chief of Hobby TRACAB and was based on the following observations:

- a. He reacts too slowly to control situations.
- b. He applies improper sequencing procedures to arriving aircraft.
- c. He does not remember communications with departing aircraft.
- d. He does not maintain proper attention necessary to control air traffic.

Mr. Hale indicated that the reasons for the recommended dismissal had been discussed with Mr. Stanley and this statement was not controverted by Complainant. Mr. Hale attached to his recommendation of termination examples and summaries of unsatisfactory performances at the local control position. A precis of some of the training reports placed in evidence by the FAA are contained in Appendix II. The examples contained in the Appendix attached hereto are, in all probability, chosen as worst cases by Mr. Hale. However, these worst cases were not counterbalanced by a plethora of good performance reports. Therefore, the question remains as to whether the consistent deficiencies could be considered acceptable to support a finding that the decision to terminate was not based upon anti-union animus, a deprivation or discrimination due to the exercise of guaranteed rights.
